Bill Waters named Citizen of the Year

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Bill W. Waters, long-time Pampa attorney, civic leader and economic development leader, was honored Thursday night as Citizen of the Year at the 61st Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting.

Waters, with the law firm of Waters, Holt, Fields and Waters, was praised for "outstanding contributions to the quality of life for every citizen of Pampa" through his diverse service and activities benefiting the citizens of Pampa over the years.

Ken Fields, partner with Waters in the law firm, spoke of Waters' many accomplishments.

"I believe that Bill Waters has made a real contribution" to Pampa "at considerable personal sacrifice," Fields said, describing Waters' efforts last year in devoting "a tremendous amount of time and energy" to obtaining new industry for Pampa, including his work toward Pampa's bid for a state prison unit.

Fields noted that Waters moved to Pampa in 1934 when he was 10 years old and has remained in the city since then, except for service during World War II in the U.S. Army after his graduation from Pampa High School.

After his military service, he attended the University of Texas Law School, received his degree in 1949 and then returned to Pampa to begin his long practice of law. His law service has included terms as Gray County attorney and as district attorney.

Fields said Waters has a long history of service to the city in many organizations and activities, including being a member of the original board of directors of the Pampa Youth and Community Center and serving in the Pampa Jaycees, Pampa Kiwanis Club and Pampa Knife and Fork Club.

Waters also has been a member of the board of directors of the Fairview Cemetery Association, the board of trustees of the Gray-Pampa Foundation Inc., the board of trustees of the M.K. Brown Foundation and the board of directors of the Pampa Industrial Foundation. He is a long-time member of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ, where he has served as a deacon and taught Sunday School.

With the M.K. Brown Foundation, Waters has served as chairman of the board since 1974.

has been responsible for outstanding contributions to the quality of life for every citizen of Pampa, including the construction of the M.K. Brown Auditorium and Heritage Room, the new city swimming pool, the Community Day Care Center, the Pampa Youth and Community Center, projects for the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts of America, and many others too numerous to mention tonight," Fields said.

Fields also lauded Waters' efforts through the Pampa Industrial Foundation and his contributions toward the economic development goals of the city.

"None of us who saw or heard him make the recent presentation in Austin on behalf of our prison effort could fail to be impressed by his professionalism and obvious passion for the city," Fields said.

"I believe that our city has never been more galvanized into action, nor more unified and focused and determined to succeed, than it is today," he added. "I believe that Bill Waters has made a real contribution to this state of affairs, at considerable personal sacrifice, and that as a result the community of Pampa will win through in the end."

"Please join me now in recognizing a citizen-soldier, a public servant, a lawyer's lawyer, a man upon whom this city may call when the chips are down, with a lifetime of accomplishment behind him and future contributions yet unmade - I give you the Citizen of the Year, Mr. Bill W. Waters," Fields said.

Chamber President Jim Morris presented Waters with a plaque honoring him for his service to the city. "That gentleman certainly has worked hard on our community's behalf," Morris said of Waters.

Accepting the honor, Waters said, "I've been proud to call Pampa my home ever since I was 10 years old. ... This community has been very good to me."

Waters thanked his wife Sandra, who "never complained about all the time" he has spent toward economic development projects and trips to visit various business prospects.

Waters noted that he and the city have many past accomplishments, "but I believe Pampa has a great future, perhaps greater than ever before," ahead of it.

"Thank you for the honor," he said.

Waters was selected for this year's honor from a list of six nominees. Morris introduced the other nominees - Wayne Roberts, Jimmy Massa, Ken Hall, John Warner and Joyce Puckett - noting, "I think we all should recognize the work they do for our community," regardless of who wins the honor this year.

Guest speaker for the banquet was Rev. Jerry Kunkel, conference evangelist for the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church and noted humorist.

Using jokes and humorous anecdotes, Kunkel encouraged people to take risks and be willing to try new ways to improve the business climate in Texas.

"We've got to do what we know is right, no matter what everybody else is doing," Kunkel said. "We've got to do it in the state of Texas if we expect to make it in business."

Kunkel said the business climate now is rife with problems and crisis, yet people "have got to learn to rebel against normality" in finding new ways to cope and move forward, getting rid of things that keep us back.

He said progress will also need a willingness to learn to laugh with others, to become other-oriented, to "defeat defeat," and to "depend on the Man from Galilee - and I make no apology for that commercial."

In chamber business, Morris presented plaques to Pampa guitarist gets first chance to play concerts in overseas tour

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

If charm, personality and earnestness were the keys to success in the music business, Pampa guitarist Mike McAdoo would be sitting at the top of the charts.

Fortunately, as the 31-year-old country performer prepares to embark on his first "world tour" in one week, he takes with him as much talent as charisma.

McAdoo has been featured in Guitar Player magazine as a rising young star and has cut two records on the independent Buck Creek records. One of them, "The Magic in Your Eyes," has earned him extensive airplay in Europe, a farm system for up-and-comers.

He has also played behind Johnny Gimble, Becky Hobbs, David Allen Coe and fiddler Shoji Tabuchi.

"Last summer I went on a California trip and played for military installations," McAdoo said of what led up to his new tour. "We did nine shows. Before that I had been in Nashville recording these records."

"There is a booking agent in Hayes, Kan., by the name of Mark Meckel who has connections. He got us the California gigs and now the overseas thing," he explained.

Mike McAdoo practices his guitar as he prepares for his overseas tour.

Shawn Alders of Oklahoma, will present concerts for military bases in Korea, Guam, the Philippines, Okinawa and The Marshall Islands.

"I have a lot of trouble talking about myself," McAdoo said, "but it seems like a really good opportunity to get some exposure."

For the last year, McAdoo has taught guitar at Tarpley Music in Pampa, a return engagement to a job he held in Elk City, Okla., native had from 1977 through 1980.

He said he came back to this area so he could be close to his grandparents, who raised him and are now getting up in years.

'It's a place where those who are coming up into country music and those who are kind of going down all play.'

"They live in Mangum (Okla.) and are not old enough to need a nursing home, but they do need someone to kind of look after them," McAdoo said.

Between jobs as guitar teacher in Pampa, McAdoo spent several years in Branson, Mo., playing in the plethora of country music shows that have sprung up there.

"It's a place where those who are coming up into country music and those who are kind of going down all play," McAdoo explained.

While playing Branson or military bases on The Marshall Islands are not exactly comparable to a number one hit in Billboard, they are key steps along the path of dues paying that every performer must go through to make the big time.

McAdoo said he would eventually like to be known as a session man or band member for some of the top talents in Nashville.

His picking, Guitar Player noted, is "flowing" and "features 'well-connected runs.'"

Equally impressive is his devotion to music, which has kept him working up the ladder to success for more than 10 years, the sheer agony of which weeds out the less serious would-be stars.

Unsure what he will do after the two-month tour, McAdoo said he has offers to come back to Tarpleys or go back to Branson to perform.

What he is sure of is that whichever direction he goes, Nashville will be a regular visiting place as he continues to cut records and write songs.

McAdoo said he even has thought of opening a recording studio in Pampa, a reality contingent on increasing royalties from his European airplay and songwriting.

Whatever he does, McAdoo is likely to remain humble, hesitant to talk about his considerable talent. Actually, he doesn't need to talk about himself.

Midway through a recent interview, McAdoo was asked to demonstrate his guitar playing. What transpired next doesn't translate well into print, but it was a display of what happens when God-given talent combines with unending determination.

It is the kind of "talking" that will get the attention McAdoo is seeking from Nashville's decision makers - after they have seen he's paid his dues with things like European airplay, military base tours and performing every night at top-notch venues like Branson.

Robert D. Hayes, the first person from Pampa to successfully complete the prison boot camp program, works at his job Thursday.

'Boot camp' offers chance for a new life for man after years of trouble with law

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

He was 3 when he took his first drink of alcohol and had a drinking problem by the age of 5. He was 13 when he smoked his first marijuana joint.

Later he used the alcohol and drugs as a means of escape from the problems and pain in his life. In August of 1985, at age 19, he got into trouble with the law in Gray County after he broke into a house in Lefors.

Robert D. Hayes, who will turn 24 on Sunday, received a probated six-year sentence from 223rd District Judge Don Cain on Nov. 20, 1985, on the burglary of a habitation charge. It was his first felony conviction.

Throughout the last four years, Hayes has continued to violate his probation, coming up numerous times for probation revocation hearings. Each time, he was given a second chance. But he continued to do drugs and drink alcohol though this was prohibited by the terms of his probation.

A turning point came in Hayes' life in October 1989 when Judge Cain sentenced him to Special Alternative to Incarceration Program, commonly called "boot camp." Hayes successfully completed the boot camp in January with glowing remarks from the boot camp officials at the Goree Prison Unit in Huntsville.

Hayes began working at Quillen Electronics immediately upon his return from the boot camp. He installs radios and does general work around the electronics shop. He has done well, according to his employer Ted Quillen.

"I was looking for a hand and I hired him," Quillen said Thursday. "He's been doing real well. I think Judge Cain deserves credit for this. He's done this man (Hayes) a favor when he sent him there."

Quillen said Jeane Roper, chief probation officer in Gray County, also deserves some credit for recommending Hayes for the boot camp program. "She has a heart as big as Dallas for these people," he said.

Hayes agrees, saying Roper has given him seven or eight chances. "I don't know why. She's a good Christian lady, I guess. She said she thinks there's hope for me."

The boot camp was the choice Hayes made instead of going to the state penitentiary. Hayes became the first person from Gray County to enter the program and the first to successfully complete it.

"I wanted to go there more than regular prison," Hayes said in an interview Thursday.

"I learned discipline. It taught me to do things I need to do," Hayes said. "I learned how to get along with people better; it teaches teamwork. We had to work together all the time."

