Soviet Communists vote to accept private property

By DEBORAH G. SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — In its revolutionary new platform, the ruling Communist Party casts aside Marxist economic theory by accepting private property and backs a strong presidency that would further erode its 72-year grip on power.

The platform advocates a bill of rights to protect the individual against abuses of the state in a country where Stalinist authorities stripped millions of peasants of land and had political opponents murdered by the thousands.

The document, approved during a landmark meeting last week and published Monday, represents President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's boldest break with Communist orthodoxy and contradicts public statements he made just months ago.

The official Tass news agency said leaders called Monday for a special session of the Congress of People's Deputies in the "near future" to strengthen the office of presidency, which would solidify Gorbachev's hold on power.

The country's highest executive body, the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, "unanimously favored the establishment of democratic presidential power in our country," Tass reported.

It also said without elaboration that the presidium wanted the Congress — which was seated last spring in the country's first contested elections in seven decades — to consider the ownership of property and strengthening the Soviet government. Gorbachev had called for the Congress to convene in June.

The statement did not say whether the president should be directly elected by voters, but one of Gorbachev's key allies — Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze — said last week that a nationwide popular election might be possible.

In deciding on sweeping changes, the platform says the party took into account the new hunger of citizens for democracy and reform, as expressed by mass rallies and local political organizing all over the country.

The new platform abandons the Communists' ideological roots:

"The Communist Party of the Soviet Union believes the existence of individual property, including ownership of the means of production, does not contradict the modern stage in the country's economic development."

Marxist theory holds that factories and other means of producing goods must be owned by the state rather than individuals because private ownership inevitably results in one person exploiting the labor of another.

The platform says state-owned property should be turned over to worker control through leasing, contracts, joint-stock holdings and other methods.

Communists intend to create an economy "based on a diversity of property forms, competition between independent manufacturers, a developed financial system and on the powerful stimuli of personal and collective interest," the platform says.

At last week's meeting, the Communist Party's policy-making Central Committee voted to relinquish the party's guaranteed leading role and accept that it must compete with other parties for the right to govern.

The authority of the party, which Gorbachev heads as general secretary, is in steep decline as citizens angered at mismanagement and official corruption hold it responsible for the dismal state of the economy.

Communist central authority also faces increased challenges from secessionist movements throughout the restive union and at the polls, where Communists are expected to show poorly in local elections this spring.

Popular revolutions have in the past year thrown out Communist leaders in Moscow's former Eastern European satellites.

Central planning has left the Soviet Union unable to provide its people with adequate food, housing and consumer goods, and the platform says the system has been "characterized by monopoly, lack of initiative, waste, mismanagement and disregard for consumers interests."

It said the party is committed to protect "a citizen's personality and honor, the immunity of his home and property, the secrecy of correspondence."

The platform backs freedoms of conscience, religion, assembly, speech, the press and citizen "participation in running the affairs of society and the state."

Lefors council joins landfill coalition

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS — Lefors City Council joined forces Monday evening with a number of other counties and cities for "common sense" Environmental Protection Agency landfill regulations.

By a unanimous vote, the City Council members adopted a resolution which says that the new regulations of the EPA are "designed to eliminate small existing municipal landfills and encourage large regional state-of-the-art solid waste landfills."

Lefors city residents will be faced with an enormous expense for solid waste disposal unless some solution is found to the new regulations, Mayor Gene Gee said. Gee estimated the costs for each Lefors residence would go from less than $5 a month to $15 a month or more.

"Guys, we don't want to close that landfill before we have to," Gee said.

Councilman Ron Turpen said, "I think it'd be sort of foolish not to (join the coalition)."

The resolution states that in low population densities in West Texas and many of the other areas of the western United States, complying with the proposed EPA regulations is a "financial impossibility."

"In the arid portions of West Texas the extremely small amount of normal precipitation combined with existing soil conditions make the possibility of groundwater contamination from a landfill remote."

The resolution seeks variances in national standards in areas of low population density, upon a showing that the municipal landfill facility does not pose a significant threat to the environment or groundwater quality.

The Upton County Commissioners' Court initiated the effort to form a coalition of cities and counties in rural West Texas to protest against the EPA regulations for disposal of solid waste. The group adopted a resolution on Nov. 27, and the Rankin and McCamey City Councils also joined their efforts. The name of the coalition is Sparsely Populated Entities Coalition.

A spokeswoman in Upton County Judge Peggy Garner's office said this morning that 42 counties and 31 cities, not counting Lefors, have joined the coalition. The group plans to meet in Washington, D.C., later this month to discuss the issue with Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm and possibly EPA officials.

An attorney has been hired by the coalition to serve as a liaison between the coalition, legislators, the Texas Department of Health and the EPA.

According to Judge Garner, "The Texas Department of Health, our regulatory agency, is sympathetic to our cause and will support us in this action."

Garner also lists representatives of the Texas Association of Counties, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, the Rio Grand COG and Concho Valley COG as being in support of the coalition.

In other business, the council: • Approved by a 4-0 vote the requested annexation of property owned by Cleo Todd, south of the football field in Lefors. Councilman Ben White abstained from the vote.

• Announced Mayor Gee and Councilmen Ron Turpen and Danny Gilbert's places will be up for election on the May 5 ballot. Gee and Turpen said they both plan to seek re-election, with Gilbert remaining undecided.

• Unanimously gave approval for Rick Harris, Lefors city attorney, to present a proposed contract to the Gray County Commissioners' Court regarding compensation for a Lefors city marshal.

• Discussed, but took no action, on ways to cut expenditures in the city government or increase revenues from city services to raise money for the city coffers. The mayor requested the council members to bring "specifics" on the subject to next month's City Council meeting for discussion.

• Approved by a 4-0 vote the transfer of $7,200 from one account to the city's checking account for payment of bills. Councilman Derl Boyd abstained from the vote.

School district looking for new computer system

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Administrators and trustees for the Pampa school district mutually agreed Monday night the district has a "terminal" problem.

Lee Carter, district computer specialist, and Daniel Coward, high school principal, were two of the presenters during a discussion with board members at Carver Center on the administrative computer system, which they said is on the verge of lock-down because it is antiquated.

"You talk to the data processing people," Carter said, "and they will tell you they sometimes have to wait 10 minutes because of delays between screens. This is an absurd waiting time."

Coward said district employees have regularly had to work on weekends and nights to compensate for the delays, caused by overtaxing of the system.

Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent, said that after a year of administrators meeting regularly with board member Lonnie Richardson and numerous computer specialists, they had determined that to add memory to the current IBM system would be "throwing good money after bad."

Pointing out that the IBM system was designed for business functions and had been made to do student services functions out of necessity, Griffith said the system could not be made workable.

"This is one of the five hardest decisions I've had to make," Griffith said. "We are now at a crisis point."

"I talked with (Travis Elementary Principal) Jack Bailey about our problems," Carter told board members, "and said we would be talking about them tonight. He asked if this was going to be an all-night meeting."

Carter said the printing of computer information can take between 30 minutes and an hour and that "this particular software does not allow entry of data we know this software should accept."

He stated that IBM had spent a great deal of time with the PISD and also could not make it function properly.

Computer Task Force members recommended board members invest in a five-year lease-purchase plan for Hewlett-Packard hardware and Carter-Pertaine software at a cost of around $161,000.

Board members unanimously accepted the idea, pledging to spend $38,000 the first year for the package.

Now bids will have to be released on the package. However, Griffith and Carter said they will be written around general HP specifications with the stipulation that "comparable hardware and software would be acceptable."

However, officials said they have spent a great deal of time with IBM and that it does not have comparable software at the present time.

Griffith and Mark McVay, business manager, said the business department will stay on the IBM system because it is well-suited for that department.

Officials said bids should be in within a month and a new student services system should be ready to operate by the beginning of the 1990-91 school year.

In other business, trustees issued an election order for Saturday, May 5, for three board positions, currently held by Dr. Keith Teague, board President John Curry and Lonnie Richardson. Filing will open on Monday, Feb. 19.

Griffith said he has learned the PISD will lose $34,401 because of a recently disclosed state education fund shortfall.

"I'm surprised they can't handle $45 million (the projected shortage) in a $7 billion budget," Griffith said of the state education system. "Are there politics involved? I don't know."

Announcement of the shortfall came days after the announcement of a special Legislative session to discuss school funding, which was currently held to be illegal by the state Supreme Court.

Griffith said the Edgewood school district, the state's poorest, will lose $57,000 because of the shortfall, which, he noted, was "the opposite direction from the 9-0 Supreme Court decision."

He said he is confident state taxes will be raised to come up with at least $1 billion in new state money for education.

Bush drops alternative fuel goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under pressure from the auto and petroleum industries, the Bush administration is backing away from a proposal that would require millions of alternative fuel cars to be sold in cities most plagued by smog.

The phasing in of cars powered by fuels such as methanol or natural gas was a centerpiece of President Bush's clean air proposal last summer. The White House envisioned use of up to 1 million such vehicles annually by 1997 in an attempt to "reconcile the automobile to the environment."

But William Reilly, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, acknowledged Monday that the administration no longer considers mandatory production of alternative fuel cars as an essential part of clean air legislation.

Instead, the administration is proposing in negotiations with Senate leaders that "reformulated" gasoline, which also cuts pollution, would be welcomed as an alternative to the alternative fuel vehicles.

The Atlantic Richfield Co. is already starting to put reformulated gasoline into pumps in Southern California in an attempt to reduce smog-causing emissions. Unlike alternative fuel cars, vehicles using reformulated gasoline do not require any additional equipment or modifications.

"There is no change in the goals or the performance objectives that we want to achieve, but we have tried to indicate more flexibility about methods of getting there," Reilly told a group of reporters.

