Bush takes up Lithuania with Shevardnadze

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet concessions on Germany and the Middle East set the stage for President Bush to take up the tense situation in Lithuania with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze today in a bid for further superpower reconciliation.

A summit agenda geared to arms control accords and U.S. help for the sickly Soviet economy also were up for discussion in Shevardnadze's third and final day of talks here.

Despite some tough Soviet actions in the Baltics, Bush on Thursday scheduled his second summit with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev for May 30 to June 3. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president would express his concerns "forcefully and directly" to the Soviet leader.

Shevardnadze was likely to get a preview from Bush in a call at the White House today. He also was meeting with Secretary of State James A. Baker III in an effort to clear away obstacles to a trio of arms control accords and set the stage for the Washington summit.

The outlook brightened Thursday at the State Department as the two sides broke new ground on Germany and the Middle East.

Accepting the principle of unifying East and West Germany, the Soviets edged away from their demand that the merged country be neutralized, U.S. and Soviet officials said.

In another potential breakthrough, the Soviets said they would consider restoring diplomatic relations with Israel and permitting the direct flight of Jewish emigrants to Tel Aviv in return for assurances the refugees would not be settled on the West Bank and in East Jerusalem, a senior U.S. official said.

Still, the American initiative was undertaken without consulting Israel and it is not clear any Israeli government would accept restrictions on Jews living in the country's capital or on the West Bank.

Officials acknowledged that in the weeks remaining until May 30 it will be difficult to forge agreements across the board of U.S.-Soviet relations.

Soviet arms control negotiator Yuri Nazarkin said, "Taking into account (the summit is) in seven weeks, it's impractical, I think, to expect it is going to be signed at the summit. But definitely, all the major issues should be resolved, making the treaty ready for signing" later.

But a group of U.S. and Soviet regional experts, working at the direction of Baker and Shevardnadze, achieved surprising progress on Germany, the Middle East and the wars in Angola and Afghanistan.

The Soviets insisted that the pace of merging East and West Germany is too fast. However, a U.S. official said, "We also got the impression a neutral Germany is not the only answer to security questions there."

The briefings were conducted under rules that prohibited identifying the officials further.

On Angola and Afghanistan, U.S. officials said the Soviets showed an interest in elections as a way of ending wars in those countries between forces backed by the two superpowers.

The Bush-Gorbachev meeting had been expected to be held in late June, but the earlier date announced Thursday shortened the time left to find ways to assist the sluggish Soviet economy.

The Soviets must enact a law guaranteeing a right to emigrate and negotiators must complete a new trade agreement for Moscow to qualify for U.S. trade concessions.

On long-range nuclear missiles, the most optimistic projection is that Baker and Shevardnadze, and negotiators meeting in Geneva, will be able to reach agreement on long-range missiles by May 30 on the key issues and leave the details to be mopped up after the summit.

The outlook is somewhat better for Bush and Gorbachev to be able to approve protocols for monitoring underground nuclear test explosions.

On the third arms control front, the two sides are in tentative agreement to slash their chemical weapons stockpiles to 20 percent of the current U.S. level.

Lefors Mayor Gene Gee, left, administers the oath of office Thursday evening to Travis Howell, the new Lefors city marshal.

Lefors hires new city marshal

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

LEFORS — For the third time in less than five weeks, the Lefors City Council has hired a new city marshal.

Travis Howell, 34, of Skellytown was scheduled to start to work today in Lefors after being sworn into office and officially hired Thursday evening.

The first two city marshals hired by the City Council did not work a day. Both accepted the position and then later problems surfaced, causing the position to remain vacant.

Howell's application was received last week by Lefors, Mayor Gene Gee said.

Howell was not one of the 11 original applicants who turned in applications for the full-time position, the mayor said.

The first person chosen for the position on March 5 was Tim Roberts, who is employed at the Borger Police Department. Roberts verbally accepted the position, Gee said, but on March 10 called Gee and said he could not work for Lefors because he could not sell his house.

Gee then contacted Dean Linder, a former Pampa resident, who was the number two choice for the position. Linder, of Huntsville, met with the council on March 12 and expressed enthusiasm about the position, which he accepted.

However, Gee said Thursday he had not heard from Linder by March 26, so he called him. "Problems developed at that time. Things could not be completed successfully," the mayor said, saying he did not want to elaborate.

The mayor said he contacted Linder again on Monday and informed him his services would not be needed at Lefors.

Howell has been the city marshal at Skellytown for the past nine months. His resignation from that position was effective at midnight Thursday, he said, after he gave a one-week notice.

Following the Thursday meeting, Gee said, "I think it is absolutely fabulous and about time. We are pleased with the new marshal. We are looking forward to serving the people of Lefors with the law enforcement they deserve and need."

Howell's salary will be $1,600 a month with $1,000 of that amount coming from Gray County through an agreement reached between the two governmental entities.

The new city marshal plans to move his family, including wife, Kathy, and children Mindy, 10, and Jonathan, 7, to Lefors.

Howell was raised in Borger. Before becoming a certified law enforcement officer last May, he was an owner/operator of a semi-tractor trailer for eight years.

While serving as city marshal at Skellytown, he was also a driver for a hydro-carbon service out of Dumas.

"I believe in what you go to school for — to protect and to serve," Howell said. "Be assured I will definitely do my job."

He further stated that he does not believe in "selective law enforcement" and will not tolerate people throwing beer bottles or beer cans.

Councilman Ron Turpen made the motion, seconded by Wendell Akins to hire Howell. The vote was unanimous — 3-0 — with Turpen, Akins and Ben White voting for the motion. Councilmen Danny Gilbert and Derl Boyd were absent from the meeting.

Adopt-A-Park Day scheduled Saturday

The Pampa Parks and Recreation Department and Clean Pampa Inc. will join Saturday morning in sponsoring the third annual Adopt-A-Park Day.

Participants in the Adopt-A-Park program are invited to turn out from 9 a.m. to noon to clean up the parks they have "adopted" in the volunteer project to involve more citizens in the care of city parks lands.

PARD Director Reed Kirkpatrick and Clean Pampa Executive Coordinator Janice Miller will be visiting the parks to encourage and thank the individuals, businesses, organizations, industries and church groups that are participating in the program.

Participants will be treated to coffee and doughnuts during the visits by Kirkpatrick and Miller.

The Adopt-A-Park program "has been such a success with our 100 percent participation rate, that we really want to encourage them to 'keep on keeping on,'" Kirkpatrick said, expressing his appreciation for those participating in the community program.

Adopt-A-Park Day is a day of recognition for the volunteers' efforts, he said.

In addition to the annual observance, PARD and Clean Pampa also have a social for the participants, such as a picnic in one of the parks; a reception sponsored by Clean Pampa; and a special Swim Day at M.K. Brown Swimming Pool to honor the Adopt-A-Park participants, Kirkpatrick said.

In other news, Kirkpatrick announced that the city had received a $10,000 donation from the McCarley Foundation to be used toward development of Recreation Park east of the city.

Kirkpatrick said the money will probably be used to hire an engineering firm to prepare development plans for projects at the park. The city has received a state grant for developments at the park, which will include new softball fields, renovation of a lake, and picnic and camping facilities.

Kirkpatrick said the engineering firm will be needed to plan designs for the four-plex softball field and the renovation of the former Pampa Lake area.

"There's a lot of high-tech work that goes into designing a four-plex," he said.

This includes planning the seating to account for the position of the sun to keep the sunlight out of the eyes of as many spectators as possible, he said. There is also the electrical work involved with the scoreboard, lighting, concession stand area and similar items. In addition, the land has to be graded for playing purposes and water runoff, Kirkpatrick explained.

Studies also have to be done for the dredging of the lake bottom and the construction of the dam for the six-acre surface lake, Kirkpatrick said.

Kirkpatrick said the city appreciates the donation from the McCarley Foundation.

"It will be a real tribute to the McCarleys ... The people of Pampa will be enjoying their donation to the development of the park for many years to come," he said.

Hackler: Morale, personnel problems could lead to fire department shake-up

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa City Manager Glen Hackler acknowledged this morning that long-term morale and personnel problems in the Pampa Fire Department could result in a personnel shake-up.

While declining to discuss individual situations, Hackler said, "There have been difficulties ... and I have visited at length with Chief (Robert) Young on the best solutions to these."

He said none of the problems involve the handling of emergencies, but concern internal workings in that department.

"There are concerns among the firefighters over the method of computing their pay and there is some longstanding internal strife we're working to resolve," Hackler said. "It has always been, and will continue to be, my intention to protect the interests of the city and do what's fair."

He said he and Young were in the process of evaluating the best way to resolve current problems. Young was out of town today and unavailable for comment.

Hackler said he was uncertain if Pampa firefighters were still considering going to voters with an attempt to either unionize or bring Civil Service or a fire association to the city, a move which started in January of this year.

"A fire department can unionize or go Civil Service with a vote of the people," Hackler said, "but I've been emphatic about not recognizing any organized attempt which would circumvent the interests of this community. I don't ever fight what would be put before the electorate, but I would make public my concerns about unionizing and collectively bargaining with a government entity."

Sources near the fire department said discussion of forming an association is still being considered, though not as strongly as when first presented informally to firefighters. Hackler said some of the problems have resulted from questions of whether in-laws and close friends who both worked for the department got preferential treatment from one another.

"Because of the breadth of the city's personnel policy, it may not be consistent with the City Charter in such issues," Hackler said, "in which case the City Charter would prevail."

The city personnel policy forbids immediate family, including in-laws, from supervising or being supervised, directly or indirectly, by relatives. However, Hackler said nepotism is defined by the charter as only including a city employee related to a City Commission member or the city manager.

Hackler said conflicting interpretations over the two policies may have resulted in the city sending mixed messages over what practices and policies were acceptable by different city administrations.

"We have an extremely competent group of firefighters and captains and a chief that has extensive experience in handling fire scenes," Hackler said. "That's not the issue. While 'serious' is a relative term, (the morale) situation is serious enough to need to be addressed. This is not something that developed overnight. Chief Young and I are both interested in resolving the situation."

Judge denies recreationalist group intervenor status in river dispute

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

An individual lawsuit against landowners along the Canadian River in Hutchinson County was filed today following a Thursday decision by a judge which denied a Panhandle group the right to intervene in a lawsuit.

The group, Texas Panhandle Recreationalist Association, had sought intervenors' status in the battle for the land along the Canadian River in Hutchinson and Roberts County.

At one point, in November, District Judge John T. Forbis of the 100th Judicial District had granted the TPRA the intervenors' status. However, he later took it away and on Thursday ruled the TPRA's interests were already represented by the state attorney general.

The lawsuit was filed in July in Roberts County by landowners, who have land adjacent to the river, against the state of Texas. The landowners claim they have right to the land to the water's edge, and many have put up fences in areas that used to be home to the flowing Canadian River.

In his Thursday order, Forbis wrote, "Under existing law, intervenors have no standing to participate in the trial of the issues raised by the pleadings of plaintiffs and defendant as their recreational use is an exercise of rights held by them in common with others of the general public, and those interests are represented by the Attorney General of Texas."

Contacted by telephone this morning, Robert Templeton, an Amarillo attorney representing TPRA said, "It looks like we'll try our suit now in Hutchinson County where it belongs."

Templeton said a lawsuit was filed today in Hutchinson County on behalf of Brant Ingram, a Frith resident, against the landowners along the river in Hutchinson County, who are plaintiffs to the lawsuit filed in July.

"There will be more parties to file suit later," Templeton said. "We may also file suit in Roberts County against those individual landowners. When we do, we'll be moving for a change of venue."

In the lawsuit filed by the landowners against the state in Roberts County, the state has requested a change of venue, Templeton said. "The judge hasn't acted on that. It ought to be moved. It's (Roberts County) too small a county and everybody has their positions locked in on it. It ought to be in a larger town like Pampa or Borger."

The attorneys representing the landowners told an Amarillo newspaper that they agreed with the

Lemons given 30-year sentence after conviction in S&L fraud case

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A record 30-year sentence given to a former savings and loan executive convicted of fraud won applause from regulators, who said it showed authorities were dead serious about cracking down on thrift fraud.

The sentence for Woody F. Lemons, former chairman of Vernon Savings & Loan, was the stiffest ever given to a thrift executive in a fraud case, regulators said. U.S. District Judge Robert B. Maloney said it was well deserved.

Lemons was "a thief in every sense of the word," the judge said. The sentence was praised by L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Resolution Trust Corp., which is overseeing the thrift industry bailout.

"I think it says these kinds of crimes are very serious," Seidman said. "They are very harmful to the people of the United States and they are going to be punished severely."

Lemons was convicted in December on 13 charges — including misapplication of funds, conspiracy and bank fraud — for soliciting a $9,000 kickback from a loan broker in January 1986 and receiving $212,000 from the broker in April 1986.

Seidman had written Maloney urging him to "send a message to the banking and thrift community and to other who would commit such egregious acts as did Mr. Lemons."

