Ann Richards gains Democratic bid for governor

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — State Treasurer Ann Richards emerged victorious from the muddy Democratic gubernatorial runoff, setting up a November election battle political pundits quickly dubbed "Claytie and the Lady."

After grabbing about 56 percent of Tuesday's vote, Ms. Richards faces millionaire oilman-rancher Clayton Williams, who cruised to the GOP nomination with 61 percent of the primary vote March 13.

"I have seen demolition derbies much like (this)," Richards said of her incendiary race with Attorney General Jim Mattox. But her victory, she said, was a condemnation of his negative campaign style.

"We certainly did put to rest the whole business of the mudslinging in this campaign. I think the people of Texas rejected that. That's one of the reasons I feel so good about this coming November," she said.

Williams concurred. "The rehash of the Democratic campaign is of no interest to me. Read my lips: No more mud," said Williams, who earlier had voiced some reluctance about facing a woman.

With 91 percent of the ballots counted early today,

Richards had 579,553 votes, or 56 percent, to Mattox's 447,595, or 44 percent, in the unofficial returns.

It was Mattox's first election loss since 1966, when he fell three votes short in a contest for Democratic precinct chairman. In two decades, he had won elections to the Texas House, Congress and two terms as attorney general.

Richards and Mattox had topped the Democratic primary field.

Their battle was a mean-spirited one, which included charges of drug use leveled against both candidates and ended with each decrying the way the four-week battle unfolded.

Richards accused Mattox of profiting from public service and challenged him to release his income tax returns.

Mattox alleged that Richards, a recovering alcoholic, used illegal drugs, including cocaine, 10 years ago, and he challenged her to release medical records from her alcoholism treatment in 1980.

The last week of the campaign brought newspaper reports that Mattox was seen smoking marijuana in the mid-1970s and that Richards was seen in a restroom where marijuana was allegedly being smoked in 1979. Both dismissed the reports.

But a victorious Richards and a defeated Mattox both predicted quick Democratic unification for the fight against Williams.

"There were other people in this primary who did not support our cause ... And it is time now that we reach out to them and tell them that we must be unified," Richards said.

Promising the defeat was not his "last hurrah," Mattox pledged to help.

"I'm going to do all that I can to help us win," he said. "Ann Richards has proven she's a very strong candidate, proven that she can overcome this drug problem ... Clayton Williams doesn't need to be governor of Texas."

Williams and other Republican leaders held their own rally Tuesday night in San Antonio. He indicated that Richards' refusal to say "yes" or "no" to questions of ever using illegal drugs wouldn't be an issue this fall.

"I think what we'll be talking about — and I hope Ann will join me — is a real discussion of whose philosophy is the best way to win the war on drugs," Williams said.

Richards echoed the Republican's sentiments. "Both Clayton Williams and I will work very hard to keep this an ideological campaign where we really do focus on the issues because we do have disagreements on the issues," she said.

Williams spent more than $8 million — with $6 million from his own pocket — in winning the GOP nomination.

Smith, Puryear win commissioner bids; area voters prefer Mattox, Overstreet

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

In two area county commissioner primary runoffs Tuesday, one incumbent kept his seat, while another was ousted.

Charles "Choc" Smith, the incumbent to the Precinct 2 Carson County Commissioner seat, scraped by his challenger, Richard Robinson, with a vote of 378 to 320 in the Democratic primary runoff.

In Wheeler County, newcomer Tommy Puryear defeated Bill Atherton, the incumbent to the Precinct 2 County Commissioner seat, by a 228 to 210 vote in the Democratic primary runoff.

Neither Smith nor Puryear have opposition in the Nov. 6 general election.

In Gray County, 925 people voted in the Democratic primary runoff and 194 people voted in the Republican primary runoff, an eight percent voter turnout for the county.

In statewide voting in area counties, Hemphill County was the only one which carried Ann Richards to be the Democrats' candidate for governor. Hemphill County voters gave Richards a victory of 131 to 60 over Jim Mattox.

Richards, presently state treasurer, defeated Attorney General Jim Mattox in the Tuesday primary runoff race. In Gray County, voters gave Mattox the edge with a 466 to 439 vote. Carson County voters gave Mattox 655 votes to Richards' 421 votes. Roberts County voters gave Mattox 61 votes to Richards' 29 votes. And Wheeler County voters gave Mattox the edge with a 621 to 305 vote.

Nikki Van Hightower defeated Tom Bowden statewide to gain the place on the ballot for the Democrats in the Nov. 6 general election. Totals in area counties are as follows: Gray — Hightower, 454, Bowden, 405; Carson — Hightower 517, Bowden, 481; Hemphill — Hightower, 87, Bowden, 81; Roberts — Hightower, 38, Bowden, 43; and Wheeler — Hightower, 391, Bowden, 455.

Voters in the Democratic primary runoff in the five area counties in the Justice of the Supreme Court Place 2 race went for the most part with the statewide outcome. Bob Gammage defeated Sears statewide by a 537,537-382,123 vote to gain the Democratic place on the Nov. 6 ballot.

Roberts County voters were the only ones to give Sears the edge with a 56-26 vote over Gammage. In Gray the vote was 650-218 for Gammage; in Carson it was 691-280 for Gammage; in Hemphill it was 110-50 for Gammage; and in Wheeler the vote was 559-267 for Gammage.

In unofficial totals from the Secretary of State's office this morning, a spokesman said Frank Maloney had received 448,538 votes to Morris L. Overstreet's 445,878 votes. Although the statewide votes in the Democrat race gave Maloney the edge, voters in the five-county area voted overwhelmingly for Overstreet. Following are the totals: Gray — Overstreet, 526, Maloney, 325; Carson — Overstreet, 672, Maloney, 326; Hemphill — Overstreet, 118, Maloney, 50; Roberts — Overstreet, 52, Maloney, 22; and Wheeler, Overstreet, 543, Maloney, 306.

The five-county area voters in the two races in the Republican primary runoff voted the same as the voters did statewide.

Wes Gilbreath defeated Grady Yarbrough for the Republican Party's candidate for the land commissioner. The vote totals in area counties are: Gray — Gilbreath, 137, Yarbrough, 49; Carson — Gilbreath, 49, Yarbrough, 12; Hemphill — Gilbreath, 17, Yarbrough, 7; Roberts — Gilbreath, 19, Yarbrough, 6; and Wheeler — Gilbreath, 22, Yarbrough, 3.

Rick Perry easily defeated Richard McIver to get the GOP's nod for the agriculture commissioner. Vote totals in area counties are: Gray — Perry, 154, McIver, 37; Carson — Perry, 55, McIver, 8; Hemphill — Perry, 54, McIver, 1; Roberts — Perry, 24, McIver, 1; and Wheeler — Perry, 25, McIver, 4.

The Secretary of State's office said all of the totals are unofficial today and canvassing of votes will take place within 20 days.

City approves drug program grant pursuit

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners formally approved pursuit of a Panhandle Regional Planning Commission criminal justice grant that would help fund a city narcotics squad during their meeting Tuesday night at City Hall.

City Manager Glen Hackler said local members of the Kiwanis Club approached him and other officials asking what they could do to best assist the city.

Through this morning, only $7,500 of the $20,000 targeted by the Kiwanis had been pledged. Tom Grantham, club president, said his organization is attempting to gather commitments for the money from other civic clubs, businesses and individuals to show the PRPC that Pampa supports a crackdown on drugs.

Hackler pointed out that it is common for local communities to come up with "a match" that shows their commitment to a given project.

"Even though we have a drug effort, we have no specialized unit to deal with drugs on a day-to-day basis," Hackler said. "We need that and this (grant) is an opportunity to have some of that state and federal money we pay in taxes returned to Pampa."

He said the grant could be as much as $117,000 over five years, while local support would only need to be $20,000 for the same period. Kiwanis have until Friday to raise the money, due to PRPC deadlines.

City commissioners accepted a proposal to spend $81,575 on the narcotics unit the first year and $49,000 each of the next four years.

Besides private and grant money, Gray County would be asked to put $10,000 a year into the effort. The city would spend $12,575 the first year, which would then be increased to $31,200 by the last year of the grant.

Mayor Richard Peet said the local drug unit would in no way try to replace efforts by the Panhandle Regional Narcotics Task Force. Instead, he said the local effort would provide, on a daily basis, what the task force can only offer periodically.

Hackler and Peet were approached after the meeting with a citizen complaint that citizens should not be expected to privately fund an anti-drug effort that tax dollars are supposed to be spent for.

"The Kiwanis were right when they said that this isn't just a problem for police, it is all of our's problem," Hackler said. "The Kiwanis should be commended for wanting to take a hand in solving this."

Grantham said pledges will be taken in letter form by writing Pampa Kiwanis Club, Box 1053, Pampa, TX 79066.

Hackler emphasized that private funding was more desirable than a tax increase to fund the match and also showed the community does not have to be forced to support an anti-drug effort, but is eager to do so.

Commissioners also accepted bids for a new turf vehicle and ball picker for Hidden Hills Municipal Golf Course and sandblasting and painting at both city swimming pools.

Total cost for the E-Z-Go Textron turf vehicle and Rangemaster ball picker was $5,760, while a sandblasting and painting proposal of $10,175 by T.W. Balch and Son of Pampa was accepted as low bid.

During a work session prior to the regular session, commissioners encouraged Hackler to move ahead as quickly as possible with a new cable television contract with Sammons Communications.

Provisions in the contract will call for rebuilding of the current, antiquated system and at least 40 basic channels, city and Sammons officials have said.

Commissioner Robert Dixon expressed interest in serving on a subcommittee made up of elected leaders and community members knowledgeable of how cable TV works that will assist the city in making sure a new contract with Sammons includes all the proper provisions.

"I want to see that we are not locked in by this agreement so that no new channels can be added as they become available," Dixon said. "With new technology, there will be new channels becoming available over the next 10 years or so. I think that if and when those channels become available, they should be made accessible to us. There are supposed to be four new channels on the air just in June."

Once a new contract is written by the city, local officials said, it will be forwarded to Sammons offices in Dallas and negotiations between the two entities will begin.

Hackler said the contract should be approved by the fall and a new system in place by the fall 1991.

Commissioners agreed that a new system should be as good as any in the state and equipped for expansion through the beginning of the 21st century.

Jim Hill with Josten's Publishing demonstrates how an Apple computer could aid the Lefors Independent School District in numerous areas, including helping the students in the annual yearbook production. The demonstration was given at the regular meeting of the Lefors ISD Board of Trustees on Tuesday.

Lefors trustees hear computer presentation

LEFORS — A computer demonstration and the adoption of a form which simplifies accepting some students into the school district highlighted the Tuesday meeting of the Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees.

Bobby Turner, a salesman of Apple hardware, and Jim Hill with Josten's Publishing gave a presentation on how computers could help make the school's yearbook production much better.

"The students can create the pages and see how it will look before sending it to the printer," Hill told school board members.

Turner explained that the nice item about the Macintosh in journalism is the ability of the computer to network.

"This will help the kids get the skills they are going to have to have in the business world," Turner said. "This educational skill is in a great demand."