For example, he said, a city that has been unable to meet air quality requirements still would have to achieve certain annual reductions in smog-causing pollution. But that might be achieved by having all cars use reformulated gasoline, instead of having 30 percent of the cars powered on alternative fuels as was envisioned under the original proposal.

Reilly conceded the proposal requiring automakers to build a specific number of alternative fuel cars "has caused us considerable opposition" and kept some senators from supporting the administration's clean air proposal.

"We have been willing for some months to redraft some language on the alternative fuels to try to reassure people that ... we do not prefer one fuel over another," said Reilly.

But in a speech prepared for delivery to a trade conference in Scottsdale, Ariz., an EPA supporter of alternative fuels said they offer the only hope for severely polluted cities.

Insurance board revokes Pampa agent's license

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

The State Board of Insurance issued a list of disciplinary actions taken by Insurance Commissioner A. W. Pogue recently, including action against a Pampa man.

Leonard Glen Fleming, whose address is listed as 2530 Mary Ellen, Pampa, had his license revoked and an application for another license denied. According to the State Board of Insurance, the violations Fleming committed was "failure to remit premium and deceptive acts."

The order was issued Nov. 27 and became final during December. Final disciplinary actions are published each month under a policy announced by the Board on June 8, 1989.

Commissioner's orders are subject to appeal to the three-member State Board of Insurance and then to state district court.

According to the official order of the insurance commissioner, a public hearing concerning the Fleming case was held July 31 before O.A. Cassity III, a hearings officer, in Austin. Commissioner's staff was represented by Patrick W. Dwyer and Nigel E. Gant.

Fleming did not appear and was not represented at the hearing. United Assurance Life Insurance Co., Fort Worth, the insurer that was seeking Fleming to be licensed, was not present. Repeated attempts by The Pampa News to contact Fleming for comment have also failed.

The hearing was reconvened on Aug. 14, Aug. 15, Sept. 22 and Oct. 23.

According to the findings of fact in the case, Fleming was licensed as a Group I, Legal Reserve life insurance agent, and was appointed to represent National Farmers Union Property and Casualty Co. from Dec. 3, 1982, to Oct. 1, 1984, when the appointment was canceled by the State Board of Insurance.

The commissioner found that Fleming displayed large signs which stated "Farmers Union Insurance" at his place of business during the entire year of 1985 through May 1986.

And, according to the commissioner, on Nov. 12, 1985, Fleming purported to act as an appointed agent of National Farmers Union Property and Casualty Co. by soliciting an insurance application and collecting $200 from a White Deer man when he did not have a valid appointment to represent the company.

The hearings also found that Fleming forged the name of a properly appointed agent for the company, without the person's consent.

He also failed to remit the application and $200 to National Farmers Union Property and Casualty Co. or secure the coverage he represented he would obtain for the White Deer resident, according to the board's report.

Discussed, but took no action on, compensation for City Council members. The topic of compensating the council members came up recently and Harris got a prior attorney general's ruling on the issue which states it is legal to compensate City Council members. The Lefors group currently receives no pay for serving on the City Council, with the exception of the mayor, who receives $50 a month.

White expressed his opinion, saying he was opposed to any compensation for City Council members. "I've always felt it was a community service by serving on the council ... I just can't get ready for getting paid to come down here. As far as I'm concerned, I'm against it."

White did say he believed the mayor should receive more compensation than the current $50 a month salary.

Turpen said, "If we don't put some kind of compensation on it, we're not going to get anybody to run (for office)."

Councilman Wendell Akins said, "I've been doing this for 20 years and I haven't ever got paid and haven't gone broke yet."

Boyd said, "I can't see where it would hurt the city for the councilmen to get that $6 (the basic water rate paid on their bills)."

Learned from Gee that the city had placed 12th on a water grant application with the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission. The top seven were funded.

Talked to one candidate for the city marshal position.

Went into a 25-minute executive session to discuss personnel.

A special Lefors City Council meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. today to talk to three more applicants for the city marshal's job and to decide whether the mayor will attend a conference later this month in Washington, D.C., where the discussion will center on new landfill regulations and how they will affect sparsely populated entities.

Hearing held on men facing murder charge

PERRY, Okla. (AP) — A confessed accomplice says Robert Wesley Knighton ignored an elderly couple's pleas before shooting them during a robbery at their rural Noble County home.

Ruth Rene Williams testified Monday in a preliminary hearing for Knighton, 48, and Lawrence Lingle Brittain, 17. Both men are charged with first-degree murder in the Jan. 8 slayings of Richard and Virginia Denney in their rural Tonkawa home.

The three eventually were arrested in Canadian, Texas, as they looked for another house to burglarize and another vehicle to steal.

On Monday, Ms. Williams told the court she met Knighton and Brittain at a Kansas City, Mo., pre-release center where she was enrolled in a drug detoxification program.

She said the trio decided to flee to the Springfield, Mo., area to hide Brittain, who was to be transferred to another center.

But in Springfield, their plans changed when they ran low on money and needed another vehicle to replace a van Knighton allegedly stole in Kansas City, Williams testified.

She said Knighton killed two Clinton, Mo.-area men in order to steal money, beer and two handguns.

Fund started to assist former rodeo director with medical expenses

A fund for former Top O' Texas Rodeo Association director Bob Howard of Laketon has been established at National Bank of Commerce.

Howard has served on the rodeo board for 14 years and was instrumental in working on the barbecue and Kid Pony Show. He presently is in Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where he is receiving daily treatment at the Don and Sybil Harrington Center.

Anyone wishing to donate to the Bobby Howard Medical Fund may do so by contacting Jerry Foote or Marilyn Howell at NBC Bank.

"The Howards have no insurance to our knowledge," said Robert Morris, association president.

The fund is being started by the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association to help Howard with incurring medical expenses, Morris said.

Pampa police released this composite drawing of suspect sought in Monday night robbery.

Police hunt for suspect in robbery of Allsup's

Pampa police are searching for a black male about 5 feet 7 inches in height wanted in connection with a Monday night robbery of the Allsup's at 859 E. Frederic.

Sgt. Allen Smith said the suspect entered the store and displayed a weapon, which store officials noted was a handgun, and then left with an undisclosed amount of money.

The Coronado Inn was recently robbed by a black male of the same height who was wearing a hood, but police declined to speculate on a connection between the two cases.

Smith said the robbery occurred around 11:05 p.m.

Pampa police this morning released a composite drawing of the suspect based on interviews with store employees.

The suspect is described as being 5 feet 6 inches to 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighing approximately 185 pounds. He has black hair and brown eyes. Police said the suspect was wearing Levi type pants and a dark blue or black shirt at the time of the robbery. His age is estimated to be around 30 to 35 years.

In an unrelated case, detectives are investigating an assault with bodily harm reported Monday by Billie Matthews, 64, of Maybank.

Deputy Chief Ken Hall said Matthews was reportedly cleaning up a rent house he owned at 333 N. Christy.

Hall said a step-granddaughter of Matthews who had allegedly been living in the house without permission came in and assaulted him, breaking a tube that was inserted into his stomach.

Describing the incident as beginning with a verbal assault, Hall said it reportedly elevated into an attack on Matthews.

No arrests had been made in the case through press time.

Produce suppliers spreading the word on safety at convention

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fruit and vegetable suppliers and buyers say they're bouncing back from scares about an apple chemical and cyanide detected in Chilean grapes and are spreading the word that fresh produce is safe.

"Food has been certainly one of the safest areas that we've had, and I think it's going to continue to be," said Jim Halloran, spokesman for the Chilean Winter Fruit Association.

His organization's members are among more than 7,500 attending the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association's annual convention, which opened Monday. The food safety question seeped into almost every presentation.

Association spokesman John McClung said produce safety is the biggest issue at the group's 86th convention, but food safety has been a concern for many years.

"I am always amazed about the resiliency of the food safety issue in the public mind," said McClung, emphasizing that although specific food safety concerns wane, the overall question remains. "The next issue to come along always attracts attention."

McClung said fruit and vegetable growers are moving away from widespread use of chemicals and pesticides. "We just don't willy-nilly use chemicals anymore," he said.

Roger Blobaum, director of Americans for Safe Food, a project of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, said Monday in a telephone interview from Washington that he also believes the produce industry is using fewer chemicals and pesticides.

"There's a considerable amount of consumer interest and pressure to reduce pesticide residue," Blobaum said. "We're encouraged by a lot of things that we see."

Blobaum said his organization has worked with the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association and similar groups to promote food safety.

The produce association helped form the non-profit Center for Produce Quality to spread its message that fruits and vegetables are safe, McClung said.

The produce industry in the United States represents about $60 billion a year, including retail and several levels of wholesale sales, McClung said. About 30 percent of the produce is imported.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter told the produce association in a speech Monday that he was concerned that food safety laws may be affected by emotion rather than science.

Last winter, a widely publicized consumer report linked the chemical Alar to a long-term health threat. Alar is the trade name for a spray that keeps apples red and fresh longer.

On the heels of that controversy, traces of cyanide were found in two grapes from Chile. The Food and Drug Administration ordered Chilean fruit held at ports where it was entering the United States, and FDA officials urged stores to remove the fruit from their shelves.

No other tainted fruit was found, but millions of dollars worth of produce spoiled while being held for the federal inspections.

Produce industry officials say they'll recover from last year's setbacks.

Chilean fruit, including nectarines, peaches and plums in addition to grapes, undergoes the same type of inspections as domestically grown fruit, Halloran said.

"It's kept under rather rigid quality control from the time it's picked to the time it makes it to the supermarkets," he said. "They (Chilean growers) are very concerned, and they're not going to do anything ... to jeopardize the quality."

Grapes constitute about 70 percent of the fruit Chile exports, and virtually all of the fresh grapes sold in the United States during the winter months are from Chile.

