US Adds Fresh Mideast Muscle

By LARRY COLLINS
United Press International

United States added new muscle to its troops in Lebanon today even though the shooting war between the rebel and pro-government forces appeared over.

A full battalion of 75 Army tanks was scheduled to be disembarked from troop ships just below Beirut's International Airport during the day. It was the biggest injection of armor since U.S. Marines landed in Lebanon three weeks ago.

Accompanying the heavy detachment of armor were 2,000 troops from the 35th Tank Battalion of the 7th U.S. Army which is stationed in West Germany.

The continued buildup of American military strength seemed almost certain to provoke criticism even from friendly Lebanese. Many questioned the Army's wisdom in not halting the flow of armor and troop reinforcements at a time when the months-long crisis appeared headed for some sort of a final solution.

Military leaders were unable to provide an explanation for the tanks and troops reinforcements. A gradual easing of tension has been going on since Thursday when government and opposition deputies joined to support Gen. Fuad Chehab, Lebanese army chief of staff, for president.

There have been but few outbreaks of violence since the major opposition forces declared what amounted to an "armed truce" in the wake of Chehab's designation as president-elect.

The landings came even while Lebanese politicians were working desperately to find a solution acceptable to the government, opposition and "third force" elements and result in a command to an estimated 10,000 armed rebels to lay down their arms.

Hotel Contract Brochure To Be Submitted

The directors of the Pampa Community Hotel corporation met this morning and authorized the construction and engineering firm of Farnsworth and Chambers, Houston, to submit in the form of a mortgage brochure a proposal for a negotiated contract. Included in the contract would be all construction, furnishing and landscaping costs.

B. R. Cantrell, hotel architect, will work with Farnsworth and Chambers in overall planning and in refining details.

Benson Ford, Farnsworth and Chambers representative, said the mortgage brochure would be submitted to the hotel board in about three weeks.

The board gave Farnsworth and Chambers a budget of $1,040,000, on the basis of a $500,000 loan, which would cover the total cost of the project. The budget was broken down to include $700,000 for rooms, their furnishings, landscaping, paving, etc., and $340,000 for public space and its furnishing.

Russia Fails In Shot At Moon

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Russia tried but failed to beat the United States to the moon three months ago. Aviation Week magazine reported today.

The magazine said the Russians fired a rocket at the moon May 1 but the device failed. Aviation Week would not give the source of its report.

The trade journal also said the Air Force will try to send this country's first rocket 238,000 miles to the moon between 6 a. m. and noon on Aug. 27.

DOT Not Willing To Concede, But

Daniel's Conservatives In Command

United Press International

The conservative forces of Gov. Price Daniel today held control of the state's Democratic Party but leaders of an opposing faction were not willing to concede defeat.

Other political observers described Daniel's victory in Saturday's county conventions as coming from a coalition of the old Allan Shivers ultra-conservative wing and a moderate segment whose only common objective was the defeat of the splinter

Democrats of Texas.

Such a coalition would come apart at the seams on many issues in the September convention, they said.

Whatever the case, Daniel won his third victory within a week and his instructed delegation at the fall convention was a defeat for Sen. Ralph Yarborough who had challenged Daniel for control.

Daniel's first two victories came when he won renomination for a second term and beat out the DOT at the precinct conventions.

The State Democratic Executive Committee, under whose banners the conservatives rallied Saturday, said Sunday it had a working majority of 2,407 votes out of a total of 4,785 votes delegated for the state convention.

However, Creekmore Fath, secretary-treasurer of the DOT, was unwilling to concede to Daniel. He said the DOT had accomplished its primary aims of tying up the governor and his conservative following. He promised to give a breakdown of the counties DOT controlled.

Yarborough has refused to endorse the DOT but had called for either group to carry the convention in order to oust "half-Republicans" from controlling the party.

He was referring to the 1952 presidential elections when Democrats, under the leadership of Shivers and Daniel, had crossed party-lines to vote for President Eisenhower.

309 Accidents In '58 So Far

Pampa Chief of Police Jim Conner announced today that 38 car accidents occurred within the city limits during the month of July.

Of the 38 accidents, 33 were property damage accidents with five injuries involved.

The cause for most of the accidents was failure to yield the right of way, with 10 violations. Following too close behind another vehicle and driving on the wrong side of the road were tied for second with three violations.

More of the accidents occurred on Wednesday than any other day. Wednesday had nine accidents, Tuesday had eight and Monday six. The time of day most of the accidents occurred was between 4 and 4:31 p. m.

From January 1 to July 31 there have been a total of 309 accidents in the city limits.

Rodeo Week Is Underway

From Khrushchev

New Summit Note Is Due

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States is expecting shortly a new summit conference note from Moscow possibly indicating the significance of a secret meeting between Nikita Khrushchev and Red China's Mao Tse-Tung.

The Soviet premier was expected to dispatch within the next 24 hours a letter to President Eisenhower in answer to a U.S. note of last Friday. The President expressed willingness to meet at a summit conference on or about Aug. 12 within the Security Council of the United Nations.

U.S. officials said they had no idea whether Khrushchev would accept Anglo-American conditions

Acceptance Of Proposals By 'Mr. K.' Seen

MOSCOW (UPI)—Western diplomatic sources said today Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, who returned Sunday night from a dramatic hush-hush visit to Peiping, will accept the Anglo-American proposals for a summit conference on the Middle Eastern crisis in mid-August.

The observers said they expected Khrushchev's replies to the notes from the leaders of the Western Bloc Three on the projected meeting to be forwarded with 48 hours.

A communique issued after the conclusion of the four-day secret "Red summit" meeting between Khrushchev and Communist China's Mao Tse-Tung accused the United States of dragging its heels and called for a summit conference "at once."

A brief announcement by radio Moscow reported Khrushchev's return to the Soviet capital from the Peiping talks, regarded here as a Communist planning session preliminary to East-West talks.

