Gas tax in effect Saturday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drivers will pay as much as 5.1 cents a gallon more for gasoline starting Saturday, and they won't be able to blame Saddam Hussein.

A federal tax increase is taking effect, and half of the $25 billion it produces over the next five years will go for deficit reduction. Most of the rest will pay for highway and mass transit improvements.

A family that drives 12,000 miles in a car that averages 22 miles per gallon will pay about $28 more a year.

Flying and shipping by air also will cost more beginning Saturday. The 8 percent federal tax on airline tickets will rise to 10 percent and the 5 percent levy on air freight will go up to 6.25 percent. Those increases, when combined with higher taxes on noncommercial aviation fuel, will bring in almost $12 billion over five years.

Nothing in the law says service station owners must pass along the higher gasoline and diesel tax to consumers — but economics indicates they will.

"Prices will go up at 12:01 a.m.," predicted Dave Haddad Sr. of Pittsburgh, president of the Service Station Dealers of America.

"Half the retailers are making one, two or three cents profit on a gallon," he said. "How can they eat a nickel a gallon? Retailers have no alternative but to increase the price by five cents a gallon."

The new federal tax on gasoline used on highways or in motorboats will be 14.1 cents a gallon; the tax on diesel for highway use, 20.1 cents. Diesel used by trains will face a new 2.5 cent tax. The tax on noncommercial aviation gasoline will rise to 15.1 cents and the levy on noncommercial jet fuel goes to 17.6 cents a gallon.

The nickel-a-gallon boost for gasoline follows the price runup that hit after Aug. 2, when Iraqi President Saddam invaded Kuwait, shutting off most of the oil from both those Persian Gulf nations.

Jerry Cheske of American Automobile Association headquarters in Orlando, Fla., said that as of Tuesday, the national average price of a gallon of customer-pumped regular unleaded gasoline was $1.366. That was up 0.7 cents from a week earlier and 29.1 cents above the Aug. 1 average.

If most retailers boost their prices by the full 5 or 5.1 cents a gallon, the nationwide average price would rise to about $1.41 a gallon.

U.N. gives Iraq ultimatum: Get out of Kuwait in six weeks or face attack

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council overwhelmingly approved the use-of-force resolution, but Iraq today rejected the ultimatum as illegal and said its passage was the result of U.S. "pressure, terrorism and bribes."

In a nationally televised news conference today, President Bush said he will send Secretary of State James A. Baker III to Baghdad on a diplomatic mission to negotiate Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait.

Bush said, however, that if military conflict does break out, "It will not be another Vietnam, this will not be another protracted, drawn-out war."

The Security Council voted 12 to 2 Thursday to authorize the United States and its allies to use force to drive Iraq from Kuwait if Saddam Hussein has not withdrawn his troops by Jan. 15. China abstained; Yemen and Cuba voted against.

It was only the second time in the 45-year history of the United Nations that the council authorized the use of force to counter aggression. The first time was in 1950 during the Korean conflict.

Saddam's ruling Revolutionary Command Council today called the U.N. resolution "illegal, null and void," saying it was imposed by the United States.

"It is first and foremost an American decision in which certain powers participated only under American pressure," it said. "The United States practiced all forms of pressure, terrorism and bribes" to pass the resolution.

The statement, broadcast on state-run Baghdad Radio, said Iraq would teach the United States and its allies a "hard lesson, unprecedented in history."

In Tokyo today, Misoji Sakamoto, the top government spokesman, voiced support for the resolution, and in Madrid, government spokeswoman Rosa Conde said Spain also backed the measure. The German government said today that peace in the Mideast was "in Iraq's hands."

In Washington, Bush said during the news conference that the Iraqi foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, would be welcome in Washington for talks the week of Dec. 10. Bush said Baker would travel to Baghdad between Dec. 15 and Jan. 15.

Bush said, however, that he would not waiver in demanding a total Iraqi withdrawal, restoration of the Kuwaiti government and release of all hostages.

But Bush combined his surprise diplomatic overture with words of warning for Saddam. He said that if hostilities erupted, "I promise you there will not be any murky ending. I will never agree to a halfway effort."

"I don't think there has ever been a question that the United States is going to blink" in this situation, Bush said.

Thirteen foreign ministers attended the extraordinary council session, with Secretary of State James A. Baker III presiding, making it one of the highest-level council meetings in history.

"Today, we have started the countdown of the 'pause of good will,'" said Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. "We are confident that before the time is up a turn toward peace will have occurred, and that the pause will usher in a transition to a political settlement."

If not, said British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, "No one can accuse the council of impatience. The military option is reality, not bluff. If it has to be used, it will be used, with the full backing of the council."

In Washington, President Bush called the U.N. vote "a very strong and powerful message. It will go around the world loud and clear that this guy's got to get out of there."

Joining the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union in voting for the resolution were France, Canada, Colombia, Ethiopia, Finland, Ivory Coast, Malaysia, Romania and Zaire.

Price escalation concern for Gray County Appraisal District

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

A method the State Property Tax Board is planning to use in regard to oil and gas minerals concerns the Gray County Appraisal District office and its appraiser for those minerals.

Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley and Lewis Henderson of Lone Star Valuations Inc. of Amarillo spoke to the Gray County Appraisal Review Board earlier this week about the state's intention to use "price escalation" in evaluating how the appraisals have been completed on minerals in the state.

The impact of the price escalation process could have a lot or no effect on Gray County properties. The outcome of using the process will not be known immediately. But the concept of price escalation regarding minerals is what Bagley and Henderson have objected to.

"This could be detrimental to school funding," Bagley said. "This will determine the school funding formula," he told the Appraisal Review Board Tuesday.

Bagley explained that if the state reviewed a mineral property in Gray County and determined the value should be $100 and the appraisal district had valued the property at $80, then school funding would be decreased for that particular school district.

"Our school districts can be seriously damaged if we have too low of appraisals," Bagley said.

On the other hand, if the appraisal district sets values higher based on how the state will look at the district's appraisals, the taxpayers would be the losers.

"If we do what they want, people will be coming to you (Appraisal Review Board) in droves," he said.

In the past, the state has used the Jan. 1 prices on oil and gas as one basis for evaluating the mineral appraisals.

Bagley, Henderson and Billy B. Davis, a member of the Appraisal Review Board, attended a meeting in Austin in late October to express opposition to the price escalation method.

Henderson said another meeting is planned by the State Property Tax Board, although that meeting will not be open to all of the parties who attended the October meeting.

Henderson said he also would like to see the state look at the properties the same time the appraisal districts do so. The appraisal districts use Jan. 1 as the day to set the appraisals and notices go out in May. To determine whether there have been fair appraisals in a particular district, the state then looks at a minority of those appraisals about nine months later and then issues the results in a study.

"The state needs to quit looking at a crystal ball. In history, we don't see the kind of increase they're predicting," Henderson said.

There was a spike in oil prices in 1981, Henderson said, and that has declined until Aug. 2 of this year when another spike began, he said.

"They get so wrapped up in the statistical concept they lose what we're after," he said.

Henderson said that according to his figures, there has been no escalation on the average well head price

Weekend of holiday events opens tonight

With Christmas just a bare 25 days away, Pampa area residents will find a flurry of activities this weekend in Pampa as the holiday day season officially opens.

From tonight through Sunday, those wanting to enjoy the Christmas spirit early will have the opportunity to choose several or all of the following events: the Festival of Christmas Trees and Gift Boutique, the annual Santa Day Parade, the Pampa Civic Ballet's production of Cinderella and the Taste of Pampa.

The Festival of Christmas Trees and Gift Boutique opens the weekend at 6 p.m. today in the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center, with decorated Christmas trees to view, all sorts of crafts to purchase, food to eat and entertainment.

The Festival will be open Saturday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

Approximately 50 artists from a three-state area will be exhibiting a wide array of crafts, gift items and home decorations for sale. Decorated Christmas trees will be exhibited in the lobby, with ribbons to be awarded in various categories. The Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association will be preparing and serving a variety of food.

Guest artist David Rindlisbacher, associate professor of art at West Texas State University in Canyon, will demonstrate his painting techniques at 2 p.m. Sunday in the lobby.

Saturday offers a full day of activities for those wanting to visit the city, see the sights and shop.

At 10:30 a.m., the Santa Day Parade will begin from Cuyler and Craven streets intersection, proceeding north through downtown Pampa. It will turn west on Francis to Ward, where it will turn north again to join up with Hobart and then west on Somerville to disband in the M.K. Brown Auditorium parking lot.

The parade will feature numerous floats, decorated bicycles, classic cars and other entries, including, of course, Santa Claus, who will distribute candy to the kids after the parade disbands.

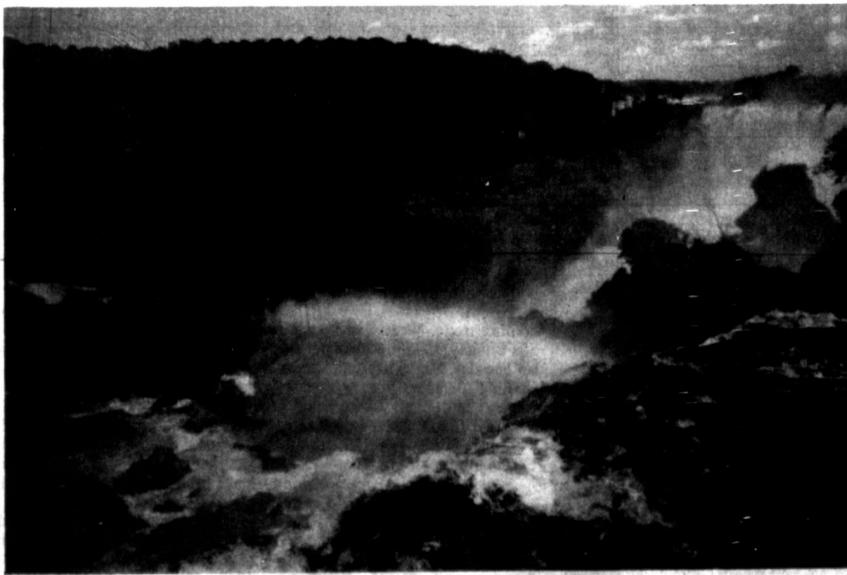

From 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. shoppers at the Pampa Mall will have a chance for some fine eating as the Taste of Pampa offers some 14 restaurants and food services providing their wares. Tickets will be $15 for a family, $5 for adults and $2.50 for children.

Saturday night's events will conclude with the performance of Cinderella at 7:30 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Auditorium, beginning a half hour after the Festival of Christmas Trees closes for the day.