Turner showed how the students could use different graphics and art, as well as boxes and other designs in the layout. "You have absolute control of what you do," he said.

Lefors Principal Mike Jackson said, "I'd like to see us do something in journalism in our school beyond what we're doing now."

Jackson said he asked Turner and Hill to give a demonstration to the board so the group could see what options are available in the computer world.

Trustee Karen Lake asked if going to a computer would save the school district money on the annual.

Turner said that although it would save only a small amount of money, it allows the students to use more creative layout and design.

Hill added that companies and other schools using the computer system demonstrated have seen a "tremendous boom for writing."

In unrelated business, the school board unanimously approved a form, "Affidavit for Temporary Custodian," for use in accepting students into the district that do not reside with their parents.

Jackson said the document would have to be filed with the county clerk's office. He said the form is used in other school districts to help simplify the process of bringing in a student who does not live with his parents.

"It is not transferring custody of your child," Jackson emphasized, adding it was a contract that gives the school district the right to see after the child.

In other business, the board:

- Unanimously approved a motion by Trustee Larry Daniels, seconded by Trustee Keith Roberson, to purchase new uniforms for the high school cheerleaders. The

Pampa Fire Chief Robert Young to retire

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa Fire Chief Robert Young notified City Manager Glen Hackler this morning he is retiring from the department after 35 years employment, the last two as fire chief.

Hackler said he and Young shared a mutual concern over morale and personnel problems in the fire department and felt the time was right for the retirement, which Young had been considering for some time.

In a press release, Hackler noted a need for a new beginning in the fire department on Young's part, as well as a desire to enjoy retirement while he was still young enough to do so.

"Robert and I have acknowledged there are problems in the fire department and he has said he would like to leave on a positive note," Hackler said today. "Robert Young and I both care about the city. Robert is retiring of his own free will. This retirement reflects what we both feel is in the best interest of the city of Pampa."

Young said today that 35 years with the Pampa Fire Department is "enough for anyone to endure."

"I was ready to retire when I took the chief's job," Young said. "I'm not going to talk a lot about what's going on (within the department). It may have been a lack of leadership and I would even maybe include myself in that."

Young said when he took over as fire chief there were morale and discipline problems in the department that he wanted to correct.

"My emphasis was on training and more discipline," he stated. "I feel I've accomplished a lot of that."

He said he was unsure what it would take to correct problems in the department but that, "hopefully with my retirement, morale will improve."

Hackler said the city "has not avoided the issues here and it is our goal to work through them."

He also pointed out Young will remain as chief until a new chief is hired.

City officials said a search for a new fire chief will begin immediately.

New chamber manager takes reins here

By KAYLA PURSLEY
 Lifestyles Editor

Delmar "Red" McNatt has assumed the responsibilities of Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce manager.

McNatt and his wife, Brenda, moved here from Blackwell, Okla., where he was executive director of Blackwell Industrial Authority, a quasi-government agency that issued industrial revenue bonds.

"I arrived in Pampa one week ago Tuesday and have spent my first week feeling my way around the office and learning names," says McNatt. "I'm spending this week getting out and meeting other people."

"The first priority of business for me is the sales tax issue," McNatt said, adding, "Forty other communities will have it on the ballot for May. A lot of our competition is going to have the ability to do things we won't be able to do without it."

McNatt says that his interest for the community is in the area of economic development "which is more than industrial development - expanding our retail base, getting further into the trade territory, getting more out of the market."

'Red' McNatt

He explained, "Pampa is the second largest shopping area in the Panhandle. We need to make sure that we have the right kinds of products that they are shopping for."

McNatt graduated from Southeastern Oklahoma State University in 1969. He served in the Army reserves before embarking on a career of economic development and chamber of commerce management. He is a graduate of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce Institute and worked for 12 years as a chamber manager before going full time into industrial development.

Born in Fort Smith, Ark., McNatt was raised in Arkhoma, a small town half in Arkansas and half in Oklahoma. His wife Brenda is a barber/stylist. She plans to take on a new job herself at Touch of Class hairstylists, beginning next week.

The McNatts enjoy playing golf. The new chamber manager also enjoys riding motorcycles. Brenda was active in Beta Sigma Phi and Business and Professional Women's Club in Oklahoma.

Judge says TV reporter must release notes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A federal magistrate says a television reporter should be required to release what he argues are confidential notes that would reveal how the reporter obtained a jailhouse telephone interview with the accused killer of a policeman.

Magistrate John Primomo made the recommendation Tuesday in the case of KMOL-TV reporter Brian Karem, saying that the administration of justice should be given more weight than Karem's rights as a reporter. The notes in question involved an interview Karem had with Henry David Hernandez, who with his brother, Julian, is charged with capital murder in the shooting death of San Antonio officer Gary Lee Williams on March 27, 1989.

In the interview, Henry David Hernandez admitted he fired the shot that killed Williams.

The recommendation by Primomo will be considered by U.S. District Judge H.F. "Hippo" Garcia. The federal judge could order that a state contempt of court charge against Karem for refusing to surrender his notes be revived and expose him to a possible six-month jail sentence.

Karem would then be left with the alternative of surrendering the notes and purging himself of the contempt or filing an appeal to a higher court.

Ironically, Primomo found that disclosure of two unnamed parties who served "as conduits" would not do either side, the state or the defense, any harm or good.

"I don't have anything they should want, but I should give it to them anyway? It doesn't make sense," Karem said after learning of the recommendation by Primomo.

Special Easter presentation begins tonight

Master, Is It I?, an individual account of how Christ affected the lives of his disciples, is to be presented tonight and Friday at First Christian Church, 1633 N. Nelson.

The free performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. both nights. The public is invited to attend this dramatic presentation in observance of the Easter season.

Twelve men from First Christian Church are to portray the disciples as they assembled for the Last Supper. Christ is depicted by a vacant chair, lighted, in the center of the tableau.

The actors are seated as the disciples are painted in Leonardo da Vinci's painting, The Last Supper. Narrator of the presentation will be Dr. John T. Tate, pastor of First Christian.

The following persons are to play the part of the disciples:

Betrayal and the promise of eternal life are reflected in this still life of 'The Last Supper.'

The men's stage makeup will be done by Sally Stringer, Vicki Hayes, Cindy Gindorf, Sandy Clark, Loree Shultz, and Sylvia Greenhouse.

Clements says school finance bill not funded

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements called the House's $450 million school finance plan "an exercise in nothing" even as a committee outlined $167 million in budget cuts to pay for the measure.

"It's not going to go anywhere. It's not funded," Clements said Tuesday of the measure that the House passed Monday night.

"It's all well and good to pass a bill, but then the issue becomes where's the money, and if there's no funds for the bill, then it's an exercise in nothing," he said.

Clements does not want to spend more than about $300 million in the next school year on court-ordered school finance reform, and has said he will veto any new tax bill the Legislature passes.

But House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said representatives will begin debating how to fund the bill — including looking at new taxes.

Senators already have approved a $1.2 billion school finance measure. A compromise between the two bills will be fashioned by a conference committee.

The House Appropriations Committee on Tuesday tentatively approved $199.6 million in cuts from a list of $269.5 million suggested by Clements to pay for 1990-91 increases mandated in the education bill.

The committee also adopted an $8.8 million cutback proposed by the Legislative Budget

Board, bringing the total that could be cut to $208.4 million.

However, $41 million of the total is not firm because the revenue produced from two cuts could be higher or lower, meaning the committee can count on raising only $167.4 million.

Committee vice chairman Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford, said the committee would take a final vote on the proposals today.

The measures will be debated by the House next Monday as part of an appropriations bill, said House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Cuts proposed by Clements that the committee approved include:

- $107 million from Capitol restoration. Clements proposed a $50 million cut.
- $42.4 million from the Rainy Day Fund.
- $9.2 million from the governor's emergency and deficiency fund.
- Escheat funds, or bank accounts that have been dormant for seven years and revert to the state. Revenue is estimated at $35 million.
- Void warrants, or checks the state issues that have not been cashed, worth an estimated $6 million.

From the more than $560 million in additional cuts proposed by the Legislative Budget Board, the committee approved only an $8.8 million cut in debt service appropriations for the supercollider.

Committee members voted 15-1 against reducing the state contribution rate to the Teacher Retirement System for fiscal year 1991, a move that would have netted $164.4 million.

They also unanimously nixed several proposals that would have cut higher education funding, including eliminating a 3 percent faculty salary increase and gutting appropriations for remedial education at the college level.

Lawmakers also narrowly defeated a measure that would have reduced debt service appropriations for the Department of Criminal Justice and other agencies.

Proponents of the measure said it was merely an accounting measure and would only have affected funds that would lapse in 1991.

But Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said it would give the appearance that the Legislature was taking funds from the state's prisons, which are overseen by the federal courts.

"We shouldn't start taking money from one lawsuit to pay for another lawsuit," he said. "We'll be in court for the rest of our lives."

The Legislature is in its second week of a special session to revamp the state's system of financing public education.

The Texas Supreme Court found the current method unconstitutional because it allows glaring disparities in funding between property-rich and poor school districts, and has given the state until May 1 to change the system.

Travis County 345th District Court Judge Scott McCown on Tuesday said he would consider a motion filed by eight lawmakers to extend the May 1 deadline imposed by the state Supreme Court.

Gammage, Maloney winning GOP court nominations

By PATRICE GRAVINO
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Its November lineup complete, the Democratic Party turns to defending its dominance of the Texas Supreme Court.

In the final Supreme Court race to be decided, Austin appeals court Judge Bob Gammage won the Democratic nomination Tuesday in a runoff against Houston appeals Judge Ross Sears.

Gammage will face Republican Dallas appeals Judge Charles Ben Howell. With the GOP holding three of the nine Supreme Court seats, winning three more seats in November would tip the majority in their favor.

In a contest for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ballot, a squeaker that depended ultimately on Dallas County voters developed between Democrats Morris Overstreet and Frank Maloney.

With 91 percent of the vote counted, the candidates were divided by only about 9,000 votes of more than 800,000 tallied for Place 1 on the state's highest criminal appeals court.

Misprinted Dallas County

Democratic Party ballots delayed the vote tally by several hours.

Overstreet, a Potter County court-at-law judge in Amarillo, carried Dallas County in the primary. Maloney, an Austin lawyer, said he hoped "to just break even" in Dallas County voting in the runoff.

With 91 percent of precincts counted in unofficial totals from the secretary of state, Maloney was leading with 51 percent of the vote, 417,858. Overstreet had 49 percent, or 408,648.

"Dallas is the question," said Maloney. "Last time, I did nothing up there, except I had The Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald support me."

"It looks like I'm not going to have the reputation of one who won by a landslide," said Overstreet. "It's going to be close."

Maloney had 36 percent of the statewide primary vote and Overstreet had 34 percent.

The question of race was a hot point in the campaign after Maloney alleged that Overstreet received several endorsements from other statewide candidates because he is black.

Overstreet scoffed at the idea, saying judicial philosophy is the true issue in the contest. He said he thinks the question of race "heightened" the contest, but did not affect voting.

If elected, Overstreet would be the first black elected to statewide office since Reconstruction.