British Press Intensifies Anti-US Feeling

Editors Note: United Press International Vice President and Associate General Manager Kingsbury Smith is on a fact-finding tour of Europe. In the following dispatch, he reports the British press is presenting America's attitude toward a summit conference in a way that is bound to intensify anti-American sentiment among Britons.

By KINGSBURY SMITH
United Press International

LONDON (UPI)—America's attitude towards a summit meeting on the Middle East was being presented to the British people today in a manner that appears bound to intensify the anti-American sentiment still running strong in this country.

Most of England's leading newspapers, and especially the popular press, were giving the people the impression the United States government remains opposed to a summit meeting with Russia on the Middle East and will not work earnestly for the successful outcome of such a conference if it is held.

Some sections of the popular press, such as Lord Beaverbrook's Express and the tabloid Sunday Pictorial, led British readers over the weekend to believe President Eisenhower is neither well enough nor clever enough to risk matching wits with that rough and tough little boss of the Kremlin, Nikita Khrushchev.

A cartoon in the Express even implied the President was afraid to meet the Soviet premier. It portrayed him as running away from a summit meeting and begging Secretary of State John Foster Dulles to find another excuse for not holding it, lest he be "taken" by Khrushchev the way the British think the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt was "taken" by Stalin at their war-time conferences.

Says Preparations Negative

Some newspapers sought to give their readers the impression the United States will "torpedo" the summit meeting if it is held. The Washington correspondent of the London "Observer," Patrick O'Donovan said the American government was preparing for the conference in an increasingly negative manner.

He indicated that if such a meeting is held, it will be used by the United States primarily as a sounding board to attack rather than as an opportunity to negotiate a settlement of Middle Eastern problems. In fact, he told his readers it is not planned that the President will "negotiate in detail with the Russians."

British correspondents in other foreign capitals also give a critical and at times sarcastic picture of American diplomacy at work. The Observer's Amman correspondent, reporting on the diplomatic trouble-shooting activities of Undersecretary of State Robert Murphy, said the latter's "diplomatic successes in Lebanon must be causing sinking feelings in some Jordanian stomachs."

This was a reference to Murphy's efforts to bring about a reconciliation among opposing political factions in Lebanon that would facilitate early withdrawal of the American military forces.

Officials Concerned

The British, including high government officials with whom I have spoken, are seriously concerned over what they fear may be a premature withdrawal of American forces from Lebanon.

If pro-Western King Hussein of Jordan is to be saved, the British believe they will have to keep their troops in that little kingdom for months. The British know they will be subject to strong pressure to leave Jordan once the Americans have pulled out of Lebanon.

As the Observer correspondent said, the British troops in Jordan would, under such circumstances, be left "looking as sheepishly out of place as the girl at the party whose beau has gone home without her."

Some good British friends of the United States think something drastic should be done to overcome the anti-American feeling in Britain. If President Eisenhower attends a summit meeting in Geneva, British officials feel it would be a good idea for him to visit Britain and try to win back the confidence and warm friendship of the British people that he enjoyed as supreme commander of the allied forces during the war.

Commission To Hear Ordinance

Pampa's City Commissioners will have the second reading of ordinance 303 in their meeting tomorrow, according to John Koonits, city manager.

Koonits said this ordinance pertains to bringing five blocks of the Fraser Annex No. two into the city limits.

Bids on turbine pipes will also be decided tomorrow, Koonits said. The bids were submitted last week but the commission decided to study them for another week.

There's Much More To Being Charming Than Possessing Pretty Little Face

By ALICIA HART NEA Beauty Editor
The teen-ager who has turned into a professional beauty, at, say, 15 or 16, is not unusual. We all know such girls, the ones who are much concerned with their own looks and nothing else really. They spend endless hours experimenting with lipstick and hairdos, pressing clothes and shopping for new clothes.

Actually, a certain amount of this is not only normal but essential to a well-groomed teen-ager. But when it becomes an obsession, it's a bore to everyone nearby. The making of a human being with the power to charm others has much more to it than a mere concern with a pert little face. Madame Recamier, a famous French beauty, is said to have had rather large feet, thin arms and irregular features. That didn't stop her from bowling over nearly every person—man, woman or child—who ever came into her presence.

There's a lesson to be learned from this. A pair of well-pressed white shorts won't turn any teen-ager into a beauty. Your beauty tools belong to you alone and they should never be used by anyone else. Most of us wouldn't think of lending a toothbrush to another person. But we pass out powder puffs, lipsticks, combs, rouge and hairbrushes without thinking about it twice.

We are, of course, just begging for scalp and skin troubles when we do this. For your beauty tools are just as personal as your toothbrush. They should be used by you alone, kept scrupulously clean and never lent even to your best friend. They should be replaced before they start looking grubby and you should change the powder puff

DEAR ABBY...

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If there is any freedom of the press you'll print my letter and permit me to defend myself. I am the retired Army officer who ran over the little boy's wagon and tricycle. First, let me say that I have arthritis so bad I can hardly drive my car. Every night for the past eight months I've had to stop my car in the driveway, open the door, get out, move the toys, get back into the car, close the door and proceed to the garage. I've spoken nicely to the boy, given him treats, appealed to his parents but it accomplished nothing. I finally warned his parents that if the toys were in my driveway again I would run over them. His father said, "I wish you would, it might teach him a good lesson." So I ran over them. Can anyone suggest a better method of teaching him a lesson?

RETIREE: You could have stopped your car in the garage and made HIM move his toys. Or left your car and asked the boy's father to put it in the garage. Destroying property deliberately is too drastic.