U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburg called the sentence "fair and just punishment for one whose criminal misconduct resulted in a multimillion dollar fraud in the Texas savings and loan industry."

Vernon S&L was shut down in 1987 as part of a then-record $1.3 billion federal bailout, and has been cited as an example of some of the worst abuses in the savings and loan industry.

Six other Vernon officials, a consultant and two borrowers have pleaded guilty to various crimes.

When regulators seized Vernon, they found it owned 17th century castle doors and expensive art objects, including a Baccarat eagle and a silver-studded saddle. The thrift also owned a yacht in Washington, D.C. Prosecutors said Lemons spent some of his money on a West Coast home and on travel. Maloney levied no fine against Lemons, but he still faces an April 19 hearing on restitution. The government is seeking as much as $18 million in repayment.

The judge said he had received more than 100 letters on Lemons' behalf praising his church and community activities, but he wasn't persuaded.

"Your friends are wrong," Maloney said. "You are not a religious man. ... Even though you are present (in church), you are not listening."

"You have no real moral values," the judge said. "If you had the opportunity, you would (steal) again. You are a thief in every sense of the word."

Elated government attorneys would say little about the sentence, but were heard shouting "hot dog" as they disappeared into their offices.

"They hit a home run," said defense attorney Michael Gibson, who promised to appeal the sentence.

Gibson accused the government of having "another agenda" in prosecuting Lemons.

"He's going to be the trophy that the federal agencies bag," Gibson told Maloney. Later the attorney predicted, "You will see Mr. Lemons and the sentence used to enhance (the agencies') position" in Congress.

The sentencing of Lemons sets the stage for an expected indictment of another former Vernon chairman, Don R. Dixon, who is painted by government officials as the main culprit behind the abuses at the thrift.

Dixon has been notified he is the target of a federal investigation, according to his attorney. He also is the lead defendant in a $540 million federal fraud lawsuit filed in 1987.

Gibson would not say if prosecutors had sought Lemons' cooperation against Dixon, but Dixon's attorney, William M. Ravkind, said, "Anybody facing 30 years would turn in their mother."

Six other Vernon officials have pleaded guilty to various crimes including former President Patrick G. King, who was sentenced by Maloney to five years in jail and fined $55,000.

A consultant and two Vernon borrowers also have pleaded guilty in thrift-connected cases.

Bentsen: Problems threaten integrity of census in Texas

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says problems with the 1990 census across south Texas threaten the integrity of the count.

"I must deplore the way the census is being administered in Texas," Bentsen told Census Bureau Director Barbara Bryant in a letter Thursday.

Bentsen said "gross mailing errors" threaten the participation of 100,000 households in South Texas and called the problem "beyond the pale." Another problem is a shortage of Spanish-language forms, he said.

Bentsen said that instead of correcting its mistakes, the Census Bureau has responded to complaints with excuses and explanations.

"This is particularly true in El Paso, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and South Texas. In these areas, complaints and problems about which, if not cured immediately, threaten the integrity of the census in Texas," Bentsen said.

Census Bureau spokeswoman Rhea Farberman said Bentsen's concerns were being addressed. She said the agency was more than doubling the number of toll-free phone lines for Spanish-speakers, would hand-deliver forms that the Post Office could not mail, and would follow up with personal visits to households that did not answer the Census.

"We're going to continue in a very dogmatic fashion, to follow up and follow up, through June to make sure we get everyone," Ms. Farberman said.

"We share the senator's concern that everyone be counted and we're working to make sure that happens. The census is far from over and a lot of field work is still to be done," she said. "It's really early in the ball game just yet."

Population estimates from the decennial headcount are used to decide how millions of dollars in federal funds are spent on everything from education to highways, as well as a state's representation in the U.S. House of Representatives.

The Texas Comptroller's Office estimates an undercount in 1980 cost Texas $300 million in federal money during the past decade, while a similar undercount this year could cost the state $500 million in the 1990s and a seat in the House, according to spokesman John Bender.

According to Bentsen, as many as 100,000 census forms in San Antonio and South Texas cannot be delivered because of inaccurate mailing information apparently caused by "gross printing errors," Bentsen said.

Citizens from the Rio Grande Valley to El Paso, meanwhile, are complaining about a shortage of Spanish-language forms, Bentsen said. Texans trying to call toll-free numbers repeatedly encounter busy signals and some say Census workers have been unwilling or unable to assist them.

Bender said the Comptroller's Office has been getting similar reports.

Under the 1990 census, Texas stands to add three seats to its 27-member House delegation in Congress. An accurate count could possibly bring the delegation's total to 31, however, Bender said.

Bender said reports of problems with the census boost Comptroller Bob Bullock's call for a statistical adjustment of the census.

"We will continue gathering information about these problems, which we believe adds weight to Comptroller Bullock's call to enter the adjustment lawsuit filed by the City of New York," Bender said.

The lawsuit, also filed by New York state, California, Los Angeles, Houston, Chicago and Dade County, Fla., resulted in an agreement that the government would consider an adjustment and would publish criteria for deciding whether to adjust the figures.

Some of those involved in the lawsuit say they're dissatisfied with those guidelines, published earlier this year, along with several Texas congressmen and Bullock.

A decision on whether there will be an adjustment is to be made by July 15, 1991 — 15 months after the April 1 official count.

Mattox denies reports about his drug use

By The Associated Press

Allegations of drug use have been leveled against Attorney General Jim Mattox for the first time in the gubernatorial campaign, with less than a week before the primary runoff election.

Mattox, who has accused his Democratic runoff opponent Ann Richards of smoking marijuana in the 1970s, vigorously denied reports today in Dallas and Houston newspapers that he did the same.

Houston lawyer Jim Sharp and former Dallas police officer Edward H. Lowe signed affidavits that they saw Mattox smoke marijuana on separate occasions in the 1970s.

"I've never used any marijuana or dangerous drugs, period," Mattox said about the accusations, which Sharp and Lowe made in the Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning News.

The drug use issue was first presented by a questioner at a debate before the March 13 primary.

Mattox and former Gov. Mark White denied ever using illegal drugs, but Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, called the question irrelevant and said answering it would discourage people from seeking treatment for alcoholism and drug abuse.

Richards, who suffers from alcoholism, later said she has not had an alcoholic drink or a mood-altering chemical since leaving an alcohol recovery program in 1980.

The issue has dominated the Democratic campaign, particularly since the primary vaulted Mattox and Richards into the April 10 runoff. Mattox has said a former drug user could not effectively lead the state's efforts to end illegal drug use.

Richards has not accused Mattox of drug use.

Mattox visits with the press during his visit Thursday in Lubbock.

Mattox scheduled a news conference in Austin today and an appearance in Dallas. Richards planned stops in several northeast Texas cities.

Earlier this week, Mattox said he had affidavits signed by people who saw Richards use drugs in the 1970s. But he has refused to release the documents, citing the confidentiality of the people who made the allegations.

On Thursday, The Houston Post quoted a woman it didn't identify as saying she had seen Richards in a restroom with other women who appeared to be smoking marijuana at an Austin convention in 1979.

"When I walked in (Richards) put her hand behind her and held it. The girl on the end, who I did not know, had a roach or a joint that had been smoked down in her hand," the woman told The Post.

The Dallas Morning News, in today's editions, said the same woman confirmed her allegation in a polygraph examination paid for by the paper.

"I have no idea what they're talking about," Richards said of the 1979 incident.

Lowe said he saw Mattox smoke marijuana in an Dallas apartment during an undercover investigation. At the time of the incident, in the early 1970s, Mattox was a Dallas lawyer.

Lowe, then a vice officer, said he did not arrest Mattox or others in the room because his assignment was to confirm a tip about a prostitution ring.

Mattox responded that he had enemies in the Dallas police at the time and "if anybody from the Dallas narcotics vice squad could have busted Jim Mattox, they would have taken me down in a minute."

Sharp said Mattox and he shared a marijuana cigarette in 1974 while in a car after the Democratic state convention in Austin.

"The seating arrangement was such that he and I were passing it between us," Sharp said.

"I've never been in a car where there has ever been any marijuana smoked," Mattox said. "By me or anybody else, period."

Clements says he could support $450 million school finance plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he could support a $450 million school finance reform measure — $150 million more than his previous limit — if lawmakers can shift that much from elsewhere in the state budget.

"Sure, why not?" Clements said Thursday. "If we can move some money around, I don't have any objection to that at all, because I am convinced that some of the agencies were, in fact, overfunded."

The governor in the past has said his no-new-taxes stand on school finance meant new spending on schools must be held at about $300 million.

A plan to carve $269.5 million from other budget areas has been laid out by Clements.

He said that temporarily reducing the state's contribution to the Teacher Retirement System to raise up to $172 million also is an option, despite teachers' opposition.

"It doesn't hurt the retirement system or the benefits in any way, shape or form," Clements said.

In the first week of a second special session school finance reform, the House recessed until Monday, when it will debate a bill to send $450 million more in state money to schools in 1990-91.

Lawmakers are working to meet a May 1 deadline for reform set by the Texas Supreme Court, which found unconstitutional disparities in the funding available to property-rich and -poor school districts.

The $13.5 billion-a-year system relies on a combination of local property taxes, state aid and some federal money.

If the House passes a school finance bill, it can be sent to a conference committee to work out differences with a $1.2 billion Senate plan.

Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, met with lawmakers Thursday to try to win votes for the House measure and to work on an alternate plan to be offered if the legislation fails.

Critics of the $450 million bill include members of the Mexican American Legislative Caucus who want the state to spend more money and Republicans who say the bill's price tag is too high.

One key lawmaker said any state tax increase to fund school finance reform likely will be linked to local property tax relief for school districts.

"I personally don't think a tax increase is coming that's not coupled with either direct property tax relief or, at the very least, the mitigation of these spiraling rates" for school districts, said Rep. Ric Williamson, vice chairman of the House's budget-writing Appropriations Committee.

Six Pampa teachers attend aviation science conference

Six Pampa Independent School District teachers attended the 23rd Annual National Congress on Aviation and Space Education recently.

The following teachers participated in the March 21-24 meeting at Reno, Nev.: Wendell Palmer and Margaret Williams, both of Pampa Middle School; Connie Holland, a first-grade teacher at Austin; Joyce Swope, a third-grade teacher at Austin; Marci Welborn, a fourth-grade teacher at Austin; and Jeanne Minton, a third-grade teacher at Wilson.

The Pampa instructors were six of the 1,200 who attended the conference.

Program highlights featured Air Force Lt. Gen. Donald J. Kutyna, commander of the Air Force Space Command.

The general was selected for promotion to a four-star rank effective the first of this month when he became Commander in Chief of the North American Aerospace Defense Command and Commander in Chief of the U.S. Space Command.

Other speakers included Scott Carpenter, one of the original seven Mercury astronauts; Moya Olsen Lear, president of the Reno-based Lear Jet Inc.; and Ted Carlson from the Lockheed Space Division. Carlson presented a discussion on the Hubble space telescope scheduled for launch soon.

The National Congress promotes an understanding of aerospace topics throughout the nation and motivates participants to inform the public about the impact of aviation and space flight on society.

This year's National Congress was co-sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Federal Aviation Administration and the Civil Air Patrol.

The six Pampa teachers were able to go to the Congress via a Civil Air Patrol airlift on a C-130 airplane.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

No more Comrade Nice Guy, Gorby?

No more Comrade Nice Guy. Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, using the dictatorial powers just granted him, has ordered increased KGB action against Lithuania, and demanded that Lithuanians turn in their guns to "temporary" police custody. He said the "confiscation" of those weapons not turned in would be ensured by the KGB.

Gorbachev's action is an illegal imposition on a sovereign nation. In February the Lithuanian people held their first free election in 50 years. Last month Lithuania's legitimate, elected government re-asserted the country's independence. Therefore, Gorbachev should immediately rescind his action, stop buzzing Lithuanian rooftops with MiGs and recognize Lithuania's independence.

"We are absolutely appalled" at Gorbachev's action, said Angela K. Nelsas, who chairs the Lithuanian-American Community, National Council of the USA, Inc. "We would like our government in Washington to respond in a stronger statement of support for Lithuania's democracy, and for its own determination," said the Fullerton, Calif., resident. "We believe that Gorbachev is [using] strangulation methods on Lithuania."

The U.S. government has never recognized the illegal 1940 annexation of Lithuania by the Soviet Union, carried out under the 1939 Soviet-Nazi Pact. Late last month, finally, the Bush administration communicated its displeasure with Gorbachev's threats to Lithuania. It should ratchet up its protests as Gorbachev has ratcheted up his intimidation. And it should remind Gorbachev that even he has denounced the Soviet-Nazi Pact, the pretext of past Soviet control.

At least wise heads are in charge in independent Lithuania. Said Premier Kazimira Prunskiene of disagreements with Gorbachev: "All these questions should be resolved by negotiations. We are not getting too worried about this. We hope common sense will prevail."