The runoff winner will face Republican lawyer Joe Devany of Dallas.

In the Supreme Court race, Gammage now will face Republican appeals Judge Charles Ben Howell of Dallas for Place 2 on the state's highest civil appeals court.

Gammage, a member of the 3rd Court of Appeals, defeated Sears with 59 percent, or 507,046 votes, with 91 percent of precincts counted. Sears got 41 percent, or 347,991. Sears is on the 14th Court of Appeals.

The campaign included Gammage's accusations that Sears is biased on the bench, although Gammage offered no proof. There also were allegations from a Houston lawyer that Sears knocked out another attorney in a drunken brawl over gambling debts in the 1970s.

Sears denied the story and attributed it to Gammage's campaign. He called Gammage, a former state senator and U.S. representative from Houston, "a professional politician."

In another Supreme Court race to be decided in November, Chief Justice Tom Phillips will face Democrat Oscar Mauzy, a Texas Supreme Court justice. Phillips, who was appointed in 1987, won the Republican nomination in the primary last month. Mauzy was unopposed in the primary.

The third Supreme Court seat up for grabs is Place 1, Democrat Gene Kelly, an attorney from Universal City, faces Republican state District Judge John Cornyn.

Other Criminal Appeals Court races to be decided in November are:

— Place 2: Democratic incumbent Sam Houston Clinton vs. Republican Oliver Kitzman, a state district judge in Brookshire.

— Place 3: Democratic incumbent Bill White vs. a Libertarian candidate to be decided.

— Place 4: Democrat Charles Baird, a Houston lawyer, vs. Republican incumbent David Berchellmann.

Perry, Gilbreath top GOP agriculture, land races

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — State Rep. Rick Perry of Haskell, who easily won the GOP nomination for agriculture commissioner, says his new party's leaders "have done everything they said they would" to support his candidacy.

Texas Republicans "accepted me with open arms," said Perry, a former Democrat who grabbed a runoff victory Tuesday over Richard McIvler, a 60-year-old Stafford geological consultant.

But the Democratic incumbent, Jim Hightower, dubbed Perry the GOP's "new golden boy" and said, "There will be no more soft ride for him" when they square off in the November general election.

Perry, 40, was elected to the House three times as a Democrat but switched to the Republican Party last September. Hightower was elected agriculture commissioner in 1982 and re-elected in 1986.

Also Tuesday, Houston investor Wes Gilbreath captured the Republican nomination for land commissioner over Grady Yarbrough, a 53-year-old Tyler high school teacher trying to become the first black elected to statewide office since Reconstruction.

Gilbreath, an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination in 1988, will face Democratic incumbent Garry Mauro, who like Hightower was first elected in 1982.

"I believe Mauro can be beaten," said Gilbreath, 61. "He has so many negatives I don't see how he can win, to be honest with you."

Mauro said he was convinced voters are "tired of mudslinging and negative campaigning," and insisted he would run on his record.

Perry and Gilbreath led by large margins in the March 13 primary, with each getting 47 percent of their party's vote. They were forced into runoffs, however, because they failed to get a majority.

With 99 percent of the precincts reporting Tuesday, Perry had 96,764 votes, or 68.7 percent, to 44,084, or 31.3 percent, for McIvler.

Gilbreath had 94,674 votes, or 66.6 percent, to 47,523, or 33.4 percent, for Yarbrough.

In Perry, the GOP hopes to have a strong challenger to Hightower, a nationally known farm spokesman who has supported several issues opposed by conservative farm groups. Hightower won his March primary over six candidates whose filing fees were paid by the Texas Farm Bureau.

Perry received the backing of party leaders such as U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and Gov. Bill Clements. Hightower said Perry "doesn't amount to a hill of beans himself" and must rely on money raised by Clements and lobbyists for chemical companies.

But Perry said that once Hightower's record is made public, "and we tell the truth about him, it should be a pretty easy choice for voters."

Van Hightower takes Democratic race for state treasurer

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will continue to have a woman as state treasurer.

Nikki Van Hightower, the Harris County treasurer, won the Democratic nomination Tuesday by soundly defeating San Saba County Judge Tom Bowden.

The win propels Ms. Van Hightower to the November election to face Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison, a Dallas lawyer, businesswoman and the first Republican woman ever elected to the Texas Legislature.

The two are vying for the position being vacated by Ann Richards, who won the Democratic nomination for governor Tuesday.

Ms. Richards' election as treasurer in 1982 marked the first time a woman had won a statewide race in Texas in 50 years.

With 91 percent of the vote tallied, Van Hightower had 613,759 votes or 66.1 percent to Bowden's 314,996 votes or 33.9 percent.

"I feel quite confident" of winning the general election, said Van Hightower, 50, Harris County's treasurer since 1987.

"I'm not tied to the banking industry or the bond counsel industry that has made their living off working with the state," she said, alluding to the fact that Ms. Hutchison's husband, Ray Hutchison, is a bond attorney.

But Hutchison, 46, said her husband refused to bid on any state project the moment she became a candidate for treasurer.

She also said Van Hightower has received large contributions from bond attorneys.

"There will be a very clear choice for the voters," said Hutchison. "She comes from a liberal political activist background and I come from a business and state government background, and I'm conservative," Hutchison said.

Prior to becoming Harris County treasurer, Van Hightower ran unsuccessfully for a seat on the Houston City Council in 1983.

She has a doctorate degree in political science, taught at the University of Houston and long has been involved in women's rights issues, helping to found the Houston Area Women's Center and serving as its executive director from 1979 to 1986.

Hutchison was elected to the Legislature in 1972. In 1976, she was appointed by then-President Ford as vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

By state standards, the treasurer's office is small — about 260 employees and a $20 million annual budget. But the power and prestige of the office has increased under Richards. The agency deposits state revenues in banks and administers the unclaimed property laws.

Area residents can respond to DOE proposal

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa area residents concerned with the potential closing of the Amarillo International Airport have the opportunity to directly inform the Department of Energy where they stand on the issue.

Debbie Musgrave of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce said DOE response forms are available at the chamber office, 200 N. Ballard. They are the same forms DOE officials had Texas Panhandle residents fill out during a recent Amarillo public hearing on the issue.

"If they will come by and fill them out, we will mail them in or give them the address to do it," Musgrave said.

The forms have two statements that read, "I support the Pantex weapons facility, but oppose the proposed restricted airspace over Pantex," and "I support the restricted airspace over Pantex." Respondents are to check the statement that echoes their sentiments.

Pampa Mayor Richard Peet, who spoke at the public hearing, said if airspace around the nuclear weapons plant is restricted, it would have a major economic impact on the entire area since such a plan would eliminate virtually all commercial flights into and out of Amarillo.

Over 50 speakers from interests as prominent as American Airlines, the Airline Pilots Association and senators' Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm's offices spoke against the closing.

While Congressman Bill Sarpalis said a compromise agreement may have been reached in the situation, Pampa officials said it is important that local views on the issue be known on the federal level.

The DOE is asking for the increased restrictions as part of a nationwide effort to tighten airspace around nuclear weapon facilities to decrease the risk of terrorist attacks.

However, Bill Waters of the Pampa Industrial Foundation told the DOE that the "fiercely patriotic" residents of the Panhandle do not agree, after listening to expert briefings, that the restrictions will do anything to increase security.

Amarillo City Commission members have submitted a plan that would eliminate helicopter and ultralight aircraft flights over Pantex, which they said pose the real security risk, while allowing commercial flights to continue.

Assume innocence for taxpayers, too

As T-Day (Tax Day) approaches, millions of Americans are shuddering as they fill out the 1040 and other labyrinthine tax forms. Many citizens give up in fuming disgust and hire a tax preparer. But those who sharpen their pencils and plug in their adding machines may call the IRS's tax information line.

Last year IRS "assistors" answered taxpayers questions incorrectly 34 percent of the time, possibly leading to fines, seizures and other penalties. The figure comes from the IRS's own calculations; outside observers say the error rate is much higher.

This year the IRS has instituted reforms that decrease your chance of getting an incorrect response. The major change is that it's now twice as hard even to get in touch with IRS assistors. "This year IRS is answering one out of three calls," said Jennie S. Stathis of the General Accounting Office in testimony before Congress. "Last year it answered almost two out of three."

The other change, at least according to the IRS, is that the 34 percent error rate has been reduced to 22 percent. That's still pretty high: Almost one-fourth of the time the IRS still gives bum advice. Imagine what would happen if, when your pharmacy filled your prescription, 22 percent of the time it gave you the wrong drug. Pharmacies, of course, are private companies that must satisfy their customers, while the IRS is, as the title of a new book by David Burnham aptly describes it, A Law Unto Itself.

The IRS's mistakes don't stop with tax preparation, but extend to assessments. The cover story of the April Money says that a whopping half of the time the IRS sends out a bill for additional taxes and penalties it asks for too much. The cost to taxpayers: $7 billion, on average $425 per notice. Money concludes: "Clearly, individuals are caving in to questionable demands for more money that would propel them to the phone in a second if the bill came from some bank or credit-card company."

Few taxpayers are CPAs or tax lawyers with the expertise to substantiate charges against the IRS. Moreover, the IRS's own hard-fisted tactics bludgeon taxpayers into uncomplaining compliance. Money says one reason taxpayers question IRS so seldom is simple "undifferentiated fear of fighting. The IRS is infamous for star-chamber audits, summary confiscation of property, and all-seeing, imperious independence."

A Law Unto Itself describes how the IRS has become a berserk agency, "the single most powerful instrument of social control in the United States." In one example, Burnham describes how two IRS agents, Lawrence S. Plave and Thomas A. Lopez, conducted a vendetta against Daniel Heller, a respected Miami lawyer, that led to his unjust arrest, conviction and imprisonment.

Taxpayers need protection from IRS Imperiousness and incompetence. A first step has been proposed by Sen. David Pryor. As things now stand, a taxpayer is guilty whenever the IRS accuses him so, and must then prove himself innocent. Instead, we should insure that, as in other parts of our legal system, every taxpayer is proclaimed innocent until proved guilty in a court of law.

Sharpen your veto pen, Bush

James J. Kilpatrick

Each house of Congress now has completed action on its own child care bill. Both measures address the same problem (if it is a problem), but they address it differently. After three years in the legislative cooker, what emerges is a bowl of bureaucratic mush — and formidably expensive mush at that.

A threshold question never has been satisfactorily answered: Is there a child care problem so critical that it compellingly demands an elaborate federal program? The self-evident fact is that the children who would be affected by the pending bills are now being cared for — somehow. They are not lying unattended in city streets or country roads.

Most attention focuses upon the estimated 8 million children under 5 whose mothers are in the labor force. Census data suggest (but do not firmly establish) that 3.3 million of them are staying with a relative, usually a grandparent. Another 2.3 million are with non-relatives. As many as 2 million children are in day care centers, mostly operated by churches. The others are in a variety of situations.

Some unknown percentage of these toddlers are doubtless in less than ideal circumstances. They may not be getting what the legislative sponsors term "quality" care, but evidence on this score is shaky. Last year a Harris poll found that almost 80 percent of parents are satisfied with both the availability and the cost of the child care they have arranged. Plainly there is no "crisis" that demands immediate resolution through a multibillion-dollar federal program.

