UN Forces Take Posts Over Congo

Troops Guarding Strategic Areas

By GEORGE SIBERA
United Press International

LEOPOLDVILLE. The Congo (UPI)—A small but growing army of U.N. troops spread through the Congo today to try to prevent this new African nation from strangling itself with violence or getting caught in the middle of the East-West cold war.

A Belgian government spokesman said in Brussels there had been "threats concerning a possible appeal to Russian troops on the part of the Congolese government."

He added, however, that Belgian authorities had not formally received a reported ultimatum from Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba threatening to call for Soviet troop help unless Belgium pulled its soldiers out within three days.

U.N. officers ordered the first few hundred African troops to arrive to take up posts in the most strategic and troublesome locations.

Moroccan troops were dispatched to Matabidi, at the mouth of the Congo, a vital port which rebel Congolese soldiers seized 10 days ago after a clash with Belgian troops.

Ethiopian soldiers were ordered to Stanleyville in the east where five isolated white outposts in the area reported Sunday night they were being attacked by mutinous Congolese.

Forces from Tunisia and Ghana took up positions in Leopoldville between Belgian paratroopers and Congolese soldiers. They received a promise from the local Congolese commander that his troops would not carry arms outside their base areas.

Belgian troops took over the islands of Bula and Bemba at the mouth of the Congo river on hearing that a Polish freighter with 300 tons of arms for the Congolese army had arrived off the Congo estuary.

There was no indication whether (See FORCES, Page 3)

Soviet Aid May Be Asked

Belgium Ignores Congo Order To Pull Troops

By WALTER LOGAN
United Press International

Belgium announced today it would ignore a Congolese ultimatum to withdraw its troops from the Congo or face the threat its former colony would seek Soviet military aid.

The Belgian Cabinet met in emergency session in Brussels to discuss Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba's demand that Belgium pull out by Tuesday or face the possibility of Soviet intervention.

Government spokesman Paul Meyers, the minister of health, announced afterward: "There are no new elements. Our position remains unchanged."

That meant Belgian troops would continue confronting mutinous Congolese troops until the safety of tens of thousands of Europeans is assured by building of the United Nations peace force.

Already heavily-armed Belgian infantry units were pouring into Elisabethville by air. Paratroop units already there were regrouping to be used as a mobile strike force wherever they may be needed.

The situation of Europeans — and some Americans — was reported desperate in scattered areas of the Congo where the mutinous troops have carried out rape, murder and pillage.

Several hundred United Nations troops from other African nations were trying to restore order but there were far too few of them to cope with the disorders.

Troops from the African nations of Tunisia, Ghana, Morocco and Ethiopia were on hand. It was reported in New York U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld was appealing for forces from non-African nations — Yugoslavia, Ireland, Sweden, Burma and Haiti.

Tens of thousands were believed needed to maintain order. The Congolese ultimatum for Belgian withdrawal was delivered to Dr. Ralph Bunche in Leopoldville and was expected to come up for debate in the U.N. Security Council in New York Tuesday.

Thomas Kanza, Congolese representative to the United Nations, planned to leave Leopoldville today to present the Congo's case. (See CONGO, Page 3)

Sunday's explosion hurled huge chunks of lava into the air and a mushroom-shaped cloud shot up five miles with the speed of an express train. The slopes of the mountain trembled.

The Italian naval radio center at Messina, said today it had been deluged with calls from ships at sea reporting the "atomic style" cloud and a rain of volcanic dust as far as 75 miles away.

Red hot ash set fire to vineyards and pine groves on the slopes and damaged automobile tops in Piedmonte, 10 miles away. Fine ash has blown eastward to shower villages as far away as Porto Salvo, 46 miles from Etna on the Italian mainland.

Smaller explosions continued until after dark. Billowing black smoke hid the mountain peak from view.

Then, late Sunday night, the volcano settled down to a calm so unusual for Etna that the silence itself was ominous.

Eighteen men will be honored at a banquet given by the directors of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Assn. at 7 p.m. Thursday in Coronado Inn. The honored guests are men who have served two or more consecutive three-year terms on the board of the association.