Roper said Thursday that from what she's seen with Hayes, the boot camp program is a good one. She said both Judge Cain and District Attorney Harold Comer should be praised for agreeing to the boot camp program for Hayes. She said the change in Hayes is like "night and day."

"He was so quick-tempered and short-tempered," Roper said. "Anything he didn't agree with, he just exploded. Since he's been back from boot camp, he's been even-tempered. I have seen self-discipline and determination and he really wants to make it."

During his 90-day stay at the prison boot camp, Hayes saw about 15 of the 200 people sent directly to prison — 200 yards away — because they could not conform to the rules of the boot camp. Even Hayes admits that there were times when he wanted to give up.

Asked if the boot camp was a worthwhile program, Hayes said, "For people that want to change it is."

"I've been wanting to change for a couple of years now, but I didn't know how," he added.

The boot camp program is designed for first-time felony offenders between the ages of 17 and 25. It is sometimes referred to as a "shock" treatment and has been considered an effective tool in helping turn around some first-time offenders. It is designed after military boot camp. For 90 days, Hayes' day began at 4 a.m. and ended around 10:30 p.m. It included physical training, marching, drilling ceremonies, substance abuse classes and prison work.

'I learned to steal from my stepdad and my momma taught me how to not show emotion.'

Hayes has prior shoplifting charges and also had a misdemeanor possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia charges. "I got on drugs when I was 13, and after that it was downhill all the way," he said.

Although he had drug and alcohol problems during his junior high and high school years, Hayes did graduate from Graham High School in 1984. He said some of the teachers at the school tried to reach him, but he did not want their help.

"There were some that tried to talk to me, but I wouldn't listen," he remembered. "I had found something that made me feel better than the pain caused by my family life and not being able to fit in with the rest of them."

Hayes does not have close ties to his mother and stepfather. "It hurts, but (his mother) chose her own pain and torment," he said. "I learned to steal from my stepdad and my momma taught me how to not show emotion," he said.

His mother and father divorced when he was 5-years-old. His dad, whatever else came along."

He stayed in Fort Worth until August 1988 working. On Aug. 26, 1988, he was placed in the Teen Challenge Alcohol and Drug Center in Amarillo, where he stayed until Thanksgiving of 1988. He returned to Graham, where he lived several months while looking for a job. He entered the Teen Challenge in Midland for about a week just before Christmas 1988.

"I got back on drugs and couldn't find a job," he said, so he returned to Gray County in April 1989 and was sent again to Teen Challenge in Amarillo, where he stayed until September.

"I think people have something to do with their own destiny. I chose to stay high and drunk all the time and not face reality and not face the hurt," he explained.

Hayes enjoyed drafting, electronics and art in high school. He participated in football while in junior high, where he was first exposed to marijuana. "A high school dude stopped me and said, 'Here, smoke this.'"

Following his graduation from high school, Hayes joined the Air Force, but received an entry level separation after only six months. "I wanted to go home. I had a drinking and drug problem and I didn't like some of the rules," he said.

In April 1985, Hayes journeyed to the Texas Panhandle looking for a friend. He got a job doing some roofing work, but it did not last long.

"I got back in the drug scene real heavy," he said.

And then on Aug. 12, 1985, he broke into the Lefors residence and went to jail until he was put on probation in November. In August 1986, following a probation revocation hearing, he was sent to a halfway house in Waco, where he stayed until March 1987. He said he stayed in Waco until June or July "doing drugs and giving tattoos."

Hayes tattooed the letters "H-A-T-E" on the fingers of his left hand during that time. "I used to hate everything and everybody. I have no reason to anymore, though," he said.

He returned to Graham and stayed with his grandmother for a while before reporting to his probation officer in Gray County. On July 6, 1987, Hayes was sent to a restitution center in Fort Worth, where he stayed until the spring of 1988.

During that time, Hayes said he continued to drink alcohol and do drugs, including "speed, heroin and 'I want to be a functional member of society and be worth something to myself.'

"I lost my temper and went to (Potter County) jail. I stayed there over the weekend until Gray County came and got me."

He remained in the Gray County jail until he was sentenced to the boot camp program in October.

He has been off of alcohol and drugs since April 1989, he said Thursday. He spends his lunch time — seven days a week — at Alcoholics Anonymous meetings. He also attends AA meetings every night for about an hour or two. He goes to Narcotics Anonymous meetings on Sundays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

"When I feel like I want to get drunk or stoned, I call somebody who knows what I'm going through," he said. "I stay around the same kind of people — who are trying to stay clean — and it helps us all stay clean. I take one day at a time."

Hayes has been keeping busy, working at Quillen Electronics, cleaning around the house and attending his meetings.

"I've got the discipline now to quit thinking about me. I stop and think where I went and where it got me — nowhere. I don't want to go back to nowhere."

Hayes said he is counting the days until his probation is over on Nov. 20, 1991. He said until then he plans to remain in Gray County and not violate his probation.

"I want to be a functional member of society and be worth something to myself," he said.

GOP gubernatorial candidates take shots at frontrunner in debate

By SUSAN FAHLGREN
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The lottery may be occupying the interests of the Democratic gubernatorial contenders, but Republican hopefuls for the state's top job were more inclined to take shots at their party's front runner in the GOP's portion of a debate doubleheader.

While opponents denied they ganged up on West Texas oil man Clayton Williams, the political newcomer was the target of repeated barbs as being more a candidate of the Wild West and not the Texas of the future.

"This is not 1890 and slogans won't get it done," said Dallas attorney Tom Luce. "I don't think we can ride horseback into the space age."

Williams has been featured in several television commercials that show him riding a horse and advocating an anti-crime program that includes boot camps for young drug offenders to "bust rocks."

In Wednesday's debate, Democrats sparred over many issues, but spent a lot of time arguing about the lottery. Attorney General Jim Mattox, State Treasurer Ann Richards and former Gov. Mark White said they supported a lottery, but Mattox accused the others of jumping on the bandwagon after it was deemed politically safe.

In the second gubernatorial debate at the George R. Brown Convention Center Thursday, contenders Luce, Williams, Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance and former Secretary of State Jack Rains argued about abortion rights, AIDS, additional education reforms, judicial elections and prison programs.

Yet Rains said the Republican Party had to consider its appeal to the voters and "our qualifications and our electability."

"Despite our differences here, there's far more that unites us than divides us," Rains said.

But he was the only candidate focusing on unity.

Hance challenged Williams about his claims to have created 100,000 jobs in Texas during his business career, his campaign expenditures, his "fist-fighting" attitude, his economic plans and his prison reforms.

"Claytie, why are you going to pay prisoners to bust rocks?" Hance asked, questioning Williams' plans for a prison boot camp. "They may be breaking into prisons under your plan."

Williams laughed off much of the ribbing about his commercials and said he was sincere about getting control of the state's prison overcrowding and school dropout problems.

"I didn't know I had so many faults until I was a front runner," a jovial Williams told reporters later. "I think they picked on me more than anyone else."

Recent polls show Williams with nearly 40 percent of the Republican vote, or nearly a 2-1 edge over Hance, while Luce and Rains trail with single-digit percentages.

Williams defended his prison proposals.

"I want these recovering addicts and recovering criminals to build roads all around the outer edges of the Big Bend ranch," he said. He suggested the inmates could build campsites and handicapped access areas.

The debate began with Hance's attack on the initial followup question regarding abortion when he was asked if his position opposing abortion would change if his wife or those of the other candidates were raped.

"It's an outrageous question and highly offensive," said Hance, who was backed immediately by a loud ovation. "For you to come in here and pick on wives of the candidates, that's a cheap shot and I resent it.

"If any of our families were assaulted, I like the others, would give blood and compassion. The next thing is to grab the person who committed the assault by the throat and take him by the courthouse."

Williams said he also was opposed to abortion, except in cases of incest, rape or if the woman's life is endangered. Both Luce and Rains said they would not further restrict a woman's right to abortion, except for minors being compelled to have parental permission.

Before the program began, Fort Worth preacher W.N. Otwell sat down on the stage and expressed his anger about not being included in the debate. Otwell said he deserved to be there because he had paid his $3,000 filing fee and considered himself a viable candidate.

"I think I was discriminated against in this debate," Otwell told reporters later. He said program planners cut him from the cast because of his outspoken views, that include his opposition to homosexuals, working women and wealthy candidates.

Health Department says killer bee threat exaggerated

While the threat of the "killer" bee is scary to most people, in actuality the threat will be much less dramatic than some media and fiction writers have depicted, according to the Texas Department of Health.

The first arrival of the so-called "killer" bees are expected to cross the Rio Grande into Texas as early as March.

Bobby Davis, an entomologist and director of the TDH general sanitation division, explained that the insects may pose an increased danger to people who are highly allergic to bee stings, but should not be considered a hazard to most people.

"We want the public to know what makes the AHB (Africanized honeybee) different from other bees," Davis said. "We also want to caution people who are allergic to insect stings that bee stings can be fatal."

Two or three Texans, stung by common honeybees, die each year.

Davis said the AHB is a hybrid species, a cross-breed between common European honeybees and a more aggressive African species. The African bees were accidentally released in Brazil about 30 years ago. Even to scientists, the hybrids look almost identical to common honeybees, but their behavior can be drastically different.

"What concerns us most about AHB is that it is more likely than other bees to attack and sting in large numbers if anyone threatens its colony or swarm," Davis said. "Although the venom of Africanized bees is no more toxic than that of other honeybees, the number of stings a person might suffer may be much greater. If the person is already allergic to bee stings, or if he is stung by large numbers of bees in a swarm, it can be fatal."

Davis said he thinks the name "killer" bee is a misnomer. "They are hard-working honeybees, and if you don't disturb their colonies, chances are they won't bother you."