This year's performance marks the 19th year for Pampa Civic Ballet, with Jeanne Willingham of the Beaux Arts Dance Studio as founder and artistic director.

The title role will be portrayed by Anita Dalton, with special guest artist Bruce Ballard, instructor of dance at Amarillo College, as the prince.

Joint dam project offers economic hope for residents of Paraguay

South America's majestic Iguazu (Ig-wa-su) Falls are found where Paraguay, Brazil and Argentina meet. They form the world's longest continuous chain of waterfalls, with over 350 different falls in the system.

AYOLAS, Paraguay — More than any other single thing, water has kept this nation's economy afloat for the last 20 years.

During the 1970s Paraguay's joint venture with Brazil on the world's largest dam, Itaipu, produced this nation's first semblance of a middle class.

Technical advisers from the United States and Europe moved to Paraguay for extended periods, giving the people here one of their first glances at western standards of living and behavior.

Itaipu is Guarani for "singing rocks." It could rightfully mean "Gracious gift from the Almighty."

Paraguay had no money to invest in the project and was only included because the optimum point for the dam was at the point the Parana River formed a border between Paraguay and Brazil.

Under a 1973 treaty, Paraguay gets half the electricity Itaipu produces, most of which is sold back to Brazil. Revenues from those sales form most of the only legitimate capital the country can claim.

Just downstream from the dam is the Iguazu waterfalls, the world's longest span of cataratas. It is a must-see for visitors to South America and touts millions of tourists each year.

The area's tourist appeal has also assisted Paraguay in its more questionable fund-raising, since large numbers of tourists from all over South America flock to Ciudad Del Este during trips to see the huge dam.

Ciudad Del Este is touted as a shoppers' paradise, and is undoubtedly the world's largest collection of stolen merchandise.

It is common knowledge that most of the goods are smuggled into Paraguay for sale after being stolen from Argentina and Brazil.

Whatever the downside attached to Ciudad Del Este, Itaipu has encouraged Paraguayans to seek better educations.

With an engineer's degree, Paraguayans can earn up to $1,000 a month by working at the dam.

Paraguay's success with the Itaipu project, coupled with Argentina's severe shortage of electricity, forged another dam project agreement along the Parana here at Ayolas during the 1980s known as Yacyreta (Ih-si-ra-ta).

Though it is stretching the translation of "Yacyreta" (which literally means as "water difficult place"), this project, which is still billions of dollars from completion, could be called "Bridge over troubled water."

When the dam is completed, it will create the largest lake in South America and one of the largest in the entire world, stretching from Encarnacion to Ayolas, a span of around 150 miles.

It will also end up costing at least $20 billion, virtually all of which is coming from World Bank loans.

Examining Paraguay's current $2 billion foreign debt and inflation so high in Argentina, it would give most economists a severe nose bleed. It can only be wondered how the two nations will ever pay the tab since they will only be selling the electricity to themselves.

Gerardo Gonzales, an engineer on the project, said because the World Bank is leery of loaning the two countries the money in one lump sum, it has created even more problems.

"When this project was started there were about 300,000 people who would have to be relocated of crude oil in the past 15 years, although there have been spikes.

Henderson said it is possible that with the state using the price escalation method, the values could come out even, depending on what discount rate the state applies. The discount rate is used by discounting today's dollars to the future net income of the property.

"They could use a higher discount rate, which theoretically brings the price back down and is a seesaw effect," Henderson said.

Bagley said, "The damage is it puts us in a position where we don't know what will happen."

In the 1989 Property Value Study conducted by the state, Gray County Appraisal District was 101 percent on the minerals with the statewide average being 110 percent. That means the state said the GCAD was closer to the actual value of the minerals than the statewide average.

Regarding all of the properties in the 1989 study, GCAD came out better than the statewide average at 98 percent. The statewide average was 97 percent.

Those percentages are used to determine what the school funding will be for the various school districts. It is the ultimate goal to be at 100 percent. Anything below 100 percent, based on the state's study, means school funding is decreased for those particular school districts in which the property is located.

Pampa couple proud of adoptive grandchildren taken from Romania

By BETH MILLER Staff Writer

A Pampa couple has become proud grandparents of two Romanian babies after their daughter and her husband traveled to that country to adopt a boy and a girl.

Don and Shirley Boddy are bubbling over with excitement about their two new grandchildren. "They don't cry. They are responding real well to love," said Mrs. Boddy.

Their daughter, Stacey, and her husband Ben Disney, who live in Dublin, Texas, are getting used to being first-time parents with the newest additions to their family — Cameron, who is 10 months old, and Laura, who is six months old.

Stacey is a 1975 Pampa High School graduate who was raised in Pampa. Her husband is pastor of First United Methodist Church of Dublin and the Green's Creek United Methodist Church.

The Disneys, both 33 years old, became interested in traveling to Romania after seeing ABC's 20/20 program in April, which showed the many Romanian babies who had been abandoned by their parents who could not afford to care for them.

Mrs. Boddy said her daughter and son-in-law took medical supplies with them on their travel to the country.

They left the United States in late August and Mr. Disney returned on Oct. 5 with Cameron. Mrs. Disney arrived home in Texas on Oct. 26 with Laura after having to stay in Romania to secure adoption papers and to make sure the baby was able to travel after an illness.

The numerous abandoned children in the Southeastern European country are a result of former Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu's policies which outlawed birth control and abortion in an effort to build a populous communist nation. Ceausescu was assassinated on Dec. 25, 1989, along with his wife, after their 24-year reign.

The Disneys have had numerous newspaper articles written featuring them and their two new children. In one article, Mr. Disney said of the children, "They just had the bad lot of being born in a place that didn't want them. There's just something grossly unfair about that."

The children were adopted from two separate orphanages which had numerous children and not enough nurses to care for them.

"In both circumstances, the mothers were young, they couldn't feed them," Mrs. Disney said during one interview.

Mrs. Boddy said she traveled to Dublin and stayed for two weeks with her daughter's family after they returned from Romania. "They are so sweet," she said of her new grandchildren.

Arson ruled out as cause of fire at PCI

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Fire Marshall Tom Adams has ruled out foul play as the cause of a fire Wednesday night that destroyed a workshop full of equipment at 1801 Price Road owned by Production Consultants Inc.

"We worked on that thing all day Thursday but we haven't come up with a cause," Adams said. "But we don't have any indication of anything unusual starting it. We will go back out there today and see if we can determine what the cause was, but I can tell that we don't think it was arson."

"There was around $100,000 worth of equipment in there that was destroyed and they didn't have insurance on it," Adams said. "That will be tough."

Six Pampa firefighters were called to the scene at 10 p.m. Wednesday to battle the blaze, which was fueled by an assortment of acetylene bottles, gasoline cans, paints and other combustible fluids stored in the building.

Firefighters fought the explosions and flames until 1 a.m.

Explosions stemmed from, among other things, the full gas tank on the wrecker blowing up.

Police, Gray County Sheriff's deputies and Department of Public Safety troopers closed off Price Road from Kentucky to 23rd as a precaution.

No injuries were reported from the blaze or explosions.

Wetting down of other buildings in the immediate area-kept the fire contained to the one structure.

Ruth and Harold Lawley, who own the business, said losses include the wrecker, a forklift, hundreds of tools, a tire machine, air compressor, ice machine, freezer, thousands of pounds of concrete and a small boat, among other items.

PCI operates leases and maintains vehicles for oil companies in the area.

DPS releases accident report for October

For the month of October, Department of Public Safety troopers in the Amarillo Highway Patrol District investigated five fatal accidents, 50 personal injury accidents and 83 property damage accidents.

Five people were killed and 74 people were injured in the accidents in the 31-county district, said Capt. Rusty Davis, district supervisor.

In Gray County, troopers investigated no fatal accidents, five personal injury accidents and five property damage accidents in October, according to Sgt. James Powell of the Pampa DPS office.

Eight people were injured during the accidents, he said.

because they lived in the path of the lake that will be created," Gonzales said. "But the World Bank wouldn't let them buy the place where the lake would go before the dam was built, so 700,000 more people, approximately, have moved into where the lake will be, hoping the government will relocate them in the new houses they are building in Encarnacion."

Cost estimates for that endeavor are around $500 million, on top of the current $20 billion price tag.

Luis Escurra, a civil engineer and chief of the office of cost containment, said currently the financial problems in Argentina are threatening the project.

"But people from the World Bank come here all the time and they want to see what we are doing with the money," Escurra explained. "If they gave the project millions of dollars and then came and saw we had only bought land to keep squatters from settling there and hadn't done anything else, they wouldn't give us any more money."

"We are almost out of money," he stated. "I can only hope there is more loaned or the project will just stop."

Only about half the $20 billion total has currently been pumped into the hydroelectric plant's construction.

However, Escurra tried to paint a slightly better picture of the enormous bill Yacyreta is costing the world.

"We are dealing with five different kinds of money," he explained. "There are dollars, guarani, austral, francs and liras. You could say it's costing $20 billion or you could say only $10 billion. It depends on what day the money is exchanged. The cost is very difficult to figure out and I don't think anybody really knows."

Paraguayans have no qualms with proceeding with Yacyreta, of course, because, like Itaipu, it is giving their people a chance to make a decent wage and developing a market for professional positions in this Third World nation.

As much as it is a financial monolith, Yacyreta is also an environmental threat, posed at a location that could wipe out the breeding path of the prized eldorado salmon that spawn only in the Parana.

The dam is prohibiting the dorado from spawning because they cannot get back up stream past the huge concrete barrier.

Escurra said engineers are currently exploring the idea of a "fish elevator" to lift the fish past the dam on their upstream trek, but said no one knows if it will work.

"It is probably too late for the dorado," Gonzalez said. "People were not concerned soon enough. They said that we could have fish or we could have jobs and they chose the jobs."

