Governor says he'll veto school finance reform bill

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The House is scheduled to take up a school finance reform plan today that Gov. Bill Clements has promised to veto, while a state judge is deciding on a special master who could write his own plan for Texas schools.

State District Judge Scott McCown has set a June 1 deadline for lawmakers and Clements to reform the $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system, as ordered by the Texas Supreme Court.

If they fail, a reform plan will be devised for them by the special master being appointed by state District Judge Scott McCown.

Three people were nominated for court master Tuesday, by parties in the lawsuit that led to the Supreme Court's unanimous school finance reform order. Recommended to McCown were:

— Billy Walker, a school finance expert who served on the Governor's Task Force on Public Education.

— Former Texas Supreme Court Justice William Kilgarlin.

— Jose Cardenas, an education expert and former superintendent of the Edgewood school district in San Antonio.

The master may be named this week, officials said. The Democratic-controlled Legislature now is in its third special session on education. This session was called after Clements, a Republican, last week vetoed a half-cent sales tax increase needed to fund a $555 million reform plan earlier adopted by lawmakers.

Another $555 million reform bill was passed Monday by the Senate, and a measure lacking a price tag will be considered today by the House.

Both bills are virtually identical to the plan Clements killed last session with his tax veto.

Clements said Tuesday he's not afraid that his continued opposition to the Legislature's school finance reform plan will lead to court intervention.

"Just as soon as that bill hits my desk, I will immediately veto it," Clements said.

"I have remained absolutely firm in my position that we will not have any new taxes. We've got plenty of time to get what we need out of the Legislature" before the 30-day session expires at month's end, Clements said.

Senators on Tuesday OK'd some $140 million in state budget cuts to help pay for school reform. Lawmakers are looking for more cuts and are examining raising some state fees, said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

But legislative leaders said they see no way around a tax increase to meet the Supreme Court's order to make more money available to property-poor school districts.

If state taxes aren't raised, there will be increases in local property taxes, lawmakers said.

"We chose the sales tax. Apparently the governor has chosen the property tax, which we think is more devastating to the citizens of our state," said House

Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

In offering names for the special master post, the poor school districts nominated Kilgarlin and Cardenas. Walker was recommended by the state.

Kilgarlin, defeated for re-election in 1988 after serving a six-year Supreme Court term, did not participate in the court's school finance ruling, which was handed down in October. He was criticized in his re-election campaign for taking large contributions from lawyers who practice before the court.

Cardenas is director of the Intercultural Development Research Association in San Antonio, said Al Kauffman, attorney for poor school districts. The association works in such areas as dropout prevention, school finance and desegregation assistance, he said.

Walker is a former deputy superintendent of business at Ector County Independent School District and program director for the Texas Center for Educational Research, said Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon.

Former city manager to sue Pampa for wrongful discharge

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Former Pampa City Manager Jack Chaney, who resigned last year after only four months on the job, is reportedly planning to sue the city for wrongful discharge.

City commissioners and current City Manager Glen Hackler made the announcement Tuesday night prior to an executive session to discuss the issue.

City Attorney Don Lane said the city has received a "demand letter" from Chaney's attorneys that outlines their position and allegations of damages.

The letter also reportedly lists an amount of money Chaney would settle for to keep the issue from going to trial.

Lane and city officials declined to say how much money Chaney was seeking, but one source termed it "a staggering amount."

Chaney resigned on Tuesday, July 11, 1989, from his post. He and city commissioners declined to comment on the resignation at the time except to say there was a "lack of chemistry" between Chaney and city leaders.

At the time of his resignation, Chaney said, "I have enjoyed my short term as city manager and would like to thank the city employees for making this one of the most enjoyable places I have ever worked."

He also said at the time, "It is quite an unusual situation where I can leave a city after such a short time and be able to call the commission, the staff and employees friends."

Tuesday night, City Commissioner Ray Hupp said he was resisting the urge to "say some things I shouldn't" about the lawsuit.

"I've been advised by council at this point not to discuss the issue," Hupp said. "Don Lane will be responding to (Chaney's) attorney."

At the time the City Commission accepted Chaney's immediate resignation, they agreed to pay him $4,000 a month through September 30, 1989, as compensation.

Chaney, who works as an office manager for the law firm that is handling his suit, Eddie Shell and Associates of Burnet, declined to comment on the suit and directed all questions to Shell, who could not be reached for comment.

After the same executive session Tuesday night in which the Chaney suit was discussed, commissioners appointed a Dallas labor attorney to represent the city against threatened litigation by members of the Pampa Fire Fighters Association who allege the city owes them for four years of overtime and back wages.

City officials have flatly denied any wrongdoing in the firefighters suit, as well as the Chaney matter.

Auditing firm ends service with city

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Peat Marwick Main & Co. has informed the city of Pampa it has decided to no longer serve as the city's auditors.

City Manager Glen Hackler made the announcement during Tuesday's City Commission meeting at City Hall.

"The city received a letter that was addressed to the commissioners and myself stating they felt it was in their best interest not to continue under the present three year audit services agreement that was granted to them," Hackler said.

City officials said Peat Marwick's decision is based largely on the fact that commissioners voted in March not to pay the company $25,000 over the $18,900 basic auditing fee it originally agreed to for auditing services.

Peat Marwick accountants said the additional amount was for necessary work to straighten out the city's accounts and bookkeeping procedures.

After denying the $25,000 payment, commissioners then denied a lesser payment of $9,327 to the company.

Hackler and commissioners said Peat Marwick violated an agreement to first make commissioners aware of any work above the $18,900 fee that would be required and to get approval for any additional fee.

Peat Marwick accountants told commissioners they felt sure commissioners had been informed of the extra work by city staff.

Ken Cochran, a Peat Marwick partner, was out of the company's Amarillo office today and could not be reached for comment.

"I would guess the payment issue and our inability to reach an agreement was a motivating factor in Peat Marwick's decision," Hackler said.

He stated that while the situation is unfortunate, it will not hinder the city's ability to secure another auditing firm.

Hackler also said it would take 30 to 45 days to find a new auditing firm for the city.

During the regular commission meeting, unanimous votes by commissioners favored:

- Awarding a bid of 64 cents per cubic foot from B&B Solvent of Pampa for excavation of the city's landfill, for a total of around $97,500. Commissioner Jerry Wilson declined to vote on the issue because the company uses his firm for accounting, he said.

- Adopting a resolution declaring the city secretary the official records management officer, a new state requirement.

- Selling tax delinquent property at 530 and 534 N. Warren for $800.
- Giving final approval to rules and requirements for Hidden Hills golf course.

- Canvassing all votes from Saturday's city election. Incumbents Jerry Wilson and Gary Sutherland were both unopposed and won re-election.

Lefors school trustees agree to pay employees on unpaid insurance bills

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS — Lefors Independent School District Board of Education took action Tuesday night to pay what a defunct insurance company should have paid for employees' medical expenses.

The school board unanimously agreed to pay 80 percent of the pending bills incurred during the insurance company's period at the school district and to reimburse employees who had paid off the bills 80 percent of what they paid.

The company, Texas Association of Community Schools Insurance, went bankrupt in September 1988. Lefors ISD and about 200 other school districts had medical insurance coverage with TACS.

The result of the TACS position has resulted in litigation, tying up payment to medical providers.

Tuesday night, Superintendent Ed Gilliland said the litigation could go on for many years.

"We're down to the point now we need to make a decision," Gilliland said.

The school board, at a meeting in April, voted to give Gilliland the authority to negotiate with medical providers on the remaining bills. The board has discussed the topic of the insurance problem at numerous meetings.

"The majority of school districts in the state have paid 80 percent of the bills and the employees have picked up the other 20 percent," Gilliland said.

"This may go on another 10 years in the courtroom," he added. "We need to get some relief for our employees."

Trustee Charlie Sullivan said he would like the school district to consider offering the employees options in the future on which insurance company to go with — one that is insured and one that is not. He said one that is insured would be more expensive, but the employees would not be in the predicament some are if an uninsured company went bankrupt.

Gilliland said that currently an employee group does decide which insurance company to go with.

In other action, the board, after a 25-minute executive session, unanimously agreed, on a motion by Garrel Roberson and seconded by Sullivan, to a reduction in force. The reduction resulted in not renewing the contract for Cynthia Simmons, who teaches three English classes and serves as a librarian.

Gilliland said following the meeting that the board followed its policy manual on the reduction in force and said Simmons was the last teacher hired by the school district.

He said the classes Simmons teaches and the librarian work will be "absorbed" by employees currently in the school district.

In other action, the board:

- Canvassed Saturday's election results.

- Approved minutes of previous meetings and the payment of monthly expenditures.

- Unanimously approved four transfer students into Lefors ISD.

- Unanimously approved local policies on the career ladder and student attendance as submitted by Texas Association of School Boards.

- Unanimously adopted a policy requiring Lefors ISD Principal Mike Jackson to obtain his superintendent's certification. Jackson needs about 15 more credit hours for the certification.

Jackson told school board members that he wants to obtain the certification.

Gilliland said there were three reasons in favor of approving the requirement: Jackson is going to obtain the certification; Jackson would be in a position to take over the superintendent's job if something happened to Gilliland; and Jackson can use it as a tax deduction.

- Unanimously approved Region XVI ESC contracts for the 1990-91 school year.

- Approved Trustee Larry Daniels to be the alternate to the 1990 TASB delegate assembly and approved Trustee Keith Roberson as the alternate.

- Discussed but took no action on hiring summer help to keep the gym and field house open during the summer. Board members requested the administration to get additional information, including exact programs to be offered, for them to consider the proposed program in more detail.

Voted 4-1, with Sullivan voting against, for the district to have two vehicles and update the older one. Sullivan expressed his opinion that the school district has operated on one vehicle, along with buses, for years.

Trustee Garrel Roberson responded, "We can always look back at what we used to do. We focus too much on the past and not enough on the future."

Mike Steele, who was elected to the school board on Saturday, said the school district could lease a car for the time needed for driver's education. Steele said he did not believe two cars were needed.

Trustee Larry Daniels said, "I still believe we need two cars for the district."
 School administration explained that at times there are separate meetings that one or two people need to attend and it is not feasible to take a bus because of the gas required.

They said some employees will not take their private vehicles on school business.
 Money was designated in the Capital Acquisition Program money received this year for the purchase of a new vehicle.

Steele and Russell Bockmon, who were elected to the school board on Saturday, sat in on the school board meeting. However, they did not vote and were not sworn into office because of requirements of a constitutional amendment passed in November by Texas voters.

Tax relief OK'd

AUSTIN (AP) - More than 50,000 Texas businesses will get tax relief from the elimination of the sales tax on manufacturing equipment purchases, state Comptroller Bob Bullock said.

When the tax is fully phased out in 1995, businesses will save more than $1 billion a year in state and local taxes, Bullock said Tuesday.

"This tax cut should promote business investment and job creation to boost our state's economic growth," he added in a statement.

Two teens arrested on burglary charges

By BEAR MILLS

Staff Writer

Working on a tip from a confidential informant, Pampa police arrested two teen-agers early this morning in connection with a burglary Monday night at Culberson Stowers Inc., 805 N. Hobart.

During the burglary, in which items were reportedly stolen from the business and several cars at the Culberson Stowers lot, tools, office equipment, electronic items and keys were taken.

Police arrested Neil Scott Mason, 17, a student at Pampa High School, who listed his addresses as both 800 N. Gray and 1326 Coffee #1, at the intersection of Brown and Russell after detectives Sgt. Charlie Love and Mike Brown spotted his vehicle, a 1977 Ford Maverick.

Police reportedly saw items allegedly taken in the burglary in plain sight in the car.

A search warrant for the car revealed other items from the burglary in the vehicle's trunk, police said.

A search warrant was then obtained for 1336 Coffee #1, where police recovered more items reportedly taken in the burglary.

Christopher D. Turlington, 17, who lives at the residence, was arrested in connection with the burglary.

Both he and Mason were being held in city jail through press time today on a charge of burglary. Bond had not yet been set.

Turlington reportedly dropped out of Pampa schools recently.

Police credited Officer Stephanie Raymond with securing the confidential tip that led to the arrest of Mason and Turlington.

Through press time today, police had not set a dollar value on the recovered items.

Levees watched as flood waters sweep south

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Residents along the rain-swollen Red River were anxiously scanning levees for more breaches today after the Texas National Guard was called in to prevent more homes from flooding.