Another glitch in 1989 came during the U.S. military invasion in Panama in December. Closing of the Panama Canal forced some ships to wait several days before getting through.

However, Halloran said while there was a slight delay in getting produce to market, fruit on the refrigerated ships went undamaged.

The convention ends Wednesday.

Las Cruces residents mourn for families of slaying victims

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — A widow whose husband and two daughters were shot to death in a bowling alley massacre mourns for her family and for her town, which was shattered by the execution-style killings.

Audrey Teran's anguished cry — "Why my little babies?" — is being heard throughout what was once a sleepy town 45 miles from the Mexican border.

"Our entire community is shocked by the events of Saturday," said Roman Catholic Bishop Ricardo Ramirez.

"I want to express our deepest and sincerest sympathy to the families of those murdered. The tragedy should move us all to a greater appreciation of life itself. Each day is precious and to be protected, especially the lives of our children and youth."

At University Hills Elementary School, where Mrs. Teran's slain 6-year-old daughter, Paula Holguin, had gone to school, principal Vince Rivera agonized over what to tell the youngsters.

"You're thrusting something at them that they really don't understand. They see it on TV ... and that's fantasy, but this is reality. How can they understand that?" he said.

Coronado Hospital to hold information fair on heart disease

An afternoon of information about America's number one killer has been set for Saturday at Coronado Hospital.

"A Fair of the Heart" will feature presentations by a cardiologist, two registered nurses and a nutrition expert about the causes and prevention of heart disease.

Dr. L. Kamnani; Jimmy Ivy, RN; Monette Blando, RN, MSN, and Betty Scarbrough will be featured speakers at the free information fair which begins at the hospital at 1:30 p.m.

Dr. Kamnani will address diagnostic testing for heart disease. Blando will present CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) training. Scarbrough will discuss the Eater's Choice program, which is a series of classes to teach people to control their cholesterol through diet. Ivy will speak on understanding heart attack.

Each person who attends will also receive a ticket for a free cholesterol screening at the hospital later in the month.

Because of limited space, anyone who wants to attend the seminar should call Coronado Hospital at 665-3721, Extension 123, to pre-register.

County Commission to meet on Thursday

Gray County Commissioners' Court will open bids for all removable items in three county buildings at its regular meeting set to begin at 9:30 a.m. Thursday in the Gray County Courtroom.

The three buildings are those located at the Russell-Francis location where the Commissioners' Court has chosen for the site of a new county jail.

Other items on the agenda include:

- A presentation on self-funded group medical insurance;
 - Discussion of a proposal to lease Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office space;
 - Discussion of the proposed jail;
 - Payment of salaries and bills;
 - Consideration of transfers recommended by the county auditor;
 - Consideration of budget transfers for overdrawn items.
- Receiving the treasurer's report.

employee Amy Houser, 13, at Immaculate Heart of Mary Cathedral.

Saturday's killings, along with an unrelated slaying the same day, brought the number of homicide victims in this city of 55,000 people to six this year — triple the number for all of last year.

Police say no killings during the past 20 years have been as brutal as the slayings of the Houser girl and Mrs. Teran's husband, Steven, 26, and her daughters, Paula 6, and Valerie, 2.

"It's not the city it was when I used to roam the streets," said police Capt. Fred Rubio.

Robbers confronted Teran at the Las Cruces Bowl on Saturday morning. The two gunmen made seven people lie down in the bowling alley's office, shot each in the back of the head, set a fire and fled with $5,000, police said.

Two adults and a 12-year-old girl survived and were listed in serious condition Monday at Memorial General Hospital.

"Lately, I've seen an increase in homicides," Dona Ana County Sheriff Cooney Sarracino said Monday, "but you don't see many execution-style murders, and this is execution style. I've seen where three or four people were killed, but not little kids."

Police said they have been inundated with hundreds of tips to aid the search for the gunmen, but no arrests had been made.

A black bow and ribbon has been placed on the entrance of a cosmetology school where the 24-year-old Mrs. Teran works. And the bowling alley marquee urged passersby to pray for the victims.

Teran, who had recently graduated from New Mexico State University with a degree in criminal justice, worked weeknights at the bowling alley and daytime shifts on weekends.

On Saturdays, he would take his daughter, Valerie, and stepdaughter, Paula, with him because the couple had trouble finding a baby sitter, Mrs. Teran said.

While she decried the senselessness of the killings, Mrs. Teran thanked the community for its support.

"I hope they can put it behind them," she said.

A funeral Mass for the Teran family members will be held Wednesday.

Jury clears chemical company of waste liability

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors in the longest civil trial in Harris County history cleared a chemical company of any liability in a lawsuit brought by homeowners contending the company dumped dangerous materials near their subdivision.

"I just don't believe this. I'm in shock," said Judy Romeo, a plaintiff in the case who abandoned her home of four years in the Southbend subdivision about five months ago. "I'm going to go home and have a good cry."

The unanimous verdict reached Monday for Monsanto Co. by jurors in State District Judge Alice O. Trevathan's courtroom granted nothing to 222 homeowners who were asking for $355 million in damages from Monsanto. The company is the chief user of the Brio Waste Site in southeast Houston near Friendswood.

The plaintiffs wanted $1.6 million each, which they said was equivalent to Monsanto's daily profit margin.

Jury foreman Alfred Morales said the plaintiffs didn't prove their case.

"It was a very, very difficult decision," Morales said. "I would have to say that there was lack of evidence, in my opinion, that we were looking at. The big thing is the evidence and the evidence was not there."

Juror Jim Stecker said the decision reached was an emotional one, but added, "I believe that it is safe to live out there."

Homeowner Herb Bateman disagreed. He said he moved his family from the Southbend subdivision in August because "we felt our lives and our children's lives were in danger."

Michael Waldeck, the lead attorney for the plaintiffs, said he would appeal.

The jury's verdict came after nearly a week of deliberations and four months of testimony.

The plaintiffs claimed the Brio waste site has been the cause of medical problems ranging from upset stomachs to headaches. Some residents testified they fear they will contract cancer in the future because they live so close to the waste site.

Monsanto denied responsibility for any injuries, saying it is one of many companies that has used the Brio site through the years.

Past and present residents of the Southbend subdivision sued Monsanto after learning much of the toxic waste in the dump came from the chemical company.

Testimony begins in sex-slaying trial

DECATUR (AP) — Ricky Green says his wife helped him sexually assault and kill a woman, whose nude body was found dumped in rural Wise County.

Jurors, in the second day of Sharon Green's trial, must decide whether Green's story is true, or whether his wife was battered and forced to participate in the crime.

Prosecutors say Mrs. Green was involved in the 1985 fatal stabbing and bludgeoning of Amarillo drifter Betty Jo Monroe, 26.

But defense attorney Charles Baldwin says Mrs. Green is a victim of the battered wife syndrome, and only helped her husband in the killing out of fear.

Those involved in the trial are under a gag order not to discuss it.

Mrs. Green told authorities she saw Green kill Ms. Monroe and another woman a month later in the couple's mobile home in Boyd, about 10 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

She said her husband forced her to stab at least one of the women and help him dispose of both bodies.

Attorneys breezed through opening statements Monday, then former Texas Ranger Phil Ryan testified about his efforts to identify Ms. Monroe's body. He said he called her "Mama Doe."

Ryan said he circulated an artist's drawing of the woman to police agencies and "even wrote 'Dear Abby,'" after reading in a syndicated newspaper column of a girl missing from Paradise, Texas.

He told jurors he withheld what he hoped would become a key piece of evidence. He said he had not widely advertised that one of the victim's breasts was mutilated, fearing drug dealers would take credit for the killing.

A spectator, Vernon Waggoner, said he lives about three miles from Boyd. The bodies of Monroe and Sandra Lorraine Bailey, 27, of Fort Worth, were found within a mile of Waggoner's home.

"It's kinda scary," said Waggoner, 67. "Now, I lock my door, bolt them, double-bar them and prop them. I also keep a pistol lying beside my bed. I didn't used to do that."

Ms. Monroe's body was found in a culvert in the Flatwood community of Wise County in October 1985. She had been stabbed 17 times and beaten with a hammer. Ms. Bailey also had been beaten and stabbed.

Bush holds firm on his proposal for European troop reductions

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is hailing "solid progress" on arms talks but standing firm on his troop cut proposal despite Mikhail S. Gorbachev's contention that it would leave the Soviet Union outmanned in Europe.

Bush, at a White House news conference Monday, predicted his summit in late June with the Soviet president "will be a major success."

He said Secretary of State James A. Baker III "made solid progress in pushing the U.S.-Soviet agenda forward" during his trip to Moscow last week.

But even as Bush applauded the Soviet Communist Party's moves "toward pluralism" and Gorbachev's "statesmanlike view" on German unity, he acknowledged he was unwilling to accept the Soviet leader's counterproposal on troop cuts in Europe.

And as Bush insisted a united Germany must be part of NATO, Gorbachev was quoted by an East German news agency as saying a united Germany within NATO was unacceptable.

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft said Monday night, "That's not exactly what" Secretary of State James A. Baker III "was told" during his visit to Moscow last week. "It was not really as positive as that," Scowcroft said after a state dinner for the president of the Congo.

Bush expressed misgivings about economic sanctions against South Africa, saying "some are counterproductive."

But he said, "I'm bound by law" to keep the sanctions in place until South Africa's white minority government takes further steps to eliminate its racist apartheid rule.

He called the freeing of Nelson Mandela "clearly a very positive sign" and expressed appreciation for South African President F.W. de Klerk and his "new brand of leadership."

On troop cuts in Europe, Bush said he was sticking with the proposal he made Jan. 31 that Soviet troops be cut to 195,000 and U.S. troops to 225,000. Gorbachev last week said the Soviet and U.S. troop levels should be the same.

But Bush said, "We've got a big ocean between us and Western Europe. ... I don't think we need to have exact linkage from this point on."