Americans might recognize a parallel between Gorbachev's gun confiscation order and our own history. In 1775 the British, ruled by the Gorbachev of the day, King George III, marched on Concord, Mass., to confiscate the American citizens' guns. On their way there, the Minutemen formed on Lexington's green. When the British soldiers arrived, the shot heard 'round the world was fired, and the struggle for our nation's independence began. No wonder so many Americans still vehemently oppose gun control.

Lithuanians want their own independence achieved in peace. Unless he wants to become "the Butcher of Lithuania," Gorbachev should also act peacefully.

"There's $3 billion in aid for Israel, $900 million for Hungary and Poland, $500 million for Panama, $300 million for Nicaragua. Shall I go on?"

Give them housing vouchers

Several thousand Americans came to Washington last winter for a march to "call attention" to the plight of the homeless. As is often the case with such events, most of the participants had good intentions, but knew little about the problem they were addressing, except that it is bad, sort of like a toothache.

The march was titled "Housing NOW!" Its purpose was to advocate building more government-subsidized housing. It's not surprising that construction companies and unions — who would be handsomely rewarded if the marchers got their way — were major supporters of the march.

But the homeless problem is not primarily a housing problem. An estimated one-third of the homeless are mentally ill, and another one-third (as many as 80 percent in some cities, including New York and Philadelphia) are alcoholics or drug abusers. These people need treatment, not housing projects.

How about the minority of homeless who are the victims of personal hard times? Is "housing now" the answer? Not if you really want to help.

Public housing is expensive to build and costly to maintain — and poorly maintained at that. It seg-regates low-income families from the rest of society, and surrounds them with crime and drug abuse.

The fact that housing projects are run by government worsens these problems. No one would object if a private landlord evicted a violent drug-abuser living in his building. But when Housing Secretary Jack Kemp announced that drug-abusers would be thrown out of public housing projects, he was met with a lawsuit from the American Civil Liberties Union.

Besides, even now there is no shortage of housing units — there is more than enough privately owned housing to accommodate all the homeless.

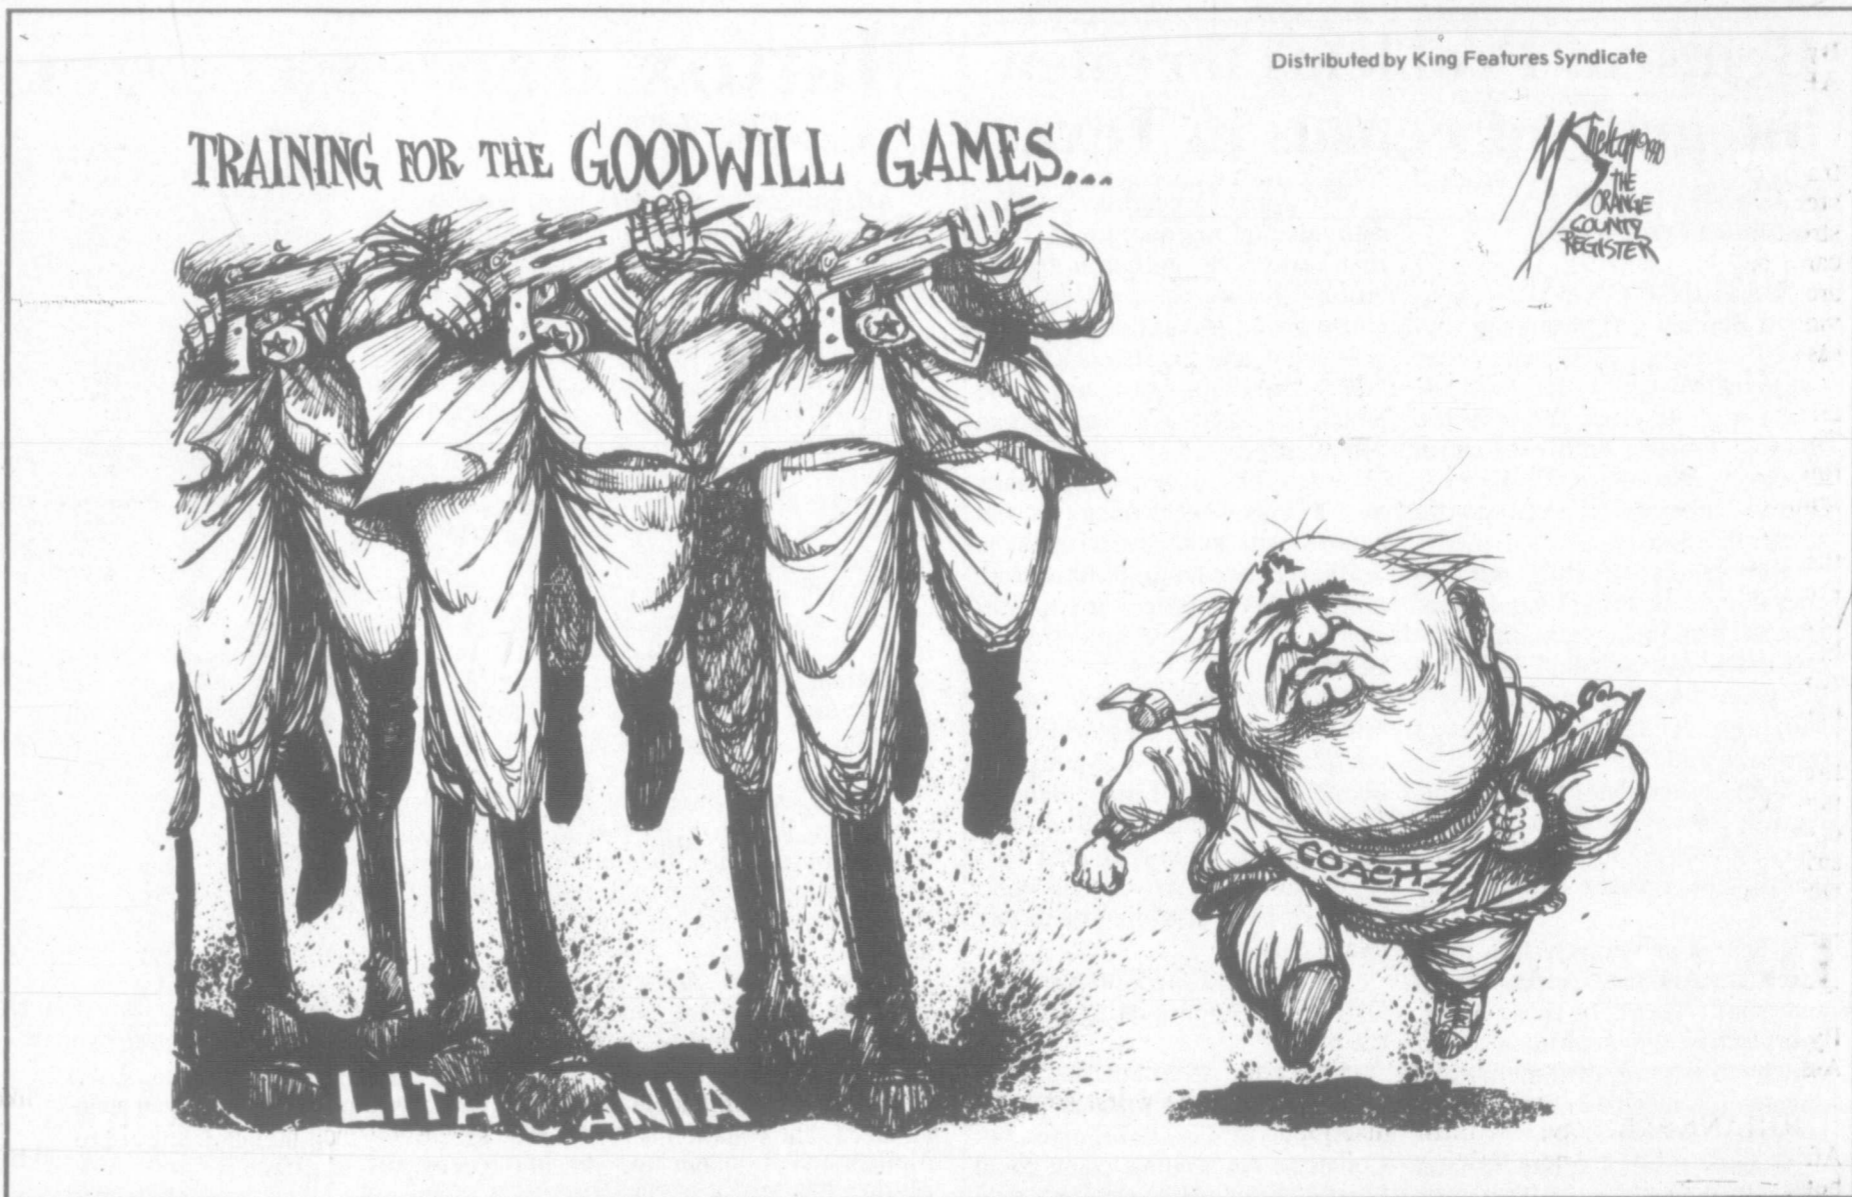

The problem is: Some of the units are too expensive for the poorest Americans to afford.

The government has only limited funds at its disposal, so it should use them to solve this problem in the most efficient way possible. Consider this: For $1 million, the government could build 20 new housing units at $50,000 each (a low estimate for most major cities). For the same money, the government could give more than 400 families a year's supply of vouchers worth $200 a month toward their rent so they could afford to buy into available housing.

If $200 isn't enough — it may not be in some of the larger cities — the amount could be doubled and 200 families could receive $400 a month out of the same $1 million. Which makes more sense — helping 20 families, or hundreds? Putting families in crime-infested public housing projects, or letting them choose the housing that best fits their needs?

It's ironic that liberals, who claim to be champions of the downtrodden, oppose vouchers, which are not only economical, but would also give low-income Americans the power to make their own decisions about where to live.

He owes his fame to Chipper

A dog frequently can diagnose an infection before any doctor can. It involves the dog's hypersensitive sense of smell, of course.

I learned about how dogs can do that — also how pets can help speed up the healing process — from an orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Jean Heath.

Dr. Heath was in the Navy in 1957, Chief of Orthopedic Surgery at Naval Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.

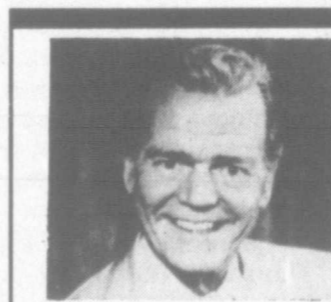

His little dog, Chipper, though an entirely gentle and loveable schnauzer, when left alone at home tended rudely to rearrange the apartment.

Dr. Heath sought and got permission for Chipper to come with him each day to the rehab ward of the hospital.

For the patients — accident victims, stroke patients, amputees — Chipper became the most popular guest of Ward P.

Chipper would patrol the department. He especially enjoyed participating with amputee patients in their group exercises and therapeutic games. He would dash from patient to patient, giving each a tender lick, dropping his tennis ball for them to throw.

One November day a young physical therapy technician arrived from Newfoundland, for treatment of a recurrent shoulder dislocation. During his treatment and subsequently, the patient — Bill — became attached to Chipper, and vice versa. They became inseparable.

Bill always took Chipper to the outdoor softball games. With participants in wheelchairs, in casts, on crutches, the games became hilarious with Bill leading the laughter and Chipper chasing every loose ball.

Bill would expand on these experiences during long evenings in the lounge, embellishing with imaginative fiction the antics of his friend Chipper.

And smiles through pain became laughter, and laughter begat therapy.

Chipper and Bill were soon making rounds,

Chipper to sniff out any unsuspected infection under a cast or bandage — and Bill to keep the patients entertained with his funny yarns about Chipper's real and imagined adventures.

Bill, performing for the rehab patients, was honing a natural talent as a storyteller. With exceptional insight, he seemed to anticipate the thoughts and motivations of each patient. His genuine concern for those about him made him ever more determined to reteach each to "enjoy" again. And for parents and weary staff the discomforts were less.

Dr. Heath and Chipper remained in the Navy. Bill, the technician, enrolled in Temple University. And even there, he had continued to practice the palliative art which he had learned by helping with the mental healing of paraplegics. He'd helped the toughest audience in the world to laugh at infirmity; any audience thereafter should be easy. And so it was.

Dr. Heath continued to travel duty station to duty station, always with his "consultant," Chipper, at his side.

And Bill, building on the talent he refined embellishing dog stories to entertain the hurt and the halt — he went on to become Bill Cosby.

Peddling neo-manifest destinationism

By BEN WATTENBERG

The argument now concerns The American Purpose. If it can be defined, perhaps we can do something about it.

It can. We can. What? Consider neo-manifest destinationism.

Until recently, our national purpose was imposed: Keep the free world free. As communism collapsed, options expanded. Theories bloom.