As many as 10 deaths in Mexico may have resulted from AHB stings in the past four years. Other Central and South American countries have recorded increased bee sting deaths as the swarms have spread northward from Brazil.

Another characteristic of the bee is its tendency to abscond — to separate into new swarms to start new colonies.

"Whereas most common honeybees are content in beekeepers' hives, the AHB swarms sometimes seek more unlikely places to hide, such as old barrels, vacant buildings — nearly everything that offers shelter. That creates the danger that someone might stumble upon them," Davis said.

The most likely people to have serious problems with the Africanized bees are beekeepers and farmers, particularly in the Valley, where nearly all crops are dependent upon bee pollination.

"Beekeepers are going to have to be wary of having their hives taken over by AHB, and some of them who may be lax in wearing protective clothing are going to have to be more careful. Farm workers are going to have to watch for wild swarms, and take care not to provoke them."

The Texas Department of Health asks that anyone who finds a wild bee colony contact the local health authority or an experienced beekeeper to make sure they are removed or destroyed safely.

MIA remains returned for burial

AMARILLO (AP) — The remains of two Texas servicemen who disappeared in Southeast Asia more than 20 years ago have been returned for burial.

The skeletons of Army Sgt. Klaus D. Scholz of Amarillo and of Air Force Col. Charles D. Roby of Iowa Park were flown Thursday to Travis Air Force Base, Calif., according to the Pentagon.

German-born Scholz, eldest of seven sons and the father of two girls, boarded a helicopter on Nov. 30, 1968, with six other U.S. servicemen for a reconnaissance mission to Laos. They were shot down over the jungle and all aboard died.

Roby was flying an F-4C Phantom jet that disappeared during an armed reconnaissance mission over North Vietnam on March 3, 1967.

All the men were listed as missing in action for more than two decades. Their remains were recovered in 1988 and 1989 with the help of Vietnamese and Laotian officials and identified recently at the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory at Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii, Pentagon spokesman E.H. Lundquist said.

The men probably will be buried next month at Arlington National Cemetery, Lundquist said.

Scholz was born in Germany of German parents who immigrated to the United States when he was 5 or 6 years old, said the youngest of the seven sons, Richard.

"I think it's a relief," Richard Scholz said from his home in Amarillo. "It's been hard on our family, not knowing if he was alive or not. We were told he was shot down and missing in action. That's all we had been told."

Klaus Scholz was in his mid-20s when he disappeared, leaving behind a wife and two daughters — one about 5 years old and the other just an infant. He had served in the Army about six years and re-enlisted before going to Vietnam.

"He was just dedicated to serve us," Richard Scholz said. "The whole family is proud of him — coming from another country and serving his own country like he did."

Hank Kalokowski, a member of the Texas Panhandle chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America, said the group plans to honor Klaus Scholz and his companions with a memorial service.

"We consider ourselves brothers," he said. "One of us has come home."

Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia have returned the remains of 275 Americans who previously had been listed as missing in action.

Nurses find it hard to say goodbye to young quadriplegic

AUSTIN (AP) — As 6-year-old Patty Carnes leaves the hospital that has been her home for most of her life, the people who have cared for her are finding it hard to say goodbye.

Nurses remember milestones like Patty's first tooth, and talk about playing games with the quadriplegic child, who was scheduled to leave Children's Hospital at Brackenridge Thursday to start a new life with a real family in Portland, Oregon.

"I'm just having a hard time letting go," said Linda Horton, a unit clerk who has known Patty since the little girl arrived at 6 months of age — paralyzed and dependent on a ventilator because of a spinal cord inflammation.

Patty is a ward of the state. Her mother couldn't care for her because the woman is deaf and can't hear the alarm that would signal an emergency with the ventilator, hospital spokesman Larry BeSaw said.

The nurses, secretaries and volunteers have been Patty's surrogate family.

"I used to hide under her bed and in the closet. She couldn't see me, and we'd play hide and seek," nurse Nancy Clegg said. "I would put a towel or a sheet over her head, and she'd pretend she was hiding, too."

"It's hard for me to say goodbye, but I think (moving) is the happiest thing in Patty's life," Ms. Clegg said. "I'm so thrilled over this, and so excited."

"I kind of feel like I'm giving up my baby," said Edwin Mole, a hospital volunteer who has spent up to 100 hours a month with Patty. "I'm going to miss her terribly."

"She's not just this poor pitiful abandoned child," he said. "She's loved and she's well taken care of. She's changed my life in ways most people can only imagine."

Her new parents will be Diane and Ken Stacy, a Portland couple with five other children.

Brackenridge Hospital has donated $15,300 for a ventilator and other medical equipment Patty will need in Oregon, and Travis County has given $9,600 to help pay for the air ambulance that will take her to Oregon Thursday.

More than $21,000 in private donations will be used by Patty's adoptive parents to buy a van with a wheelchair lift.

A send-off party was held at the hospital Thursday. Brackenridge workers are making a videotape of themselves so Patty can watch it in Oregon, and respiratory therapist Nancy Emody is collecting letters from workers and friends in a scrapbook for Patty.

"I'll miss seeing your pretty smile everyday, but I'll think of you smiling with your new family in Oregon," Ms. Emody wrote in her letter.

Lupe Enriquez, a licensed vocational nurse who has known Patty as long as she's been at Brackenridge, said she dreads telling Patty goodbye. She will miss terribly the imaginary Cinderella game Patty played with her.

When it was time for Enriquez to appear on Patty's videotape, she held back the tears by keeping her message short and simple:

"Patty, you will always be my Cinderella, and I will always be your fairy godmother."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Democrats taking tax-cut road now

President Bush has said, in so many words: Read my lips, the pay-roll-tax cut is a charade. (He really did use the word "charade.")

But he's wrong. The tax cut is real, and it is building political momentum. It would end the Social Security payroll-tax boost the government imposed on Jan. 1, saving $55 billion in 1991, and refunding the average taxpayer some $300 a year.

The tax cut is likely to pass in Congress for several reasons. With every new 1990 paycheck, American workers are being shocked at the size of the tax increase, and would love a tax cut. Democrats in Congress like the idea, proposed by their Sen. Daniel Moynihan, because it puts them on the tax-cut bandwagon that has won so many Republican elections the past 10 years. Republican rank-and-file politicians like it because it gives them another popular tax cut.

And groups across the political spectrum, from the liberal Institute for Policy Studies to the conservative Heritage Foundation and the libertarian Cato Institute, support the tax cut.

Even Bush may come around. His major political principle seems to be to jump onto any popular bandwagon. He also knows that tax cuts led the Reagan-Bush ticket to victory in 1980 and 1984, and his "no new taxes" pledge spearheaded his 1988 presidential victory.

Let's hope Bush realizes something else. The Wall Street Journal reports, "The increases in the Social Security tax since 1984 have erased the benefits of President Reagan's tax cuts for virtually all middle-income families."

Bush also mistakenly thinks he can turn to the old Democratic ploy of rallying retired people behind Social Security. This tax increase goes not to benefits, but to the Social Security Trust Fund, even as that Trust Fund is being borrowed against — looted — to pay for current spending. Bush likes how the tax increase reduces the federal budget deficit without forcing him to push for sharp cuts in expensive pork-barrel programs. But no one, least of all retired people, thinks this has anything to do with shoring up Social Security.

Bush does raise one concern: that Democrats might link the tax cut to a tax increase elsewhere. Sen. Fritz Hollings has proposed imposing a new 5 percent value-added tax — a national sales tax — that would raise $53 billion in 1991. Surprise! That almost equals the proposed $55 billion payroll tax cut.

But Bush's tactic here should be obvious: support the tax cut, oppose the tax increase. Thus can he reclaim the old Republican tax-cut thunder, assault the Democrats as big taxers, and help his party in congressional elections this November and his own re-election chances in 1992.

If he doesn't wise up, the Democrats will steal the show. They have strong support for the Social Security tax cut, including a large block of Republican congressmen, but little support for the Hollings value-added tax, which should fade away. If Bush blunders, the Democrats will roar into November as the party of tax cuts.

Proving a case of child abuse

WASHINGTON — On Jan. 18 the prolonged trial of Raymond Buckley and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckley, came to an abortive end in Los Angeles. A few days later, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to hear two unrelated cases that present some of the same problems that troubled the California prosecutors.

All three cases involve charges of the sexual abuse of little children. These are ugly charges. They are increasing in frequency around the country. In a just and civilized society, persons guilty of such abuses should be dreadfully punished. But in a just and civilized society, persons so accused must be proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. How is this to be done?

From its inception in March of 1984 to its end last month, the McMartin trial set records. It was the longest criminal trial in the history of our jurisprudence, but to the distress of the parents of the 11 children who were most immediately involved, it all came to nothing. The children's evidence simply was not convincing — not beyond a reasonable doubt — and so the defendants went free.

The confrontation clause of the Constitution was not critically involved in the McMartin trial, but it figured crucially in the two cases the high court has just agreed to review. Under the Sixth Amendment, an accused person "shall enjoy the right to be confronted with the witnesses against him." Such a confrontation can be a terribly traumatic experience for youngsters.

The legal rule of confrontation goes back a long way. In Acts 25 we read of the trial of the apostle Paul before Festus, the Roman governor at Caesarea, Paul's accusers were unwilling to show up. Said the governor: "It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, (lest the

was not videotaped. The Supreme Court of Idaho set aside the judgment because of the hearsay testimony. Now Craig has appealed her conviction, and Idaho has appealed the acquittal. The two cases will compel the court to look again at such child-protection arrangements.

The last time the court took up the confrontation clause in this context was in June of 1988. This was an Iowa case involving John Avery Coy, accused of sexually assaulting two 13-year-old girls who were camping out in the backyard of the house next door to him. At trial, the girls testified from behind a screen. The defendant could see them dimly; they could not see him at all. Coy was convicted.