"There's been people leaving their homes since last night," said Dave Hall, emergency management coordinator for the city of Texarkana. "Some homes near the levees are flooded and everything is blocked off in the immediate area."

Several two-story homes were flooded to their upper floors, he said, after water broke through the top of a 60-foot-long section of levee.

Authorities said the river was expected to crest today and maintain that overbank level for two days.

Gov. Bill Clements on Tuesday authorized the National Guard to send 50 soldiers to shore up the levees. About 30 Marine reservists helped place sandbags along the river, the Texarkana Office of Emergency Services said.

"The water is at the top of the levee on both sides of the river and is spilling over in some places," said Sheila Allee, a governor's spokeswoman. "About 100 homes in an unincorporated area north of Texarkana are endangered because of the weakened levee."

Emergency workers were monitoring four other "hot spots" on the levees, Hall said. Levees on the river's Arkansas side were also falling victim to flood waters.

"A lot of farmland has been flooded and we have lost a lot of cattle," said Debbie Nichols with the Texarkana, Texas, office. "We keep getting more reports of homes with water in them."

Recent heavy rains and flooding have claimed 12 lives in Texas and one in Oklahoma.

While victims in North Texas waited for water from last week's record flooding to recede, river authorities issued warnings for rivers in southern sections of the state.

Hundreds of people were either evacuated or left their homes voluntarily as rivers hit flood stage or went over their banks, authorities said.

Residents along the Trinity River south of Dallas are hoping their levees will hold when the waterway crests near 50 feet, five feet above flood stage, early Thursday.

"We're pretty well prepared for flooding. We've had it before, and right now we're in pretty good shape," said B.W. Canada, Crockett police chief. "Thank goodness, most of our low level area is sparsely populated, so we're not expecting any trouble."

In Fort Worth, firefighters used a long ladder to rescue a man who had been swimming in the Trinity's west-fork at Rockwood Park Tuesday afternoon. The man was pulled to safety from a tree above floodwaters.

"We still have a lot of water and it's still moving very rapidly," said Fire Capt. John Stone. "It's very treacherous right now."

South of Dallas, in Ellis County, an estimated 20,000 acres planted in wheat, corn, sorghum and cotton were inundated after levees on the Trinity failed there, authorities said.

"I think it's going to pretty well put me out of business unless we get some government help," said Charlie James, a farmer. "I don't really know what the alternatives are."

He said all but about 100 of his 1,800 acres were under water, with the fields later drain, they could be replanted, but the flooding threat remains because of breached levees.

"You go in there and plant, and if your breaks are wide open, any type of small flood out of the creeks, it will come straight in your river bottom, not counting the breaks on the river," said another farmer, Lynn Wright.

Defense attorneys rest case in Treaty Oak trial

AUSTIN (AP) — Defense attorneys in the trial of a man accused of poisoning the centuries-old Treaty Oak have rested their case without calling the defendant to the stand.

A surprise defense witness testified Tuesday that she saw two men other than Paul Stedman Cullen pouring several jugs of liquid around the base of Treaty Oak at about the time the landmark tree was poisoned with liquid herbicide.

The surprise witness, Wanda Garcia, testified late in a series of 17 defense witnesses who represented an effort to cast doubt on the state's claim that Cullen poisoned the tree as part of an occult ritual.

Ms. Garcia said she was walking past the giant tree in February or March 1989 when she saw the men pouring a substance around Treaty Oak. She said the men were not city employees, and said neither man was Cullen.

Boy found after break in kidnap case

FORT WORTH (AP) — The mother of a 1-year-old boy who was abducted nearly a year ago from a motel here told authorities she was elated to return home with her son today.

Donna Hofford's son, Cobra Jet Gee, was found at a hotel near Lake Tawakoni, east of Dallas, after an anonymous tip from a nationally televised crime victims' program. A woman was arrested and a man was sought in the abduction.

The boy and her mother had a joyful reunion Tuesday at the Hunt County Courthouse, said sheriff's Maj. Richard Hill.

"She was extremely happy," said Hill.

The suspects, both described as drifters, had taken Gee from an east side Fort Worth motel on June 8, 1989, said police. Sheriff's Deputy Tony Bradley said the boy was found penned in a corner of the lakeside hotel room by suitcases.

"He had a rash on his face and was a little dirty," Bradley said. "But otherwise, he was fine."

Sheriff's officers and Lake Tawakoni police arrested the 43-year-old woman and recovered Gee secretly recorded a conversation in which Cullen reportedly discussed poisoning the tree.

Defense attorneys, who have suggested Cullen was lying to try to impress Blaco, called a number of witnesses Tuesday who testified that Cullen was not interested in the occult but was given to telling outrageous lies.

Cullen, 46, of Elroy, is accused of pouring liquid Velpar, a herbicide used to kill hardwood trees, around the live oak. He could face life in prison if convicted because he has a prior prison burglary conviction.

Local legend says Stephen F. Austin signed a treaty with Indians under the giant tree.

A state witness, Cindy Blaco, said Cullen told her he was trying to perform an occult ritual. After Ms. Blaco went to police, she on Sunday. The woman remained in Tarrant County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond on a kidnapping complaint.

An arrest warrant was issued for a man in connection with the case.

The 24-year-old Hofford told police she was trying to find a baby sitter at the motel when the manager recommended two people for the job. A man then told the mother that he had received an inheritance and wanted to set up a trust fund for the child.

Hofford, asked to sign papers to receive the money, instead placed her name on documents purporting to give the man permission to take her child, investigators said.

"When the mother went back to the baby sitters for the child, everybody was gone," Fort Worth police spokesman Doug Clarke said.

Hofford made a kidnapping report and detectives later fielded tips from Las Vegas, Nev. to New Mexico in their search for Gee, said Clarke. In April, a television program included the case as a scenario.

"We received 130 calls about the case after that," said Clarke.

Jury finds nothing improper in switch of comics in Dallas

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — In the trial that became known as "The Funny Papers Case," The Dallas Morning News and parent company A.H. Belo Corp. are going home smiling.

After four weeks of testimony and five days of deliberation, a Harris County jury on Tuesday found nothing improper in The Morning News' acquisition of 26 comics and features that had been published until last fall in the rival Dallas Times Herald.

The jury vote, after about 20 hours of discussion, was 10-2.

The Times Herald had sued its larger rival for $33 million, contending the features move — that included such popular items like Doonesbury, The Far Side, Dear Abby and Erma Bombeck — violated antitrust laws and was meant to help put The Times Herald out of business.

The Morning News and Belo contended the joint venture with Universal Press Syndicate Inc. of Kansas City, the distributor of the transferred features, was merely a business decision that would get the syndicate and Belo into the television programming business.

The venture, known as Universal Belo, will use syndicate comics characters in TV programs and commercials to encourage newspaper readership.

Witnesses for Belo and the syndicate testified that Universal Press required all its features in the Times Herald be moved to The Morning News as part of the joint venture deal.

"The most important thing now is for our two companies to go about making the best newspapers we can and benefit the communities we serve," Belo Chairman Robert Decherd said. "We feel strongly we've been vindicated."

"I'm disappointed," Times Herald Publisher John Buzzetta said before quickly leaving the courtroom with his attorneys.

"We'll keep on fighting," said Times Herald attorney Wayne Fisher. He said an appeal was likely.

The Times Herald released a statement Tuesday saying, "We disagree that the conduct of our competitor was legal or proper in any way. In fact, it was wrong in many ways — wrong morally, wrong ethically, wrong for the profession of journalism and wrong for Dallas and its people."

"They may complain," Belo lawyer Harry Reasoner said. "We have no concern."

"Every case I try is appealed," said State District Judge David West, who presided over the trial. "It won't hurt my feelings. If I'm wrong, I'll be glad to try it over."

Decherd said the litigation was pointless and time-consuming and that legal fees would be into the millions of dollars.

"We both should be devoting these substantial resources to our newspapers," he said. "I regret seeing these kind of resources expended on such a matter."

He also denied contentions that The Morning News intended to drive its smaller rival out of business.

"The Dallas market can support two vibrant, lively newspapers," he said. "I still believe that."

The Times Herald had asked for $33 million in actual damages and unspecified punitive damages. The $33 million, under Texas antitrust and conspiracy laws, would have been tripled had the Times Herald been successful in its lawsuit.

The verdict came less than two hours after the 12-member jury asked Judge West for guidance and said it had made no progress on even the first of a dozen questions it needed to consider.

Over objections of Times Herald attorneys, West responded to a question the jury posed last Thursday — its first full day of deliberations — about the definition of "willfully" in regards to attempts by Belo and The Morning News to achieve monopoly power in Dallas.

West sent to the jury the explanation proposed by Morning News attorneys, angering Times Herald lawyers.

"If the only purpose of conduct is to eliminate or cripple competition, it is exclusionary or restrictive," West's response said. "If conduct has a legitimate business purpose, it is not exclusionary or restrictive."

Jurors said the explanation broke a consistent 7-5 or 6-6 deadlock.

"The main problem was the definition," said jury foreman Karen Adamson. "We were pretty much split. That's all we needed and everything changed. I'm so amazed it happened so quickly."

Welfare funding options under review

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements acknowledges that Texas' social services agencies need more money, but he says legislative attention will have to wait until a public school finance plan is approved.

"The monetary needs of these agencies will be resolved as soon as possible," Clements said Tuesday. "However, the state's immediate priority must be education reform."

"Once this critical issue is settled, we will be free to work unfettered on these additional important matters."

The governor released his statement after Department of Human Services options for covering projected deficits in the state welfare system were summed up by one senator as an exercise in "dream land."

The Legislature has known since April 3 that the DHS faces a $32 million deficit for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, and at least an additional $178 million shortfall in state funds for 1991.

Including the possible loss of federal matching funds, the two-year budget deficit would reach $548 million, the DHS projected.

On Tuesday, however, DHS Commissioner Ron Lindsey said "if everything works" the $32 million could be pared to $4.5 million, which could avert cutting client services this summer.

Lindsey also presented to the Senate Finance and Health and Human Services committees options for raising $519 million.

But Dennis Jones, commissioner for the state Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, requested by letter an additional $43.8 million for 1990-91 to comply with federal court orders.

And state Health Commissioner Dr. Robert Bernstein said his agency needs $13 million to avoid cutting off funds for thousands of seriously ill Texas children who are too poor to afford private medical care.

Bernstein projected the deficit over two years at more than $40 million.

The DHS options for additional funds included a proposal for obtaining nearly $402 million in federal matching funds by using revenue from certain hospital districts and University of Texas teaching hospitals.

Hospitals now submit 1 percent of their revenues to obtain enhanced federal funds. The DHS proposal would increase that to 30 percent. Historical data show that "all qualifying hospitals would receive more money back than they would transfer," the DHS said.

But Lindsey said he could not promise the proposal would be risk-free.

"While these are innovative programs which we need to closely examine and implement, in my opinion, these do not solve ... funding problems of DHS," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, said, "This is real dream land."

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, was asked if the real solution was to "generate new state dollars."

"That's the way I see it," Brooks said.

On the House side, Speaker Gib Lewis said, "We don't see any rosy future ahead at all."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Has Bush decided to be a wimp again?

George Bush was once called a lapdog, so he has spent two years trying to project a macho image. Now his reply to the Soviet strangulation of Lithuania brings the old image back with a vengeance, and the lap he's sitting on is that of Soviet boss Mikhail Gorbachev.

No one expects Bush to send the 82nd Airborne Division to Vilnius. All Bush needs to do is recognize the free, democratic government of independent Lithuania and ask Gorbachev to remove the Red Army occupation troops. Even Gorbachev admits that the Red Army occupied the country illegally under the now-repudiated 1939 Soviet-Nazi Pact.

But amidst reports that he would take some action, Bush impotently announced, "I'm concerned that we not inadvertently do something that compels the Soviet Union to take action that would set back the whole case of freedom around the world." That is, to advance freedom we have to stay mum while Gorbachev represses freedom. The response to the whimpering? Gorbachev sent in more KGB troops to seal Lithuania's borders.

Tiny Estonia, itself still occupied by the Red Army, has acted more bravely than Bush. It sent a symbolic sword of defiance to Lithuania. And Latvia has declared its own independence, though perhaps not with as much certitude as Lithuania did.