Those to be honored are Crawford Atkinson, Dr. M. C. Overton Jr., H. L. Ledrick, Orval Christopher, T. Buck Hines, John O. Pitts, F. E. Imel, Quentin Williams, A. B. Carruth, Irvin Cole, J. W. Graham, Rex Barrett, Homer Taylor, R. M. Samples, W. D. Price, S. R. Henstiel, Frank Carter and J. C. McWilliams.

Final plans for this year's rodeo to be held Aug. 1-6 will also be discussed.

tion. He said a meeting of southern Democrats with similar feelings may be held in New Orleans or Atlanta after the GOP convention.

Mississippi State Sen. W. B. Alexander urged formation of a third party with Sen. Barry Goldwater, Arizona Republican, as its candidate.

OAS Meets To Consider Emergency

Russ Intrusion In Area Is Topic

By HENRY RAYMONT
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Organization of American States meets today to formally approve an emergency western hemisphere foreign ministers conference on Russia's intrusion in the U.S.-Cuban controversy.

UPI learned before the afternoon meeting that the Fidel Castro regime may now be pressured from other Latin American nations and agree to attend the foreign ministers' session, proposed by Peru.

But Cuba goes before the U.N. Security Council today to charge the United States with economic aggression. Russia and other Communist countries were expected to back the accusation and milk it for every last drop of propaganda value.

The council of the 21-nation OAS informally approved the inter-American foreign ministers' meeting last Saturday. The representatives of Mexico, Venezuela and Cuba had not received instructions from their governments at that time.

These three countries were expected to vote with the other OAS members today for the session. Authoritative diplomatic sources told UPI that Cuba had indicated it would take part in the meeting. (See OAS, Page 3)

Neighbors Attempt To Be Peacemakers

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—Argentina and Ecuador moved today to ease the diplomatic battle between the United States and Cuba out of the United Nations and into the Organization of American States.

In the OAS it could be treated as a family matter with a minimum of Russian interference. Informed sources said the two Latin American members of the Security Council worked out a compromise to present at a session called for this afternoon to consider Cuban charges of U.S. "economic aggression" and interference in its domestic affairs.

The draft resolution, worked out in conferences with both Cuban and American diplomats, would refer the complaint to the OAS for investigation and ask all U.N. members not to add to the tensions.

Diplomatic sources believed the move would be approved by a 9-0 vote with Russia and Poland abstaining.

As soon as the Security Council has gotten the Cuban complaint out of the way it will have to turn to deal with the Congo again and a Russian complaint about a U.S. reconnaissance jet shot down by Soviet planes July 1.

Trial Date For Powers Set

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Tass news agency announced today that the trial of American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers will begin Aug. 17.

Tass said the case would be "an open court session" of the military college of the nation's supreme court.

Powers, 31, of Albany, Ga., was shot down by a Soviet rocket on May 1, near Sverdlovsk while making what the Russians called a spy flight from Pakistan to Norway.

His wife has been staying with her mother in Milledgeville, Ga. The pilot's father is a shoe repairman in Pound, Va.

Cuban Anti-Reds In Open Protest Of Shift To Left

By MATTHEW T. KENNY
United Press International

HAVANA (UPI)—Roman Catholic opposition to the Fidel Castro regime hardened today in alarm at Cuba's growing entanglement in the Soviet-Red-Chinese axis.

The situation was aggravated by unconfirmed reports that Chinese Party Chief Mao Tse-tung has been invited to Havana at the same time as Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev — possibly late next month or early September.

Cubans were surprised to learn that Defense Minister Raul Castro, brother of the premier, currently is in Moscow after starting out on a tour supposedly limited to Communist Czechoslovakia and the United Arab Republic.

Meanwhile, a Red Chinese trade delegation began its second week of talks with revolutionary officials here.

About 3,000 Sunday Mass goes, fired up with a sermon asking God's help for "all those who fight and suffer the persecutions of Communist regimes," poured out into the street from Havana's 200 year-old Catholic cathedral Sunday chanting "Cuba yes, Russia No."

The sermon was delivered by auxiliary Archbishop Eduardo Baza Masvidal, who recently joined the archbishop of Santiago, Enrique Perez Serantes, in making separate news conferences also.