DEAR ABBY: We are invited to a silver wedding party to be held in an exclusive hotel. With the invitation came the request for $25 per couple, or $10 single. Our hostess is very friendly with the silver wedding couple but we hardly know these people. The couple celebrating their wedding is not hard up and he is a well known professional man. My hostess said they were collecting the money to send them on a second honeymoon trip. Should be a part of this?

IN DOUBT
Dear In: If you hardly know the couple for whom the party is being given, decline the invitation.

DEAR ABBY: Here is a question from a lonely, unattached, mature woman. Would it be proper for a woman in my position to invite a single, unattached gentleman to my home for a meal? I have known him casually for a

The Humphries Feted With Party

Mr. and Mrs. Chick Humphries, 844 E. Craven, were honored with a surprise birthday party on Tuesday evening in their home. Mr. Humphries' birthday was on July 27. Mrs. Humphries on July 30. Miss Jennie Atkinson presented the honored couple with two birthday cakes.

Other gifts were presented the honorees, after which punch, coffee and cake were served to the following guests: Messrs. A. and Mmes. Clyde Prince, Austin Rudick, J. C. Largent, H. L. Atkinson, W. A. Baten, Jack Robertson, C. Brown, C. A. Pixler, J. B. Crocker, Frank Turpen, Lon Trask, G. L. Lunsford, Marie Haight, Perle Gall Armstrong, Francis Prince, and Ruby Wythe.

RUTH MILLETT

Once a child has become a teen-ager, a parent can't go back — To the "look, Mom, look, Dad" period when a parent's admiration was all important. For a teen-ager the important thing is how he stands with "the crowd."

To the time when a parent's final judgment was "the law." The teen-ager is quick to argue that Mom and Pop are old-fashioned and the fact that "everybody" does a certain thing is bound to make it all right.

To the days when "Tell me about when you were a kid" was a frequent request. Nothing so pains a teen-ager like having Mom or Dad begin stories with "When I was your age."

To the time when going someplace with Dad and Mom was big stuff. A teen-ager is more likely to be bored and restless on family excursions.

To the time when a parent could smooth out hiccups and disappointments and make things right. "You just don't understand," is the cry of the unhappy teen-ager, no matter how understanding his parents are.

You can't go back. But if you're lucky you can go forward — To the time when your son or daughter boasts about the standards you insist on upholding.

To the day when you don't have to pretend that you always know best or are always right and so can begin to be friends with your child.

To the time when it is your child, not you, who likes to say, "Remember when..."

Fragrance Makes Sense To Coeds

By ALICIA HART NEA Beauty Editor
As she heads back to the campus this fall, the college girl is sure to take along her favorite fragrance as well as one or two new ones.

For daily use, she's sure to want a tweedy scent for wear with suits, sweaters and shirts. She'll find an old favorite available now in splash cologne form and a new crystal bottle. This is one that she can afford to splash on after bath or shower. It can go into rinse water to give a tangy scent to pretty lingerie.

The more exotic perfumes are the ones she'll want to save for dates and parties. If she's lucky enough to own several bottles, she can experiment to find which "wears" best on her skin. These sophisticated perfumes do well after A. C. Brown, C. A. Pixler, J. B. Crocker, Frank Turpen, Lon Trask, G. L. Lunsford, Marie Haight, Perle Gall Armstrong, Francis Prince, and Ruby Wythe.

Hoe Down
By KAY SHERWOOD NEA Staff Writer
If choice house plants have been summering outdoors, don't wait until the first snap of autumn to start moving them into the house. Gardening experts say that late August is a preferred time for the move in most of the nation. It gives plants ample time to become accustomed to indoor living before furnaces are turned on.

You may also want to start thinking about different ways to display plants and to use them for maximum effect. BEFORE YOU BRING potted geraniums and the like indoors, thoroughly wash pots with a hose and inspect each plant for better. The new push-button insect sprays for flowering plants makes de-bugging a quick and easy matter.

I'm told that the best time to spray your plants is early in the morning. If you're going to pot plants that you've been raising in borders or low beds, select young plants with fairly small roots and use containers no larger than necessary. Transplanting a small plant into a large container of soil may aggravate a type of damage known as watering-off.

MOST HOUSE PLANTS like light and moist air. A good spot: a window with south, east or west exposure that's away from a radiator or stove. There are several ways to display plants and you can spend a little or a lot on their placement. You can fix charming wrought iron garden "gates" with holders for pots to make an airy addition to a picture window.

New, tall, narrow brass and glass brice-a-brac shelves also look to me as though they'd be perfect as plant stands. The multitude of moderately priced wicker baskets in many sizes and shapes that are on the market offer an interesting texture background for bright geraniums, daisies or marigolds. Plants don't have to be lined up on a window sill. Baskets can be hung along the side of a window, for example. In one setting, three wicker cruet baskets hung along one side of a breakfast nook window were filled with geraniums and philodendron to become a replacement for curtains.

To complete the picture, a planter filled with more of the same red and green plants stands on an extra-wide window sill. HOUSE PLANTS NEED light, moisture and supplemental feedings to thrive, in most cases. Hard-surfaced leaves such as ivy and philodendron look better when they're clean and shiny. They'll benefit from an occasional washing, but you can shine them with harmless sprays made for the purpose of adding luster to leaves. To keep indoor plants free of some of the common insects such as mites, aphids, mealy bugs and others, requires periodic treatment of plants with an insecticide. Many of the insecticides intended for outdoor use contain chemicals not suitable or safe for indoor use. Play it safe by using insect bombs formulated for house plant use.

No Sweat California! You'll Be In Series

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press International

You can tear up those tickets for San Francisco, but don't worry because it'll still be a "California World Series" after all — between Los Angeles resident Fred Haney and Casey Stengel of Glendale.

Milwaukee's back — on — the beam Braves took care of that little item Sunday when they bolted five games ahead of the National League pack by thumping the faltering Giants twice, 4-3 and 6-0.