Bush actually holds all the cards. A delegation of Soviet economists visited Washington and announced the Soviet economy was in fact weaker than even the CIA's dismal forecast. Industrial production nosedived "at a minimum" 5 to 6 percent in just the first quarter of 1990. Shortages of many consumer goods have been succeeded by an utter absence of those goods. The CIA estimates that the Soviet economy is in "an unstable state," and could fall into "chaos," with production crashing downward 20 percent.

So why the wimping? Bush seems to be listening to several commentators who have given such counsel. For example, The Los Angeles Times—hardly reflecting the views of Baltic Americans now living in America—said that "like it or not, too much of what the Western alliance wants to do in the name of long-term peace in Europe and the Pacific can be done in the foreseeable future only with Gorbachev's help."

But the Eastern European nations are already negotiating separate agreements with Gorbachev on the withdrawal of Red Army troops. And more to the point, "long-term peace in Europe" will be achieved not by bowing down before Gorbachev, but by prodding him in the right direction.

He needs to know that the market economy he wants to establish cannot operate when one of those markets, Lithuania, is enslaved. And he should be instructed that a splendid model of the "Soviet Confederation" he wants to build is the British Commonwealth, an economic organization of free, independent states.

Frank talk and actions by Bush now could well be the catalyst needed to bring reality inside the Kremlin walls.

Who's really in dire straits?

WASHINGTON — It always is an amazing experience — a constantly recurring experience — to discover how Congress spends our money. Lately the Senate has been considering the "Dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1990." Prepare to be amazed.

The thing is that "dire" is a $4.95 word. It has to do with events that carry "dreadful or terrible consequences." A dire situation is a "calamitous" situation, a desperately urgent situation, a situation so terrifying that its remedy admits of no delay.

Like what? Well, like an emergency appropriation of $500,000 from the Fund for Innovation in Education. The money would "facilitate training and technical assistance to the city's 5,400 newly elected school council members, a majority of whom are parents." (It is not clear from a report of the Senate Appropriations Committee why being a parent is relevant, but never mind.)

"The committee has recently become aware of the urgent need for school councils to receive training in fiscal and personnel management, leadership, group process and other skills." This is a dire emergency? How did it get to be dire?

The Senate Committee makes marvelous recommendations, and it makes them unanimously. Money will be shifted around so that a dire emergency involving the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial may be met at once. Oregon's Sen. Mark Hatfield explained that the latest design requires "a little more grass and a little less stone." To make these changes the designer desperately needs more money. Immediately. So it goes.

To be sure, the pending bill contains many millions of dollars in supplementary appropriations that appear defensible. The committee recommends an additional $112 million for relief of such disasters as Hurricane Hugo and the San Francisco earthquake.

Apparently there is no way of avoiding another $110 million to complete the 1990 census. It is hard to object to $420 million for Panama and $300 million for Nicaragua, for which the United States has a direct responsibility. A few other items are genuinely "dire."

But downtown at the U.S. Sentencing Commission, nothing is so visibly dire that it demands an immediate $700,000 in supplemental funds. The commission is marking time, waiting upon the nomination and confirmation of three new members. No disaster is in sight.

The committee recommends $100,000 "for the conduct of peace forums and charter development for the St. Regis Mohawk tribe of New York." This has nothing to do with regulating commerce among the Indian tribes. It has to do with soothing the ruffled feathers of tribal factions.

Here is an item for you: $1 million to fund "field studies on repetitive motion disorders in the meat-packing industry." These disorders are no laughing matter, but is the "further development of staff expertise" so urgently critical that it cannot wait upon the regular appropriation process?

What the devil is "income seduction"? It does not appear to be a typographical error. Under the bill an additional $500,000 would be provided for the National Commission on Children to study a wide spectrum of issues relating to children, "including care, social and support services, education, income seduction and tax policy." Dire? Who says this is dire?

In July of next year, a White House conference on library services will be held. To meet a dire emergency, the bill appropriates $425,000 for "pre-conference activities." This will fund regional meetings and governors' conferences. The $425,000 will bring to a total of $2 million available for such pre-conference activities. Eventually the conference will cost the taxpayers $5.4 million, and it will keep a whole flock of intellectuals off the streets for the next 18 months. A good thing, too.

How did Namibia get into the act? The bill earmarks $10 million "to support the newly established democracy." The same amount is authorized for Lithuania "when diplomatic relations are established." There is something here for Mozambique, something for Uganda, and all these millions of tax dollars must be spent now, this instant! Everything is urgent; everything is of catastrophic necessity. All is dire.

This taxpayer doesn't believe it for a moment. For the most part, the Dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act is a convenient vehicle for transporting expensive afterthoughts. Who's really in dire straits? Many an American taxpayer, that's who.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, May 9, the 129th day of 1990. There are 236 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 9, 1754, the first newspaper cartoon appeared in America. The illustration in Benjamin Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette depicted a divided snake, each part representing an American colony. The caption read: "Join or die."

On this date:

In 1913, the 17th amendment to the Constitution, providing for the election of senators by popular vote rather than selection by state legislatures, was ratified.

In 1926, Americans Richard Byrd and Floyd Bennett became the first men to make an airplane flight over the North Pole.

In 1936, Italy annexed Ethiopia as Benito Mussolini celebrated in Rome.

In 1961, in a speech to the National Association of Broadcasters, Federal Communications Commission Chairman Newton N. Minow condemned television programming as a "vast wasteland."

Our country deserves better

Maybe you can help me understand something. Our nation's commissioner of Internal Revenue — the No. 1 tax collector — says our income tax system is too complicated. He says our country deserves an easier system.

Fred Goldberg Jr. is a Yale-educated attorney, and yet he has to hire somebody to prepare his own tax return.

Since T. Coleman Andrews III, almost every subsequent IRS commissioner, once he's out of office, protests our cumbersome tax system.

It's ludicrous that you can call the Internal Revenue Service, ask a tax question and get a variety of different answers, depending upon who answers the phone.

Lawrence Gibbs, who headed the IRS in the 1980s, says, "complexity is pushing the system toward breakdown."

Now the critics of the system include the current commissioner. Yet despite all the annual breast-beating, nobody ever delivers the simplification that everybody advocates.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, head of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, ordered a study of ways to simplify the tax code. So far nothing.

The system appears out of anybody's control. Tax "overhaul" has been legislated eight times in 10 years. Each time the code ended up more complicated than before.

Taxpayers, their accountants, their attorneys and civil servants in the IRS cannot agree on what the thousands of pages of IRS regulations mean.

To echo Goldberg, "Our country deserves better."

Rep. William Archer of Texas helped write the current tax law, but he can't understand it. He admits he cannot figure out his own income tax.

In the current tax code even the word "compensation" has three different definitions.

The answer is so simple. A fixed, inflexible, inescapable tax of 14 percent on earnings of all Americans, period.

I mean no exemptions, no deductions, no shenanigans. You earn a thousand dollars or a million dollars, you send 14 percent of it to the government.

Again, at a flat tax rate of 14 percent our government would collect more revenue and could release the entire army of IRS bureaucrats for more productive jobs.

Then why don't we?

Bureaucracies thrive on complexity.

Government is a self-serving organism.

Bureaucracy cannot allow simplification.

Bureaucracy must maintain the current confusion to justify the current workload.

A uniform fixed tax rate for everybody would dislocate the legion of lawyers, accountants and government employees whose livelihood depends on making things difficult for you.

How about a Humanity Day instead?

By CHUCK STONE

For a teen-ager 50 years ago, the Earth Day we just celebrated could be rhapsodized in a tender moment of Nat King Cole ballad:

Spring will come and grass will grow, the brook will hum with melted snow,

If love is good to me.

Clouds will cry and rain will fall, Earth will sigh and drink it all,

If love is good to me.

In those days, Earth and humanity seemed blended into a joyously melodic synergism.

Today, grass struggles to grow through vapors of pesticides, brooks hum with disposable waste, clouds cry from smog, acid rain falls, and Earth sighs with a parched throat.

A few days ago, Earth Day 1990 reprised Earth Day 1970, a celebration of life that was of humans, by humans and for humans. For years, the organizers and the nurturers have been silent heroes in the struggle to cherish and enjoy the spectacular beauty that reigns over all of us.

Some were personal friends. Try to visualize a Senate-House joint committee meeting in 1965 that I attended.

On one side of the table, Wisconsin's Sen. Gaylord Nelson, a blue-eyed Norwegian-American, was arguing with quiet passion for an amendment to the anti-poverty program that would fund a corps of elderly citizens to save America's natural resources. Across the table, the urbane African-American from Harlem, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., wisecracked, asking what in the hell America's forests had to do with the poverty program.

Nelson got his amendment — through some good, old-fashioned horse-trading — and proved to be a prophet. He conceived Earth Day 1970, and he was an honorary co-chair of Earth Day 1990.

"I remember speaking about Earth Day in 1970 at a university," Nelson, a dear friend, told me over the phone. He chuckled. "And two students showed up." A prophet is not without honor, except in his own country.

Then there's California's Denis Hayes, who helped to organize the first Earth Day and was Earth Day 1990's CEO, and Amory and Hunter Lovins, founders of the Rocky Mountain Institute.

The Lovins are on the cutting edge of the movement to preserve Earth through the cost-saving use of solar energy (of which I am a strenuous advocate) and recycled materials. Imagine being able to save the Earth and money at the same time.

But Earth is not the real problem. Humans are. We can reduce air pollution from carbon monoxide, drain our streams of sewage, clean our rivers of disposable waste, prevent ocean dumping of life-threatening chemicals (a Greenpeace goal), outlaw toxic wastes in local dumps and utilize "environmentally friendly products" (paper instead of plastic) and it takes one — just one — dangerously reckless oil spill to neutralize Earth Day's salubrious goals.

Even so, Earth Day 1990 has succeeded in awakening a slumbering affection for Mother Nature. The young people's guru, Arsenio Hall, joined the cause and exhorted his fans, "Let's get busy!"

But the issue isn't just the Earth. We need a Humanity Day. Somewhere in America, there is that caring, inspirational spirit who understands the futility of an Earth Day if there is no simultaneous life-saving imperative.

What does Earth Day mean to America's homeless, unemployed, racially oppressed and elderly poor? To Beirut families living with daily gunfire? To Palestinians and Israelis in a mutually assured destruction? To starving Ethiopians, warring Belfast Protestants and Catholics, and persecuted students in China? To black South Africans waging a two-front war against white Gestapos and black assassins?

To them, "environmentally safe" means life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

They — and we — need a Humanity Day as much, if not more than an Earth Day. As we try to preserve this Earth, let's also try harder to take care of each other.

Lawmaker says key entries in diary links Bush with North's operations

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Excerpts from Oliver North's notebooks linking him to George Bush apparently never got to Capitol Hill, and investigations may be warranted, says the former chairman of the House Iran-Contra committee.

Portions of the diaries, released Tuesday, renew questions about whether then-Vice President Bush was more deeply involved in assisting the Nicaraguan Contra rebels than he has acknowledged.

One entry suggests North met with Bush a few hours after the National Security Council aide lied to the House intelligence committee on Aug. 6, 1986, by testifying that he wasn't supplying military aid to the Contras.

After meeting with the committee, North filed a complaint about Felix Rodriguez, a former CIA operative working in North's resupply network. Rodriguez is a longtime friend of Donald Gregg, then a national security adviser and now ambassador to South Korea.

The complaint about Rodriguez is followed by a notebook entry suggesting that North met with Gregg, according to the newly released excerpts. Gregg maintains he didn't find out about North's involvement in the network until Aug. 8, 1986, and that he didn't tell Bush about it until December 1986 after the Iran-Contra affair had become public.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., who led the House's Iran-Contra inquiry, said he didn't believe Congress had seen the North notebook entries referring to Aug. 6 meetings with Bush and Gregg.

"It clearly at the very least would raise questions which ought to have been put at the time to appropriate witnesses," Hamilton said. "I would have if I had seen them."

"If there is evidence relevant diaries were withheld, redacted (edited) or blacked out, then I would want" the House intelligence or judiciary committees to conduct an investigation, he said.

"I would expect the same of the independent counsel," he added, referring to the Iran-Contra prosecutor's office.

North turned over heavily censored portions of his notebooks in 1987 and the White House released many of those to Congress for its Iran-Contra probe. But full copies weren't provided to the government until North was forced to give them to prosecutors at his trial last year. He retains the original notebooks.

The 1,400 pages of newly released entries were obtained by a private research organization, the National Security Archive, as the result of a lawsuit filed against the government. Intelligence agencies still are reviewing the remaining 1,200 pages of North's diaries.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, "The vice president's role in the Iran-Contra affair was completely examined in the congressional inquiry and we have nothing to add."

