Unnecessary Publicity

We have come to the conclusion, much too late, that the Press can do a great service for the American people if it will leave the President alone in his private life.

There is a great inconsistency in our actions when on the one hand we suggest that the President is assuming the posture of a monarch and on the other we follow him around to photograph and report on his every move.

HOW WILL HE SPEND IT?

Ex-POW Charles Boyd Has Made Adaptations

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — A year ago, Air Force Maj. Charles G. Boyd squatted in a cramped prison cell halfway across the globe, choking down rotten food and enduring a constant barrage of propaganda against his homeland.

Chuck Boyd since has come to grips with being a reluctant hero who never again will pilot a fighter jet. He also has adapted to shocking changes that occurred in his native land while he was a prisoner of war.

Boyd, his tall frame draped over an immaculate white lounge chair as the sun set majestically over the Kansas prairie, tilted his head back and softly said:

"I am more content now than I think I have ever been."

Sense of Dedication

Boyd, whose "Diary of a POW" was carried by UPI last spring after his release by the North Vietnamese, has emerged from his cauldron of changes with a new sense of dedication to his country. He also has an urgent desire to blend in with his new environment and shed the often uncomfortable role of a former POW.

"This whole business of being a returning prisoner of war can become a profession if you allow it to," Boyd said in an interview last week in his split level home five miles west of Lawrence, where he is working on a master's degree at the University of Kansas.

His hands prepared to put shape to his words, the handsome, tanned career officer tried to explain the frustration of thanking the thousands of people who wore his POW bracelet while trying at the same time to move beyond the identity of an ex-POW.

"I received thousands of letters from people who were so emotionally involved in me," he said, his voice tightening. "These letters were just an outpouring of how happy we are that you made it home. Well what do you say? What can I do to repay you for this tremendous support you have given me?"

DOG DIES

CIVITANOVA MARCHE, Italy (UPI) — A dog bit a baby on the leg and died 24 hours later, police said Friday. Mario Baleani said his eight-month old puppy had been in perfect health and had shown no signs of illness prior to biting the child.

OLD LETTERS

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Post office mailmen have delivered 20 letters mailed in October, 1948.

A post office spokesman said Friday the letters were found in an unused chimney pipe Thursday.

"During my six years in the lost mail department, I've never had an experience like this one," the spokesman said. He could give no explanation as to why the letters were hidden in the chimney 25 years.

DISCOURAGE THEFT

OAK HARBOR, Wash. (UPI) — Smelling like a rose could be a bad thing at Whidbey Island Naval Air Station.

The Navy is mixing a chemical in gasoline used by government vehicles that makes the fuel smell like flowers when it burns. The distinctive fragrance is intended to discourage theft of gas.

Anyone stationed or working at the base who drives a private car had better not have exhaust that smells like a floral bouquet, Navy officials warned.

JUDGE PLAYS CUPID

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — A superior court judge will have to play the part of Cupid on Valentine's Day. February 14 was the date set in Santa Cruz County Superior Court for a suit, seeking recovery of 100 love letters allegedly stolen in a divorce case.

The suit, filed Friday by Richard W. Credit, also asked for $50,000 damages because the theft allegedly caused the plaintiff "grievous mental anguish, a sad and heavy heart and an inability to perform his normal duties."

Credit named as defendants his former wife, Mary Credit, and her lawyer, Henry J. Faltz. Credit claimed the defendants broke into his apartment and took the letters while he was out of town and were later used in his wife's divorce case. The letters, Credit said, were written to him by "a lady friend" while he traveled abroad.

"So I found it very difficult when people wanted to see me, or have me give a speech...or just touch you, find out what you look like...I found it very difficult to say no."

"And once you give a few speeches the word gets around and pretty soon everybody's trying to get you to give speeches. Well you can sort of get caught up in this thing and become a prisoner all over again of a different sort—a prisoner to the people. Pretty soon your life is no longer your own."

Boyd is pleased with the relative smoothness of his adjustment to the multitude of changes in America since he was shot down in April, 1966, and to the blizzard of events that made up 1973 after his return Feb. 12.

"I think the medical people and the psychiatric people got a little bit carried away. I think they lost sight of the fact that if we survived at all up there, we were pretty damn well adjusted human beings."

Boyhood Dream

"The very fact that we were able to adapt to a prison environment, which in terms of cultural shock was a hell of a lot more dramatic than anything else we're liable to experience—and the adaptation process back into our culture, while significant, was nothing like that."