Oh, Haney wouldn't definitely admit his Braves were "in" yet today and Bill Rigney likewise would not concede his Giants were licked, but whom do they think they're kidding?

Bob Throbridge and Joe Adcock polled their talents to give Milwaukee its victory in the opener. Throbridge pitched seven innings of hitless ball in relief for his first victory. Adcock drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Huris 43rd Shoutout

Southpaw Warren Spahn registered the 43rd shutout of his career and 14th win of the season when he hurled a four-hitter in the nightcap.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, getting the finest pitching in both leagues, took the opener from the St. Louis Cardinals, 2-0, and led by the same score in the nightcap which was suspended in the fifth inning because of Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew law.

Bob Friend pitched the third straight shutout by a Pirate hurler to notch his 14th triumph in the opener. Rookie George Witt was working on a four-hit shutout in the nightcap which will be resumed with Pittsburgh batting in the bottom of the fifth on Sept. 16.

Alex Kellner, an American League discard, scored his fourth victory for Cincinnati by defeating Los Angeles, 3-1, in the nightcap following a 10-inning 8-6 triumph by the Dodgers in the opener.

Drysdale Gets Homer

Loser Don Drysdale helped himself to a 1-0 lead with the third-inning homer in the nightcap and held that margin until the seventh when the Redlegs scored three runs. That ended a string of nine straight wins by the Dodgers over the Redlegs this season.

Pinch-hitter Elmer Valo and Jim Gilliam singled home the two runs in the 10th that won the opener for Los Angeles.

Ray Semproch scored his 13th victory in leading the Phillies to an 8-2 opening game decision but the Cubs bounced back to take the nightcap, 12-10.

Semproch drove in two runs as the Phils rallied for five off Taylor Phillips in the third inning of the opener and Philadelphia looked as if it was going to make a sweep by coming up with five runs in the first inning of the nightcap. The Cubs, however, cut that to 5-3 and then put together a pair of four-run rallies in the fifth and seventh to offset another five-run outburst by Philadelphia in the ninth.

Sweep Yankees

Over in the American League, the White Sox vaulted into third place by sweeping a twin-bill from the Yankees, 3-1 and 4-0. Even so, the Yankees still are 15½ games ahead.

Dick Donovan held the Yanks to three hits in beating Whitey Ford and posting his eighth victory in the opener. Ray Moore followed with a five-hit shutout for his seventh victory in the finale.

So flexible is the AL race that Cleveland dropped from second place to fifth by losing a doubleheader to Boston, 3-2 and 4-2. Ted Williams' 18th homer with one on in the ninth off Gary Bell gave the Red Sox their victory in the opener. Boston won the nightcap with a four-run rally in the eighth inning at the expense of loser Ray Narleski and Hoyt Wilhelm.

Paul Foytack and Billy Hoelt pitched the Tigers to a sweep over the Orioles, 3-2 and 4-1. Each yielded eight hits and was credited with his eighth victory as Detroit stretched its winning streak to six games and Baltimore's losing streak to seven games.

Kansas City beat Washington, 12-0, in the first game, then lost the 15-inning nightcap, 4-3. Eddie Yost singled home the winning run off Murry Dickson in the finale to earn Pedro Ramos his 10th triumph. Ralph Terry tossed a five-hitter for his seventh victory in the opener.

Braves Just Did The Expected

By FRED LINDECKE
United Press International

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—The Milwaukee Braves have done what everybody has been expecting them to do all along—break open the National League pennant race.

The Braves completed a four-game sweep over the San Francisco Giants with a Sunday doubleheader victory to put them five full games in front. The next one-third of the season will tell if this was "the series" that ended what has been a very close race.

Actually the break comes about two weeks before it did last year when the Braves won the pennant and the World Series. At that time it was the St. Louis Cardinals who fell 8½ games behind at mid-August.

Neither the manager of the leaders nor of the closest contender has admitted that any turning point has been reached, however.

Both Fred Haney of the Braves and Bill Rigney of the Giants played it straight down the middle.

Twin Bills Scare Haney

"The season's not over," said Haney. "Certainly, we're still in the race," said Rigney.

Rigney explained Sunday's double beating as having a "bad day." But then he confessed that "we've been having a bad day for about a week now."

"But this series won't affect the spirit of our young players," Rigney asserted. "They've always been able to bounce right back. What kind of a manager would I be if I said we were out of it now."

Haney on the other hand was afraid of losing the Braves' big edge in the face of upcoming doubleheaders.

"Sure we got a cushion, but if we fall we can still get hurt. Let us have one bad streak and we're down with the pack again," he said. "We've got three doubleheaders the next three weeks. We've got another seven weeks to play and it's not the end for me or these guys (the team)."

"All We Need..."

Haney said the Braves were finally starting to get some hitting, which was especially evident in Saturday's 13-hit, 10-0 shellacking of the Giants.

With Rigney it was the other side of the coin.

"If we don't get hitting, we're in trouble. We're just not hitting or getting the breaks. Every time we hit the ball it's a double play. The other team hits it and gets extra bases. They'll start falling in for us again. All we need is a Whazzis! They'd Split ML Seasons?

By JACK CUDDY
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI)—Threats of pennant runaways in both major leagues today inspired the suggestion the majors adopt split seasons to maintain interest in late-summer play.

With the New York Yankees 15½ games ahead of their nearest rival in the American circuit, and the Milwaukee Braves striving to emulate them in the National League by a five-game lead, Fred Corcoran declared positively, "The split season is a must."

Corcoran said it seemed incredible to him — as a promotion expert — that major league club owners were apparently taking out no insurance against similar crises in future campaigns.

"And that insurance is the split-season," he asserted.

