We the Women

By RUTH MILLETT

News item with a Salt Lake City dateline: "Carl Swenson, cab driver, sat patiently while his three feminine passengers 'divided' up a 35-cent fare.

"The fare couldn't be split three ways exactly. But the women nearly made it.

"Swenson accepted 33 cents—three dimes and three pennies—and two cents' worth of Utah state one-cent tax tokens, seven each from two of the women, six from the third.

Perhaps this small incident will make women see to what ridiculous lengths they often go in their determination not to be 'behind' to other women.

DON'T BE TOO DUTCH
The Dutch treat idea is all right the way men carry it out. But women carry it too far.

They sit at a luncheon table, arguing over how large (or rather how small) a tip to leave the waitress and then try to split it evenly.

Then they stand at the cashier's cage fumbling around while they decide whether it was Jane or Mary who had the extra cup of coffee.

With such carrying-on they have made the Dutch treat not only ridiculous but they have taken away the graciousness out of their get-togethers.

And it's not because women don't want to pay their share. It's because they want to be sure they pay their full share—but not one cent more.

PARIS—(NEA)—Pierre Balmain revives the sarong, and makes it the star of his midsummer collection. The bizarre styling of a sarong bathing suit (right) which combines wrap-and-tied shorts, bra and knee-length coat, is underscored by exotic Japanese cotton of multicolor print. The gala evening dress (left) with short train new off-shoulder decolletage and whopping hip bow, show the sarong's influence on formal fashions. Red-and-black Japanese print contributes to the exotic look of this gown.

Tips To Speed Up Household Tasks
Homemakers prepare and serve well over a thousand meals a year. Besides all the time spent in cooking, these meals result in many, many hours of dishwashing. Here are a number of ways to simplify the task of washing dishes:

1. Use convenient equipment. A porcelain enameled dishpan will not mar the sink and is very easy to clean. A rubber-coated dish drainer, a bottle brush, a rubber-tipped plate scraper and a sink strainer are other aids to efficient dishwashing.
2. Store dishwashing equipment and supplies, such as soap and towels, as near the sink as possible.
3. Use a tray to carry dishes from the table to the sink. Rinse the dishes and stack them neatly at one side of the sink.
4. Measure soap into the dishpan, add hot water and whip up a thick, lasting suds.
5. Wash dishes, using either a soft cloth or a dish mop. The usual washing order is: glassware, silver, china, and last, the pots and pans.

Even the task of washing pots and pans may be simplified. Whenever possible, use porcelain enameled utensils in the preparation of food. They have a glossy finish and clean and new looking. To speed the washing of pots and pans:

1. Rinse cooking utensils immediately after using. Put to soak those which do not rinse clean. Before washing, discard scum and water and remove loosened bits of food with a rubber scraper.
2. Empty grease from frying or baking pans while it is still warm. Then wipe with paper toweling and rinse with warm water.
3. Wash utensils in warm, soapy water and rinse with hot water. Porcelain enameled utensils may be allowed to drain dry.

Writer Has A House by The River
By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK—(AP)—The rhymester who wanted to live in a house by the side of the road can have it.

He'll take my house by the side of a river, when the race of men go by in boats. Railroad cars float by, too.

My river is the East River, and the waters wash with a fine impartiality the sinful banks of Manhattan and the moral shores of fair Greenpoint, the a cme of Brooklyn.

My house stands on the Manhattan side. It is a quaint new brick cottage fourteen stories high, lost in a cluster of buildings that look as much alike as a rack full of cue balls.

The development was built by a big insurance company to hold 40,000 people, and it is one of the largest real estate ventures since the hanging gardens of Babylon.

The insurance company is a popular landlord. It reverses the dictum of most New York landlords: "dogs, yes—children, no." Here man's best friend has to be smuggled in, but the leases allow the tenants a crew of bulldozers to level the land. Then came landscapers in battalions. They threw grass and crab apple trees around. The vines must be planted in some new kind of "grow-quick." They're climbing faster than the price of sirloin.

We can watch from our window river, And what do we care if the ever-changing life of the people below us and above us look out and see the same and freight cars to terminal cars

McKENNEY ON BRIDGE

Tournament bridge is becoming popular throughout the world. There is a very good group of players in Kingston, Jamaica. As a matter of fact, one the Kingston players was a member of the team that tied for the national women's team-of-four championship last year.

