Armed Terrorists Massacre 62 In Cameroons

Newest African Nation

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (UPI)—At least 62 persons were reported killed in mass attacks Friday against government supporters by armed terrorists in the Bamileke region of this newly independent Central African nation.

The reports said 60 other persons were injured and that the raiders had burned 200 huts.

The government said 15 of the raiders were killed and "many" were injured when French troops and police returned the area.

There also was a report that an insurgent shot and killed a police official before escaping to the Cameroonian coast town.

The attacks against Premier Adou Doucoure's supporters came as the nation prepared to vote on a referendum on new constitution. Cameroon became independent Jan. 1 after a year of French trusteeship.

The raiders were believed to be members of the illegal Union of Cameroonian Populations (UPC) Party, a Communist-tainted organization which has been waging a terrorist campaign against the government for several years. The UPC has been active in the government's efforts to bring the government to power even at the price of widespread bloodletting.

In several rebel bands through Djoum, 130 miles north of Yaounde, looting and burning houses and automobiles in nearby villages of Bafou also were reported.

The Adou Doucoure government has been recognized by all the major powers including the Soviet Union and has been admitted to the United Nations. The government has been boycotted by other independent African nations.

The UPC claims Adou Doucoure is only power because of the presence of French troops which have been ordered to stay in Cameroon until a new nation can build up its own armed forces.

WESTBADEN, West Germany (UPI)—"No hope yet."

With those words lost crewmen of the mystery World War II bomber "Lady Be Good" surrendered to the desert sands.

They were the last entry in the diary found with the bodies of the crew members 17 years after the bomber disappeared on a mission April 4, 1943.

An American oil exploration worker, James Blackhaus of Wyoming, stumbled across the bodies a week more than 400 miles from Benghazi, not far from the Italian wartime base. An American Army mortuary team, which tentatively identified the men, found the diary which was used Saturday by U. S. Air Force officials here.

The account of the heroic trek was kept by 2nd Lt. Robert F. Toner of North Attleboro, Mass., pilot of the ill-fated plane.

It tells how the men, one of whom never was seen again after the crew bailed out of the stricken plane, existed on a half-pint of water and very little food for eight or more days after the long journey began.

One of Toner's entries pointed out the agony of the long march in the sun: "Spent P.M. in the sun."

Besides Toner, the Air Force listed the names of the men found: 1st Lt. William I. Hatton, Weststone, Queens, N. Y.; pilot; 1st Lt. D. P. Hays, Lee's Summit, Mo.; navigator; 1st Sgt. Robert E. Mott, Lake Linden, Mich.; 1st Sgt. Samuel R. Adams, Eureka, Calif.

The crewman who did not join with the other eight after the bailout was identified as 2nd Lt. S. Worsham, Cleveland, Ohio. (See MEMBER, Page 3)

JAIL BREAK — Police Captain Denny Roan points to a hole in the city jail door through which two men, being held on a vagrancy charge, escaped Friday night. Charles Ray Kirtley, 22, and Milburn Kirtley, 25, brothers, admitted stealing a car from the Tom Rose used car lot Jan. 20. They are currently on parole from Louisiana on a car theft charge. The men sawed a bar from the lower part of the door between 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. Friday and made their escape through a west window. (Daily News Photo)

Caryl Ruling Stirs Debate

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A bill to abolish capital punishment that would be presented there. They included legislators who had previously favored a ban on the death penalty.

Bruce V. Reagan, a conservative Republican legislator, said he was seriously considering bringing up a bill at the legislative session starting Feb. 29 to impeach Brown for staying the execution of the rapist-kidnaper.

This was the regular budget session of the legislature that Brown turned into a concurrent special session Friday when he said he would ask it to consider abolishing capital punishment.

Brown at the same time stayed Chessman's death only 10 hours before he was to go to the gas chamber.

Reagan said that if he found support he probably would introduce the bill.

"I would think that some Democrats would agree with me," he added. Chessman's eventual fate, after the 60-day stay, was tied in with that of 20 other men and a woman confined to death row at San Quentin prison.

Attorneys for the Los Angeles sex terrorist predicted he would "never be executed now" after 1 1/2 years on death row.

But there was by no means assurance that this was true, despite a worldwide storm of protest which Brown said influenced his decision.

A powerful group of California legislators promised to fight any bill to abolish capital punishment that would be presented there.

Traditional Day Monday For Guard

Pampa National Guardsmen will observe "Muster Day" Monday to carry on a tradition older than our nation.

Captain Lawrence Hurdle, commanding officer of Co. B, 142nd Infantry, announced that the highlight of the observance will be an open house at the National Guard Armory on U.S. Hwy. 60.

"This will give everybody in the area an opportunity to take a look at the modern aspects of the National Guard," Capt. Hurdle pointed out. "Young men of military age will have an opportunity to see the advantages of service with the guard. Parents, wives and others will no doubt be interested in seeing just what the Guard means to the community."

Angered Eisenhower May Turn Politician

Might Blast Off At Foes On TV Today

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate GOP policy chief Styles Bridges said Saturday Democratic attacks on administration defense plans may make an angered President Eisenhower "the best campaigner the Republicans ever had."

The New Hampshire Republican and some other GOP leaders were holding their counter fire on the defense issue to see what the President says in his Sunday night television-radio address to the nation.

Senate GOP leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said in an interview that he will make a Senate speech Monday, defending the administration's program.

Republicans offered sporadic challenges to Sen. Stuart Symington's renewed Senate charge Friday that the administration is telling congress one thing and the public another on missile strength.

The Missouri Democrat, a 1960 presidential contender and an Air Force Secretary under President Truman, said the administration should immediately boost spending on missiles and other "vital" defense needs by $2,500,000,000 to three billion dollars a year.

Republicans were expecting a strong reply from the President in the speech he will make before leaving Monday on his South American tour. At his Wednesday news conference, Eisenhower branded as "despicable" any suggestion that he would deliberately mislead the country on defense matters.

But White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Saturday the President's remarks "will not be a defense speech."

"There will be some defense in it," Hagerty said. "But it is not a defense speech."

Bridges told United Press International he thinks it is "unfortunate that weaknesses of our country are being played up so much because we are today—the strongest nation in the world."

As senior Republican on the Senate Space and Armed Services Committees, Bridges said he opposes any "crash program" to boost defenses but favors a "long range program we can maintain."

He said the emphasis should be on "mobility." He wants to see a "mobility" program. (See EISENHOWER, Page 3)

Off To Fast Start Chamber's New Group 'Enthused'

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce's newest committee is off to a fast start, according to Gene Inel, chairman of the Convention Committee which had its initial session last week in the Coronado Inn.

Winford Vest, committee member, reported that the Regional Retail Credit convention would be held in Pampa this year, and Aubrey Jones, city tax assessor-collector, said that the Region Two Municipal League would meet here in April. Several other conventions have been scheduled, it was reported, and others are in the planning stage.

According to Inel, enthusiasm was evident at last week's meeting. He said that convention business promotion will be new to most Pampans, but he indicated he is optimistic that Pampa is past due to host major association and organization meetings.

At the committee's first meeting, Melvin T. Munn, Stu Kines and E. O. Wedgworth were principal speakers.

Munn, an insurance man, spoke on the "Importance of Convention Business to a City." Coronado Inn manager, Kines, discussed "The Hotel Manager's Role in Servicing Conventions," stressing the importance of proper planning to formulate good programs.

Wedgworth, chamber manager, explained the services the chamber performed in securing and hosting conventions. He suggested that it would be the responsibility of the chamber to explore ideas and "gimmicks" to arouse interest in convention business.

The chamber manager pointed out that "the chamber is interested in securing meetings and conventions that will benefit the entire city, rather than any particular line of business."

Chairman Inel cautioned committee members to be on constant lookout for potential convention business for Pampa and report any possibility.

An executive work committee will be appointed in the near future, Inel said, whose job it will be to formulate a plan of work and other promotions to aid in securing convention business for Pampa. The committee members will be named in a few days, Inel said.

Officers Elected At '60' Meeting

It was announced that the 1961 convention will be held in Canadian, Okla. The U.S. National Highway 60 Association convention will be in Springerville, Ariz., this year April 28 through 30. Plans are being made now for a Texas caravan to the meeting.

The spring membership roundup, it was announced during the two-day meeting, will be held during March. Each member town in Texas is assigned a quota toward an overall goal of $2,200.

During the convention a report was given on the publication of a national U. S. Hwy. 60 brochure to be sponsored by the association. National president, Bill Huso, of Show Low, Ariz., told Lawrence that the brochure would be finished and ready for distribution at the national convention in Springerville. The brochure will contain no advertising and will be distributed by travel agencies. The brochure will contain a strip map of Hwy. 60.

Sixty-five persons attended the luncheon at the Coronado Inn Friday to hear an address by Ben Ogden, past president of the Texas State Service Station Ass'n. Ogden challenged the delegates to make use of their local service station operators in helping sell their respective towns and communities on the merits of traveling the Hwy. 60 route.

Tax Break In Offing

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The treasury is drafting a plan to provide a tax break for self-employed persons to help them save funds for retirement, authoritative sources disclosed Saturday.

The plan will be presented soon to senators as an acceptable—or at least less objectionable—alternative to a House-passed bill adamantly opposed by the administration.

The Senate is being subjected to tremendous political pressure to grant special tax relief to the self-employed. The Treasury's action reflects belief that some such legislation is likely to reach the White House this year.

Livestock Show Entry List Grows

A joint meeting of the board of directors of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Agriculture Committee will meet Monday noon in the Cibola Room of the Coronado Inn, according to Hershie Wilks, president.

School Science Fair Winners

Joe Bourland, senior student at Pampa High School, won first place in the senior physical division at the third annual Pampa Science fair, held in the girl's gym Friday and Saturday.

Bourland's project was titled "The Effect of Impurities on the Photoemission Properties of Zinc Sulfide Electroluminescent Phosphors." He developed the project over a period of two years. He was a second-place winner in the fair last year and won honorable mention in the Amarillo regional fair. He will exhibit his project in the regional fair in Amarillo March 25-27.

In the senior biological division, Milton Saltzman won first with a study on "Rate of Transfer of P. 32 in Plant Tissues."

All high school winners will compete in the regional fair. The fair was open to the public from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday, and from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

Finch Verdict Due This Week

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The fate of Dr. R. Bernard Finch and his mistress, Carole Tregoff, should be known by this time next week.

They are accused of murdering the surgeon's wife, Barbara, for love and money. Both could go to the gas chamber.

If there were odds-makers on a trial, the betting would go something like this: Finch is about an even choice for execution. He has gambled all. He has said flatly he is innocent. There is little middle ground.

SAFARI FOR SOULS

WITH BILLY GRAHAM IN AFRICA
By TOM McMAHAN, Religion Editor, The States, Columbia, S. C.

(Special to the Daily News) — reach the launch, we rode a tiny open railroad car along the docks where men were peeling giant logs.

At Douala where rebel activity is current, some of us were almost stranded on the waterfront because the taxis stop running at six o'clock in preparation for the night nine o'clock curfew. The French hotel was comfortable and we saw no signs of conflict except for barbed wire barricades and soldiers patrolling with fixed bayonets.

From Douala we flew nonstop to Brazzaville in a wonderful super-constellation, stopping overnight in that capital of the Republic of the Congo, formerly French Equatorial Africa. It wasn't practical to cross the river to beautiful, modern Leopoldville where independence was just promised for the sprawling, sparsely settled Belgian Congo with its tremendous wealth of uranium and other strategic materials. Many Leopoldvillians joined hundreds of Brazzaville people at the meeting addressed by Billy Graham in the old Swedish mission, which was a refugee point during last year's rioting that cost scores of lives.

The next morning we flew nonstop to Salisbury in a DC 6-B, which Graham regards as perhaps the world's safest plane. At the airport, the evangelist was greeted by some five hundred people who crowded the terminal balcony and sang "To God Be the Glory, Great Things He Hath Done."

Two of Graham's associates are preaching this week in principal European cities of Southern Rhodesia, a tension filled country with fewer than three hundred thousand whites and over two million Africans. He will climax these campaigns with two addresses at Bulawayo and one at Salisbury, then head for North Rhodesia, Kenya, Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi and Ethiopia.

The Graham party arrived at the Victoria Falls Hotel, from which the roar of cataracts can be heard, the same afternoon at the Muckton Commission, a fact-finding body charged with laying the groundwork for an important constitutional conference for Rhodesia's Nyassaland. The Commission will be here all week. Here Graham will rest and seek to absorb some of the spirit of Livingstone for whom the nearby city is named, and whose statue overlooks the falls which he was the first to describe scientifically.

Here, also, the evangelist will review the West African tour which exceeded all expectations, as over three hundred thousand people turned out for the great rallies to race courses and stadiums; fifteen thousand of whom remained quietly after the meetings to seek the Lord.

The closing meeting of the first half of the tour was at Jos, Nigeria, a mining center on the great plateau of North Nigeria, where some of the most primitive tribes of Africa live within walking distance of the modern commercial city. Nearly ten thousand heard Graham there, including a large proportion of the European population in one of the world's greatest areas for mining tin and columbite.

Jos is also a great missionary center where one can find many stories of heroic and sacrificial service among the pagans and Moslems. One group of seven hundred people crowded into six railroad cars for the seventh mile trip from Kagora to hear Graham. Kagorans used to be feared as "killed head hunters" who tie tails onto themselves and regard collecting the heads of their enemies as the mark of manhood. The Chief of Kagora, a Christian since boyhood, now the leading Nigerian governmental figure, and owner of a new Pontiac, led the evening prayer at Graham's meeting. Many others, some of them former pagan tribesmen, walked fifteen miles to the Jos meeting, retracing their steps at night on a path infested with snakes, scorpions and baboons.

The nearly three thousand mile trip from Jos to Salisbury was a fascinating and varied. We flew a chartered British Heron to Tico, the border city of the Nigerian related Southern Cameroons. We then transferred to a motor launch for a three-hour river ride to Douala, in French Cameroons. In order to

Ex-War Criminal Rebuilds Fortunes

By WILLIAM A. BRIDGES
United Press International

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — Ten years ago Alfred Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach was in prison as a war criminal and his family's vast coal and steel kingdom lay buried in the ruins of World War II.

Today the ruins are gone, replaced by sprawling new factories, and Krupp — heir of Germany's "cannon kings" — is perhaps the richest man in Europe.

This astonishing comeback happened partly through Germany's general postwar recovery, partly through Krupp's own determination to rebuild, and partly through the postwar policies of the Allies toward the wounded Krupp giant.

In World War II, Krupp mines and mills provided much of the fuel for Hitler's war machine, but by 1945 Allied air raids had smashed most of them. An estimated 30 to 40 per cent of the main steelworks in Essen was in rubble.

When the Allies marched in, Alfred Krupp was arrested. Later an American war crimes court convicted him — in his ailing father's stead — of using slave labor and despoiling occupied territory.

All the family's property was confiscated, and Krupp — along with 10 company executives — was sentenced to 12 years in prison. It looked as if it was the end of a century-and-a-half - long industrial era.

It looked more like it in the first postwar years as the victors dismantled many of the remaining Krupp plants. But even while dismantling was going on, some people in the West were wondering if Germany and German industry might have to be rebuilt as a bulwark against Russia.

In January, 1951, American High Commissioner John G. McCloy released Alfred Krupp from prison and restored his property on the grounds — that his punishment was "generally repugnant to American concepts of justice."

The Allies were not through with him, however. Under a 1953 agreement he promised to stay out of iron and steel manufacture, with a few specified exceptions, and to sell within five years the huge Rheinhausen steel works and his coal and iron mines.

He retained a cast-steel factory and locomotive works, a machine tool factory, a tungsten carbide plant, an automobile works, shipyards in Hamburg and Kiel, and a bridge — building and engineering plant.

Krupp, known before the war as a sports — car driving playboy, threw himself with tremendous energy into rebuilding the family fortunes. A retiring man himself, he appointed a brash young general manager, Berthold Beitz, to supervise the reconstruction.