Clues Lack Of Interest

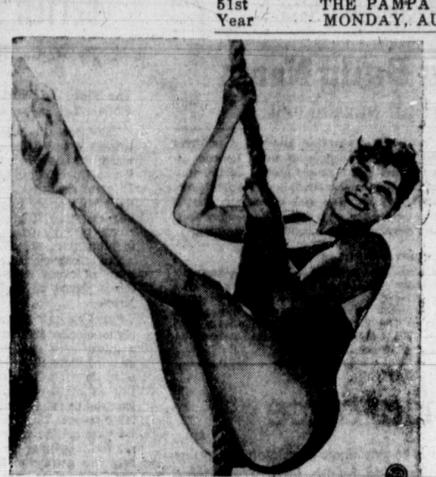

Corcoran, widely known as a specialist in golf exploitation, is indirectly concerned with the welfare of our national pastime because he's business manager for stars like Ted Williams and Stan Musial.

And he's directly concerned, "because I've been a red hot baseball fan since my sandlot days in

Coed Golfer Wants To Be Curtis Cupper

By GENE BLUDEAU
United Press International

CHICAGO (UPI)—A sun-tanned coed who can wallop a golf ball 220 yards with no trouble at all said today she has "one big ambition before getting too old."

The ambition, said golfer Sherry Wheeler, 17, is to qualify as a member of the United States Curtis Cup team. Miss Wheeler, who has been playing golf since the tender age of 13, has no desire to join the professionals.

"It may sound funny about worrying about becoming too old," said said earnestly between practice shots at the Inverness Country Club in Barrington, Ill.

"But after this tournament, I'll be too old to try for the junior events. Eighteen's the limit," she said.

The blue-eyed Miss Wheeler hails from Glasgow, Ky., and is the defending champion in the Western Junior tournament which opens at the Inverness layout today. She won the title last year by beating Andrea Cohn of Waterloo, Iowa, in a sudden-death playoff.

"I don't have to worry about Andrea this year. She's already too old," Miss Wheeler said with a grin. Andrea turned 18 this year.

Sherry does not come from a golfing family like many other junior stars. Her father, in fact, couldn't see much to the game.

"I started playing at the Glasgow country club when I was 13 and I've played just about every day since when it wasn't raining or too cold," she said.

GRID & CAGE

Aggies & Frogs Get Most 'Stars

By ED FITTE
United Press International

HOUSTON (UPI)—Texas A&M in football and Texas Christian in basketball will grab the largest share of the 50 all-star athletes who started drills today for their North-South game here Friday and Saturday night.

The 56 gridgers and 24 cage stars launched two-day practice sessions this morning as hundreds of coaches from throughout Texas and many other states clogged the registration line for the opening of the 26th annual clinic staged by the Texas High School Coaches Association.

With more than 1,000 coaches pre-registered the total attendance at the school-classed as the world's largest — was expected to soar past the 3,000 mark, well above the record 2,677 attending last year at Dallas.

They will attend five days of lectures by Jess Neely of Rice and David Nelson of Delaware in football, Bobby Rogers of Texas A&M and Russell Walsath of Colorado in basketball and Jack Patterson of Baylor in track.

All 80 athletes checked in on time late Sunday on the Rice campus where they will be quartered and, for the first time in many years, there wasn't an absence, any ailments or any substitutions in the original list picked for the four squads.

The Texas Aggies, waging an ambitious recruiting program under new Coach Jim Myer, will be the choice of 13 of the 56 football players, while TCU got four of the two dozen cagers.

Texas garnered nine of the football players. Baylor and Southern Methodist six each, Oklahoma five, TCU and Texas Tech four each, Rice three, Houston two and Tulane, Howard Payne, Kilgore College and Southwest Texas one each.

Texas, SMU and West Texas State got two cagers each, Texas A&M, Rice Houston, Texas Tech, Lamar Tech, Victoria JC, Kilgore JC, Tyler JC, Abilene Christian and North Texas one each, and four were listed as undecided.

Tag... And You're It!

A "battle to the finish" tag-team match between Iron Mike DeBaise and his partner in crime, Art Nelson, against Tokyo Joe and the Great Bolfo features the wrestling card at the Top of Texas Sportman Club here tonight.

The four heavyweights will lock horns in a match where the rule book will be tossed aside. No holds will be barred, falls won't count, and there'll be no disqualifications for underhanded tactics, because anything goes.

Tommy Phelps, who while serving as a referee has taken plenty of hard knocks during recent weeks, meets Al Kaskey in the 45-minute best two-of-three semifinal match. Phelps figures since he's taken ring lickings as a ref, he might as well don his wrestling togs and make some money for his bruises.

In the 8:30 p.m. opening event, Bolfo faces Nelson, with both fighters trying to cripple-up the opposition for the later tag-team struggle.

PAMPA CC PLAYS HOST TO PWGA ON THURSDAY

Pampa Country Club will roll out the red carpet to the Panhandle Women's Golf Association Thursday for the organization's fourth meeting of the season.

Local fem golfers wishing to play in the one-day tournament that goes along with the monthly meeting have been asked to contact the local pro-shop, not later than Wednesday noon.

A 1:30 p.m. luncheon will be served following the completion of 18-holes by most of the golfers. Reservations for the luncheon should also be made before noon Wednesday with the pro-shop.

Registration for the tourney will come at 8 a.m. Thursday and all ladies are expected to "have tea off by 9 a.m. Coffee and doughnuts will be available during the 8 a.m. registration period.

All play in the tournament is on a handicap basis, giving each individual entry an equal opportunity to win.

Prizes are new golf balls, which will be purchased out of the 50 cents entrance fee each golfer puts up to play in the meet.

No golfer, with the exception of the low-gross shooter providing her team is also the low-gross outfit, has a chance to win over one new golf ball.

An open meeting of the PWGA will be held after the tournament with golfers from Amarillo Country Club, Tascosa Country Club, Ross Rogers Golf Course, Huber Golf Course Country Club, Phillips Country Club and the host Pampa Country Club in attendance.