Frank E. Lyons, one of the most active members of the tournament group there, sent me today's hand, and it is one of the prettiest hands I have seen in some time. Doesn't it look as if West must make two heart tricks? West made six hearts.

West opened the king of diamonds, which was won in dummy, and the three of clubs was led to declarer's ace. Lyons then led

The four of spades and won it in dummy with the ten-spot. On the king of clubs he discarded his four of diamonds. Then the six of diamonds was led from dummy, trumped with the deuce of hearts, and the jack of spades overtaken in dummy with the ace. The eight of diamonds was trumped with the three of hearts.

Now Lyons led the five of hearts, West put on the ten-spot and the trick was won in dummy with the king. The queen of clubs was trumped by declarer with the six of hearts, the queen of spades was cashed, then the king of spades was led.

West had the queen, jack and eight of hearts, while dummy had the nine-four of hearts and ten of diamonds. Lyons was left with the ace and seven of hearts. If West trumped the king of spades with the eight of hearts, Lyons would overtrump in dummy with the nine. If West trumped with the jack, Lyons would discard the ten of diamonds, and West would be forced to lead from the queen-eight of hearts into Lyons' tenace position.

Girls Are Back On Gold Standard

Fashion-conscious damsels last set themselves on the gold standard. The shiny gold bug has gone to the feet, waist and over the arm with shoes, belts and bags being made of glowing gold kit. It is a peculiar fad and no matter how you slice it, too much gold worn in the daytime "looks" like a bit of gold can complement bright, white dress, perhaps nothing else can—but when you see young people laden down with gold which only yesterday was part of mother's formal attire, they look as if they are dressed up for Halloween.

Wear the belt and the shoes, the bag and the belt, but not the three accessories together.

Common Ground

By R. C. HOLLES

I want to continue today with the article "Christianity and Planned Economy" by Frank Chodorov as published by Human Events. Copies of this article can be obtained for 15 cents each or eight for $1.00 at Human Events, 1323 M Street N. W., Washington, D.C.

Since this column has had so much to say about people who profess to be Christians and to be teaching Christianity and at the same time advocating zoning and planning, public education, minimum wages and other forms of state controls, this article is timely.

In view of Christ's obvious antipathy toward "zoning" it seems to me that not only the doctrine, but every activity of the State, is discredited by Christianity. The State lives by and for the collection of taxes; without taxes it would not be; without taxes it could not exist.

"A good man out of the treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things," said Jesus. He did not say a good council, a good synagogue, a good planning board; nor did he mention a good tax. He mentioned a "good man". It is inconsistent with Christ's teachings to ascribe goodness to impersonal schemes or to infuse a soul into a collectivity.

"Frequent reference is made by ministerial enunciations of Statism to the parable of the coin: 'Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's'."

"Significantly enough, the circumstances which elicited this remark are usually ignored by those who use it in support of the political establishment. Jesus was being heckled by enemies, whose obvious intent was to trick Him into making a statement that could be used against Him with the authorities."

"So the parable is without the placid content frequently attributed to it. This was an on-the-spot remark, called forth by special circumstances, and cannot be classed with freely given lessons that obviously came from the lips of Jesus, as the Sermon on the Mount."

"But, what did Jesus mean? What are the things due Caesar? Are they due as a matter of right or of might? Can one infer from this parable that tribute is in God's scheme of things? Or, forsooth, did Jesus mean to put Caesar on a par with God? Taken by itself, the parable of the coin can be made to mean even that absurdity. Taken with Christ's teachings as a whole it lacks significance. Seeing how He stressed man's duty to God, the parable might well be rephrased: the more of yourself you render unto Caesar, the less you have for God."

"Christ's time was not free from politics. The entrenched ecclesiastics, naturally enough, were strong for the Roman status quo. Then there were those who were never established how many who advocated a revolution. These 'zealots' asserted that not until the Roman yoke was thrown off, and the Jewish kingdom restored, would a 'race of Yahweh' come upon the people again. There is not a shred of evidence that Jesus concerned himself with the zealots, or that Roman rule interested Him in the least. As for the ecclesiastics, Christ held them in person only because of their perversion of principle."