Both the House and the Senate bills take a crisis for granted. The bill just passed by the House is the more elaborate — and the more unacceptable — of the two. It splatters money all over the landscape, through a bewildering maze of grants, appropriations, incentive funds and earned income tax credits. In the first year, actual federal outlays might be pegged at $1.75 billion, but costs would explode thereafter. Child care promises to become the most costly entitlement program since Medicaid.

We are talking about a real budget-buster, but cost is the least of the objections to the bill. Both versions will undermine to some extent the venerable principle of federalism. Both implicate a kind of statism that is profoundly disturbing.

At the moment — but only at the moment — the program does not mandate specific, detailed national standards for providers of day care services. This will not last long. The animating spirit behind federal funding is federal control. In order to qualify for federal grants, the states eventually will have to accept "guidelines" on child-staff ratios, the qualifications of child care personnel, and all the rest.

In this process, a priceless ingredient of federalism will be frittered away. Under our system of government, the states are supposed to function as laboratories of political experiment. That is what the 10th Amendment is all about. But when the federal straitjacket tightens, as it surely will, the areas of experimentation will be greatly diminished.

Let us look down the road, and let us reflect upon the secular role that lies ahead. Roughly one-third of the eligible children in need of day care now are cared for in church-related facilities. There they receive not merely food for their bodies, but food for their minds as well. They get at least some instruction in sound moral and social values.

But such values are of small concern to the secular bureaucracy that this program would create. Millions of poor children will become, for most purposes, wards of the state.

The competing House and Senate bills leave the question of child care vouchers up in the air. Such powerful lobbies as the National Education Association are fighting bitterly to prevent the voucher theory from finding a foothold — yet a system of vouchers, redeemable through any qualified provider, offers a freedom of choice that otherwise would be lacking. A constitutional means must be found that will not cut the church-related facilities out of the picture.

A conference committee will now go to work on resolving differences between House and Senate. In the nature of things, a compromise measure will emerge. Not 50 of the 535 members will understand the final provisions. All that will be clearly understood is that both parties will have responded, after a fashion, to what is misguidedly perceived as a critical national need.

President Bush, sharpen your veto pen!

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, April 11, the 101st day of 1990. There are 264 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 11, 1945, during World War II, American soldiers liberated the notorious Nazi concentration camp Buchenwald in what is now East Germany.

On this date:

In 1814, Napoleon Bonaparte abdicated as emperor of France and was banished to the island of Elba.

In 1689, William III and Mary II were crowned as joint sovereigns in Britain.

In 1898, President McKinley asked Congress for a declaration of war against Spain.

In 1899, the treaty ending the Spanish-American War was declared in effect.

In 1921, Iowa became the first state to impose a cigarette tax.

In 1951, President Truman relieved Gen. Douglas MacArthur of his commands in the Far East.

In 1970, 20 years ago, Apollo 13 blasted off on its ill-fated mission to the moon.

There's homeless everywhere

Americans, with their penchant for self-flagellation, are feeling ashamed by the "homeless" in our midst.

Welfare organizations, to justify their existence, belabor the plight of the pitiful "homeless" and thus seek and get support for themselves.

The homeless we have always had with us. In frontier America they were called "drifters" or "wayfaring strangers."

Later generations of homeless were referred to as "vagrants," "hoboes," "bums," "panhandlers."

Only recently have we sought to combine the deserving needy with the social parasites and dignify them all as "homeless people."

They are everywhere.

Under the previous Labor government of Britain there was a time of such deference to the homeless that householders dared not leave their homes unoccupied, fearful that "homeless" people would move in, assert "squatters' rights" and defy eviction.

British realtors dared not post "for sale" signs for the same reasons.

Now in Eastern Europe as the wall comes down and the Iron Curtain goes up, we are learning that communist countries have had their share of homeless also.

Paul Harvey

For four decades, communist leaders denied that there was any poverty, any unemployment, any homelessness under their one-for-all and all-for-one socialism.

But there was.

Communists for generations have contended that social problems existed only in the capitalist West.

Now we can see that communist countries had an underclass of people infinitely more significant than ours.

In Hungary, now liberated from communism, they are having to acknowledge homeless people, listen to them, deal with them.

Hungary's homeless are learning under "freedom" to assert their "rights."

In February a hundred homeless took over the rail station in Budapest. A year previous they'd have been arrested, and would have just "disappeared."

This time authorities bowed to the demonstrators, converted old army barracks into makeshift shelters.

But hard-working Hungarians are less than sympathetic. A truck driver, driving past a camp for "homeless" people, called out, "Hey, you guys — get to work!"

Some have. Stung by public derision, some have found and accepted jobs.

Indeed, in Hungary — as elsewhere — they are willing workers without work. It multiplies the cruelty when these get lumped with the professional poor. In Hungary — you will excuse the play on words — with inefficient industries being closed, there are legions who are pitifully "hungry."

Insurance firms collide with public ire

By ROBERT WALTERS

Although unjustifiably high auto insurance rates have infuriated consumers throughout the country, nowhere has the industry's abuse of the public trust been more apparent than in New Jersey.

State officials are only beginning to undo the damage done in the wake of the 1983 founding of the Joint Underwriting Association, intended to provide insurance to the relatively few high-risk motorists who otherwise were unlikely to obtain coverage.

Although the JUA was established as a state agency, the authority to issue policies, process claims and otherwise administer the program was delegated to 15 commercial insurance companies, including State Farm, Liberty Mutual, Travelers, Aetna, Continental and other industry leaders.

Those firms abused the JUA to circumvent government requirements that limited the amount they could charge for insurance coverage and prohibited rate increases without state approval.

Instead of confining JUA coverage to accident-prone motorists, the insurance companies sought to eliminate their risk exposure by dumping into the JUA program virtually all young drivers, most new state residents and those with slightly blemished driving records.

By rejecting applications for standard commercial insurance from all except the least risky drivers, the insurance companies filled the JUA program with 1.5 million people — 40 percent of the state's motorists.

The system was further flawed by an arrangement that linked the administrative fees paid to the insurance companies to the dollar value of the JUA claims they settled. Thus, greedy firms could — and did — earn higher fees by approving excessive claims and paying out more in state money than the fund took in.

The industry has not been notably more responsible in other states during the 1980s. Between 1982 and 1988, auto insurance rates nationally soared 75.7 percent, while the Consumer Price Index rose 24.6 percent.

Moreover, the rate hikes far outpaced the growth in the costs of two leading auto insurance expenses — medical care and auto repairs. During the same six-year period, the increases in those categories were 52.6 percent and 26.1 percent, respectively.

For every dollar they collect from their customers, auto insurance companies retain 35 cents to pay for generous executive salaries, agent commissions, administrative costs, legal fees and assorted other expenses.

Only 65 cents is returned to the policyholders as claims payments. By comparison, consumers receive 90 cents from health insurance companies and 95 cents from the federal government's Social Security Administration.

Probably the best known popular protest against auto insurance companies occurred in California, where consumer advocate Ralph Nader notes that "consumers and businesses were angry about years of price-gouging, coverage reductions and arbitrary cancellations."

In 1988, that state's voters approved a ballot proposition backed by Nader that called for an immediate rollback of premiums to 1987 levels followed by a 20 percent rate cut. In addition, it mandated strict state oversight and required insurance companies to justify future requests for rate hikes by making their financial records available for public inspection.

Other states where efforts have been mounted to remedy the seeming seemingly intractable problem include Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Colorado, Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Massachusetts, Virginia and South Carolina.

In New Jersey, Gov. James J. Florio proclaimed shortly after his inauguration early this year that the state's motorists had been "ripped off" by insurance company profiteering.

Legislation recently enacted by the state legislature and signed into law by Florio imposes more than $1.4 billion worth of taxes and assessments on those firms to help eliminate the $3.1 billion JUA debt. In addition, policy holders will receive a 20 percent premium reduction.

In many other states, however, angry but frustrated consumers still await meaningful reform.

State Department wants to freeze assets in S&Ls accused of fraud

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is considering freezing assets of savings and loans and S&L officers accused of fraud, but most of the cases already under investigation won't be affected.

The authority to freeze the funds was included in last year's S&L bailout bill passed by Congress, Justice spokesman David Runkel said Tuesday. It became effective on Aug. 10.

Because the bill is not retroactive, however, the fraud or other wrongdoing must have been committed after that date for assets to be frozen, Runkel said.

Thus far, no "appropriate cases" have been found, since most of the cases being scrutinized by the Dallas Bank Fraud Task Force concern "allegations of wrongdoing that go back several years," the spokesman said.

Nevertheless, he said, a large number of cases remain under investigation.

"I can't tell you that this is going to lead to substantial sums being attached. But it's a possibility," Runkel said. "And it's something we're looking at, exploring, for possible use."

The freezing of assets would be done before a final court judgment is entered on criminal or civil cases and "would prevent assets from being dissipated" as the legal process is carried out, he said.

"We would have them, so that they would be available for recapture" by the government after a verdict, he said.

The announcement came about a month after a House subcommittee chairman said thousands of S&L fraud investigations were not being

Labor Party's bid for coalition fails

By DAN PETREANU
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Labor Party leader Shimon Peres' bid to form a new coalition government unraveled today after two members of an ultra-orthodox religious party reversed themselves and defected at the last minute.

The dramatic turnaround came as Parliament convened for a vote of confidence on the proposed Labor-led government, which Peres said would make peace negotiations with Palestinians its top priority.

Peres was expected to ask President Chaim Herzog for additional time to forge a coalition. Herzog is empowered to grant a three-week extension.

Labor sources who demanded anonymity said Peres needed an extra two days to give the allied ultra-orthodox Agudat Israel religious party time to replace or bring into line the two defectors, Avraham Verdiger and Eliezer Mizrahi.

The defectors oppose a government that depends on Arab members of Parliament for support and also reject the return of occupied land in exchange for peace.

In this predominantly secular country, Agudat Israel and other small religious parties hold disproportionate sway by virtue of the split between the country's two major forces — Labor and the right-wing Likud bloc.

In recent days, people have staged mass rallies and hunger strikes demanding electoral reform, such as direct election of the prime minister.

The protests targeted both Labor and its right-wing rival, the Likud bloc of caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who have been criticized for trying to lure defectors with offers of Cabinet posts, safe Parliament seats and government funds for religious institutions.

Mizrahi said that as an act of conscience he would oppose a Labor-led government despite his party's decision to accept Peres.

"For the peace and safety of the three million Jews of this country, I oppose the government," said Mizrahi.

Verdiger announced his resignation from Parliament. That would take effect in two days, after which he could be replaced.

Bush urges Gorbachev to use restraint in Lithuania

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is prodding Mikhail S. Gorbachev to show the same restraint in Lithuania as he did in Eastern Europe, praising the Soviet leader as an apostle of "peaceful change and the evolution of democracy."

Bush said Tuesday that Gorbachev's tolerance of democratic freedoms in Warsaw Pact nations had demonstrated "a commitment to reform and openness that's remarkable."