Whatever Happened To... Raymond (Sonny) Workman

Sonny Workman, one of the great riders of his day and a member of the National Jockey's Hall of Fame, began hanging around racetracks at the age of 10. At 16, in 1926, he rode his first winner and the next year he was a dazzer on Maryland's half mile tracks, being the leading rider at almost every meeting. Workman moved quickly to the big time and for years was one of turfdom's top stakes riders, scoring frequently with such aces as Equipoise and Top Flight. For 13 years he rode for the Whiteites, first H. O. Whitney then C. V. Whitney, and though he never was the national leader he had the respect of horsemen everywhere.

Whatever happened to Sonny Workman? Now 49 and four times a grandfather, he manages extensive real estate holdings in his native Washington, D. C., a position he achieved by investing wisely when he made top money at the tracks.

Health Insurance

In China, the custom is to pay one's physician a regular fee until such time as one's good health fails. The doctor with an ailing patient is a medical man without an income. The accidental practice has been the reverse. We pay when we are sick. The sicker we are, the more we are apt to pay.

With this fact in mind, Lenin once observed that the keystone in the arch of communism had to be socialized medicine. And for a number of years, exponents of the myth that the state is the best agency to protect our health, have labored to invent and foist upon the American people some kind of government health insurance program.

They have made some inroads, it is true. The cabinet post originally created by Mr. Eisenhower and familiarly called "HEW" has as its first identifying word, the title "health."

Then, too, across the land government clinics have been established. Government schools have furnished all kinds of health services at taxpayers' expense. And thousands of governmental social workers intrude perpetually upon the medical prerogative, offering "free" advice, and rushing patients to clinics upon some pretext so that the bill for socialized medicine mounts on a yearly basis.

But in the main, the massive move toward socialized medicine, sired by the Roosevelt administration and continued through the years by subsequent executives, never got off the ground.

The mighty A.M.A. for the most part fought these proposals. And they were even more effectively torpedoed by the American Society of Physicians and Surgeons, by most of the dental profession, and by the chiropractors and the osteopaths.

Undoubtedly the single most effective device ever contrived to prevent an onrush into the hands of the state so far as medicine, surgery, and other health services were concerned, was prepaid health insurance, operating under a dozen different names.

The Blue Cross and the Blue Shield and many of the major insurance companies offered all kinds of plans and programs designed to fit the individual needs as well as the individual purses.

To the surprise of most executives of these insurance agencies and companies, the popular acceptance of these health plans was simply overwhelming. Few dreamed that the Blue Cross idea, which got started about 30 years ago, would ever become so hugely popular. Some visionaries of the early days predicted that in time, and with good luck, there might sometime be as many as 50,000 persons covered in this manner. But as it stands, more than 120 million Americans are protected wholly or in part by some kind of health insurance, purchased in the main by voluntary decisions on the parts of the insured.

A variance to the general theme of voluntarism was provided by the unions. These extortionist groups, according to the best authorities, came close to wrecking health insurance totally by crooked practices, racketeering, and outright embezzlement of funds in hundreds of instances.

Nor could it be said that the public or even all the medical men in practice were totally devoid of guilt. Doctors have been known to boost their charges when an insured patient crossed their thresholds. And many a man or woman with a minor ailment went hustling to a hospital for what amounted to a vacation while all sorts of imaginary ills were scouted.

Abuses, as a matter of fact, became so rampant, that many a cry went up that the government would have to step in and take over all health insurance plans, if only to keep the insurers honest. Of course this cry is as absurd and as unthinking as it is perennial. Americans seem to find some kind of solace by turning every problem from unemployment to trouble with hognails over to the politicians.

Fortunately, the private firms of insurers resisted the temptation to ask the government to step in. Perhaps they were encouraged in their stand by the debacle of socialized medicine as it loomed its ugly head over the citizens of Britain. In any case, it did become necessary, not only to offer better insurance coverage to Americans, but to guard against abuses which might occur at any time and from any source.

Also, it became necessary to lower the costs of such insurance and to offer some kind of comprehensive coverage so that a person with a minor complaint could receive aid for which he had paid, without occupying some costly hospital bed for days or even weeks.

The problem is still not totally solved. But steps which have recently been taken by General Electric and many of the major insurers, seem calculated to remove the abuses and at the same time to provide the kind of insurance that Americans imagine they are always getting when they buy health insurance.

What is important to realize is that free enterprise, though it may not be perfect, does offer a way of solving almost any problem.

And so long as we have freedom and a free market, whatever we have can be improved. It is only if and when the government intrudes into this field or any other, that improvement becomes unlikely if not impossible, and we enter the static realm where nothing but regimentation ever works.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

The Right To Work: Our Hottest Labor Issue

The "Reader's Digest" for August has a very informative article under the heading, "The Right to Work: Our Hottest Labor Issue." It starts out by giving briefly the argument for voluntary unionism and then it gives the arguments used by those who believe in compulsory unionism.

The unions use their usual argument of "free riders" and that things should be decided by majority.

"Free riders," of course, is simply an opinion and not a fact. It is a smear word since the men who do not believe in strikes and picketing do not believe they are getting as much real wages in the long run as they would get without labor unions. They do not believe they are getting a free ride. They are convinced that the union members are getting a free ride by exploiting other workers, since workers are the big consumers.

The idea that all things must be decided by majority is certainly anything but in harmony with the Decalogue and the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence. If the majority have a right to decide how men plan their lives, then the whole ideologies of the Declaration of Independence that all men are endowed by the Creator with certain inalienable rights, are a fallacy. Then only the majority are endowed by the Creator if the majority have a right to decide how a man may pursue happiness. This belief is a throwback to the divine right of government, that the individual has no God-given right.