The Declinists said America would no longer be "Number One" because we were "over-stretched" militarily. Their remedy: Cut the defense budget, manage our decline gracefully. We will cut defense. The Declinists still want us to decline ourselves. They don't like being Number One.

Pat Buchanan bangs the lead tambourine for The Isolationists, a conservative rap group. His recent contribution, in The National Interest magazine, is "America First — and Second, and Third."

Buchanan says our foreign policy should only be in our national interest. How original. To Buchanan that means we should "come home" and stop peddling that silly democracy stuff. But doesn't the spread of democracy enhance our national interest?

His title is two-thirds accurate. The Buchananists would make it more likely that America would be second or third.

Charles Krauthammer and Joseph Nye, coming from different directions, make more sense. Both know that America will remain Number One. Both believe ideology will play a lesser role. Both know we must remain a big time global actor. But toward what end?

Krauthammer sees a "unipolar" world. America would coalesce with its democratic industrial allies, establishing stability and "binding political connections." He says this means "the conscious depreciation not only of American sovereignty, but of the notion of sovereignty generally." Gulp.

Nye's book, Bound to Lead, solidly rebuts the Declinists. America should aim at "managing transnational interdependence" to form a free, peaceful, prosperous, free-trading global community. You get to MTI through the global organizational alphabet soup: GATT, IMF, NPT, IEA, IAEA.

All right. But no one is going for the gold. And so we come to neo-manifest destinationism.

We ought to wage democracy — remembering that the mansion of the democracy has many rooms. Democracy American-style, a way of life as well as a political system, is not the same as, say, the pinched stultification of Swedish-style democracy. And in Eastern Europe today, it's said the newly free countries should go Swedish.

American taxpayers didn't spend trillions to create more Swedens. Not long ago we were troubled by the Swedish — read European — model. It was seen as stagnant, decadent and even "creeping socialism." Since then, they, and we, have gotten better.

If the world evolves toward European-style social democracy, or some democratic hybrid, or some unipolar transnationalism, so be it. We and our allies will have won a free world.

But that result is only acceptable. As the last superpower, we ought to try to shape evolution. Americans have always felt they had something special to offer. This sense of mission was once called Manifest Destiny. At times it went overboard, into distant geographic expansion and wild-eyed cultural imperialism. We know now we can't clone the world American-style.

But American democracy has distinctive features. Most Americans believe most of them are beneficial. Individualism, pluralism, opportunity, dynamism and the absence of a rigid class structure come to mind.

As democracy surges, different features of many free systems will be pushed toward synthesis. There will be a contest for the culture.

We ought not be passive players. We have the most, and best arrows in our quiver. These include our global entertainment monopoly, immigration, the spreading English language, the prime tourist destination, the best universities, the most powerful and far-flung military, an opportunity society and a worldwide information operation.

Without going sky-high on foreign aid, or neglecting the home front, or leaning too much on government, or becoming messianic — how can we, in our self-interest, go about boosting the writ of the American vision? That's for later words.

In the meantime, remember this about American Purpose: A unipolar world is fine, if America is the uni.

Clean air bill heading to House floor

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A far-reaching clean air bill goes to the House floor after clearing a committee by a lopsided 42-1 vote, moving Congress a step closer to enacting tougher air pollution controls.

The Energy and Commerce Committee approved the complex and costly clean air package late Thursday after resolving the thorny issue of helping Midwest utilities cope with tougher acid rain controls.

The acid rain compromise, approved 39-4, aims to help Midwest states pay for cleaning up pollution caused by utility plants by providing a "pollution allowance" system and a one-year extension for initial compliance in some cases.

Critics of the measure have said it would cause electric rates to jump. Legislation passed by the Senate earlier this week includes a similar provision.

Pleas from some Midwest congressmen for a nationwide energy fee or tax were rejected.

The compromise "allows us to recoup some costs," said Rep. Michael Oxley, R-Ohio, although indicating he would like to have seen more aid for the region. "This is a tough, tough bill for my part of the country and we're going to feel it for a long time." "A lot of blood was spilled in these debates," said Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., who vigorously opposed proposals such as a tax or energy fee to help the Midwest.

Only Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., voted against the House measure.

Like the Senate bill approved 89-11 on Tuesday, the House legislation calls for sweeping emission controls on automobiles and industry, including a requirement that electric utilities cut annual sulfur dioxide emissions by 10 million tons, or roughly in half.

Sulfur dioxide, especially from Midwest electric power plants that use high sulfur coal, is the source of the acid rain that has caused problems with lakes and streams in much of the Northeast and mid-Atlantic states.

The Bush administration has estimated the Senate legislation would cost the economy $21.5 billion a year when all provisions go into effect.

The House bill has been said to be slightly cheaper. Environmentalists say much of that cost will be offset by lower health costs.

House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., has indicated he wants to begin floor action on the clean air bill by early May. The House and Senate versions then would have to be worked out in a conference committee.

Several congressmen have indicated they intend to pursue additional amendments on the House floor. But congressional sources suggested Thursday that it is unlikely that major changes will be made in light of the one-sided committee vote.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the panel chairman, said the legislation was "significantly better" in protecting the environment than the Senate version.

Dingell's committee tackled the most controversial aspects of the legislation — including the acid rain issue — behind closed doors. Private committee negotiations last week produced compromises on controlling urban smog and releasing toxic industrial chemicals.

More than 150 lobbyists, representing everything from environmental groups to oil and chemical companies, gathered outside the closed committee hearing room Wednesday and Thursday as committee members and their staffs worked out the acid rain agreement.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., for years a leading advocate in Congress for tougher air pollution controls, noted it had been eight years since the full committee tackled clean air legislation.

"This legislation is long overdue," agreed Rep. Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn. "It's a real victory for our lakes, lungs and resources."

Congress not giving much attention to bus strike

By KAREN BALL
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor's traditional allies in Congress are steering clear of the Greyhound strike because bus passengers don't carry political clout and lawmakers are skittish about taking sides in the violent dispute, legislators and others say.

"Members of Congress fly in airplanes — they don't ride buses. These passengers tend to be poor folks who are not active politically," said Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y.

Democrats who sometimes take the lead on labor issues also said President Bush's hands-off approach to such disputes — he vetoed a union-backed plan to help settle the Eastern Airlines strike — has inhibited lawmakers from jumping into the fray.

Congress historically has sat on the sidelines for months before injecting itself in labor-management disputes, and neither Greyhound nor striking drivers who walked out five weeks ago has asked Congress to intervene. Still, there has been no flurry of floor speeches on the strike, which has been marked by shootings and bomb threats and has choked transportation in small communities around the country. One House member's call for hearings has gone unheeded.

Several lawmakers have written to Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner asking for help. Last year, Mrs. Dole intervened in the Pittston coal strike by appointing a "supermediator" who helped reach a settlement for Appalachian miners.

Dole believes her involvement in the Greyhound walkout would be premature because federal mediators are working on the matter, said spokeswoman Dale Tate. Greyhound's 6,300 drivers and about 3,000 of its office and maintenance workers walked out March 2 over wages and job security. The company, which operates the only nationwide bus system, has been running on a reduced schedule since then, using replacements and union members who cross picket lines.

Officials of both Greyhound and the striking Amalgamated Transit Union say Congress might be paying closer attention if middle- or high-income Americans used buses.

"If this were happening to airplanes, it would be in every politician's speech, in every headline," said Greyhound Chairman Fred G. Currey.

Added union spokesman Jeffrey Nelson: "These people aren't spending their spare time writing letters to the editor; they're not making long distance phone calls to Congress demanding action."

Nelson said that although the strike isn't on the top of Congress' agenda, lawmakers helped persuade the director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, Bernard E. DeLury, to personally involve himself in negotiations.

De Klerk, Mandela set new date for peace talks

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Savage new fighting between black factions broke out today in Natal, leaving at least 10 people dead despite an accord by President F.W. de Klerk and Nelson Mandela to resume peace talks.

The new violence shattered a two-day lull and came after de Klerk and Mandela agreed in Cape Town Thursday to talks on ending white-minority rule and sharing power with South Africa's 28 million disenfranchised blacks.

Both leaders said a date for new talks would be announced shortly.

They hailed the agreement as a breakthrough and called for an end to the black factional fighting that has left hundreds dead in recent weeks. The political violence is believed to be the worst since the mid-1980s.

The Citizen newspaper reported today that de Klerk and Mandela agreed to start formal talks April 25 on removing obstacles to full-scale negotiations. Government officials could not be reached for comment.

The ANC had pulled out of such talks planned for April 11 to protest police firing on black demonstrators March 25, killing nine. The ANC is calling for an end to the state of emergency and other measures before it agrees to full-scale talks.

De Klerk also said Thursday he objected to the ANC pressuring tribal homeland leaders not to meet with the government.

Mandela said "nothing could be further from the truth" than charges of ANC intimidation.

In addition to Mandela, de Klerk had been scheduled to meet with six homeland leaders, but four did not show up. De Klerk said some of the leaders were pressured not to come and "that choice was not voluntary in any sense of the word."

Mandela and other ANC leaders have called for unity among all black political factions in order to present a solid front.

But the ANC does not recognize the homeland governments. It says the division of black South Africans into 10 tribal areas deprives blacks of citizenship, land ownership and work rights, leaving most of the country for whites.

De Klerk said late Thursday the two leaders discussed the fighting "frankly and clearly. ... I had the impression that there is a general agreement that violence had to come to an end and that there was a need for creating an atmosphere in which normal political processes could take place."

But rival Zulu war bands armed with guns, knives and sticks clashed around Pietermaritzburg in southeastern Natal today, police said. War bands set fire to homes and fought in the hillsides around black townships. They also clashed with police.

At least one black man was killed when police opened fire on a large crowd near Ladysmith, according to the state South African Broadcasting Corp. Among other attacks, police patrols were shot at when they tried to separate the fighting groups, and one officer was killed and three injured in various incidents, authorities said.

Jurors deliberating college student's fate in baby drowning

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A college student was either out of her mind or lying, attorneys told jurors who began deciding whether she should be imprisoned for life in the drowning of her newborn in a dormitory toilet.

If convicted of first-degree murder, 18-year-old freshman Claire Moritt would be ineligible for parole until she's 43 under mandatory sentencing guidelines.

"Be certain you can live with it the rest of your life, because Claire Moritt will," defense attorney B. Anderson Mitcham warned the jury before it began considering its verdict.

The 12-member panel met for about three hours Thursday. They were sequestered for the night and were to resume deliberations this morning.

A full day of closing arguments Thursday focused on the defense argument that Ms. Moritt was temporarily insane and had no memory of being pregnant or giving birth.

"The excuse 'I don't remember' may just be the biggest lie of all," said Assistant State Attorney Stephen Crawford. "It keeps you from having to explain all the other inconsistencies in your story."

Crawford recounted in detail the morning of Oct. 23, 1989, when the Hillsborough Community College student from Hollywood gave birth in her dorm room. He claimed she made a conscious decision to kill her baby son.

Using a chalkboard, diagrams and a photograph of the dead 6-pound, 9-ounce infant, Crawford began by describing how a roommate awoke to the sounds of a baby crying.

"It's nothing. I'm having my period. Go to bed," was Moritt's explanation, according to court testimony.

When Moritt went into the bathroom and her roommate noticed blood on the floor and more crying sounds, other friends gathered outside her door for nearly an hour asking her what was wrong.

Leukemia victim Anissa Ayala, 18, holds her baby sister Marissa Eve Ayala at the hospital Thursday in West Covina, Calif.

Couple has healthy baby born as bone marrow donor for sister

By BRUCE V. BIGELOW
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A healthy baby girl was born to a couple who conceived the child to serve as a bone marrow donor for their cancer-stricken daughter.

Abe and Mary Ayala revealed eight weeks ago that they had conceived the baby, named Marissa Eve, as a last resort to save the life of their 18-year-old daughter, Anissa, who is dying of leukemia.

The baby weighed 6 pounds, 4 ounces at birth Tuesday night at Queen of the Valley Hospital in suburban West Covina, the couple's niece, Lydia Sanchez, said Thursday. "She's beautiful, she looks just like Anissa," Sanchez said.

The Ayalas chose Eve as a middle name "because Eve means life," she said.

Fetal tests have shown the baby's marrow is compatible with Anissa's and doctors said the transplant could occur in six months. The chance the transplant will cure Anissa has been reported as between 70 and 80 percent.

Anissa's leukemia has remained stable, said Dr. Patricia Konrad, who will perform the surgery. The wait is planned primarily so the baby will grow and enough marrow can be taken from Marissa Eve to give her older sister a fighting chance.

The case drew considerable attention as medical ethicists voiced qualms about creating one child to save another. They said the baby was not conceived as an end in itself, but for a utilitarian purpose.

The middle-aged couple said they were hurt by such talk, and that they would love the baby even if it proved to be an incompatible bone marrow donor for their stricken daughter.