Republicans Plan 'Convention Image'

By IRA LURVEY
United Press International

CHICAGO (UPI)—Republicans began planning their "convention image" today, talking of a "realistic" civil rights plank and a renewed pledge to captive satellites.

GOP Platform Committee Chairman Charles Percy said the party had no intention of trying to "out-promise" the Democrats in a bid for Negro votes.

"We'll not promise things that everyone knows can't be produced," Percy said. He called the Democratic civil rights plank a "political maneuver."

Republicans, spurring activity from all corners in preparation for next week's national convention, scheduled a steady flow of information as to just what is the offering.

A late-afternoon news conference slated by New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller was looked to as the possible start to a showdown between Rockefeller and Vice President Richard Nixon.

Separate news conferences also were planned by Percy and Party Chairman Thruston B. Morton. Morton said he also would attend the Rockefeller gathering.

Rockefeller was to appear Tuesday before the platform committee. Morton said he, too, would attend that committee meeting.

Earlier, Morton said his endorsement of a Nixon-Rockefeller ticket was not meant to "badger" Rockefeller into accepting the second spot. Morton said he knew nothing of Rockefeller's claim to have refused an "unofficial" offer to second Nixon's nomination for the presidency.

Morton told a rally marking "Captives Nations Week" that the Republican Party would "renew its pledge" to "press" for the liberation of satellite states.

"Steadily through the years as the Red wave of Communism swept over Eastern Europe and other once-free nations my party has made, and kept, a pledge to press forward for liberation," Morton said. "At next week's congressions for Democratic go-between."

The President scheduled an afternoon meeting here with his deputy assistant, Gerald Morgan, to work out the method of providing Kennedy and Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate Lyndon Johnson authoritative information on the "international scene."

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Sunday night, after talking with Eisenhower, that the formal offer would go forward "within a day or two."

Hagerty said Kennedy was the victim of a "misunderstanding" when he assumed Saturday in Los Angeles that the offer already had been made.

The press secretary also left little, if any, doubt that the President will not agree to Kennedy's announced idea of having former Illinois Gov. Adlai Stevenson and Connecticut Representative Chester Bowles receive these "briefings" for him.

Eisenhower plans, Hagerty said, to offer briefings by a "responsible official of the Central Intelligence Agency." The President envisages briefing on the basis he received in 1952 and Stevenson in 1956. These were "solo" deals, with no aides present or acting as liaison men. Kennedy said in Hyannisport, Mass., where he is on vacation, that he and Johnson "will be happy to participate in any confidential briefings the President or his administrative officers may suggest."

He made it clear that he had named Stevenson and Bowles as his liaison men with the White House with the knowledge that only he and Johnson could personally have access to the intelligence briefing.

Kennedy said he and Johnson wanted to take part in the briefings and he emphasized that "they desire to cooperate in every way during this period with the President."

Rockefeller Backers Start Draft Machine

CHICAGO (UPI)—The drive to draft Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller picked up steam today but top Republican leaders said it would fall short of the party's presidential nomination.

National Chairman Thruston B. Morton, an early arrival for the GOP convention opening next Monday, said a heavy majority of Republican leaders want Vice President Richard M. Nixon to head the ticket. He added Rockefeller was "welcome" to make a fight for it.

"This will be a free and open convention and Gov. Rockefeller, or any other candidate, is free to do what he wants," Morton said.

While Rockefeller's ardent supporters pushed him for first place, some party leaders said they would like to see him run for vice president. Rockefeller said he was available for a "genuine draft" but under no circumstances would take second billing. He said he turned down an invitation to second Nixon's nomination.

The Rockefeller headquarters at the Sheraton Towers gave all the appearances of being set up for a full-fledged candidate. Governor and Mrs. Rockefeller (See BACKERS, Page 3)

The Rodeo office will be set up Friday in the lobby of the Pampa Hotel with Mrs. Lois Steward in charge. Reserved seats will go on sale next Monday at the office.

According to Wedgeworth, several good boxes are still available as well as merchants tickets. Business concerns are urged to place orders for merchant tickets as soon as possible to facilitate processing of tickets.