Then the article quotes from what several union members say. Listen to this: "Hear now the voice of Mary L. Crabtree, who testified before the Indiana Legislature last year when it was considering a right-to-work measure. She was a member of Local 1048, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, she said, 'because I have to be. I don't agree with the union's political views. I have been a member for nine years, and have not yet found any effective way to protest any policy.'"

"Cecil C. Roeder, of Anderson, Ind., told the lawmakers about union democracy within Walter Reuther's United Auto Workers. A member of its Local 622, he said: 'For seven years I was denied the right to belong to my local union because I came before the Indiana Senate Committee in 1948 and testified in favor of a bill to repeal the right-to-work law.'"

"Milo Graber, who has worked 12 years in the International Harvester plant at Fort Wayne, reported that its employees, in a National Labor Relations Board election, voted down compulsory unionism. 'But in less than a year,' he reported, 'union and company officials negotiated in a compulsory membership clause. If Indiana had had a right-to-work law in 1951 the company and union officials could not have forced the employees into union membership against their will.'"

Organizing Methods
"In organizing members, unions sometimes use methods which leave little freedom of choice, either to the employer or the workers. In California, which has no right-to-work law, an organizer for Teamster Local 912 approached the small firm of H. A. Rider & Son (it processes apple juice) asking that it sign a contract including a compulsory membership clause. When the Rider firm said it would sign only if the union got the consent of a majority of the employees, the organizer said this was 'too much trouble.' Instead, withdrawing his union shop demands, the organizer threw a picket line around the Rider plant in September 1956."

"In theory the Taft-Hartley law provides a remedy, so Rider asked the NLRB for an election. It took six weary months to arrange one. Then, in a secret ballot, Rider's workers got their chance to speak. One voted for the Teamsters; 16 voted against."

"The union, which said it 'would not challenge the vote,' nevertheless continued picketing. It took the NLRB four more tedious months — costly both to Rider and the workers — to decide that this post-election picket line also was unjustified."

"Under a state right-to-work law, a judge can, in a few hours, by court injunction, stop illegal blockades established by unions to coerce compulsory membership clauses from employers..."

Case History: The Railroads
"The AFL-CIO charges that right-to-work laws 'have the effect of keeping unions from growing.' But from 1934 until 1951, workers on American railroads were protected from compulsory unionism by a provision of the Railway Labor Act, and during those years most railway unions trebled in voluntary membership. 'Nevertheless, in 1951 union leaders urged and got from Congress legislation permitting compulsory membership contracts with the railway companies. In this they were reversing the policies of the late Warren S. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. 'I do not believe,' said Stone, 'in forcing a man to join a union. It is contrary to the principles of free government. We work willingly side by side with other engineers who do not belong to our union, though they enjoy the advantages we have obtained.' 'But other union leaders car-

The Wonderful Wizard of Washington

THE LATEST THING IN ELECTRONIC BRAINS— FOR AUTOMATION IN GOVERNMENT WORK—

Robert Allen Reports:

De Gaulle Has Big Reason For Tactics

WASHINGTON — Premier de Gaulle has a highly important reason for wanting to delay a summit conference as long as possible. If he can stall it until late August, France will have conducted its first atomic test.

Tentative date for this first French nuclear explosion is the week of August 25; place, the Sahara Desert.

The first blast will be in the 20 kiloton (20,000 tons TNT) range, approximately the same size as the first atomic bomb the U.S. dropped on Hiroshima in World War II.

This test, if successful, will mean that France could attend the summit meeting as an equal atomic power. She would become the fourth member of the so-called "atomic club." The others are the U.S., Great Britain, and Russia.

De Gaulle is making no secret of his intention to use possession of atomic weapons to assert French leadership in NATO councils.

In talks with Secretary Dulles, the French Premier bluntly asserted France would expect a major role in all atomic weapons, "since nothing now can stop France from becoming a nuclear power."

These plans already have caused the West Germans to caution France not to proceed with producing actual nuclear weapons.

This blunt warning occurred in a personal meeting between Defense Minister Franz-Josef Strauss and de Gaulle. The Bonn official contended that his government and other members of the Western Europe Union should be consulted before France goes ahead with production. According to State Department information, de Gaulle listened politely but made no promises.

The French Premier remarked, "This is a matter to be discussed after and not before the test."

MOON RACE — Central Intelligence Agency, in a new report, expresses the belief that Russia will attempt to "shoot the moon" by fall. In previous reports, CIA has stated the Soviet has the capability of doing that "virtually at any time." . . . By August 12 the Air Force will have special equipment ready to "track" its shot at the moon. . . . That's when a radio-telescope observation station the Air Force is building in Hawaii will go into operation. Delay in completing this important facility was a major reason the Air Force shelved its original July 4 target date for attempting to send a missile to the moon. . . . U.S. scientists have been informed by Russia that 70 of its visual observation stations have detailed reports on Sputnik III. That satellite has burned up, but the third stage of its missile is still girdling the globe. In addition to these 70 visual observation stations, the Soviet stated they have 20 other photographic stations. But they have produced no films as yet. Neither have they made available the 300 rolls of magnetic tape recordings of Sputnik III signals, which Moscow says it has.

FARM BILL SURPRISE — President Eisenhower is frankly surprised that Congress is going to vote a farm bill that is acceptable to him. The President voiced that astonished day. Since then, through coaxing and strike threats, they have obtained compulsory union membership contracts with all the nation's major railroads except the Louisville & Nashville. Latest to give in was the Santa Fe, which, during its long court battle, received hundreds of letters from employees imploring the company to stand firm.

Professor Has The Right Idea, Believes McLemore

By HENRY McLEMORE

My wife doesn't know it yet, but I have arranged for her to attend the University of Connecticut this fall.

I don't care what she studies, just so long as she takes on a class under Professor B. A. Brown, who teaches agronomy. That I insist upon.