"The 'zealots' of course, received short shrift from the Romans when caught. It was therefore to the interest of the high priests, who were annoyed by the popularity of Jesus, and fearful for their prestige if not their prerogatives, to pin the label of 'zealot' on Him. The incident of the parable of the coin must be related to this fact. Jesus took the derogatory title of 'King of the Jews,' Jesus, by His exemplary behavior and His disconcerting statements, made it difficult to lay a heresy charge against Him. Besides, Pontius Pilate cared not a fig for the religious quarrels of this pestiferous sect. The only way to get rid of Jesus was to involve Him with the revolutionary agitators."

"When the high priests brought Jesus to Pontius Pilate for sentencing, they had a hard time making this accusation stick. The Roman seems to have been well satisfied that whatever the shortcomings of the defendant, at least he was not a political agitator."

news behind the news

Weekly this veteran Washington correspondent devotes his column to answering questions of general interest about national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Mr. Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Maryland.

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — "How much of President Truman's elaborate, legislative program do you think Congress will act upon at this special session?" asks E.B.T. of Cleveland, O.

Answer: It is extremely hazardous to second-guess the behavior of the reconvened Congress, in view of the circumstances under which the boys and girls were summoned back to the heat and humidity of Washington by President Truman. Both sides will be jockeying for position in the presidential race, and such an atmosphere is not conducive to logical thinking or sound action.

As of today, I would say that almost the only measure sure of passage is the repeal of federal taxes on oleomargarine, and an increase of the minimum wage figure from forty to seventy-five cents an hour, possibly to the dollar amount demanded in Henry Wallace's Philadelphia platform.

But they will attach safeguards so that the federal government must keep its hands off local institutions and educational systems. Southern members will block action unless the states are given

HOUSING — The Taft-Elliender-Wagner Act, with its provision for vast expenditures of public funds for slum clearance and a low-cost housing program which would be enacted, the GOP may pass it in modified form simply to remove it as an issue from the campaign, but it will not become law in its grandiose Senate shape.

The basic objection to a far-flung federal construction program, which is voiced by private builders and suppliers, is that almost every facility for throwing up homes and apartments is strained now. In fact, they report that there is insufficient labor, materials, transportation and similar needs to permit the execution of existing contracts.

SUSPICION — Thus, there will probably be no positive action on the two questions which Mr. Truman considers the most pressing—the control of meat prices and the building of new homes with the aid of government subsidies.

Red Strategy Is for France To Remain in Utter Turmoil

By JOHN FISHER

The Paris parliamentary crisis has made hay for Russia in the Berlin affair.

The crash of the Shuman cabinet on a local issue, intensified by party family squabbles, again demonstrates the instability which makes French agreement to a firm American policy toward the Soviet Union so uncertain. It is too soon to estimate the strength or the longevity of a new coalition.

Shrewd Stalin realizes that a United States French solidarity in any Allied program. Hence he hopes, by exploiting disunity and fear, to make it impossible for us to bank on French support.

French Reds have switched tactics since they were trounced last fall in their gamble on an overthrow of the government by a general strike. The walkout began in tin can boxes. Eventually three million persons downed tools. But the plot failed because patriotic workers saw through the strike scheme and bitterly resented the breaking of the cat's paw of the Kremlin.

REDS MAY PLAN TERROR

The set-back taught the Thorez brain trust a lesson. The Marxist masterminds now admit that they cannot win an election majority and must resort to other means of gaining power. French Communist Party leaders are now planning to launch a revolution similar to the Reign of Terror in 1793.

The anxious ones point out that the Reds still have weapons from resistance days and from the stores filched from arsenals when Communist Tillon was in charge of the Ministry of Armaments. Rumors are circulated in Paris that guns have been smuggled in from Yugoslavia, that several generals and numerous officers in key airports are Communists and that Marty secretly is drilling Red shock troops.

DIFFICULT TASK

Jules Moch, Socialist minister of interior, shocked the General Assembly with his account of Communist savagery. In describing the agony of the victims, he explained that the overwhelming majority of the workers who went to work but that Communist strikers had occupied the premises and had barred entry.

Such labor troubles fomented by the Communists, the antagonism of De Gaulle toward majority parties, a cooling of friendship between the United States and France from constant anti-American propaganda and the petty politics played by feuding members of coalitions are factors which keep France from being as strong a partner as we had hoped.