Prices of tickets are: General admission, $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children; reserved seats, $2; and box seats, $60 for six chairs including general admission tickets for five nights.

Mt. Etna Erupts Twice In Biggest Modern Show

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI)—Mt. Etna's mighty volcano erupted through a second crater with a roar today, spewing forth smoke, glowing rocks and ashes for an hour.

Volcano experts feared the 10,758-foot volcano, biggest in Europe, was on the verge of spilling out a giant flow of lava that would destroy villages and vineyards on its slope.

The central crater of the man-killing volcano erupted Sunday with a violence unmatched in modern times. The crater had been long dormant. Today's explosion came from the more active north-eastern crater.

New Sunglasses With Old Twist

By ALICIA HART Beauty Editor Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Though sunglasses are not, in this day, confined to beaches by any means, the beach is one place where they absolutely belong.

By this is meant that to face sparkling water and golden sunlight without the protection of sunglasses is to court eye trouble. And surely there's no need to do without them in a time when sunglasses are designed for every facial type, in every frame color, for every type of protection, be it sitting on the beach, golfing or rocking away the afternoon in a comfortable chair on the veranda of the country club.

Of the many sunglasses fashions available this year, one of the newest (seemingly) and therefore most startling actually is an almost exact copy of glasses originally worn in Europe about 1720.

From Europe, the fashion spread to this country. Then they were done with frames of wood, steel, silver or gold.

Today, these petite, oval sunglasses come with frames moulded entirely of strong, lightweight nylon. Attached to them is a cord to slip about the neck.

These are fashion sunglasses to be worn while sunbathing since they give protection without leaving white marks or marring your hairdo.

These tiny, oval sunglasses with strong nylon frames are almost exact copies of eighteenth century spectacles. They're partly for fun and partly to keep a summer hairdo intact.

Dear Abby... Cure Non-Social Hubby By Not Harping About It

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is my husband right or wrong in refusing to attend social functions, some of which concern our children?

We get invitations to school affairs and church suppers, but he flatly refuses to go. I blew my top when he refused to go to a Father-and-Son banquet at the church. To be fair, I must admit he is a good father and a perfect husband. He spends all his spare time with the children and me—but he says he has no desire to make small talk with a crowd of people he barely knows.

I say he owes it to his children to attend these affairs whether he likes them or not. If I am wrong, please tell me and I'll never argue the point with him again.

WILLING TO LISTEN DEAR WILLING: Face it. Your husband is non-social. If he gives you and the children all his spare time, that more than offsets his refusal to attend social functions, concerning the children or not. Maybe if you'll quit harping about it, one day he'll decide to go.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married only five weeks and already I am having trouble. My husband told me he doesn't want me wearing pedal pushers or any kind of

Family Day Picnic Held For Celanese

Games, golf, pony riders and a barbecue were features of the eighth annual family day picnic of the Celanese Employees' Club held Saturday at Pamcel Hall.

This picnic has been held every year since the Celanese plant began operation in Pampa. This year, for the first time, it was held on the grounds of the new Pamcel Hall, a recreational building built for the club by the company.

Beginning at 2 p.m., pony rides for the children and games and golf were provided for entertainment. A barbecue dinner was served at 4:30 p.m.

Ray Hudson was in charge of the event.

Members of the cooking committee were Chairman Wilson Puryear, John Clarke, Wiley Fesse, Roland Treadaway, Melvin Watkins, Arnold Hale, Gayle Lemmons and Jim Staus.

Those on the serving committee were Chairman Bill Cooper, Bob Goodwin, Bob Richardson, Red Jones, Carl Warner, Parks Brumley, Bob Karber, Charlie Gilbert, Jack Gist, Don Reed, Bob Fitzgerald and Wesley York.

On the work committee were Ray Armstrong, Don Warminski, Buddy Epperson, Jack Edwards, George Ethridge and Charlie Albus.

shorts in public. He absolutely put his foot down. I used to live in things like that before I was married and he never said a thing against them.

All he says is, "You are my wife now and it is different." Do you think he is fair in his demands?