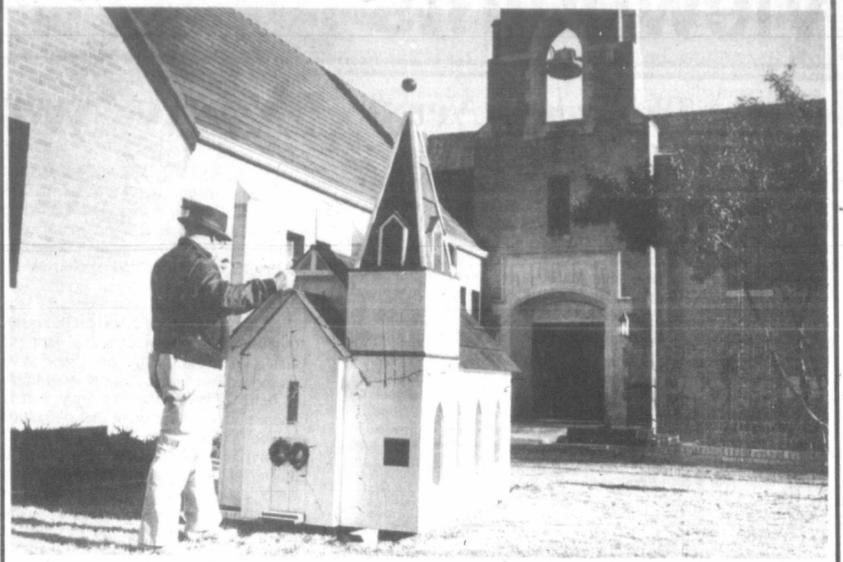

He believes Paraguay and Argentina could have had both, but said environmentalism is still an after-thought here in most cases.

At the expense of the dorado, Paraguay has been fortunate enough to find itself located on the Parana, which is providing millions of dollars in jobs for its people each year.

Whatever trace of prosperity the nation is experiencing currently is one that flowed in on a wild river current.

Sanders spent Thursday afternoon getting the model church ready for this year's display during the holiday season.

Texas combat Guard unit mobilized

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

McALLEN (AP) — It's no longer just support personnel being activated in National Guard units around the state.

Mobilization of the 3rd Battalion, 141st Infantry of the Texas National Guard, based in McAllen, marks the Guard's first combat unit in the state to be activated for the Persian Gulf crisis.

Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday announced activation of the mechanized infantry unit, which has about 820 men throughout the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

"It's the first Texas combat unit to be called," said Col. Barry Ottley, chief of staff for the Texas National Guard's troop command. "The others have been support units."

Troop command directs about 6,200 members of the Texas National Guard who are not in the 49th Armored Division, based in Austin.

Sgt. Raul Ortiz, 40, of McAllen, said Thursday he was "kind of gung-ho" about being the Guard's first Texas combat unit to become part of the regular army since the military buildup began in August. "It kind of makes you proud,"

Ortiz said while packing some of his equipment Thursday at the McAllen armory.

"It's seen as a great honor," said Arnulfo Esqueda, executive officer for the McAllen battalion.

Before Wednesday's call-up, there were 500 Texas Army and Air National Guard personnel on active duty in support of Operation Desert Shield.

The Air Guard has about 350 Texans mobilized along with eight aircraft, while about 150 Army Guard members from Texas are supporting current U.S. military operations.

Those units, however, perform support jobs in positions such as cargo handlers and personnel clerks.

Ottley was in McAllen on Thursday to supervise the sudden upsurge in activity at the armory since the combat unit's activation was announced. He described the 3rd Battalion as "one of our premier units. They're trained to operate worldwide in any type of environment."

The battalion was alerted on Nov. 15. It will mobilize at its home station armories on Dec. 7, then move to its mobilization station at Fort Hood, Texas within a few days, Clements' office said Wednesday.

After mobilization at Fort Hood, the unit will move to Fort Irwin, Calif. for desert training, Ottley said.

Soldiers with the McAllen-based battalion have trained primarily with the M2 Bradley fighting vehicle. The armored personnel carrier looks similar to a tank, but has no large cannon. It is equipped with a 25-millimeter cannon, a TOW anti-tank weapon and machine gun.

Police silent on details in suffocation death in robbery, kidnapping

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police won't release details of an investigation into the suffocation death of a woman kidnapped with her friend from their place of employment.

The dead woman was identified as Cruz Torrez, 41, according to the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office. She was reported missing Tuesday evening.

Bill Fabian, the spokesman, said doctors ruled the woman had been suffocated.

Mrs. Torrez's friend, Yvonne Molina, 22, has been interviewed by police investigating the women's kidnapping following an apparent robbery at Credit Optical on the city's north side.

Police said Thursday afternoon that they cannot release details on developing leads because it might jeopardize the investigation.

Police also praised Ms. Molina as an exceptional witness in describing the incident, considering what she has been through.

Molina was treated in the emergency room at John Peter Smith Hospital at Fort Worth and later released, a spokeswoman said.

Authorities discovered the woman's bound, nude body after receiving a call from an unidentified man who found Mrs. Torrez' purse and a sports bag while picking up cans near an abandoned warehouse Wednesday afternoon.

Evidence at the optical store and witnesses' reports led police to investigate the case as kidnapping, police spokesman Lt. Alvin Allcon said.

Police would not confirm if they had suspects in the case or whether they are investigating the case as a murder.

FBI agents were assigned to help with the case late Tuesday.

Grandmother shocked at finding sex film on children's video tape

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

EDINBURG (AP) — State Consumer Protection attorneys are trying to remove a video tape marketed for children that contains graphic film footage of a couple engaging in sex.

A McAllen woman bought her four grandchildren the animated video tape at a toy store. She learned too late that cartoons were not the only thing the video was showing the children, ages 2 through 6, according to a lawsuit the Texas attorney general's office filed Thursday.

Judge Raul Longoria of the state's 370th District Court immediately issued a restraining order prohibiting the toy store and the California-based manufacturer from marketing the tape with packaging that states it is "fully animated" and "just for kids."

The video is titled Filmation's Ghostbusters, Spirits, Spooks and Specters. But after the cartoons end, a grainy pornographic video with the title Squeal of Fortune plays for about 10 minutes.

"This consumer found to her dismay, and after her grandchildren had viewed the film several times, that the film contains almost 10 minutes of sexually explicit adult scenes at the end of the feature presentation," according to the lawsuit

Assistant Attorney General Al Alvarez filed in Edinburg.

The woman reported the problem to the pastor of her church, who then contacted Alvarez, director of the state Consumer Protection Division office in McAllen.

"The big problem now is we're talking about the height of Christmas season," said Alvarez. "We're talking about people going into toy stores to purchase toys for children. Video formats like this one, VHS tapes for children, are very popular in terms of a gift. We're having this particular gift being distributed without the consumer purchasing the gift knowing that it contains sexually explicit material."

Alvarez said the video apparently has been distributed nationwide. He said the attorney general's office in California also received a complaint last year from a woman who had bought a copy of the same video tape in Massachusetts.

The woman filed a complaint with the state of California, stating that her young cousin, described only as "a little boy," became upset while watching the tape in her Hyde Park, Mass., living room last Christmas Eve.

She wrote: "He had come running out into the kitchen saying, 'I don't like this. It looks funny, bad, bad,' he said. Meanwhile, my guests & relatives & myself heard these strange noises."

"I went in & I saw the tape ... I quickly pulled it out of the VCR & explained that the Ghostbusters are not like that, that the film was broken & I had to return it."

Noel Bloom, chairman of Woodland Hills, Calif.-based Celebrity Home Entertainment Inc., producer and distributor of the video, said the company recalled the tapes almost a year ago. He said the company had received four or five complaints nationwide, similar to the Texas woman's.

Bloom said the company does not know how those tapes were altered. He said he suspected "some sort of sabotage" by an employee of a company that duplicates the tapes for Celebrity Home Entertainment.

No one was available to comment late Thursday afternoon at the Kay Bee Toy Stores corporate office in Pittsfield, Mass.

The McAllen woman bought the video at the company's Kay Bee Toy and Hobby Shop at McAllen's La Plaza Mall. Alvarez said the toy store probably is one of many toy, video and variety stores marketing the tainted video.

He said the state could amend the suit later to prevent other stores from selling it.

Margie Gray, Sammie Morris attend tax assessors' seminar

COLLEGE STATION — Almost 200 tax officials from across the state came to College Station to enroll in the 8th Annual County Tax Assessor-Collectors' Seminar at the Hilton Inn Conference Center Nov. 17-20.

Taking part were Margie Gray, tax assessor-collector, and Sammie Morris, deputy, with the Gray County Tax Assessor-Collectors' Office.

The training was conducted as a program of the V.G. Young Institute of County Government of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cooperating were the Tax Assessor-Collectors Association of Texas and the Continuing Education Office of Texas A&M University.

Gray said tax assessor-collectors can prepare to meet future challenges — and do a better job today — by taking part in professional seminars such as the one just conducted.

John Gilmartin and Joe Rothe, extension service specialists with the V.G. Young Institute, supervised the professional training session for the tax officials.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

World politics begin at home

In a kind of "Super Summit" this month in Paris, 34 nations were meeting for the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which is supposed to advance peace in the post-Cold War world. President George Bush touted the gathering as a building block in his "new world order."

But the uncertain nature of the future beyond this Super Summit can be seen by looking at CSCE itself. It was established in 1975 as part of the Helsinki Final Act, which then-Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev intended to help advance Soviet hegemony in Europe. But 15 years later, in 1990, the current Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev, looked back on the human-rights accords that formed part of the Helsinki Final Act. Far from advancing Brezhnevite tyranny, the accords in fact had helped the Soviet Union in "a shift away from totalitarianism to a democratic system, away from the command economy ... to a state underpinned by the rule of law."

In 1975 — or even the spring of 1989 — who could have predicted the dramatic sprint to freedom in the fall of 1989? So who today can accurately predict what will happen 15 years from now, 2005? But there is this lesson from 1989's breakthrough to freedom: It was preceded by the cultivation of a hunger for liberty in the peoples of Eastern Europe. Minds must change before structures do. This is the true key to peace in Europe and elsewhere.

The CSCE meeting has produced agreements to resolve conflict and advance free trade. And the nations have also agreed to reduce the size of the armies stationed in Europe. But there are problems. First, the accords did not address the size of navies. Second, the Soviets, in a trick from the old Cold War, have restationed many forces east of the Urals, technically part of Asia, to get them out of the disarmament accord on Europe. And third, CSCE and the European unity scheduled for 1992 add yet another layer of bureaucracy onto those layers already weighing down citizens.

Bush has often stated his preference for dealing with international politics over domestic issues. And yet, as events in Eastern Europe attest to, international politics flow from the aspirations of the people of each nation, not what their leaders decree.

Now that Bush has returned from his foreign sojourn, he should turn away from his beloved "new world order" and concentrate on giving prosperity to our citizens through tax cuts, and freedom to them through reduced government bureaucracy and regulation. The best way America can advance freedom in the world is through the example of freeing our own citizens.

New ways of giving thanks

CHARLESTON, S.C. — This is the month in which Americans observe a traditional and endearing ritual. We give thanks. The Thanksgiving holiday provided a useful hour for reflection on the "what" and the "how" of the occasion. What are we thankful for? And how should we express our gratitude?