It went quickly. By 1955 Krupp had gathered 60 companies in West Germany alone, with a 1954 turnover of 230 million dollars. German workmen — the quiet heroes of West Germany's "economic miracle" — labored from dawn 'til night to rebuild shattered plants.

Today the annual capacity of Krupp — owned steel mills stands at 4 million tons and his coal mines have an estimated capacity of 4,500,000 tons yearly.

"This amazing growth has been accomplished with the old Allied order to sell still hanging over the company. It becomes less and less of a hindrance each year, however."

Victim Alive When Tossed Into Ocean

BOSTON (UPI) — Pretty Lynn Kauffman was punched and stomped unconscious and dragged through a porthole before she was thrown still alive into the sea, a medical examiner testified Saturday.

The witness in the murder trial of fine-featured Willem Van Rie, 31, was medical examiner Michael A. Luongo, veteran of hundreds of autopsies and scores of homicide trials.

He said the "average layman" might have considered the unconscious girl was dead.

He said the 95-pound victim drowned after suffering "multiple blunt force injuries" consistent with "heaving, stomping or being thrown against a fixed object."

A scrape on her left chest suggested she had been dragged through a porthole onto a promenade deck, the stolid witness testified. He said she would have been "incapable of a voluntary, purposeful act." This would bar a suicide theory suggested by the defense.

Dallasite Threatens To Slay Children

DALLAS (UPI) — Police Saturday night launched a search for a 27-year-old engineer who threatened to kill three of his children and himself.

The man was described as a former mental patient. He drove away from his wife's address with his three daughters, 4, 3 and 2 years old.

death penalty but who said they would switch their votes because Brown had linked the issue with the Chessman case.

It was pointed out that the Legislature had rejected bills to abolish capital punishment eight times in the past 27 years.

Strong opposition came from the President Pro-Tempore of the State Senate, High M. Burns (D-Fresno).

"I am convinced that the governor has let the people of California down in refusing to carry out the laws of the state."

He predicted the Senate would reject any move to abolish capital punishment.

On the other hand, Assemblyman Lester A. McMillan (D-Los Angeles), who was co-sponsor of bills to abolish the death penalty last year, said he thought a similar bill now would have "a much better chance because of the increasing feeling that it results in no good."

Brown said that in addition to Chessman he would grant reprieves to the other 21 condemned prisoners until the Legislature acts. The one woman facing death is Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Duncan, Ventura, condemned for conspiring in the murder of her daughter-in-law.

In any event Chessman would not die until 60 days after a new execution date is set. California Deputy Attorney General Arlo E. Smith said he would ask the Los Angeles Superior Court to set a new date as soon as possible, perhaps Tuesday following the Washington's Birthday holiday.

Meanwhile Chessman planned no new efforts in the courts pending the Legislature's action.

But one of his attorneys, George T. Davis, announced he would organize a statewide committee to seek a ban on capital punishment.

Teenage Bookshelf

(Reviews in Brief) In "Last Voyage," Warren Armstrong, an ex-seafaring man and twice shipwrecked, tells the stories of famous shipwrecks and disasters at sea.

Ships which went down loaded with bullion, like the Tobermory galleon; ships which were ravaged by the sailor's nightmare, fire, like the Morro Castle; ships whose dramatic ends were caused by fog or icebergs, like the "unsinkable" Titanic — all these have a place in this fascinating book.

Here, too, you will begin to understand the seaman's belief in Fate — for sometimes mysterious things happen along the sea lanes for which science has no name, because the facts are in the custody of Davy Jones, that keeper of inscrutable mysteries.

"Three Who Met," by Margaret Mace Craig introduces Casey, Beth, and Monica — three girls who share a room during a house-party weekend at the university.

Each is destined to give something of herself to the others, yet no three girls could be more unlike in temperament and background. The houseparty starts off like any other, but quickly becomes a surprisingly different one.

What happens to Monica, to Beth and to Casey makes "Three Who Met" an absorbing and suspenseful novel.

Harry Zarech's "Using Electronics" is a book of things to make, for a person with little or no previous knowledge or experience in the field of electronics.

After an explanation of electricity, magnetism, and radio waves, the author discusses the basic procedures in working with electronics — how to solder, how to wire, how to take care of tools.

There are detailed explanations of antennas and grounds, how to make detectors and receivers, how a vacuum tube works, and how to make a code practice oscillator.

"Heatbreak Hot Rod," by James Summers is a humorous story of Richard Curtis, whose only desire in life is to own a '37 V-8 sports car, and of the devious methods he uses to win his parents over to his point of view.

His father, however, gets him a 1923 model Star and Dick's problems in repairing it make enjoyable reading.

"Lenora Weber's 'The More The Merrier' will be welcomed by the readers of previous Beany Malone stories. This time, Beany, left alone with her 19-year-old brother for the summer months, decides to take in boarders to make enough money to fix up a basement room as a quiet retreat for private meetings of the staff of the high school paper.

In her usual "go-gooding" fashion, she ends up with three boarders, only one of whom is a full-paying guest. But as summer ends with a typical rousing Malone party, Beany realizes that in the Malone household there is no such thing as a "private" room anyway.

Andre Norton's earlier books have made him one of the most popular writers of science fiction. In his new book "The Time Traders," readers will find themselves transported to still more exciting "other" worlds.

Young Ross Murdoch found himself on a "hush-hush" government project at a secret base in the Arctic — a project working on the theory that if it is possible to conquer space, then perhaps it is also possible to conquer time.

No Magic In Gold

We continue to hear a great deal about the idea that if we only had a currency moored specifically to gold, inflation would be impossible. Actually, this is not true. The advantage to a gold base behind our currency lies in the fact that gold is somewhat hard to come by. Also, many people like it, want it and trust it. These facts being true, no government in the world has ever been able to increase the supply of its gold reserves as rapidly as it would like to. Hence, government's tendency to inflate is curbed and slowed by the close relationship between currency and gold, when that relationship obtains. So far so good. But the real heart of the matter is found, not in having gold related to currency, but in having both gold and currency moved beyond the power of the politicians. If political savants have the ability to tamper with what we call "money value," then any relationship between gold and currency becomes no safeguard at all. We have in mind the dodge first employed by Pericles in the so-called "Golden Age" of Greece. Printing presses hadn't been invented, and the coins in use throughout the Attic peninsula were principally silver. There was the clinch and the owl, both in common usage. Pericles, in seeking to finance his war with Sparta, wanted to get his hands on a goodly supply of coin in a hurry. He had already taxed everyone to the hilt and was puzzled as to what to do. Remember, he had no printing press. And "defense" bonds issued by the government hadn't been heard of. So, he devised a neat little trick. He called in all of the coins in Athens, and because he had the political power, the people responded and turned in their coins. Not, however, before he had assured them that he was merely going to burnish their money and make it more attractive. Also, that he would return to them the exact number of denarii or owls that they turned over to him.

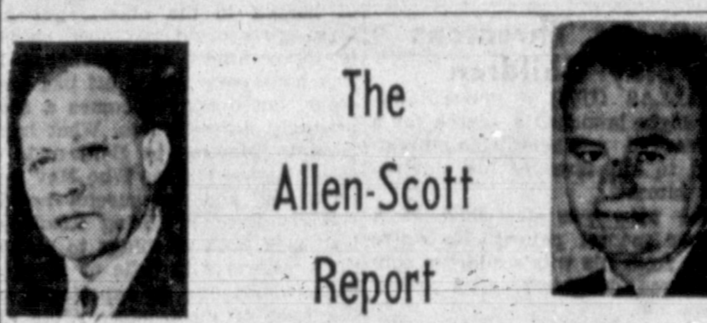

Democracy Survive?

C. Northcote Parkinson intrigued us all with his now famous study called "Parkinson's Law." This famous English historian, author and journalist recently resigned the Raffles Chair of History in the University of Malaya to fill visiting professorships in the United States at the universities of Illinois and California. It can properly be stated that in his studies of the functions of governments and particularly of bureaucracy in and out of government, Parkinson is really the father of two laws, not one. His first could be stated: "In any administrative organization, subordinate will multiply in accordance with a known formula and without relation to the work (if any) expected of them." The second law, which is actually a part of the first when applied to governments, goes like this: "Public expenditure rises to meet an income which is assumed to be limitless, a ceiling which is not there." In his prior works, the eminent British authority was wont to speak and write with a most delicate touch of humor which has helped to make him the toast of at least three continents and to provide the lubrication which has made possible the penetration of some prosaic truths through the portals of rusted-out intellectual fortresses. Now, in the Saturday Evening Post of February 6, Parkinson divests himself of humor to discuss the merits of democracy itself. We can only say that we are completely charmed and delighted that this scholar has disclaimed to praise the majority rule concept out of hand as so many of his fellows do. Instead, and with full candor, the learned man states his position thusly: "We learn from it (history) that various forms of rule have tended to succeed one another in what might seem to have been a significant sequence; democracy showing a tendency to collapse in a chaos from which dictatorship offers the only escape. There is little in history to show that democracy is much more stable than any other form of rule. What history does show is that people have always inclined to regard their own form of government as perfect, or at any rate inevitable, and steadfast subjects, of, say, a deified emperor have seldom supposed that any other form of rule was worth serious discussion. For most of them, at any period, talk of an alternative scheme would have seemed impracticable, blasphemous or merely crazy. Present advocates of democracy are apt in the same way to claim for that form of rule a universal validity which it would seem to derive neither from theory nor from fact. Representative democracy is a form of government which has a number of real advantages for some peoples at a certain stage of their development. To claim more than that, invoking some semi-religious principle of human rights, is to assume just such an attitude as characterized the more pious inhabitants of dynastic Egypt. If we are to defend democracy in serious discussion, it must not be because it is sacred - few forms of rule have been anything else - but because it produces some demonstrably good result. If it is good, we should be able to explain why." Parkinson goes on to show that there is a pattern to be discerned in prior civilizations, that monarchy becomes aristocracy, aristocracy turns into democracy, democracy becomes dictatorship, and the dictator (when successful) becomes a monarch and the series repeats. In mid-stream, Parkinson takes on Karl Marx and does an excellent job of debunking the sage of socialism by showing that Marx most certainly did not understand either industry or the economic processes. And he makes a most telling point. He suggests that the concept of the "masses" as Marx defined the proletariat is no longer valid. For instead of the skilled workers being the largest segment of the population, he offers figures to establish that the so-called middle classes are actually numerically superior. And since most middle-class persons (Marx referred to them as the petite bourgeoisie) are minor capitalists in their own right, the Marxist theories go down the drain without even a regretful gurgle. We'll recommend "Can Democracy Survive?" by C. Northcote Parkinson.

First Steps Toward A Solution Of The American Crisis I recently quoted at length from the "Economic News" published by the American Institute for Economic Research, Great Barrington, Massachusetts on the economic crisis that is facing America. They report how the gold had been leaving the country because we are exporting less than we are importing, and how we are sending our dollars all over the world without getting value in return. I have been quoted considerably from Frederick Nymeyer's proposals of averting a crisis in stopping inflation. My Solution Before I quote further from the "Economic News" method of the first steps to counteract the crisis, I want to give my solution. My solution to stop the dollar from buying less and less and government getting bigger and bigger is to have the government discontinue doing anything that would be a violation of the Last Tablet of the Decalogue and the Declaration of Independence that all rational persons know would violate these standards if done by an individual. If the government did that it would be limited and would cost very little, and people then could use their energy in producing wealth that could be used for their own enjoyment or for future protection and enjoyment. I do not think, however, there is any chance of doing this, so long as in each community the majority of people believe in government schools and libraries and parks and swimming pools, etc. It is a question of changing men's beliefs as to what is honest and right. Now, here is what the "Economic News" suggests in order to reduce or soften the crisis that America faces: "The first step should be to re-assure the Nation's foreign creditors that another devaluation of the dollar will not be undertaken, in order to prevent a 'run' on the dollar. Mere words of reassurance would not be enough, however, because governments invariably issue such reassuring statements until a devaluation is accomplished. In this respect even the supposedly most responsible governments of the world have been completely lacking in what is ordinarily considered moral responsibility. There is no reason why foreign creditors should assume that the Government of the United States would be a paragon of virtue in this respect. "Actions rather than the following simultaneous actions are recommended: "a. The Treasury should continue to pay out gold on demand to foreign creditors, but they should be informed that licenses for gold withdrawals (the means by which the outflow can be controlled) will be limited to such amounts as will not jeopardize the United States by depleting its essential war and emergency reserves. (The exact rate of outflow, perhaps $100,000,000 per month or some such amount, should be no more than can be continued without danger during the interim period discussed below.) "b. Foreign creditors should also be informed that their demand claims on gold will be honored in the order received. Most of the short-term foreign claims now are invested in Treasury bills, savings accounts, or other interest-bearing obligations. Foreign creditors who desire to withdraw the gold they are entitled to should have to convert any such short-term investments to demand claims on dollars (i.e. to the form of currency or demand deposits) and present those claims to the Treasury for payment. Thus the foreign creditors would be penalized by loss of interest on all dollar claims presented for payment. This is the price they would pay for an earlier place in the waiting line, and presumably that would influence them in deciding what proportion of their claims they would present for immediate payment. "c. Announcement also should be made that the United States would return to the gold standard with full redeemability of its currency according to the promise on the face of it at the end of an interim period, perhaps 5 to 10 years in the future. Congressional action would be required, but there is a successful precedent for such action in the return to the gold standard after the Civil War. (In 1873 Congress voted to resume specie, i.e. gold, payments in 1873.) "The first step described in the subparagraphs above, would tend to prevent an international 'run on the dollar' and would provide an orderly means of coping with such a run if it occurred in spite of the precautions taken. Thus the present vulnerability of the Nation's gold reserves would be ended for the time being. "A second step would be necessary in progressing toward a long-run solution of the problem. This step should include the following: "a. Gradual deflating is needed instead of further inflating. Monetization of Government debt and monetization of private long-term

RUSSIAN SUBS DETECTED NEAR CUBA, PANAMA SINCE BEFORE MIKOYAN VISIT; UNDER SURVEILLANCE WASHINGTON - Four or possibly more Russian submarines are operating around Cuba and the Panama Canal. They have been positively identified both by sight and sonar. These Soviet submarines were first detected in the strategic Cuba-Panama Canal waters shortly before Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan arrived in Cuba. The subs are under constant surveillance by U.S. anti-submarine planes, surface vessels and submarines. U.S. officials also have been told that Premier Fidel Castro was supplied with "weapons and personnel" by Russian submarines both before the fall of the Batista regime and since then. Authoritative source of this information is Major Pedro Diaz, former Air Chief of Staff of Castro's regime, who broke with him late last year over extremist policies. Diaz fled to the U.S., and has given officials here detailed accounts of Russian submarine and other activities in Cuba. So far none of the Red subs has been identified as nuclear-powered. However, one of them is remarkably fast, with a speed of more than 30 knots underwater. It is either a new-model submarine of radical design, or an atomic craft. These subs are apparently being supplied and refueled by Russian freighters and tankers. Where and when this is being done is still not definitely established. But such maintenance vessels are known to be in the South Atlantic. A recently-spotted submarine refueling ship is the tanker Alexander Nevsky. The Canadian and Mexican navies have been directed to depth bomb unidentified submarines that do not surface when ordered to do so. This drastic action is to be taken in the coastal waters of the two countries. The U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff have discussed a similar policy. President Eisenhower will offer U.S. aid to strengthen the anti-submarine forces of the countries he visits during his South American trip. He will do that on the recommendation of the Joint Chiefs. Unnoticed in the press reports of Mikoyan's Cuban visit was a significant policy pronouncement by Major Ernesto Guevara, leftist lieutenant of Castro and head of the country's national bank. The day after Mikoyan's arrival, Guevara told a Havana audience that the Castro regime will "take control of from 31 to 100 percent of the basic industries." These were listed by Guevara as agriculture, heavy industry, fuel and metallurgy. In agriculture, he said should end; and, over a period of years, part of accumulating savings should absorb the debt previously monetized. The commercial banks probably should sell the investment-type assets (including mortgages and consumer loans) held in excess of the increasing capital funds and savings or time deposits that justify the acquisition of such investment-type assets. "b. Accompanying the liquidation of excessive holdings of investments, the commercial banks should substantially enlarge their strictly commercial (short-term) automatically self-liquidating loans as may be necessary in order to provide purchasing media that can represent an increasing volume of things produced and enroute to markets. "c. Of course, in the absence of more inflation and to some extent forced by gradual deflation, prices generally would decline. Thus, industries in the United States gradually could restore their competitive positions at home and abroad. (To be continued)