A sharply divided Supreme Court reversed the conviction. Six members of the court agreed that in this particular case, Coy's rights under the confrontation clause had been violated. The girls had not confronted him "face to face." But Justices O'Connor and White, concurring in the judgment, were sorely troubled. O'Connor went out of her way to emphasize that the confrontation clause does not convey an absolute right. State legislatures may fashion workable laws to protect child witnesses. Their protection is "an important public policy."

On remand, the state of Iowa dismissed charges against Coy. The two girls were unwilling to testify "face to face," and the case had to be dropped.

This is a tough one to call. Child witnesses may be easily influenced by leading questions. As Justice Scalia has said, they may be coached "by a malevolent adult." When the Maryland and Idaho cases are decided this spring, we may have a better idea of how to protect the children, and how to protect the defendants too.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Feb. 9, the 40th day of 1990. There are 325 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Feb. 9, 1861, the Provisional Congress of the Confederate States of America, meeting in Montgomery, Ala., elected Jefferson Davis to be president and Alexander H. Stephens to be vice president.

On this date:
In 1773, the ninth president of the United States, William Henry Harrison, was born in Charles City County, Va.

In 1825, the House of Representatives elected John Quincy Adams president after no candidate received a majority of electoral votes.

In 1870, the U.S. Weather Bureau was established.

In 1889, an act of Congress elevated the Department of Agriculture to Cabinet-level status.

Japan's an economic invader

The CEO of a major Japanese manufacturing corporation owns an expensive skyscraper apartment in Chicago for the use of himself, his associates and clients.

He employed an interior designer, specifying that the apartment should be furnished "typically American."

After that point was debated and resolved and they got down to specifics of furnishings and draperies, the Japanese executive asked, "How long to complete?"

He was told that the draperies would likely require about 11 weeks.

The Japanese businessman said, "That's too long."

The Chicago designer said that perhaps he could contact some different suppliers and shorten the waiting time to eight weeks.

Let me interrupt myself to explain that the interior designer relating this experience is a friend of mine; he is a mild-mannered man not given to exaggeration or to hyperbole.

The Japanese chairman of the Japanese corporation replied, "When we take over, you'll get delivery in 48 hours."

And he was not smiling.
Aggressive Japanese imperialism is not dead.
And the ultimate irony is that while the

Paul Harvey

Japanese are committing their resources to buying the United States, the United States is spending $29 billion — one-tenth of our total military budget — protecting and defending Japan!

Thus relieved of the military cost of defending itself, Japan can commit its resources to an economic war.

Within two years Japan has bought more real estate in the United States than we know about, much of it through hybrid international consortiums.

Outright, Japan has bought Westin Hotels, CBS Records, Union Bank, Firestone Tire, Cook Cable TV, LyphoMed, CIT, Columbia Pictures and the Rockefeller Group — total investment, $21.7 billion.

A few American Minuteman are responding in anger to this invasion.

Donald Trump has called us "saps" and "paties" for buying so much Japanese stuff that they are able to buy our country with American dollars.

Japanese giants in the United States, hearing the resentment, are seeking to respond — telling their Japanese executives in the United States to join the PTA, contribute to United Way.

Minolta has prescribed a variety of civic activities for its personnel in the United States: sponsor concerts, sponsor sporting events.

Sony advises the wives of Japanese executives in the United States to "do volunteer work."

The Japanese Embassy in Washington is increasingly anxious about the backlash, emphasizing every politeness and formality while assiduously cultivating middle-level government officials.

Members of Congress often denounce Japan as an unfair trader, express alarm over Japanese investment in the United States — yet behind the scenes there is a comfortable, cordial relationship between members of Congress and Japanese diplomats.

Former President Reagan is criticized for accepting $2 million from the Japanese for a personal appearance tour of Japan.

At least he is one American who brought some of our money back home.

Dear Mr. President: First, principles

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

In two widely separated areas of the globe, the United States finds itself torn between its allegiance to historic principles and a powerful temptation to let pragmatic considerations take precedence over them. It had better get its priorities in their proper order, and let the principles prevail.

I am confident that I know where George Bush's heart is on the subject of China: It is solidly with the student demonstrators in Tianamen Square. But Bush is also president of the United States, and as such the inheritor and custodian of many strategic advantages, including several that require cooperation with the tyrants who rule mainland China.

He is determined not to let these advantages slip from our grasp, even if protecting them involves sending National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft to Peking repeatedly, to exchange toasts with those thugs.

A somewhat similar dilemma forces him in regard to the Soviet Union. Lithuania was simply kidnapped and absorbed by the Soviet Union in 1939, as a result of a squalid deal between Hitler and Stalin.

Now, its people are demanding national independence so unanimously that even the Lithuanian Communist Party has cut its ties with the Soviet party and joined the chorus calling for it.

Gorbachev rushed to Vilnius to plead for time and deliberation, and warned that precipitate secession would result in economic chaos in Lithuania, not to mention his own probable political demise. Yet he came away empty-handed.

The U.S. government never acquiesced in Stalin's brutal absorption of Lithuania and still recognizes a small independent Lithuanian Embassy in Washington. Officially, therefore, we favor self-determination for the Lithuanian people. Yet the administration's general inclination — and I think it has been the right one — has been to encourage Gorbachev's political and economic reforms, and wish him success. Quite naturally, therefore, the White House looks nervously on recent developments in Lithuania, which seem to threaten Gorbachev's own survival.

The discomfort in both cases is natural, but the dilemma is false. In a contest between important principles and purely pragmatic considerations, the principles must prevail. It was failure to understand this that led such brilliant geopolitical strategists as Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger into the swamps of Machiavellianism, with consequences that temporarily destroyed America's historic credentials as a principled nation.

In the case of China, this means that the Bush administration ought to reverse its present trend toward business-as-usual with the communist bosses, and stand boldly by the students and others who are demanding democracy.

What can the geriatric punks on top do about it, anyway? Throw in with Gorbachev? Hardly — they despise Gorbachev. Order us out of our electronic listening-posts along their border with the Soviet Union? These are of fast-diminishing value anyway, as the Soviet Union totters toward disintegration. Deng and his cronies should be told, politely but firmly, that there is only one way forward for China, and that is toward freedom — fast.

Similarly, the time of equivocation is over so far as concerns Lithuania. Having supported the cause of Lithuanian independence for 50 years, how can we desert it now, just as it at last becomes a realistic possibility? Gorbachev may be scored, in Moscow, with the responsibility for "losing Lithuania," but it wasn't his to lose. Nor are Estonia and Latvia, or Azerbaijan, or even the Ukraine.

The Soviet Union is a patchwork of slave states held together by brute force. If force is no longer available, blaming the incumbent general secretary for the union's collapse may be only human, but it is essentially pointless.

In the last interview I had with him, the late President Chiang Ching-kuo of the Republic of China (on Taiwan) asked me rhetorically, "If America isn't pro-freeedom, what is it?"

George Bush well knows the answer to that question.

Latest oil spill prompts call for stricter controls

By JAMES ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The oil slick spreading from the tanker American Trader spilled into politics as officials and environmentalists demanded stronger controls on oil industry operations in coastal waters.

"We need to do something to make sure this doesn't happen again," Attorney General John Van de Kamp, a Democratic candidate for governor, told a news conference in Huntington Beach on Thursday.

Controller Gray Davis, a member of the California Lands Commission, pledged a state investigation into the 295,000-gallon spill and said his panel would urge Congress to require tankers to be fitted with double hulls.

The commission, which regulates oil development in state lands and waters, has declared previously unprotected tracts in state waters off-limits to new drilling.

The spill off Huntington Beach renewed debate about requiring a double hull and double bottom on tankers, a move opposed by many oil industry executives because of the higher cost and arguable safety advantages.

"This oil spill is another warning that our legislators are dragging their feet on double-hulled tankers, at great peril to our environment," said Dorothy Green, head of Heal the Bay, a local environmental group.

A number of officials speculated that a large swell pipped the American Trader onto its own anchor Wednesday, punching a 3-foot hole into the single-hulled ship's bottom as it maneuvered toward an offshore mooring.

"If the information is born out that this tanker lifted up and came down on its own anchor, double-hulling the vessel may well have prevented the spill," said Peter Douglas, executive director of the state Coastal Commission.

"The double hull, in this case, could have avoided the spill," said Jerry Aspland, president of Arco Marine Inc. and a former ship captain experienced in offshore moorings.

But he stressed other factors, including human error, may have played a more significant role in the spill.

In Washington, Democratic Rep. George Miller said British Petroleum Oil Shipping Co. USA, which leased the American Trader, has led lobbying against comprehensive oil spill liability legislation pending in Congress.

A conference committee is working on differing House and Senate bills to produce a measure both chambers can approve by the March 24 anniversary of the Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska's Prince William Sound.

The main sticking point concerns double bottoms and double hulls. The House wants them on all tankers calling at U.S. ports with oil or hazardous materials within seven and 15 years, respectively. The Senate bill calls for further study, a position backed by the oil industry.

Miller told a news conference that British Petroleum was leading efforts to "gut the oil spill liability bill."

That drew a response from Bill Rountree, vice president for federal government affairs with British Petroleum.

"BP America has supported enactment of comprehensive oil spill legislation for close to a decade," Rountree said by telephone. "We support a $1 billion federal fund and increasing liability limits on ship owners."

Using the American Trader as a backdrop at a beachside news conference, Davis and Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy called on the state Assembly to pass the Oil Spill Prevention and Cleanup Act, which would establish a $500 million reserve, funded by the oil industry, for spill cleanup.