William F. Buckley Jr. addresses the questions in his newly published book, Gratitude. By nice coincidence, the book appeared just as President Bush signed the Community Service Act earlier this month. Buckley's purpose is to think aloud on the debt we owe to our country, and to propose concrete ways of repaying that obligation. The act provides a mechanism.

Anyone who reads the papers can compile a catalog of things that are wrong with America: crime, drugs, pornography, political apathy, an unsatisfactory system of public education. Our highways are crumbling, our prisons are jammed. Congress is a joke. The list goes on and on.

But stop. What are we thankful for? We live under a written Constitution that has endured for 200 years. We enjoy freedoms not equally protected elsewhere in the world. We share a common language, abuse it as we may. Our good land produces an abundance. Our economic system provides benefits beyond the dreams of most people around the globe. We share — well, most of us share — certain abiding values of a strong and civilized society. For all of this, let us indeed give thanks.

The second question is, how to give thanks? In what ways may we tangibly manifest a deep sense of appreciation? We pay taxes, or course, to support public institutions. We give money to the United Way. More than 2 million men and women serve in the all-volunteer armed services. Teachers, nurses, volunteer firemen, the members of rescue squads — all of them give more than they receive.

Bill Buckley's idea is to create new ways by which Americans, especially young Americans, may say thanks for the heritage. He makes no claim for originality: Proposals for some sort of universal community service have been around for years. The Peace Corps, in which 121,000 persons have served with quiet dedication, provides one opportunity. The VISTA program is another.

Buckley may be naive, though it is difficult to believe so urbane a social critic could be so described. He certainly is idealistic. He truly believes that given an opportunity, millions of young people would volunteer for a year of service to their country. What they need are new "avenues for the expression of the altruistic impulse." Through a combination of positive and negative inducements, a national program could be set in motion.

This was the idea of members of Congress who sponsored the Community Service Act. A Senate bill proposed to authorize $125 million a year in grants to states and localities. The measure would have created a Youth Service Corps, in which volunteers could enlist for one year. They would be paid a nominal living allowance, plus $5,000 in post-service benefits.

A House bill was more expansive. In addition to a Youth Service Corps, it proposed an American Conservation Corps. Members of the former would work in nursing homes, hospitals, day-care centers and the like. Members of the latter would work in national parks, wildlife sanctuaries, wetlands and flood control.

In October the two bills were melded to create a commission on national service that will coordinate a variety of volunteer programs. None of Buckley's positive and negative inducements appear in the act, but these may come later.

It would make sense to reward participants with the same kind of advantages now provided for veterans. Tax credits, lower interest rates, preferential status in college enrollment — such inducements would add a note of pragmatism to altruism. President Bush objected to any financial payments whatever, and the bill was accordingly amended, but if the program is to work this will have to be changed.

Edmund Burke long ago provided a rationale for community service: "To be attached to the subdivision, to love the little platoon we belong to in society, is the first principle (the fern as it were) of public affections. It is the first link in the series by which we proceed toward a love to our country, and to mankind." Burke was reflecting on the revolution in France, but he provided a good reflection for Thanksgiving Day.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Nov. 30, the 334th day of 1990. There are 31 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Nov. 30, 1782, the United States and Britain signed preliminary peace articles in Paris, ending the Revolutionary War.

On this date:
In 1803, Spain completed the process of ceding Louisiana to France.

In 1804, the first U.S. Supreme Court justice to be impeached, Samuel Chase, went on trial. (He was acquitted.)

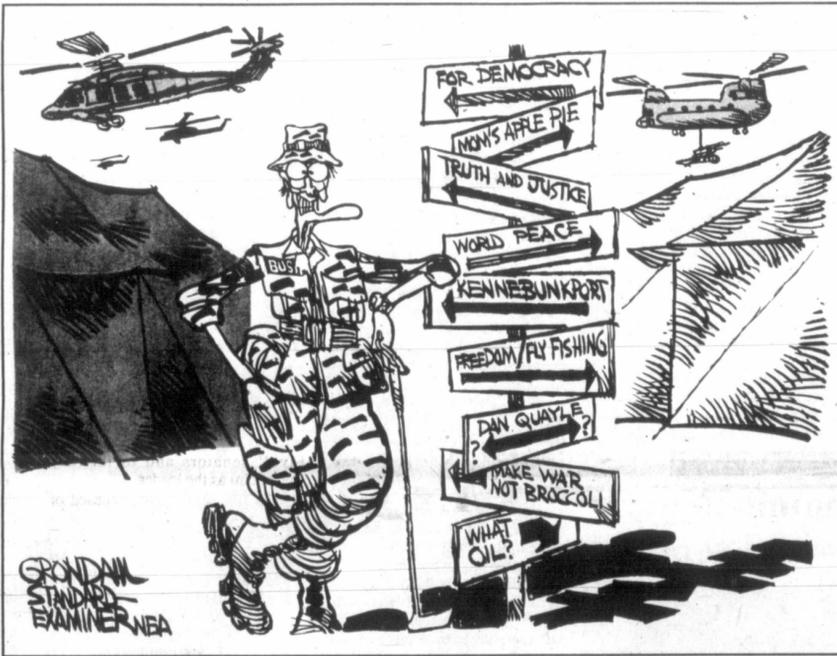

In 1835, Samuel Langhorne Clemens — better known as author Mark Twain — was born in Florida, Mo.

In 1874, British statesman Sir Winston Churchill was born at Blenheim Palace.

In 1900, Irish author Oscar Wilde died in Paris.

In 1936, London's famed Crystal Palace, constructed for the International Exhibition of 1851, was destroyed in a fire.

In 1939, the Russo-Finnish War began as Soviet troops invaded Finland.

They're still jivin' you, man

Art is an ever-changing thing. Historical periods in art have always oscillated between two temperaments which musicologists call "Pathos" and "Ethos."

For a span of years, artists and composers will serve the public — give them what they want, will produce material designed to create an emotion or to move the viewer or the listener.

That is the era of "Pathos."
The "Romantic Era" in music, roughly the 19th Century, was the most recent in that discipline.

If artistic "Pathos" is the art of the heart, artistic "Ethos" is the art of the mind.

In music's "Classical Era," for example, it was assumed that the listener should put himself in the appropriate mental state.

There is a basic problem with "Ethos" art. It places such demands on the consumer that it can breed artistic arrogance.

"If you don't understand it, there is something wrong with you!"

In the past consumers have turned away; such arrogance was held in check.

And thus has the pendulum swung back and forth through the centuries, and the public was prompt to blow the whistle on the phonies.

That was pure consumerism.
Now, however, for the first time in the history of the arts, the pendulum has been arrested — stopped cold in the arrogance of an "Ethos" era of so-called "modern" art.

Blame boardroom subsidy.
Panels of people, sometimes utterly unqualified, decide what they don't understand must be some kind of high-falutin' art.

Yes, private foundations are guilty.

Yes, the federal government is guilty.

And the result has been a lot of blank checks made out to a lot of phonies who are jiving their benefactors and the rest of the world.

Today would-be artists who are frustrated by their inability to match the talents of their predecessors just go off on some tangent.

They launch themselves into some form of artistic arrogance to which they insist the viewer must adjust.

Thus they try to intimidate us into accepting what they do.

And where traditionally the marketplace has weeded out the pretenders, today art that won't sell may be underwritten by grant money.

Our government may even subsidize perversity in the name of free speech.

And so we have an era when Americans are building shrines to Elvis and getting their truth from tabloids and their religion from Shirley MacLaine.

And with their own tax dollars they force-feed themselves on junk art.

You do not have to applaud their dirty pictures. They're jivin' you, man!

All in all, the Republicans did OK

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

I happened to be passing through the Atlanta airport (as all men must, sooner or later) the afternoon after Election Day, and I bought a copy of the Atlanta Journal to check the late-arriving returns. Across the top of page one ran a huge headline, clearly reflecting the editor's fondest hopes: "GOP LOSES BIG."

On calmer reflection, however, the results warrant no such conclusion.

In the first place, Republican losses in Congress were held to near minimum levels. In the first off-year elections, the president's party loses, on average, 28 seats in the House. This year, the GOP lost nine. And in the Senate, the Democrats picked up just one seat. You can forget all that talk about a "veto-proof" Congress.

Even on Election Night, the network commentators could see that the Democrats weren't going to gain many seats in Congress, but the geographic distribution of the early returns gave these busy little liberals hope for the governorships. There — aha! — was where the GOP would take a licking. And it's true that the pickup by the Democrats of the governorships of the important states of Florida and Texas were the evening's most punishing blows to the Republicans.

But now that all the votes have been counted, what do we find? Far from gaining, the Democrats are actually down a governorship — and so are the Republicans. (Independents won in Connecticut and Alaska.) Infinitely worse from the Democrats' standpoint, the GOP wrested from those state major governorships as those of Ohio, Michigan, Massachusetts and Minnesota, and held on to Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and — the biggest prize of all — California.

Don't think that won't matter when 1992 rolls around. Having possession of the governorships of states like Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and California can make a real difference in a presidential election.

OK, but then what about redistricting? Doesn't the Democratic pickup of the governorships of Florida and Texas (which are expected to gain four and three Congressmen respectively) mean seven new Democratic Congressmen?

No. Not even the most cynical gerrymander can cripple the opposition altogether. At best, what might have been a fair apportionment of two shifted to three and one. Moreover California, which is expected to get seven new House members, was gerrymandered to a fare-thee-well by a Democratic legislature and governor after the 1980 elections. With the new Republican governor Pete Wilson taking a hand this time, not only the seven new seats but several of the old ones will have to be apportioned more fairly.

Finally, this year's elections suggest that one alleged "killer issue" isn't necessarily fatal after all. After the Webster decision, the pro-abortion lobby was galvanized and a few waffling politicians fell to their ax. This year, however, pro-life candidates who stuck to their guns — and that goes for Democrats as well Republicans — didn't do badly at all.

And how about George Bush? His poll ratings are down, and no wonder. He broke his pledge on taxes, was outmaneuvered by the Democrats in the budget negotiations, and may be riding for a fall in the Persian Gulf.

But if he looks bad, he is entitled to ask, "Compared to whom?" Before Nov. 6, the two strongest and likeliest Democratic presidential possibilities were Senator Bradley and Governor Cuomo.

But on Election Day, Bradley came within a hair of losing to an unknown he had outspent 12 to 1, and Cuomo had to settle for 53 percent of the votes against laughable opposition, rather than 70 percent or so that he was counting on. It is a good question today whether either man could carry his own state against George Bush.

All in all, not a bad day for the GOP. (Let alone Jesse Helms!)