"So give him credit and deal openly" with him on problems such as Lithuania, the president said. "But when you have difficulties like we have today, talk frankly with him about it."

Today, Bush planned to talk about Lithuania with a group of leaders of Baltic-American groups.

Bush's twin-edged message of praise and restraint appeared intended to put pressure on Gorbachev not to use force or additional intimidation against Lithuania to abandon its declaration of independence.

White House chief of staff John Sununu compared Bush's strategy to an angler trying to land a 12-pound fish on a two-pound test line. "A little slack, a little tension, a little slack, a little tension," Sununu said.

Bush, on a visit to Toronto, said no one could have predicted Gorbachev's willingness to accept changes in Eastern Europe.

"In other words, he has demonstrated that he is committed to peaceful change and the evolution of democracy," he said.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, who was Bush's host, went beyond the president in extolling Gorbachev.

Mulroney said Gorbachev, in contrast to other Soviet leaders, "is much more attractive and more realistic and more — appears to be much more in keeping with some, if not all, of the values that we in the West defend."

Mulroney was the first of three Western leaders holding talks with Bush over a 10-day period. Bush will see British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in Bermuda on Friday and confer with French President Francois Mitterrand in Key Largo, Fla., on April 19.

The chief topics of Bush's talks with Mulroney were the tensions in Lithuania and the president's five-day summit with Gorbachev beginning May 30.

Bush said that if the situation in Lithuania deteriorates, "it would be extraordinarily difficult to move forward as rapidly as I'd like to see us move forward with them on a lot of questions."

He said the presence of Soviet tanks in Lithuania make it "even more important to have good-faith negotiations" over the fate of the republic.

"I would just appeal to all sides and anyone with any influence to encourage dialogue and discussion," he said.

Bush said the setting of summit dates did not tie his hands in trying to influence the Soviet attitude toward the Baltic republic.

"I happen to believe when you have complications that that's a good time to talk," Bush said. "It's a good time to have more discussion. It's a good time to avoid difficulty, if possible, and to hammer out differences."

As for his summit with Gorbachev, the president said "there's an awful lot to be done" if the two sides hope to sign an agreement to cut their arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons.

He said the summit, itself, would serve as a catalyst to push the negotiations along.

Bush and Mulroney celebrated the first day of baseball season by tossing out the first balls to begin the Toronto Blue Jays' opening game against Bush's home state Texas Rangers.

France says it didn't barter for hostages' release

By ELAINE GANLEY
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The French government responded to mounting criticism today by insisting it had not dealt with terrorists in negotiating the release of a French woman, her Belgian companion and their child.

The three were released in Lebanon by Abu Nidal's Libyan-backed Palestinian terrorist group on Tuesday after 2 1/2 years in captivity and flown to France, spending the night at a military hospital outside Paris.

Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said negotiations for the release of the three, who were believed to have been held in Libya, were on the level of "state to state." He said France "did not speak with the abductors."

Those who criticized the government's praise for Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi for helping to free the three were "being picky," he said.

Gadhafi has backed Abu Nidal, who along with some of his followers has been convicted of terrorist attacks abroad, reportedly allowing him to live near the Libyan capital of Tripoli. There have also been reports, however, that the Libyans have restricted the movements of Abu Nidal and his lieutenants.

In an editorial today, the conservative newspaper Le Figaro branded Gadhafi the "real abductor" of the newly freed hostages.

A month ago, France returned to Libya three French-made Mirage jet fighters that had been in France for repairs since 1986. Libya, pressing for delivery of the aircraft, closed its ports to French ships in December.

In its editorial, Le Figaro said: "One imagines that the thank-yous addressed by Roland Dumas to Col. Gadhafi were part of a 'deal' which permitted the end of three years of imprisonment."

"We have been working on this case for months," Dumas told reporters late Tuesday after the hostages' arrival. "We alerted a large number of countries, particularly Libya. Our discussions were only state to state, with respect for the principles which are ours."

Previous releases of French hostages by pro-Iranian Lebanese groups prompted charges that France bartered with terrorists, claims France has denied.

State Department officials in Washington welcomed the release but were critical of France's warm words for Gadhafi.

President Francois Mitterrand had personally thanked Gadhafi for his "determining" role in the releases, and Dumas declared that tense French-Libyan relations would now improve.

"France is being nicer to Libya than we think they should be," said one of the State Department officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The U.S. officials said France and other countries should press Libya to expel the group and stop alleged efforts to make chemical weapons.

Jacqueline Valente, 32; Fernand Houtekins, 43, and their 2-year-old daughter Sophie-Liberte made no public statements upon their arrival, refusing to discuss conditions of their captivity or where they were held. They were taken to a military hospital and all appeared healthy.

The three had been dropped off at the French Embassy in Beirut Tuesday morning by masked gunmen in cars with drawn curtains.

Canada studying UFO reports

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Unexplained flashing lights and strange circles in the ground are spotted in Quebec, a saucer zooms over houses in Newfoundland and a diamond-shaped object zips through the Manitoba sky.

Throughout the country, people said they saw at least 141 unidentified flying objects last year, according to what's being touted as Canada's first national survey of UFO sightings.

"It tells us that UFOs haven't gone away, it tells us that UFOs are being seen right across Canada," said Chris Rutkowski, a Winnipeg researcher who compiled the study.

More than half the reports didn't have enough information to evaluate properly and one third had probable explanations, said Rutkowski, who has a degree in astronomy and is president of the Winnipeg branch of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada.

Of the rest, seven sightings were stamped as solidly unknown, meaning they were seen by several people and investigated by the police and National Research Council, without any explanation being found, he said.

A rude awakening

(AP Laserphoto)

ARDMORE, Okla. — Larry Buck awoke late Monday night to the sounds of walls being ripped from his home 12 miles southwest of here. When he went upstairs to check on his two sleeping sons, Joshua, 10, and Joseph, 5, Buck found a wall and part of the roof missing. Neither of the boys, who were hiding under the covers, was injured.

Soft real estate market could increase cost of savings and loan bailout, analyst claims

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A thrift industry analyst says the weakening real estate market threatens to push higher the cost of bailing out insolvent savings and loans, putting further pressure on a steadily increasing number.

The federal Government Accounting Office last week increased its estimate of the bailout from $257 billion to $325 billion, warning the bill may grow to as much as $500 billion.

But Alex Sheshunoff, an industry consultant in Austin, Texas, described the estimates Monday as "much, much too low."

"The industry's struggle is playing out beneath an overhang of massive amounts of real estate unwillingly owned by both thrifts and governments," Sheshunoff said in a review of the industry's performance last year.

"The biggest challenge is what to do with all the foreclosed real estate, much of which is raw land, now owned by the federal government," he said.

The government has planned to help pay for the bailout with money from sale of foreclosed assets — buildings as well as land, but a slipping economy could result in lower prices and prolonged sales time, thereby increasing the cost.

In Texas alone, a study released last week said almost half of $43.6 billion in bad loans at banks and thrifts were on undeveloped land.

"Those land loans are probably not worth 50 cents on the dollar, they're probably closer to 30, 35 cents, if you can find a buyer," he said.

He said the government will likely have to provide taxing or financing incentives to buyers. "Unfortunately, papering over the problem is what got us there in the first place," he said.

But Sheshunoff suggested financing incentives, including low down payments and initial interest rates, could be the best way to save taxpayers' money.

"The outlook for the U.S. savings and loan industry remains uncertain," Sheshunoff said. "The profitable well-capitalized majority is struggling to maintain the confidence of depositors shaken by the dismal performance of the unprofitable, undercapitalized few."

Sheshunoff said 62 percent, or

1,915, of the nation's 3,082 thrifts were profitable last year with total earnings of $4.4 billion. The unprofitable institutions, however, more than swamped the industry with $23.4 billion in losses for total red ink of $19 billion.

Three-quarters of the losses were in Texas, Arizona, California, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, Sheshunoff said.

"Each of these states has real estate problems or is home to a few large thrifts that have made questionable investments," he said.

Sheshunoff said 1,989 thrifts, or 64.5 percent of the total, ended the year with tangible capital ratios of 3 percent or greater.

Bailout legislation adopted last year requires tangible capital — real assets minus liabilities — to be 1.5 percent now, increasing to 3 percent later. The ratio is one measure of how much of their own money investors have at risk.

Another 248 S&Ls have tangible capital between 1.5 percent and 3 percent; 127 are between zero percent and 1.5 percent; and 524 fall below zero, he said.

Those final 524 "seem destined for a number of fates ranging from new private owners to being eternally run by the government," Sheshunoff said.

Remains of infant murdered in '83 found in medical examiner's locker

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A grieving mother has been told that the remains of an infant murdered 14 years ago have been found in a locker at the Bexar County medical examiner's office only days after she was told the bones had been destroyed.

Sandra Olivares, now 29, said she was just starting to cope with the knowledge that her son would never have a proper burial when the phone rang Monday.

The mother of the son Ms. Olivares gave birth to when she was 14 had been found in a locker where they had been in safekeeping since 1983 when three of Olivares' relatives were convicted of murdering the infant.

"I was in shock," Ms. Olivares said. "I was overjoyed and I cried, but I'm still in shock."

Ms. Olivares told the San Antonio Express-News she now will make modest funeral arrangements, the only thing she can afford.

"I'm still going to have to come up with the money, but I will," she said. "I don't know how we'll do that, but we will."

The woman's quest to find the remains had been featured in a news story in the San Antonio newspaper Sunday, just days after she was told a record of her son's remains had been located and the records indicated the remains had been cremated as unclaimed.

Chief Medical Investigator Frank Castillon said he read just a few paragraphs of the Sunday story before he recognized the infant's remains thought to have been destroyed were actually under his care.

Castillon said he had stored the remains in a small white box in a locked cabinet since they were used as evidence in the murder trial.

"I made the (murder) scene and helped recover the bones, so I remember the case, too," Castillon said Monday. The baby boy was born in 1976 when Ms. Olivares was just six months along in her pregnancy.

Ms. Olivares' stepmother took the young girl to a back-alley abortionist, but the procedure failed and the infant was born alive. Ms. Olivares' two younger sisters were forced to bury the infant alive in the family's backyard while the woman lay unconscious from the trauma of the birth, authorities said.

The infant's cries could be heard as the soil was shoveled onto him, according to testimony at the trial.

The horrible secret grave was not revealed until 1982 after Ms. Olivares had left home and felt safe enough to tell authorities.

Convicted of murder in the infant's death were: Sandra's stepmother, Margaret Gonzales, then 32; and stepgrandparents, Alfred and Hermina Flores, then 63 and 68 respectively.

Ms. Olivares had searched on several occasions since the trial to find the remains.

"I just wanted him buried properly," she said.

The woman said it appeared her search had ended late last week when Dr. Robert Bux at the medical examiner's office said records indicated the remains had been cremated as unclaimed.

"I can imagine what this woman went through," Castillon said. "They certainly don't belong in a locker under lock and key."

Quayle-bashing comedians strike out with his fan club

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Quayle-bashing comedians don't play in Peoria, at least not with the vice president's biggest fans: the Hit the Trail for Quayle Club.

