ESA hostesses present were Iris Ragsdale, Clarice Nutting, Rachel Brumley, Mary Doucette, Joann Hankla, Louise Sewell, Gwen Gray, Gwen Harris, and Florene Reek. Altrusans assisting were Mmes. Jack P. Foster and Jay Flanagan.

Each senior citizen present received a door prize. Two huge cakes were awarded to H. M. Norris, a chocolate cake and to Mrs. Georgia Faulconer, a white cake. After each member had received a prize, a surplus of gifts were left over which were given to the Altrusa Club to be used in the future as door prizes at the Senior Center meetings.

A game session followed. During the social hour, a variety of cakes were served. The focal point of the serving table was the centerpiece composed of a pair of gilded children's boots containing ivy placed on a piece of driftwood and outlined in glitter.

Bureau Charges For Rainfall

What is the connection between God and the federal government?

The question is neither preposterous nor presump-

But, you say, we gave up the idea many years ago of the divine right of kings. We're not Romans. We don't go in for deifying our leaders. We don't presume that the hand of God manifests itself directly through the polling booths. So the idea of supposing that there is a divine connection between the bureaucracy and the Almighty IS both presumptuous and preposterous.

Well, we may think so, but do the politicians think so? That is the big question.

Up in Wyoming, the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, which is a federal agency, is acting very much as though it is in league with God. How? Well, the newest indication of the presumed alliance comes from some of the farmers on the Riverton Project in northwestern Wyoming. It seems that in this area, the Bureau of Reclamation has sent a bill to the farmers charging them a fee for the rainfall which has fallen on their land.

We're not fooling. Honest to goodness, that is what has happened. And it's not a clerical error, it's a carefully planned and worked out formula designed by the

The federal government is in the custom of sending bills to the farmers for irrigation water. While we could question the validity of having the government handle the the irrigation matter at all, from an economic standpoint it is ligitimate to charge a fee for the effort made to induce water to flow to land which otherwise might not have the liquid stimulant to crops. Naturally, even the irrigation water isn't manufactured by the government but comes as a result of natural processes. And this must be the place where the bureaucratic mind has

For since all water is a natural phenomenon, and since a certain amount of this water to farmers of the Riverton area, we suppose it is simply the next step for them to presume that they can also sell the farmers the water that just happens to fall on their land in the form

During last summer, the northwestern area of Wyoming was blessed with unusual precipitation. According to the Reclamation Bureau's figures-which by-theby, are far from being either accurate or conclusivean average of 3.72 inches of abnormal rain came down. his heaven-sent harbringer of good harvests isn't going to be the boon the farmers thought. For the government has billed them, stating that during the dry years the farmers sometimes got extra water without cost; now that a little extra rain has come, the farmers are going to have to pay the government for providing it.

One farmer, A. C. Trawek, whose bill for the excess rain came to $36.78, wrote to Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney and also to the Department of Interior in Washington. He expressed himself rather fluently on the subject and we gladly quote him directly:

"In view of this fact, should we also assume the Bureau of Reclamation will assume the responsibility for the damage to crops when their 'abnormal' precipitation fell as hail or snow which is still hampering crop harvesting in the area, and has caused untold losses in crops?

"It is our humgle opinion also that the Bureau of Reclamation should have kept their 'abnormal precipitation,' for, as growers of alfalfa seed for nine years, our experience has been that we have better yields when we control the watering.

Senator, I would appreciate knowing just how long the people of these United States of America are supposed to put up with cockeyed, double-dealing, illogical one-way-only rules and regulations, concocted by bureaucratic nincompoops, who are supposed to be working for the United States Government . .

Project Manager Roy Van Drew has defended the billing but has admitted that it was assessed more or less as an experimental ukase, reserved possibly for 1958, the farmers are going to be asked to kneel facing Washington, D. C. whenever it rains.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

On Union Benefits In the last issue I was quoting from Dan Smoot's article on "Free Rider." The unions have a lot to say about free riders but they never define what a free rider is. They claim, of course, that the unions are benefiting everybody. Under the heading of "Union

Benefits," Smoot puts it this way: "Do unions really create bene-

"Walter Reuther claims that when a union forces a company to pay higher wages, the union, by thus creating more buying power for the employees, raises the living standard for everyone in the community: even the company which has been forced to raise wages benefits from the increased spending!