Pampa evangelist among Jews blamed by Arabs for riot in Israel

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

On Monday, October 8, the world was horrified by news that Jewish soldiers had killed at least 19 Palestinians and injured perhaps 100 more by opening fire on a rioting crowd at Temple Mount in Jerusalem.

Pampa-based evangelist and born-again Jew Claude Hargis was equally disturbed, but for a different reason.

Hargis was in Jerusalem at the time and was one of many Jews blamed by Arab news reports for being responsible for the riot.

Each year Hargis leads groups from the United States and Canada to Israel and is also active in an Orthodox Jewish temple restoration project.

"They don't know I'm a Christian," Hargis said of Temple Institute, which is planning the rebuilding of Solomon's Temple. "They want to rebuild the temple because they believe the messiah won't come until the temple is built. The difference between them and Christians is they believe He is coming for the first time and we know He is coming back."

An Islamic mosque standing on the temple site is a major point of contention between Arabs and Jews, since Jews and many last-days Bible scholars suggest the Messiah's coming — or second coming — won't occur until the temple is restored.

Arabs have vowed to fight to the death to make sure their mosque is not touched by Jews, since Jerusalem is also a holy city in their religion and the mosque is a centerpiece of their worship.

"This year (Temple Mount Society) re-enacted a water libation ceremony similar to the one in John 7 where Jesus said, 'If any man is thirsty, let him come to me,' and as described in the Talmud," Hargis said.

Pictures in the Jerusalem Post show Hargis standing near the front of the Jewish crowd as it approaches the Wailing Wall, also located at Temple Mount, which is the only portion of Solomon's Temple still standing and visible.

"The Arab news reports said we were responsible for those people getting killed," Hargis said. "But

Claude Hargis, left, who refers to himself as a "completed Jew," stands with Mark and Brenda Zedlitz of Spirit of Truth Church between flags of the United States and Israel.

the night before the Arabs used loud-speakers to urge children to gather rocks to throw at us. The Arabs knew we would not come near the Dome of the Rock because we were prohibited by police from doing so. But they had children throwing rocks, boulders, bottles, nails, all sorts of things down on 20,000 people from up on the wall.

"The Moslem loud-speaker in the mosque was calling out 'Holy war!' When the police moved in to protect the crowd, there were less than a dozen of them and they were being surrounded by 5,000 Moslems. They opened fire to protect themselves."

Hargis, who was accompanied to Israel by Pastor Mark and Brenda Zedlitz of Spirit of Truth Church in Pampa, said he finds the situation tragic between Jews and Arabs, but also said all of the problems reported in the media center around one small extremist group of Moslems.

"The condemnation from the United Nations said it was OK for Arabs to throw rocks at Jews and send their kids out with Molotov cocktails to get killed, but it's not OK for the Jewish police to defend themselves from getting killed," Hargis said.

He added, "You never hear of places like Jaffa where Jews and Arabs have lived together for centuries. I have many very good friends in Jerusalem who are Arabs and I often get along better with them than I do Jews. But on the West Bank you have a very small group fed by the P.L.O. that gets all the attention."

Brenda Zedlitz said the trip to Israel, and the riot, drove home to her the important parallels in Jewish and Christian life.

"Jews are persecuted for their natural birth and Christians are persecuted for their new birth," she stated. "In some of the most desolate areas of Israel there are groups called Nachal (The Young Pioneers) who go to areas where nothing has ever grown and they begin a farm and get it going. Then, older Jews move in and take over the operation. That's how it is in Christianity, we are called to go to spiritually dry, lifeless places and plant a new life."

Hargis said his ministry, which is similar to that of Zola Levitt and Jews for Jesus, is to "teach that Mary wasn't Catholic and John wasn't a Baptist. They were Jews. Christians need to go to Israel to increase their understanding and appreciation of their history and their future."

In December Hargis has been cleared by the United States government to go to Saudi Arabia as part of a chaplaincy program for troops involved in Operation Desert Shield.

He has previously traveled and spoken in 34 countries and to a variety of denominations in the United States including Mennonite, Southern Baptist, Assemblies of God, Presbyterian, Methodist, Lutheran, Four Square and interdenominational.

Lutherans plan to form Social Services Office

AMARILLO — Task Force Lutheran leaders in the Texas Panhandle will meet Monday at the Christ Lutheran Church, 2001 N. Grand, Amarillo, to take further steps in establishing a Lutheran Social Service Office and staff in Amarillo to assist abused children.

According to Kevin Gross, task force chairman, Lutheran Social Service goals are to "place special need handicapped, older or minority children in adoptive homes; recruit foster families to substitute as parents until children can be placed in adoptive homes or returned to their birth parents; and provide respite families to help with relief care for the foster families."

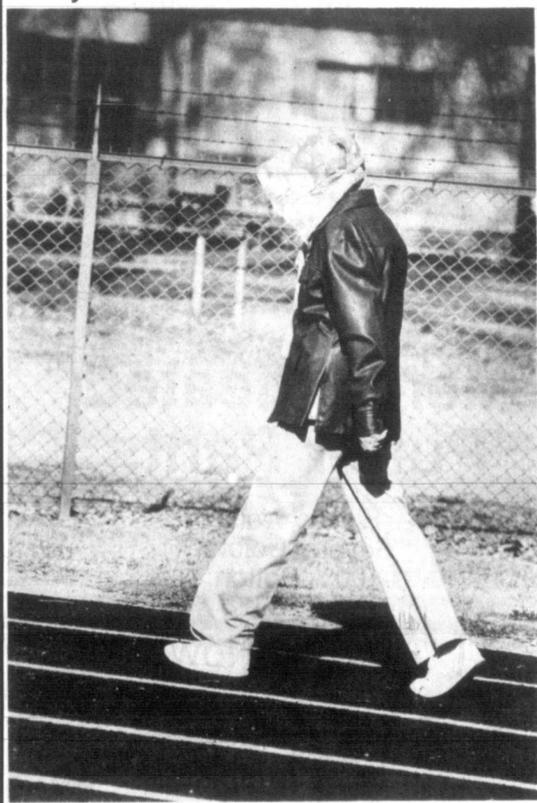

Kent Keith, staff person from the Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority, and also a member of the Lutheran Task Force Committee, reports that each year 2,000 cases of child abuse are happening in the Texas Panhandle with more than 400 children requiring foster care.

Currently, only 50 foster homes are available. More than 100 children die from child abuse each year in Texas. More than 400 children need temporary foster homes now in the Panhandle area.

A capital fund campaign is being conducted by Lutheran congregations and Panhandle residents who want to do something about child abuse. The proposed Lutheran Social Service office will be cooperating and coordinating its ministry with local social service agencies in the area. The goal will be $100,000.

Those interested can meet with the Task Force Committee for a buffet supper at 6:30 p.m. Monday at Christ Lutheran Church or call the church office for more information at (806) 383-4140.

Regulator says Sen. DeConcini acted as 'master of ceremonies' for Keating

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal regulator says Sen. Dennis DeConcini acted as "master of ceremonies" at a meeting in which lawmakers pushed government officials to ease scrutiny of Lincoln Savings and Loan Association.

"It was my impression, quite frankly, that Senator DeConcini was negotiating on behalf of Lincoln ... attempting to get us, the regulators, to change our position on the examination," Michael Patriarca told the Senate Ethics Committee on Thursday.

He told of a meeting in DeConcini's office at which lawmakers urged an end to an examination of the S&L operated by Charles H. Keating Jr. He said the Arizona senator "seemed to be the host or master of ceremonies."

The San Francisco-based official was the second federal regulator to testify at hearings into charges of impropriety against the "Keating Five" senators and to identify DeConcini as the leader.

The five senators are accused of intervening improperly in the regulatory process on behalf of Keating and Lincoln after the lawmakers and their favored causes received $1.3 billion in political contributions from the financier.

Lincoln's $2 billion collapse has become emblematic of the disaster that engulfed the savings and loan industry.

Patriarca, now western regional director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, went beyond the allegations leveled in four days of testimony by his onetime boss, Edwin J. Gray, the former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Gray, the five senators' chief accuser, said he felt improperly pressured by four of the senators in a disputed April 2, 1987, meeting. In the session, Gray referred the lawmakers to his West Coast staff.

Patriarca described the meeting between the senators and San Francisco regulators, which took place on April 9.

"The tone that the meeting took was that the senators seemed to have made up their minds ... that we were in fact harassing Lincoln, that we were incorrect, wrong, and that basically we got the full-court press," he said.

But Patriarca said the senators became less aggressive after he revealed that examiners intended to seek a Justice Department criminal investigation of some of Lincoln's practices.

Besides DeConcini, the senators under scrutiny are Republican John McCain of Arizona and Democrats Alan Cranston of California, John Glenn of Ohio and Donald Riegle of Michigan.

Patriarca said the regulators found "absolutely reckless" practices at Lincoln, with no credit documentation for 52 loans they examined. He said the thrift was engaged in highly risky practices. He said there was evidence the files had been stuffed with phony underwriting documents.

He said Cranston left soon after the April 9 meeting began, saying he shared the concerns of the other lawmakers but had duties on the Senate floor.

Cranston accounted for $889,000 of the $1.3 billion contributed by Keating and his associates. Much of the money was given to voter registration projects supported by the California senator.

Cranston said in testimony released Thursday that his involvement with Keating was "politically stupid." The testimony came last April in a closed session with the committee.

"I see nothing ethically, morally or legally wrong with the amounts that were involved," Cranston testified. "I will grant that it turned out to be politically stupid and unwise, because it's caused an uproar that I regret. But being politically stupid or unwise is quite different from being ethically improper."

Appeals Court grants Lucas stay of execution

AUSTIN (AP) — Alleged serial killer Henry Lee Lucas, scheduled to die Monday for a 1979 slaying, won a stay from the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Lucas was granted a reprieve Thursday, a day after the same court rejected a stay for the one-eyed drifter on other grounds.

The appeals court said Thursday it would consider a claim by Lucas' attorneys that the trial jury should have been able to consider mitigating circumstances before sentencing him to death, said assistant Texas Attorney General Bob Walt.

On Wednesday, the court had rejected a claim that the trial court did not have the authority to set Lucas' execution date.

Lucas, 54, had once claimed to have killed nearly 600 people in 26 states but he later recanted his confessions to all the slayings except one — that of his mother.

He said Wednesday he might have confessed to as many as 4,000 crimes because of threats against him or promises made to him.

Lucas was scheduled to die before dawn Monday for the slaying of a woman known only as "Orange Socks," which is all she was wearing when her body was found Oct. 31, 1979, next to a culvert near Interstate 35 north of Georgetown.