Yeltsin: Remove conservatives from party leadership

By DEBORAH G. SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Populist Boris N. Yeltsin said a new party should be formed unless the ruling Communists remove conservatives from the leadership, and reformers agreed the party must do more than renounce its legal claim to power.

Yeltsin, an unorthodox Communist who has emerged as the leading advocate of far-reaching change, on Thursday called the party's new program only a "half-step forward."

"You talk about approving this program, how can I do it?" he asked.

A second party should be formed unless the congress removes conservatives from the party hierarchy, said Yeltsin, who cast the only vote against the changes Wednesday in the policy-making Central Committee.

Reformers said the party must end its seven-decade stranglehold on the nation's institutions to fulfill its promise Wednesday for a multiparty political system.

"It is necessary to eliminate party organizations in the army, the police, the KGB, the courts, in all the state institutions," said Yuri Mityunov, a spokesman for the independent Democratic Union.

At the Central Committee meeting, the party approved President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's platform of renouncing the party's constitutional monopoly on power and accepting the prospect of multiparty democracy. It also called for a Western-style elected president.

The movement for reform is building popular strength, with a growing number of angry crowds across the Soviet Union demanding the ouster of hard-line Communist leaders, Mityunov said.

Party secretaries in Volgograd, Tyumen, Chernigov and Sverdlovsk were removed in recent weeks. The TV program Vremya showed a rally in Donetsk on Thursday where people demanded the resignation of Politburo member Yegor K. Ligachev, a leading conservative.

In London, party ideology chief Vadim A. Medvedev said the country had avoided a "cataclysmic explosion" in putting into effect Gorbachev's program of reforms, known as perestroika. "We have channeled this process into an area of controlled reaction," he told a news conference.

However, many Moscow residents, while hailing the party's pronouncements, voiced doubt Thursday over whether it was ready to allow true democracy.

"The party started out as the initiator of perestroika but has become a braking force," one man said.

Yeltsin, who also belongs to the Soviet Parliament, called the platform "a half-step forward ... that lessens the tension before the (party) congress" late in June.

The party Congress will vote on the party platform and has the power to change the Central Committee.

Yeltsin said the party must reform itself, but the current strength of conservatives complicates the task.

However, he said, "The transition to a multiparty system is just a question of time. It is inevitable and necessary."

Yeltsin said the party platform, which has yet to be made available in its details to the public, contained outdated language and failed to endorse radical measures needed to undo the economic chaos created by central planning.

He said the draft still endorses "democratic centralism," the principle used to justify central planning.

Yeltsin said he favored creating competing factions within the party, but the Central Committee opposed allowing formal factions.

In an interview with CBS-TV, Yeltsin said, "If we cannot feed the people right now, if we cannot produce good clothing and if we cannot develop our people spiritually, it doesn't matter what slogans we shout. The people will never respond."

Gorbachev praises Bush's proposal for arms reductions

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev vowed today to promote more political reform "once we have solidified this phase."

At the start of a meeting with Secretary of State James A. Baker III, he hedged on whether he would run for president as a Communist if a contested election for the post were held.

"Let's wait and see," Gorbachev told reporters at a picture-taking session in the Kremlin.

He also praised President Bush's latest proposal for reducing U.S. and Soviet troops in Europe. "It merits very, very serious consideration," Gorbachev said.

The Soviet leader has called in the past for even broader disarmament measures. Asked if Bush should have gone further than to propose leaving 225,000 American and Soviet troops in Europe, Gorbachev said:

"I don't know. It's up to the U.S. government to make its own proposal. It would be good if we cooperate, just as we are cooperating now."

The Soviet leader appeared relaxed as he shook hands with Baker and a half dozen U.S. officials.

"It certainly would be wrong for the West and everyone to believe we began these changes only in the last few days," Gorbachev said of the political reform that was capped this week with a decision to revoke the Communist Party's monopoly on power and to open the 72-year-old system to political pluralism.

"They have been under way since 1985," he said, referring to the year he took over.

Asked about his own standing, Gorbachev replied, "I would not think anything particular happened to me. What we wanted to achieve at this plenum (the party's Central Committee meeting), we did achieve."

He said the changes were in order, and "once we have solidified this phase we will move further."

Baker, who will end a four-day visit here Saturday, met again with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze before going to see Gorbachev. "I think we may speak of progress at the talks," Shevardnadze said.

Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh told Tass, the Soviet news agency, said the talks had a "particularly businesslike and constructive character."

Baker was eager to hear Gorbachev's assessment of Bush's proposal to cut troops.

So far, the reaction from Shevardnadze and other Soviet officials on a proposal by Bush to limit both sides' troops, tanks and non-nuclear airplanes in Europe has been positive. But Gorbachev, whose own disarmament goals are more ambitious, could seize the opportunity in today's meeting to push for even deeper cutbacks than Bush's proposal to limit both sides to 225,000.

Judge may permit Hazelwood defense on government negligence

ANCHORAGE (AP) — A judge said he may reverse himself and permit Joseph Hazelwood's defense to allege that government negligence — not recklessness by the Exxon Valdez captain — caused the nation's worst oil spill.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnson reopened the question after he had ruled Thursday that such a theory could not be advanced by the defense.

Defense attorney Dick Madson said in his opening statement that the U.S. Coast Guard monitors weren't watching their radar screen and failed in their duty to notify Hazelwood that his 987-foot tanker was heading for disaster at Bligh Reef.

A Coast Guard traffic monitor, civilian employee Gregory Taylor, testified Thursday that part of his job was to watch the radar screen for trouble and communicate with tankers if a problem was imminent. He also said he was to "let people know what was going on to make things easier."

He said he spoke with Hazelwood some time before the Exxon Valdez disaster and discussed ice conditions in the Valdez Narrows.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., is being tried on a felony charge of second-degree criminal mischief and misdemeanor charges of reckless endangerment, negligent discharge of oil and operating a vessel while intoxicated. If convicted, he faces up to seven years and three months in prison and $61,000 in fines.

Most of the testimony in Hazelwood's week-old trial has focused on whether the captain was drunk when the Exxon Valdez ran aground early March 24. The spill spewed more than 10 million gallons of North Slope crude, killing thousands of birds, fish and other wildlife and blackening hundreds of miles of shoreline.

Taylor and another traffic monitor have said the Exxon Valdez was in a hazy area at the edge of their radar monitor and may not have been visible before it smashed into a rocky reef.

Braselton, Ga., Mayor Henry Edward Braselton waves to a passerby last week as he spoke with a reporter. He stands in front of the grocery store owned by the Braselton family until it was sold last month as part of a deal with actress Kim Basinger that included a large portion of the north Georgia town.

Analysis: base closings won't be devastating

AUSTIN (AP) — If the Bush administration's plan to close several Texas military bases wins approval, it will have an adverse "but not devastating" effect on the Texas economy, according to a preliminary analysis by the state comptroller's office.

The study by the comptroller's Economic Analysis Center as a "worst-case scenario" shows the state economy growing at a rate of 3.3 percent in 1991, the year of the greatest economic impact if the cuts are approved by Congress.

Without those cuts, the comptroller's staff forecast that the state economy would grow by 3.7 percent in 1991.

In addition to looking at how the proposed defense cuts would affect the gross state product, the comptroller's study found that "somewhat slower growth" could be seen in personal income, non-farm employment and population.

"If all the cuts are adopted, Texas will continue to grow but at a slower rate than previously anticipated," according to the report prepared by economists Tom Plaut and Mickey Wright.

Plaut, a senior economist and deputy comptroller, characterized the statewide projections as a "worst-case scenario" because it includes all the proposed defense cuts and does not include proposed federal spending increases that might stimulate the Texas economy if President Bush's 1991 budget is adopted by Congress.

The study also found that the job growth rate in the state could drop in 1991 from 2 percent to 1.7 percent, and in 1992 from 2.3 percent growth to 2.2 percent. Most of the job losses would be in Austin, Killeen, Houston, Texarkana, San Antonio and Beeville.

In its statewide analysis of the proposed defense reduction, the comptroller's office said that by 1994 the state could lose up to 29,500 active-duty military, civilian and reserve personnel or just over 10 percent of the 280,000 military or military-employed personnel now in Texas.

Included in that number are 12,204 military jobs that would be cut in 1991 from the current 44,599 at Fort Hood in Killeen.

In addition to the Fort Hood reductions, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney proposes to close the Army ammunition plant at Karnack, Chase Field Naval Air Station at Beeville, Bergstrom Air Force Base at Austin, and the Defense Contract Administration regional office in Dallas.

Reductions or realignments also were proposed for Fort Sam Houston and Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio and the Red River Army Depot near Texarkana.

Actress promises to preserve character of town she bought

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

BRASELTON, Ga. (AP) — Actress Kim Basinger, who bought a third of this north Georgia town for $20 million last month, has said she wants to preserve its old-time character and won't tear down even a barn.

But then, nobody tears down much here.

Old barns still contain forgotten buckboards and horse-drawn plows from the days before the boll weevil ate up the cotton.

The blacksmith shop, where the village smithy hasn't sung for decades, still stands, and the forges and carriage-making equipment are still there.

At the Braselton Store, Cedelia Hoshch gives a hearty turn on the cash register crank, and as the numbers of the sale pop up, the cash drawer yawns open leisurely. A little sign flips from "barter" to "credit" to "cash."

A fading federal poster on the wall notes that the minimum wage is $1.90 an hour.

The store used to be the town bank, and the small round safe hasn't been moved out.

It's not for show. It's the way Braselton is.

Basinger, who starred in "Batman" and grew up in nearby

Athens, hasn't said specifically what she and her co-investors want to do with the land bought from the Braselton clan.

The 1,728-acre purchase, of which about 1,000 acres is in town, includes a 600-acre industrial park with utilities; a few residences; some land ripe for development; and most of downtown, which consists mainly of a complex of Braselton family stores, founded in 1887.