Looking Sideways

NEW YORK - It doesn't take long, when you are selling a house, to separate the ewes from the rams and both of them from the lambs. Inside two days you can spot just what a couple coming to look will find just right and exactly wrong for her and for him. She, averagely speaking, will not care much or have any imagination about anything except kitchen and bathrooms. He will not be ignited by anything but view, wiring and pipes. And that's a pity. The lambs are the couples who come and react to everything, taking an intelligent interest in heating, wiring, plumbing, view, location, cost of fuel oil for a year, size of rooms and everything else - but together. We have, heaven help us, an odd house. It is not new enough to have twin basins with formica tops, split levels, ovens high in walls and things like that. It is not old enough to be a New England historical item. It isn't even in New England. But it does have four bedrooms and four baths (the tubs are on little iron legs, circa 1900). It does have a library with shelves, floor to ceiling, and it does have a view designed to knock your hat off. The view seems to be the nettle or the poultice. Couples either like it at once and massively or they hate it as unimportant and likely to cause trouble with heating in the winter. One lady came by, complete with husband, took one look across Hempstead Harbor and Long Island Sound and said: "Charlie, the view! There is nothing like it between here and Naples." "You plan to sit out on that terrace summer and winter and gawp at sea water?" he snarled. "What's the cost of heating this shebang?" "There, you see? No soul. He has a spirit drenched in fuel oil and no beauty lies in him. My lovely Irish bride, who defends her home like a revolutionary mother marketing off the Indians, openly bridled at this sight and said: "The cost of heating? 'Frightening!' Obviously, they fled. The next couple were somewhat surprised that we had knocked down a wall between two rooms to make a bedroom 14 feet wide and 34 feet long. "Place to sleep is all," the wife said. "Who needs Grand Central Station when it is time to go to bed? I like a cozy little bedroom, not a thing like this!" I thought my bride would hit her with the telephone, but she included sugar and cattle. BY GSTRING - Senate Democratic leaders are tying a significant condition to their participation in the scheduled East-West summit conference in Geneva. They are demanding assurances of "an active and responsible role in these negotiations." That's what Senator J. William Fulbright (D. Ark.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told Secretary Herter in a private discussion. Herter indicated the President is prepared to take one or more Democratic senators with him as "consultants" to the May parley. Fulbright expressed no enthusiasm for that. He said frankly he saw no need for it. However, if the President feels Democrats should be members of his official party, to demonstrate national unity in dealing with Russia, Fulbright held they must have assurances of taking an active part in the negotiations. The Democrats are determined, Fulbright stressed, not to go to Geneva merely as "window dressing." "This matter has been carefully considered in the Foreign Relations Committee," Fulbright told Herter, "and it was the consensus of the Committee that if any senators are to accompany the President, they should be given active and responsible roles and not be kept in a side room and briefed on what is going on. "There is a strong feeling in the Committee that it would be much better for the President not to ask any senators to go with him if part they will play in these negotiations. House Democratic Leader John McCormack, Mass., is urging State Department officials to advise the President to go to Russia before the summit meeting. That would strengthen the President's hand there, in McCormack's opinion, because he is certain to get a warm reception from the Russian people. What can be done? The innocent child is not to blame and must have all the protection society can give it short of serious injury to society itself. Wherever possible parents should be compelled to provide for their children. If the located that know or cannot locate the mother, the obligation. If all women knew that they would be compelled to provide for their children with or without the help of a husband and father, they would be more careful about rushing into motherhood. If they knew they could not collect money from government they would surely have fewer children. If fathers cannot be located and if mothers are unable to care for their offspring then society must do, the best it can for the child. This should not be in the form of money payments to the mother. The child should be taken from the mother and made available for adoption by a worthy family. Let it be perfectly clear that no mother will be paid for bearing a child out of wedlock and there will be a marked decline in the number of illegitimate children and a marked decrease in the amount of public funds now being spent to care for them. It is unfair and destructive to society to compel worthy couples to pay for the rearing of legitimate or illegitimate children of irresponsible people. Let all parents understand the fact and we will be on the road to solving the problem. Worthy couples should be permitted to adopt such children and raise them as their own without expense to the public and with every reason to believe that the child would have a better home and a better opportunity to become a worthwhile citizen than if left with its irresponsible parent or parents. Removing the monetary reward for irresponsible parenthood will improve society, contribute to the solution of the population explosion, reduce taxes and afford a better life for all children.

Hankering

Truth Very Elusive When Experts Disagree by HENRY McLEMORE There was a time, and not too long ago, when a man could establish a reputation as a calm, sane, reasonable, level-headed fellow simply by always being willing to listen to both sides of an argument. That day is gone and so is the argument that has two sides only. Arguments now have three, four, ten, twenty and even fifty sides, as witness the one now raging in Washington concerning the missile gap between the United States and Russia. This one has almost as many sides as there are members of Congress. Cabinet officers, four-star military men and candidates for high office, to begin to listen to all sides, a citizen could have to supplement his ears with three ear trumpets, a warehouseful of tape recorders, and a public address system. Like the Grand Canyon, no one seems to see The Gap the same way. There are no-Gappers, half-inch-Gappers, mile-Gappers, one-year-Gappers, two-year Gappers, ten-year-Gappers, and gone-forever-Gappers. To these can be added the dead-even-Gappers, the teeny-teeny-Gappers, the pulling-away-Gappers, and the can't-ever-catch-up-Gappers. The Gap argument, as many-sided as it is, has no more sides than the Deterrent argument. May be not as many. This side says we have plenty of Deterrent. Another side insists we are weak in Deterrent. Some say our Deterrent should stay on the ground. Others argue it must be an air-borne Deterrent. There are those who think our Deterrent didn't. She merely smiled and said: "Then, my dear, of course the thing for you to do is go find a cozy little bedroom, isn't it?" If she keeps up that kind of talk we'll never sell the place. A third couple liked everything but the lack of a garage they seemed to think this placed the house in a class with an early cave. "But we have four cars," the lady gurgled. "Whatever will we do?" "I could make a suggestion, but I won't," my bride said. I tried to give her a hard look, but she flatted it. She did contain herself, however, to say sweetly: "Well, of course, most homes have garages for only two cars at the most and I don't think a four-car family would like too modest a place. Why don't you try to buy the United Nations Secretariat, my dear?" Naturally, they left in a dudgeon, which is not the trade name of one of their four cars. Turned out two were Jaguars (His and Hers, no doubt), one was a Ford and one a Fiat. Just for the record, they detested each other for us, we hadn't asked. The best couple came then: an architect and his wife and they loved everything they saw. They didn't mind vintage tubs and they did not intend to change them, they liked the New Orleans iron, they liked the torrent of cabinets in the kitchen, they could not find fault with anything. I think maybe they'll take it. They have a house to sell but, as he said: "Mine has what the docs want. I'll move. This one is for US and I'm happy we may be dealing with you. I'm not going to change a thing in it, either. You did a good job." That kind of man is too rare in a house seller's bleak world.

It's Up To You

Increasing numbers of women, married and unmarried, are bearing children because of the monogamy it brings them from government. Married couples often refrain from having children because they cannot afford it. Nevertheless they are taxed to help raise the children of those who multiply their offspring for mercenary reasons. This practice burdens the fit to care for the unit and it builds up our numbers from the least worthy segment of our population. Continued indefinitely, it will destroy us. What can be done? The innocent child is not to blame and must have all the protection society can give it short of serious injury to society itself. Wherever possible parents should be compelled to provide for their children. If the located that know or cannot locate the mother, the obligation. If all women knew that they would be compelled to provide for their children with or without the help of a husband and father, they would be more careful about rushing into motherhood. If they knew they could not collect money from government they would surely have fewer children. If fathers cannot be located and if mothers are unable to care for their offspring then society must do, the best it can for the child. This should not be in the form of money payments to the mother. The child should be taken from the mother and made available for adoption by a worthy family. Let it be perfectly clear that no mother will be paid for bearing a child out of wedlock and there will be a marked decline in the number of illegitimate children and a marked decrease in the amount of public funds now being spent to care for them. It is unfair and destructive to society to compel worthy couples to pay for the rearing of legitimate or illegitimate children of irresponsible people. Let all parents understand the fact and we will be on the road to solving the problem. Worthy couples should be permitted to adopt such children and raise them as their own without expense to the public and with every reason to believe that the child would have a better home and a better opportunity to become a worthwhile citizen than if left with its irresponsible parent or parents. Removing the monetary reward for irresponsible parenthood will improve society, contribute to the solution of the population explosion, reduce taxes and afford a better life for all children.

Pampan Wins Tribune Medal At Kemper For Second Year

Cadet Lt. Col. Carl C. Bogard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl C. Bogard, 1121 East Francis, commander of the ROTC battle group at The Kemper School, Boonville, Mo., has been awarded the Chicago Tribune gold medal for military merit.

The ranking Kemper cadet was awarded as the outstanding cadet in Kemper's senior ROTC course. Last year, Bogard was awarded the Chicago Tribune silver medal as the outstanding cadet in the basic division of the senior ROTC course.

The medal is presented on the basis of military merit, outstanding character, high standards of leadership, and acceptable scholastic achievements.

In picture above, James W. Ewing, a Kemper Cadet of 1943-47 and a former winner of the Chicago Tribune medal, now living in Fort Worth, is making the presentation to Col. Bogard before the 400-member Kemper corps which Col. Bogard commands. At right of Bogard is Col. J. G. Kralovec, the

Auto Makers Take Close Look At Oil Change Recommendation

DETROIT (UPI) — Automobile manufacturers are altering their recommendations on the length of time between oil changes.

Chrysler Corp. is actually the first to admit that its recommendations might have been a little overly ambitious, but General Motors and Ford also are de-emphasizing their claims that oil changes are needed only every 3,000 miles.

Chrysler, which first recommended changing oil only every 4,000 miles on its Imperial in 1958 and then made the same recommendation for all its cars last year, now recommends an oil change every 2,000 miles.

A company spokesman said a study was made of about 3,000 company cars before the return to the 2,000-mile limit was decided.

"We found that a lot of sludge was forming in the crankcase of some of the cars," the spokesman said. "In others we found greater carbon deposits and we even had a few cases of overheating of the engine."

"We found that lubricating oils would hold up for 4,000 miles but the additives designed to keep the engine clean and prevent corrosion would break down after about 2,000 miles," the spokesman said.

"At the same time, we had engine design changes on our 1960 models. These changes gave us higher compression, more horsepower, better breathing and lighter weight. But they also reflected temperature changes more and we felt it was advisable to change oil more often in them to give complete protection."

Oil companies have always maintained that engine oil in most cars should be changed every 2,000 miles. They claimed the auto companies were misleading the public because their recommendations for changes every 4,000 miles were meant only for cars driven under ideal conditions.

The auto companies admitted their recommendations were maximums and meant only for ideal conditions.

Armed Forces Manuals In Abundance

By DARRELL GARWOOD
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Publication of military manuals is a multi-million dollar operation involving every subject from maneuvers to marriage, a survey showed Saturday.

Best available figures indicate that there are 300 Navy, 600 Air Force and probably 1,000 Army training manuals in circulation.

The check was made in the light of widespread dispute over a now withdrawn Air Force manual linking some of the nation's churches with Communism.

The Navy reported that its manual issues average between 15,000 and 20,000 copies each, and they cost about 75 cents per copy.

That would mean two million dollars on the current numbers.

If the figures are representative for the other services, it would raise to more than 10 million dollars the cost of all the manuals in circulation.

Precise figures were difficult to obtain in the confusion that followed publication of contents of the Air Force manual.

The disclosure was a surprise to the services, and with the Air Force in hot water, many spokesmen were reluctant to answer questions.

The Army said it didn't know how many of its manuals were circulating but an index to Army publications showed there are 1,600 training titles, allowing for duplication in titles, that would probably be at least 1,000 manuals.

An example of an Army publication is one headed "Character Guidance—discussion topics," which advises troops that:

"Described by the expression 'they lived happily ever after,' the romantic view of marriage just isn't realistic. This only happens in fairy tales—never in real life."

Last Presentation Of Season

'Voyage To The Moon' Slated Wednesday By Concert Group

The final Community Concert Association of the season will be the brilliant new Boston Opera production of Jacques Offenbach's comic opera, "Voyage to the Moon." Show date is Wednesday in the Pampa Junior High School auditorium.

The company of 50, on a three-month transcontinental tour, will present the timely, tune-filled production in a superb new English adaptation, directed by Sarah Caldwell, choreographed by Robert Joffrey and designed and costumed by Robert Fletcher.

Included in the company are orchestra, chorus and ballet corps. The story behind the "Voyage" goes back to the late 19th Century. Then Jules Verne, the pioneer science-fiction writer, who is perhaps best known to contemporary American audiences as the author of "Around the World in 80 Days," which predicted rapid global travel and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," which envisaged long submarine trips, wrote a book called "Voyage to the Moon." Me Vern's contemporary, Jacques Offenbach, composer of "Gaité Parisienne," "Tales of Hoffman" (his only grand opera) and "La Perle," chose "Lee Voyage dans la Lune" as the basis for his 87th operetta (he wrote 103). It was first performed at the Theatre de la Gaite in Paris.

The operetta is called by many, "science-fiction in period dress," and has been acclaimed a splendid production everywhere it has played.

New Refinery For Panama

NEW YORK (UPI) — Plans for construction of a 30 million dollar refinery in the republic of Panama were announced Saturday by D. K. Ludwig, president of Refineria Panama, S.A.

The refinery, first to be built in Central America, will be owned jointly by a wholly-owned subsidiary of Continental Oil Co. and interests of National Bulk Carriers, Inc.

Permission to build the refinery was granted Refineria Panama by the Panamanian government, Ludwig said.

The refinery will be located on Payard Island near Colon at the Caribbean Sea entrance to the Panama Canal. Completion is scheduled by early 1962. It will employ approximately 200 persons when completed, Ludwig said.

THIS PRODUCTION SHOT shows the Earth Prince, Caprice, making his first inspection of the rocket ship, designed by the remarkable Earth scientist, Dr. Blast-off, in the coming Community Concert presentation.

Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — The psychology of the recent decline was not the anticipation of bad business as much as a suspicion that the stock market had discounted too much too soon, says Lucien O. Hooper of W. E. Hutton & Co.

There was the feeling in some high quarters rather than among that portion of the trading community known as "the public," he points out, that stocks were too high in relation to bonds, earnings, dividends and immediate growth.

Hooper notes there was a "toning down" of estimates for auto and steel production this year, but even the lower estimates are not "too bad."

It is a well known fact that there are times when the stock market influences business expectations more than business expectations influence the stock market.

The man - of - the - week:
British Defense Minister Harold Arthur Watkinson.

The place: Parliament, London.
The quote: "The policy of the government, in cooperation with our allies, is to prevent war. We intend to do all in our power to achieve by negotiations comprehensive disarmament under proper controls. Meanwhile our defenses must be maintained."

For the 50-year-old Harold Arthur Watkinson it was his first policy pronouncement since last November's cabinet shift which moved him into the tough defense post from his previous assignment as minister of transport and civil aviation.

It revealed some change in British defensive thinking and emphasized anew Britain's close military ties with the United States. It came in connection with announcement of a boost in Britain's defense spending to more than three and a half billion dollars, or nearly a third of her entire budget.

As in the United States it had not been produced without painful pressure upon the new minister from each of the armed services intent upon their own needs and desires.

But in the end it was Watkinson who had to make the recommendation and his maiden announcement disclosed both his businesslike approach to the problem and his reluctance to put all his eggs in one basket. He once said:

"If we had unlimited funds, we could buy out the shop. But we don't. So we have to be careful shoppers making certain that we are buying goods of proven value."