His argument is that in time of war, the Soviets could easily reinforce their troops in Central Europe from their own territory, while the United States would have to fly or ship troops in from this country.

But he said, "I wouldn't call it an impasse. This is the way it works when you're discussing these arms control things."

Bush said he hoped treaties on reducing long-range nuclear weapons and chemical weapons would be "substantially completed" by the June summit, and there would be progress as well toward signing a troop reduction agreement.

He said all three treaties might not be completed by June, however.

Gorbachev's troop counterproposal would mean the withdrawal of an additional 30,000 U.S. soldiers Bush wants to keep in Britain, Spain and Turkey.

But, said Bush, "Those (Soviet) troops are not wanted in Eastern Europe anymore. Our troops are wanted by the free world."

Bush suggested that even if a united Germany belongs in NATO—as West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has said—Western alliance forces may not be deployed inside what is now East Germany.

"There's some flexibility on deployment of NATO forces into Eastern Europe. Nobody wants to threaten the Soviet Union," he said.

Asked about links between Mandela's African National Congress and communist organizations, Bush said: "I think these communist parties for the most part are sliding downhill. What's coming uphill is democracy and freedom."

He said he differs with the ANC on its support for nationalizing South African industries. Socialism, he said, is "folding its hand and going over to the other side all across the world."

People in the crowd at Soweto's Orlando stadium hold a placard up Monday as they wait for the arrival of freed ANC leader Nelson Mandela.

Soweto prepares for Mandela's arrival

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Thousands of blacks celebrated today in Nelson Mandela's hometown, preparing a hero's welcome for the black leader's return after 27 years in prison.

The white opposition Conservative Party, meanwhile, filed treason charges with police against Mandela and fellow black leaders Walter Sisulu and Zeph Mothopeng. The pro-apartheid party claimed Mandela's remarks since being freed were clearly a call to overthrow the government and violated the treason law.

Citizens can file private charges that police investigate to determine if any action should be taken. It is unlikely the governing National Party would allow any official action.

Mandela, celebrating his first full day of freedom Monday, said he seeks a South Africa that is fair to both whites and blacks and added that talks with the government could be held soon.

But he defended the policies of his African National Congress and insisted that violence against apartheid is justified.

The massive welcome-home rally planned for today in Soweto, a black township of 2.5 million outside Johannesburg, could be South Africa's largest ever.

The activists making arrangements for Mandela delayed his return after dozens of people were injured Monday in a crush of tens of thousands of Sowetans at the Soccer City stadium. Thousands of students marched and danced in the streets Monday and the celebrations continued all night long.

Mandela flew from Cape Town to Johannesburg on Monday and spent the night in an undisclosed location.

Black activists appealed to blacks to welcome Mandela in a dignified, non-violent manner.

Mandela said negotiations between the ANC and the government could begin "very soon" if President F.W. de Klerk continues his peace initiative and makes further reforms.

"The state of emergency has to be lifted in its entirety and political prisoners have to be released," Mandela told more than 200 journalists assembled Monday in Cape Town.

At a news conference in Washington on Monday, President Bush expressed optimism that Mandela's release was a sign the Pretoria government was "at last" on the way to ending apartheid. But he showed no inclination to move quickly to lift U.S. economic sanctions.

He noted that he had invited both Mandela and de Klerk to the White House and wanted to discuss sanction provisions with them.

Andries Treurnicht, leader of the Conservative Party, accused the de Klerk government of falling victim to "Mandela hysteria" and moving toward white surrender. Eugene TerreBlanche, leader of the neo-Nazi Afrikaner Resistance Movement, said de Klerk is now powerless to control Mandela and warned that his movement "will protect itself and its property when the government can no longer do so."

Mandela said whites should not fear the prospect of an ANC-led government.

"Whites are fellow South Africans. We want them to feel safe," he said at his news conference. "The ANC ... will find a solution that will suit both blacks and whites."

The ANC seeks a one-person, one-vote system, which would be dominated by South Africa's 28 million blacks. De Klerk seeks to negotiate a new constitution that would establish some political rights for blacks, but provide the 5 million whites with some sort of veto over major decisions.

The New York Post today reported that Donald locked Ivana out of her office Monday at the Plaza Hotel.

nedly, said, "We do not consider the so-called prenuptial agreement to be serious. It will have no relevance to a court because it is unconscionable and fraudulent."

In response, Donald's spokesman said: "The prenuptial agreement signed by Donald and Ivana Trump is a long and detailed document which covers all aspects and is 100 percent enforceable in courts of law."

Ivana ups the ante: Prenuptial agreement not enough

NEW YORK (AP) — He built a billion-dollar empire of hotels and real estate, owns a casino and an airline that bear his name, and wrote a best seller called The Art of the Deal.

But the art of making a marriage work appears to have eluded Donald Trump. He and his wife, Ivana, have split after nearly 13 years of marriage — proving once again that money can't buy you love.

In fact, money is a source of contention between the two, despite a prenuptial agreement under which she was to get custody of their three children, the Greenwich, Conn., mansion, and $25 million.

Trump, 43, is worth considerably more — $1.7 billion to $4 billion, depending on who's counting. Ivana's lawyer, Michael Ken-

Carolyn Erickson poses in a Nacogdoches cemetery where she is searching for genealogical clues.

Genealogist part bloodhound, part detective, woman claims

By SUSAN HAGEMAN
Nacogdoches Daily Sentinel

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — "You've got to be part bloodhound and part detective," said Carolyn Erickson, author and researcher of family trees.

"If you like reading mystery books, you'd like doing genealogical research," she says, calling it "the most fascinating work I've ever done."

Author of 35 books and the 21-year-old "Kissin' Kuzzins" newspaper column, Mrs. Erickson has put her magnifying glass to gravestones and county records for 30 years searching for clues to Nacogdoches County's past.

Encouraged by her parents' involvement in growing the family tree, and determined to complete a decade's work of a friend who died, Mrs. Erickson began research when her son went to kindergarten and left her mornings open for the library.

Often accompanied by her husband and parents, Mrs. Erickson also began the tedious task of cataloging cemeteries, "which means you walk up and down the row and take down the entire inscription off each tombstone," she said.

"One in Garrison is as high as your head and just covered with information — when and who she married, when her parents came to Texas. Her husband must've put it up," said Mrs. Erickson, "and he moved to central Texas and doesn't have a headstone at his grave at all."

"So here's Mama with all this information and poor old Papa with none at all."

The foursome's dogged persistence leads them to "burn up" in the summer and "freeze" in the winter "until our pens freeze," said Mrs. Erickson.

"We've been covered with fire ants and seed ticks and been down more pig tracks and logging trails than I ever thought existed."

But the personality of the headstones and the value of their silent history draws them back.

"Some are so sad," said Mrs. Erickson. "When you come to a grave with a mother and baby buried together you think about that heartbroken husband."

Mrs. Erickson has a 30-drawer file of 3x5 cards with headstone information she is putting on computer. At 6800 entries, she is "up to Haltom, so it's a long way to Z."

Histories of the Nacogdoches Fire Department and First Methodist Church are among her books, as well as a two-volume biographical directory. "I have always been fascinated by Texas history, and Nacogdoches is such a historical spot closely involved in Texas history," she said.

Preserving information before it dies with grandparents or lost records is a central goal of Mrs. Erickson's work.

She recommends people simply take a tape recorder to older relatives and ask them to tell about their families.

Then save the tape until time and interest allow for dealing with the history.

Unpuzzling Your Past and The Handy Book are helpful for those interested in genealogical research, she said.

She says it is the fastest-growing hobby in the United States.

She says people would benefit from making their own family records to pass on to their children.

"One of the main ways family tradition and heritage was passed down was through children sitting on Mama's knee. Now Mama's out working and a lot of family history is going to be lost."

"And one thing our younger generation misses, I think, is roots — a sense of family and belonging."

Officials question ethics of welfare experiment

DALLAS (AP) — Officials are questioning the ethics of a federal experiment that denies aid to some indigent people in Texas and four other states to determine how well they live without it.

Extra Medicaid and child-care benefits now go to about 8,000 people in five regions of Texas, while about 800 people — selected at random by birth date — are excluded.

On April 1, those extra benefits will be available to more than 50,000 people statewide — but not to the 800 unlucky Texans who face two more years without the help, The Dallas Morning News reported.

The study aims to see how well the new expanded programs wean people off the welfare rolls. Though federal officials say this kind of experiment — denying benefits to small, so-called control groups — is vital to determine whether new programs work, critics disagree.

"People ought not to be treated like things, even if what you get is good information," said Philip Broyle, associate director for medical ethics of the Hastings Center, a New York-based think tank concerned with the ethics of experiments on people.

'People ought not to be treated like things, even if what you get is good information.'

Broyle said the study violates the kinds of federal standards medical experiments must meet. Those standards include informed consent — that anyone in an experiment must be aware of it and of all its consequences. And they must have the option to refuse participation.

Neither informed consent nor the right of refusal was offered to participants in the welfare study, officials said.

The Texas pilot program targets welfare recipients who find jobs or job training. Traditionally, such recipients have received four months of free medical care, plus some child care, after they leave the welfare rolls. The experimental program extended the benefits to one year of Medicaid coverage and subsidized child care — to all but the 800.

The theory is that the extended benefits will encourage people to take and stay with entry-level jobs that are unlikely to offer medical insurance or child care immediately. And the tax money saved by getting those people off welfare will more than balance the cost of the new program.

Similar experiments are being conducted in Ohio, Washington state, New York and Wisconsin, federal officials said last week.

Federal officials always have been aware of the ethical question involved in the experiment.

"That issue was recognized and considered in the review of the Texas proposal," said Sidney Trieger, director of the federal division of health systems and special studies of the Health Care Financing Administration. He is in charge of evaluating the experimental results.