In the connecting warren of a hardware and building supply shop, a furniture store, a grocery and a department store, a drug store and what used to be the bank, you can buy it all — from beans to bullets to a brass bed.

The mayor is a Braselton as was the one before him, and all but one councilman has Braselton family ties. The sale does not affect the town government or services such as water and sewer systems.

The council will keep its control on zoning matters.

Unlike much of small-town America, Braselton is not dying out. It contains a Mitsubishi plant, a winery and a tool factory. People are moving into the region, not out.

The population has stayed steady at about 500, but more than 5,000 people live within five miles. Braselton has freeway access, is about 45 minutes north of Atlanta and land prices are on the rise.

Herbert "Kit" Braselton, who runs the hardware store, said the 24 stockholders in the family holdings decided nine years ago to sell.

From his roll-top desk, he pointed to boxes of offers they had received over the years. Most, he said, wanted to pay for it over 20 or 30 years.

"But the heirs are getting up in age, most of them are past 75," he said, describing himself as a "young buck" who turns 70 this month. "We were hunting a cash deal."

He said the heirs also had the community in mind. Miss Basinger "promised to do well by the town and I think she will."

Mayor Henry Edward Braselton, who operates the grocery store, said he hoped the town's history would be preserved.

Miss Basinger has mentioned a possible recording and film studio, and Mayor Braselton said it may bring in some tourists. "It's easier to pick Yankees than it is to pick cotton," he said as he relaxed in a rocker in the family furniture store.

"You can't stop progress. We could have built Braselton into an island and watched progress build up around us," he said. "But I think we did the right thing."

GOING UP...

A building is being erected. It is made of strong materials, steel and concrete. The foundation is firm and deep. The edifice is built to endure.

We need to build our homes to endure. They need a strong foundation. They need to be built on the rock of Christ. Psalm 127:1 reads, Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it. Attend church regularly that your house may be instructed in the ways of the Lord.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Where can I go from your presence? Where can I flee from your presence? If I go up to the heavens, you are there; if I make my bed in the depths, you are there. If I rise on the wings of the dawn, if I settle on the far side of the sea, even there your hand will guide me, your right hand will hold me fast. (Psalm 139:7-10 NIV)

A friend shared this testimony of his Christian conversion:

"When I was a boy of about twelve, an old Methodist Sunday school teacher told us boys in his class the plan of salvation. He went through all of it except the prayer; he simply added, 'When you need Jesus, don't forget to pray.'

"I pretty much forgot about it, until eleven years later. On July 21, 1944, I was twenty-three thousand feet over Germany, piloting a B-24 bomber. I was flying a bombing mission to destroy a ball-bearing factory in Friedrichshafen; flak was heavy and a piece came through our windshield and knocked me unconscious.

"The very inexperienced copilot took over the controls, while the navigator helped me and cleaned the blood out of my eyes.

"When I came to, I thought we would crash and all die. I remembered my Sunday school teacher's words - when I needed Jesus, I prayed for Jesus to forgive my sins and come into my heart, and I was saved.

"At the moment Jesus came into my heart, I felt such relief and total peace; words can't explain the peace I felt; I no longer felt in any kind of danger.

"I was able to take back the plane controls, and six hours later I landed with the radio man's eyes because the wound had impaired my sight.

"I can tell you this much for sure: Ten took off in the plane that day, but eleven landed!"

My friend received a Purple Heart and a clean heart, all the same day!

When you need Jesus, don't forget to pray!

Religion roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) - An informal survey by Americans United for the Separation of Church and State finds 107 church-state conflicts smoldering in 38 states, mostly about religion and public schools or aid to church-run schools.

A variety of other disputes also are going on, the report says, over such as teaching creationism in science courses, prayers at sports events and taxing of church property.

Rev. Robert L. Maddox, AUSCS executive, says recent opinion polls show large proportion of people backing religious elements in public institutions.

He says that while majorities profess support for a "high wall of separation" between church and state in theory, polls indicate they have difficulty accepting such a wall in practice.

New Lutheran body specifies discipline for clergy

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Shepherds, like members of their flock, sometimes may stray. But they are expected to be unfailing models of good behavior.

The extra moral demands placed on ministers, though they can err as other humans do, are pointed up in newly approved guidelines by a recently formed major Protestant body.

"In all matters of morality and personal ethics, this church expects its ordained ministers to be exemplary in conduct," say standards detailed for the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Ministers, the church says, "are to seek to reflect the new life in Christ, avoiding that which would make them stumbling blocks to others."

For that reason, the 5.3 million-member denomination, fourth largest in U.S. Protestantism, has set forth various principles that clergy must heed or be subject to disciplinary measures.

Grounds listed for discipline include desertion or abuse of spouse or children, adultery, promiscuity, sexual abuse, misusing counseling to gain sexual favors, drug abuse or disclosing confidential communications.

Such behavior "is deemed to be incompatible with ordained ministry," and calls for discipline, the guidelines say.

They were approved recently in Chicago by the church's 48-member interim policy-making council, although some members questioned singling out particular types of lapses to penalize.

"I have a growing concern that we are moving to more and more detailed legalism," said Bishop Dennis Anderson of Omaha, Neb. He said that "common sense" usually was the best way to handle discipline problems.

Others insisted the still adjusting denomination, launched only in 1988 through merger of three previous Lutheran bodies, had to have explicit requirements so pastors could be held accountable for actions.

"We need guidelines in order to function," said Bishop Harold Jansen of Washington, D.C.

The denomination has 17,128 clergy, 1,042 of them women.

Procedures for handling disciplinary cases provide for due process protecting rights of those involved in regard to charges, adjudication and appeals, with penalties ranging from admonition to removal from the ministry.

On sexual standards, the guidelines affirm marriage as the "normative setting for sexual intercourse," calls for "chastity before marriage and fidelity within marriage," and adds:

"Adultery, promiscuity, the sexual abuse of another or the misuse of counseling relationships for sexual favors constitute conduct that is incompatible with the character of the ministerial office.

"Practicing homosexual persons are precluded from the ordained ministry in this church."

That rule was challenged last month in three ordinations by two Lutheran congregations in San Francisco of a lesbian couple and a professed gay man who refused to promise to refrain from homosexual activity.

Hobart Baptist Church to show World Wide Pictures' 'Caught'

Caught, the newest film from Billy Graham's World Wide Pictures, will be shown at 6 p.m. Sunday at Hobart Baptist Church, 1100 W. Crawford.

The true-to-life story portrays the power of one person caring for another.

An 18-year-old American, Tim Devon, goes to Amsterdam in search of the father he has never known. His mother has reluctantly admitted he was born illegitimately out of a college romance between her and a Dutch exchange student.

In Amsterdam, far from home, he slips into a self-destructive drug culture, but he is encountered by a single, caring person, a person of deep faith.

That person, Rajam Prasad, finds a way to share Christ's message of love, hope and forgiveness in a way that Tim cannot ignore.

Deeply moved by the warmth of the film with its many moments of humor, Billy Graham said, "Caught is certainly the most outstanding film yet produced by World Wide Pictures."

Members of audiences who have seen the movie in theaters around the world say they have been gripped by its central focus on the friendship between Tim and Rajam which is forged out of danger and desperation.

Rev. Jimmy Fox, pastor, said Caught rings a challenge to us all: in reality, one caring person can have an immeasurable impact on the life of another lonely, disillusioned, desperate person.

Rev. Fox invited the public to attend the showing Sunday at Hobart Baptist Church.

A word from Billy Graham...

"I think CAUGHT is by far the best evangelistic film World Wide Pictures has ever done. I believe that this film can have a profound effect on your community, on your church, and on each person who sees it."

Study: childhood seizure medicine may lower IQ

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) - A study today warns doctors against giving phenobarbital to babies who suffer convulsions during high fevers because the medicine, taken by tens of thousands of children, doesn't prevent seizures and may lower IQs.

"There might be an unusual child for whom this (treatment) would still be of benefit," said Dr. Deborah G. Hirtz. "It should not be used in most cases."

Phenobarbital is the drug of choice given to infants with so-called febrile seizures.

An estimated 130,000 American babies a year suffer at least one such seizure and up to 40,000 are given the drug to prevent the convulsions from recurring, said Dr. Jonas H. Ellenberg, a statistician at the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke and co-author of the study with Hirtz.

Hirtz said there has been growing concern about the possible hazards of phenobarbital, an anticonvulsant long used for treating epilepsy.

"In this trial, we wanted to ask the question of whether there were specific cognitive and behavioral side effects in young children treated for febrile seizures," she said. "The major outcome variable was the IQ test at the end of treatment. We did find that there was a difference between children who had been given phenobarbital and those given placebo."

After two years of treatment, the IQs of those taking phenobarbital were 8 points lower than those who had taken dummy pills. Six months after they went off the drug, their IQs were still 5 points lower.

Hirtz said further study is in progress to see if the youngster's IQs eventually catch up. She said that while a difference of a few points shows up on tests, it's too small to be noticed in an individual child.

The study was directed by Dr. Jacqueline R. Farwell of the University of Washington. It was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The study was conducted on 217 children who ranged from age 8 months to 3 years and had experienced at least one febrile seizure. They were randomly assigned to take phenobarbital or placebos.

Forty-six percent taking placebos and 38 percent getting phenobarbital had at least one more seizure during the two years of treatment. This difference was not statistically meaningful.

The study did not address the use of the drug to treat epilepsy. But Dr. W. Edwin Dodson, a member of the board of the Epilepsy Foundation of America, urged parents not to suddenly discontinue their children's use of phenobarbital because a sudden withdrawal could trigger seizures that are harder to control.

Rural Texas fertile area for new business growth

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rural communities across Texas are fertile territory for small and large businesses looking for a place to grow, according to a study that also finds troubling signs of poverty and lower wages in rural parts of the state.