The switch in British defense thinking paralleled a similar switch in the United States. It was away from fixed bases for missile launchings and toward mobile bases which could not be knocked out in the event of surprise attacks.

This development of Britain's 3,000-mile Blue Streak missile will continue, but emphasis also will be placed upon development of nuclear powered missile-carrying submarines, bolstered by long-range manned aircraft.

The call for an increase in conventional weapons emphasized that nuclear power is "only one component of the deterrent," and further indicated that Britain's defense planners do not believe the day of the foot slogger is past.

DAMAGE CLAIMS FILED
MOUNT KISCO, N.Y. (UPI) — The families of six mothers in a tragic auto crash Nov. 20 filed claims totaling $3,275,000 last week against the town of Bedford, N.Y., and the village of Mount Kisco.

Two of the six mothers died, four were injured, and two are still in the hospital with injuries received when their station wagon was hit by the car of a youth fleeing police at 90 miles an hour.

The claims contend that police chasing Navy Seaman Derrick Worcester, 20, should not have kept pursuing him at such high speed.

MISSED PATENT
Elisha Gray invented the telegraph. He also is remembered because he just missed getting a patent on the telephone by filing in the Patent Office a few hours too late.

'Friend Of The Boy, Cal Farley To Speak At Kiwanis Meeting Friday

Cal Farley, frequently described as "the greatest boys' man in America," will be guest speaker at the Pampa Kiwanis Club Friday noon.

Farley, businessman, athlete and philanthropist who founded the first Boys Ranch in America in 1889 at the site of the ghost town of Tascosa, 40 miles from Amarillo, is nationally recognized by such figures as J. Edgar Hoover who states that Farley "is devoting his life to rescuing boys from the back alleys which lead to crime, and starting them along the road to stable citizenship."

In addition to his nationally recognized work in rehabilitating wayward youth, Cal Farley is also one of the best known speakers in the country, having addressed organizations from coast to coast. Since the release of his biography, "A Shittail To Hang To," he has been much in demand by civic and service groups.

At the end of World War I, Farley was already a celebrity as a result of winning both AEF and Inter-Allied Games championships in wrestling. On his return to the United States he wrestled and played baseball professionally.

CAL FARLEY and some of his foster sons.

Then, in Amarillo, he took over a tire shop that was about to go bankrupt and he used his professional ability along with his business acumen to not only pay off all the shop's indebtedness but to build it into a three-quarter-million-dollar a year enterprise.

During these years, Farley kept trying to help youngsters who hung around the gyms, ball parks and his tire shop, first with a boy's club and then with a city-wide program of athletics. This, he soon learned, was not the answer for the bottom 10 per cent of the boys because they were the truant, drifting youngsters who needed 24-hour supervision.

So, with 120 acres of land on the site of a ghost town, given by the late Julian Byvins, a prominent West Texas cattleman, Farley started Boys Ranch in the old courthouse with a superintendent and his wife, a cook and six homeless boys from Amarillo.

As more and more mothers, lawmen and court officials kept bringing boys to Farley, he found that he must make a decision as to whether he would remain in business or devote his full time to Boys Ranch. The boys won the decision and in 1947, Farley sold his business and since that time has devoted his entire life to helping confused and wandering boys from all over America.

Farley has never taken a penny in salary for his work, and in the early years of Boys Ranch, he gave $122,000 of his own money to take care of "his boys" and provide needed improvements in the buildings. Despite the fact that Farley received no salary, the Hon. Marvin Jones, chief justice of the U.S. Court of Claims stated, "Cal Farley is the richest man I know."

Commenting on the success of Boys Ranch, Farley stated, "When I think of the more than 1,500 boys who have grown up at Boys Ranch and the 251 we have living with us now, and when I see what fine, solid citizens they make, I am more than ever convinced that if you really and truly like kids, it doesn't matter whose kids they are."

PERSONAL LOANS

Washington Window

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Playing it coy is not the role for Harry S. Truman. Coy means to shrink modestly or coquettishly.

Our Harry is more the political gun slinger type, shooting from the hip, fanning the gun, getting his man.

But Truman is being coy about his 1960 choice for the Democratic presidential nomination. It is not clear who Truman thinks he is confusing or baffling by his coquettish behavior.

Not since Oct. 29, 1957 has Truman answered up to a direct question with a direct answer about his 1960 choice. The 1957 exchange took place in Omaha, Neb. Truman said he would support Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) if the senator were a candidate in 1960.

It is 1960 and Symington is a candidate, although unannounced. Truman, however, ain't sayin'.

Reporters caught up with him in Memphis and North Miami a couple of days ago, and Truman limited himself to a claim that 1960 was a Democratic victory year, no matter whom the Democrats nominate for President.

That kind of talk will not help Symington's candidacy any when the time comes to persuade wavering delegations that this candidate or that one alone has what it takes to win.

There is not much doubt among politicians that when such a time arrives, Truman will be where the trades are being made in an effort to obtain Symington's nomination. There are straws in the wind on that. The most significant straw was announcement in Indiana that Frank McKinney would support Symington.

Frank McKinney is a Truman pal. He was Truman's hand-picked chairman of the Democratic National Committee toward the end of the Truman administration. Adlai E. Stevenson quickly relieved McKinney of that job after the 1952 convention. That was the beginning of the end of the political friendship between Truman and Stevenson.

If McKinney is for Symington now, it is reasonable, almost necessary, to believe that Truman will be for Symington in time. About a year ago, Truman said he would name his presidential choice when he felt it his duty to do so, and not before.

Truman has a hot and special reason to want the Democrats to win this year and to have a big part in picking the winner. The Republican presidential nominee almost surely will be Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Lacking Nixon is something Truman wants very much to do.

Investigators Summoned

WASHINGTON (UPI)—House investigators today summoned the head of a record distributing firm which the government has charged handed out "illegal payola" to disc jockeys.

Chairman Owen Harris (D-Ark.) said the leadoff man in a string of witnesses today would be Donald DuMont, president of DuMont Record Distributing Corp., Boston.

Donald R. Keelan, a general accounting office auditor on loan to the investigating subcommittee, testified last Tuesday that the DuMont firm made payments to disc jockeys and other radio station personnel totaling $8,380 in a three-year period.

The company is one of those which the Federal Trade Commission has cited recently on charges that they gave "illegal payola" to get their records broadcast.

Harris told newsmen he was in hopes the subcommittee could complete this phase of its hearings today and then recess. It was expected that hearings would next resume in two or three weeks.

U.S. Policy On Guantanamo Base And Cuban Investments

By RAY CROMLEY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The U.S. State Department has worked out a policy to protect the 75 million dollar American naval base at Guantanamo, on Cuba's eastern tip.

The policy is: Look the other way, pretend no problem exists and hope Cuban designs on the base will all go away if no one here talks or does anything.

Specifically, keep Navy men from making speeches, don't give enlisted men leave in Cuba outside the base and be very proper on Guantanamo itself so there won't be any "incidents."

Navy men say Guantanamo is as essential as Pearl Harbor. It would be the key to protecting major supply lines for U.S. strategic materials and the Panama Canal in another war.

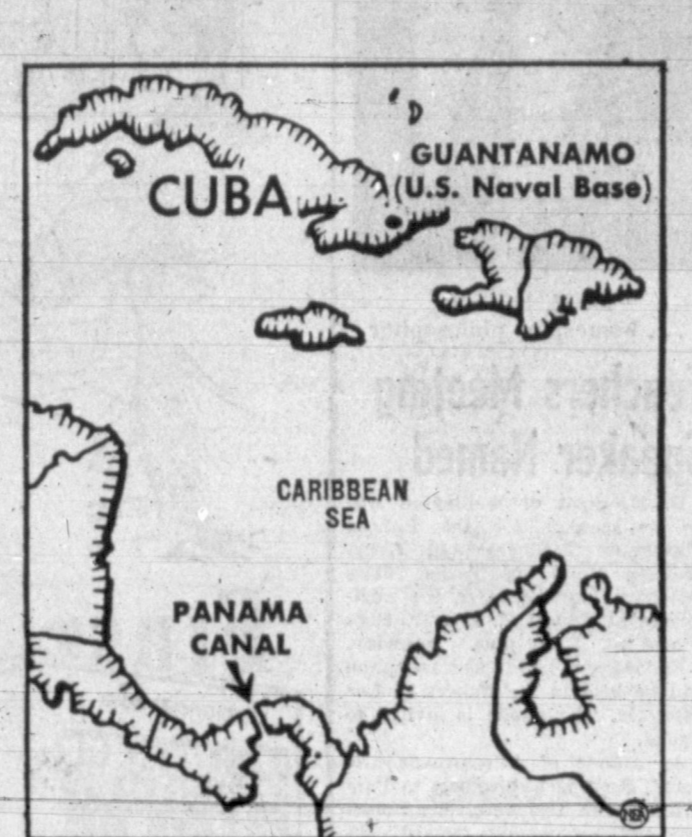

The State Department also has a policy to protect U.S. businesses and the big U.S. cattle and sugar investments in Cuba.

Make proper diplomatic protests, but otherwise don't "rock the boat." Try to wait things out — until another Cuban Government comes into power — and then deal with it.

Or if the present Cuban Government stays in and goes from bad to really worse — then count on U.S. restraint to arouse the sympathy and determination of all Latin Americans will take action.

Meanwhile, the State Department would like to have the favorable U.S. quota on Cuban sugar and the preferential tariff rates renewed, but kept on a year-to-year basis. They'd like Congress to give the President power to take away these privileges at will. That would give a modest iron fist in velvet glove effect the State Department hopes will work.

There are mixed opinions in other sections of the Administration and in Congress on whether this policy will work. Frankly, there's not a great deal of hope in the U.S. NAVAL base in Guantanamo would be the key to protecting major supply lines for U.S. strategic materials and the Panama Canal if war should come.

Court To Decide On Voting Rights

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON
United Press International

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court has scheduled a civil rights debate of its own next Tuesday, when arguments will be heard on reinstatement of 1,377 Negroes to the voting rolls of Louisiana.

The nine justices return to the bench at noon after their mid-winter recess of four weeks for opinion writing. A small avalanche of decisions and orders is expected before the arguments begin.

The high court moved quickly to hear the Louisiana case because of a state election there April 19. The Justice Department,

Openings On Highway Patrol

Young men interested in becoming patrolmen in one of the great law enforcement organizations in the nation will be given their chance during April.

Sergeant E. G. Albers of the Texas Highway Patrol said today that entrance examinations will be given April 12, 13 and 14 in cities throughout the state to interested young men.

The sergeant said exams will be given April 12 in Tyler, Beaumont, Harlingen, Midland, El Paso, Lubbock and Austin. April 13 — the exams will be given in Dallas, Lufkin, Corpus Christi, Abilene, Amarillo and Waco. And on April 14, the examinations will be given in Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, San Antonio and Wichita Falls.

Young men between 21 and 35 years of age have until April 1 to file applications for the positions. They must be a high school graduate, in good physical condition and of good moral character. Applicants must be not less than 68 inches or more than 78 inches tall, and weigh not less than two pounds or more than three pounds per inch of height.

He said requirements are rugged, but that the results will be rewarding for those who are selected to join the corps of well trained law enforcement officers.

Complete information may be obtained by writing the Texas Department of Public Safety in Austin, or by contacting the nearest regional or district DPS office.

The passengers will find out during the next few days when Fifth Avenue Coach Lines pastes this answer on one corner of the poster: "You, you, you reading bus posters every day."

The driver, impressed by the policeman's memory, drove to the police station and paid a fine incurred four years ago when Gardner stopped him for a minor traffic violation.

Year Of The Cipher Has Dark History

NEW YORK (UPI) — Beware, this is the year of the cipher. This year, 1960, ends in zero. And years like that have been bad for the stock market, says Jacques Cole of the Stock Exchange firm that bears his name.

The year 1960 had plenty of strikes against it even before it started," he says. "It begins a new cycle year ending in zero, which may sound foolish to many serious-minded people, yet, as Al Smith said 'let's look at the record.'

1920—Serious bear market
1930—Even worse
1940—Very bad
1950—Not so bad, because we were coming out of the 1948-49 down market but there did occur an incisive period during the summer months when there was a temporary collapse from 230 to 185.

Coe might have added 1900 when a bear market ended at mid year, and 1910 which had a sharp decline.

German, Russian Girls Dominate Olympics

Carol Heiss Takes Big Lead For U.S. In Figure Skating

By HAL WOOD
United Press International

SQUAW VALLEY (UPI)—Two Germans, a house-fraud and a factory worker, and a Russian dressmaker won the three ladies' Gold Medals in the Winter Olympics Saturday.

The best Uncle Sam's heart-broken beauties could do was to start putting a lock on the figure skating event.

All competition was on the distaff side this sunny, winter day in the snow-encrusted Sierra Nevada. Action on the men's side in this international sports carnival was limited only to hockey.

And the ladies made the best of their day — but not from the U. S. viewpoint.

Heidi Biehl, 19, who works in a German ski factory, won the glamor event of the day — the downhill ski race which the U. S. had hoped to sweep. But the best the Yankee ladies could do was a disappointing second place by favored Penny Pitou.

Heidi Haase, 26, who skates when she isn't busy doing book-keeping and helping her husband support their four-year-old daughter, won the 500-meter speed skating race, in which the U. S. took a surprising third place.

And Marija Guankova, 29, who makes dresses when she isn't skiing, won the 10-kilometer (6 miles) cross-country ski race down the frosty dunes of McKinley Creek.

For the U. S., it was pretty Carol Heiss, who kept it from being a rout of the United States. A lot of the 20,000 who crowded into this small valley saw her pile up a commanding lead in start of the compulsory figure skating. But her medal will not become official until Tuesday when the free-skating figures are performed.

Also to offset the U. S. gloom was that third-place finish by Jeanne Ashworth, a 22-year-old blonde from Wilmington, Mass., in the 500-meter speed skating, and the third place figure skating standing of Barbara Ann Roles.

who won't be 20 until April. To go along with the winners, and the near-winner, was the daily rhabarb—and these political and weather-plagued games are used to them.

This time it was the Swedes, complaining they didn't like the officiating of the four U. S. referees and judges in a hockey game last night. The Swedes obviously didn't like the result either — they were beaten by Canada, 5-2.

The petite Miss Biehl, although she hit speeds up to 10 miles an hour going down the one mile and 200-yard course known as KT-22, was so sure her time of 1 minute, 37.6 seconds would not win, that she stormed off the course, refusing to talk to the press. She complained later that she had slowed down too much on an S-bend, losing a full second.

But when she took off she knew she had to beat Miss Pitou, a want-to-be bride from La-Jolla, N. H. Miss Pitou, whose romance with Austrian skier Eton Zimmermann will blossom into marriage if they receive parental blessing, was off first and was clocked in 1:38.4. "I thought I did well," said Penny. "But I waited, fearing what the German girl would do." Her tears were well founded.

Claunch, Wilhelm Win, Lucky Loses

FORT WORTH (Sp) — Two Pampans won, and one lost here Saturday night in the state Golden Gloves boxing tournament.

Welterweight Bobby Wilhelm and light-heavyweight Johnny Claunch won decisions, but featherweight Lucky Dunham lost his first fight of the tourney.

Wilhelm, a 1958 state champion and the favorite in the welterweight division, defeated Ford Ham of Houston. Claunch, the defending light-heavy champion, won a decision over Tex Posey of Abilene. Dunham lost by decision to Paul Alba of Austin, who was a state finalist last year.

Wilhelm and Claunch are fighting for the Corpus Christi region. Dunham represented the Amarillo region.

Amarillo, which won four out of five bouts Saturday, is the leading team in the tournament, with an 81 record. Corpus Christi, which also won four out of five Saturday, has won seven fights and lost two during the tournament.

Results of fights involving Amarillo region fighters were as follows: Gary Watt, 145, Leveland, defeated George Sanchez, Brownsville; Martin Berzewski, 156, Amarillo, knocked out James Parsons, El Paso, first round; and Elmer Clement, 173, Canyon, defeated Jose Garcia, El Paso.