Boyd's years in prison saw his boyhood dream of being a fighter pilot lost. He developed beri-beri, a vitamin deficiency disease, while at one camp and suffered permanent eye damage.

"It was a tough pill to swallow and it still bothers me if I'm around airplanes or people who are flying them. There are other things in life besides flying of course. I've never found anything though that quite matched it," he said.

But Boyd, 35, quickly seized upon a new career—what the Air Force calls an "Aera Code Specialist"—and he enrolled at Kansas University last fall to get a master's degree in Latin American affairs.

When he is finished, Boyd and his pretty, auburn-haired wife Millicent will move to South America, where he will specialize in relations between the Air Force and its host countries. They have no children.

"The fact of the matter is I'm enjoying life immensely. I'm just having the time of my life," he said.

Rekown Vitamin Deficiency Expert Supports 'C' As Cold Preventative

ATLANTA (UPI) — A world expert on vitamin deficiency and nutrition gave powerful support last week to the theory that large doses of vitamin C prevents colds.

Dr. Geoffrey H. Bourne, editor of the World Review of Nutrition and Dietetics and author of seven books on nutrition, said a growing

Boston Clover Club Does Nixon Parodies

BOSTON (UPI) — It might have been a little late, but the Clover Club of Boston, a group of area civic and political leaders, presented its "Richard Nixon Christmas Song Book" last Saturday night.

The song book, prepared for the club's mid-winter dinner, was among a series of parodies that included songs, advertising slogans and jingles and skits.

Among the tunes presented: "White Papers" (To be sung to the tune of: White Christmas)
"I'm thinking of some white papers"
"My fractured image must be patched"
"Operation Candor"
"Might have been grander"

accumulation of scientific evidence backs the conclusion that daily consumption of vitamin C prevents colds or lessens the symptoms.

Bourne, who thus gave support to the controversial theory advanced in 1970 by Nobel Prize winner Dr. Linus Pauling, said the cold preventive effects of taking vitamin C varies from person to person. "It is hard to give a figure of the amount of vitamin C to take," he said, "but I would think that a figure of around a half a gram, or 500 milligrams, (taken on a daily basis) would be sufficient for most people," he said.

Vitamin C, or ascorbic acid, may be purchased in tablet form without a prescription. It is generally available in doses of 50, 250 and 500 milligrams.

He said many scientists now believe that persons exposed to colds, and particularly those in a cold climate, have an increased requirement for vitamin C.

The latest evidence backing the conclusion that vitamin C prevents colds or reduces and shortens the severity of the symptoms appeared this month in the prestigious New England Journal of Medicine and the Medical World News, Bourne said.

The Journal reported a study conducted by a group of doctors at the Toyoi Boarding School, an elementary school for Navajo children at Steamboat, Ariz. The study involved 64 children and was conducted over a 14-week period last year.

It showed that although there was no difference in the number of respiratory episodes between the vitamin C-treated group and those not in the study, those given vitamin C had fewer days of sickness...both in older (38 per cent) and in younger (28 per cent) age groups.

"Significantly, more children on vitamin C had no sick days observed in the periodic survey. And in addition, treated children with higher blood ascorbic acid levels had fewer symptomatic days noted than those with lower levels."

The other study, Bourne said, involved a group of 56 Canadian soldiers on maneuvers in the Arctic. The study, conducted by Dr. Brian Sabiston of the Defence Research Board, showed that taking vitamin C cut the incidence of colds from 24 to 10 per cent. The soldiers took one gram a day in two divided doses.

In addition to reducing the number of colds, the duration of symptoms such as headache, general fatigue, nausea and fever lasted only half as long as usual.

AUTOPSIES ORDERED

SAN ANGELO, Tex. (UPI) — Police have ordered autopsies on the bodies of a surgeon and his wife found shot to death in a bedroom of their residence Wednesday. The bodies of Dr. Marion Wood, 58, and Gertrude Wood, 53, were found by a son.

Smallpox Up In The World

ATLANTA (UPI) — The number of smallpox cases reported worldwide doubled from 1972 to 1973, but the National Center for Disease Control (NCDC) said Friday it is no cause for alarm.

The NCDC said the United States has not had a case of the disease since 1949, and the increase was the result of better reporting and improved surveillance.

The majority of the 132,339 smallpox cases last year were in India and Bangladesh.

The disease was officially declared dead in North and South America last August, 28 months after the last known case of smallpox occurred.

Health officials claim smallpox will be eradicated from the world by 1976.

Mississippi has the same plant as its state tree and state flower — the magnolia.