The study by the Corporation for Enterprise Development indicates rural Texas is holding its own against the state's metropolitan areas in new business growth, and is actually doing better when it comes to growth among small businesses.

The healthy enterprise job growth rate for businesses in rural Texas, whether small or large, suggests there may be some "very dynamic, big structural changes in rural Texas" that are creating opportunities for new business start-ups, said corporation president Doug Ross.

"The best piece of good news for Texas lies in the large number of new businesses being born in rural Texas," Ross said. "That is a hopeful sign for rural Texas' economic future."

However, there is a shadow being cast across that future by the low educational attainment of rural Texans. Rural Texans not only compare poorly with other rural Americans when it comes to high school graduation and college attainment, but they also compare very poorly to urban Texans," Ross said.

The study released Wednesday by the private, non-profit research and policy consulting firm found only 50 percent of rural Texans had finished high school in 1980, for a 42nd place ranking, while only 10 percent of them had finished four years of college, putting the state in 36th place.

Another troubling sign for rural Texas, Ross said, is that despite new job growth, rural workers' earnings lag behind urban workers' pay, and many rural Texans are living in poverty.

The study said 22.6 percent of rural Texans were living in poverty between 1984 and 1986, while those who had jobs in rural Texas were earning one-third less than their urban counterparts.

Earnings for rural workers also grew 30 percent slower than for urban workers, the study found.

The good news, Ross said, was the study's finding that Texas ranked seventh nationally with a new enterprise job growth rate of 46.4 percent between 1980 and 1986, while the rate for urban areas was just slightly higher at 50.88 percent.

Texas, with more rural residents than any other state, ranked sixth nationally with a 24.4 percent new enterprise job growth rate among small firms, which exceeds the urban new enterprise job growth rate in Texas of 20.93 percent.

"What I think it shows ... is the character of the state, both urban and rural, is this sort of taking control of our economic destiny," said Mitchell Horowitz, corporation economist. "For rural Texas it really looks like it's been out of necessity, which sometimes ... really creates the future for tomorrow," Horowitz said.

But Horowitz said Texas needs to build on the rural growth to prevent another economic downturn dooming the new businesses to failure.

"They've got to shore up that base, make sure its operating smartly," he said.

Horowitz said the state should take pride in its entrepreneurs.

Products - to use and amuse

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The following is a brief look at some of the new food and food-related products that are available to consumers:

FROM RUSSIA WITH LOVE

Three years ago, Russian immigrants Michael and Yuri Smolyankys founded Lifeway Foods of Skokie, Ill., which markets Lifeway Lite Cheesecake, a low-calorie, low-fat, low-cholesterol cheesecake that is 100 percent natural with no artificial ingredients.

Lifeway Lite is available in plain, chocolate chip and strawberry flavors. The company says a 3-ounce serving contains 140 calories, 8.25 grams protein, 25 grams carbohydrates, 2.5 grams fat, 6 milligrams cholesterol and 195 milligrams sodium. (Lifeway Foods, 7625 Austin, Skokie, IL 60075.)

YOU CAN EAT CAKE

Entenmann's has introduced a line of cakes and cookies that contain no fat, no cholesterol and less than 100 calories per serving. The new line features 12 products including Chocolate Loaf Cake, Oatmeal Raisin Cookies and Cheese Crumb Babka. The cholesterol was eliminated by substituting egg whites for whole eggs, non-fat milk for whole milk, and by removing the butter.

MICROWAVE PASTA

Perfection Microwave Pasta cooks in minutes in your microwave. The product, from the Hershey Pasta Group, can be served like regular pasta in all types of recipes — and with any kind of sauce. Most dishes can be prepared in less than 15 minutes.

The product comes in elbows, spirals, small rigatoni and mostaccioli. The 12-ounce package ($1.59) makes 6 servings.

STILL HAS THE SQUIGGLE

Hostess has taken some of the calories out of its cupcakes — but has kept the original, 7-loop squiggle — in a new flavor variation. Hostess Lights contain no cholesterol and are 97 percent fat-free. The two-cake snack pack is available in plain chocolate cake, raspberry-filled chocolate cake and vanilla-pudding chocolate cake. The calorie count ranges from 110 to 140 calories per snack cake.

DRIED TOMATOES

Genovesi Food Co. of Dayton, Ohio, offers home-grown dried tomatoes in four savory styles — in sunflower oil, virgin olive oil, without oil, or quartered or dried in cellophane packs. Ohio-grown Roma tomatoes are seasoned with a southern Italian herb blend. They can be used in breads, vegetable dishes and dressings, or as an appetizer served plain or with cheese.

Available by mail: the Sunflower Trio, three 8 1/2-ounce jars of dried tomatoes in sunflower oil; Olive Oil Trio, three 8 1/2-ounce jars of dried tomatoes in virgin olive oil; Tomato Bit Trio, three 3 1/2-ounce jars of dried tomato bits; and the Genovesi Sampler, three jars of dried tomatoes.

Prices range from $21 to $33 per pack. There is a charge for shipping and handling. (For information, write: Genovesi Food Co., Box 5668, Dayton OH 45405. Telephone: 1-513-277-2173.)

FREEZER PROTECTION

Dow Brands has introduced Freezloc plastic freezer wrap, which seals tight to help prevent freezer burn and to preserve food quality. Freezloc is transparent, with special "cling strips."

When the wrap is folded and the strips come in contact with one another, the special high cling properties of the plastic forms a very strong seal. Freezloc can also be used in the refrigerator and the microwave.

Groom serenades residents

Sam Groom, 92, longtime Pampa resident now of Fort Cobb, Okla., has been strumming on his guitar and serenading residents at Coronado Nursing Center for the past 15 years. The tunes of Bob Wills and Tex Ritter come easily to Groom who uses to sing and play on the radio years ago. George Keeton often joins Groom, who goes to visit and sing every time he is in town. Keeton's wife is a resident at the home.

Cat hating husband has no praise for cat who sprays

DEAR ABBY: I am a cat lover, presently sharing my home with six cats. I live on a small farm, so most of the time the cats are outside. Unfortunately, I married a man who dislikes cats, but he tolerates them for my sake — and he even started to show a little affection to one cat in particular.

Well, that one cat sprayed him, and my husband was furious! I tried to explain that cats spray to mark their territory or to claim ownership, and it was the cat's way of showing affection. My husband didn't buy it. He insists it was a hostile gesture on the part of the cat, and now he will not let the cat in the house.

The cat is heartbroken, and so am I. Besides that, we went to the zoo in Deland, Fla., and when my husband walked up to the ocelot cage, one of the cats sprayed him! And the same thing happened when he came near the black panther's cage!

Please ask your animal experts if a cat sprays someone to show affection, or is spraying a hostile gesture?

IN THE CAT HOUSE
IN FLORIDA

DEAR IN: I consulted Dr. Erwin David, Los Angeles cat owner, cat lover and veterinarian, who assured me that the cat was showing neither affection nor hostility when he sprayed your husband. (And the repeat performances at the zoo were a sad coincidence.)

Dr. David then referred me to a higher authority, Dr. Richard Polsky, animal behavior specialist. Dr. Polsky does for animals what psychiatrists do for people.

Dr. Polsky confirmed Dr. David's conclusions, then took me to task for doing what most people do — applying human behavior to animals. I made the mistake of asking Dr. Polsky how a person could read a cat's mind. His answer: "Years of study, research and testing." Then he added, "If the cat is a male and has not been neutered, neutering will minimize his spraying. Also, there is a hormone pill that will discourage the problem. Finally, if a cat sprays a person, it means the cat is having problems with other cats, not the person."

So, friends, if a cat sprays you — don't take it personally. It means the cat is having either territorial or sexual aggression problems with other cats. And now you have heard it from two top-notch animal experts.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've had it with all these "cute" toddlers in restaurants. My family and I like to enjoy dinner out at least once or twice a week. We like to treat ourselves to something a little more relaxing than a fast-food restaurant, but we can't afford the deluxe, high-priced eateries either.

We patronize restaurants that offer wholesome food at a reasonable price, and invariably, just after our order has been taken, another family with two or three children under 5 is seated next to us.

Abby, these children yell, scream, whine and make so much noise that it's difficult for us to carry on a conversation in a normal tone of voice.

If some churches have "crying rooms" or "nurseries," I suggest that restaurants now offer their customers the option of a "with children" or "without children" section.

Perhaps your readers have some opinions on this issue of noisy children in restaurants and how to handle it.

INDIGESTION IN ANAHEIM

DEAR INDIGESTION: Plan One: Ask the waitress, hostess or manager to move you to another table if one is available. Plan Two: At the risk of starting World War III, politely ask one of the parents to please silence the child or children. If that doesn't work, enlist the help of the management. Plan Three: "Make friends" with the noisy offenders, tell them you have a headache, and ask them to please keep the noise down. Plan Four (the one most frequently used): Grin and bear it.

Kansas State topples top-ranked Missouri

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Defense was the key. The Kansas State defense made Missouri coach Norm Stewart almost cry as the Wildcats handed the No. 1-ranked Tigers a 65-58 defeat.

And defense carried Virginia over No. 4 Duke 72-69, ending a nearly seven-year streak of frustration for the Cavaliers against the Blue Devils.

"It's a hard thing not to cry," Stewart said. "We didn't play well, but, good golly, Kansas State played their hearts out. Give them credit."

Kansas State held Missouri 32 points below its season average and snapped the Tigers' 12-game winning streak, the longest in the nation. It was Missouri's lowest point total since January 1986.

Duke saw its six-game winning streak end.

"Virginia played a terrific basketball game. Their defense was outstanding," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, whose Blue Devils shot 34.8 percent off the floor. "They took away our inside game and put a lot of pressure on our outside shooting. For a while, that's all we did — shoot from the outside."