Almost 24 ounces of marrow would be taken from an adult donor, if one was available. Konrad said she would be lucky to get half that amount even after freezing the umbilical cord to use its cells to supplement the marrow transplant.

The baby faces little risk, Konrad said. The procedure requires the infant to be put under general anesthesia to block pain while a needle is inserted, usually twice, into the hip bone to remove the marrow.

Leukemia, a cancer of white blood cells, typically is treated by killing blood-producing cells with chemotherapy or radiation. Marrow from a matching donor, usually a sibling, is then transplanted into the leukemia patient so the healthy stem cells can produce healthy blood cells.

After waiting almost two years, the couple said the National Marrow Donor Program had failed to find a suitable living donor for Anissa, with the odds reported to be about 1 in 20,000.

Abe Ayala told The Associated Press in February, "We just can't stand idly by and do nothing about it and wait for Anissa to die."

The odds were even longer when the Ayalas, who are in their mid-40s, decided to gamble in the fall 1988 by trying to have another child.

Ayala had to undergo an operation to reverse a vasectomy he had 16 years earlier, with about a 50 percent chance of success; women of Mrs. Ayala's age have a 73 percent chance of conception and there was only a 25 percent chance the baby would prove to be a compatible donor.

States leading the way in economic development programs

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — States are inventing their own economic development policies in a "quiet revolution" that came because they couldn't wait for federal solutions to evolve, a private research group said Thursday.

"The story is that while Washington (the federal government) continues to be stalemated over what we ought to do over foreign competition, the states have gone ahead and invented their own strategies," said Doug Ross, president of the Corporation for Enterprise Development, a research and consulting organization.

Ross said the states reached a consensus over the last decade that "we haven't seen since the Progressive Era 100 years ago, when the states led the way in figuring out how to make the transition from an agricultural to an industrial society."

Unable to wait for new federal solutions, states "began tailoring home-grown strategies to cure state economic ills," Ross said.

"States now encourage and support indigenous development — modernizing in-state businesses, easing their expansion and product development, educating their workers and facilitating start-ups," he explained.

"It's a quiet revolution, one that may well have more lasting impact on the quality of our lives and the prospects for our children than any other domestic policy shift of the past decade," Ross added.

The findings are included in the fourth annual Development Report Card for the States, financed by corporations, labor unions and private foundations.

For more than 40 years, the study said, states relied on "smokestack chasing," or luring out-of-state businesses with incentives and subsidies.

That approach no longer was working by the late 1970s, the study found.

The study pointed to "dramatic changes in communication, transportation and technology" that often made it possible for overseas competitors to produce goods cheaper than U.S. manufacturers could.

"Our businesses were losing market share rapidly," it said. "For the first time in our history it began to look as though we would not be able to promise our children a better life than our own."

The study said some of the new strategies and the extent of their use include:

- Forty-four states are stimulating applied research through research centers and research grants.

- Forty-five states help businesses commercialize new technologies or apply state-of-the-art technologies.

- Thirty-five states offer non-traditional development finance instruments, like product development, seed capital and venture capital.

- Forty states employ new financial mechanisms that leverage private resources to help meet business capital needs.

- Forty-seven states have launched specific education reform measures.

- Forty-seven states devote state resources to improving the quality and productivity of their existing work force.

As a result, the study said, Rust Belt states are resurgent less than 10 years after the 1981-82 recession nearly did them in.

"Recent investments in technology, infrastructure and skill improvements as well as policy innovations in development finance and industry modernization have paid off in new economic strength for these states," Ross said.

According to the study, the Northeast and West Coast states continue to be the nation's strongest economically although some show troubling signs, including labor shortages in the Northeast and a decline of the timber industry in Oregon and Washington.

Southern states "continue to make remarkable progress toward economic health," the study said, but "there is a long uphill struggle still ahead."

With the exception of Utah, however, the Plains and Rocky Mountain states have not recovered from the recession. "These states need intensive care and are not getting it," the study said.

"The world has changed, but these states have not," it said. "Without substantial change in policy and growth in competitive capacity, these states face a bleak future indeed."

IBM scientists write corporate initials with 35 atoms in new procedure

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have arranged 35 atoms to create what is probably the world's tiniest advertisement, attaining a precision that may one day lead to development of new materials and far faster computers.

It took 22 hours of moving atoms one by one to create the letters "IBM," researcher Donald Eigler said.

The design, about 660 billionths of an inch long, is featured in a report by Eigler and Erhard Schweizer, who did the work at IBM's Almaden Research Center in San Jose, Calif.

The report is in this week's issue of the British journal Nature.

Physicists called the work a significant step that demonstrates that individual atoms can be arranged with high precision. "The implications are really remarkable," said Stuart Lindsay of Arizona State University. He called the work "absolutely fascinating."

Someday, that ability may let researchers build vanishingly tiny electronic components, allowing computers far faster than today's supercomputers, scientists said.

The IBM scientists arranged atoms of a heavy gas called xenon on a surface made of nickel.

Atoms may also be assembled someday into molecules to create new substances and materials, they said.

The atom-hauling process was akin to tugging ping pong balls over the bumpy bottom of an egg carton.

The atoms were placed with such precision that scientists could choose an individual atom on the surface as the point on which to put a second atom to build the design, Eigler said in a telephone interview.

The IBM scientists arranged atoms of a heavy gas called xenon on a surface made of nickel.

They used a device called a scanning tunneling microscope, which produces extremely detailed images of surfaces. It can sense atoms on a surface by passing the tip of a needle over it.

The tip holds a magnet-like attraction for atoms. When the tip was brought close enough to a xenon atom, it could pull the atom across the surface.

The needle had to tug hard enough to haul a xenon atom over bumpy nickel atoms on the surface, but gently enough not to lift it off the surface, Eigler said.

The amount of pull was adjusted by changing the needle tip's height. Typically, the tip hovered about 10 billionths of an inch above a xenon atom.

Atoms could be moved about 16 billionths of an inch per second. Once they were positioned, the tip was withdrawn.

Apart from the "IBM" design, researchers also arranged seven xenon atoms into a chain.

The work was done at about minus 452 degrees Fahrenheit, almost as cold as anything can get. That kept the xenon atoms from wandering, Eigler said.

In addition, it was done in an extremely high vacuum to keep unwanted molecules from contaminating the surface, Eigler said.

The surface can be kept free of contamination for at least a month, Eigler said.

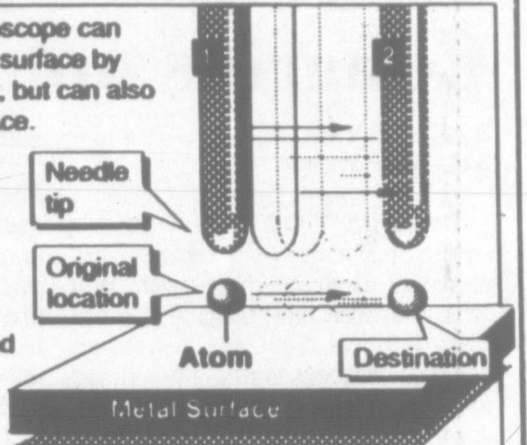

Lindsay said that degree of control was impressive.

How to Move an Atom

A scanning tunneling microscope can not only sense atoms on a surface by passing a needle tip over it, but can also pull atoms across the surface.

1 Without actually touching the atom, the needle tip attracts it like a magnet in order to maneuver it across the surface.

2 The atom is dragged and released to its desired position as the needle tip is withdrawn.

Citrus farmers may shut down without insurance

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citrus farmers and bankers in the Rio Grande Valley need assurance the Agriculture Department will back crop insurance to decide whether to rebuild after last December's freeze, a trade official says.

Without such assurance, thousands of jobs in South Texas could be lost, Ray Prewett, executive vice president of the Texas Citrus Mutual trade association and president of Valley Ag Insurance Services Inc., told Congress this week.

Texas citrus farmers, struggling to recover from the freeze, are the first to receive warnings from the federal government that the next crop insurance policies they buy may not be honored if disaster strikes again.

In a recent notice in the Federal Register, the U.S. Agriculture Department warned that it would begin issuing notices that insurance policies for 1991 crops would be subject to congressional appropriations.

The notices were to go out before various deadlines for farmers to purchase insurance on different crops.

Texas citrus growers must purchase crop insurance by June 1, while the closing date for wheat policies is Sept. 30, according to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Senators, House members and trade officials say that while crop insurance policies have always been "technically" subject to congress-sional appropriations, the USDA warning shocked farmers. The Bush administration is recommending that the crop insurance program be canceled next year.

"This has caused havoc all over the place, including some companies cancelling some policies," said Rep. Kika de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. "The law is still in vigor. The law is still the law."

In the meantime, however, Texas citrus growers and bankers are in the process of deciding whether to replant acreage killed by the freeze, Prewett said.

"The bankers are saying loud and clear that without the availability of tree insurance they are not going to continue financing citrus growers," Prewett told the House Agriculture subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development at a hearing.

"Planting citrus is also not a one-year commitment but a long-term commitment and growers and their bankers simply must know if they can count on the continued availability of the citrus tree insurance," Prewett said.

Prewett warned that if tree insurance policies are canceled, "growers won't replant and some 5,000 people will have the difficult task of finding employment in another industry for which they may have limited skills."

About 5,000 people were laid off as a result of the December freeze, he said.

De la Garza, D-Mission, said it was too early to panic but also expressed concern about potential job losses.

Prewett said that he was optimistic, however, the USDA would resolve the issue within the next few days and that insurers would go ahead and write policies on the next citrus crop.

Bentsen, meanwhile, said he has been assured by Sen. Quentin N.

Burdick, D-N.D., chairman of the Senate Appropriations agriculture subcommittee, that he would address the problem when the panel considers an appropriations measure later this week.

Burdick, Bentsen said Wednesday, "has told me he shares my concerns over the unilateral actions by the Secretary of Agriculture, which threaten to deny farmers federal crop insurance coverage they paid for."

In The Church Of Your Choice

It is no Secret...

One of the great joys that children have is in telling a secret. This is one way that secrets have of becoming known.

However IT IS NO SECRET what God can do for you. This was never intended to be a secret, for God wants all to know the good news.

Isaiah said: "The Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings... to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord."

Attend church regularly and hear God's word preached.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Beggs to share experiences from Africa

Jimmy and Mary Beggs, missionaries to Kenya, Africa, will be guest speakers on Sunday evening at the First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, according to the Rev. Herb Peak, pastor.

"Our love has a broken wing if it cannot fly to those who have never heard the gospel," says the Rev. Jimmy Beggs.

During their next term of missionary service in Kenya, the Beggs will be planting new churches in the capital city of Nairobi.

The Beggs have served missionary assignments in Tanzania, Uganda and Kenya for the past 26 years. They have taught in Bible school, engaged in church planting, and conducted seminars for pastors and women's groups.

Prior to missionary service, the Beggs pastored in West Texas. The Rev. Beggs graduated from Assemblies of God graduate school in Springfield, Mo., with a master's degree in cross cultural ministries.

The Beggs will share some of their experiences in Africa on Sunday evening and challenge the church to continue its love outreach around the world.

The service is set to begin at 6:30 p.m.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: There you saw how the Lord your God carried you, as a father carries his son, all the way you went until you reached this place. (Deuteronomy 1:31 NIV)

When my daughters were toddlers, many were the days of their cranky whining. Often, if one of them fussed her need for my undivided attention, I would lift her into my arms and sing and dance, swooping and swirling around the room. Soon her petulance would turn to sweet, bubbling baby laughter.

Sometimes the buffeting and ridicule of the world, the demands of Christian service, and the responsibilities of work and family combine to leave striving Christians discouraged and spent. Weary of the daily scramble to keep up the pace, we whine to God for his undivided attention.

At the peak of such petulant self-pity, God lifts his child into his arms and sings a song of inspiration, restoration, joy. The Father moves around life, swooping and swirling with his child held in his graceful embrace until he hears laughter bubbling from the soul.

How tenderly he brings us along!

Religion roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. religious broadcasters are turning their eyes toward a new market — the Soviet Union.

At the recent meeting of National Religious Broadcasters, both Robert Schuller and Pat Robertson announced new Soviet ventures.

Robertson said he has received permission to open a ministry center in Moscow and that his program, "Superbook," a cartoon series based on the Old Testament, "is the first Western religious program to air regularly in the Soviet Union."

NEW YORK (AP) — The 110-year-old Bowery Mission, widely known for its care of needy men, has opened a new shelter for homeless women and children.

"A growing number of homeless women and children have been coming to the mission for help, but until now we've had no place to put them," said the Rev. John Willock, head of the mission on lower Manhattan's Bowery Street.

A pilot project in six newly leased apartments has been started on East 94th Street to house about 70 homeless women and their children.

'Tough as Nails' to be presented

The members of Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd, have scheduled a special service at 7 p.m. on Good Friday, April 13.

Title of the program is "Tough as Nails." The members of the church invite the public to attend the service.