In bouts involving Corpus Christi region fighters, Billy Fina, 136, of Andrews defeated Billy Sudderth of Wichita Falls; Wayne Tedder, 135, of Borger defeated David Swope of Killen; and Paul Peoples, heavyweight of Fort Worth defeated Alfonso Iglesias of Corpus Christi.

In the Dunham-Alba fight, Alba kept his left hand in Dunham's face most of the way, to take a unanimous verdict. Alba was the aggressor most of the way, but Dunham drove him against the ropes a couple of times in the third round with a pair of good flurries.

Wilhelm won all three rounds against Ham, but had a tough fight all the way. Ham scored consistently throughout the fight with hard left-hand punches. However, Wilhelm also landed solidly with his left, especially in the first round.

Bobby landed several good jobs to the body in the second round, along with three good rights to the face. Wilhelm was righted early in the third round with a left to the head, but came back to outbox Ham in the latter part of the round.

Claunch had a fairly tough fight, but managed to take the decision by outboxing Martinez from long range. Martinez was shaken up several times by Claunch's punches.

Both Claunch and Wilhelm will fight again Monday in the semifinals, along with all the other surviving boxers in the tournament. Finals will be held Tuesday night.

Wilt Named 1959's Top Pro Athlete

NEW YORK (UPI)—Wilt (The Stilt) Chamberlain, the Philadelphia Warriors' record-breaking basketball star, Saturday edged middleweight boxer Paul Pender by one point in the January balloting for the Hickok Professional Athlete-Of-The-Year award.

Chamberlain received 23 first-place votes and 124 points, while Pender had 26 first-place votes but only 125 points. This was the closest margin of monthly victory since Jersey Joe Walcott and Lou Groza wound up in a tie in 1951.

Pender gained stature as a middleweight by upsetting Sugar Ray Robinson last month in Boston.

Bowler Harry Smith was third in the voting with 14 first-place ballots and 69 points, while little Sylvia Wene of Philadelphia, who bowled two "300" games during January and also won the women's all-star tournament at Omaha, was fourth with 11 first-place votes and 60 points.

Wilhelm Wins Friday Night

FORT WORTH — Bobby Wilhelm of Pampa, fighting for the Corpus Christi region, won his first bout in the state Golden Gloves tournament, taking a decision Friday night.

Wilhelm, the 1958 welterweight champion and the favorite this year, defeated A. Z. Rodriguez of Austin.

Rodriguez made it close in the second round, but Wilhelm dominated the last two rounds. He knocked Rodriguez into the ropes several times with his fast, slashing punches.

Two Amarillo fighters also won Friday night, giving the Amarillo region a perfect 5-0 record and the lead for the first two nights of the tourney.

Dale Gardner, 112, of Amarillo defeated Angel Alba Jr., of Austin; and Albert Cavazos, 118, of Cleveland beat Claude Stanley of Abilene in Friday's fights involving Amarillo region boxers.

Don January Leads Tucson Open Golfers

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—Don January slipped into a one-stroke lead after 54 holes of the $22,500 Tucson golf open Saturday with his second straight round of 3 under par 67 and a 202 total.

The Denver Colo. professional, who said he "didn't play real bad or real good"—kept one step ahead of E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, the new hot pro for this El Rio Country Club course. Harrison turned in the day's best round—a 65—for a 54-hole total of 203.

Dave Marr, honeymooning 36, hole leader from Cedarhurst, New York, was two strokes back at 204 after going one over par today for a 71. He could have tied Harrison for second but missed an 18-inch putt on the final hole Saturday—the same one he three-putted Friday.

Bob Gogly, Crystal River, Fla., came next at 205 after shooting a 68.

January opened the tourney with a 66 and his 67 Friday was the best in a generally poor day for the touring pros who were troubled by high winds and swirling dust.

"I only made one putt from over 2-1/2 feet," said January, who had not originally intended to play this week. He had planned to play in the Venezuela Open which he won last year.

However, January said he did not three-putt a single green in his steady performance.

January birdied the 18th hole with a short putt to grab the lead from Harrison, who already had finished.

Charles Sifford, Los Angeles, only Negro on the tour, was one of three golfers with a 66 Saturday. His round put him in a tie with Bob Harris, Winnelake, Ill., and Jay Brewer, Crystal River, Fla., at 206.

However, a foul was called on Burns and Lewis of Lefors made two free shots, icing the game.

Harvesters Are Defending 3-4A Champions

PHS Track Season Opens Saturday

By RED GRIGGS
Daily News Sports Editor

Last year the Pampa High School track team, coached by Dwaine Lyon, won the first track championship in the history of the school.

The Pampa triumph also broke the longest winning streak in Texas as schoolboy sports history. The Amarillo Sandles had won the district track title for 39 straight years before Pampa's victory in last year's district meet.

For his efforts in coaching the Pampa squad to its district crown, Lyon was named Panhandle track coach of the year.

This year, Lyon has back a good nucleus from the 1959 championship team — six lettermen and five reserved lettermen. Gone, however, are two of 59's top point producers, weightman Paul Brown and hurdler Rex Williams.

"Brown will be the hardest boy to replace," Lyon declared. "The hot and discus are our big question marks right now. I hope that Charlie Geise and Harold Stokes will come through for us in those events. Stokes has been looking good in workouts."

Lyon said that while Williams will undoubtedly be missed in the hurdles, the Harvesters still have several good hurdlers. "Charles Warren finished second in the low hurdles and fourth in the highs in the district meet last year," he pointed out, "and Tommy Locke was fourth in the lows. Jim Boyles was a reserve letter as a hurdler last year. We're also expecting some help from Stokes and from sophomore Roy Dyer."

Tommy Locke, last year's 200-yard dash district champ, will again be Pampa's main hope in the sprints. Stokes and sophomore Robbie Robinson are expected to run the sprints for Pampa, along with Locke.

Letterman Dwain Urbanczyk and reserve letterman Steve Dobbin will run for Pampa in the 40-yard dash and the relays. In the distance races, the 80 and the mile run, reserve letterman Chico Ramirez and sophomore Billy Hughes will carry the load for the Harvesters.

Lettermen Buddy Rawls and Kent Mitchell, and reserve letterman Billy Cooper are Pampa's experienced men in the field events other than the weights. Rawls was fourth in the district meet in the board jump, and Mitchell was a fourth in the pole vault.

The Pampa tracksters are opening their season this year almost a full month before the official opening of spring. The first meet for Pampa will be the Comanche Relays at Fort Stockton this Saturday, Feb. 27.

"I don't see how we can be ready for it," said Lyon. "We haven't been out of our sweat clothes yet, because of the cold weather. We haven't had any time trials at all. Most of our time has been devoted to conditioning."

Lyon expects the Palo Duro, Amarillo, Tascosa and Borger squads to be among the strongest in District 3-4A this year. "Palo Duro had a lot of sophomores last year," he said, "and should be strong in most events. Amarillo should be strong in the sprints, Borger in the distance races and Tascosa in the hurdles."

The complete Pampa track squad, with the class and experience (if any) of each boy, is as follows. There are 26 candidates for the squad.

Twyman Scores Point No. 2,000

CINCINNATI (UPI)—Jack Twyman scored 40 points Saturday to become the fourth player in National Basketball Association history to amass 2,000 points in a season as he led the Cincinnati Royals to a 110-107 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Twyman's total in the nationally televised game gave him 2,033 points for this season. His 2,000th point came on a 15-foot jump shot with 3:22 left in the first quarter. The Royals were behind 14-26 at that time.

Valdes Begins Family Study Africa At Presbyterian

A congregation of the First Presbyterian Church will begin a program of family studies each Sunday. The studies will consist of five weekly family studies and a summer tour of Africa.

Rev. Ronald E. Hubbard, pastor of the church, said the program is the most challenging and Christian service in the final weeks of the year.

Valdes, a senior pre-ministerial student at Trinity University, will present the program to groups Sunday from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Pastor To Revival

Miss Ruby Burrow, pastor of the Revival Center, 1101 S. Wells, will attend revival services in Lubbock Feb. 19 through Feb. 26.

The Rev. A. A. Allen, internationally known evangelist with a Miracle Ministry, will conduct the services, which will be held in Fairpark Coliseum.

Sunday Lesson To Be 'Mind'

Man's God-given ability to think and act rightly will be emphasized Sunday at Christian Science services.

Scriptural readings in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Mind" will include these verses from Proverbs (16:1, 3): "The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the Lord. Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established."

Correlative citations to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" include the following: "The human capacities are enlarged and perfected in proportion as humanity gains the true conception of man and God" (288:21).

The Golden Text is from Romans (12:2): "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."

Floating or ball lightning is true lightning. Balls of fire, the size of balloons, fall slowly from the clouds until they strike the earth and explode. Sometimes they roll along the ground and do not explode until they hit some object.

Revival services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Foursquare Gospel Church, 742 N. LaFors St.

The Rev. and Mrs. Vernon Robinson, evangelists will hold services each night.

The revival is expected to continue for the next ten days to two weeks, and members of the church said everyone is invited to attend the services.

Carver Selects Sunday Topics

Dr. Douglas Carver, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, will speak for both services Sunday.

At the morning worship service he will speak from the subject, "A Glorious Church," with the text taken from Ephesians 3:27.

Joe Whitten, Minister of Music, will present the choir in singing "Hear My Prayer." Miss Eloise Lane, Organist, will play "Pentecost" for the morning offertory.

At the evening worship service, Dr. Carver's sermon topic will be "A Man Afraid to Show His Colors."

A meeting of the Training Union Executive Committee will be held Sunday at 6 p.m. in the church library, and the Training Union Council supper will be held Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. A chili supper will be served and members are asked to bring a salad or dessert.

Mrs. W. B. Franklin, Girls' Auxiliary Coordinator, has announced a book study Tuesday at 4 p.m. for all G. A. girls.

The third unit of the year-round bible study course will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. Ed Raiback, teacher, will use the guide book, "From Joshua to David."

The "Royal Ambassadors" will meet at the church Sunday at 8 p.m. This is a new meeting time for the group, and all Junior and Intermediate boys are invited to attend.

The Rev. John Dyer, pastor of the Hobart Street Baptist Church, will speak on "Bought and Paid For" at the morning worship service Sunday. The Rev. Dyer's topic for the evening service will be "A Dead Man's Discovery."

Sunday School begins at 9:45 a.m. followed by the morning worship service at 11 a.m. Training Union begins at 6:30 p.m. and the evening worship is at 7:30 p.m.

NS OF THE TIMES that Spring is on its way (only 28 days to be more exact). Harvester baseball team out for pre-season warm-up wearing their bright green caps and bundled in hip-length moss-green jackets... tossing around "long bows" and practicing "bunts" on the snow-patched, muddy vester diamond... young lads about the city are flying brightly-colored kites, of course, the next day they are to switch play activities to riding their sleds... dress up windows are filled with pretty and gay Spring fashions... Moms around town are beginning to wonder if Junior's League baseball suit will fit him again this year and to order, also, about daughter's dance recital costume... and know for sure that Spring is on the threshold because Beta Phi has set the date for its Woman of the Year Tea as April 3... the tea usually follows Easter but that date is late this year, April 17, that they've set it before Easter... which means we can get our Easter wardrobe a few weeks earlier this year... Jean Sanders is to be general chairman in charge of tea arrangements... and we've overheard the rumor that the Sorority has talked of letting former Women of the Year make the selection for the new one... sounds like an excellent idea to us.

Nature has given us two ears, two eyes, and but one tongue to the end that we should hear and see more than we speak. — Socrates

HIGHLIGHT OF THE CURRENT Community Concert season is its presentation on Wednesday of that rollicking, time-tune-filled Offenbach opera VOYAGE TO THE MOON... "blast-off" time is 8 p.m. and the launching pad is Pam-Junior High School auditorium... the "fare" for the "voyage" is your Community Concert membership ticket... we've needed to circle our social calendar for this one, nor need, offer any reminders for everyone has eagerly been biting its arrival date... stellar personalities are all set to take us out of this world with an opera based on a Jules Verne story... AND MORE EXCITING NEWS ABOUT NEXT YEAR'S PLANS... at the Concert board meeting held last week, directors marked "hold" on a production for next year... they are engaging Jose Greco and his company of Spanish dancers for appearances here... and only last week we were reading in the Dallas Morning News that he is appearing right now in the Dallas State Fair Music Hall at $5.90 per... our membership for one entire season of several productions costs but a few cents more than that... which appeals to our offish spirit... understand that concert board members will be about on Wednesday evening to make it convenient to new memberships for next year... and, thus, insure early spot for the Jose Greco appearance.

Small opportunities are often the beginning of great things. — Demosthenes

YOU PROBABLY WON'T BELIEVE it but it really did happen... one afternoon this past week we were cruising down Charles Street as a Big White Cat, probably Uncle Billy's kid, started to cross the street in front of our car... we braked our horn to warn her to wait a minute... the cat popped in the gutter, looked up at the car and out of the corner of its be-whiskered mouth uttered a snoring "Meow"... with exactly the same venom and curled-lipped expression we've given motorists who have impatiently honked at us.

OST OF OUR FRIENDS and all of our family have had their ashes buried in Kleenex tissues this week... or have been sneezing out from under bed-covers... as person by person, a flu has taken toll... but we hope everyone is recovered as week for it seems to be filled with interesting activities... Twentieth Century Cotillion will be holding its first Fashion-Luncheon tomorrow in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn... and we vow we'll go even if we have to engage the exclusive services of a registered nurse to stand by... on Tuesday evening, Frank and Esther Culberson will entertain Twentieth Century Club members and their husbands at a dinner in their home... and we suspect that the girls will have a program keyed especially to interest their husbands... Wednesday night, of course, is VOYAGE TO THE MOON evening... and on Thursday members of St. Margaret's Guild will have a trial run for its Pancake Supper, which will be held on Shrove Tuesday, March 1... they will try out the efficiency of the batter mixers... the efficiency of the pancake flippers... and the expediency of the table waitresses... we understand, too, that the kiddoes of the church will be out and about this afternoon selling tickets.

Opportunity rarely knocks until you are ready. And few people have ever been really ready without receiving opportunity's call. — Channing Pollock

THOUGHTS IN PASSING... we heard that Becky Tedrow had a gay little party with a group of her friends who came over to home to help celebrate her fifth birthday... and it's welcome back to Pampa... to the R. H. St. Aubyns who have been living in Perryton for the past year or so... they are former residents... saw Essie Mae Walters the other afternoon in the most adorable Spring bonnet, which had a perky, yellow-centered, white-petaled Daisy provocatively dangling from the brim... Altrusans are so proud of Jean Chisholm's part in preparing for the Career Clinic, which is being sponsored jointly by the Chamber of Commerce and Junior Chamber... she has done a fantastic job and we've heard so many nice things about her efforts in helping secure the services of 82 consultants who will confer with local high school students on possibilities for careers in wide and varied fields... the clinic, by the way, will be held all day Wednesday in Coronado Inn... there is quite an impressive list of professional people coming here from far-away places... as well as local experts who will confer with the young people... Ted Hicks celebrated a birthday the other day with a group of friends, the Buck Millers and the Z. B. Deer, Jr.s, who came over from Amarillo especially for the occasion... we've been hearing some wonderful comments about the inspirational sessions Ted has been conducting in the Winsome Sunday School Class in First Methodist Church on these Winter Sunday mornings.

MOST MEMORABLE AFTERNOON... Jean Casey and Doris Wendell were hostesses Thursday afternoon for a most impressive organ recital presented by Doneta Swarts of Amarillo... we were so moved by her presentation of "Stations of the Cross"... the intonations the pipe organ in St. Mathews Episcopal Church brought out so vividly the selections of "Jesus is Nailed to the Cross" and "Jesus Died on the Cross"... a reverent introduction to the Lenten season which begins next Wednesday... the hostesses used a touch of spring, yellow and white, in table decorations... Phyllis Smith and Peggy Daniel looked so attractive at the refreshment table at the reception held in the parish hall following the recital... the hostesses had appointed the table with a white satin draped cloth centered with a tall, silver candelabra holding tiny yellow rose-buds... the hostesses and members of the house-party were dressed in all-white... a most memorable afternoon... if you've been in Coronado Inn this week, perhaps, you've noticed that the Pampa Art Club has changed their artwork... Ruth Nienstiel's copper enamel "Oil Wells" framed in pressed cork and Florence Jackson's "Panhandle Skyline" have replaced last month's hangings... two more are scheduled to be hung this week.