More economic woes: Welfare rolls rise in 49 of 50 states, survey shows

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

In another sign of a weakening economy, the number of people on welfare rose in all but one state in the past year. An Associated Press survey of welfare rolls in all 50 states found that only Wisconsin had bucked the trend, partly because it enacted pioneering programs to get people off welfare.

Although a troubled economy was the villain in many states, it was not the sole reason — or even the most important one — in others.

Officials in some states attributed the increase to changes in immigration law or to programs that help poor people apply for welfare. Some mentioned changes in federal Medicaid requirements that have brought more people into the welfare system.

And some were simply stumped by the upsurge. "Our economy is good, the employment picture is good, so we're not sure what factors are responsible," said Alfred K. Suga, deputy director of Hawaii's Department of Human Services.

Hawaii had one of the smallest increases — 1.1 percent — in the number of households receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the benchmark welfare program. New Hampshire had the largest — 46 percent.

"Those numbers are startling," said Tom Pryor, an administrator in New Hampshire's Office of Economic Services. "The primary reason that we see for that increase has been the decline in the New England economy."

Elsewhere in New England, AFDC caseloads went up 25 percent in Vermont, 19 percent in Connecticut, 14 percent in Maine and Rhode Island and 10 percent in Massachusetts.

The Southwest also was hard hit by welfare increases, partly because new immigration rules allowed more non-citizens to qualify for welfare.

The AFDC caseload was up 9 percent in California, where nearly 2 million people were receiving benefits in September. It rose 23 percent in Arizona, 17 percent in Texas and 14 percent in New Mexico.

Many states attributed the increase to their own efforts to reach out to poor people and enroll them in welfare programs. Some have adopted a "one-stop shopping" concept for social services, so that poor people seeking one form of public assistance are given access to others.

Another factor has been a federal mandate that makes Medicaid available to more pregnant women and infants. This has caused huge jumps in Medicaid caseloads — they are up 46 percent in Indiana, for instance — and has also caused a spillover into other programs, such as AFDC and food stamps.

"When someone comes in and asks for Medicaid, we don't just check to see if they are eligible for Medicaid, we check to see if they are eligible for more services," said Sherron Heinemann, spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Human Services.

The government has no current figures for AFDC caseloads nationwide. The average monthly caseload for 1989, the most recent year for which figures were available, was 3.79 million households.

There are more recent figures for food stamps — the Agriculture Department says there were 20.2 million people receiving food stamps in September, up 7 percent from the year before.

The Farm Belt and portions of the Deep South have come closest to resisting the welfare upsurge. Farm states such as North Dakota, Iowa and Kansas have shown increases of less than 1 percent, as have such Southern states as Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana.

Wisconsin's AFDC caseload actually dropped 2 percent in the past year, and that came after three years of even larger declines. Officials attribute the drop to a strong state economy and experiments that require children of welfare recipients to stay in school and welfare mothers to work or attend school.

WINTER'S MAJESTY

All delight in the beauty of snow . . . how it clears the air, cleans and gives the earth a pure white blanket. David in his worship of God said . . .

"Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

Attend church, worship God and know the joy of a free spirit, whiter than snow.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Only be careful, and watch yourselves closely so that you do not forget the things your eyes have seen or let them slip from your heart as long as you live. Teach them to your children and to their children after them. (Deuteronomy 4:9 NIV)

My education has been a long roller coaster ride of voracious learning and swift forgetting. Though school wasn't always fun for me, I have always loved to learn. The problem is, my brain bucket has a hole in it.

I recently decided to brush up on English grammar. English was always my easiest subject, and I was pretty cocky and confident it would come back to me quickly. Not so! Not five pages into the book, I ran across terms I don't vaguely remember ever having learned; and what's more, I couldn't decipher the explanations! My self-tutoring came to a screeching halt; who cares about finite and non-finite verbs anyway?

With the exception of what I tell him, my husband has a disgusting capacity to retain everything he ever read or heard, and he has little patience with my cobwebs; but apparently I'm in a big boat. I ran across a book in a book store titled, Forgotten Algebra.

And a friend made the comment she took college classes to become certified as a bilingual teacher; "But," she said, "it's funny how it just leaves you if you never practice it." I take comfort in not being the only one for whom the old adage, "Use it or lose it," holds true.

The same holds true for Christian principles. As new Christians, we gather the "good things" — thoughts, actions, feelings, knowledge, blessings — into our spiritual buckets; we can't get enough of them. But as we get on with our lives, we fail to pour them generously into our living. They set unused until a hole corrodes in the bottom of the bucket, and they all leak out. We feel a loss; we know we are missing the full effect of God's goodness; but we persist in our emptiness for we have forgotten how to replenish our souls.

We need to get back to basics — repentance, daily Bible study, faithful church attendance, Christian living, stewardship, and prayer, prayer, and more prayer! The more we use the basics we have learned, the fuller and fresher are our souls. And we experience an added benefit; our spiritual buckets overflow to pour into others' lives.

Christians, do you remember? Do you remember how good God is?

BOSTON (AP) — Trustees of the Unitarian Universalist Association have decided to divest its portfolio of stocks and bonds of companies engaged in the manufacture and distribution of tobacco products.

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has been chosen to receive the 1990 World Methodist Peace Award for his "courageous, creative and consistent actions" in that cause.

The Rev. Joe Hale, general secretary of the World Methodist Council, said the award was offered to Gorbachev Sept. 27, before the mid-October announcement of his receiving the Nobel Peace Prize.

Church plans for seasonal celebration

Members of First Christian Church, 1633 N. Nelson, will observe the 13th annual "Hanging of the Greens" program at the 10:50 a.m. service on Sunday.

The Hanging of the Greens is a way the church officially opens the Advent/Christmas season. It is a celebration intended to nurture people and strengthen their faith.

Green garlands will be hung on the columns and red bows will be placed on the pews by the young people in the congregation from age 3 years old to senior high school. There will be more than 20 poinsettias that will be placed on the chancel.

The adult choir will be under the direction of Fred Mays. Organist will be Sue King. Dr. John T. Tate will deliver the Christmas message during the morning service.

The lighting of the Christman Tree and the presentation of the Christmas Rose will be a special time during the service, as will be the lighting of the Advent Candle.

Cheryl Coutts and Sharon Carter are in charge of the children's portion of the worship hour. Christmas carols will be the hymns of the morning hour, with the entire audience joining with the children and choir.

The message given during the service is the message of the angels to the shepherds on that night so long ago.

Shirley Winborne, director of membership, said the public is invited to attend the special Christmas season service.

Breakfast set for Saturday

St. Mark's CME Church, 406 Elm, will sponsor a pancake breakfast beginning at 8 a.m. Saturday at the church, according to the Rev. H.R. Johnson, pastor of the church.

On the menu will be pancakes, eggs, bacon, sausage, orange juice and coffee.

The public is invited and donations will be accepted.

Evangelist Sears to speak in Pampa

Evangelist Dr. Victor E. Sears of Springfield, Mo., will be guest speaker Sunday at the services at Fellowship Baptist Church, 622 E. Francis.

Sears is a well-known speaker and author and has been called "America's Old-Time Evangelist." In the past 40 years, he has conducted meetings on every major continent of the world and in all 50 states of the United States.

He founded and pastored the Twin City Baptist Church in Mishawaka, Ind., for 16 years and has pastored the Castelberry Baptist Church of Fort Worth and the First Baptist Church of Englewood, Colo. Upon the death of the late Dr. Harvey H. Springer, he became the editor of the worldwide prophetic weekly "The Western Voice."

Sears has taught in two Christian colleges and is a former president of the Baptist Bible Fellowship representing more than 3,500 independent Baptist churches in America. He speaks annually at many of the Bible conferences of America and has been one of the voices exposing liberalism and apostasy in Christianity.

For many years he carried on radio ministries on national hookups. He is fundamentalist of the Baptist faith.

In an August 1983 issue of the Baptist Bible Tribune devoted to evangelist, they said of him: "Sears, a distinguished and gifted man of God, brings to the pulpit a dignity and dynamics reminiscent of many great preachers of the first of this century."

Coming from a New England family of four preacher brothers, he quotes hundreds of Scripture verses he has memorized and Bible prophecy has a large part in his messages.

Services at the Fellowship Baptist Church will be at 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday. Pastor Earl Mad-dux said the public is invited.

Man's secretive past casts a shadow on ex-employee

DEAR ABBY: For several years, I worked for a man who had a lot of trouble with the truth. Apparently, he is still lying. Although I no longer work for him, the woman he has been dating called me recently for some information about him. I acknowledged that she had guessed the truth about one area of his past, but I immediately regretted I had said anything.

When she started quizzing me further, I suggested that she ask him directly — which she has never done. She seemed annoyed with my refusal to tell her more than I had. It seems that she plans to go to Houston (without telling him) to track down the whole story. I told her that the answers she wants are not so bad, but I felt that the telling of his story was up to him. She still insisted that she had no intention of asking him.

Although I am not in touch with this man, I've considered contacting him to tell him that he needs to be honest with this woman — especially since she has already guessed some of the truth. I've also thought of calling her back and suggesting that he may be annoyed when he finds out she made a trip to Houston — the people at that end will probably tell him. I also hesitate to do that. Shall I just keep out of it and not call anyone? Thanks for helping.

UNEASY IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR UNEASY: Your last idea was by far your best. Don't call anyone. And in the future, the less you say to anyone concerning a third party — especially to a stranger on the telephone — the better.

DEAR ABBY: I own a small pet shop in Illinois. Today when I came to work, I noticed a box in my parking lot. When I opened the top, a large cat jumped out! A note inside read, "Hi! My name is Bear. I am very friendly. I know you will find a good home for me because you love animals, too."

Well, I didn't find a good home for Bear, because the frightened animal

Dear Abby

slipped out of my hands and into the street in the middle of traffic and was killed instantly.

Abby, people have dumped boxes of sick kittens, malnourished puppies, half-dead rabbits, baby hamsters and guinea pigs at my store with no note — nothing! As far as I am concerned, these people have no hearts and no brains. My veterinary bills for these animals have run into the hundreds of dollars in the two years I've been in the pet shop business. I simply cannot afford to take care of other people's problems.

Abby, please tell your readers to take these animals to the local Humane Society so they can find homes for them or euthanize them. Although "putting down" an animal is not an easy thing to do, it's far more humane than letting a cat fry in the heat in someone's parking lot or get killed in traffic.

LOVES ANIMALS IN CHICAGO

DEAR LOVES ANIMALS: Thanks for giving a voice to the voiceless.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "I'd rather be right than be president"? I say it was Wendell Willkie. My husband says it was Adlai Stevenson.