Dan Quayle is not the fool comedians portray, according to the club, which has launched a letter-writing campaign to get the vice president out of late-night punch lines.

"They make him out to be some Hoosier stumblebum, but he's no dummy," said Noel Clark, one of 30 members of the club started this year.

Ten club members assembled Saturday to draft letters to Johnny

Carson, Jay Leno, Pat Sajak and David Letterman.

"We just resent all the jokes bashing our vice president," said club founder Dorothy Vallosio. "They are so mean."

Lawyer makes no apologies for representing organized crime figures

By KAREN SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The gold lettering on the plate-glass window reads simply: Law Office. Inside works Rhode Island's busiest criminal lawyer — a man who has built a career by representing reputed organized crime figures.

"I've never discouraged people from referring to me as a mob lawyer," John F. "Jack" Cicilline said between drags on his cigarette. "I suppose to some people it's a sipster connotation, but it's done me well. Someone has to represent these people."

But Cicilline does more than defend people such as reputed mob boss Raymond J. "Junior" Patriarca — he befriends them.

Pictures of Patriarca and his late father, legendary organized crime leader Raymond L.S. Patriarca, hang in Cicilline's office. On the opposite wall is a framed copy of a 1983 indictment against Cicilline — charges he eventually beat.

Cicilline rents his office from Patriarca in the city's Italian section — not far from where he grew up.

His father wanted him to become a lawyer. Although he originally planned on entering the foreign service, he's glad he followed his father's advice. "I love doing this work," he said.

Cicilline put himself through law school, commuting 60 miles to Boston's Suffolk University while working days to support the wife with whom he'd eloped as a teen-ager.

The balding 51-year-old sees himself as on the front line defending civil rights. He said his small firm, which includes two of his five children, takes "more than our fair share" of cases from poor people.

"I see myself as one of the last survivors of the battle against the system taking over," he said.

Two of Cicilline's clients were arrested last month in an FBI sweep. Patriarca and Matthew Guglielmetti Jr. are charged with racketeering.

Partriarca, 45, has been identified in testimony before the U.S. Senate as head of the New England Cosa Nostra. Guglielmetti, Cicilline's golf partner, is named in last month's indictment as a lieutenant in charge of the Patriarca family's Connecticut operation.

That doesn't faze Cicilline, who said his "commonality" with some of his clients has forged friendships that have survived even though "a lot of them are in jail."

"I've never heard anyone say his reputation has been impaired or sullied in any way because of the company he keeps," said Presiding Superior Court Judge Anthony A. Giannini.

"Jack is a very sensitive, warm guy," said Dick Casparian, chief public defender.

But when asked about Cicilline's personal relationship with some clients, Casparian said he had never developed such a friendship in 16 years as a criminal lawyer.

Cicilline said he knows nothing about organized crime. As to the guilt or innocence of his clients and friends, Cicilline said:

"I've heard what's said about a lot of my clients. I don't know if it's true and it doesn't bother me even if it is true."

Cicilline said he got involved in representing reputed mobsters as a young lawyer trying to build a practice.

"You've got to take little risks," said Cicilline. "Risking my reputation is a risk I was willing to take."

Although Cicilline has the respect of his colleagues, many refuse to talk about his private life. A half-dozen law enforcement officials also refused to comment on Cicilline.

In 1980, the FBI bugged Cicilline's office. In 1983, an informant wore a wire during a meeting with the lawyer and mobster Frank L. "Bobo" Marrapese Jr. After a mistrial and a hung jury, Cicilline cleared himself of charges he conspired to persuade a witness to lie.

"He's aware of the tightrope that he chooses to walk," one police officer said, demanding anonymity.

Airline sued over flight attendants' weight rule

LOS ANGELES (AP) — American Airlines flight attendants should not have to fit a "coffee, tea or me" image, according to a suit challenging the company's weight policy.

The class-action federal lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court Monday by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

"American still wants their flight attendants to appeal to a male sexist notion of what is sexy," commission lawyer Ralph D.H. Fertig said. "And that's thin."

The lawsuit also alleges the policy discriminates against attendants who take leaves of absences to give birth or work as union officers because they are not given time to bring their weight down after they return.

Fertig said the policy harks back to the days when airlines used the image of a "coffee, tea or me" stewardess as a marketing tool.

American's policy, for instance, reads that a "firm, trim silhouette, free of bulges, rolls or paunches, is necessary for an alert, efficient image."

Patt Gibbs, a flight attendant for 28 years and a plaintiff in the suit, was weighed when she returned to work in 1988 after a four-year leave to serve as president of the Association of Professional Flight Attendants Union.

The 5-foot-3 Ms. Gibbs was 154 pounds, 29 pounds over the maximum allowed for her height. Ms. Gibbs got her weight down and returned to work, but she said the experience was humiliating.

"They said, 'That's that. You're too heavy. Lose the weight or you won't have a job,'" she said.

The federal lawsuit follows the filing in Texas of a similar discrimination lawsuit by the union for American's 16,000 flight attendants.

Last year, Pan American World Airways ended six years of similar litigation by raising its weight requirements. Pan Am also agreed to pay $2.3 million in lost wages to 115 employees unable to work under its old weight rule.

American's policy is one of the strictest in the airline industry.

The policy is based on a chart that assigns maximum body weights to the size of the attendant, with more weight allowed for men. A 5-foot-5 man, for instance, can weigh 16 pounds more than a woman of the same height.

The policy applies only to male and female flight attendants and ticket agents. Pilots and baggage handlers are not covered.

American attorney Maureen F. Moore said the policy is intended to make flight attendants "presentable" to the public.

Ham is the centerpiece for a festive Easter menu

Sliced lean ham is served with a spring risotto and vegetable curls. Dessert is a fresh fruit sundae, topped with yogurt cream and caramel sauce.

NEW YORK (AP) — If you don't want to spend hours in the kitchen preparing Easter dinner, try this quick-to-fix holiday menu.

Apricot-Glazed Easter Ham, Bounty of Spring Risotto, Minted Zucchini and Carrot Ribbons, and Fresh Fruit Sundae with Yogurt Cream and Caramel Sauce is an elegant menu, but is easy to prepare. The recipes are provided by Wilson Brands, makers of Wilson Extra Lean Ham.

Use a basket of fresh spring flowers or decorated Easter eggs for your table centerpiece. Plan to add a fresh flower to each guest's place setting just minutes before dinner.

Apricot-Glazed Easter Ham
One 3- to 5-pound extra-lean ham

1/2 cup apricot preserves
3 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard

2 teaspoons freshly grated gingerroot

Fresh apricots (optional)

Fresh watercress (optional)

In small bowl, combine apricot preserves, Dijon-style mustard and gingerroot. Stir until well blended. Decoratively score ham. Place ham in shallow baking pan; shield ends with foil. Insert meat thermometer. Brush ham with 1/4 cup of glaze. Bake, uncovered, in a 325-degree F oven for 15 to 20 minutes per pound or until thermometer registers 130 to 140 degrees F. Brush with remaining glaze every 15 minutes. Transfer ham to serving platter. Garnish with fresh apricots and watercress leaves. Makes 4-5 servings per pound.

Bounty of Spring Risotto

1 cup frozen peas

1/2 cup dry white wine

1/2 ounce dried porcini mushrooms (about 1/2 cup), broken into small pieces or 3/4 cup fresh mushrooms, cut into thin slices

3 cups chicken stock or canned chicken broth

1/8 teaspoon powdered saffron or 6 threads saffron, crushed

3 tablespoons olive oil

1/2 cup finely chopped yellow onion

1 large clove garlic, minced

1 1/2 cups quick-cooking rice

1 cup water

1/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Salt and pepper, to taste

1 medium tomato, unpeeled, seeded and chopped

Place peas in colander. Run under cool running water. Set aside.

In small saucepan, bring wine to boil. Add porcini. Remove pan from heat. Let mushroom mixture stand.

In medium saucepan, bring broth to boil. Reduce heat to allow broth to simmer. Remove 1/2 cup of broth. Let rest of broth continue to simmer.

Add saffron to the 1/2 cup of broth, stirring to dissolve. Set saffron mixture aside.

In a 4-quart Dutch oven, heat olive oil over medium-high heat. Add onion and garlic. Add rice; cook and stir until grains are well coated, about 2 minutes.

Add 1 cup of remaining hot broth to rice, stirring continuously and scraping bottom and sides of pan until liquid has been absorbed.

Add 1 additional cup hot stock, stirring until absorbed. Add saffron-flavored broth, stirring until absorbed.

Add mushroom mixture, stirring until well combined. In 1/2 cup portions, add the remaining broth and 1 cup water, allowing each addition to be absorbed before adding another, until rice is tender and mixture has creamy consistency; about 20 minutes.

Stir in peas and 1/4 cup of Parmesan cheese. Season with salt and pepper. Transfer risotto to shallow 2-quart serving bowl. Sprinkle chopped tomato down center. Sprinkle remaining 1 tablespoon cheese over tomato. Cover; keep warm until serving time. Makes 6 servings.

Shower injury proves that bathrooms are full of risk

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this because I believe it may help your readers to avoid a tragedy.

Last year, our 11-year-old son, Daniel, fell through a glass shower panel, severing an artery, a nerve and three muscles above the elbow. He required 5 1/2 hours of reconstructive surgery and five units of blood. He is still undergoing physical therapy, and we are hoping that eventually he will regain full use of his arm and hand.

Abby, please ask your readers to check their shower enclosures to make sure they have shatterproof glass, or some kind of plastic glass substitute. (Plexiglas is one.) A law passed about 20 years ago made installation of non-shatterproof glass in showers illegal. However, showers installed before that time may have glass that is not shatterproof.

Also, it's a good idea to teach young children never to lock the bathroom door, because a bathroom can be a dangerous place. If Daniel had locked himself in the bathroom when he fell through the shower door, much time would have been lost in our efforts to help him.

GRATEFUL IN GREAT NECK, N.Y.

DEAR GRATEFUL: And I am grateful to you for a valuable letter. You are correct to point out that a bathroom can be a very dangerous place. Pills, razor blades and electric hair dryers are potentially hazardous in the hands of an unsupervised child. Also, toddlers have been known to drown in toilets and scald themselves with very hot tap water.

Your suggestion to teach very young children never to lock the bathroom door is a good one. A better idea would be to have no lock on the bathroom door accessible to a child.

DEAR ABBY: Your suggested response for the woman whose "friends" telephone to mention having seen her son's name in the newspaper (for an arrest) was far too gentle.

A proper response would have been: "Thank you for calling this to my attention again. Excuse me, I have an errand to run." (Click.)

JUDY T. IN DALLAS

P.S. And people who persist in

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

bringing this up should be told, "Out of respect for my son, we do not discuss this matter outside the family."

DEAR JUDY: You're right. Especially since these "friends" were people she hardly knew.

DEAR ABBY: You had something wonderfully funny in your column about "love." It ended with ... "and the position is ridiculous." What's the rest of it, and who said it?