Unless we understand this background we shall fail to appreciate the difficult task of a French ministry that desires to cooperate with Washington and London.

Ideally, industrial democracy consists of treating folk as if you want to do a good job rather than having to do a good job. —Joyce C. Hall, businesswoman.

A man is educated insofar as he can discriminate between a stone and a statue, a tree and a dog, a man and a deity—and not get them mixed up. —T. M. Green, philosopher, Yale University.

All such talk is the same old political baloney. There never was a political convention in which the program was so stage-managed, the candidates so hand-picked, the platform so dictated by special interests.

In summary, the poor, underprivileged Americans who usually take something of a beating in climbing up the ladder, may have been sold a bill of goods by the left-wing elements of the new party as it may be that they are merely being used to promote what the American Communists are most interested in—the Russian foreign policy line.

Mundt-Nixon Bill

on't Help Much

The arrest of the top American Communists compounds the confusion that already surrounds the issue of their party. They are accused of heading a society that organizes the overthrow of our government by force and violence. This has always been the avowed goal of the Communist Party. And the Communist Party is a legal entity in the United States.

The arrested men were described by a government attorney as a Communist Party's governing board. They run the party, make the policy and decide if it will do.

Do they really make policy or do they follow policy already made in Moscow? Louis Budenz, former Communist bigwig, says the party takes at least part of its orders from Russian agents, and that the orders are delivered by agents in this country.

And the parallel between Russian Communist policy and that of the American Communist Party suggests that the Soviet Communists are not the sole instigators of their actions.

If this is so, will not other leaders rise up to take the place of those arrested and do Moscow's bidding? If this is so, then are all members of the Communist Party equally guilty of working for the American government's destruction?

Except during the war years, home-grown Marxists have been preaching an advocating solution for 30 years. Their purpose does not seem any different from that of the Communists in the United States. What are the reasons for the present and unchanging objective of communism here and in other Communist countries — revolution and a dictatorship of the proletariat?

If the courts should find these accused Communists guilty, then would almost be necessary to try their party and its members also. And that would call for an outlawing of the party, such an action would present difficulties which have long been cognized.

The party would almost certainly crop up under another name. It would be necessary to try a progressive number of laws declaring each succeeding arm of the Communist Party illegal, or else draft a statute so elusive as to make any support of the Marxist objectives illegal, matter what name or form an organization to carry them out should take.

This seems to be the purpose of the Mundt-Nixon Bill, which the House has passed and the Senate has not acted on. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and many others have seen in that bill the danger that a person might be punished for his thoughts and sympathies rather than for his actions.

In spite of the contradictions and dangers, some declaration of action on the whole subject of communism in America seems inevitable in the wake of the forthcoming trial of its leaders. What form the declaration of action will take cannot be determined now. Only one thing seems clear at present—the Justice Department evidently agrees with the stand taken by Governor Dewey in his debate with Harold Stassen, that present laws are adequate for the control of communism and would not recourse to the broad scope and powers proposed in the Mundt-Nixon Bill.

PHILADELPHIA

Unpronounceable names who had built America's railroads, run its mills and its mines, been its heroes on Notre Dame football teams.

Danowski might also have mentioned other minority groups with unpleasant nicknames. They were all represented at Philadelphia. Politicians used to avoid mentioning them by name, for fear of offending them, but now, in Henry Wallace's party, they have taken on political consciousness and they dare stand up and express themselves. Here were some of their words:

"I have seen hospital doors closed against my dying son," said Shirley Graham, Negro writer and author.

"Wallace is the only one of the three candidates who was ever a successful businessman," said Miles Pennacker, Norwalk, Conn., secretary of the New Council for American Business.

"I am a mother, a housewife, and a very angry woman," said Mrs. Katharine Van Coten of New Jersey, complaining of high prices.

"We are tired of Klansmen who ride in the night. As for protecting our Southern womanhood, we will protect ourselves," said Polly Dobbs, white and from Alabama.

These are the things that the leaders of the two old parties should hear and do something about. As for what the leaders of the new party are going to do about them, there is some room for doubt. They bragged that their new party convention had no smoke-filled rooms, no ward-heeled politicians on the floors, no deals.