UNICE AND SHELDON

DEAR E. AND S.: You're both wrong. It was Henry Clay, who campaigned unsuccessfully for president five times. (P.S. I think what this country needs is a person who can be right and be president at the same time.)

NCAA allows Runnin' Rebels to defend national title

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV may not have much time to celebrate a compromise with the NCAA that allows the Runnin' Rebels to defend their national basketball title.

At the same time school officials announced the team could defend its national championship, their jubilation was tempered by the fact the results of yet another NCAA investigation into the program are about to be released.

UNLV president Robert Maxson said an initial report on a probe involving former prep star Lloyd Daniels is expected in about two weeks. The report has been complete for some time, but the university requested it be delayed until after the resolution of the current matter.

The NCAA has been investigating the recruiting of Daniels since 1987, when allegations arose about the former New York City prep star who never played for the university after being arrested at a crack house. The probe reportedly was later expanded, and NCAA investigators were on the UNLV campus much of last year.

"We have absolutely no idea what is in the report," Maxson said

University of Kansas calls NCAA ruling 'inconsistent'

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA may have lots of new friends on the Las Vegas Strip, but its popularity in its own backyard is near zero.

"How can we respect the NCAA now after this?" said Kim Hutton, a senior from Derby, Kan., who echoed the sentiments of many students on the sprawling University of Kansas campus. "Nobody here has anything against Las Vegas. But how can they be so inconsistent?"

Kansas was prevented from defending its 1988 NCAA championship after it was found guilty of recruiting violations. But the NCAA, in an unprecedented reversal Thursday, changed its mind about UNLV and agreed to let the top-ranked Runnin' Rebels defend their 1990 title.

Thursday. "But Coach (Jerry) Tarkanian says there are no infractions."

Despite the looming Daniels case, UNLV officials and fans were ecstatic Thursday over an agreement with the NCAA that overturns the organization's ban on the Runnin' Rebels defending the title they won in April with a 103-73 trouncing of Duke.

In exchange for the unprecedented action by the NCAA, the university agreed not to compete in the 1991-92 postseason tournament and not to appear on live television during that season.

"This is a great feeling," Maxson said. "We have to live up to our word now and not be whiners."

UNLV wasted no time in agreeing to the new sanctions, which were offered as one of two options by the NCAA Committee on Infra-

"I sure wish they'd given us a multiple choice penalty," said basketball coach Roy Williams.

UNLV, as a result of its 13-year-old case involving coach Jerry Tarkanian, was told in July it would join Kansas as the only basketball champions not allowed to defend their championship. But after the school offered some alternative punishments, the NCAA came up with a compromise which the Rebels quickly snapped Thursday afternoon.

On the Kansas campus, less than 20 miles from the NCAA's gleaming new office building in suburban Kansas City, folks were stunned.

"I can't believe what the NCAA did," said Jeff Gueldner, a guard on Kansas' national championship team. "It looks to me like the rules are not applied uniformly."

"I'm stunned by this news," athletic director Bob Frederick said.

Del Brinkman, a vice president at Kansas and the school's faculty representative to the NCAA since 1978, issued a one-sentence statement.

"I didn't think it was possible to negotiate with the NCAA," he said.

Williams followed Larry Brown as Kansas coach after Brown and two-time All-American Danny Manning led the Jayhawks to the 1988 title.

The next fall, at the end of a relatively brief investigation by NCAA standards, the Jayhawks were hit with a three-year probation for violations primarily involving a player who never enrolled at Kansas. Severe recruiting restrictions were imposed along with the one-year tournament ban.

for the 1991-92 team if his present team were allowed to defend its title.

"Coach Tarkanian emphasized he would do what he had to do to let his kids play in the tournament. I give him 100 percent of the credit," Maxson said. "Coach Tarkanian has told us all year that he has a very special relationship with these players. He put his money where his mouth is."

Tarkanian, who was in Vancouver promoting Saturday's game, did not take phone calls but released a statement saying he was satisfied with the NCAA decision.

If not for the NCAA's change-of-heart, UNLV would have become the second national basketball champion to be barred from defending its title; the first was Kansas, which won the 1988 NCAA title but had to bypass the '89 tournament because of recruiting violations.

"I would hope that people will see this as a positive thing," said Steve Morgan, the NCAA's associate executive director in charge of enforcement.

Morgan said the settlement was an effort to "tailor a penalty that is harsh and yet takes into account some things the institution was suggesting it do to itself."

Tigers take on Sands tonight

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Six-man football's battle of the unbeaten unfolds tonight in Plainview when the McLean Tigers face Sands at 7:30 in Bulldog Stadium.

However, Sands does have one blemish on their 12-0 record: They actually lost to Christoval 24-9, but Christoval later had to forfeit for allowing an ineligible player in for two downs.

McLean knows about losing to Christoval. That was the squad that knocked the Tigers out of the quarterfinals last year at this time.

Tiger coach Jerry Miller said this morning of tonight's game, "Both teams look so evenly matched that I don't know what to think. I know it's cliché, but I think it will come down to who makes the fewest mistakes. Anytime two 12 and 0 teams meet, they've got to have something good going for them."

Preparing for Sands has been a challenge for Miller and company since the two teams have never played one another and have had no common opponents.

"The only thing he and I know about each other is through the exchange of two films," Miller said.

Perhaps as great a challenge as preparing for Sands is the job coaches must do this time of year keeping players enthused about football.

Miller said his team is no different than most when it comes to being faced with distractions.

"There are a lot of people playing basketball by this time and it's getting close to Christmas vacation time," Miller acknowledged. But he promised his team is hungry to continue winning.

"Physically we're as strong as anybody and we have pretty good quickness, but we are young," Miller said. "We only start two seniors on offense and one on defense. Our best year is probably still a year away."

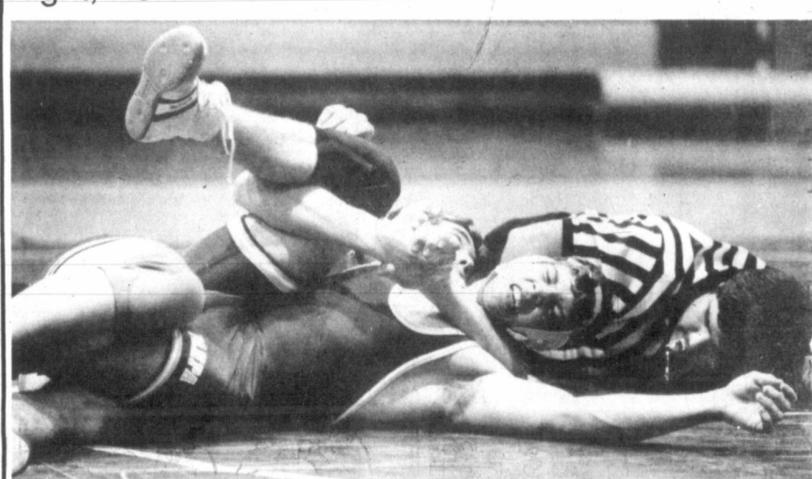

If the Tiger machine is to roll over Sands, it will have to overcome injuries to two key players, safety Dwayne Hill and cornerback Destry McGee.

That will improve Sands chances against what is probably the best 6-man defense in the state. However, man for man, McLean still looks stronger than Sands.

Key players for Sands include running back Eric Herms, who is seven yards away from a thousand-yard season, and quarterback Aaron Cowley, who has completed 16 touchdowns without an interception.

Tonight's winner plays the victor of the Lazbuddie-Fort Hancock game in the state semi-finals.

Watson resigns from country club after Jew denied admission

By TOM WATTS
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Pro golfer Tom Watson severed ties with the country club where he learned to play after the co-founder of H&R Bloch was reportedly denied admission because he is Jewish.

Watson on Thursday said he resigned from the Kansas City Country Club because Henry Bloch, chairman of the nation's largest tax preparation service had his application withdrawn.

"They put a prominent Jewish person up for membership and his application was withdrawn," Watson said. "It's something I can't personally live with because my family is Jewish."

Watson is not Jewish, but his wife, Linda, and their two children are.

The five-time winner of the British Open and two-time winner of the U.S. Open became a junior member of the club when he was 21 and has been a full-time member for the past six years.

"I would hope the club would significantly change so some good people of any religion, race and sex could be members," said Watson. "That's the way I feel about it."

Bloch, chairman and co-founder of H&R Bloch Inc., was turned down for application despite being sponsored at the club by three of the city's leading civic and business leaders: Donald Hall, chairman of Hallmark Cards Inc.; James Kemper, chairman of the Commerce Bancshares Inc.; and Richard Green, chairman of UtiliCorp United Inc. All three belong to the club's membership committee.

Attempts by The Associated Press to reach Bloch, Hall, Kemper and Green by telephone were unsuccessful. Bloch earlier declined comment when contacted by the Kansas City Business Journal.

The club is located in Mission

Hills, Kan., the Kansas City area's most prestigious suburb.

L. Chandler Smith, president of the 94-year-old club, said it had no blacks among its 400 foundation members. Asked if the club has any Jewish members, Smith said, "To the best of my knowledge, no."

"I don't think it's proper that I go ahead into the detail of that process (admitting members)," he said. "I just don't think it should be public information."

"To begin with, the application was withdrawn. The board never formally voted on Mr. Bloch. Now the procedure that Mr. Bloch went through is the same procedure that is followed by all new prospective members."

Asked if Bloch's application would have been denied by the board because of his religion, Smith said, "The decisions that are made do not relate to religion. We do not (discriminate)."

Watson said Smith and a couple of other members tried to talk him out of resigning. But he said he wouldn't feel comfortable because "there's a policy there that I couldn't live with."

Watson, however, said he still believes in the right of private clubs to determine their membership.

"I still believe that," he said. "But when they choose to discriminate against your beliefs, you don't have to choose to be a member there."

Cliff Jones, a member of the club who has been active in trying to break its restrictive admissions policy, said he had urged Bloch to apply and that his snub "put the club in a very unfavorable light."

Leaders in the Jewish community decried the situation.

"It's harmful to our image in Kansas City," said Ann Jacobson, president of the Jewish Federation of Greater Kansas City, "that here some of the leadership of our community endorses bigotry or discrimination."

Howard Levitan, president of Kehilath Israel Synagogue in Kansas City, said, "I would commend Tom Watson's action and look forward to a time when someone would not have to go to that extreme to see that all people are created equal."