In the newly released notebook entries, North details efforts to persuade Central American countries to support the Contras.

A "3rd Country Solicitation Plan" lists a planned Central American trip that Bush, in fact, did take to the inauguration of Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo.

The Reagan administration had an elaborate plan to induce third countries to support the Contras, according to evidence introduced at North's trial last year. Bush has denied being involved in any quid pro quo arrangements providing additional economic and military aid to Honduras in exchange for that country's support of the Contras.

Other jottings in North's notebooks: — Then-deputy national security adviser John Poindexter said "deception is required in whatever plan we develop for dealing w (with) Nicaragua," according to North's notebooks for Dec. 5, 1984. Poindexter's comment referred to the Contadora peace process involving Central American nations.

— There was "active surveillance on subject" near the National Theater in Washington D.C., according to a June 10, 1986, diary entry. Peter Kornbluh of the National Security Archive said the period marked a time of "paranoia" at the White House because of news stories suggesting North's involvement in a Contra resupply operation during the congressional military aid ban.

— President Reagan "does not have enough confidence in" Secretary of State George Shultz "to accept his input or to include him in operational advice," North records in a Nov. 17, 1986, meeting, days before the Iran-Contra affair became public. The meeting was with Alton Keel, deputy director of the National Security Council.

Pope calls for an ethical approach to 'imprisoning' foreign debt crisis

By MARY BETH SHERIDAN
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, speaking in the Third World's second-biggest debtor nation, called for a moral as well as an economic approach to the "imprisoning" foreign debt crisis.

"Technical measures are not enough to resolve the great problems that menace international equilibrium," the pope told a gathering of diplomats Tuesday night.

"I feel the obligation to underline ... the ethical dimension of this imprisoning crisis," which, the pontiff said, was hindering development in many poor nations of the world.

He said the foreign debt crisis endangered world stability and was causing "a deepening of underdevelopment" in some countries.

In February, Mexico and its commercial bank creditors signed a debt reduction agreement that has been praised by international monetary authorities.

But critics — including Mexico's Catholic Church — have charged that the accord will further hurt the country's poor, who lost more than 50 percent of their buying power during the 1982-1988 economic crisis.

Mexico owes $93 billion to foreign banks and governments. Among developing nations, only Brazil owes more.

The pontiff was due to address economic issues again today, the fourth day of his second trip to Mexico. He was to visit a prison and address business executives in the northern city of Durango.

John Paul met the diplomats after celebrating a Mass for young people near a shrine at San Juan de los Lagos, 250 miles northwest of Mexico City.

There, he encouraged Mexico's young people not to be disheartened by injustice and inequality and to use Christ as a defense against despair.

He said loss of hope in today's world was symbolized by "evasion, abandon, hedonism, discotheques, drugs, indifference, pessimism, the artificial paradises in which so many find refuge."

"Young people, don't lose hope! You are the pilgrims of hope," the pontiff cried.

More than 200,000 people packed the slopes of a hill outside San Juan for the Mass. Many waved flags in papal white and yellow or in green, the town's colors, and interrupted the pope frequently with cheers and chants. Priests wore white robes and yellow baseball caps to ward off the harsh sun.

The town was one of the centers of a guerrilla war waged in the 1920s by Catholic conservatives opposed to the government's tight religious restrictions, and memories of the conflict are still strong. A large banner on a building facing the altar read "Viva Cristo Rey" — Long Live Christ the King — the battle cry of the Cristero rebels.

In a morning address to teachers, the pope issued a veiled call for a lifting of constitutional prohibitions on religious schools, a prohibition that is ignored by many schools and even universities.

"Open the world of teaching to Christ!" the pope said in a speech at the airport in Aguascalientes, about 50 miles north of San Juan de los Lagos.

Church-state relations are now at their best in 50 years, and President Carlos Salinas de Gortari recently sent a personal representative to the pope. The move was seen as a step toward possible re-establishment of the diplomatic ties severed in 1926.

Soviet, U.S. students get together to make movie

By JANET GOODE
The Brazosport Facts

FREEPORT (AP) — Sixteen young Soviet film enthusiasts filed into the video production department of the Dow Chemical Co. speaking broken but friendly "hellos" to editors who would soon help them add the final touches to a video they recently filmed in America.

The students, ranging in age from 9 to 17, from Tbilisi, Georgia, spent two weeks in America recently as part of a Galveston area-Soviet youth media exchange program called Kids Make Movies.

Toward the end of their educational journey, which included a trip to NASA, the University of Houston-Clear Lake and Galveston, the students visited Dow to work with editors and video production specialists.

They will take the film back home to show friends, family and a local television station the American culture they absorbed.

Roy Schneider, a video production specialist who contracts with Dow, worked extensively throughout the day with the students.

"It was amazing to me to see that children are children no matter where they are from," Schneider said after the visit. "Their thoughts, their ambitions, what they did, what they talked about were the same as American children at the same age."

Schneider said the students seemed to be very ambitious in their endeavors.

"They didn't want to break for lunch because they were working — American kids are the opposite," he said.

Schneider said he let the Soviet students prepare the first few minutes of the film completely on their own.

"We let them make decisions and I would press the buttons," he said. "I would lead them a little ... because most children and people new to production want to use all the toys."

"I would try to lead them in the area of sometimes less is more," he said.

Schneider said the Soviet students belong to an after-school filmmaking class where they work with crude, simple materials in film, and most of them had never seen or worked with video tapes. "They were amazed at electronics and the speed of editing videos," he said.

The students caught on quickly, and during their two-week trip they created a five-minute program with a musical introduction, followed by interviews with workers from NASA and the Soviet students' reactions to the space center.

Natia Tsiskarishvili, 14, mostly became entranced by a graphics demonstration given on a Macintosh computer while the other students worked editing the film.

She watched her name spelled out and spun around on the terminal's screen.

Miss Tsiskarishvili, who speaks English, said she most enjoyed visiting NASA and the university and will tell her friends about her "very nice" host family.

Sergo Buglishvili, 15, also speaks English and is a student who recently produced and directed an award-winning film. The film, The Last Bell, is based on the death of a classmate during a political demonstration in Soviet Georgia. It was recently honored at the Odessa Film Festival as a top student film.

Buglishvili said he was very impressed with the seriousness of meetings by organizations in America.

"It is very official, these meetings with people who do such important and good things," he said.

He said all the students were amazed that they were able to be inside of the space center, talk to astronaut Story Musgrave, and shoot the movie.

"Our mission is to make joint films," he said. "It's very interesting to work together. The Georgian kids are learning from American kids and American kids are learning from Georgian kids how to work together."

Kim Crabbs, an American visual artist, founded Kids Make Movies in 1988 after she recognized a need for kids to have a vehicle to express their ideas.

"The last six years I have worked with kids giving them an opportunity to control images themselves," she said. "I am really into giving youngsters the chance to say what they think."

Aid project attempts to shore up shrinking lake

By SUSAN LINNIE
Associated Press Writer

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Seen from an airplane, the only major body of water in the heart of Africa could be mistaken for a mirage, a mirror shimmering in the desert.

Lake Chad, whose name in the Kanuri language means "great body of water," millions of years ago covered 132,000 square miles, or one-quarter of the African nation that now bears its name.

But although a subject of much speculation and curiosity on the part of European explorers, it failed to appear in detail on maps of the continent until the late 19th century.

Today, fears are growing that the changing world climate and rampant desertification will combine to dry up the lake, leaving behind only a memory of its outline in the Sahel region south of the great Sahara.

Several million fishermen and farmers in Chad and other countries depend for their livelihood on the lake that has shrunk to about 3,200 square miles.

Last year Chadians alone pulled 100,000 tons of perch and catfish from the lake for smoking and shipping to the rest of the country.

Natron, a mineral extracted from the lake for fertilizer, is sold in gunny sacks to merchants in N'Djamena's bustling market for shipment south to Chad's best agricultural land.

During the seventh summit of the 26-year-old Lake Chad Basin Commission in Yaounde, Cameroon, earlier this year, the presidents of Chad, Cameroon and Nigeria urged increased international aid to save the lake and the area that depends on it.

Experts at the meeting suggested, however, that the governments of the countries bordering the lake have themselves neglected its resources because of simmering disagreements over boundaries and a civil war. Jacques Lemoalle, a French government hydrobiologist, spent 1963 to 1977 studying Lake Chad and returned recently to check reports that the lake was fading away.

"Since 1967, the lake has been shrinking progressively. The most remarkable decline was at the end of the 1968-72 drought when high spots on the floor began sticking out, effectively dividing the lake in two," he said in an interview.

Lake Chad is fed from the south by the Chari River, which rises in the Central African Republic and is then joined by the Logone.

The Chari is gorged with water during the rainy season, usually July to October, but then recedes to a sluggish, meandering course that seems to take forever to reach the marshy, reed-filled lake.

"The whole basin is a relatively unstable system," Lemoalle said. "This is the third time the lake has been this small since the beginning of the century."

The African Development Bank is funding a five-year, $20 million program to pump new life into an earlier Lake Chad project.

A first group of experts in irrigation and vegetable farming arrived earlier this year to advise on more efficient ways of growing millet, sorghum and okra, staples of the region.

The Arab Bank for Economic Development in Africa and the Islamic Development Bank are providing $18 million to build polders, land for farming reclaimed from the lake through a series of dikes.

Reed says hostage Terry Anderson made Scrabble and Monopoly games

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Terry Anderson, the longest held of the 16 Western hostages, helped fellow prisoners make Scrabble and Monopoly games to amuse themselves, according to a newly freed captive.

His guards are giving him and other hostages plenty of diversions, according to an account given by former hostage Frank Reed to Anderson's sister, Peggy Say.

"They have a lot of things which was encouraging to me; at least they did at the time Frank was there," Mrs. Say said. These included boxes of books, writing materials and dominoes.

Although Anderson, 42, is in good physical condition from plenty of exercise, he is tired and needs dental care, Mrs. Say said.

She said the hostages are blindfolded and chained in line with their preference.

"Frank preferred a chain on his wrist," she said.

"Terry preferred a chain on his ankle so that his arms are free to write and play cards."

The closest she and Reed were able to calculate that he last saw Anderson was somewhere between a year and 18 months ago.

Reed spent 20 months with Anderson and Thomas Sutherland in Lebanon. For a period of time, the three American hostages were together with two others, John McCarthy and Brian Keenan.

Reed, the director of the private Lebanon International School, was freed April 30 after being held for 44 months. He is undergoing medical checkups at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland and met with Mrs. Say Monday night.

Anderson is the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press and is in his sixth year of captivity. Sutherland was a dean at the American University of Beirut. McCarthy is a British television journalist. Keenan, who is Irish, taught English at American University.

"He is still a vindictive hearts player," Mrs. Say said of her brother. Reed told her Anderson also reads voraciously, a book a day.

Reed said Anderson could pick up some things in Arabic from the radio and have at least some idea of what he thought was going on in the world.

But his guards have made a concerted effort to keep from him news of the deaths of his father and brother, both from cancer, within four months of each other in 1986.

Mrs. Say said she believes that he still does not know.

"That's very difficult," she said. "Part of you wants him to have known and dealt with it and part of you believes it might be too much for him if he found out in captivity."

But with his mind still sharp, he thinks of new birthdays painfully uncelebrated for the two daughters he cares for so deeply.

He is wracked with anguish at missing more than five years with them, unable to savor the passage of Gabrielle from child to woman. In Anderson's sixth year of captivity, Gabrielle turned 14 on April 26.

He has never held Sulome, who was born three months after he was kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut on March 16, 1985, by Islamic Jihad, a group loyal to Iran. She will be 5 on June 7.

Unlike Reed, who said he was brutally beaten by his kidnapers for trying to escape twice, Anderson was left alone. Mrs. Say said Reed told her Anderson was not beaten.

Reed told Mrs. Say that her brother was aware of her tireless campaign to free him and the other hostages.

Mrs. Say, 49, shuttles between Washington and her home in Kentucky. She has made several trips to the Middle East seeking his release. She has met with President Bush, Pope John Paul II, the archbishop of Canterbury and PLO leader Yasser Arafat. She fields phone calls all hours of the day and night.

Researcher supports bill against lab break-ins

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas Tech researcher whose lab was destroyed by animal rights activists says he favors legislation in Congress that would make it a federal crime to steal animals from farms or universities.