"It was worth proceeding," he said.

Texas officials agreed to participate in the experiment a year ago. They got federal money for pilot programs in five urban areas but were required to exclude about 10 percent of those eligible — the control group — to see if they stay off welfare without the extra benefits.

State officials said last week that they would try to break their contract with the federal government and provide the benefits to the 800.

"We're planning to argue with them," said Claudia Langguth, deputy commissioner for the client self-support division of the Texas Department of Human Services.

In the next several years, thousands of people across the country are to be denied access to new job-training programs so federal officials can evaluate them, the newspaper said.

Federal officials say the reason is not to cause suffering but to prevent it.

Using controls 'is the only way we can do experiments that give meaningful results.'

The alternative could be bad programs that waste tax money and unreasonably raise hopes, said Peter Germanis, staff director for the federal Low Income Opportunity Board. Using controls "is the only way we can do experiments that give meaningful results."

In 1988, Congress decreed that people receiving benefits from Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Medicaid and who get a job or job training would be eligible for the extended benefits beginning April 1, 1990.

Texas officials decided they wanted to try offering the new benefits a year early on a small scale.

The Low Income Opportunity Board, a White House agency that coordinates state applications for new welfare projects, had a guideline that any such program be proven "revenue neutral." That means that, in the long run, it must get enough people off welfare to cover costs and that a scientifically rigorous experiment must measure the program's effect.

Chinese ship captain realizes dream of seeing the world

By PHIL RICHMOND
The Brazosport Facts

FREEPORT (AP) — As a small boy growing up in Shanghai on the coast of mainland China, Capt. Mao Junhua stared off into the sea and dreamed of the day he would sail the ocean blue.

"When I was a little child I always loved the ocean," Junhua said through his interpreter, Joe Huang, a Dow Chemical Co. employee born in the Republic of Taiwan. "I went to marine school and spent my life on a ship."

When he grew older and realized that dream, he set his sights on another dream to captain an American vessel. Now 61 years old, Junhua has done what many only hope to do. He has realized two of his greatest dreams.

"This is a long history. When I was a young student I liked Americans very much," he said, adding that American missionaries befriended him in China. "I feel lucky to work for Americans."

About two weeks ago Junhua took over as captain of the Antio, an American-owned and Panamanian-flagged vessel.

He said he has talked to the owner of the vessel, who he "liked very very much" and was told he may be transferred to an oil tanker soon.

Though in China workers can retire at age 60, they may opt to work until they are 65. About 18 months ago, Junhua tried retirement himself — for four days.

"I will continue doing it as long as needed," he said. "I may stay one or two more years. I feel very lucky."

On Saturday Junhua, a polite man whose smile is his most striking feature, and his all-Chinese crew set sail for Callao, Peru, with 15,000 tons of white rice on board.

The journey will take them down the Gulf Coast, through the Panama Canal and down the western coast of South America to Peru.

Mark Tenalio of Biehl and Co., the ship's agent, said this is only the second time a ship has sailed from Freeport to Peru. He said it's the first time a Chinese crew has docked in Freeport.

"They are the most mannered people we've had here," he said of the 24-man crew.

During his 40 years at sea, 24 of which were spent as a captain, Junhua has visited points throughout the world. The list of ports he has captained his ships to reads like the index of an atlas.

But asked what his favorite ports are, Junhua keeps throwing out American cities. His favorite port is Portland, Ore., he said, adding that it's a very beautiful city. But Long Beach, Calif., New York City and Palm Beach, Calif., also made the list.

This was Junhua's first visit to the Port of Freeport in Texas, and with the help of Huang and Paul Chiang, an Intermedics employee from Taiwan who also acted as an interpreter, he was able to tour the city.

"I liked it," he said of his visit. Asked to compare American cities to his home in Shanghai, Junhua smiled and said he is impressed with America.

"It's different," he said. "New York is a real modern city. Shanghai is kind of behind."

Life on the high seas has placed its demands on Junhua, a father of two and grandfather of one. He said he spends one year at sea and then goes home for three to five months.

"I miss my family very much," he said, adding that they don't get too upset when he has to leave. "They got used to it. They understand. Now my wife is lonely because my son is going to Austria. Now there's nobody really at home."

But Junhua will continue to work, partly because he loves the sea and partly because he is a diligent man. And he said diligence is common among the entire crew. Though he has worked with the men for only one week, he said he doesn't have to supervise them too much.

"The Chinese people are diligent people who work hard," he said. "I don't need to push them."

Group of Maine residents continue cutting ice the old way — from frozen lake

By GLENN ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

OQUOSSOC, Maine (AP) — When the sun beats down on this remote corner of Maine this summer, campers will refresh their parched throats with drinks cooled by ice cut months earlier from the sprawling lake glistening at their doorsteps.

Steve Philbrick and his hearty band of ice harvesters, men more committed to preserving a tradition than making a buck, have seen to that.

With 5-foot steel saws, iron chisels, metal-tipped pick poles and brute strength, Philbrick and his seven men carved 2,000 blocks from the 2-foot slab covering Mooselookmeguntic Lake while winter was in its arctic prime.

They stacked mountains of light blue ice between layers of sawdust in two well-insulated icehouses, which will remain sealed tight until blocks are removed during summer.

Much of the ice will be used at the resort Philbrick runs, providing refrigeration in its kitchen and a convenient cooler for the guests renting cabins strung along the shore in this western Maine community. Philbrick, who also sells ice blocks, has one of the few commercially viable ice harvesting operations left.

His band attack the work with vigor, enthusiasm and wit.

"I'd rather do this any day than sit in the house," said Ray Christy, whose house-moving business slows down during winter. "We're keeping the old times flowing, the tradition going. I'll do it as long as (Philbrick) does."

"It's something that's not done much any more and you want to be part of it," said Bob Brown, a transplanted New Jersey draftsman, who also runs a local computer shop and bakery. "I'd rather be here sawing ice than down there making more money."

A century ago, Maine was famous for the crystal-clear chunks it exported all over the world, said

Richard Judd, an assistant professor of history at the University of Maine.

Around 1880, the peak of Maine's ice trade, up to 1 million tons a year were cut in Maine, mostly from river valleys in southern Maine.

The ice, which made excellent ballast for clippers, was loaded between layers of straw and sawdust and carried to ports in the South, the Caribbean, South America and beyond, said Judd.

Divers patch hull of oil tanker in California

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Divers patched the punctured hull of the American Trader but the Coast Guard said it would be at least another day before the tanker that spilled an estimated 400,000 gallons of oil would be docked.

Plans called for moving the 811-foot American Trader, anchored two miles offshore, into an Arco dock in Long Beach harbor to deliver the remainder of the cargo and make permanent repairs, Coast Guard Capt. Jim Card said.

The vessel that spewed the oil last week, apparently after it was pierced by its own anchor, passed "watertight integrity" tests after the patching job Sunday, Coast Guard Petty Officer 3rd Class Kristine Johnson said Monday.

But it cannot be docked until it passes inspection for cleanliness and other pollution standards, she said, adding that the tanker probably would be moved early in the week, but not Monday.

Cleanup crews reported that the oil slick that coated 14 miles of shore with gooey muck was shrinking but the National Weather Service Monday predicted increasing winds to 25 knots by Tuesday, which could spread the spill.

Nine miles of beaches remained closed as one-third of the slick still menaced the coast, staining sand as far north as Long Beach.

The Coast Guard said the damage wasn't too bad, however.

"As we stand here, the beaches are in pretty good shape," Card said.

Chief Warrant Officer Rick Meidt said the cleanup was impressive, but cautioned, "It's too soon to declare a victory — there's 131,000 gallons of oil in the water."

On Sunday morning, divers temporarily repaired the hull of the tanker using prefabricated steel, plywood and water-resistant foam, said Tony Kozlowski of British Petroleum, which chartered the ship.

An estimated 400,000 gallons of oil leaked from the vessel Wednesday after it apparently punctured itself twice on its own anchor while mooring in shallow water at an offshore oil pipeline.

The accident remained under investigation. The Coast Guard said drug and alcohol tests on the ship's officers, including Capt. Robert Laware, were negative.

National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration data showed 23 percent of the spilled crude had been skimmed or picked up at sea as an oil-water mixture while 43 percent had evaporated or naturally dissipated.

The unrecovered 34 percent had spread out on the water as a thin sheen and was nearly impossible to retrieve, Meidt said.

"We've reached the point where skimming is of limited value," Meidt said, though skimming will continue for several more days in areas where the slick appears most concentrated.

On the beaches, 415 cleanup workers were assembled by British Petroleum. Kozlowski couldn't say how long they'd be there.

The state Department of Fish and Game reported 48 birds have been killed; British Petroleum officials put the number at 44 and said 126 birds were under care after cleaning.

As ice harvesting all but vanished, a few old timers who had cut it in their younger days passed their skills to younger men interested in preserving the craft.

Philbrick, 36, remembers cutting ice every winter during his youth with his grandfather, Ronnie Turmenne, who is now 85 and cut ice until five years ago. In Turmenne's prime, "he did four or five times the scale" of the current operation, said

Philbrick. "I was brought up with it," said Philbrick.

Twice a day during summer, Philbrick fills 10-gallon pails with chopped ice at each of his resort's 15 cabins so guests can keep their drinks and snacks cool. The ice also provides refrigeration in the main kitchen, which serves three meals a day, saving money and assuring Philbrick that his coolers won't break down.

Philbrick also sells ice to a local salmon hatchery that uses it to regulate water temperature, and to anyone willing to pay $7 for blocks about the size of four cinder blocks.

Philbrick, who also works as a ski patroller, says it would cost more to buy, maintain and purchase electricity for refrigerators than to run his ice-cutting operation. He says his ice business is "profitable."