JESS WE'LL PULL-A-PAAR and leave you for now... but I'll be back next Sunday for we love being... Your Peg.

Mrs. M. McDaniel Named Medical Auxiliary President At Dinner Meet

Women's Auxiliary to the Top of Texas Medical Society held a dinner meeting on Tuesday evening in the Borger Hotel with Mrs. Mahlon Ingham of Borger presiding. Members were reminded that Mrs. M. Hatfield, state auxiliary president, will be in Pampa on Mar. 13-14. She will be entertained with a tea in the home of Mrs. Julian Kay at 2 p.m. Mar. 14. Mrs. Macfield McDaniel of Pampa was elected president following the presentation of the nominating committee report; the slate was adopted by unanimous consent. Dr. George Larra, Amarillo psychiatrist and guest speaker, discussed "A Brief Sketch on Personality Development." Dr. Larra began his practice in Amarillo in November after completing 3 1/2 years of service as clinical director of Male Service in the state hospital in Austin. His talk centered about four points. In opening remarks, Dr. Larra brought out that 1) the first year of life in human development is extremely important. "This is the year in which individuals develop a part of the sense of security and trust that must last a life time. Mother-love is of the utmost importance in the first year without interruption." "The second year," Dr. Larra continued, "is an assertive one or one's. Initiative and assertiveness are awakened and can be nurtured and guided to perform worthwhile and successful operations or thwarted and lost and possibly misconstrued." He was emphatic about this particular stage in psychological development and blames a great deal of the ill of our nation on the lack of individuality and decisiveness in our young people. He suggested, "we are liable to follow a pattern for everything even to our food tastes." The third stage of personality development emphasized by the speaker was, "Identification." "There is a need for children to identify very strongly with someone of his or her own sex in the teenage year. It should be parent, friends, teachers, perhaps." Dr. Larra suggested that it was too often the wrong person, because parents and good friends were not available. Dr. Larra expressed the hope that the three aforementioned points would provide a sense of integrity, a real respect for the rights of others and respect for individuals regardless of skin color, difference of religion. He said, "This might be utopian to hope for these qualities to be achieved in personality, but it is our wish and something for which to strive."

RUTH MILLETT

"The worst things about growing older," says a woman who looks and acts much younger than her years, "are seeing your friends age, lose their enthusiasms, get overly concerned about their health, grow critical of young people, and begin to draw into self-centered shells." It's bound to be depressing, of course. But there's one way to guard against it. And that is by never giving up the habit of making new friends. If a woman closes her circle of friendships during the middle years and expects those friends to see her through old age — without additions or replacements — she is going to find the circle less and less dependable as the years go by. Some of the friends will move away. Others will give in to "enjoying poor health," others will give up, and still others will be weighed down by family responsibilities to the point where they have no time for friendship. So the circle will grow smaller year after year, and watching it decrease will be a saddening and frightening thing. The only way a woman can prevent that from happening is by continuing to reach out to make new friends; friends who will share her interests, whose personalities and talents will brighten her life, and to whom she has something worthwhile to offer. That's why a circle of friends doesn't have to dwindle with the years and leave a woman to regret the aging of her few friends even more than growing old herself. So through the years keep widening your circle of friends to include persons with different interests and enthusiasms. Don't stick to one age group in offering the hand of friendship. Have friends who are older, and younger as well as those your own age. And never let yourself get to the place where you think you have all the friends you need. If you do, you'll some day find you have too few.

Rate Of Social Security Increase Discussed By Club

Twentieth Century Cotillion met Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Ralph McKinney, 2348 Duncan. During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Thelma Bray, president, a discussion was held regarding the project of choosing an ideal family of the year from Pampa. Mrs. N. J. Ellis, general chairman, reported on the forthcoming fashion show, which has been a sell-out for some time. Plans were completed for the Monday show, and a discussion and further plans were made for future style shows. Mrs. Billy Caffey gave a report on social security. "It seems that once again, we are required to pay more social security," Mrs. Caffey began. "It was increased last year and again this year. It is going to be increased again in 1963, 1966 and 1969." "By 1969," she continued, "the employer and employee together will pay a percent of the employee's wages to social security. Tax increases will be necessary to pay benefits at the present level and if Congress should decide to increase benefits, taxes will go up even more." "This reminds us of a snowball rolling downhill until it reaches a point of no control which is what seems to be happening to social security, if it continues at the present pace." LEFORS (Sp) — On St. Valentine's Day at four o'clock in the afternoon, Miss Grace Lee Barber and James W. Adcock, Lake Charles, La., were united in marriage in the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. L. M. Berry, pastor of the Lefors Baptist Church, officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Miss Barber is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl N. Barber, Lefors. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. V. B. Adcock, Lake Charles, La. The ceremony was performed before a huge white lace-covered heart, with the picture windows as a background, flanked by tapered candelabra, and tall white baskets of white gladiol and shaggy mums.

Mrs. Joe Watson, pianist, played the wedding marches, pre-uptial airs as the guests arrived. She also played the "Wedding Prayer," and "Caire DeLune."

BRIDE Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in Bridal Silk Taffeta and Chantilly lace, designed along princess lines with a sleeves. The white Chantilly lace molded bodice was enjoined to a bouffant waist-length skirt. Her shoulder-length veil of nylon tulle was secured to a pearl tiara. She carried a bridal bouquet of red roses and white gardenias atop a white Bible. ATTENDANTS — Miss Jerrie Barber, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was gowned in a red taffeta street-length dress featuring a molded bodice with low round neckline and stand up collar, and full gathered skirt. Her white carnations were arranged on a red heart-shaped nosegay. She also wore a bandeau of white flowers in her hair. Miss Barbara Hayes, Pampa, and Mrs. Betty Barber, sister-in-law of the bride, were bridesmaids. Miss Hayes wore a red dress and Mrs. Barber a white dress. Each wore white bouquets of flowers in their hair, and carried heart-shaped nosegay arrangements similar to that of the maid of honor.

RECEPTION — Mmes. Bill Price, Floyd Hines, Carl Barber, Jr., and R. C. McPherson were members of the houseparty for the reception, which was held immediately following the wedding in the dining room of the Barber home. The table was covered in a red cloth, overlaid with white lace, centered with the heart-shaped nosegays of the maid-of-honor and bridesmaids. The three-tiered wedding cake was first-cut by the bride and bridegroom and then served by Mrs. McPherson, as Mrs. Carl I. Hall served the punch. Sterling silver, crystal plates and cups appointed the table. The couple left for a wedding trip to Lake Charles, La., where they will be at home at 1512 California St. The bride chose to travel in an orange wool dress, white and brown accessories and the gardenias from her bridal bouquet. The bride graduated from Lefors High School in 1956, attended WTSC for one year, and has been employed by Cabot Carbon Company for one year. The bridegroom graduated from Ida High School, Ida, La., and attended La. Polytechnical Institute for four years, graduating with a degree in chemical engineering. He is now employed by Continental Oil Company, Lake Charles, La.

MATURE PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE About a month ago Connie began to make critical comments about her bedroom drapes and bedspread: They were ugly and old. Flowered cretonne had never been right because her wallpaper was floured. What had been needed was a solid green to match the leaf color in her wallpaper. She was so ashamed of the looks of her bedroom that she didn't like her friends to see it. And so on... Yesterday Connie's mother went out and bought her new, solid-green drapes and bedspread. Connie is 15 years old. She has a brain that can register her wishes and a tongue that can express them. Why her mother felt obliged to translate her complaints back into her wish for new bedroom equipment, I don't quite see. I don't see why she didn't require Connie to translate her wish herself into direct language by saying: "If you want a new bedspread and drapes, why don't you ask for them instead of complaining about the old ones?" If there is one thing we are really responsible for in this world, it is our own meaning. So we do not teach children responsibility by rushing to serve their unexpressed wishes. When Bobby reaches for the cookie jar, we do not have to serve his wish for cookies by rushing to hand him the jar. It is fine for Bobby to experience the discomfort involved in his own inability to reach the cookie jar. If he is allowed to experience it long enough, he will be driven to use his own tongue to tell us what he wants. Instead of standing beside us while we do the work of interpreting his wish for him, he will take responsibility for expressing it himself by saying: "I can't reach the jar. I want a cookie."

Streamlined Swim Suits For Resorts

By GAILE DUGAS
Newspaper Enterprise
Women's Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) — Despite the calendar, this is swimsuit time. For the lucky gals going on a winter vacation in a sunny resort, two- or three-piece swimsuits are essential. And many a gal staying home will buy one or two and store them away for next summer.

In choosing a swimsuit, remember that the purpose of the suit is to flatter you and make you look pretty on a beach. It should also allow you comfort in swimming.

So if your figure is less than perfect, stay away from the bikini in any version. This is a suit only for the very young and very sleek figures. And even then, it belongs at a pool only, not on a beach.

You'll find lots of one-piece suits to choose from. Not only is the one-piece suit a flatterer, it has the added bonus of built-in figure control via uplift bras and elasticized panties which slim down the hips.

Silk knitted suits, both printed and plain, are real beach beauties for 1960. So are three-way stretch suits, loop-knits, brocades and jacquards. Bias cuts, clever draping and power-net constructions lend a svelte figure even to the gal who really hasn't got one.

In buying a swim suit, don't try to squeeze yourself into a smaller size than you actually take. It won't make you look smaller; it will simply produce those unsightly bumps of flesh fore and aft. Be sure that the suit is really the size you need, and try it on. Don't just tell the clerk you take a size 36 and let it go at that.

Homes Tour To Benefit Exceptional Children

The program for exceptional children in Pampa was the subject of discussion at the Parent Education Club meeting on Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Gena Groom, 1945 Evergreen.

During the business meeting the project committee reports on its plans for the club's Tour of Beautiful Homes on May 7. Proceeds from the ticket sales for this tour are to go toward helping with the exceptional children's program in the Pampa Public Schools.

Before introducing the guest speaker, Mrs. T. D. Harvey gave a history of Parent Education Club's participation in this program. "The club chose this project in 1956 at the time when initial community efforts were being made for these children in Pampa," she began. "This was the first year that a special education teacher had been with the public schools. This teacher had two classes for exceptional children daily."

"The club sponsored its first Home Tour in the spring of 1957 to help purchase equipment for this program," Mrs. Harvey continued. "With proceeds from this tour the club placed two record players, two sets of earphones and two jacks in Lovett Memorial Library, as well as a television set and a special large-type typewriter in the special education classroom at Sam Houston School."

As background for the afternoon's topic, "The Exceptional Child," Mrs. Harvey pointed out that "6 per cent of the children in the United States, or a total of 3,180,000, are physically or mentally handicapped. With proper guidance, 84 per cent of these children are educable and can become self-supporting. Of the remaining 16 per cent, 13 per cent are trainable, and only 3 per cent are totally dependent."

She defined the exceptional child as "anyone under the age of 21 who has a generally recognized defect which prevents him from taking part freely in the activities that are so important to all children." The different types of exceptional children are those with vision or hearing loss, with crippling deformities, with extensive damage to the nervous system or heart, or with severe mental or emotional disabilities, and those less severely handicapped but still deterred from performing with a minimum of success and satisfaction.

"There is no minimizing the fact that being a handicapped child or the parent of one is a great misfortune," continued Mrs. Harvey. "It involves a great many problems, emotional, financial, medical and otherwise for child, parent and all those in the immediate environment. These children have the same feelings and needs as other children plus a few of their own resulting from their handicaps. They want to be loved and liked, have friends and fun. They face great emotional difficulties and are liable to become awkward, self-conscious and unhappy because they don't look like other children and can't do as other children. The heartening thing is that these children can be helped to live useful and rewarding lives," she emphasized.

Mrs. Harvey introduced Mrs. Gena R. Barber, president of local Exceptional Children's Association, as the guest speaker. Mrs. Barber first pointed out that any successful program for exceptional children depends upon parental attitude and cooperation. "Until the parent accepts the child as he is, nothing can be done to meet the needs of that child or help him make his best adjustment."

"All parents of exceptional children go through a psychological cycle," she said. "They first run from doctor to doctor seeking a way out of the trap. When they finally realize nothing can be done medically, they become bitter and resentful of everyone for a time. Next they turn to God and try to bargain with him to make their child whole. After they realize this does no good, they develop an intense guilt complex, blaming themselves in some way for their child's misfortune. Finally, they begin to settle down and think wisely about their child and his problem. Some parents go through this cycle quickly, some slowly, and some never accept their situation. The wise parents must learn to live from day to day, enjoy their child for what he is, discover what he needs to make the most of his life, forget the lip service, and go to work to see that he gets the love and care that he deserves."

"There are four main sources of help for the exceptional child. The first is the community. Parents often can't help in the beginning because of emotional involvement, but they gain strength by joining together into associations to bring their problems to light and emphasize the need for constructive activity."

"The second source of help for the child is the community. Once the problem is pointed out, people are eager to do all possible to fulfill the need."

"Third is the school. There is a state agency that helps pay salaries of special teachers and cooperates fully with local schools in providing education for exceptional children."

"The Voice of Africa" written by Mrs. Arnold Pettit was presented to Christian Women's Fellowship meeting by the Sharp Group of First Christian Church on Wednesday morning.

TEA GUESTS — Delta Kappa Gamma Sorority entertained with a tea on Saturday in honor of Mrs. Nell McMains of Texas City, DKG state president, center. DKG State President Local Conclave Guest

Beta Delta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma met in City Club Room at 2:30 Saturday with Mrs. Nell McMains of Texas City, state president, as guest speaker.

Mrs. Kenneth Walters, president, welcomed guests from five chapters in the Panhandle area. She also presented Miss Mildred Hulsey, state first vice president of Tulia, and Mrs. M. Roy Sullivan, state music chairman of Pampa.

Mrs. James Webb, accompanied by Mrs. Elmer Gunn, sang "Victoria II Core," "I Wonder as I Wander," and "Christopher Robin Is Saying His Prayers."

Mrs. McMains, a former teacher in Galveston and Texas City and at present a member of the board of education in Texas City, spoke on "Evaluating Delta Kappa Gamma."

Mrs. McMains traced the growth of the society from its founding by the late Dr. Anne Webb Blanton on May 11, 1929, to its present international status. "We now have chapters," she said, "in all fifty of the states, in the District of Columbia, and in five Canadian provinces."

Challenging the members to carry out the purposes of the society, Mrs. McMains said, "Initiate and support school legislation for the betterment of our educational program. Exhibit genuine fellowship in the community."

She urged committee chairman, "Set up a positive program to appeal to topnotch teachers. Programs should be planned for stimulating intellectual growth. We are not a social club, but a society organized for the promotion of education."

Mrs. McMains reviewed the work of the scholarship committee and announced the plans to award a scholarship to one member in each of the states and provinces for work toward a doctor's degree. "This, when completed, will be an unprecedented achievement in women's organizations."

In conclusion Mrs. McMains challenged. "Teachers who have talents, skills, and abilities must express and share their abilities. Such sharing is our leadership challenge."

The Valentine motif was used in room decorations. The tea table, covered with a white organdy cloth, featured a silver-candelabra topped with red carnation nosegays and red satin streamers. Mrs. Jack Foster presided at the silver service.

Homemade Games Topic For Club

Homemade Games, "How To Make and How To Play" was the topic Mrs. Kenneth Royse discussed as she gave the lesson on "Recreation."