EMILY DEAR EMILY: I think he is fair and remarkably intelligent. Do as he says.

DEAR ABBY: Should not appointments be respected by everyone concerned? Why should a patient, who has made an appointment weeks in advance, be made to sit in a reception room for an hour and a half? Surely after years of experience, X-rays in advance, etc., a professional man knows approximately how long it takes to render all services.

My time is as valuable to me as a physician's or a dentist's time is to him. The last call cost me $4.00 for ten minutes with the physician, plus 2 1/2 hours lost in his waiting room. The total was $9.00 plus a lot of aggravation.

SLOW BURN DEAR SLOW BURN: Physicians are frequently called out on emergency calls. In some instances, patients rush into the office for emergency treatment. Physicians and dentists cannot always know how much time each patient requires. The secret to being a patient is to do something else while you're waiting. Your doctor is not fiddling, so don't burn.

RUTH MILLETT

Memo to this summer's bride: Have you stopped to wonder what all the friends and relatives who said to you on your wedding day, "I wish you all the happiness in the world" were really wishing for you?

They didn't have a lifelong honeymoon in mind—since "living happily ever after" only happens in fairy tales and romantic stories.

What those kind and sincere enough to wish the very best for you were really wishing was this: That the day will never come when you regard your marriage as a mistake.

That your first concern will be for your husband's well-being and happiness and that his first concern will be for yours.

That together the two of you will find joyful companionship in good times and strength and comfort in each other when the way is rough.

That you will have children to enrich your lives.

That you will have the strength and quiet courage and the wisdom a woman needs to be a good wife, a happy homemaker and a wise mother.

Polly's Quiz

Dear Polly: I have always wanted a red rug for my living room. Now that I finally have it, I don't know what to do with it. We have one lounge chair in turquoise but what other colors should I use?—Mrs. B.

Dear Mrs. B.: That red rug should be really effective if you paint your walls white and woodwork turquoise. Use turquoise for draperies, too. Slip cover your sofa and perhaps a wing chair with crisp-looking chintz patterned in red, turquoise, pale yellow and green.

Dear Polly: I have so many pretty African violet plants. But where to keep them is a problem. In our old home, I kept them on the windowsills. But in our new house, the sills aren't wide enough. Should I put glass shelves all across the windows?—Mrs. L. T.

Dear Mrs. L. T.: Forget the glass shelves. Group all your lovely violets in one spot for a dramatic effect. A tiered wire flower stand placed in front of a window would be ideal.

Dear Polly: We've just papered three living room walls with blue textured paper. We did the fireplace walls in a blue, white and beige pattern. What color rug, draperies and slip covers would be best with this pattern?—Mrs. K. M. Mrs. B.

Dear Mrs. K. M.: Whatever made you pick such a busy pattern for your fireplace wall? Now that it's done, I think your best bet is a plain beige rug. With it, have white draperies, a blue sofa, one cherry red chair, another in blue-and-white or beige-and-white stripes.

Some cherry red, deep green and beige cushions on your sofa would be my choice for the background you have.

Dear Polly: I live in one of those subdivisions where all of the houses look alike. We're going to paint the outside of our house and I'd like your opinion of our color scheme.

We've tried to individualize the house with a storm door, plank fence and lamp post. I thought of painting the shingles and boarding white with a shutter on one end window and diamond-shaped lines on the storm door in black. Inside of the house is Colonial.—Mrs. T.

Auxiliary Presents Mission Program

LEFORS (Spl) — Intermediate Girl's Auxiliary met in the church Wednesday for its regular meeting.

Miss Amy Earhart, president, presided at the meeting which opened with Watchword said by the group. Glenda Shirley read the prayer calendar, and prayer for missionaries was led by Shires Cable. Roll call and minutes were read by Shires Cable.

"When the Roll is Called," was the title of the program directed by Doris Halley, program chairman. Assisting with the program were Shires Cable, Amy Earhart, Oweida Jernigan, Glenda Shirley, Doris Halley, and Mrs. David Robinson, who led closing prayer.