Barrel racer, 42, sets sights for the top

By BILL HORNADAY
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph

GLADEWATER (AP) — Senior athletes such as race car drivers Emerson Fittipaldi and Darrell Waltrip, pro golfer Ray Floyd and baseball pitcher Nolan Ryan have won acclaim as the best in their fields, and some might attach the same tag to Gladewater's Deb Mohon, the world's second-ranked barrel racer.

Mrs. Mohon, 42, is competing in the National Finals Rodeo that starts Friday in Las Vegas, and her goal is to leave rodeo's "Super Bowl" ranked No. 1.

"This is the biggie — it is the Super Bowl of rodeos," Mrs. Mohon said. "There are 10 runs in this event, and each one pays about $6,390 for each first place win. If I win them all, you could make up to $75,000, but with the top 15 riders in the world there, that isn't very likely.

Mrs. Mohon only began her professional career in 1984, while Ryan, for instance, has pitched 21 years in the majors, starting in 1969.

"Me and my husband had a western store here (in Gladewater) for 15 years. During that time, I competed as an amateur," she said. "We sold it in 1983, and that was when I started professionally."

The Marshall native has had an impact on the Women's Professional Rodeo Association and the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association since 1986. She placed fifth in the world that year and improved to third in 1987 before dropping to eighth in 1988.

In 1989, she regained fifth place, and this year claimed honors at meets in Dodge City, Kans.; Colorado Springs; Oklahoma City; Little Rock, Ark., and Cody, Wyo.

Traveling with her husband James, 44, better known as "Bubba," who serves as her support crew, Mrs. Mohon has put another year-long tour of 96 rodeos and 56,000 miles behind her.

Mrs. Mohon said this has been her best year for earnings. So far, she has collected $41,000 in winnings, with two major events left. She credits her success to a lot of hard work and determination.

Picking a good horse doesn't hurt either, and Mrs. Mohon said her 9-year-old current mount, Special Agreement, a half thoroughbred-half quarter horse gelding that she has nicknamed "Brown," has been her best.

"Brown is real solid around the barrels and real honest. Every step counts, and you'll get the same run every time — you don't have to guess," Mrs. Mohon said. "Brown's also got a lot of personality and is about half a showoff. He's arrogant. When we make a victory ride he spooks a bit, and he's not like that."

"When Brown enters the arena, it's like he looks at the crowd and says, 'I'm here. Watch me run.'"

Mrs. Mohon says both she and her horse perform better when the pressure is on.

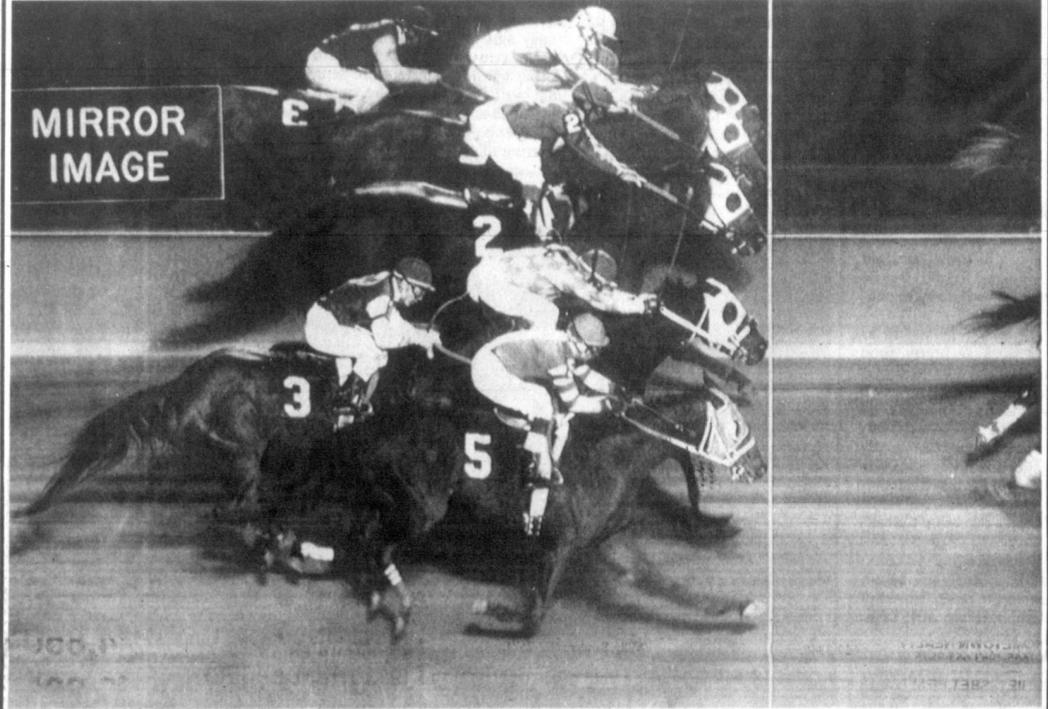

"I ride better when the going gets tough," she said. "I have a problem in that I don't ride as hard in an event with local riders as I would with the top 15 in the world. I guess I like to rise to the occasion."

When competing in events such as the upcoming world championships, Mrs. Mohon said a rider's skill can be offset by surrounding factors. She said winning big events such as Las Vegas depends in part on what riders call "the luck of the draw."

"Conditions in the Thomas Mack Center are usually good, but sometimes you have to draw right," she said. "If you draw first run, you may get better traction than you do running eighth or tenth. Fortunately, the weather will not play a factor in Vegas because we'll be indoors."

After Las Vegas, Mrs. Mohon's last event of the year will be the state circuit finals Dec. 26-29 in Fort Worth's Cowtown Coliseum. She currently leads the circuit.

Cougars close season with Coca-Cola Bowl

TOKYO (AP) — It's not really a postseason bowl game, but for the Houston Cougars, the Coca-Cola Bowl will be as close as they get.

The Cougars, who are on NCAA-mandated probation and thus banned from postseason play, will close their regular-season schedule against the Arizona State Sun Devils.

No. 11 Houston is 9-1, while the Sun Devils, slowed by the midseason injury of quarterback

Paul Justin, have won only four of their 10 games.

The Cougars will also be going into the Coca-Cola Bowl with memories of a very good day.

Houston quarterback David Klingler, a candidate for this year's Heisman Trophy, threw an NCAA record 11 touchdown passes and tied the NCAA record for most TD throws in one season, 47, during the Cougars' 84-21 romp over Eastern Washington on Nov. 18.

Two of those throws went to star runningback Chuck Weather- spoon, who picked up his own claim to fame that day — he became the fourth player in South-west Conference history to rush for 1,000 yards in three consecutive seasons.

Weather-spoon, the Cougars' all-time leading rusher with 3,206 yards, also earned the conference's single-game record for all-purpose yards with 372, while teammate Manny Hazard became the all-time SWC reception leader with 212 catches for his career.

Both teams arrived in Tokyo on Tuesday and began practice the following day. After two days of practicing in the mud, they were spared from heavy rains brought in by an unseasonal typhoon for the final practice Friday, which was held in the Tokyo Dome.

Kickoff at the 60,000-plus seat dome is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday (Tokyo time, midnight tonight EST).

AP's pro picks for the weekend

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

So what if Monday night's matchup between the New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers is tarnished because both teams lost last week. It will still be the first time since 1948 that teams with one loss meet so late in the season.

In '48, it was a crosstown game between the Chicago Bears and Cardinals when the Cardinals played on Chicago's South Side. The Cardinals won that won 24-21.

San Francisco is favored by 3 1/2 points. In the season and two-thirds since George Seifert took over from Bill Walsh, the Niners are 27-3. The three losses were all at Candlestick Park.

Both teams could clinch division titles if things break right and the Giants already have a playoff spot. The incentive is home field advantage in the playoffs.

GIANTS, 24-21.

Philadelphia (plus 3) at Buffalo. Buddy Ryan and his big-mouths can't figure out why the Bills are favored. Ryan's won five in a row and may have the NFL's best team right now. But the Eagles also have to prove they can keep their concentration against AFC teams.

BILLS, 20-16

Green Bay (plus 5) at Minnesota. If the Eagles aren't the league's hottest team, the Vikings may be. Even if Don Majkowski is back.

VIKINGS, 24-13

Raiders (minus 2 1/2) at Denver. The Raiders now have lost three of four.

The Broncos have lost four of four.

RAIDERS 17-13

Cincinnati (plus 4) at Pittsburgh.

Another of those two-week turnarounds we've been getting so often. What does it tell you about the Bengals that they are underdogs against a team they beat 27-3 two weeks ago?

STEELERS, 24-17

Miami (minus 3) at Washington. The best thing you can say about the Redskins is that they've had 10 days to rest since their drubbing in Dallas. The three points for the home field in this one is well deserved.

REDSKINS, 20-16

New Orleans (minus 1) at Dallas. So why is the Dallas Power-house and its two-game winning streak a home underdog? Not because Steve Walsh is better than Troy Aikman.

COWBOYS 20-19.

Detroit (plus 8) at Chicago

The last time the Lions ran-and-shot in the wind was two weeks ago in the Meadowlands. They lost 20-0.

BEARS, 20-0

Atlanta (minus 2) at Tampa Bay. How bad are the Bucs, outscored 133-40 in their last four games? They're underdogs at home to a team that's lost 16 straight on the road.

FALCONS, 21-7

Other games, home team in CAPS. Rams (minus 3 1/2) 31, CLEVELAND 13. Kansas City (minus 7 1/2) 20, NEW ENGLAND-6. PHOENIX (minus 2 1/2) 20, Indianapolis 13. SAN DIEGO (minus 6 1/2) 19, Jets 14.

Last week: 6-8 (spread), 7-7 (straight up).

Season: 72-81-1 (spread) 93-62 (straight up)

Razorbacks prepare for game against Kansas State

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson says the Kansas State team has third-ranked Razorbacks will face Saturday at Fayetteville will provide a variety of challenges.

"They run multiple defenses," Richardson said at a news conference Thursday. "They don't walk it up the floor. They'll run the ball.

"They've got very good athletes. They have the kind of basketball team that can and will give us some problems," he said.

Richardson said the key for Arkansas (4-1) will be keeping its pressure defense on Kansas State (2-0). But he added that "I don't know how much of that we can do" without Arlyn Bowers, who sprained his ankle and is listed as questionable for the contest.

Richardson also defended guard Lee Mayberry, who had an off night shooting in Arkansas' 96-57 win over Mississippi College on Tuesday, but still scored 15 points. "People keep asking 'What's wrong with Lee?'" Richardson said. "He amazed people in his first two years up here and now people are asking what's wrong. He's just in a slump.

"He's no secret to the country now. He's one of the best guards in the country. People have done a lot better job on him this year because they know about him. He can look human at times because he is human," Richardson said.