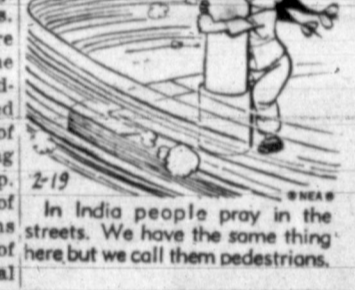

"Most homemade games," she said, "can be made from scrap or salvaged wood. You should choose a soft wood. Be sure of measurements before cutting or sawing."

She went on to say, "Strive for accuracy so that when it is finished it will work. Finish the game by varnishing or painting and be sure to use non-poisonous paints. Keep games in good condition and store them when not in use," she concluded.

HOMEMADE GAMES — Mrs. Walter Murphy, left, recreational chairman for Merten Home Demonstration Club, explains to Mrs. Bob Brandon, president, how to play the homemade game of "Pyramid." Mrs. Murphy demonstrated how to make several homemade games of the club's meeting on Tuesday afternoon.

History Of Census Reviewed At Club

Merten Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday in the home of Mrs. T. G. Groves, 300 N. Powell with Mrs. Bob Brandon, president, presiding during a brief business meeting.

A program on "Census," "Woman's Count" and "Homemade Games" was given by Mrs. Vard Smith and Mrs. Walter Murphy.

Mrs. Smith told club members that the first United States Census was taken in 1790. "The census at that time made up a book of only 36 pages, which is kept in a vault in the Bureau of Census. It details the report of the first census and bears the name of the first director of the census, Thomas Jefferson, secretary of state," she explained. "It is interesting to note that it took a year and a half to collect the answers to the first census."

"The census is kept very confidential by law and nothing you say to the census-taker can be repeated."

"Manufacturers will base their production of contributing items from talcum powder to safety pins upon the number of past World War II girl babies who will by that time have attained marriageable age and be having children of their own. Where do they learn such totals? From the census volumes," Mrs. Smith concluded.

Mrs. Murphy continued with the second half of the program in which she told of women count.

She said that in 1890 for the first time the census counted more females than males in the U.S., around 1,000 to 992. "The excess of females has lessened with each census after 1910," she reported. "Difficulties of distance, travel, and restricted participation by women in any work other than domestic duties prevented women from taking census in the early years," Mrs. Murphy continued. "But by 1890 approximately 200 women found jobs as census takers. In 1890 approximately 800 women served as census takers. The 1920 census saw the appointment, for the first time, of women supervisors in the field force. Of 372 supervisors, three were women and later two more were appointed to fill vacancies; two of these were appointed in Texas; one in New York; one in Nevada; one in Illinois. By 1950, 30 of the 325 supervisors were women. As of June 3, 1958, about 81 percent of census employees were women, where as in 1870 there were only 4.5 percent."

The third portion of the program, "Homemade Games" was given, also by Mrs. Murphy, who showed a board on which one side held the game "Trippoli" and the other side the game of "Wahoo."

She explained that the homemade board was 36" square with 56 marble-size holes drilled in the shape of a red cross; about one half inch apart.

"There are four holes drilled in the center of each arm of the cross for the home base of each player and four holes drilled on the four corners of the board at starting point of each player."

Mrs. Murphy went on to explain how the game is played.

Another game shown by Mrs. Murphy was the "Hindu Pyramid." "Which," she explained, "is made on a 4 inch by 12 inch board. Place one dowel in the center and the other two about four inches on either side. From a 3" by 10" board cut five blocks, 3"x3", 2 1/2"x2 1/2", 1 1/2"x1 1/2" and 1 1/2"x1 1/2"; bore a hole through the center of each. The object, Mrs. Murphy explained, is for one player to shift the pyramid of blocks from one peg to another by moving one block at a time and never having a larger block on a smaller one. 31 moves is perfect."

MATURE PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

Recently in this space I suggested that it's a little silly to blow up or collapse when a modern child counters some demand we make of him with the question, "Why should I?" A reader, incensed by this idea, writes: "You must be very irresponsible and young to condone such impudence in modern children. As to your pity for Victorian youngsters, let me remind you that juvenile delinquency was unknown in this excerpt from the youthful writings of Florence Nightingale, that paragon of Victorian sweethearts:

"Oh, how can I get through this day? I see nothing desirable but death. The feelings I now have I can remember since I was six years old. I must expect no sympathy or help. I cannot open my mouth without giving vexation."

However, the indirectness with which the Victorian child asked "Why should I?" is beside the point.

The point is: Why are we upset by the question? It is not possible to offer a child a perfect reason for every demand we make of him. So we don't have to pretend to have one. Nor do we have to retreat from the demand we've made on him because we can't reframe it with some magically illuminating, overwhelming answer.

The moment we stop requiring absolute reasonableness from ourselves, our imperfect answer comes quite readily. We say cheerfully, "Right now I haven't figured out all the reasons for why you should do it. But after you've done it, we can certainly talk about them together."

In short, we exert authority, and at the same time, permit it to be questioned.

It's tough sometimes. But exerting fallible authority is what Americans stand for. As Americans, we subscribe to the deal of the free man; and though it's tough to raise children to become law-abiding yet questioning people, it's too late now to recover the kind of society where one human being's word was unquestioned law for others.

South American Tour Topic For TC Allegro

Mrs. George Cree Jr. gave the program on Tuesday at the Twentieth Century Allegro Club meeting held in the home of Mrs. Carl Hills, 234 Mary Ellen. Mrs. Cree showed movies and spoke of a trip she and her husband made several years ago to South America.

She began by giving a brief itinerary of the trip saying they left Pampa for New Orleans then flew down the eastern coast of South America across the Andies and then up the western coast. "All in all, we traveled 10,000 miles by air and went through customs 13 times with 13 pieces of luggage," she said.

"One very interesting place visited was Baranquilla, Columbia. It is a seaport town with a population of 340,000 people. The formal gardens shown were very beautiful and the cemetery was most unusual in that the dead were buried above ground because of the nearness of the Caribbean Sea," Mrs. Cree explained.

"The next stop was Maracaibo, Venezuela, also a seaport town. The residential area where the higher class lived was quite a contrast to the part of town where the natives and Indians lived. In this town, there is a great deal of oil with a large amount of offshore drilling."

Mrs. Cree continued by saying that one of the most picturesque places visited was Willemstad, the capital of Curacao. "It is owned by the Netherlands and the architecture is much like that of Holland."

The next stop was Port of Spain, Trinidad. Here they visited a sugarcane plantation and also saw a huge like of split, which was being stored in barrels and would later be exported.

Brazil's capital, Rio de Janeiro was also visited along with the countries of Uruguay and Chile. Crossing the Andes, they flew to Peru. There they saw the famous Inca Indian ruins. During their stay in Peru, they were privileged to see an Indian carnival with the Indians in their colorful native costumes. One of the most interesting views shown in the movie, was a farm located on the side of the mountain. "The farming is done on steep terraces held up by stone retaining walls. Here in Peru, the Andes Mountains are their steepest, however, the natives manage to plant and grow corn and barley on this rugged terrain," Mrs. Cree said. One of the last stops before returning was at Cerro de Passo where they visited a copper mine.

In addition to the movies, Mrs. Cree also showed some interesting souvenirs of her trip.

Mrs. Roy Griffith Has Circle Meet

Mrs. Emily Lenora Minix Passes Century Mark; Reads Bible Daily

Mrs. Emily Lenora Minix
By MRS. GUY BLACKWELL
Groom Correspondent

Mrs. Emily Lenora Minix of McLean was 100 years old on Feb. 15.
She was born Feb. 15, 1860 in Henry County, Mo., near a small town called Brownings Ferry. She has been a member of the Baptist Church for 89 years; having been converted to that faith at the age of 1. She is an active church worker, who attends services each Sunday and reads her Bible daily. In fact, she reads the Bible through more than once a year which she has done during her entire life. Her favorite passage is the 23rd Psalm.
Mrs. Minix is one of the 17 district winners, who will compete for statewide Baptist Mother of the Year. Her nomination for this honor is based on awards which are made each year to honor Texas Baptist mothers who have made outstanding contributions to christianity.

The centurion was married at the age of 16 to D. A. Sinclair, who died five years later. During her marriage to Sinclair, they moved to Coleman County.

In 1883, she united in marriage to Jimmy Carpenter and to this union four boys and two girls were born. Mr. Carpenter died when she was 39 years old.

Four years later she was married to an old friend, Charles Minix, a stockman, at Carlsbad, N.M. They moved to the McLean area in 1902 and bought a section of land east of the Webb Ranch in Gray County in October, 1903. MINIX died of pneumonia in 1911.

Mrs. Minix sold the farm and has been living in McLean since the death of her husband.

She has flown to Alaska twice to see her son who is a missionary there.

Many transitions have been necessary for Mrs. Minix since her birth in Missouri in 1860. She has lived through three major wars and seen the development of all modern conveniences and inconveniences the present generations take for granted.

She has four living children, Mr. Carl Carpenter of Sundown; Harold Carpenter of Opelousas, La.; Rev. B. I. Carpenter of Albuquerque, N.M.; Mrs. George Colebank of McLean. She has 24 grandchildren; 71 great-grandchildren and 24 great-great grandchildren.

HOW MANY, PLEASE??? — Miss Judy Fugate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Fugate, center, and Miss Peggy Ragsdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Mind Insecurity Not Money Feminine Reason For Avoiding New Fashions

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — A woman avoids a new style because of insecurity of mind, not insecurity of her bank balance.
This observation comes not from a psychiatrist, but from one of America's most successful designer-manufacturers, Adele Simpson.

"Insecurity is what always drives a woman back to the shirt-waist dress," said Mrs. Simpson. "We get in fashion ruts. We become creatures of habit in our shopping. We decide that we are a certain type and stick with it. We react to the familiar and forget the fun of adventure."

The subject of why women hesitate to try a new silhouette came up because, to many fashion observers, some of the new spring and summer clothes will not become all women.

Those wide cape or funnel sleeves, for instance, which dominated New York collections. I suggested to the designer that these would make a short, plump woman top-heavy as a mushroom. "Not at all," she said. "The solution is one of balance and proportion. The wide look at the top must go with a slim look through the waistline and hips."

"If a woman is afraid of the roomy sleeve at first, I suggest she try several dresses on before she decides what is right for her. The more she experiences the freedom of movement which this silhouette gives, the more she will like it."

"This is an age when clothes have to give us room," she said. "Our life increasingly is one of travel, getting in and out of cars, off planes and trains. I am determined to do anything which will confine us."
Mrs. Simpson, third generation of her family in the garment industry, said that women are accepting the room-at-the-top look. Her best-selling costume for only for women with good legs, because it draws attention to that part of the anatomy.

And the tunic silhouette looks better on the tall woman. Mrs. Simpson, who has to stretch to manage five feet, said that her one experience in a tunic was enough to keep her away from it for life.
"I had one in jersey," she said, "and wore it up to college to visit my daughter, Joan."
"She took one look at me and said, 'Mother! You're losing your hip area.'"

FIT FOR hungry Olympic champions (and others, too) are these tart and tender Washington's Birthday cherry pancakes.

Washington's Day Pancakes Are Winter Olympic Treat

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Food and Markets Editor

The Eighth Olympic Winter Games at Squaw Valley, Calif., from the 18th to 28th of February, will take in Washington's Birthday. Many of the 800 athletes from 33 competing countries can be introduced to American pancakes and help celebrate the birthday of our first president at the same time with these light, luscious, delicious cherry pancakes.

Chief Chef Peter Rasmussen and the Olympic committee planning the menus for the competing athletes include large quantities of fresh, steamed, canned or dried fruits in the meals. Therefore, this is the kind of sweet dish the skiers and skaters and hockey players will enjoy.

These golden pancakes can be made with your favorite pancake mix. They are folded in half and served with a slightly tart hot cherry sauce.

While the coffee perks and the skillet heats, you can mix the pancakes. Bake them quickly and serve from a chafing dish or electric skillet so they'll stay piping hot!

CHERRY JUBILEE PANCAKES
(Makes six servings)
Sauce: One 1-pound, 4-ounce can frozen cherries, 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 cup cold water.
Pancakes: Three eggs, beaten; 1/2 cup buttermilk; 1/2 cup pancake mix, 1/2 cup finely chopped nutmeats.

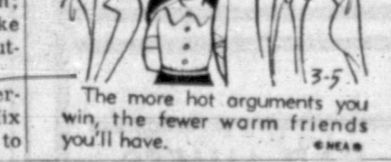

For sauce, place defrosted cherries with juice in saucepan. Mix dry ingredients together; add to water. Add cornstarch mixture to cherries, stirring until blended. Cook over low heat until thickened, stirring very frequently.

For pancakes, combine beaten eggs and buttermilk. Add pancake mix and nutmeats; stirring until blended. Place about a teaspoon of batter in a small (6-inch) frying pan and heat until butter bubbles. Pour in enough batter to coat bottom of pan with a thin layer. Bake until delicately browned on under side; turn and bake on other side. Fold in half. Repeat baking process for each pancake. To serve, place folded pancakes in chafing dish or electric skillet. Spoon hot cherry sauce over pancakes. Serve hot.

TOMORROW'S DINNER: Broiled chicken or salmon steak, whipped potatoes, lima beans, enriched bread, butter or margarine, water-cress and sweet onion salad, cherry jubilee pancakes, coffee, tea, milk.

Warmer face powder tints help make up for loss of color if your hair is beginning to silver.

Natural, Easy-Fitting Silhouette With Unchanged Hemline Forecast
By PAT HERMAN
United Press International
PARIS (UPI) — Jacques Griffe, who designs his high-priced gowns on 22-inch dolls, today showed a natural, easy-fitting silhouette for the grown-up doll.
Griffe launched the first full day of Paris spring and summer fashion shows by leaving skirt lengths at the top of the mid-calf and showing both princess and long torso models.
Lucy Manguin led off the week-long presentation Sunday night by presenting a princess line with a skirt length unchanged from last season. A wide-open neckline appeared again and again throughout the collection.
Griffe's suits had either pleated skirts or straight ones—many of these wrapped around. Some of the jackets were hip-length with easy-fitting belts, other were boxy-type jackets.
Nearly all suits had either contrasting blouses and were worn with airy straw clothes.

Among the Dressmakers showing today—Griffe, Jean Patou, Gres and Pierre Cardin — there is a healthy admiration for the American figure in selling the fancy originals.
Cardin considers red-haired, one of his most valuable properties. Patou was the first to "import" American models to France.
The house of Nina Ricci has announced that its American "discovery" elfin Audrey Sedor, of New York City, was the inspiration of the collection it will present Tuesday.
Manguin's clothes were comfortable looking and easy to move in. Her mannequins did not mince down the runway because they did not have to.

To Illustrate Study Club Sweetheart

LEFORS (Sp) - Intermediate Girls' Auxiliary met in Baptist Church recently for a program presented by Miss Doris Halley chairman, who used a decorated scene of gold nuggets and maps to illustrate the study. The nuggets inscribed with the names of missionaries were given to Misses Amy Earhart, Oveda Jernigan, Doris Halley, Mrs. L. M. Berry and Mrs. David Robinson, who, in turn, told something of each missionary. Program concluded with sentence prayers. Community missions were discussed for the month of February and regarding the Week of Prayer to be held in March. Refreshments were served during the social hour.

SHOES FOR THE FAMILY

The teen years are the best years in which to form beauty habits. The gal who nails down her beauty routine now is the one who will wow the boys now and ten years from now. This teenager (left) keeps her bath equipment together in a shower caddy which hangs from the shower curtain hooks. She stores away her back brush, sponge, washcloth and other oddments in its pockets. While she relaxes and her hair "sets" after the weekly shampoo, she catches up on the socks she's knitting for her current "steady" (center). And for keeping her skin creamy and smooth, she makes use (right) of dad's shaving brush. The soft brush stimulates the skin as it cleanses.

Teenager Who Nails Down Beauty Routine Now Will Always Be A Wow

It's true that personality is an important factor in popularity. But if you analyze the field to see when the fellows in your class are aping over, you'll probably see that they're the gals who have the prettiest hair, the clearest skin and the neatest clothes. They have a "date-producing" look about them.