V. G.

Dear Mrs. T. V. G.: Shutters often improve the appearance of a house. But if there isn't room for a pair, forget it. You might think about deep gray exterior walls, white trim and a window box. Front door and storm door could be zinnia yellow with white box filled with gay yellow flowers.

Strong Rights Plank Urged By Sen. Javits

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republican Sen. Jacob K. Javits says the GOP should write a strong civil rights plank and not make the "fatal error" of trying to win southern votes with a weak stand.

The New Yorker criticized the sweeping civil rights plank adopted by the Democratic convention last week over southern objections. He said the Democrats could not make good on their rights promises, the most liberal in party history.

The commission reported oil discoveries in Refugio, Corpus Christi, Abilene and Midland districts. Two gas discoveries were made in the Abilene district and one each in the Midland and Wichita Falls districts.

ing veiled attacks on the revolutionary regime through various church publications. The demonstrators chased away several pro-Castro hecklers and pounded their fists against the sides of passing busses. Bus drivers belong to one of the island's Communist-dominated unions. One eyewitness reported seeing a part of the crowd attack a revolutionary patrol car but no arrests were made.

It was one of the biggest anti-Communist demonstrations in Havana in recent weeks. It came as Ecuador joined Argentina and several other Latin states in urging the Castro regime to renounce Russia's recent rocket-rattling threats against the United States in behalf of Cuba.

The government was silent on these appeals. It also withheld reaction on a new United States note delivered Friday protesting as "arbitrary and discriminatory" Cuba's nationalization of property owned by U.S. interests.

CONGO

A small but growing force of U.N. troops spread through the Congo to try to halt the wave of murder and rape, but Ethiopian troops were unable to answer five SOS appeals from the Stanleyville area where Congolese were attacking white outposts. The Ethiopians flew to Stanleyville today but could not land because of bad weather and were forced to return to the capital. UPI correspondent Ray Moloney reported from Elisabethville, capital of seceded Katanga province, that long convoys of Belgian infantry troops were moving into that city.

Unconfirmed reports said the Polish freighter Stettin had arrived off the mouth of the Congo River with a cargo of 300 tons of Communist arms. Belgian troops took over the islands of Bula and Bamba, presumably to try to intercept the reported arms shipment.

if the agenda was satisfactory to the Castro government.

There had been speculation that Cuba would boycott the conference because it feared severe criticism for its increasingly close ties with Russia.

The Castro regime previously has branded the OAS a "tool" of the United States.

Diplomatic sources here said Cuba also might accept a face-saving proposal by Ecuador and Argentina—the Latin American nations on the U.N. Security Council—that the Castro government's "economic aggression" charge be referred to the OAS.

Under the Ecuador-Argentine plan, the Security Council would ask the OAS secretariat for "information" on U.S.-Cuban differences without setting a deadline for receiving it.

The inter-American foreign ministers then would meet and try to patch up the growing split between Washington and Havana.

Optimists Launch Teen League

If any one group in Pampa deserves a pat on the back it's the members of the Optimist Club who get out, work long hours and set up a gigantic baseball program for kids.

The latest Optimist venture which was headed by Tom Glover and Ben Hamilton, is a teen-age league, or sort of a Pony Grad league.

From kids eligible to play, there wasn't too much interest, and only two teams were formed — Ideal and Furr.

And it was a hard job getting enough players together to form two teams.

But the Optimists did it, and the same two clubs play every Tuesday and Thursday nights.

A lot of cities have adopted the idea of having a league for players who are too old for Pony League competition and still too young for semi-pro or American Legion ball.

'800' Club Still Needs Members

With few exceptions, they have the same problems of trying to get players out for the teams.

Little League and Pony League players aren't old enough to drive cars, and have little to do but play baseball.

But when one is through with Pony League and gets a drivers license, he begins to notice such things as new cars, girls etc.

This is when baseball takes a back seat to everything.

Although the teen-age league was late getting off the ground, there is still time perhaps for more teams to form and get into action.

If not, then the Optimists plan to stick with a two-team league the remainder of the summer, then get an early start on building a larger league next summer.

Speaking of the Optimist baseball program, the number of new members which has been added to the '800' Club is disappointing.

Only a handful of new members have been signed since the Optimist Club began its drive to reach a goal of 800.