Stormie endures long year to survive heart-liver transplant setbacks

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Stormie Jones, saved by the world's first heart-liver transplant on Valentine's Day 1984, has her own remedy for dealing with the exasperating health problems that seem to multiply with every passing year.

She reads.
"That always helps me put my worries and frustrations away," said the 12-year-old mystery buff. "I know my liver problem is never going away and I know my heart problem is never going to go away. So I don't worry about it too much."

She also writes.
"I feel better when I write my thoughts down."
In many ways, Stormie is much like any other adolescent girl, said her mother, Lois Purcell, 33. "We're into boys and a different kind of music than mom listens to, makeup, the whole nine yards."

"If somebody says, 'Hey, we're having a slumber party,' I let her go. She goes skating. Now she wants to go to the mall and get her ears pierced."

More than any other year since her historic operation, though, the past one has been tough for one of transplantation's most celebrated patients.

Stormie was doing "super good" and leading a fairly normal life in White Settlement, Texas, until October 1988, when she was re-admitted to Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh for possible organ rejection, Mrs. Purcell said. She improved the next month after surgeons removed a bile duct obstruction.

She was back again in January 1989 because of elevated enzyme levels that interfered with her anti-rejection medication, cyclosporine.

She started losing liver function in November and returned again. Dr. Thomas E. Starzl replaced her cyclosporine with an experimental Japanese drug, FK-506, believed to be 50 to 100 times more powerful with fewer side effects. She takes a pill every day, and will for the rest of her life.

The setback prompted Mrs. Purcell to remove the sixth-grader from school this year and rehire her home tutor.

Stormie returned to Children's Hospital on Jan. 6 with more liver problems. Tests showed no evidence of organ rejection, but rather a non-infectious form of hepatitis. She was discharged six days later and sent home to recuperate.

Airlings generally pick up the travel expenses; insurance covers most of the medical costs.

Now her doctors in Texas want to draw blood once instead of twice a week because her veins are collapsing from so many tests, but they can't because of her rising enzyme levels. "It's to the point where it's getting kind of frustrating. We don't really know what's going on," said Mrs. Purcell.

"If I remember, they told me after the first five years you're over the hump. They didn't tell me it went downhill." Stormie is just as bewildered as her mother.

"She's to the point where it's really bothering her," Mrs. Purcell said. "If her liver is in rejection one more time, she's going to tell Dr. Starzl she wants a new liver. That's getting pretty desperate when you don't want to try the new medication. It's something I never thought I'd hear her say."

Starzl doesn't intend to give Stormie another liver. And her heart won't need to be replaced even if her liver does. "Her heart is doing perfectly in all this," he said. "The liver is doing quite well. We think we'll keep that liver for the foreseeable future."

Stormie suffered from a rare congenital disease that increased the cholesterol in her blood to nearly 10 times normal; the imbalance was caused by a faulty liver. She had two heart attacks, two triple coronary bypasses and a heart-valve replacement before Starzl decided in January 1984 to replace her heart and liver.

On Feb. 14, 1984, during 16 hours of surgery,

Stormie received the heart and liver of a 4-year-old New York girl killed in a car accident. She was discharged as an outpatient that March and sent home in May.

Encouraged by her progress, surgeons did two more heart-liver transplants during the next year in Pittsburgh, the world's leading transplant center, but both patients died within a few days of surgery.

Those were the sole attempts in America at replacing heart and liver in a simultaneous operation until Dec. 3, when Pittsburgh surgeons did the world's first heart-liver-kidney transplant. Cindy Martin, 26, of Archbald, Pa., was still in intensive care at Presbyterian-University Hospital in mid-February. She was receiving FK-506 and had experienced no organ rejection.

Starzl, who heads transplantation at the University of Pittsburgh-affiliated hospitals, remains confident and willing to attempt more combination transplants, especially with the availability of FK-506.

No matter what happens, Mrs. Purcell has no regrets about having subjected Stormie to the experimental surgery. She, like her daughter, is chronicling Stormie's story with hopes of having it published as a book.

"I'm definitely glad we went through it. If it came to it ... I could do it again because I'm a selfish person. I want her with me."

Senator: Soviets should conduct 'fail-safe' review of nuke weapons

By LAWRENCE KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union should conduct a "fail-safe" review of its 30,000 nuclear weapons to assure none falls into the hands of extremists at a time of internal tumult, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee says.

Sen. Sam Nunn isn't alone in his concern.

With ethnic and political tensions straining Soviet unity, some American experts are fretting about the possibility that a nuclear missile could be loosed on the world without the knowledge or approval of the Kremlin.

"My worst case fear for the last several months is that we would wake up one morning and discover that an ethnic liberation front had obtained control of 100 nuclear weapons," said a military expert on the staff of the House Armed Services Committee.

"Nuclear weapons are in every Soviet republic that is potentially rebellious," said the source, who asked not to be identified by name.

Bruce G. Blair of the Brookings Institution notes that the Soviets may have 100 or so nuclear weapons stored near Baku, in Soviet Azerbaijan, site of recent violent clashes between Muslims and Armenians.

Until Soviet troops entered Baku to restore order, widespread reports had gunmen seizing arms and ammunition from Soviet military depots.

But Blair said U.S. government officials appear not to be worried, "based largely on their belief that the Soviets have a penchant for tight, ironclad control of nuclear weapons."

The issue may soon be explored in extraordinary public fashion, at a time the superpowers apparently are nearing agreement on several arms control accords.

Yevgeni Velikhov, chairman of the Supreme Soviet's defense subcommittee, has proposed an unprecedented joint hearing with the House Armed Services Committee to explore ways of reducing the danger of unauthorized or accidental launches of nuclear weapons.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House panel, says he is open to the idea.

Nunn, D-Ga., said in an interview, "I think you have to worry about thousands of nuclear weapons in a nation that has a lot of turmoil."

But he said that in an age of terrorism he also is concerned about the security of U.S. nuclear weapons. He wants the Pentagon to review controls on U.S. nuclear weapons and says his committee will conduct its own review if the Pentagon fails to act.

Nunn wants to persuade the Kremlin to review the effectiveness of "fail-safe" procedures to insulate their nuclear weapons from the country's political troubles. The two superpowers should cooperate more closely on the issue because "this is one area of technology that it would pay both sides to share," he said.

"In the event of instability, people have to be worried about who would be in charge," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Like others, Lugar noted that a probable silver lining to their worries is the continued cohesiveness of the Soviet military machine.

"There seems to be no instability whatsoever in the Soviet armed forces," Lugar said. "They appear to be in full control of nuclear weapons, short- or long-range."

Picture recipe cards show how to use canned foods

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The canned pork isn't popular at the Foodbank at the Frederick Community Center in Frederick, Md. Ditto the dried eggs.

Clients aren't sure how to reconstitute the dried eggs or prepare the canned pork, says Debbie Mann-High, who recently completed a 3-month home economics internship at the Frederick Community Center.

And how many different ways can you use canned sweet potatoes?

Recipes are provided for the U.S.D.A. commodities distributed at the Foodbank. But these recipes are difficult for many of the Foodbank's clients to understand, Mrs. Mann-High said in a telephone interview.

Mrs. Mann-High, whose internship was part of her studies at Hood College, came up with an idea that she hopes can be used at foodbanks across the country. Her plan: to design simple picture recipe cards that include U.S.D.A. commodities in their lists of ingredients.

Five picture recipe cards have been designed. The text of the original recipes was simplified with the help of the Literacy Council of Frederick County. The recipe cards are illustrated with artwork by Hood College home economics students.

Three of the recipes — Pork Fried Rice, South-of-the-Border Pork and Beans and Honey Cornbread — are U.S.D.A. recipes. Recipes for Sweet Potato Muffins and Carrot and Raisin Salad were taken from Mrs. Mann-High's recipe files.

The picture recipe cards are expected to be ready for distribution in early 1990 at the Frederick Foodbank and at several other foodbanks through Maryland, Mrs. Mann-High said.

Mrs. Mann-High hopes to contact other foodbanks and hunger relief organizations nationwide to see if they are doing similar projects, and to find out what resources are available to broaden the project, she said.

Mrs. Mann-High said many of the clients served at the Frederick Foodbank are non-readers or have limited reading skills, a situation that is probably similar at other foodbanks.

"I have a holistic approach to life," she said, "and I feel that literacy, nutrition and economics all go together. I am also interested in working with families to help build their self-esteem."

Mrs. Mann-High remembered the picture recipes that she used when she was teaching nursery school. However, she found no such materials available for helping adult low-level or non-readers in cooking with U.S.D.A. commodities.

She enlisted the help of her classmates at Hood College and the Literacy Council of Frederick County. Together they designed the five picture recipe cards.

The Women of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America in Chicago has agreed to develop computer artwork to accompany future recipes, she said.

Among the U.S.D.A. commodities distributed at the Frederick Community Center Foodbank are canned pork, vegetarian beans, canned sweet potatoes, flour, honey and dried eggs.

The ingredients for Pork Fried Rice include canned pork and dried eggs. The recipe for South-of-the-Border Pork and Beans calls for canned pork and vegetarian beans. The Honey Cornbread recipe uses flour, honey and dried eggs.

She said the Sweet Potato Muffins recipe was selected because the Foodbank had an abundant supply of canned sweet potatoes during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Mrs. Mann-High has also produced a video, funded by Hood College's Kappa Omicron Phi, a national home economics society, that demonstrates how to prepare the five recipes.

This video will be available at the Frederick Foodbank, and hopefully at other Maryland food banks in early 1990, she said, but one of her goals is to develop picture recipe cards that do not depend on the video.

Mrs. Mann-High says she plans to help Hood College members of Kappa Omicron Phi to produce more videos and picture recipe cards.