St. Mark schedules Saturday breakfast

St. Mark CME Church, 406 Elm St., will have a pancake breakfast from 8 to 11 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Items on the menu include pancakes, bacon, eggs, coffee and orange juice. Donations will be accepted.

The Rev. H.R. Johnson, pastor, invites the public to the breakfast.

The 45-minute presentation begins at 8 p.m. in St. Vincent de Paul's school gym. The parish extends a welcome to the public to attend the performance.

The show will take residents back to 2,000 years ago to experience the last days of Christ on the earth. It will feature the entrance into Jerusalem, the Last Supper, the agony in the garden, the carrying of the cross, the pain on the cross with his mother, Mary, and the Centurion present. It will also include Christ's resurrection.

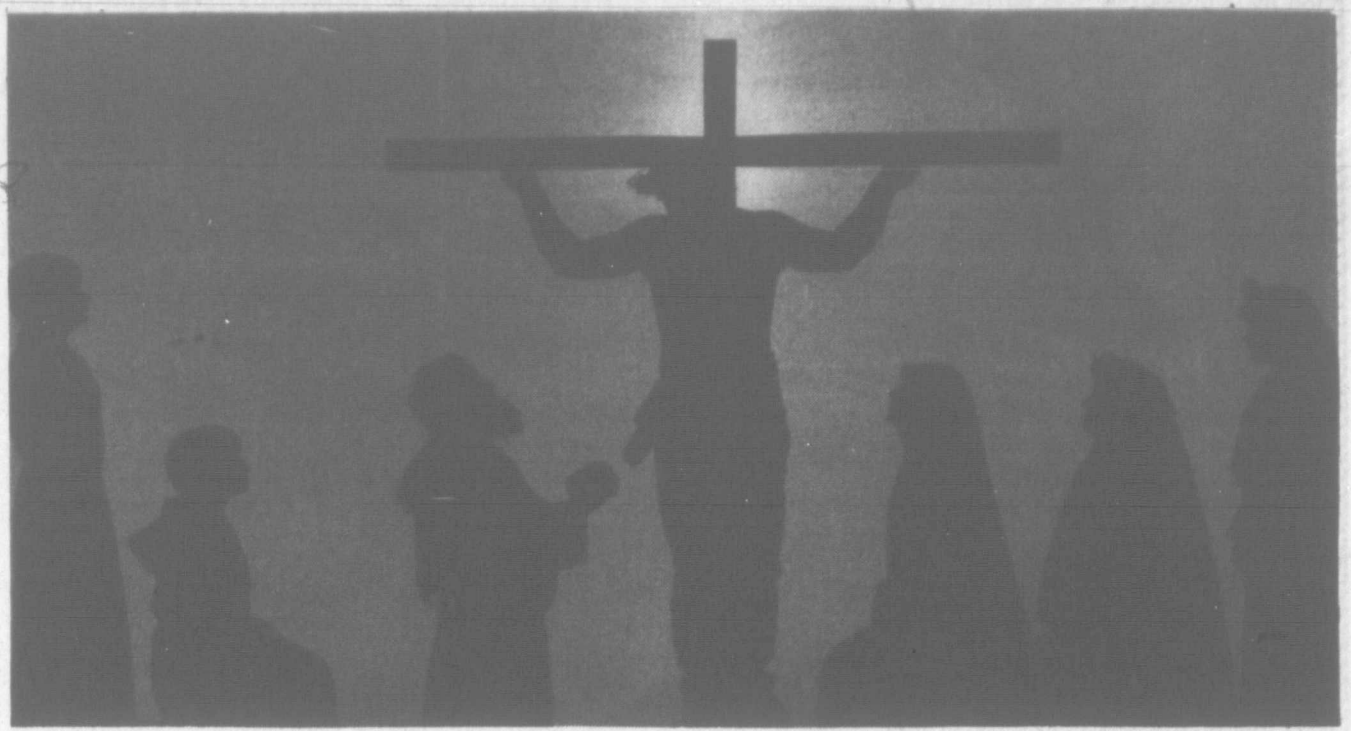

The presentation will be performed to the audio cassette music of Dallas Holm called "His Last Days."

Following is a list of the cast: Jesus - Joe Martinez; Mary - Elena Seidlitz; Peter - Greg Bullard; Mary Magdalene - Peggy Slaughter; Centurion - Mark Seidlitz.

Others include: Children of Jerusalem ("Hosanna") - Shawn Dawes (Christ child), Jessica Dawes (Angel), and Nathan Dawes; Women of Jerusalem ("Hosanna") - Vicki Venal (Mocker), Marian Dawes (Second Mary), Kristin Largin (Reprise), and Kathy Rose (Reprise); Apostles - Dan Rose, Clarence Marak and Jim Duvall.

Director of the presentation is Elena Seidlitz. Henry Dawes and Mark Seidlitz are in charge of lights and prop manager is Connie Largin.

Episcopalian wants group to return to original roots

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The Rev. Jerome F. Politzer, president of the Prayer Book Society of the Episcopal Church, made public this week a rift in the denomination that he said has given free reign to Marxists and homosexuals.

Politzer said church leadership has abandoned traditional Episcopal views in favor of "gnostic humanism."

The primary theological direction of the Episcopal church is gnostic," Politzer said, referring to a belief system that elevates intellectualism over faith in the religious experience.

Politzer said the Episcopal church must return to a more biblical perspective to avoid the "falling away" that intellectualism brings, as described in Hebrews 4:1-2.

He pointed to the ordination of a practicing homosexual by the Bishop of Newark and the pro-Marxist writings of a female bishop in direct support of communism as evidence the clergy is largely out of step with its members.

Recent changes in the Prayer Book, a primary instrument in Episcopal worship, were also criticized by Politzer, who said the church must resist the temptation of both radical fundamentalism and rampant liberalism.

When the Prayer Book Society commissioned a poll by George Gallup to determine views of the laity on crucial issues, Politzer said, "Some bishops were downright cruel to (him)."

"They overreacted to a project they seemed to assume would be negative to the church even before the data was in."

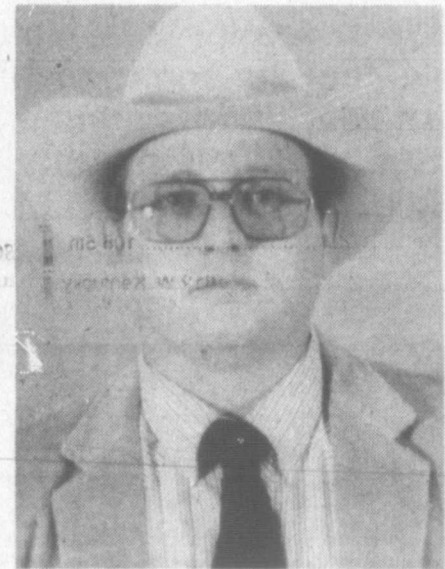

Politzer is scheduled to lead a "traditionalist summit meeting" in Washington, D.C., in September that he said will bring together church members from the United States, England, Canada and Australia.

"Some members of the church leadership have lost their moral compass and have sent the church reeling into troubled waters," Politzer said.

Politzer said members of the Episcopal church who want to attend the conference and be part of returning the denomination to its traditional roots can contact the Society for more information.

Partisanship checked at door for weekly Bible study class

By TOM STRONG
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Lawmakers, governor's aides, lobbyists and government workers gather once a week for an activity they say goes beyond politics and eases Statehouse stress.

Instead of discussing an upcoming bill, they reviewed a passage from Matthew during a recent Bible study session in the governor's conference room in the Capitol.

The 20 participants who came to the 7:30 a.m. meeting on a drizzling Wednesday put aside any political differences for 45 minutes and left with a sense of spiritual fulfillment.

"God is not a politician. This is fellowship," said Elliott D. Thompson, former chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage and Control Commission who is now a lawyer and lobbyist.

For the past three years, Gov. Carroll Campbell's deputy chief of staff, Bob McAlister, has organized the informal Bible study sessions. Campbell, a Republican, does not attend but several Democratic lawmakers do.

"I think it indicates that there are more important things in life than politics, and that the pre-eminent question of life is spiritual," McAlister said.

Participants bring their well-worn Bibles, grab a cup of coffee in the governor's office and sit around the large wooden table usually host to Budget and Control Board meetings. The room also is used by Campbell for news conferences and served as one of his command posts during Hurricane Hugo in September.

Sen. Yancey McGill, D-Kingstree, joined at the start of the legislation session in January and said he has grown close to the others in the group.

Lawmakers "have a lot of pressure on us from day to day, not only here in Columbia but in the district at home," McGill said. "I think the study of God's word is the most important thing to me and it certainly strengthens and really assists me in making decisions on a daily basis."

McGill said he feels "total relaxation" during the gatherings.

Rep. David Beasley, D-Society Hill, said "an inconsequential benefit" from the meetings is a better look at how the governor's office works.

Beasley said he has learned more about some of Campbell's staff through Bible study.

"The only people who go ... are pretty committed to Christian causes, Christian ethics ... and that tells you a lot right there about someone," Beasley said. "If they're in that posture, they're more apt to do what's right. Then it opens up an automatic friendship and we can just sit down and discuss things because there's automatically a mutual respect."

Nikolais soars with 'space fantasy' for kids

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Modern dance pioneer Alwin Nikolais is accustomed to worldwide acclaim, but he confesses he was terrified by the squirming second-graders who attended the world premiere of his new "space fantasy" for children.

"Children frighten me," said Nikolais, a 79-year-old bachelor. "You never can know what their reaction might be, unless you're around them a lot. I'm not around children very much, so it was doubly terrifying."

Nikolais needn't have worried. Moments after the curtain rose earlier this week on The Crystal and the Sphere, his stage voyage through the galaxy of a child's imagination, Nikolais clearly had won the hearts of 500 local school children who packed the Kennedy Center's Terrace Theater.

The kids squealed as the house lights dimmed and the rumble of thunder shook their seats.

They oohed and aahed as the rising curtain revealed a 20-foot balloon rocking gently on the stage, like a strange new planet, and a 12-foot shard of crystal bathed in celestial lights.

They giggled at the wondrous aliens that cavorted across the stage — a mermaid who teasingly tied her kelp tresses to an angler's hook; a pair of fat, web-footed birds that splashed in musical mud puddles; herky-jerky androids ablaze in ultraviolet hues who disappeared in the twinkling of an eye.

Nikolais did it all — choreography, synthesizer musical score, scenery and costumes — in creating the $20,000 centerpiece for this year's "Imagination Celebration," the Kennedy Center's annual arts festival for children.

His new work, performed by five hand-picked dancers from New York, is being presented nine times this week at the Kennedy Center before it travels to children's festivals at the El Centro Theater in Dallas, April 18-20, and the Orange County Performing Arts Center in Costa Mesa, Calif., April 25-26.

"The first show is a terror," said Nikolais, sighing happily after the curtain fell on his latest premiere.