"We're back working at great cost," said Dr. John Orem, a physiologist whose study of infant sleep disorders was disrupted for nearly 10 months by vandalism and theft of research animals.

An underground group called the Animal Liberation Front took credit for the theft of five research cats and $70,000 in vandalism to Orem's lab last July 4.

A bill by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, would make breaking into facilities such as Orem's a federal crime punishable by up to three years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

"The entire biomedical research effort in the United States is under constant pressure from these groups," Stenholm said.

"Local law enforcement agencies were confronted with a terrorist act. The perpetrators were members of a national, if not international group. To counter these requires involvement of agencies that are national in scope," Orem said.

"The extremists you've got to fight. The only way you fight extremists is on their battleground," Stenholm said.

But a leader of the nation's largest animal rights organization said Stenholm's bill and others pending in Congress on the issue are "inflammatory."

Ingrid Newkirk, national director of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, urged lawmakers instead to create an adequate way to review allegations of animal abuse.

"What really is needed for everybody's sake is some oversight system," Ms. Newkirk said.

Though not included in his bill, Stenholm said he favors creation of a panel that would investigate such allegations and give protection to the whistleblowers who make them. He said he planned to discuss such a panel with officials from the Humane Society.

Another animal research bill, which may be debated with Stenholm's in a House Agriculture subcommittee next week, would give legal standing to persons who want to file lawsuits on behalf of animals covered by the Animal Welfare Act.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Charles Rife, D-N.C., would penalize the theft of research animals, except those taken "temporarily" for the purpose of documenting that violations of Federal regulations ... have occurred.

Stenholm said he thinks his bill has a better chance for passage.

"I doubt there's going to be a majority of members of the House who are going to give animals legal standing," he said.

But Newkirk said such standing would help create the faith that federal agencies enforcing animal welfare laws are doing their job.

Rose was campaigning in North Carolina and could not be reached for comment.

Stenholm said his bill also includes penalties for thefts from farms because large feedlot operations have become the target of some activists.

Stenholm acknowledged, though, that animals suffer pain on farms, during such activities as dehorning, castration or branding. But he said, "If I have to err, I'm going to err of a little less, quote, humane treatment, because I'm built that way."

Texas Legislature sets record for days in session

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators may not be setting speed records as they grapple to answer a court order to overhaul the public school finance system. But they sure have set a record for endurance.

According to the House Research Organization, Tuesday was the 266th day that the 71st Legislature has been in session. That's the most days lawmakers were in session during any two-year legislative cycle since enactment of the 1876 Texas Constitution.

The research group said lawmakers broke the 56-year-old record of 263 days, set by the 43rd Legislature during the 1933-34 biennium.

That mark was established under Gov. Miriam "Ma" Ferguson, and the lawmaking sessions largely were concerned with bills related to the Great Depression, said Tom Whatley of the research group.

"It was all things like relief bonds, changing state laws to conform to the NRA (National Recovery Act) and a few other concerns of the time — like kidnapping, Lindbergh Baby stuff, and prohibiting the sale of machine guns," Whatley said.

Because the present 140-day time limit on regular sessions wasn't in effect then, the 1933 regular legislative session lasted for a longer time. Those lawmakers also were called back to four special sessions, Whatley said.

The current Legislature met for all of its prescribed 140 days in the spring of 1989.

That assembly was followed by two special sessions in 1989 — June-July and November-December — on workers' compensation insurance reform.

Then last week, after he vetoed a sales tax increase for schools, Gov. Bill Clements called lawmakers into their third special session on public school finance, following two back-to-back gatherings that began Feb. 27.

The Legislature's current special session also tied a 60-year-old record when it convened last Wednesday.

This session matches the record for the total number of separate special sessions — five — which was set in 1929-30 under Gov. Dan Moody's administration. According to the Legislative Library, legislators then stewed over an "archaic prison system" and tussled with Oklahoma over a 28,000-acre strip of land along the edge of the Texas Panhandle.

To cure absenteeism among restless House members in 1929-30, a resolution was adopted authorizing Texas Rangers and county sheriffs to arrest any lawmakers reported absent without cause.

Despite their record-setting performance, things could be worse for today's lawmakers: The all-time record for days in session hasn't been reached yet.

According to House researchers, that mark belongs to the 12th Legislature, which met for 353 days in four sessions during 1870-71. But those were under the Reconstruction constitution, which allowed yearly and special sessions of unlimited duration.

Analysts say cash, not service, important question for Greyhound

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc. may have resumed most of its operations, but analysts question whether the company has enough cash to avoid bankruptcy as it tries to recover from a 9-week walkout by bus drivers.

Greyhound Chairman Fred G. Currey said the strike is "in effect concluded from the point of view of day-to-day operations." He said Greyhound is serving areas which brought in 98 percent of its revenue last year, and will be running at 90 percent of scheduled pre-strike miles by June 19.

Union officials challenged the assertion, pointing to the company's recent announcement of a $55.8 million first-quarter loss and continuing drain. The company said it would not make a $9.75 million interest payment due May 15; in addition, Greyhound did not pay about $5 million in lease payments due at the end of April.

Analysts also focused on Greyhound's liquidity, wondering if the Dallas-based company will be able to pay bills to operate, even if creditors don't call in their loans — a possibility because of the missed payments.

Greyhound, which had amassed a strike fund of more than $50 million, has said the frequently violent walkout has cost more than anticipated. In documents filed with the federal Securities and Exchange Commission last week, Greyhound said it had spent $20 million on beefed up security, legal fees and extra driver training.

"They've been crunching through cash," said one analyst, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "The question is how much cash do they have and can they operate based on that."

"I'm surprised at how much cash they're burning," said another analyst, who also declined to be identified. "Cash could become a real bind."

Both analysts said they believed it likely, although not certain, that the company would have to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors.

One analyst gave the company only a 20 percent chance of avoiding bankruptcy, a turnaround from a previous prediction of an 80 percent chance.

"The bankruptcy filing would solve the problem of getting a new source" of cash, said one of the analysts. "I don't think it comes from the bank group (creditors). I don't think it comes from Greyhound Dial. I don't think it comes from management."

"Those are all the players, so the question is where does it come from," the analyst said.

The current Greyhound was formed three years ago when Currey led an investor group's $270 million purchase of the bus operations of Phoenix-based Greyhound Corp., since renamed Greyhound Dial Corp. The former parent retains 24.8 percent ownership of the new company, although Currey controls Greyhound Dial's shares.

On Monday, Currey would not disclose Greyhound's cash resources, although he said money that would have been used to cover interest and lease costs is being used to help operate the company.

However, Currey said the creditors recognize Greyhound can be rebuilt and "we expect and we've received cooperation."

Currey said ridership increased last week to its highest levels since the strike began, although it remains between 65 percent and 75 percent of year-ago levels.

Revenue is running at about the same level, he said, and remains less than expenses, although it is nearly a break-even level.

In an interview, he suggested revenues would be 85 percent to 90 percent of year-ago levels by mid to late summer, and said the company could post a profit by next year.

Union officials said Currey's victory claim was a publicity stunt and suggested Greyhound was trying to scare drivers back to work.

"It's a common ploy to try to scare a few more strikers into scabbing by announcing that there's no hope," said AFL-CIO spokesman Rex Hardesty.

"Mr. Currey's claim that the Greyhound strike is over is like Napoleon claiming victory at Waterloo — it's both ridiculous and false," said Jim La Sala, international president of the Amalgamated Transit Union, the umbrella organization for the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions.

The company's latest contract offer had included the elimination of 4,500 union jobs, a change from per-mile wage rates to hourly wage rates, plus a four-year wage freeze. The union called the proposal, made Saturday, an "insult" and officials refused to present it to membership. No further talks were scheduled.

Currey did not rule out resumed negotiations with the union, noting it remains the licensed bargaining agent for the drivers. It was unclear what purpose any negotiations would serve, although Currey said the company would continue to need drivers as it expands.

The union, which represents 6,300 drivers and about 3,000 office and maintenance workers, walked off the job March 2.

During the sometimes violent strike in which buses have been hit by gunfire, Greyhound has been running with permanent replacements and employees who have crossed picket lines.

As of Monday, the company said 548 union drivers had crossed picket lines, it had hired 2,888 new drivers and had 501 others in school, giving the company 3,937 available drivers by May 16. The company has said before it could operate a full system at this time of year with about 3,200 drivers, although more are needed for the busy summer travel season.

"This is a new day in the life of the new Greyhound," Currey told reporters at a Monday news conference.

The "new Greyhound" includes a sharply reduced charter operation — from 197 cities to 19 cities — and a cut in unprofitable miles.

Greyhound had said before that it would not restore service to the 32 percent of its pre-strike miles that were unprofitable, but spokesman George Gravley noted that many of those miles had been driven by buses carrying overflow passengers from scheduled routes, so a cut in those miles does not mean a cut in service.

Company officials could not provide the number of destinations that will lose service, but Currey said, "Local carriers already have moved on to many of those routes, and Greyhound is trying to locate new carriers for the others."

High speed rail seen as 'ethical choice'

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — High speed rail industry experts say it won't be long before Texans, Californians and others will be zipping around in swift trains such as those now zooming through Europe and Japan.

"The American people are going to insist on them," federal Railroad Administrator Gil Carmichael said this week at the Seventh International Conference on High Speed Rail.

High speed rail planners from at least 10 nations are attending the four-day conference that features models and videotapes of the futuristic-looking trains.

The rapid trains are the "ethical" transportation mode of the future because they are safe, economically and environmentally sound and fuel efficient, Carmichael said.

In the 1920s and '30s some trains in the United States traveled at speeds of 100 mph and enjoyed immense popularity, he said.

Americans again will turn to railroads as ground transportation time between cities increases, Carmichael predicted.

"I don't think the American people are going to tolerate (increasing delays). They are wanting high speed trains," he said.

"Railroad technology is in a regeneration of its life and vitality."

High speed trains in some nations travel up to 160 mph.

The trains are in the planning stages in several states, including Texas, California, Florida and Ohio.

Discussions have been going on for several years on a proposed high speed rail line between Los Angeles and Las Vegas.

A $10 million allocation in the 1991 federal budget for magnetic levitation train research indicates the Bush Administration is serious about promoting high speed rail, Carmichael said.

The Texas High Speed Rail Authority, created by the state last year, is overseeing the franchising of a high speed rail line from Houston to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Competing for that franchise so far are the Morrison Knudsen Corp. and the Texas High Speed Rail Corp., both of which were represented at the high speed rail convention.

Ben Barnes, former Texas lieutenant governor and now a representative of Morrison Knudsen, announced new partners in the consortium his company manages in its bid for the Texas line.

GEC Alstom, the French manufacturer of the TGV, the world's fastest train, and its North American marketing representative, Bombardier, are expanding their involvement in the project, Barnes said.

In addition to supplying TGV equipment and technology, the firms are becoming partners in the venture.

Barnes also said Merrill Lynch of New York and Credit Lyonnais of Paris are giving financial advice.

Pike Powers of the Texas High Speed Rail Corp. said his company has been working on the Texas high speed project five years.

The company, which is developing the ICE, or Inter-City-Express train from Germany, welcomes competition from Morrison Knudsen, Powers said.

"We intend to compete hard and tough for this franchise," he said.

State officials said the franchise is expected to be awarded for the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth leg of the venture in the next nine months.

The system eventually could include Austin and San Antonio.

Traveling by the train, expected to start operating in the mid-1990s, is projected to cost about two-thirds of what air travel will cost, Barnes said.

Economist Ray Perryman, with the Center for the Advancement of Economic Analysis at Baylor University, said the trains make economic sense, although he added he wasn't sure at first how Texans would like them.

"I'll say straight out — I was a little bit skeptical when they first called me about it because I didn't know if Texans would ride trains," Perryman said.

NASA's two tragic crafts to be united for eternity

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The charred remnants of America's two worst space tragedies, the 1967 Apollo fire and the 1986 Challenger explosion, will soon be united in an abandoned missile silo miles from any plaque or memorial.

The Apollo capsule will be moved from NASA's Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va., where it has been in a shipping container for 23 years, and buried atop the remains of the shuttle.

No ceremony is scheduled when the capsule, its heat shield and 31 cartons of hardware and investigative material arrive on a flatbed truck around May 20. No marker is planned.

"It's not as if by putting this in the silo we have forgotten the contribution these guys have made to the program. There are memorials" elsewhere, said NASA spokesman Mark Hess. "We didn't think it was really appropriate that we do anything special or make some kind of a public event out of this."