Whether she learns anything about agronomy doesn't interest me. She needn't crack a book if she doesn't want to, or take a single note. All I want her to do is come under the influence of Professor Brown, a man after my own heart.

I have been reading some of the Professor's utterances, and he is a sound and wise scholar. For one thing, Professor Brown doesn't believe in mowing a lawn too often, and believes that wives should ease up on their insistence that their husbands keep it trimmed within an inch of its teeth.

Speaking as an authority, the Professor says constant mowing brings on nervous prostration among the leaves of grass and is bad for their health. And he also recommends that the clippings should not be raked up, but left on the yard. Let grass grow until it is long, he urges, and when you do cut it, don't wear yourself out picking it up.

If Mary learns nothing but this lesson about grass, it will be worth the tuition.

I am sure that Professor Brown, if he doesn't believe in picking up grass, doesn't believe in picking up a lot of other things. Clothes, for example. It has long been my theory that clothes, like everything else, need a rest, and that the floor is a grand place for them to get it.

No one can convince me that a pair of trousers, say, get much rest and relaxation on a hanger. It is too formal a position. But curled up on the floor, beside the bed, or thrown carelessly over a chair, they can take their ease and regain their strength.

I aim to write Professor Brown and ask him if whiskers, like grass, should not be cut too often. It's a funny thing about women and whiskers. A woman wouldn't marry a man who couldn't grow whiskers, but the sight of them on her husband's face makes her unhappy.

If Professor Brown would just drop a hint that shaving too often causes distress to whiskers and makes them miserable, then perhaps wives would be more inclined to let their husbands skip a day now and then.

The Professor might be so good as to say that it is unwise to empty ash trays too often. Maybe cigarette butts, like the grass clippings, should be allowed to stand a while. Husbands walk endless miles each year emptying ash trays that are no more than a third or one-half full.

Professor Brown sounds as if he were on the side of the plighly-lazy. America needs more voices like his. If not American, then my wife, Mary. She likes the house to look at all times as if a prospective-buyer were ringing the doorbell.

A semester with Professor Brown might change her attitude.

The Doctor Says:

By EDGAR P. JORDAN, M. D.

GO TIT THE ITCH

Few things are more annoying than an itch. All of us are familiar with this sensation, even if it only comes from a mosquito or other insect bite.

However, some itches are worse than others and some are long lasting, as well as widespread.

One correspondent recently asked what causes itchy skin all over the body. He says that his feet feel prickly deep under the soles. Sometimes red spots appear on the toes and on the face as well.

There are a vast number of possible causes for itching, but in this instance the mention of the red spots suggests the possibility of hives or urticaria.

This is an allergic disorder involving excessive sensitivity to some substance. It can be diagnosed fairly easily by the sudden appearance of raised red spots accompanied by severe itching. Unfortunately, it is sometimes difficult to identify the substance which is responsible.

But there are a great many other possible causes for itching, only a few of which can be mentioned in this column.

Some people, for example, develop an itching of the skin after bathing. The sensation may last up to half an hour or more, but usually disappears after the clothes have been on for a while.

Winter itch is a closely related condition in which people complain of severe itching all over the body when undressing for the night or just after retiring.

It may be absent when the weather is mild. Here too the skin appears normal except for whatever scratch marks may be present.

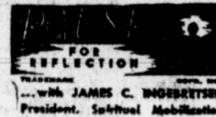

The seven-year itch, or scabies, is another cause of skin itching which must be considered. This type of itching comes from a parasite which burrows into the skin. Treatment for scabies is aimed at destroying the parasites.

Like a variety of cause itching here also the treatment of the itch is not merely to apply some lotion, but to get rid of the insects which are causing the trouble.

Itching of the skin may accompany such diseases as diabetes, nephritis or Bright's disease, and especially jaundice. Indeed, in most forms of jaundice, the itching of the skin is one of the symptoms. It is particularly distressing and extremely difficult to relieve until the underlying cause has been corrected.

With so many possible causes for itching it is obvious that no one lotion or ointment will always cure, or even always bring relief. In severe or long-lasting cases of itching, the cause must be determined before the proper treatment can be applied.

One complication of most forms of itching is the result of scratching. I don't know why one wants to scratch an itch, but we all do. But vigorous scratching injures the skin and may make treatment more difficult.

With all due deference to the scientific knowledge and engineering acumen of Satellite Pioneer Dr. Werner Von Braun, I strongly disagree with a statement he reportedly made recently to the Lions International convention in Chicago. According to United Press International, Von Braun said such men as Einstein and Edison accomplished more for the good of society than any other element in past and present civilizations.

Such a view is much too narrow. It equates the "good-of-society" with benefits from material accomplishments. It overlooks the vitally significant fact that, in order for our material accomplishments to genuinely benefit society, they must be undergirded by a solid foundation of spiritual discernment and attainment.

Without such a foundation, our material accomplishments can only implement our downfall rather than our uplift.

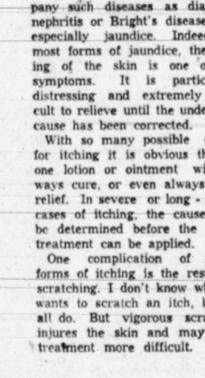

It is those who give us insight into the purpose, beauty and goodness of life who illumine the values required to hold a society together. Hence, we must look to the ranks of our great spiritual leaders, our inspired artists, poets, philosophers, musicians to find the "good" in any society. Without their vision, there could be no Einsteins or Edisons.

No doubt, we owe much to those who help us gain power over our environment. But we owe most to those who help us to gain control over ourselves. The means at our disposal can be of no more value to us than the ends to which they are dedicated. Of what avail the power to split the atom when used to build a bomb?

It is what we do with what we have—what we are inside—not the gear with which we surround ourselves—that determines the ultimate fate of every individual—and every society.