POLITICAL CHICANERY

by Peter Edson

PHILADELPHIA (NEA)—In one pronouncement to sum up, in any sense, the Henry Wallace progressive Party convention could only throw up his hands in despair and say it was the dumbest thing that ever happened. There wasn't been anything like it in American politics since 1936, whenoughlines met in Cleveland to suppress their former hopes.

The Wallace convention beat all that, with camp-meeting revival ingony by Brooklyn humilities, with Wallace's fantastic pre-arranged conference in which the working reporters kept their mouths shut and the bleeding heart crusaders pok over and beat their breasts I'd over the place, with the bare-shoed walking of the presidential candidate, Glen Taylor, and amily; with finally the miracle of selling $25,000 worth of tickets for admission to Wallace's Saturday night acceptance speech, none passing the hat to collect $5,000 more.

Perhaps the most characteristic performance of the whole convention was a five-minute speech by one Frank Danowski, president of the Plymouth local of United Auto Workers, CIO, and secretary of the Polish-Americans for Wallace.

DANOWSKI'S SYMPATHIES

Danowski called America a combination of cultures blended in one large home. "There are stress and strains in the home," he said, "and the Gunkeys, the picks, the Guineas and the Ginkers, they are looking down by the rest of the family." But Danowski, he was said to be one of the men who

Insulation Keeps Out Winter Cold and Summer's Heat

Most home-owners want their houses insulated because of the winter fuel savings and summer comfort insulation provides, but seldom are aware that it produces an additional important saving in redecoration costs, it was pointed out by the Construction Research Bureau of New York, clearing house for building information.

While it is impossible to set a definite dollars-and-cents figure on this saving because of varying conditions in homes, many cases have been reported where redecoration costs were reduced as much as 75 percent after walls and roof area were insulated full-thick with mineral wool.

This is because lath marks do not show up as rapidly in a properly insulated house and hence the interior does not require painting and papering as often as an uninsulated house.

Science explains this condition simply. In an uninsulated house,

Miami Shatters Own Building Records

MIAMI, Fla. — Miami's building record during the 1925-28 boom days, when new construction totaled more than $59,000,000, was shattered during the 22-month period from July 1, 1947 to June 30, 1948.

Figures released by the city of Miami Building Division revealed that building permits for the past 12 months totaled $63,567,976, four million more than the boom-period of the mid-'20's.

The walls and ceilings are as much as 11 degrees colder than the interior air. Dust-laden moisture is present in all homes at all times. When the heating plant is in operation, the dust particles follow the air currents which move rapidly to the cold surfaces and are deposited there. Before long, the location of every lath, ceiling joint and wall stud is clearly visible with dark streaks between them.

If the house is insulated full-thick—walls completely filled and a four-inch layer of mineral wool above the top floor ceiling—wall and ceiling temperatures are within 2 to 3 degrees of the living plant is started next fall.

A Construction Research Bureau engineer said.

"Walls and other inaccessible spaces can be blown full of mineral wool and bats or blankets of this naturally fireproof substance can be applied where there is no room for a man to work and the blowing process not used there," he continued.

"Cost is relatively low and is easily financed," he added. "The Federal Housing Agency insures loans for home modernization, low interest payable over a three-year period. The average FHA loan for insulation is $276. At present prices of fuel, a complete insulation job usually pays for itself in fuel savings within three years because 35 percent less fuel is used in a structure insulated full-thick with mineral wool."

This coupled with savings in redecoration costs, causes mortgage lenders to look upon an insulated home as a better mortgage risk. Since redecoration and interior air.

With this near-equality of surface and air temperatures, the dust is not deposited on walls and ceiling so rapidly because there is less movement of air to carry dust particles along unevenly heated surfaces and there is less condensation of moisture on walls and ceiling to catch the dust.

"Home-owners who have been plagued with treated walls and ceilings each spring can easily overcome this condition by applying insulation before the heat-fuel costs must come out of a home buyer's income, chances of delinquent payments are minimized if savings on these items can be effected.

Mineral wool is variously called rock wool, slag wool or glass wool depending on the raw material from which it is made. It is more extensively used than any other insulating substance, according to the United States Bureau of Mines, which says mineral products "are preferred because of their resistance to fire, short-circuits, moisture, vermin, termites, and decay."