People will remember, regardless of what happens to the spacecraft remains, Hess said. "They will remember that as long as there is a space program," he said.

The families of the Apollo astronauts had no objections to the plan, said John Lawrence, chief of congressional affairs for NASA's Office of Space Flight.

The agency never seriously considered putting the capsule or other material on display, he said. "Quite frankly, everybody found the notion repugnant," Lawrence said.

Derek Elliott, curator for the National Air and Space Museum, part of the Smithsonian Institution, said he is interested in acquiring the burned capsule, even though that seems unlikely at this point.

"We're not thinking in terms of display. Our job is to collect and preserve historic artifacts," Elliott said.

Astronauts Virgil "Gus" Grissom, Roger B. Chaffee and Edward H. White II died on Jan. 27, 1967, when fire engulfed the capsule during a countdown rehearsal for the first manned Apollo mission. The fire, in a cabin filled with 100 percent oxygen, was triggered by a spark when a broken or bruised wire beneath Grissom's couch contacted metal.

After the accident, the capsule and other remains were placed in a locked container at Langley and surrounded by a chainlink fence. Until about 10 years ago, the corrugated metal container was kept in a low-pressure nitrogen atmosphere to minimize corrosion. The container has since developed small leaks.

NASA said it decided to move the more than 17,600 pounds of material to the missile silo at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, next to Kennedy Space Center, to avoid the necessary maintenance and to free up space at Langley.

About half the silo, which is 90 feet deep and 12 feet in diameter, is filled with Challenger debris. Challenger remains also fill another missile silo a quarter-mile away, as well as an underground equipment room at each site.

The 215,000 pounds of material salvaged from the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion, which killed seven astronauts, was lowered by crane into the water-proofed steel cylinders in 1987. Each of the approximately 5,000 items was catalogued and their location noted for future retrieval.

NASA twice has gone into the silos to remove engine pieces for analysis.

A similar procedure will be followed with the Apollo remains. NASA wants the items accessible on "the off-chance that maybe there will be new investigative techniques developed or somebody claims it was sabotage," Lawrence said.

Movie, TV stars win Tony nominations for their stage work

NEW YORK (AP) — Movie stars Dustin Hoffman, Kathleen Turner, Maggie Smith and Tom Hulce won recognition for their work on stage in the 1990 Tony nominations for the best of Broadway.

Two lavish musicals, Grand Hotel and City of Angels, dominated the nominations announced this week.

Grand Hotel, a Tommy Tune musical set in 1920s Berlin, led the field in the musical category with 12 nominations. City of Angels, a 1940s Los Angeles detective musical, garnered 11.

Both shows were nominated for best musical along with Andrew Lloyd Webber's Aspects of Love and Meet Me in St. Louis, a stage version of the MGM musical.

The winners will be announced June 3 on CBS. They will be chosen by 661 theatrical professionals and journalists who vote by secret ballot.

The Piano Lesson by August Wilson, the winner of this year's Pulitzer Prize for drama, is the top contender for best play. It will face Prelude to a Kiss, a comic fantasy by Craig Lucas; Lettice & Lovage, by Peter Shaffer, and The Grapes of Wrath, an adaptation by Frank Galati of John Steinbeck's novel.

Smith was the favorite to win the best actress-play award for her performance as an eccentric British tour guide in Lettice & Lovage.

Her competition will be newcomer Mary-Louise Parker of Pre- lude to a Kiss; Geraldine James, who played Portia in a revival of Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice, and Turner, who is Maggie in a new production of Tennessee Williams' Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.

Hoffman, snubbed by Tony nominators six years ago for his role in a revival of Death of a Salesman, was nominated as best actor for his portrayal of Shylock in The Merchant of Venice.

His competition in what could be a hotly contested category: Charles S. Dutton, The Piano Lesson; Hulce, the eager young attorney in the courtroom drama A Few Good Men; and Robert Morse, for his portrait of Truman Capote in Tru.

Former Cagney & Lacey television actress Tyne Daly, who plays Mama Rose in Gypsy, is the favorite to win an award for best actress in a musical.

Her competition includes Georgia Brown, 3 Penny Opera; Beth Fowler, Sweeney Todd; and Liliane Montevecchi, Grand Hotel.

Best actor-musical nominations went to David Carroll, Miss Montevecchi's co-star in Grand Hotel; Bob Gunton, who played the title role in Sweeney Todd; and the stars of City of Angels, James Naughton and Gregg Edelman.

Gypsy and Sweeney Todd received best revival nominations, as did The Merchant of Venice and The Circle, by W. Somerset Maugham.

A menu for Mother's Day from 'New Basics' cookbook authors

NEW YORK (AP) — Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins, co-authors of "The New Basics Cookbook," remember how they treated their moms to breakfast on Mother's Day.

Rosso says her mother liked breakfast in bed. She recalls how she and her brother would make her Mom's favorite corn cakes — with lots of corn and very little batter.

"Dad would pitch in with homemade breakfast sausage," Rosso says. "We would also gather violets and lilys-of-the-valley from the backyard garden to decorate the breakfast tray."

Lukins' mother would come to breakfast at the table, which would be set with a big bowl of strawberries and a little vase of flowers. Breakfast was anything her mom wanted.

"As I recall," Lukins says, "I would also try to be particularly well-behaved for the day, and promise to do the dishes for a week."

Rosso and Lukins have developed the following recipes for Mother's Day. They suggest that, depending on the kids' ages, Dad should advise, supervise, cook it himself, or stay out of the kitchen!

Very Berry Salad
 1 pint blackberries
 1 pint raspberries
 1 pint blueberries
 3/4 cup fresh orange juice
 1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
 1 cup finely chopped fresh mint leaves

2 bunches watercress, rinsed, patted dry and trimmed
 Whole strawberries, for garnish
 1 and 1-3rd cups Lemon Chevre Dressing (recipe follows)

Pick over the berries gently; remove any bruised ones. Rinse and pat dry. Combine the berries in a medium-size bowl. Add the juices and mint; toss gently.

Arrange the berries in the center of six plates, and place the watercress on one side. Garnish with a few strawberries and spoon a generous dollop of Lemon Chevre Dressing on top of the berries. Makes 6 servings.

(Recipe from: "The New Basics Cookbook" by Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins, Workman Publishing)

Lemon Blueberry Bread
 Topping: 1/2 cup sugar, 1-3rd cup unbleached all-purpose flour, 4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) unsalted butter at room temperature, 1 teaspoon grated lemon zest, 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 3/4 cup sugar
 1/2 cup milk
 4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) unsalted butter, at room temperature
 1 egg
 2 cups unbleached all-purpose flour
 2 teaspoons baking powder
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 2 cups fresh blueberries
 1 tablespoon grated lemon zest
 Orange Butter (recipe follows)

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees F. Oil a 9-by-5-inch loaf pan.

Stir the topping ingredients together in a small bowl until smooth. Set aside.

In a medium-size bowl, stir the sugar, milk, butter and egg together until smooth. In another bowl, toss the flour with the baking powder and salt. Stir this mixture into the wet ingredients, and then fold in the blueberries and the lemon zest.

Transfer the batter to the prepared loaf pan; sprinkle with the topping. Bake until the topping is deep golden and has formed a thick crust, about 50 minutes. Cool in the pan for 5 minutes, then transfer the bread to a wire rack to continue cooling. Makes 1 loaf.

A dreamy dessert for Mother's Day

NEW YORK (AP) — On Mother's Day, treat Mom to a special dessert — Fruit Filled Chocolate Dreams.

This recipe, provided by Hershey's Cocoa, is easy to prepare. Dad and the kids can make the chocolate shells without any fuss. Fill each shell with Mom's favorite seasonal fruit. Top with dark chocolate sauce.

Fruit Filled Chocolate Dreams
 1/2 cup cold milk
 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
 One 1.4-ounce envelope whipped topping mix
 1 tablespoon cocoa
 Assorted fresh fruit
 Chocolate Sauce (recipe below)

In small, deep, narrow-bottom bowl blend milk, vanilla, topping mix and cocoa. Whip at high speed with electric mixer until topping peaks, about 2 minutes. Continue beating 2 minutes longer until topping is light and fluffy. Spoon mixture into five mounds onto an aluminum foil-covered cookie sheet. With spoon, shape into shells. Freeze. To serve, fill center of each frozen shell with fresh, cut-up fruit; drizzle with Chocolate Sauce. Serve immediately. Makes 5 servings.

Chocolate Sauce
 3/4 cup sugar
 1-3rd cup cocoa
 1 tablespoon cornstarch
 3/4 cup water
 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

In small saucepan combine sugar, cocoa and cornstarch; stir in water. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil; boil 1 minute. Remove from heat; add margarine and vanilla, stirring until smooth. Chill thoroughly. Makes about 1 cup sauce.

(Recipe from: Hershey's Cocoa)

Treat mom on Mother's Day with Fruit Filled Chocolate Dreams. The kids can make this simple recipe, with help from Dad.

Quick-mix bread

By NANCY BYAL
 Better Homes & Gardens
 Food Editor

This quick-mix bread needs nothing spread on it — rich flavor bakes right in. It's tasty with soup, great with salad, and terrific as an appetizer. You can bake the loaf ahead, then seal, label and freeze for up to 4 months. Loosen the wrap slightly and let stand at room temperature to thaw.

Parmesan-Walnut Bread
 3 cups all-purpose flour
 2-3rds cup sugar
 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
 4 teaspoons baking powder
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 beaten egg
 1 3/4 cups milk
 1-3rd cup walnut oil or cooking oil

1 cup chopped walnuts

In a large mixing bowl combine flour, sugar, cheese, baking powder and salt. In a small mixing bowl stir together egg, milk and oil; add to flour mixture, stirring just until combined. Stir in 3/4 cup of the nuts. Turn into a greased 9-by-9-by-3-inch loaf pan. Sprinkle the remaining nuts over the top.

Bake in a 350-degree F oven about 1 hour or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool in pan for 10 minutes. Remove loaf from pan; cool completely on a wire rack. Wrap and store overnight before slicing. Makes 1 loaf (18 servings).

Lemon Chevre Dressing
 4 ounces mild soft chevre
 1/2 cup heavy or whipping cream
 1/2 cup milk
 Grated zest of 2 lemons
 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
 1 teaspoon poppy seeds

Combine the cheese, cream and milk in a food processor; process until smooth. Transfer the mixture to a bowl and fold in the lemon zest, juice and poppy seeds. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 1 and 1-3rd cups.

(Recipe from: "The New Basics Cookbook" by Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins, Workman Publishing)

Watercress Scrambled Eggs
 4 large eggs
 1 tablespoon sour cream
 Salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste
 1/2 cup coarsely chopped watercress leaves
 2 teaspoons unsalted butter
 Sour cream, for garnish
 Watercress sprigs, for garnish

Lightly beat the eggs, sour cream, salt and pepper in a bowl. Stir in the chopped watercress.

Melt the butter in a non-stick skillet; swirl to coat the bottom of the pan. Add the egg mixture and cook over low heat, stirring constantly with a fork. Cook until the eggs are set and soft, 2 1/2 to 3 minutes; do not overcook. Garnish each portion with a dollop of sour cream and a sprig of watercress, and serve immediately. Makes 2 servings.

Orange Butter
 12 tablespoons (1 1/2 sticks) unsalted butter, at room temperature
 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
 1 tablespoon grated orange zest
 2 tablespoons orange-flavored liqueur
 2 tablespoons fresh orange juice
 1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
 1/4 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
 Pinch of salt

Combine the butter, confectioners' sugar and orange zest in a mixer bowl; beat until light. Then slowly beat in the liqueur, juice, vanilla, nutmeg and salt until smooth. Transfer to a crock; serve immediately. Makes 1 cup.

Note: Orange Butter can be stored, covered, in the refrigerator. Before serving, bring it to room temperature and beat again with a mixer to lighten.

The ratings for these choirs were: sixth grade boys choir, II; sixth grade girl's choir, I; treble choir, II; concert boys, I; concert girls, I.

The Concert Girl's Choir also received a I in sightreading and awards for Outstanding CC Sightreading Choir and Outstanding CC Girl's Choir.

Suzanne Wood is the 7th and 8th grade choir director. Jennifer Scoggin is director for the sixth grade choirs.