The Frederick Community Center is a non-profit human service agency that provides programs and services for the economically disadvantaged living in Frederick County. The Foodbank is operated by the Religious Coalition for Emergency

Love shared has to be love shown

DEAR READERS: Can you believe tomorrow is St. Valentine's Day again? It seems like only yesterday we took down the Christmas decorations. Well, young lovers — and older lovers, too — some years ago I wrote a column on how to keep your man happy. As soon as that hit print, I was asked, in the interest of fairness, to write another column on how to keep your woman happy.

As a valentine to both men and women, here's an updated version on how to keep each other happy:

FOR WOMEN — BE A SWEETHEART

Tell him daily that you love him. (If you're married, don't ask him if he loves you, or he's liable to say, "I married you, didn't I?")

Never criticize him in public. If you must criticize him, let it be constructive and in the spirit of love and helpfulness — never in anger as a put-down.

Don't bad-mouth his friends — or worse yet, his relatives.

Don't invade his privacy. Every man needs a desk, a closet or a cupboard to call his own. If it gets cluttered and somewhat messy, don't try to tidy it up for him. (Nobody's perfect.)

Dear Abby

If he eats — or drinks — a little too much, don't nag him about it. Remind him gently that you wish he'd take better care of himself because you'd like to have him around to grow old and gray with.

Don't sulk. If something's bugging you, talk it out and clear the air.

Never give him the third degree about where he's been (or with whom) when you weren't with him.

Never lie to him. If there's something you don't want to tell him, reserve the right to remain

James 'Buster' Douglas and his grandmother, Sarah Jones, admire his WBC heavyweight championship belt, which was vindicated by the WBC Monday.

WBC declares Douglas champ

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — Buster Douglas is the heavyweight champion of the world, and was as soon as Mike Tyson took a 10-count in the 10th round of their title fight in Tokyo.

That's the word from World Boxing Council president Jose Sulaiman, who told The Associated Press late Monday that he takes responsibility for any misunderstanding concerning Douglas' status as champion.

"On my way back from Japan and stopping in Los Angeles, I contacted the members of the executive council of the WBC in the five continents, and they unanimously demand from our group to officially announce that we declare, officially, Buster Douglas as the champion of the world of the heavyweight division," Sulaiman said.

The WBC, Sulaiman added, "presented Buster Douglas with the championship belt after the fight, and I believe that's the belt he's been wearing. The WBC never stated that we would not recognize Buster Douglas as champion of the world."

Yet there was a perception that, given the appeal of a long count over Douglas following his eighth-round knockdown, that Douglas might not be certified as champion until a hearing has been held.

"I might have made a personal mistake, which I accept, of withholding the opinion of the result of the fight until I talked with the executive board members, instead of expressing mine immediately," Sulaiman said.

There will be a hearing Feb. 21 at Mexico City, he added, but that will deal not with Douglas' right to be the champion, but only with the technical matter of whether there was indeed an error in the eighth-round count, Sulaiman said.

"We are also going to review the (judges') scoring," he said, "because two of the scores do not seem to represent the facts of the fight. I think the scores that were shown to be very close are a little distant from the facts."

Promoter Don King told the AP late Monday that the appeal doesn't involve who wears the crown.

"I never asked anybody to change the decision," King said. "We just want a first shot at a rematch."

"There is no doubt an error was made," King said. "I have not asked for modification of the rule. It was the referee's error."

King said he was the one who brought the long count to the attention of boxing officials.

"I would do the same for Buster Douglas," he said. "Am I and Mike Tyson to be punished because the referee made an error? The fact is an error was made."

The World Boxing Association will discuss the appeal on Feb. 20, the day before the WBC meeting.

The International Boxing Federation has also acknowledged Douglas as champion.

King said he was upset at the perception he was trying to take Douglas' title away.

"If anyone tried to take Buster Douglas' title, it would be unacceptable to Mike Tyson," King said.

"They (the media) misunderstood my motivation. That has never been my intention. Tyson doesn't want the belt unless he wins it in the ring."

Dr. Elias Ghanem, a WBC vice president who supervised the fight in Tokyo, was the one who presented the champion's belt to Douglas after the 10th-round knockout of Tyson on Sunday.

"Douglas knocked Tyson out and that's a fact," Ghanem said of the controversy. "I gave Douglas the belt after the fight and that's as far as I'm concerned."

Ghanem also said Monday that Sulaiman and WBA president Gilberto Mendoza were told between the eighth and ninth rounds that the referee had made a mistake in the count. But neither official took action.

"Nobody did anything," Ghanem said. "The fight went on."

Sulaiman acknowledged that he was told, but "what could I do? I couldn't stop the fight while we determined if a mistake was made."

Neither side talking after Monday's bargain session

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Something's going on in the baseball negotiations, but what?

Donald Fehr, the players' union head, wasn't saying after Monday's 45-minute session. Chuck O'Connor, chief negotiator for the owners, wasn't talking about it, either.

The sides were, for them, strangely quiet about what transpired. From the tone of their respective statements, something did happen.

"I'm not going to characterize it," Fehr said.

"I'm not going to characterize it, either," O'Connor said.

Commissioner Fay Vincent joined Monday's talks, the 20th session since negotiations began Nov. 28. He had talked with the parties in three meetings last week.

"He'll be part of the solution," O'Connor said. "At this time, the commissioner is a part of the process. I guess he would characterize his role, as would I, as full-time."

Whatever happened, Fehr didn't seem impressed.

"It's my impression we're where we were yesterday and the day before and the day before," he said. "But I didn't expect any breakthroughs today."

There's almost no chance spring training will start on time Thursday, when pitchers, catchers and injured players could begin reporting voluntarily. Management's Player Relations Committee said on Jan. 9 that camping would not open until agreement is reached with the union on a new contract.

Another meeting was scheduled today.

"It is now an almost virtual certainty it will happen," Fehr said of the owners' planned lockout. "It's not my impression that the situation has changed at all."

"I don't have any reason to disagree with Don as far as logistics go," O'Connor said. "I have no reason to believe this can be settled quickly, but I am always optimistic when we're talking."

Baseball

Fehr sounded less than optimistic. He said most players had stopped attending the bargaining sessions because they thought they were "a colossal waste of time."

Monday's session was to have been held in secret, with no press briefing. But reporters staked out at the offices of the union and of the PRC, and it was decided the sides would speak after the session, which was held at a hotel across the street from the PRC.

"I think the 45 minutes was what both sides needed," O'Connor said. "The tenor remains business-like and civil."

O'Connor, ever the optimist, said that camps could begin to fill with players very soon after an agreement was reached.

"There are players who live near the camps and could be ready to go," he said.

Harvesters host Borger tonight

The Pampa Harvesters wrap up a three-game home stand tonight when they host Borger at 8 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Harvesters clinched the outright District 1-4A championship last Friday with a 109-59 rout of Lubbock Dunbar, boosting their perfect league record to 14-0. Overall, Pampa stands at 24-4.

It is the second consecutive district crown for the Harvesters, currently ranked fourth in the state by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches.

Borger enters the game sixth in the district standings with a 5-9 record, 8-19 overall. Pampa defeated the Bulldogs, 76-43, when the two met at Borger's Tex Hanna Fieldhouse in January.

The Harvesters conclude the regular season Friday at Levelland. They have a bi-district bye and will take on the No. 2 playoff seed from District 4-4A in the area playoffs on Friday, Feb. 23.

At present, Pecos and Snyder are tied for the 4-A lead, each with 11-1 records. Both teams have two games remaining before the end of the regular season.

Pampa coach Robert Hale has tentatively scheduled a playoff warmup game for Tuesday, Feb. 20.

All six of Pampa's middle school and freshman basketball teams pulled off district championships this season, while two of those six closed out the year with unbeaten records.

The freshman teams concluded their season Saturday at the district tournament in Canyon. The Green team helped coach Scott Flynn celebrate his birthday with a 103-45 rout of Canyon in the semis, followed by a 69-60 victory over Hereford in the finals. Pampa is the only team that beat Hereford this year.

The Green finished with a perfect 12-0 record in district, 16-0 overall, to win the A Team championship. Members of the Green team include Matt Finney, Lamont Nickleberry, Chris Poole, Dwight Nickleberry, Sean Hardman, Jason Turk, Danny Hendrix and Mark Woelfel.

The freshman Gold team defeated Hereford and Randall to win the B Team District Tournament, running its record to 7-3 in district, 8-5 overall, good enough to clinch the B Team title.

Members of the Gold team include Heath Stephens, Matt Clark, Keith Jackson, Troy Reeves, Brandon Brashears, Chad Giles, Vincent Martinez, Tim Jackson, Jason Brantley and Josh Nix.

The eighth grade Red brought the season to a close with a second-place finish in the District Tournament, defeating Dumas and falling to Borger. The Red team notched a 9-1 district record, 13-3 overall, to win the A Team championship.

The eighth grade Blue also finished up last weekend by winning the District Tournament title. The Blue beat Borger and Canyon to boost its record to 9-1 in league play, 13-2 overall, good enough to win the B Team crown.

Last week, the seventh-grade teams each won their brackets at the District Tournament, then defeated Dumas two days later to close out the year as co-champions.

The seventh-grade Red finished with a 10-0 district mark, 15-0 overall to share the league championship with Pampa's Blue team, which had a 10-0 district record, 14-1 on the season.

See today's Scoreboard on Page 14 for line scores from last weekend's tournaments.

Villanova stuns No. 4 Syracuse — again

By The Associated Press

With a 14-12 record, Villanova probably won't be invited to the NCAA Tournament. But if the Wildcats can arrange to meet Syracuse in the finals of the Big East tourney, they may wind up with an automatic bid.

Little more than a month after handing Syracuse its first defeat of the season and ending the Orangemen's six-week reign as the nation's No. 1-ranked team, Villanova, which hasn't been in the Top 25 this season, stunned the nation's No. 4 team again with a 60-56 victory Monday night.