GOING CRAZY IN KETCHIKAN, ALASKA

DEAR GOING: Here it is: "The price is prohibitive, the pleasure is transitory and the position is ridiculous." And Lord Chesterfield supposedly said it.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I'm doing this — but here goes! My wife and I have been married for 34 years. We have four grown children and two grandchildren. My wife is worried about getting pregnant. She will be 56 years old this year.

My question: When does a woman fall into the non-bearing age? And is it possible for my wife to get pregnant at her age?

HER HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: Although there are exceptions, if a woman's menstrual periods have ceased for a year, the possibility of pregnancy is inconceivable. (No pun intended.)

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064. Blytheville firms can poke salet

By LAMAR JAMES
Arkansas Gazette

BLYTHERVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Mention poke salet to rural Arkansans and even some city residents and you'll evoke memories — mostly good, but some bad — of parents and grandparents cooking up a batch of wild greens.

Two companies in Arkansas market canned poke, an old Southern favorite, for their customers as far away as New England and California.

Officials of Allen Canning Co. of Siloam Springs, one of the nation's largest independent canneries, and Blytheville Canning Co., a subsidiary of Bush Brothers and Co. of Tennessee, say they don't know of any other companies that can poke salet.

Allen Bush, a Bush Brothers vice president, says his company has another plant in Oklahoma that puts up the greens.

For both companies, poke salet is a specialty product.

"It's profitable," Bush says, "but we're accustomed to dealing in enormous tonnage, and in the perspective of things, this is really a service for our loyal customers who don't want to forget about poke salet in the spring."

Bush says his company sells primarily in the South, "but we get a lot of letters and phone calls from people who want some, and we send it to them by UPS. I can't imagine anybody wanting it that much. We'll have calls from people in New England and California."

"California is an excellent market," says Delbert Allen Jr., president of Allen Canning. "We always felt like it was because of the number of people that moved there from these areas during the Depression, and they carried their tastes and roots with them."

Allen says he gets letters all the time from customers who say they appreciate the company selling the product.

Poke salet is a native food that was popular with pioneers.

"The old-timers in Oklahoma and Arkansas grew up eating it," Allen says. "It's still gathered wild. It grows in the fence rows and particularly well where the land has been cleared around the brush piles."

In pioneer days, people relished poke salet because it was a welcome treat after a winter of dried beans and salt pork, according to Bush.

"It was probably the first thing they could have in the spring," he said. "You know the old saying, you need poke salet to thin your blood and get you ready for the summer."

"It's the spring tonic," Bush said.

Bush said every spring his company puts out the word by radio and newspaper that poke salet is needed, and "people will bring it in a few paper bags in the back of a car, or in a washtub or in a pickup truck."

Gathering it, he said, is hard work. Poke salet, or pokeweed, grows wild in the country, often in remote areas.

"You've got to put it on your back and carry it out," Bush explained.

"As long as we can still get people to gather it," Allen said. "We're still going to pack it."

The number of pickers is dwindling, he said, and it's hard to get workers who will gather it. The pay is 11 cents a pound.

Poke salet comes from a perennial herb called pokeweed or pokeberry, which is native to the United States and grows from Maine to Florida and westward to Minnesota and Texas. The young shoots are usually eaten, but the root is poisonous and must be removed.

Pokeweed contains phytolaccic acid in the leaves, roots and stalks, but there is more in the roots than the rest of the plant. The acid is easily removed from the greens by parboiling them, then cooking them in fresh water.

"Nutrition-wise, it's an excellent product," Allen said. "A lot of the old-time foods that the pioneers used we're finding out today are very healthy foods."

Where Billikens and Yeguas meet

What's in a name?

When the St. Louis Billikens advanced to the finals of the NIT basketball tournament this season, they drew the attention of fans all across the country.

A St. Louis radio station received thousands of calls from people wanting to know what a Billiken was. The disc jockey reported that no one seemed to care about the outcome of the game, which Vanderbilt won.

A Billiken, by the way, is an Eskimo good luck charm. Try that one on for trivia.

It seems that a former St. Louis coach resembled a Billiken in some way. The resemblance must have been flattering because the school has stuck with the name for almost a century.

An anthropology student who liked sports must have come up with the name.

Although the majority of schools have common nicknames, there's plenty of others that are pretty unusual.

High schools in Texas and Oklahoma should have a contest to see which state has the most unusual names for its mascots. A judging committee from a neutral state could select the winner.

In Texas, there's the Munday Moguls, Rock Springs Angoras, Roscoe Plowboys, Fort Worth Eastern Hills Hillanders and San Saba Armadillos.

In Oklahoma, there's the Sallisaw Black Diamonds, Wright City Lumberjacks, Watts Engineers, Waynoka Railroaders and Miami Wardogs.

Of course, there's a bunch more. Rick Ingram, basketball school at Somerville, Tex., High School, tried to explain how its athletic teams came to be called Yeguas.

"It's Indian, named after a small tribe, we think. Not long ago, a source told us that it was an Indian name for donkey and this tribe was well-known because they rode donkeys," Ingram said. "We'll settle for Yeguas."

That moniker is almost as mystifying as Billikens. Someone in Bray, Okla., had a keen sense of humor when it came to selecting the school mascot's name. What could be more fitting than Wrecking Donkeys?

How's Hamlin's Pied Pipers, Troy's Trojans and Roma's Gladiators for imagination? Right out of the pages of literature.

Around this area, the Palo Duro Dons, Amarillo High Sandies and Pampa Harvesters are catchy names.

Some names need to be changed. For example, the Yellowjackets of Kingfisher, Okla. The Mascot should have been named in honor of the town's founder, and it's not a bird. King Fisher was a 19th century trapper who built a small outpost near one of the tributaries of the Canadian River. The Kingfisher Trappers or Woodsmen would have been more appropriate.

Sherman, Tex., could do better than Bearcats. How about the Sherman Tankers or Generals?

Corn, Okla., should have gone with Huskers instead of Chiefs. University of Nebraska followers might object, though.

The Broken Bow Tigers, Cheyenne Bears and Choctaw Yellowjackets of Oklahoma need Indian names.

There's a bunch of names you could play around with.

The Kremlin, Okla., Reds instead of Broncos would raise some eyebrows. How about the Shepherd, Tex., Shepherders instead of Pirates? Or the Sidney, Tex., Boomerrangs instead of Eagles?

In Lone Wolf, Okla., you would expect the obvious, but instead you get the Coyotes.

The list could go on and on with no end in sight, but I'd better close for now, you Robstown, Tex., Cottonpickers.

Pampa struggles to overcome Borger, 10-5

By SONNY BOHANAN

Pampa first baseman Mike Cagle slapped a three-run double in the fifth inning to ignite a 10-5 victory over Borger during District 1-4A play Tuesday at Harvester Field.

The hit came not a moment too soon for the Harvesters.

Pampa had trailed the Bulldogs almost since the opening pitch, when Borger lead-off hitter Scott Hunter nailed James Bybee's fastball for a single to right field. Two spots down the order, clean-up man Damon Tucker drew a base on balls.

The next three Borger batters reached base on a hit, a walk and an error and suddenly Pampa trailed by two with the bases loaded.

The Harvesters finally escaped the inning when Bybee fanned Borger's Dan Wier for the third out, stranding three runners and preventing further damage — at least temporarily.

But the Bulldogs managed another run in the second inning, and the Harvesters faced a three-run deficit without so much as a hit to their credit.

"We played really flat and without enthusiasm," said Pampa coach Rod Porter, whose team improved to 7-2 in district, 13-2 overall. "I'm surprised, since this was Borger, which is usually a big rivalry for us. But the players kept their composure, probably more than I did, and they struggled back. That's the mark of a good team."

Pampa started its comeback in the third inning when second baseman Breck Beckner cracked a base hit to right field. It was the first hit of the day for the Harvesters, and it drove in right fielder Barry Coffee, who had reached base on a walk.

Borger continued chipping away in the fourth frame thanks to shortstop Jeff Isom, who went 3-for-4 at the plate including a single, double and home run. This time out, Isom plated one run with a hard-hit double to center field to put the Bulldogs on top, 4-1.

Harvester pitcher James Bybee threw a five hitter and struck out five to boost his record to 5-0 on the season. The PHS senior also belted a solo homer in the fourth inning.

"James (Bybee) struggled a little on the mound, but we've used him primarily as a relief man," Porter said of his starting pitcher. "He hasn't had that many starts, and I know he wanted to start at home against Borger. That's a big game."

Bybee lasted five innings to get the win, boosting his perfect record to a team-high 5-0. He struck out five batters and gave up four runs on five hits, three bases on balls and one hit batter.

The senior right-hander also pounded a solo homer in the fourth inning to move Pampa within two runs, 4-2. The 325-foot shot over the left field fence was the third round-tripper of the season for Bybee, who is batting .500.

Pampa's saving grace began in the fifth inning. Coffee reach base on an error and Beckner followed with a base hit to right. At the top of the order, shortstop Chris Roden responded with a single to load the bases, and left fielder Brandon Knutson knotted the score at 4 with a two-run double.

Bybee walked to load the bases again, and Borger coach Mike Montgomery decided it was time to give pitcher Eric Huddleston (1-5) a rest. Huddleston, who gave up five hits and seven runs in five innings, gave way to reliever Romando Escobar.

Pampa's Cagle promptly cleared the bases with a three-run shot to right field, which proved to be the game winner. All told, the Harvesters tallied five runs on four hits in the fifth inning.

"That bases-loaded double was a big shot in the arm," Porter said.

On the day, Cagle finished 2-for-4 with two doubles, a fly out and a strike out. Beckner went 2-for-2, both singles, while Roden rapped two singles in four at bats.

Quincy Williams pitched the last two innings in relief for Pampa to collect his second save of the season.

The Harvesters added three more runs in the sixth inning to complete their scoring. Isom nailed a one-run homer in the seventh for Borger to make it 10-5.

The Bulldogs dropped to 1-7-1 in district play, 3-9-1 overall.

Pampa travels to Freshman Saturday for a 2 p.m. game. The Tigers are in sixth place at 3-6, 6-11.

PHS soccer team captures first victory over Tascosa

The PHS boys soccer team registered a 1-0 victory over Tascosa Monday, Pampa's first triumph over the Rebels in three years on the varsity level.

Heath Stevens scored the game's only goal, boosting the Harvesters to 2-1 in league play, 3-1 overall. Pampa has defeated Tascosa, Canyon-Randall and Chickasha (Okla.), while falling to Palo Duro last Friday.

The win left Pampa in third place in the standings, followed by fourth-place Tascosa, which dropped to 0-2-1.

Stevens scored in the first half on a 20-yard shot that sailed over the head of Tascosa's goalie.

"I felt like he caught the keeper a little bit out of the goal and he was able to loft the ball a little bit out of the keeper's reach," said Pampa coach Mike Redwine. "It ended up being the game winner."

Pampa goalie Daniel Trejo was credited with a clutch save late in the first half, and senior Shannon Cook was a stalwart for the Harvesters in three different positions.

"Shannon played center midfield, center fullback and center forward," Redwine said. "We had to move him around because of injury and because of the way the game was progressing. We felt like we needed him in some different spots.

"He did a good job, as he has all year."