Woman dating cross-dresser asks if clothes make the man

DEAR ABBY: My problem is one I cannot discuss with anyone else because it's very personal and somewhat embarrassing.

I am a divorced, 45-year-old woman. I recently met a very charming, handsome, 48-year-old gentleman. I was attracted to him immediately. He is divorced, intelligent, masculine and well-educated.

On our first date, he told me that he was very much attracted to me, but he had something to tell me if we were to have a second date. Then he told me that he enjoys dressing in women's clothing occasionally! He insisted he is not gay or bisexual, but he has a "need" to cross-dress occasionally. (This includes makeup, high heels, a wig and women's clothing — which I assume includes women's underwear.)

He told me that his first marriage broke up because his wife couldn't deal with his need to cross-dress occasionally.

Abby, this man is totally masculine and I am very much turned on by him, but I don't want to become involved in a situation I can't handle.

What can you tell me about men who cross-dress? I can't believe they are 100 percent male. Are there any women who have dated (or married) such men who can give me some advice?

PEG IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR PEG: Your charming, intelligent, masculine friend is a transvestite. Contrary to popular belief, not all transvestites are gay or bisexual; they are biological males who have an emotional need to dress as women occasionally. Many transvestites marry and have children. In some instances, their wives are aware of their need to cross-dress and are very supportive.

However, some wives find this kind of behavior bizarre and disgusting and are unable (or unwilling) to accept it.

Your friend rates high marks for being honest with you on the first date. Whether you choose to become seriously involved with him will depend on your ability to be non-judgmental about his sexual needs.

If you cannot accept this kind of behavior, say goodbye and forget him. But if you choose to have a relationship with this man, I suggest that you contact women who are happily married to transvestites. (Their numbers would startle you.) There are groups of transvestites who get together with their families to socialize and exchange experiences. If you are interested in contacting such a group, write to: Sacramento Gender Association, P.O. Box 417701, Sacramento, Calif. 95841.

Please send a long, business-size, self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply, as it is a non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos "older" graduates: I was present when the then-ambassador to Japan, Mike Mansfield, delivered the commencement address for the University of Maryland's Asian Division in Tokyo. Ambassador Mansfield began his speech with, "To the graduate who is receiving his degree at age 61, young man, you have a bright future!"

Ambassador Mansfield was 83 years old at the time.
JEFF CHEEK, AOMORI, JAPAN

DEAR ABBY: I am also a twin, born on Dec. 22. If we didn't hear, "This is for your birthday and Christmas, too," we heard, "This is for both of you."

Sound familiar, twins?
JIM DENSMORE

DEAR JIM: Sounds familiar.

Luther wins on 'The Price Is Right' during honeymoon

Gary Luther and Sheila McClelland were married on a Saturday afternoon, April 21 and for their honeymoon they flew that night to Hollywood, Calif. By 5:30 p.m. on Monday, Gary was on "The Price Is Right" and winning!

Gary is the new assistant manager at Sherwin Williams. He has lived here about one month.

"The producer interviews everyone as they go into the studio," says the new Mrs. Luther. "I think Gary got on the show because we were newlyweds from Texas. They seem to like people from out-of-state."

The Luthers had made their ticket reservations for the televised game show months in advance. When they got to the studio at 8 a.m. on Monday, they learned that taping wasn't until 5:15 p.m. Those people who were going to earlier tapings had been at the studio since about 3 a.m.

From 8 a.m. until noon the Luthers had to fill out forms for processing and just wait. They were given a three-hour break until 3 p.m. so they went back to their hotel just a few blocks away, had lunch and toured a wax museum.

There were only 188 people who finally got into the show out of about 319 people and the Luthers had numbers 184 and 185.

They were seated in the audience close to a gentleman named Jasper who had been to the show 60 times and had never been called. He told the Luthers that their chance of getting on the show was very "slim."

But Luther got to "come on down" in the first four people called and the first item up for bid was a refrigerator, which he won. It is being shipped to his parents house in Midland for storage until the Luthers have a place for it.

Next Luther got to play the "check game." The item-up for bid was a small sport boat. Luther had to write out a check for an amount that combined with the price of the boat would fall between $5,000 and $6,000.

"Sheila told me to write the check for $2,600 and we won the boat and the money by $54," reveals Luther.

Luther's winning streak came to an end while playing the "Big Wheel." The person who gets the closest to $1 by spinning the wheel without going over, wins. Luther's competition got 95 cents on her first spin - Luther got 50 cents and went over $1 on his second spin. Luther didn't remember much about being on stage, he was too excited, but the program aired on Thursday, May 3, and he was pleased to relive those moments.

The Luthers also toured Disneyland and Universal Studios while in Hollywood, but getting on The Price Is Right, will make for a honeymoon neither will ever forget.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Even though you usually strive to be logical where judgments are concerned, your intuitive perceptions could be the ones on which you should rely today. Don't discount your hunches.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your best ideas today might be the ones that appear to be far out to your friends. However if you take time to explain them thoroughly, they'll appreciate their merits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An unexpected development may arise today where you're forced to take a calculated risk where your career is concerned. Go for it, but only if you're certain it's worth it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) One way to turn a new acquaintance into a friend is to entertain this person on a one-to-one basis today. Your new pal will appreciate the attention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A matter that is of substantial importance to you should not be left unresolved today. Focus your efforts and energies on bringing it to a satisfactory conclusion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you have to negotiate something of value today, make your best offer up front. However, do it without weakening or giving away what you have in reserve.

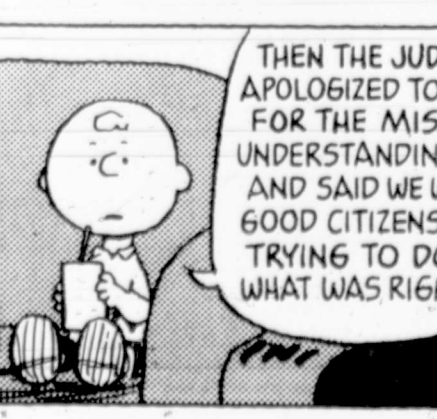

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The payment for any work or services you're offering today should be agreed upon before starting. Solidify the deal with a satisfactory advance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Strive to appraise people and situations objectively today. The more you are able to separate emotion from reason, the more accurate you'll be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Pay particular attention to details today, particularly in an arrangement you're anxious to wrap up. Small points you ignore now could become important later.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Events might not go exactly as you planned them today and some last minute adjustments may be required. However, your second script will be much better than your first one.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Associates might not be perceptive enough to appreciate your progressive idea today, especially those that have commercial applications. Trust your own judgment.

Pampa grabs share of 1-4A championship

Harvesters whip Dunbar to capture playoff berth

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

The scenarios that could make or break Pampa's baseball season were practically limitless as Tuesday's District 1-4A showdown with Lubbock Dunbar began.

A Pampa win coupled with a Lubbock Estacado win...losses by both Pampa and Estacado...Pampa wins, Estacado loses...ad infinitum.

Wary of all the red tape, the Harvesters went for the only sure thing — sweet victory.

Three years of trying to break into postseason play had left Pampa's seniors hungry for a playoff berth. Determined not to be left behind again this season, the Harvesters responded with a 9-4 win over Dunbar to clinch their first district championship since 1979.

They even made it look easy, at least for those who were late in joining the action. For the first 5-1/2 innings, however, Pampa struggled to gain a foothold against the hard-hitting Panthers.

Finally, trailing 4-2 in the bottom of the sixth, Pampa cut loose with a seven-run deluge to end Dunbar's season once and for all.

"Three years of hard work — it paid off," said senior first baseman Mike Cagle, who has started for the Harvesters since he was a sophomore. "We were out here practicing when it was snowing and when you didn't think you could swing a bat."

"But this is what it's all about."

The victory boosted Pampa's league record to 14-2, tied with Lubbock Estacado for the 1-4A crown. The Matadors defeated Hereford, 15-8, on Tuesday to keep the title knotted up and will face Pampa later this week in a one-game tiebreaker to determine playoff seeds.

But forget the scenarios. For one day at least, the Harvesters are basking in the glow of their first playoff berth in 11 years and the only 22-win season in Pampa High School history.

Just as they had done throughout the season, the Harvesters saved the best for last in Tuesday's game. They chipped away at Dunbar for the first three innings, collecting two runs in the third off hits by seniors Chris Roden, Brandon Knutson and James Bybee.

But Pampa was uncharacteristically quiet for the next two innings, while Dunbar's bats roared to life. Knutson, who went the distance on the mound for the Harvesters, gave up back-to-back homers to Panther catcher Lee Roy Danford and pitcher Sammy Flores as Dunbar claimed a 3-2 lead in the fourth. Designated hitter Patrick Lewis made it 4-2 in the fifth when he cracked a sacrifice fly to center.

The Dunbar rally lit a fire under the Harvesters. Knutson recovered his winning form in the top of the sixth, facing only four batters and forcing two strike outs and a ground out.

"That was not unusual for Brandon," said Pampa coach Rod Porter, whose team is ranked ninth in the state in the season's final high school baseball poll. "Once he gets his rhythm, he's tough. If they'd hit back-to-back homers on him last year, he's have been done. But he never lost his composure today."

Knutson credited his success with a top-knotch performance by his teammates.

"I was just hanging in there behind a great defense," said the senior lefthander, who struck out 11 batters in seven innings to boost his league-leading record to 10-1. "They can make any pitcher look good."

The Harvesters' saving grace came in the bottom of the sixth as 11 Pampa batters took their turns at the plate. Designated hitter Steve Sanders got things started with an infield single, and Brian Bullard reached base on an error. Barry Coffee loaded the bases with a walk to bring second baseman Breck Beckner to the plate.

At that point, coach Porter called timeout and had a chat with Beckner and the three baserunners. The pep talk must have worked, because when Beckner returned to the batters' box, he cracked a single to center field to knot the score at four apiece.

Beckner's clutch hit was the catalyst that sparked Pampa's comeback. For the first-year out senior, it was the season's crowning moment.

"This is something I'll always remember about my last home game," Beckner said. "I wasn't sure, but I was hoping it would be me (that got the Pampa rally started). Coach Porter talked to me and made me a lot less nervous."

The inning continued its upward spiral for the Harvesters. Roden pounded a double to drive in another run and Knutson followed with a single to right field. Senior center fielder James Bybee concluded the seven-run inning with a solo shot over the right field fence, his sixth this season.

"I was just trying to put a little icing on the cake," said Bybee, another three-year starter. "I thought it would be closer than this, but it means more for us to win it the way we did. This team deserves it."

Dunbar, which dropped to 12-4 in district, 15-8 overall, used three pitchers in the sixth frame. Starter Sammy Flores (3-4) pitched five strong innings, then became rattled after Beckner's hit knotted the score at 4. He gave way to Robert Reyes, who pitched to only two batters, and Lee Roy Danford finished up the final 2/3 inning.

The loss excluded the Panthers from the playoffs and left them third in the district standings.

"We'd been in this situation before and we've come from behind and won it before," Porter said. "All I did was remind the kids of that."

Patience pays off for Pampa

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

When Pampa coach Rod Porter took over the reins of the Harvester baseball team in 1987, he stepped into a program in disrepair.

That season Pampa finished fifth in the nine-team district, then promptly jumped two notches to third the following year.

And now, after three seasons of patiently rising through the ranks, the Harvesters finally got their reward — a 9-4 victory over Lubbock Dunbar on Tuesday and their first district championship since 1979.

The fact that Pampa will have to share the title with Lubbock Estacado was of little import during the post-game celebration, in which Porter was treated to an ice-cold bath from the team's water cooler.

"I've seen that on TV so many times and always imagined what it would be like, but it all happened so fast I can barely remember," said Porter, whose team finished the regular season tied for first place with Estacado, each with 14-2 records. The Matadors defeated Hereford, 15-8, on Tuesday to stay in the hunt.

Tuesday's win accomplished several of the Harvesters' goals in one fell swoop. It avenged last month's 14-0 loss to Dunbar, but more importantly, it ended the Panthers' season while lengthening Pampa's by at least two more games.

With the title knotted between Pampa and Estacado, the two teams will meet for a one-game tiebreaker to determine playoff seeds. The site and date for that game will be decided at today's District 1-4A meeting, although Porter said it most likely will be played Saturday at a neutral site.

Another of Pampa's goals, duly met, was a string of three back-to-back winning seasons, a feat accomplished only once before in the history of Harvester baseball. Furthermore, the Harvesters improved to 22-2 overall, the first time Pampa has won 22 games in a season.

