Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) - This week's Republican convention can be expected to paint a rosier pic ture of the nation's economic health and it would be surprising if the market does not show a favorable response, according to B. K. Thurlow of Winslow, Cohu Stetson, Inc.

It seems curious, he says, that ith the election campaign now eginning in earnest, the adminstration is showing so little conern over the steady deterioration n business sentiment that has taken place during the pest few

An excellent pretext for stimulating measures now exists and these include lowering /interest rates and margin requirements, in the opinion of this financial

Bache & Co. is surprised to see Great Western Financial back down so sharply in view of its continued earnings gain. With chances for any adverse legislation slim, Bache says, GWF's excellent past record would seem to deserve a higher valuation.

The next twelve months should see a leveling off, or at worst a slight decline in bank earnings, according to the Value Line Investment survey. However, with current dividend payments at historically low levels, a general liberalization of dividend rates appears in prospect.

Hornblower & Weeks notes that oil company executives have stated that improved earnings during the remainder of the year should offset the rather disappointing results earlier so that full 1960 inone should be about equal to 1959 or better in some cases. The latter will probably hold true for Standard Oil of Indiana, Hornower believes.