Rooms Enlarged By Decoration

Structural changes in a house are expensive and not always necessary. Professional decorator's tricks can push back the walls of a narrow room almost as well as an architect. The first step is to strip the room down to essential pieces of furniture to relieve any cluttered feeling. Use the floor covering wall-to-wall if possible. If not, have the rug not more than four to six inches from the baseboard. Keep walls plain and light colored. If the ceiling is very high, lower it by painting it a darker or more intense value of the wall color. Use mirrors, large ones, unframed, to give depth to the room.

BUILDING NEWS

$3,000 House

One-room, one-story, expansion little house is shown above as pictured in a recent issue of a household magazine. Basic unit is only 20 by 22 feet, and should cost from $3,000 to $5,000 to build. Other rooms can be added later.

Oak Flooring Modernizes Old Houses

The acute housing shortage, according to builders, has stimulated tremendously the remodeling and modernization of old houses. Unable to buy or build new homes, thousands of families have been forced by necessity to purchase old ones that did not meet their needs or desires. Many of these families, however, have found that a sturdily built dwelling of ancient vintage often can be transformed into a modern, comfortable home at only a fraction of the cost of a new building.

Often, of course, the interior calls for rather extensive remodeling to bring it up to date. One of the most important features to consider, builders say, is the flooring. Besides receiving heavy wear, floors are among the most conspicuous parts of a house and have a great deal to do with overall attractiveness.

If the floors are of oak, they usually can be refinished to look like new, regardless of their age. In many instances, however, the floors of an old house may be of such quality and condition that repair would be a poor investment. Under such circumstances it is advisable to install new flooring. Building experts point out that new flooring of oak or other hardwoods may be laid directly over the old. Properly maintained, it will last the life of the building.

Incidentally, the installation of new oak floors can play a prominent part in giving a house the desired new look. For example, modern styling calls for elimination of interior thresholds, so the new oak flooring should be laid flush thru doorways. This feature in itself adds a note of modernity which helps distinguish the up-to-date home.

Ordinarily it is preferable to lay the new flooring at right angles to the existing floor, which serves as a subfloor. It is unnecessary to use the thick size oak flooring customarily employed in new construction. The thinner sizes, which are more economical, provide sufficient strength when the old flooring is structurally sound. Home owners are advised against tackling the installation task, since it requires special skill. An experienced floor technician, however, can do the job quickly.

Home Building Rebounds for State in Week

AUSTIN, (AP) — Residential building contracts rebounded in Texas last week to total $15,232,920.

Non-residential and engineering awards sent the overall total to $20,884,169. Building contracts for 1948 now stand at $532,523,941.

The home building boom last week saw 1,784 residences costing less than $7,000 each put under contract; 138 homes costing more than $7,000 each; apartments providing 24 one-family units and eight duplexes.

Count Heat in When You Start To Re-Do Home

Planning to "re-do" your home this summer? If you are, here's a word of wisdom. Include the heating system in your plans. Summertime may not be the best psychological time to be thinking of heating equipment, but it really is the best time to make repairs and alterations on it. Whether you realize it or not, the decorative appearance of your home can be

Buyers Advised To Know Their Materials

Selection of materials that go into a house is one of the major points of home planning, builders say. For that reason, a person intending to build will find it advantageous to familiarize himself with the various building products at an early state of planning. The added knowledge frequently will simplify the problem of choosing the kinds of materials best suited for his particular home.

On the question of flooring, for example, it is well to know about the several types of hardwood used. Oak is by far the most extensively employed, with hard maple, beech, birch and pecan following in that order.

Builders point out that the wide preference for oak can be attributed largely to its extreme durability and unusual natural beauty. The fact that it can be kept clean and sparkling with relatively little output of effort in itself adds a note of modernity point to the homemaker. It is available in a variety of styles and grades.

Large Repairs Expected for 1948 in Gray County

An estimated $795,000 will be spent in repairing and modernizing non-farm homes in Gray county during 1948, a report released by the Tile Council of America, said.

That sum will be expended largely on painting, carpentry work, roofing repairs and plumbing, the report disclosed. "Greater availability of building materials will make possible a record amount of home improvement throughout the nation this year," declared Malcolm Schwelker, chairman of the council's residential construction committee.