Not the least of Pampa's accomplishments has been a three-week stint in the state's top 10. The Harvesters made their first appearance more than a month ago, weighing in at No. 8 with a 10-0 record. Last week, they were voted the No. 10 team, and they moved up to No. 9 in the season's final poll, released Tuesday.

For Porter, the culmination of three years of dedication is nothing short of monumental.

"It's a dream come true," the Pampa mentor said. "I'm thinking of the last three years, of days we worked out with snow on the ground. For me, it's a thrill to see all that hard work pay off."

Lady Harvesters bound for state

The Lady Harvesters' 400-meter relay team, made up of (from left) Shanna Molitor, Lisa Jeffery, Christa West and Nikki Ryan, will compete in the UIL state track meet Friday night at 7 p.m. at Memorial Stadium in Austin. It is the seventh consecutive season that the Pampa girls' sprint relay team has qualified for the state meet. Local fans are invited to attend a sendoff for the Lady Harvesters Thursday morning at 8 in front of the PHS fieldhouse. For a closer look at this year's qualifiers, see Thursday's edition of The Pampa News.

PHS soccer teams advance in tourney

AMARILLO — Pampa High School's boys and girls soccer teams advanced to the second round of the postseason tournament with a pair of victories in Tuesday's openers.

The Harvesters, who finished third in the regular-season standings, defeated Canyon 3-1, while the Lady Harvesters, fourth in the regular season, blanked Caprock 4-0.

Freshman Jamey Smiles scored the first goal of the game for the PHS boys midway through the first half. Canyon, however, fought back to knot the score at one.

"I felt like Canyon is the type of team that if we scored a couple of quick goals on them, they might get discouraged," said Pampa boys coach Mike Redwine. "Instead the came back and scored on us to tie it up."

Senior Shannon Cook put the Harvesters back on top when he converted a penalty kick to make it 2-1 at the half.

"Shannon wasn't in a position to score through most of the game, but I called on him for the penalty kick," Redwine said. "He played primarily at middle fullback, and I appreciate him being willing to play where I ask him to play."

Sophomore Brett Etheredge added an insurance goal for the Harvesters in the second half to wrap up the scoring.

"Brett scored a nice shot from over 20 yards out," said Redwine, whose team improved its record to 7-3-1.

Redwine cited center halfback Smiles and left fullback Jeff Lamb with outstanding performances in Pampa's victory.

"Both of them played the best game of their careers," he said. "We were really down after the Amarillo High game, but I was pleased with the way we bounced back. The kids weren't busy feeling sorry for themselves. Instead, they just went out and played a real nice game."

The Harvesters will now advance to the second round against Palo Duro next Monday at 8 p.m., to be played at Southwest Park in Amarillo. The Dons defeated Pampa, 5-1, in April, but forfeited last week's scheduled game at Harvester Field.

"It's nice for us to get to play Palo Duro again," Redwine said. "I don't see them as being as good as the team we played in April. Some of their players have been lost to grades, and the individual who scored four goals against us is no longer on the team."

"He was a good player, but they have so many good players that they can just reload. It's still a tall task."

The Dons (7-3) finished second in the regular-season standings and drew a bye in the first round of the tournament.

In the girls game, Rochelle Pritchard scored all four goals for the Lady Harvesters, who improved to 3-5-1 on the season.

"The game started out real slow," said Pampa girls coach Scott Flynn. "We just weren't clicking there at the first. Finally, 25 minutes into the game, we got our first goal."

Pritchard scored two goals in each half, and the Lady Harvesters turned in a sterling defensive performance throughout the contest.

"They only took one shot on goal the whole night," Flynn said. "Our goal never even touched the ball once. That was our first shutout of the season, and hopefully we'll be able to carry that over the Amarillo High game next Monday night."

"We were kind of expecting to play more on the defensive end since we were against the wind, but we ended up playing on the offensive end the whole time."

Flynn praised Emma Carbajal and Janet Craig for their defensive efforts Tuesday night.

"They played really well," he said. "They were our stars on defense."

With the win, the Lady Harvesters will now advance to the second round against Amarillo High, which finished the regular season in first place with a 7-0-1 record and drew a bye through the first round.

"They're the No. 1 seed in the tournament, so we've got our work cut out for us," Flynn said.

That game is scheduled for a 6 p.m. start Monday in Amarillo.

Suns one-up on Lakers in Western Conference series

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Phoenix Suns and Cotton Fitzsimmons no longer have a cloud over their heads at the Forum in Inglewood.

Fitzsimmons, in 16 years of coaching for Kansas City, Atlanta and San Antonio as well as Phoenix, was 0-for-37 when taking those teams on the road to play the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Suns also had a futility record, losing 21 consecutive games at the Forum since 1984.

But it all came to an end Tuesday night as the Suns held Los Angeles without a field goal in the final 31/2 minutes and beat the Lakers 104-102 for a 1-0 lead in their best-of-7 Western Conference playoff series.

The Phoenix Suns ended their coach's personal zero-for-career futility, going back to 1974, on the Lakers' home court with a 104-102 victory in Tuesday night's opening game of their playoff series.

"The streak has nothing to do with this building," Fitzsimmons said. "The streak has to do with the fact that the Lakers had good players and my players weren't so good."

In other playoff games, Portland took a 2-0 lead over San Antonio with a 122-112 victory and Detroit routed New York 112-77 in their Eastern Conference semifinal opener.

In tonight's only game, Philadelphia is at Chicago in a series the Bulls lead 1-0. Portland is at San Antonio, Phoenix at the Lakers and New York at Detroit on Thursday.

Unheralded center Mark West carried the Suns with 24 points, 16 rebounds and seven blocked shots in 47 minutes.

Orlando Woolridge's jumper gave the Lakers a 101-98 lead with 3:37 left, but they didn't score again until Magic Johnson made a free throw with four seconds remaining.

Since that left the Lakers trailing by two, Johnson intentionally missed the second free throw, but Kevin Johnson rebounded for Phoenix and time ran out.

Detroit, showing no ill effects from a one-week layoff, outscored New York 35-15 in the third period for an 84-53 lead.

The 77 points matched the Pistons' best playoff defensive effort and also was the lowest total ever for the Knicks in the postseason.

Isiah Thomas had 21 points for Detroit and Patrick Ewing scored 19 for the Knicks, but pulled down only four rebounds. Knicks guard Gerald Wilkins scored two points on 1-for-13 shooting.

New York, which beat Boston Sunday to become only the third team to win a best-of-5 NBA series after trailing 2-0, was beaten in every phase of the game by the defending champions, who hadn't played since sweeping Indiana in the first round.

"It was very obvious that we were blown out on the basketball floor and blown out emotionally," Knicks coach Stu Jackson said. "We didn't have the same energy as we

Astros edge Phillies in 10 innings

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston manager Art Howe spent last season trying to find a place for Eric Yelding in the Astros' lineup.

Now Howe can't keep Yelding off the field.

Yelding singled, stole second base and scored the winning run on Rafael Ramirez's 10th inning double Tuesday night, leading the Astros to a 3-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

"The toughest part of baseball is coming off the bench and producing," Yelding said. "Once I started getting in the lineup, I kind of got into a rhythm."

Yelding and Ramirez each have eight hits in their last 20 at-bats and Ramirez is resuming his penchant for extra-inning dramatics.

He had five game-winning hits in extra innings last season and his double over left fielder Randy Ready's head Tuesday night snapped Houston's three-game losing streak.

"If you ask me what pitch I hit, I can't tell you," Ramirez said. "I don't know if it was a strike. When I go up there, I just look for a pitch to hit. I just see the ball."

Yelding singled to right field off reliever Dickie Noles (0-1), making his first appearance of the season, with one out in the 10th inning.

Yelding raced home with the winning run when Ramirez drove a double over Randy Ready's head in left field.

"It was a good situation because I know Eric can run," Ramirez said.

Lenny Dykstra and Tom Herr hit singles off Houston starter Bill Gullickson to start the game and Dykstra scored on Von Hayes' sacrifice fly to left field.

Houston got a run in the fourth on Glenn Wilson's single and took a 2-1 lead in the fifth when Glenn Davis reached base on Charlie Hayes' throwing error and scored on a single by Ken Caminiti.

John Kruk reached base on Ramirez's throwing error in the sixth and scored the tying run on a single by Darren Daulton that forced the extra inning.

"There were a lot of weird things that happened but we just couldn't get the key base hit to break open the game," Phillies manager Nick Leyva said. "We had plenty of opportunities and we had the right matchups."

The Astros had a run taken away on appeal in the fourth inning when third base umpire Bruce Froemming ruled that Glenn Wilson left third base before Dykstra's catch in center field.

The Phillies were denied the go-ahead run in the 10th inning when Ready ran home but failed to tag home plate and was tagged out by catcher Craig Biggio.

"You saw just about everything tonight, it was a hard-fought game," Biggio said. "There was great defense and some good hitting. If you're a baseball fan, you liked this game."

The Phillies had the bases loaded with one out in the eighth when reliever Danny Darwin came on to strike out pinch hitters Carmelo Martinez and Rod Booker.

"When you've got the bases loaded and one out in the eighth, you've got to think you've got a good chance to put the ball in play and get a run in," Leyva said.

Ready said the outfielders were drawn in looking for a line drive they could throw to the plate.

"Personally, I feel I should have caught the ball," Ready said. "I did the best I could from the position I was in."

"We were all telling each other to come up," Ready said. "But the ball went over my head."

White Deer's Jill Brown goes for a gold medal Saturday at the UIL state track meet in Austin's Memorial Stadium. Brown, one of five area athletes who qualified for the Class 1A state meet this year, will compete in the 100 and 300 hurdles. The White Deer senior won both events at the regional and district meets.

Former team executives file suit against Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Four former team executives with the Dallas Cowboys have sued the team and owner Jerry Jones, alleging that they were victims of fraud and age discrimination.

Former employes Don Wilson, Ann Lloyd, Doug Todd and Peggie Bullock seek a total of $10 million in damages, reinstatement and lost wages.

The lawsuit claims the four were assured their jobs were safe and later were fired, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The four, who had a combined 105 years' experience with the team, were told by Jones and others that "their jobs were safe, that no changes were going to be made and that they should have no fear of being fired," according to the lawsuit filed last week in U.S. District Court.

But the team never intended to make good on those promises, the lawsuit charges, and that "constitutes deliberate fraud perpetrated with malicious intent."

Jones was unavailable for comment Tuesday. Jack Dixon, team treasurer, said Cowboys executives had not seen the lawsuit and could not comment on it.

have had in other games. It's going to take a great effort to win one game."

Detroit has now won 11 consecutive playoff games — two short of the NBA record — since losing two of three to Chicago to start last year's Eastern Conference finals. That 1-2 deficit came after another long Pistons lull.

Trail Blazers 122
Spurs 112

Portland protected its homecourt advantage over San Antonio with a 24-8 run at the start of the third quarter.

An 11-4 spurt to end the second quarter gave the Trail Blazers a 63-55 halftime lead. Then they took control of the game in the second half, opening an 87-63 lead with 4:25 left in the third period.

Terry Porter finished with 27 points, while Clyde Drexler had 22 for Portland, which outscored the Spurs 43-16 at the free-throw line. The Trail Blazers are now 5-0 in this year's playoffs.

Terry Cummings scored 33 points for San Antonio and David Robinson added 31. But 17 of Robinson's points came after Portland built a 20-point lead with 1:41 left in the third period.

KELTON — Hedley, downed Kelton, 14-7, Tuesday to clinch a tie for first place in the District 3-1A baseball standings.

Hedley and Lefors finished the regular season tied for first with 4-1 records. A play-off game between the two teams to tentatively scheduled for next week to decide the district championship.

Kelton was ahead until the fifth inning when Hedley rallied for the victory.

Brian Walden, Steve Bodine, Gene Kirkland and Randy Singleton were the top hitters for Kelton, which finishes at 0-4.

HIGGINS — Higgins slipped by Briscoe, 8-7, in a District 4-1A game Tuesday.

Higgins scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Shane Goad, Ben Meadows and Dallas Fillingim each had three hits in four trips to the plate to pace Briscoe hitters. Goad hit two homers and Meadows had one.

"It was a real good game," said Briscoe coach Jerry Brown. "We were hitting the ball pretty good."

Briscoe hosts Higgins at 4 p.m. next Tuesday. Briscoe is 0-1 in district play.