The margin of victory has become something of a trend for the Harvesters, who have won all three games by identical scores of 1-0. Their one loss was a 5-1 setback to Palo Duro.

"The part of our game that needs improvement is our scoring," Redwine said. "We've scored one goal in each game. But our defense has done a good job, shutting out three of our four opponents. Last year we only shut out one opponent."

Pampa travels to Amarillo High Thursday for a 5:30 p.m. game. The Sandies lead the league with a 2-0 record, followed by Palo Duro (3-1) and Pampa (2-1).

The Harvesters finish out the first half of district play on Tuesday, April 17, at Caprock, a team tied with Tascosa for fourth place.

"We're going to have to play the best game we've played to beat Amarillo High," Redwine said. "They're probably the top team in the league."

Bush's opening pitch fails to help Texas in 2-1 loss

TORONTO (AP) — President Bush and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney tossed out the ceremonial first balls, then Toronto's Dave Stieb and three relievers took over.

Stieb, showing mid-season form, allowed two singles over six innings as the Blue Jays defeated the Texas Rangers 2-1 on Tuesday night. It was the Blue Jays' 11th victory in 14 home openers.

"I guess I was fortunate to have good control after the short spring," Stieb said, who struck out four and walked two. "I had command of all my pitches and I used them wisely."

Stieb gave up a two-out single to Harold Baines in the top of the first and a one-out single to Rafael Palmeiro in the sixth.

"He looked like he picked up right where he left off last season," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "He threw 85 pitches and that was our game plan."

Relievers Tom Henke, Duane Ward and David Wells followed Stieb. Wells gave up Ruben Sierra's home run on the first pitch in the ninth inning, but finished for a save.

The stoppers role is one usually reserved for Henke, but Gaston brought Henke in to start the 7th.

"Henke needs some work," Gaston said. "You'll probably see that a few more times until he feels he's throwing the ball the way he'd like to."

Texas starter Charlie Hough struggled with his control, allowing both Toronto runs on four hits over five innings. He struck out five and walked six.

"I don't worry too much about the walks," Hough said, "but more about where they come. I'm going to walk more than the average pitcher. I know that going into the season. I just can't let the walks hurt me."

What did hurt the Rangers, was a ball Pete Incaviglia lost in the lights off the bat of Tony Fernandez in the bottom of the fifth.

Junior Felix hit a one-out double to the gap in right-center before Fernandez lined a shot to left. Incaviglia took two steps in, then watched as the ball sailed two feet over his outstretched glove and rolled all the way to the wall.

Felix scored and Fernandez was credited with a triple on the play. Mookie Wilson drove in Fernandez with a one-out single to center.

Bush, whose son George W. Bush owns the Rangers, and Mulroney watched the game from an upper-deck VIP box and left after five innings. Bush's son was not at the game, although Commissioner Fay Vincent was in attendance.

Bush, a former first baseman at Yale University, showed signs of a decent arm. He tossed the ball some 40 rows up the first deck following the opening ceremonies.

McLean's Misty Coleman won the girls' 100-meter hurdles at the District 2-1A meet in Miami.

In the boys' division, McLean's 400-meter and 1600-meter relay teams of Dwayne Harris, Donald Harris, Tres Hess and Christian Looney both placed second in district. Donald Harris won the 1600. The top two in each event at the district meets qualified for regionals.

Lefors run-rules Kelton in 3-1A baseball opener

LEFORS — Jarrod Slatten and Gary Wyatt each hit two-run homers as Lefors downed Kelton, 18-6, in baseball action Tuesday afternoon.

The District 3-A game was called after five innings due to the 10-run rule.

Slatten's homer started a five-run first inning for the Pirates, who evened their district mark at 1-1. Lefors lost its district opener to Hedley, 16-12.

Lefors was leading 11-6 when Wyatt smashed a two-run shot over the left field fence. The Pirates went on to score five more runs to bring the contest to a close.

"We're a pretty good hitting team and we're got a lot of speed. When we get on base we're going to steal on just about every pitch," said Lefors coach Dale Means.

Slatten and Dusty Roberson led the Pirates' 11-hit attack. Slatten added a single and double to his home run while Roberson had three singles and three runs-batted-in.

Andy Swires had an RBI double and single, Rodney Nickel, an RBI single, and John Call, a single.

For the Lions, it was their first outing of the season.

"It was pretty rough out there," said Kelton coach Brad Slatten. "We've got guys who haven't played much baseball. We're going to work hard and try to improve, though."

Randy Singleton and Boyce Crownover each had RBI singles for the only hits off Pirates' pitcher Kevin Mayfield, who struck out nine and walked three in five innings.

Losing pitcher was Bryan Walden, who struck out seven and walked four.

Lefors' Andy Swires is safe at third as the Kelton throw arrives to Boyce Crownover.

HOUSTON — They call themselves the "Nasty Boys" and they've been ganging up on the Houston Astros for the past two nights.

The Reds have back-to-back victories over the Astros, including Tuesday night's 3-2 final, aided by Ron Oester's eighth inning single that provided the winning run.

Each night, the Reds' "Nasty Boys" bullpen has played a key role in the season opening victories.

Tim Layana, Rob Dibble and Randy Myers have appeared in both games and Norm Charlton pitched in the opener.

Combined, they haven't allowed the Astros an earned run while pitching six innings and facing 49 batters. They've allowed eight hits, six walks and struck out 17.

"We've expected this, we've got guys with tremendous ability in our bullpen," Dibble said. "We've got guys that are willing to come out every night and throw as long and hard as we can. We call ourselves the Nasty Boys."

The Nasty Boys went to work in the sixth inning Tuesday night holding the Astros to an unearned run in the ninth.

"We knew we're going to get a lot of work coming out of spring training," Dibble said. "It's fun when you come to the ball park and know you're going to pitch."

"The pinchhitters around the league are going to find out they are going to have a tough time against the Reds' bullpen."

Eric Davis doubled, went to third on Todd Benzinger's grounder and scored on a single by Paul O'Neill in the fourth inning.

Houston tied it in the fourth with a double by Glenn Davis and a single by Franklin Stubbs.

The score remained tied until the eighth inning when Benzinger walked off Juan Agosto.

He was sacrificed to second and when Charley Kerfeld came on to pitch for the second night in a row, Oester's single to right field scored Benzinger from second base with the go-ahead run.

The Reds made it 3-1 in the ninth on a passed ball by Craig Biggio and pinchhitter Alex Trevino's sacrifice fly gave the Astros a run in the ninth.

It was the second night in a row the Astros were struck down in the late innings and both times Kerfeld gave up the big hit.

Barry Larkin's 3-run triple off Kerfeld led the Reds to an 8-4 victory in the opener.

"I'm far from giving up," Kerfeld said. "It doesn't take a brain surgeon to figure out I've stunk the past two nights. But I've gone through too much to quit now."

Kerfeld has been trying to recover from rotator cuff surgery and until this week had not pitched in the major leagues since 1987.

Flames near brink of elimination

By The Associated Press

Just how important is Wayne Gretzky?

The Calgary Flames, who are facing Gretzky's Los Angeles Kings now, are one game away from elimination in the first round of the NHL playoffs a year after winning the Stanley Cup.

The Winnipeg Jets, ousted from the playoffs five times in previous years by Gretzky-led Edmonton, are suddenly within one game of eliminating the Oilers from the Stanley Cup chase.

With Gretzky passing igniting the offense, Los Angeles parlayed a hat trick of hat tricks into a 12-4 rout of the Flames on Tuesday night for a 3-1 lead in the Smythe Division playoffs.

Winnipeg, which managed only one victory in 18 playoff games against Edmonton when Gretzky was the ringleader, got its third victory in four games against the Oilers when Dave Ellett's goal at 1:08 of the second overtime provided a 4-3 triumph.

In the Norris Division, Toronto averted being swept in its series with St. Louis by beating the Blues 4-2, and Minnesota beat Chicago 4-0 to square that series 2-2.

Tonight, Boston is at Hartford and Buffalo is at Montreal in the Adams Division playoffs, with the home teams leading 2-1. In the Patrick Division, the New York Rangers carry a 2-1 lead to Long Island against the New York Islanders and New Jersey has a 2-1 lead heading into Washington.

"It's tough to get any recognition on this club," Gretzky joked after teammates Dave Taylor, Tomas Sandstrom and Tony Granato scored three goals apiece against the Flames. Gretzky scored his playoff-record 87th goal and also had four assists as he and linemates Sandstrom and Granato combined for 15 points.

"I've never seen anything like this in my career," Flames defenseman Gary Suter said. "Only in Hollywood."

Taylor scored twice in the first period, with Todd Elik getting an assist each time, as Los Angeles built a 4-0 lead. That merely set the stage for the record-setting second period, in which the teams combined for nine goals as the Kings built a 9-4 lead. Gretzky's goal made it 8-2 and he assisted on goals by Granato and Sandstrom.

Taylor got his third goal at 9:15 of the third period. Gretzky assisted as Sandstrom got his third at 13:59 and Granato completed the rout at 17:04, with Elik getting his third assist.

Joel Otto, Paul Ranheim, Theoren Fleury and Joe Nieuwendyk scored the second-period goals for Calgary. Jets 4, Oilers 3

"We can taste it," Ellett said after his goal put Winnipeg on the verge of eliminating Edmonton, "but we still know it's not going to be easy to win that last game."

Winnipeg got the break it needed in the first minute of the second extra period when defenseman Reijo Ruotsalainen pulled down Winnipeg's Thomas Steen on a breakaway. Steen won the ensuing faceoff and the puck went to Ellett, who rifled a slap shot from the point past Edmonton goaltender Bill Ranford.

Mavericks squander 18-point lead

LOS ANGELES. (AP) — Thirty wins in an NBA season generally isn't any big deal, but for the Los Angeles Clippers, it's a milestone.

The Clippers rallied from an 18-point third-quarter deficit Tuesday night to defeat the playoff-bound Dallas Mavericks 98-90 to reach the 30-win plateau in a season for the first time in four years.

The Clippers, 30-47, won only 21 games last season, just 17 in 1987-88 and only 12 in 1986-87. They had 32 victories during the 1985-86 season.

"We're in the 30s now, approaching the 40s," Clippers coach Don Casey said. "Good things happen when you reach 30. I just think it's a big step in the direction we're trying to go."

"It shows that our players want to hang in there until the end. Most teams who are out of contention at this point in the season will pack it in for the year. Not our team."

Tom Garrick led a balanced Los Angeles attack with 17 points and seven assists. Benoit Benjamin and Charles Smith added 16 points each for the Clippers, who had six players score in double figures and another finish with nine points.

Derek Harper led Dallas, 42-34, with 30 points and seven assists and Rolando Blackman added 23 for the Mavericks, who lost their third consecutive game after being outscored 34-16 in the fourth quarter.

"I give the Clippers a lot of credit," Mavericks coach Richie Adubato said. "They played great defense and we went cold. Benoit Benjamin was a big factor. Don Casey has his team playing hard and their strong defensive effort was the difference."

"We played with the idea we had this game won. When you play a young team like the Clippers you need to watch out because they play with a lot of energy and anything can happen."