About 30 of every 100 homes in Texas will be painted during 1948 and 17 will have roofs repaired or replaced, the report added. Seven will have plumbing overhauled, bathrooms tiled or showers installed and six will have carpentry work done, the report revealed.

"To meet demands for materials for new homes and home repairs, production has been stepped up in practically every type of material," said Mr. Schwelker. The output of ceramic tile for bathrooms and kitchens, is now at the highest rate in history, government reports show.

Throughout the nation between $2,600,000,000 and $3,300,000,000 will be spent this year on home repair, according to the Tile Council report. This is believed the largest amount ever expended for such work.

Now is Time to Check Home Heating System

Now is the time to check your heating system in preparation for the next heating season. Give the faithful boiler in the basement a thorough going over to avoid headaches when the leaves on the trees again begin to change color and "the heat's on" once more.

In addition to the boiler, check your heat distribution system, too. Summer is the best time to replace worn out room heating units in preparation for healthful comfort next winter. Where comfort is lacking, many times the trouble lies with antiquated heat outlets which have out-lived their usefulness.

Among the new developments for easy installation on steam or hot water systems are convector radiators which occupy much less space in rooms than older equipment and provide dependable heat in gentle convected currents. Convector heating units are enclosed in attractive metal cabinets which lend a note of distinction to modern rooms and may be painted to blend or contrast with the color scheme of adjoining walls.

Modern heating units have been designed to lend a note of charm and distinction to every style home. A good example is the new convector radiator for installation on hot water or steam heating systems.

Convector, as their name implies, radiate large areas by convection. The copper or aluminum heating element of the unit, small in comparison to old-fashioned radiators, is completely enclosed in a steel cabinet. Warmth is distributed through an outlet grille near the top of the cabinet. Convector may be installed flush against walls, extending little more than four inches, or they may be recessed to give a wonderfully smooth and finished look to rooms.

Relax, painted with a brush, convectors can be decorated to complement the motif you select for your home.

It will be smart to put some into a face-lifting job on your heating system now, even though it is iced tea and lemonade weather.

Bitter Reprieve

THE STORY: Playboy Marcus Sterling has stolen his wife's diamond necklace and handed it over as security on a $10,000 gambling debt to racketeer Harry Blaine. To cover the theft, perpetrated while his wife slept, Sterling makes it appear a professional burglary. He then goes to Edgecraft Country Club and spends the night and establish an alibi. Along with the necklace, he has also taken a sealed pocket from his wife's safe. This Marcus discovers later, in $10,000 in cash which Miriam had withdrawn from the bank to give him.

Next morning, Police Lt. Talented arrives at the Sterling household. Sgt. Gable shows him over the disarranged library, then takes him upstairs to see the body of Miriam Sterling. The face has been smashed and a heavy candlestick that still lies on the bed. Near one hand is a small, pearl-handled revolver. The doctor says she has been dead six or seven hours.

"HAVE a look at this, doc," Talent said. He was standing in front of the dressing-table. "A drink, most of it still in the glass, and a bottle of poison alongside it."

"Well, when I was putting in my key, I had my other hand on the door handle. I pushed, without using the key."

"I went through the hall to go to the back stairway. I saw light shining from the library but I didn't look in. I thought maybe Mr. Sterling was in there looking up something in a book or . . . well, I knocked at Mr. Sterling's door. When there was no answer I . . . I . . ."

folded checkbook. He opened it and discovered that it was a personal account checkbook on the Fifty-Seventh Street Branch of the Central National Bank. The stubs of used checks were all carefully filed in. Talent looked at the last stub. It was made out to Cash. Talent whistled softly. The amount was for $10,000. Could that money have been in the wall safe, and could someone . . . the murderer . . . have known it, he wondered. Unobserved by Gable and Walker, he slipped the checkbook into a coat pocket.

"MOVING toward the door of the room, Talent said to Walker, 'Much more for you to do with the body, doc?'"

"Oh, no. The blow did that." "And just before she got it she was reaching for her gun."

"Yes, and the clock has been knocked over and the drapes were blowing from the open window."

"Remember, I asked you not to be offended."

"I pushed open the door and I just took one look and I . . ."

"Oh, no!" she replied. "I'd love to, but I've never felt privileged to go to the Fourth of July celebrations. You see, my family were Tories!"