Chris Walker made a 3-pointer with 1:11 to play, then hit the first of two free throws for a 58-56 lead with 12.2 seconds left. Lance Miller sealed the victory with a pair of free throws to snap a six-game winning streak for Syracuse (18-4, 8-4 Big East).

"It really wasn't a planned shot," Walker said of his game-winning basket. "I really didn't want a 3-pointer, but the guys left me open. Billy (Owens) stayed in and I just took the shot."

In other Top 25 games, it was No. 6 Duke 102, Stetson 67; No. 7 UNLV 69, Fresno State 64; No. 14 La Salle 93, St. Joseph's 76 and No. 21 Michigan State 80, Iowa 70.

Although Walker scored the key points down the stretch, the big man for Villanova (14-12, 6-7) was Rodney Taylor, who came off the bench to score 17 points and grab 10 of the Wildcats' 20 offensive rebounds.

Villanova trailed 29-25 at halftime, shooting only 28 percent to Syracuse's 39 percent. For the game, the Wildcats shot only 32 percent to 38 percent for the Orangemen but made 23 of 35 free throws while Syracuse made eight of 16.

Greg Woodard had 14 points and Walker 10 for Villanova. Derrick Coleman had 18, Owens 17 and Stephen Thompson 13 for Syracuse.

No. 6 Duke 102, Stetson 67
Duke reached the 20-victory mark for the seventh consecutive season as Alaa Abdalnaby scored 18 points and Christian Laetner added 17.

Stetson kept pace for a while, taking a four-point lead midway through the first half and trailing 44-37 at the intermission. But the Blue Devils took control early in the second half and blew the game open despite the loss of leading scorer Phil Henderson, who sprained his left ankle in the first half and may be out for as long as a week.

With Henderson out, freshman Bill McCaffery scored all 12 of his points in the first 10 minutes of the second half to help Duke open a 72-52 lead.

Duke had two other players in double figures — Robert Brickley and Brian Davis with 13 apiece. Stetson was led by Frank Ireland's 13 points.

No. 7 UNLV 69, Fresno St. 64
Larry Johnson scored 23 points and David Butler added 22 for the Runnin'

Rebels, who trailed most of the first half and traded leads in the second half.

UNLV led 63-61 with 1:52 remaining and Johnson, Anderson Hunt and Barry Young made baskets in the final 1:30 to nail down the victory. Tod Bernard had 16 points and Wilbert Hooker and Dave Barnett 13 each for Fresno State.

UNLV starting guard Greg Anthony was carried from the court with a broken jaw with 13:41 remaining in the first half after crashing to the floor while driving for the basket. Reserve guard Stacey Cvijanovich separated a shoulder and Butler sprained a knee.

No. 14 La Salle 93, St. Joseph's 76
Lionel Simmons moved into seventh place on the NCAA career scoring list despite a season-low 12 points but Doug Overton scored 26, reserve Bobby Johnson added a season-high 24 and La Salle rallied in the final 12 minutes.

St. Joseph's led 59-52 with 11:48 left and 65-63 with 6:41 to go. La Salle then went on a 20-2 run.

Simmons' 12 points gave him 2,919 for his career.

No. 21 Michigan State 80, Iowa 70
Kirk Manns tied his Big Ten record of eight 3-point baskets and scored 30 points as Michigan State won its fourth consecutive game. The Spartans scored 10 of the final 12 points of the first half for a 34-26 lead and began the second half with a 9-2 spurt.

Stephen Thompson of Syracuse (left) tries to drive past Marc Dowdell of Villanova Monday night. The fourth-ranked Orangemen were beaten, 60-56.

Back to the drawing board for Mike Tyson

By JOHN KREISER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Mike Tyson is anxious to get back to work.

Mike Tyson

"I have a little swelling in my eye. As soon as it goes down, I'm ready to go back to training," Tyson said Monday upon arriving from Tokyo, where he was knocked out in the 10th round by James "Buster" Douglas on Sunday.

Tyson's promoter, Don King, has challenged the result, saying Douglas was given a long count when Tyson knocked him down in the eighth round. The International Boxing Federation has recognized Douglas as the winner, but the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council have withheld recognition of Douglas pending a review.

But Tyson wasn't talking like a champion when he, King and their entourage arrived at Kennedy Airport.

"I'd be happy to get a rematch," he said. "I had a pretty bad performance, but I'm not going to make excuses. I'm just going to go on and make better results."

Douglas beat Tyson to the punch for most of the fight, landing numerous jabs and controlling the tempo throughout. Though the former champion wouldn't admit that he took Douglas too lightly, he did say that he "would be prepared better next time."

One who thought Tyson wasn't ready to fight Douglas was Lou Duva, manager of Evander Holyfield, who was to have met Tyson in a big-money bout in June. Duva said Tyson's decision to get rid of Kevin Rooney, his trainer for 35 fights from 1981 to 1988, was a mistake.

"When Mike Tyson walked into the ring, I could see there was something wrong with him," said Duva, who was among those waiting for Tyson at the airport. "He had no life, no spring. He's not the fighter he was before, with Kevin Rooney."

Tyson's estranged manager, Bill Cayton, agreed Tyson may have been hurt by the departure of Rooney, who was replaced by Jay Bright and Aaron Snowell, and the increasing influence of King.

"I hope he realizes what a disaster King's machinations have been over the past year," Cayton said. "Mike's bright. He just lets himself be manipulated."

"I hope he has enough strength of character to admit his mistakes, to leave King, to go back to Catskill where he began, go back to Kevin Rooney, and get himself in shape."

Duva also felt the outcome should stand, though he acknowledged that it might not.

"I think it would be a black eye on boxing if they take the title away from Douglas," he said. "But I know that the way they operate, they might order a rematch."

"The referee is the boss in the ring at all times. As far as I'm concerned, Mike Tyson got knocked out."

Area cage teams set for playoffs

WHEELER — Allison downed Miami, 44-35, in a girls' District 4-1A playoff game Saturday night.

Allison advances into the bi-district playoffs as the No. 2 seed and will meet Groom Friday night in Pampa's McNeely Fieldhouse. Gametime is 8 p.m.

Allison and Miami have finished the regular season tied for second place, forcing the one-game playoff.

Deirda Dukes and Kimberly Hall paced Allison in scoring with 15 points each. Gray chipped in eight points.

Cam McDowell was high scorer for Miami with 17 points. Amanda Morris and Kjersti Morris added seven points each.

Allison led at halftime, 22-16.

The Warriettes finished the regular season in third place in the final district standings with a 7-4 record. Overall, they had an 11-17 record.

Allison posted a 16-9 overall record in finishing second behind Wheeler in District 4-1A. Groom is the District 3-1A champion, finishing the regular season with a 19-5 mark.

Other area bi-district games have been set in the girls' bracket.

Wheeler and Lefors meet at 6:30 p.m. Friday night in Pampa's McNeely Fieldhouse. Wheeler (23-5) is the District 4-1A champion. Lefors (19-5) slipped by White Deer, 34-32, Friday night in a District 3-1A playoff game for second place.

McNeely Fieldhouse also hosts a Class 2A clash between Canadian and Panhandle, scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday night. Canadian (20-6) is the No. 2 seed in District 2-2A, losing a coin flip to Wellington to decide the No. 1 seed. The two teams tied for first place in the final standings. Panhandle (21-5) won the District 1-2A title.

WBC

The WBC's international secretary, Duane Ford, said he would resign if Douglas wasn't recognized by the WBC. He made that statement while Sulaiman was enroute to the United States.

"Buster Douglas is the champion and they need to give the belt to him officially," Ford said. "If the WBC reverses this decision I'm long gone from this organization."

Ford also warned that the WBC would be making a "fatal, fatal mistake" if it does not name Douglas its champion.

"If they reverse the decision on this one, the WBC and WBA can pack their tents and fold them," he said. "I think they're finished."

Ford and Ghanem are members of the Nevada State Athletic Commission.

Ford also is president of the Association of Boxing Commissioners, an umbrella organization of state and foreign athletic commissions. He said the organization meets April 1 in Las Vegas and may take action against the WBA and WBC if they do not recognize Douglas.

"Local commissions have the responsibility to boxing and to their own states to step forth and restore the integrity of their sport," Ford said. "If they reverse this decision and award it to Mike Tyson I can see many states, including Nevada, distancing themselves from these organizations."

Ford called it "appalling" that the WBC and WBA were even having meetings to consider the protest by promoter and Tyson confidante Don King.

"I'm ashamed to admit I'm even associated with boxing now," Ford said.

Ghanem said referee Octavio Meyran simply panicked when Douglas was knocked down and missed the beginning of the count.

"He didn't know what to do," Ghanem said. "He looked around at Tyson's corner even when he was counting."

Ghanem said that, despite the error, Douglas was declared the winner of the fight and that decision cannot be changed by any ruling organization.

"When the referee raises his hand, there's nothing you can do about it," he said. "He (Douglas) is the new champion."

Texas' protest denied

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Conference Commissioner Fred Jacoby has denied a formal protest by the University of Texas, which had asked that 14 seconds of its Feb. 4 loss to Arkansas be replayed.

Jacoby denied Texas' request for reinstatement and replay of the final 14 seconds of regulation time, citing a conference policy.

That policy states, in part: "Protests and Officials — Decisions of the game officials are final and protests arising from the decisions of the officials or any inadvertent misinterpretation of the rules will not be considered..."

The protest was based on officials failing to call a technical foul on Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson, who walked off the court and into the locker room with Texas up 86-83 with 14 seconds left.

Texas then missed a game-clinching free throw, and Arkansas' Lee Mayberry hit a 3-pointer to tie the game 86-85. Richardson returned to the bench, and Arkansas won 103-96 in overtime.