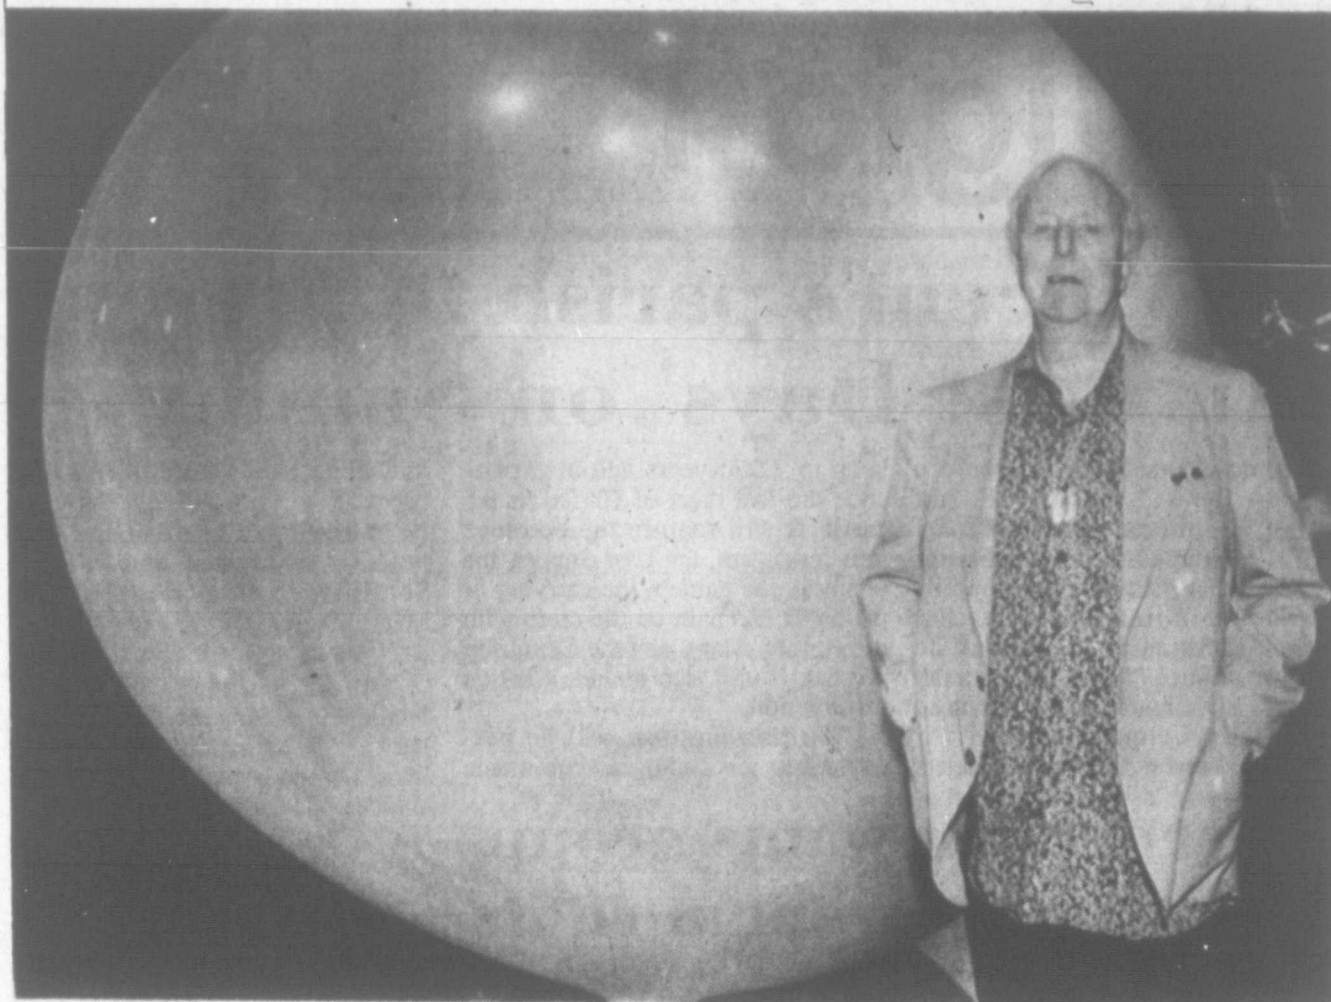

He hadn't created a dance work for youngsters since he was director of the Henry Street Playhouse in New York in the late 1940s, when his company staged a dozen popular "dance plays" for children.

Since then, he has been cheered by audiences and critics around the world — and received the coveted National Medal of Arts from President Reagan in 1987 — as a modern dance visionary. In a way, Nikolais said, his work on The Crystal and the Sphere meant returning to the world of children after a 40-year absence.

"They haven't changed," he said. "They're made the same way and they behave the same way. It's that I'm rediscovering them again."

Nikolais' vision scored a hit with at least one member of the audience Tuesday.

When the lights went up after the 45-minute show, a little girl turned to a schoolmate and asked, "It's over already?"

Study: $43.6 billion of bad real estate loans on the books

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — About $15.5 billion worth of real estate loans held by Texas financial institutions are three or more months past due and are facing foreclosure.

Another $28.1 billion in bad loans already have been foreclosed and are in the hands of the government or lending institutions, according to a state study released Wednesday.

The study by the Finance Commission of Texas was the first cooperative effort by state and federal officials to look at the state's real estate problems by various categories of holdings, said commission chairman R. Dary Stone.

Stone said another $10 billion to $18 billion in bad loans are held by out-of-state institutions.

The agency tried to compare the amount of distressed real estate to the total market value of real estate, Stone said, but reporting differences between state taxing agencies and financial institutions made that impossible.

The best information available, according to Stone, indicated that distressed loans on developed real estate, or $24.12 billion, was 5.5 percent of the value of all developed land, or $436.07 billion.

Bill Ferguson, a financial industry analyst, estimates the bad loans represent about one-sixth of all banking and thrift assets.

"When you consider as a rule of thumb that (an institution) with more than 2.5 percent is in trouble or headed that way, I think this has significant implications for the short-term economic outlook in Texas," Ferguson said.

According to the study, $19.44 billion of the loans are on undeveloped land.

Besides the loans on raw land, the study said single family housing accounted for $5.17 billion, multi-family, $7.48 billion; retail, $5.09 billion; office, $4.84 billion; and industrial, $1.55 billion.

The study also found 61 percent of the loans, or $26.54 billion, are held by savings and loans.

National banks carried $10.29 billion, state banks $1.32 billion and government regulatory agencies $5.42 billion.

Stone, president of Delphinance Development Co. in Dallas, said the survey indicates government agencies charged with selling some of the seized properties will have a hard time disposing of their holdings, especially because of the current lack of a market for raw land.

The study was compiled from the June 30, 1989 reports of federal and state agencies as well as Texas institutions.

Find it fast with 'Recipex'

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It started with a plain chocolate cake.

That's what Annie Gilbar's son wanted for his birthday. Nothing fancy. Nothing extra. Just plain chocolate cake with plain frosting.

Gilbar, who lives in Los Angeles, has dozens and dozens of cookbooks, and she searched through them all. She found recipes for double chocolate cake, chocolate mousse and brownie pie, but where, oh where, was a recipe for an ordinary chocolate cake?

Finally, she found just what she was looking for in what was on page 627 in "The Joy of Cooking." The search for the chocolate cake recipe was over.

However, Gilbar, co-author of "The Penny Whistle Lunch Box Book" and "The Penny Whistle Party Planner," didn't stop there.

She asked friends, restaurant owners, cookbook and magazine editors for the titles of their favorite cookbooks. She put together a collection of these cookbooks and went through them, page by page, recipe by recipe, not once, not twice, but three times.

The result is "Recipex: Every Cook's Master Index" (Fireside, New York; $15.95), a complete guide to 25,000 recipes and 40,000 entries contained in 52 of the nation's most popular general and specialty cookbooks.

"Recipex" is an idea whose time has come, Gilbar explained in an interview here. Busy cooks don't have time to search through cookbook after cookbook, looking for the way to clarify butter; what to do with leftover cheese; how to make lemonade for 40.

"We read through each recipe and coded it for preparation time, degree of difficulty, and number of servings it made. We listed every technique, definition, chart and drawing we thought would be valuable for any cook," she said.

"Recipex" is organized by recipe and ingredient, listing the book, the page number, the degree of difficulty, and the number of servings.

Each cookbook has its own abbreviation. NYT is "The New York Times Cookbook" by Craig Claiborne. MSE is "Martha Stewart's Entertaining." MC is "Moosewood Cookbook" by Mollie Katzen. For ease of use, the abbreviations for the cookbooks are listed on both the inside and back covers of the book.

The degree of difficulty and preparation time for each recipe is coded 1, 2 or 3; 1 is short and easy; 3 is the most difficult. Canned beans, for example, rates a 1; soaking beans overnight gets a 3.

There are three codes for number of servings: A, up to 3 servings; B, 4 to 8 servings; C, over 9 servings.

That's it. Say you want a recipe for butterscotch brownies. Under the listing, Butterscotch, Brownies, you'll find: — GHAC, 345, 1, C. ("The Good Housekeeping All-American Cookbook," page 345. Easy to make; serves more than nine.)

— JOC, 653, 1, C. ("The Joy of Cooking," page 653. Easy to make; serves more than nine.) — FFCB, 564, 1, C. ("The Fannie Farmer Cookbook," page 564. Easy to make, serves more than nine.)

And so on. Can't find a recipe for Kris Kringle? Or bundkuchen? Gilbar's found it, along with most anything else you might like to cook up, be it unsweetened choux paste fritters or S'more bars. Or soup. (She found 400 recipes.)

A few handy do's and don'ts: — You DON'T need all 52 cookbooks in order to use "Recipex." It will work if you have six cookbooks. Or 16. or 46.

— DO, however, look at the brief descriptions of the cookbooks listed in "Recipex." You might find something that catches your eye.

The cookbooks on Gilbar's list are bestsellers, and therefore are most likely to be on kitchen and bookstore shelves. They include "The Frugal Gourmet" by Jeff Smith, "Maida Heatter's New Book of Great Desserts" by Maida Heatter, and "The Fine Art of Italian Cooking" by Giuliano Bugialli.

— DON'T worry about whether you can figure out how to use the index. Just look for the ingredient or the recipe.

Once you get into the habit of using "Recipex," you'll never again have to give up in desperation when you can't find that recipe for Gado-Gado (Indonesian vegetable dish), pesto, hashed browns or tortoni.

That's it! The rest, as they say, is a piece of cake.

Not all men give out of obligation

DEAR ABBY: Never in my wildest dreams did I think I'd write a letter to Dear Abby, but the letter in your column signed "Nobody's Valentine" prompted this response.

The lady was complaining because her super guy never acknowledged St. Valentine's day with a little gift or card, and she felt hurt and neglected. She signed herself "Nobody's Valentine."

You told her never let it happen again — next year leave notes on his pillow or on the bathroom mirror, and stick an artificial flower in his shoe with a note to remind him to at least give her a card.

Come on, Abby! Do you hold stock in Hallmark or something? If I had to harass my husband for a card, I wouldn't want one.

This year for Valentine's Day, I made my husband a marvelous dinner, followed by a heart-shaped cake, flowers and a loving note. What did he give me? Nothing. I didn't feel slighted. Why? Because I see evidence of his love and appreciation for me every day of the year, and I don't need some commercialized, hyped-up, obligatory day to make me feel loved.

My husband surprises me every now and then when I least expect it. One night he came home and told me to go outside and look at the car that was parked in the driveway. I thought for sure someone had put a dent in my fender.

I nearly fell over when I saw the brand-new car I had looked at and admired the day before. What a doll! So you see Abby, not all men want to be pushed into giving a gift out of obligation.

LUCKY LAURIE
IN CARLSBAD

DEAR LAURIE: Meet another lucky lady who, after a little soul-searching, came to the same conclusion:

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Nobody's Valentine," perhaps a few words from someone in the same boat will help:

I've been married for 10 years, and in all that time, I received only one valentine from my husband: His mother had bought it for him to give to me! Of course, when I found out, it meant nothing to me.

I tried your suggested approach — reminding him with little hints, pointing out things I needed and wanted in case he wanted to give me something for Valentine's Day. Still nothing.

Finally, after seven years, I sat down and thought of all the good qualities my husband had exhibited over the years. He was honest, dependable, hard-working, affectionate at the appropriate times, good to my parents, and absolutely the best father and husband a family could ever have.

Then, all of a sudden, it didn't matter to me anymore that he didn't buy me a card or a gift just because it was St. Valentine's Day.

DEAR ABBY: Fiddledeedee, none of those explanations of "Mind your P's and Q's" is the proper one.

The expression harks back to the days when type was set by hand, letter by letter. Of course, the letter on each piece of type looked "backward" in order to print "forward"; hence it was very easy to mix up lowercase "p's" and "q's" — hence apprentice typesetters were constantly admonished by their masters to "Mind their P's and Q's."

Astro-Graph

In the year ahead you may finally be able to resolve an important arrangement you've never handled satisfactorily. It will work out advantageously for you and the others involved as well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you're apt to be more adept at handling challenging situations than your peers. In fact, when the going gets tough, they might just stand back and admire your handiwork. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You can be instrumental today in helping a friend who has a critical outlook search for that which is good in people instead of that which is bad. Take time to do so.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you might have to deal with some changes that will be controlled by external forces rather than by you. Don't get ruffled, because these shifts could be advantageous.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An alliance you establish with an older individual today should work out to both party's satisfaction, even though the results won't be immediately apparent.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Devote your time and efforts now to situations that offer you material gratification. It pays to be industrious today for a profitable purpose.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be more effective today in a leadership role than you will be in that of a supporter or follower. Step out front where you are needed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things have a way of working out to your ultimate advantage today, so don't be disturbed by early indicators if they don't look too encouraging. It's the bottom line that counts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Companions might overlook personal advantages that can be gained today from a rather unusual development. However, it's not likely you will if you put your analytical powers to proper use.

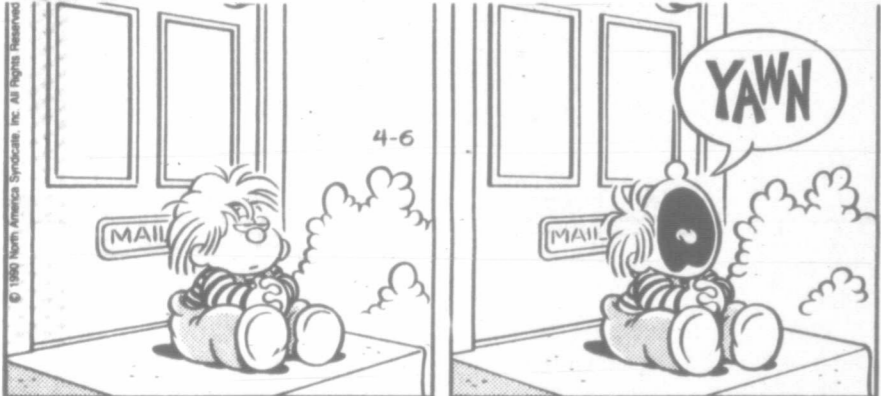

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In a competitive situation today the secret to success is to be more dedicated and persistent than your competitors. Hard work generates good luck.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) We can always learn something of value from others if we keep an open mind. Today you might gain some valuable knowledge from a person you'd least expect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your greatest opportunities today are likely to come from things others initiate rather than from things you originate. Don't be overly concerned about who authored this or that.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be sure to include a friend of long standing if you are formulating some special type of social program for this evening. In fact, put this pal at the top of your list.