Two other ranked teams lost Thursday night, but both were beaten by higher ranked teams, No. 17 Minnesota falling to No. 12 Illinois 99-72 and No. 25 Indiana tumbling to No. 7 Michigan 79-71.

In other games, it was No. 9 UNLV 116, Pacific 76; No. 14 La Salle 78, Fairfield 51; No. 15 Louisville 95, South Carolina 77; No. 19 UCLA 80, Arizona State 72; No. 21 Xavier of Ohio 83, Marquette 78; No. 22 Arizona 95, Southern California 70, and No. 23 Michigan State 60, Wisconsin 57.

Kansas St. 65, No. 1 Missouri 58
Missouri led by eight points in the second half when Jean Derouillere and Steve Henson triggered a Kansas State 18-2 run.

Henson, 0-for-6 from the floor in the first half, scored six points in the winning spurt, including a 3-pointer that put the Wildcats on top 50-49 with 5:35 remaining. Derouillere had eight points in the run.

Derouillere led K-State with 24 points, while Henson scored all his 18 points in the second half.

Anthony Peeler led Missouri with 18 points.

Virginia 72, No. 4 Duke 69
Bryant Stith had 23 points and 15 rebounds. Duke trailed 33-27 after a first half in which it shot 30 percent from the floor, had nine turnovers, 14 fouls and repeatedly allowed Virginia to shoot layups.

Alaa Abdelnaby led Duke with 16 points.

No. 7 Michigan 79, No. 25 Indiana 71

Loy Vaught led a balanced attack with 19 points.

The Wolverines took the lead for good with a 12-4 run in the second half, then had to hold off a comeback bid.

Eric Anderson and Chris Lawson led Indiana with 20 points each.

No. 9 UNLV 116, Pacific U. 76

UNLV got a season-high 20 points from reserve Barry Young, blew the game open early and routed Pacific. Dell Demps led Pacific with 15 points.

No. 12 Illinois 99, No. 17 Minnesota 72

Marcus Liberty scored a career-high 33 points and Kendall Gill had 26 to lead Illinois. The Illini blew the game open with a 12-2 run to go ahead 56-40 to start the second half.

No. 14 La Salle 78, Fairfield 51

Lionel Simmons had 22 points, 13 rebounds, six blocked shots and three assists and visiting La Salle began the second half with a 23-1 run.

No. 15 Louisville 95, S. Carolina 77

Jerome Harmon scored 19 points to lead six players in double figures as the Cardinals used a 13-1 run in a 2:13 span of the first half.

No. 19 UCLA 80, Arizona St. 72

UCLA was paced by Don MacLean's 23 points, while Darrick Martin and Tracy Murray had 17 apiece. The Bruins had to survive several second-half scares.

No. 21 Xavier, Ohio 83, Marquette 78

Jamal Walker scored 14 of his 22 points in the final five minutes to rally Xavier of Ohio from a four-point deficit.

No. 22 Arizona 95, Southern Cal 70

Arizona got 19 points from Jud Buechler and 18 from Brian Williams while shutting down Southern Cal's leading scorer, Harold Miner.

No. 23 Michigan St. 60, Wisconsin 57

Michigan State held off Wisconsin as Kirk Manns, who scored 19 points, hit a key basket with 18 seconds to go.

Ryan may call it quits if lockout extends into season

ARLINGTON (AP) — Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan says he has grown weary of regular labor battles and may leave baseball if the expected owners lockout of players extends deep into the season.

Ryan made the remarks Thursday night at the Rangers' Mid-Winter Banquet.

"I just hope this doesn't get into a prolonged situation," said Ryan, 43, who has endured five labor-related interruptions in his 23-year career. "If that scenario came up and I was staying home watching my kids' baseball games in May, and then in June we started taking some family vacations that we've never done in the summertime, who knows?"

"My attitude is I'm kind of tired (strife). We don't seem to learn from any of our past experiences," Ryan said. "I am disappointed baseball hasn't made any strides in that area. There's been an opportunity, but we seem to let egos and personalities interfere."

Ryan's contract calls for him to be paid $1.4 million this season and he is only 11 victories short of the 300-victory mark, a milestone he hopes to reach this season. He can retire at any time and the Rangers cannot force him to pitch.

A player on the voluntarily retired list forfeits his contract and cannot join another team.

Ryan says he can handle a short lockout.

Lady Harvesters finish season at home tonight

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

The Pampa Lady Harvesters have a chance to go out in style tonight when they conclude the 1989-90 basketball season against Lubbock Dunbar at 6:30 in McNeely Fieldhouse.

A victory will boost the Lady Harvesters to .500 on the season, tied with Hereford for third place in District 1-4A. Pampa enters the contest with an 8-7 league record, 12-13 overall.

The Lady Harvesters dropped a 61-53 decision to Dumas on Tuesday. However, they stayed in contention for third place with a little help from Lubbock Estacado, which defeated Hereford, 42-34, on Tuesday. It was the last game of the season for the Lady Whitefaces, who finished with a 9-7 mark, 15-14 on the season.

"If we can take care of the business at hand, we'll end up tied for third place, and that's not too bad with the girls we've got coming back next year," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols, who will lose only one senior — Tara Hamby — to graduation.

The Lady Harvesters staged a similar ending last February, compiling a 17-11 season record to finish in a dead heat with Borger for third place. Considering the history of the Pampa-Dunbar series, chances are good that Pampa will nail down a share of the third spot again.

"We've never lost a game to Dunbar in the seven years that I've been here," Nichols said. "But they're a deceiving team. They're better this year than they've been in the past."

Pampa won an eight-point victory over the Lady Panthers when the two met in Lubbock on Jan. 5. Dunbar has since dropped all the way to last place with a 0-15 district record, 1-25 overall.

"I don't think that was one of our better games," said Nichols, referring to the Jan. 5 meeting. "That post (Marcia Johnson) scored 19 points on us last time, so we're going to do our best to shut her down."

Sophomore Nikki Ryan, who is averaging a team-high 18.1 ppg, led all Lady Harvester scorers in that game with 15 points. Ryan is also tops in rebounding (10.4 rpg) and field goal percentage (49%).

Sophomore Bridgett Mathis is second behind Ryan in scoring with an average of 9.6 points, while teammate Tara Hamby is the next-leading rebounder with 6.6 boards a game. Mathis is pulling down 6.2 rpg to check in behind Hamby.

Juniors Christa West and Sheila Reed lead the team from the foul line, shooting 68% and 67%, respectively. Reed has hit 51% (19-of-37) of her three-point shots, 14 percentage points higher than her average from two-point range (37%).

West has a chance to set the school record for assists on Friday. She enters the game with 85 assists on the season, five short of the record set by Diane Wood, who graduated from Pampa High School in May of 1989.

Ewing looking forward to bigger role

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Patrick Ewing is getting a taste of what it's like to be the best in the NBA this season, and that includes a start in Sunday's All-Star game at Miami Arena.

Three times an Eastern Conference reserve, the New York Knicks center is having his best season as a pro and on Sunday will achieve a goal of standing at center court for the opening tap.

"I'm very excited about starting," said Ewing, who's averaging better than 27 points and 10 rebounds a game, both career highs. "It's special because the fans made the selection. I've played before, but to have the fans pick you is even better."

Ewing's emergence as a top scorer is a major reason the Knicks lead the Atlantic Division at the All-Star break. He's led New York in scoring 35 of 48 games, and has 17 games with 30 or more points and five times has topped 40. He had 14 30-point games last season and just six 40-plus games in his career.

"I don't think there's any doubt Patrick is the best center in the game," Knicks coach Stu Jackson said. "He's doing everything for us, night in and night out. ... He leads by example."

Ewing, who is also among the league leaders in blocked shots, attributes his improved offense to several factors. He feels stronger since changing his weightlifting routine. He's shooting free throws better (76 percent, 4 percent over his career norm) and he's doing a better job of passing to the open man when opponents double-team him.

"Patrick's whole game has opened up," Los Angeles Lakers guard Magic Johnson, who will make his 10th All-Star appearance for the Western Conference, said earlier this season. "He's a legitimate MVP candidate. You can tell he wants the ball, and when he gets it, he definitely knows what to do with it."

Ewing, the first pick in the 1985 draft, was voted rookie of the year in 1986 but didn't play in the All-Star game that season because of an injury. The last two years, he scored nine and four points, respectively, and is looking forward to playing a bigger role Sunday as the Knicks' first All-Star starter since Bob McAdoo in 1978.

Joining the 7-foot center as Eastern Conference starters will be Chicago's Michael Jordan, Boston's Larry Bird, Philadelphia's Charles Barkley and Detroit's Isiah Thomas. The Lakers' Johnson, James Worthy and A.C. Green will start for the West along with Houston's Akeem Olajuwon and Utah's John Stockton.

All-Star weekend begins Saturday with the Legends Classic, 3-point shootout and slam-dunk contest. Jordan and Bird are among those in the 3-point competition. New York's Kenny Walker will defend his slam-dunk title against a field that includes Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins and Chicago's Scottie Pippen.

For more information, contact Garett Von Netzer, 2711 Comanche, Amarillo, TX 79109, or call 353-7116 (home) or 376-4488 (work).

Football

David McGrath, a 1987 graduate of Pampa High School, is listed as a 1989 letterman for the University of Texas Longhorns football team.

McGrath plays offensive guard for the Longhorns. He is a junior at Texas majoring in psychology.

McGrath also played on the offensive line for the Harvesters. Bubba Smith, formerly a student and athlete at Wheeler High School, was also listed as a 1989 Texas letterman. Smith graduated from San Antonio Clark High School in May of 1989.

He plays fullback for the Longhorns.