What you need to achieve this lovely aura is a beauty routine. And routine is the important word. Good grooming must become a daily habit.

The teen years are a time of physical, emotional and mental change, and the habits you establish when you're young are the ones most likely to stay with you and shape your future life.

If you like to experiment with all the cosmetics you can get your hands on, be sure you remove them properly. "Making down" is not as much fun as "making up," but it's certainly important if you want your complexion to be beautiful.

Light make-up is best for teenagers. With skin so fresh and young, there's no need for camouflage. Highlighting is all it needs to look lovely.

But even light make-up must be thoroughly taken off at night or unattractive blemishes will eventually blossom. Cleanliness is the best weapon against skin blemishes. Wash your faces at least twice a day with warm water and lots of soapuds. Then rinse it thoroughly and splash with cold water to help close the pores. This kind of skin care is especially beneficial if your skin is oily.

Don't neglect your daily bath. It will help you to feel good as well as look good. And if you're active in sports, pay special attention to personal daintiness.

Your hair is important in your beauty schedule. Brush it vigorously each day and shampoo it frequently. Incidentally, shampoo time is a good one for trying out new hair styles. Rub up the ends until you have a dense lather, then try different hairdos until you find the one that looks best.

Your clothing does not have to be expensive to be attractive. But no matter how pretty the style, nothing will look appealing unless it is clean and neat.

Never relax in daintiness and a rigid grooming schedule and you'll find that you're "date bait" yourself.

al children." Mrs. Barber emphasized that there are no educationally underprivileged children in Pampa. All of them average, gifted, physically and mentally handicapped, are being provided through our public school system, with educational opportunities that best meet their needs.

"And finally, the church should have a meaningful program for helping these parents and their children. These children are the lost sheep. No matter how small his little cup may be, each child in our Christian nation as a right to fill it up," she said in closing.

Mrs. Julian Key concluded the program with the poem, "Half the Load" by Mrs. Bob Fish, a local parent of an exceptional child.

Refreshments were served to 17 members and the guest speaker during the social hour.

Try Onion PIE!

HERE'S SOMETHING NEW to most housewives—Swiss Onion Pie! And is it ever good! You can just imagine the conversation it will create around your table.

4 strips bacon, diced
5 cups thinly sliced onions
1 cup grated Swiss cheese
3 teaspoons sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon salt

Dash cayenne
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
3 eggs
1 cup milk
1 9-inch unbaked pie shell

Fry bacon until crisp, saute onions in bacon fat until soft and light yellow in color. Add grated cheese. Combine sugar and flour with seasonings and add to lightly beaten eggs. Add milk to egg mixture. Put sauteed onions and bacon in pie shell; pour milk and egg mixture over onions. Bake in pre-heated oven 425 degrees about 35 minutes or until custard is set and golden brown. Note: 1/2 cup diced, cooked ham may be substituted for bacon. Most people enjoy Swiss Onion Pie served warm.

Swiss Onion Pie, cut in small wedges, is an ideal snack before dinner.

GOVERNOR PRICE DANIEL presents proclamation proclaiming FFA Week February 20-27 to James Prewitt, state FFA president, Kirbyville, and Elaine Pennington, state FFA sweetheart from Athens.

FFA Week In Texas Proclaimed

AUSTIN (SpI) — Governor Price Daniel has proclaimed the week of February 20-27 as FFA Week in Texas.

In presenting the proclamation to James Prewitt, state FFA president from Kirbyville and Elaine Pennington, state FFA sweetheart from Athens, the governor praised the Future Farmers who are studying the science of agriculture and who continue to improve the agricultural economy of the state.

The governor pointed out that the FFA is composed of boys studying vocational agriculture in the public schools in preparation for careers in farming, ranching and related fields.

"During the past 21 years the performed valuable services to our Texas Association of FFA has performed valuable services to our state by developing leadership, encouraging cooperation, promoting good citizenship, teaching sound methods of farming, and inspiring patriotism among its members," the governor said.

Prewitt received the proclamation on behalf of the 37,000 active FFA members in 900 chapters and more than a quarter of a million former students.

America Supreme Now, But Russian Power Is Growing

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the last of five dispatches on the state of the nation's defenses. Charles Corddry, United Press International military of fairs writer—regularly assigned to the Pentagon, and John A. Goldsmith, UPI staff correspondent who specializes in military affairs in the Senate, evaluate the great defense debate in the following dispatch.

By CHARLES CORDDRY and JOHN A. GOLDSMITH United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America is militarily supreme today but is heading into an era of great danger as the rapid rise of Soviet power continues.

"That is a capsule conclusion emerging from the torrent of claims and counter-claims in the election-year defense debate now rampant in Congress.

Most of the debate has been characterized by exaggerations, confusion instead of clarification, and both political and military maneuvering for advantage. Sweeping assertions have been used to make complex matters of judgment seem like black and white issues.

The debate nevertheless is driving home the central fact that a period of peril could lie just ahead in the arms race. Some reshuffling and possibly expansion of the Eisenhower administration's new defense budget seems likely in order to stiffen measures for offsetting Russia's missile superiority in the next three years.

Up to now, the millions of words in the great debate seem to have boiled down to these key points:

—U.S. military power, right now, is second to none. The Strategic Air Command with its nuclear-armed jet bombers and missiles, comprising the main deterrent to aggression, is so potent that Russia would not dare to provoke its retaliatory blows.

—Russian power grows apace however, and during the next three years the Soviets will have numerical superiority in the most awesome weapon yet conceived, the intercontinental ballistic missile. They might come to believe they could knock out America's retaliatory power in a single, sure.

The gap could be narrowed, or closed, by more production of current missiles, the Atlas and Titan. The administration prefers to await the superior Minuteman. It remains to be seen whether Democrats will propose more Atlas and Titan squadrons.

There is agreement that the Polaris submarine program could be stepped up. The Navy would like to double production, making it six subs a year with 16 Polaris missiles each. It has some Democratic backing. The administration wants to await successful firings of missiles from a submerged submarine to verify the sensational results it has had in land-based firings. Then there may be a speed up.

In a related area, the Air Force would like re-instatement of its B-70 bomber program. The administration has cut the 2,000-mile a. hour plane to a prototype project. The Air Force, with some Democratic backing, sees the plane as a deterrent weapon which, like the Polaris sub, could roam at will, always ready to hurl ballistic missiles in retaliation for aggression. The B-70 cutback is widely regarded as being chiefly an economy move.

History suggests there will be some shake-up and increase in Eisenhower's budget when the congressional appropriations committees are finished with their hearings and when the big debate is over.

Last year, Congress voted the President a net gain of $2,258,000 over what he asked for defense. To arrive at that net, however, it eliminated $929,561,000 in administration money requests and added $1,011,819,000 in its own proposals.

This year, the difference between what the military departments wanted in new money and what the President asked Congress to provide amounts to $3,338,000,000, a cut of 7.6 per cent in service requests. The total military appropriation proposal was $43,915,000,000 and the administration cut it to $40,577,000,000 before sending the request to Congress.

There is general agreement an air alert may be needed, but wrangling over when it should be started. The administration, supported by the Air Force leadership, wants money to practice for it and lay in extra aircraft engines and parts. SAC Commander Gen. Thomas S. Power, backed by Democratic critics of the administration, thinks there should be a continuous air alert now.

There is agreement, too, that there will be a missile gap. Republicans say it will be "moderate" and there will be no gap in overall deterrent power. Democrats fear it could mean national disaster at worst, and successful Soviet diplomatic blackmail at best.

The Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, Feb. 21, the 52nd day of the year, with 314 more days in 1960.

The moon is approaching its new quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Venus.

The evening star is Mercury.

On this day in history:

In 1871, the District of Columbia was given territorial government.

In 1878, the New Haven Connecticut Telephone Co. issued a telephone directory, the first of its kind in the world.

In 1909, the Great White Fleet, 16 U.S. Navy battleships, steamed into Hampton Roads, ending the first worldwide journey ever undertaken by vessels of the U.S. Navy.

In 1925, the first issue of the New Yorker Magazine hit the newsstands.

A thought for today: Thomas Paine said: "Character is much easier kept than recovered."

NAMED FOR BROTHER

New York state was named by King Charles II, of England, for his brother, the Duke of York, when he ordered New Netherlands taken from the Dutch in 1664.

Polly Bergen Grew Up In 40 States

By DOC QUIG United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Polly Nellie-Pauline Burgin—a fine and unfluffy 123 pounds of femininity who changed her name to Polly Bergen and became everybody's all American hoyden-cum-siren on television—grew up in "at least 40 states" of the Union.

"All that travel left me with a completely nondescript accent, and no one can ever tell where I'm from by the way I talk," she said.

"Well, where is she from?" she said. "I must be Tennessee," she said. "because I was born in Knoxville and, although I moved away right away, I went back to Tennessee and lived there on and off several times. And people who listen very closely will see that I do have little touches of Tennessee dialect.

"For instance, I say 'inny' instead of 'any' and sometimes say 'warsh' instead of 'wash' and I tend to put the accent on the first syllable of words like 'police' and 'umbrella' and 'in-surance.'

"And also, I've now got a dress shop in Knoxville, which my Mom and Pop are running. And that's funny—my father connected with a dress shop—because he's 6-foot-5, 240 pound specimen. He was a construction engineer, and that's why we were constantly moving when I was a child. I went to at least 45 grammar and high schools."

Where did that name Polly Nellie-Pauline come from?

"My mother had three close friends," Polly said, "and she promised all of them she would name her baby for them if it was a girl. And when the time came, there I was and there she was, so I got all three. Mama probably didn't realize that Polly comes from Paulina. Or does it?"

The interview was conducted in the presence of Polly's red-haired daughter Pamela-Kerry — called "P.K." by the family. She is two years old and divided her time between dabbling perfume on the reporter's left ear and diving flat on her stomach onto the living room divan from a standing start on the divan's arm.

Polly's singing and acting talents have been displayed on an average of one special per month this season. Her latest will be as hostess of the Bell Telephone Hour on NBC-TV this coming Friday, Feb. 26, when it will explore the theme "Music Maker" from Dixieland to Carnegie Hall.

She's a lively regular on the CBS-TV weekly panel show "To Tell The Truth," where her fandom is so loyal that her recent remark that her refrigerator was broken brought phone calls from all over the country to a national manufacturer — she named the brand—demanding that it be fixed pronto.

Precocious Evelyn Rudie Acts Biggely

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "My career comes first," says Miss Evelyn Rudie, age 9.

Miss Rudie, who may recall, is the young lady who was so distressed about her sagging acting career last November that she hopped a cross-country jet in a vain attempt to consult an old friend, Marie Eisenhower without leaving her sleeping parents so much as a note.

The result was a small search and large headlines—and to this day, the blonde moppet maintains the jaunt was entirely her idea, and not her parents' or press agent's.

Miss Rudie, who achieved fame at the age of 7 for her performance as TV's precocious "Eloise," and wrote the stories for the operettas "Maytime" and "The Chocolate Soldier."

Miss Rudie's presence in Palm Springs, Calif., several weeks ago—at the same time President Eisenhower was golfing there—had Hollywood watching to see if she would pull another stunt. But Miss Rudie, who was in Palm Springs to play the lead in "The Bag Seed," said:

"It might have been nice, but I was too busy. I didn't have one free moment. I didn't know he'd be there until he got there."

Miss Rudie said her parents never punished her for her trip East.

ACCIDENTAL DISCOVERY

The buried city of Pompeii was discovered accidentally by a peasant digging in a vineyard in 1748. He struck a buried wall and his discoveries came to the attention of Italian authorities. The government began great excavations in the region and gradually found the remains of the dead city.

"THE TINGLER," a deadly organism at the base of the spine in every human being, is isolated by Vincent Price, playing a doctor in this Columbia release. Triggered into fatal growth by fear, the tingler can only be quieted by its victim's screams. It opens Thursday at the LaVista for a 3-day engagement.

'Eastern' Western Set For TV

By RON BURTON
United Press International
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The latest gunslinger tale in the works for the nation's TV screens features a virtually triggerless gun, lots of women, some humor and a hero without a first name.

"This will be a Western and an Eastern," said Guy Madison, who will star as "Mr. Jericho." The actor also owns a chunk of the production which will be turned out by the Filmaster organization.

"The gun's all but triggerless," Madison drawled. "It's called a 'thumb buster.' Technically, it's a fanning spooner. The trigger's not visible and actually doesn't fire the gun. Ordinarily it's fired with two hands—one to hold and one to fan it—but when you have only one hand available you have to fan it with your thumb. That's how it got its name."

Mr. Jericho will be a well scrubbed, well groomed young aristocratic type of the 1880s, Madison said. He'll draw his assignments directly from the U.S. attorney general or the President himself. The assignments will involve politically delicate matters which require smooth, non-official handling.

Mr. Jericho, who will tote his .38 thumb buster in a shoulder holster, works because he likes to get paid and because he likes adventure, Madison explained.

Elvis Presley Reconverts

Singing Idol To Return Home Still Unattached

By FRED SPARKS
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
BAD NAUHEIM, Germany (NEA) — History was written earlier this month near the borders of Communist Czechoslovakia. For the first time units of the new German army maneuvered — in NATO's Operation Winter Shield — with GIs whose daddies wrote Hitler's obituary.

Western journalistic specialists, military experts who can tell without checking what date Napoleon used the Sphinx for target practice, assembled at Grafenwoehr Headquarters and prepared weighty dispatches on NATO tactics. Deep thinkers all, they were puzzled, injured, by urgent telegrams from editors in New York, Copenhagen, Athens:

"Detail Elvis' role war games stop. Does he dig own foxhole use sleeping bag carry guitar query . . ."

Sergeant Presley, chewing a massive wad of gum with a rotary motion, looked up and said: "Nah. Don't want interviews."

The experts, who in years past have brought field marshals to heel, were indignant. But Maj. Gen. Frederic Brown completed the black-out-for-snapping interviewed now. Period."

General Brown's communique has been policy since 0645, 24, March, 1958, when Elvis swam into uniform on tears shed by relatives, agents and the Internal Revenue Bureau then collecting 500,000-Presley-dollars-a-year.

The Army decided that Elvis, "on duty," was not to grand interview or pose with Fraulein Gretchen Himmelhauer, 1960 Queen of the Rhine Valley Wine Growers' Association. "Off duty," he could give any place or do anything — except stick up the Krupp Works.

To see how this has functioned, on and off, I came to Bad Nauheim where Elvis and his jeeps have been garaged. Garrison duty is as dull in Germany as in Texas and the only military memories Elvis will have for his heirs concern sticky carburetors.

ELVIS AND FRAULEIN BUERGIN: Girls at home were very angry.

Texas Third Peanut Producer

AUSTIN (UPI)—Farmers raised 202,300,000 pounds of peanuts in 1959 as Texas again ranked third in the nation in production, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research reported Saturday.

The 1959 crop was 22 million pounds below the 1958 harvest, but yield prediction of 700 pounds per acre should place the crop second only to the record-breaking 730 pounds per acre harvest in 1958.

Texas' production of peanut hay during 1959 was set at 72,000 tons, second in the nation.

Reports show an expected drop in the value of the 1959 crop, the bureau said. Texas growers received an average of 1.2 cents per pound less for peanuts during the past year. Total value of the crop, the bureau estimated, would be approximately $18,800,000.

BACK TO THE SPOTLIGHTS: A nationwide tour of one-night stands is planned to re-introduce Elvis to his fans.

Wales Hotel and later a radio service waiter said: "The young ladies — such lights — are going in and out of M. Presley's suite, in and like a door revolving . . ."

The Army is returning Presley to civilian life scratched and unhooked.

When Elvis dated Margit Buergin, Frankfurt typist-model, several times straight running, rumor mongers sensed romance, hearts-and-flowers. It was strictly fun, gin-and-tonic. But hysterical U.S. teens swamped the local cable office with protests (many sent "collected") "Aren't we good enough for you?"

Recently Elvis and Cliff Gleave, No. 1 buddy-buddy, had a furious blast in Paris. They closed every Champs-Elysee night club, went through $400-$500 daily. They camped at the posh Prince of