Pampa baseball team crushes Borger, 14-3

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Editor

BORGER — The Harvester baseball team produced four runs in the first inning and four more in the seventh to key a 14-3 rout of Borger Thursday in a bitterly cold District 1-4A makeup game.

The victory left Pampa tied with Lubbock Dunbar for second place, each with 5-1 league records. The Harvesters, ranked eighth in the state in Class 4A, boast a 12-1 overall mark. Lubbock Estacado leads the pack with a 7-0, 10-5 record.

Junior right-hander Quincy Williams pitched a complete game for the Harvesters, yielding the three runs on five hits and no walks while striking out four. He boosted his season record to 3-1.

"Quincy pitched a tremendous game," said Pampa assistant coach Dennis Doughty. "He's not really an overpowering strikeout pitcher — we expect to field a lot of ground balls when Quincy's on the mound. He forced them to hit 13 ground balls, so he did just what we expected of him."

For all practical purposes, Pampa had put the game out of reach in the first half-inning. The Harvesters scored four runs in the top of the first, led by Mike Cagle's two-run homer, the seventh dinger of the season for the senior first baseman. On the day, Cagle was 2-for-4, including a single and 2RBI.

Williams also put one over the fence, thanks in part to a cross wind that barely pushed the ball over the left-field boundary.

"The ball had green paint on it that time," Doughty said. "The wind was blowing from the right-field pole to the left-field pole, helping balls hit down the left-field line. Quincy was smiling when he came across the plate."

Catcher Tory Peet and shortstop Chris Roden each went 3-for-5 at the plate, all singles, while senior center fielder James Bybee was 2-for-3, including two singles, a sacrifice and three RBI.

Third baseman Brian Bullard was a top performer in the field and at the plate.

"Brian really hit the ball well," Doughty said. "He had a single, double and a sacrifice and he played a really good game defensively."

The Harvesters collected 14 hits on the day, one for every run. They committed four errors, compared to nine for Borger.

Pampa seemed to enjoy playing under pressure Thursday, scoring its first eight runs with two outs. After a four-run performance in the first frame, the Harvesters added one in the second, one in the third and two in the fourth.

Borger scored both of its runs in the third inning on the strength of a two-run homer by Jeff Isom.

Eric Huddleston went the distance on the mound for the Bulldogs, who dropped to 0-6-1 in district play, 2-8-1 overall. Huddleston's record fell to 1-3.

Pampa will trek to Lubbock Saturday to battle Dunbar for sole possession of second place in the league standings. The game is scheduled to start at 2 p.m.

First-round leader Mike Donald drives on 14 en route to an eight-under par during Thursday's competition.

Rookie Donald leads pack with 8-under 64

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Jack Nicklaus wasn't surprised. Neither was Larry Mize.

In fact, what happened on the first day of the 54th Masters has become rather common — long-shots leading, legends lagging.

It isn't unusual to have so many Masters rookies setting the pace, three among the top four, including the leader, Mike Donald. It also isn't unusual for the legends to be back on top come Sunday.

Donald shot an 8-under-par 64 on Thursday, tying the record for a first-year player set by Lloyd Mangrum in 1940.

"To repeat that would be 16 under," Donald said. "I'm not really looking for another 64, but there isn't any reason I can't shoot another good score."

He had a 2-shot lead over another rookie, John Huston. First-timer Bill Britton, who had an eagle-2 on the 14th, occupied fourth place with a 68.

Peter Jacobsen was the greybeard at the top, shooting a 67 to start his seventh Masters.

It took Donald nine seasons on the PGA Tour to qualify for the Masters, winning the Anheuser Busch Classic last year.

"All I can say is, this is the round of my life," Donald said.

He put together six birdies during one seven-hole stretch, chipped in from 40 feet for a birdie on No. 9 and had 10 one-putts.

While the rookies frolicked in the bright sunshine and swirling winds of Augusta, some of the favorites really struggled.

Australian Greg Norman shot 78, saying he simply lost his concentration.

Lee Trevino, who in the past has said the course isn't suited to his game, matched Norman's total.

Masters golf

British Open champion Mark Calcavecchia, leader on the money list this season, and two-time Masters winner Seve Ballesteros of Spain were 10 shots off the pace at 74.

Norman, Ballesteros and Calcavecchia generally were considered the favorites this week.

Nicklaus and 1984 champion Ben Crenshaw each shot 72 and rookie Robert Gamez, the only two-time Tour winner this year, shot 73.

Tom Kite, who has finished in the top 10 here 10 times, had a 75.

There were four former champions lodged in a seven-way tie for fifth place at 70.

The group included 1985 champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Mize, 1976 winner Raymond Floyd and 1969 champion George Archer.

The list at 70 also included Curtis Strange, the 1988 and 1989 U.S. Open winner who blew a late lead in the 1985 Masters.

Defending champion Nick Faldo of England and 1989 PGA winner Payne Stewart were among eight players tied at 71.

Canadian thinclads rely on strength of field events

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Canadian boys and girls may not have enough depth to win the team titles in the District 2-2A track meet Monday at Wellington, but several individuals have enough ability to advance to regionals.

"Our boys don't have the depth to win it all, but we've got some people who should do pretty good. Our girls are really coming on, but there's just not enough of them," said Canadian coach Jim Hester.

The Wildcats could garner several points in the field events with hurdler Mark Cornett, pole vaulter Justin Price, high jumper Brandon Thrasher and shot-discus throwers Kale Yarnold and Howie Bentley having the best chance of getting past district.

"Basically, our only strength is in the field events," Hester said. "We don't have much speed."

Yarnold won the discus and Price captured the pole vault event at the Warrior Relays last weekend in Miami.

"Yarnold is up there pretty good in the discus, but he needs to reach out and get another foot in the shot," Hester said. "Price is doing good for a sophomore pole vaulter. I look for him to have a good battle with the Clarendon pole vaulter (Billie Chadwick)."

District 2-2A meet

Hester expects Cornett to be hard to beat in both the 110 and 300 hurdles. Cornett, a junior, had a victory in the 300 hurdles at the Wildcat Relays. He placed third in the 110 hurdles at last weekend's Warrior Relays in Miami.

"I'd have to say Cornett is the favorite in both hurdles," Hester said.

Hester looks for Clarendon and Wellington to fight it out for the team championship.

"It should be a tossup between those two. Memphis has some quality people, but they might not have enough depth," Hester said.

Quannah won last year's meet.

"Quannah is a lot like us this year. They don't enough depth to fight it out for the team title," Hester said.

Canadian girls, which finished fourth in last year's meet, could challenge for the district crown, Hester said.

"Wellington probably has the strongest team. We've been getting a lot of points in the field events and we could push Wellington. I feel their depth could hurt us, though," Hester said.

Seniors Cassie McNees and Vicky Cervantes give Canadian a solid 1-2 threat in the discus and shot.

McNees, who finished seventh in the discus at last year's state meet, has won that event twice in Canadian's three meets and captured the shot in the Warrior Relays.

"McNees has developed into a good, all-purpose performer. She's really helped us in other events," Hester said.

McNees also placed third in the long jump at the Wildcat Relays and third in the high jump at the Warrior Relays.

Cervantes won the shot at the Wildcat Relays and placed third at the Warrior Relays.

"Cervantes, being a senior, has some good experience," Hester said.

Kari Burns has a good chance to finish among the top two in the 400 and long jump, Hester said.

"She ran a 64.00 quarter at Miami and she's had a 16-0 long jump. With a little more work, she could get that jump on-out there," Hester said.

Both the 800- and 1600-meter relay teams should give Canadian a boost in the point totals.

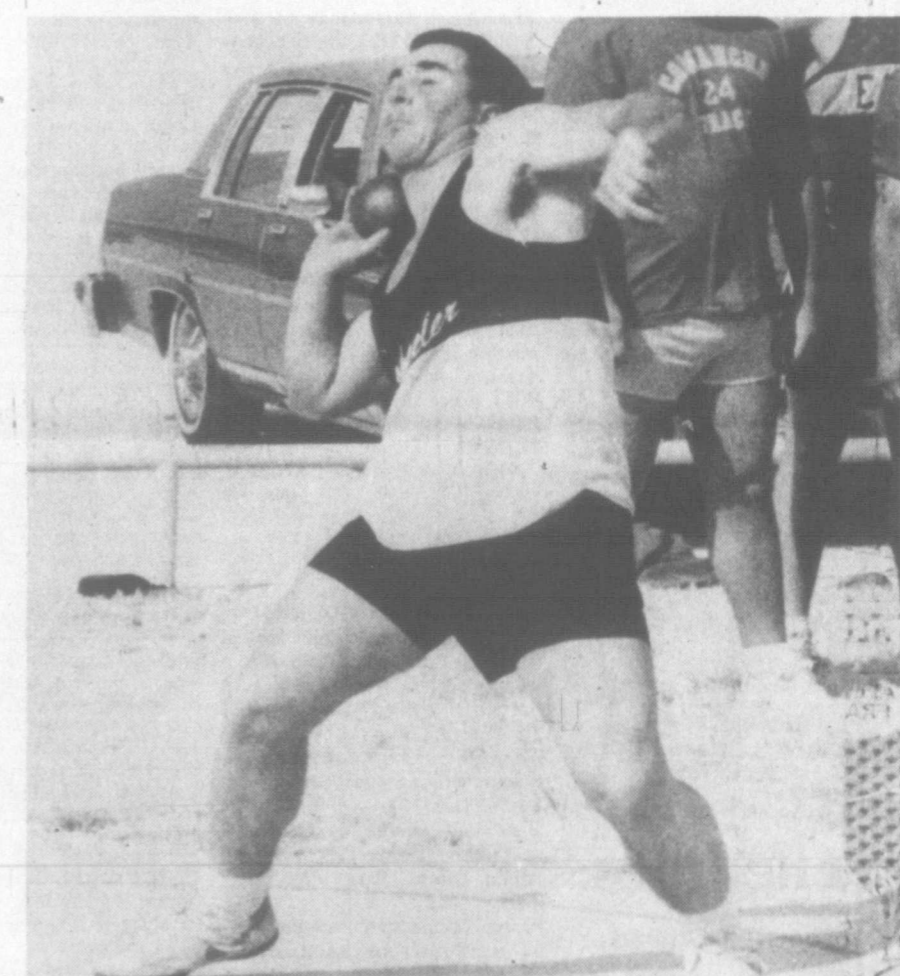

"Our 800-meter relay team (McNees, Burns, Kim Cook and Dondra Barker) should come in second if they can hit their handoffs," Hester said. "They've had some trouble in that area."

Canadian's 1600-meter relay team (Burns, Cook, Pam Goodwin and Barker) should win, Hester said.

"I would say they're the favorites," he said. "We're taking a look at McNees as a possible relay team member. If she can get her time down for one of the quarters, she could be on it."

Hester would have liked another meet or two for Canadian to enter before the district meet, which starts at 9 a.m. with the field events.

"It's been such a short season. We missed one meet because of the weather," he said.

Canadian's Kale Yarnold will be going after shot and discus titles in the District 2-2A track meet Monday.

Musburger slams CBS execs

NEW YORK (AP) — A change in networks brought out a change in Brent Musburger's personality.

Musburger, accused of being too bland on CBS, turned bold and brash on ABC Thursday night as he attacked his former bosses during an interview on "PrimeTime Live" — his first spoken comments since being dumped by CBS last week-end.

The sportscaster said his contract negotiations were "a sham" and accused two CBS Sports executives of conducting a "vendetta" to get rid of him.

Musburger said president Neal Pilson and executive producer Ted Shaker "conspired to get me out of CBS."

"It was not a network firing," Musburger said in an interview with Sam Donaldson. "It was a personal vendetta on the part of two people."

These two men had decided I was too big for my britches and that they were just going to take me down a peg or two."

Shaker and Pilson each issued one-sentence responses to Musburger through CBS spokeswoman Susan Kerr.

"I wish to remember Brent the way he was Monday night, gracious and professional," Shaker said.

"It was disappointing to watch," Pilson said.

Kerr said she didn't expect any further comment from CBS.

"It's something that's been exhausted," she said. "The principals have spoken."

Musburger, however, apparently has more to say. He was scheduled for interviews today on ABC's "Good Morning America" and NBC's "Late Night with David Letterman."