"An armed robber could have the same effect. If a gunman walked into a big company in your community and forced management to pay all employees a cash bonus, he would be raising living standards in the same way that big unions do.

"The gunman would not increase the efficiency of employees so that the company could turn out more goods per man hour of labor and thus have more profits to distribute to employees. The unions do not either.

"The gunman would, in fact, decrease production in the plant by causing turmoil and work stoppage. That's what unions do.

"The gunman would merely compel the company to put more money in circulation. If the gunman could get away with such an act every payday, he would decrease 'living standards' in your community, because the company would have to raise prices in order to make up for the decrease in production and for the money stolen. If the company is big enough to be a dominant factor in your community, all other businesses would soon be compelled to raise their prices too.

"Very soon, the economy of your community would be inflated to the point where it would be in worse shape than before the gunman started playing robinhood. "This is the effect that unions have on our economy generally. . .

"Big unions today require nothing of members except the payment of all dues and assessments and obedience to the orders of union bosses.

"Efficiency, enthusiasm for the job, interest in the company's welfare, and improved production are not encouraged by union activity today; they are discour-

"Hence, unions do not raise living standards in our society: they depress living standards.

"The only way to increase livto increase the amount of goods and services produced by a manhour of labor.

"American management, fighting for profits, has continuously raised the level of production by introducing new techniques, new machinery, better plants, and better tools. Big unions have continuously depressed the level of production by work-stoppages, strikes, and featherbedding practices; and by destroying the personal initiative of individual workers.

"Our living standards have been steadily rising, because management has done a better job of increasing production efficiency than unions have done in decreasing it.

"One seriously damaging thing that unions have done to our economy is to decrease the number of skilled technicians and expert craftsmen needed in modern

"It is currently fashionable to blame our educational institutions for a shortage of engineers and skilled technicians. Unions are due a large share of the blame.

'Industry-wide bargaining by international unions - the setting of uniform wages, and across-theboard raises for all employees whether skilled or unskilled, whether worthy or worthless has eliminated the big salary-difference between skilled workers and mere clock-punchers. Hence, it has eliminated the strong incentive for workers to become expert and outstanding in their particular jobs.

"In former times, many of the great creative geniuses in American industry came, not from engineering colleges, but from the ranks of industrial workers themselves. Unionism has helped to dry up this important reservoir. 'Unions, claiming that their acfivities produce great benefits for society, argue that right-to - work laws will create depression. Unions admit that if they do not have the power to force people into unions, union membership will decline; and they say that if union membership declines, prosperity will vanish.

"Let's look at some statistics. "In the 1952-1956 period, the hourly wage average of all workers in the 18 states that had right-to-work laws increased 20.9 per cent. In the same period, the hourly wage average of workers in the 30 states that do not have right-to-work laws increased 18.6

'In the 1947-1955 period, personal incomes in the 18 states that had right-to-work laws increased 61.2 per cent. In the same period, personal incomes in the 30 states that do not have right-tocent."

The railroad defendants hired Byoir and his sly henchmen in 1949. Clary wrote that Byoir's objectives were harassment of the long-haul truckers and the passage of laws, and he well might have added "So what?" But he took offense at Byoir's resort to "thirdparty technique" in arousing public opinion, forgetting or being unaware that any large phone book contains actually hundreds of associations, institutes, funds, foundations, conferences and societies, whose titles softly veil the true aims of their managers no treacherous tide.

In heaven there'll be no thirst, no cry for bread;
No soul who knows not where to lay his head;
No one to feel the winter's chilling blast,
For there the piercing storm will all be past.

In heaven there'll be no toll without repay;
No building for a brief ephemeral day;
For all the joys that prophets old have told
'Twill take the endless ages to unfold. In heaven there'll be no weary pligrim band;
pligrim band;
No seeker for a better, fairer land;
For all who reach that blissful,
happy shore,
Will never cry nor sigh, nor wish

The United States is developing a new campaign against Soviet Russia's persistent use of its veto power in the United Nations.

President Eisenhower, in his letter of Jan. 12 to Soviet Premiter Nikolai A. Bulganin, pointed out that Russia had resorted to the veto 82 times to block U.N. Security Council action.

around this restriction by first denying that a question is one of procedure, and then vetoing action when the substantive stage is reached.

Lodge, in his proposal Friday, for the world largely to get the veto question formally before the U.N.