The dues are only $1 per month, and all proceeds are being used to improve the baseball facilities here.

Any Optimist Club member, or manager in the program, can sign you up for the club.

Cutest Culley Likes Basketball

Idle thoughts: When have you seen a cuter kid than Robert Douglas Culley, son of the Harvesters new basketball coach, Terry Culley.

Only 20 months old, Robert probably works harder at basketball than any player.

That may partly be due to the fact that the ball (he prefers a regular sized one) is almost as big as he is.

When he picks it up, there's only about six inches of him showing above and below the ball.

He shoots at a goal his father put up on their back fence, and makes an amazing number of his tries.

The San Francisco Giants decision to ship Willie McCovey to Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League, should come as no surprise.

McCovey was hitting .244 with 11 home runs this summer. And there are a lot of .240 hitters who stay in the big show.

But everyone who does is about 900 times the flier McCovey is.

Every time the first baseman camps under a pop fly, he endangers himself because there's no guarantee he'll catch it.

If Willie can straighten himself out in the field, he'll be back with the Giants, because his hitting will take care of itself.

The Roadrunners play again Wednesday night, this time going to Borger for a single game.

It will be a make-up contest for one of the games with Borger which was rained out two weeks ago.

Mound Magic Maker Daley Saving Athletics

By JACK CUDDY
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI)—Buddy Leo Daley, a slender left-handed knuckleball pitcher from Orange, Calif., is better than halfway toward a "mound miracle."

Blond Leo, who still retains a baby face at 28, is defying the law of averages by rolling toward a 20-victory season with the last-place Kansas City Athletics.

This veteran of seven years in the minor leagues, has now gone 60 per cent of the won-lost distance with a 12-5 record; and he intends to step up his pitching schedule during the remainder of the campaign—if it means reaching the 20-win circle.

"Bud often asks to work out of town for the good of the team," said Kansas City Manager Bob Elliott. "We'll help him all we can to win 20 although our first aim, of course, is to get out of last place and maybe reach first division."

Teammate Ned Garver is the last major league pitcher to have won 20 for a last-place team. The little curvballer achieved a 20-12 season with the now defunct St. Louis Browns in 1951.

Old-timers may jump to the defense of all-time strikeout king Walter Johnson and claim he often won 20 for the Senators when they were "first in war, first in peace and last in the American League." But the record book shows Johnson never won 20 for a last-place Washington club. All his 20-win seasons, beginning with 1910, were with Senator teams that finished between seventh and first places.

Daley's seven complete games and 3.98 earned run average speak for themselves but he also gets plenty of praise from rival hitters.

"Buddy gets that ball over with something on it," declared Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox great slugger, during the recent All-Star interlude. "He's got that knuckler, he's got a very wide-breaking curve and he has a pretty good fast ball. And he's got great competitive spirit."

Mick Mantle of the Yankees said, "He's throwing his curve more this year, and it's made him a better pitcher."

"We had him in Cleveland a couple of years," recalled Al Lopez, current manager of the Chicago White Sox. "The thing that impressed me was his terrific urge to win."

Daley is ultra-modest. Three of his five losses were by the margin of one run, and he's held the opposition to three runs or fewer in eight of his victories. During one stretch he scored nine straight wins while his team was practically collapsing about his ears. He's beaten the White Sox three times, the Orioles twice and the Yankees once.

Canada's Favorite Son Gets Revenge Over Wall

DETROIT (UPI)—Stan Leonard, Canada's favorite son of the fairways, has gained revenge for his nation on Art Wall Jr.

It was just a week ago that Wall stormed through the Canadian Open in 17-under-par to post a six-stroke triumph and his first tournament win in more than a year.

And it looked as if the slim Pennsylvanian was going to run away with another one this past weekend at the Western Open But Leonard had other ideas.

The 45-year-old Canadian, who didn't start playing on the pro circuit until after his 40th birthday, staged one of golf's greatest stretch drives on Sunday's final round that wiped out Wall's six stroke lead.

Sudden Death Playoff
The invader from Vancouver, B.C., finally won it in a sudden death playoff after the two of them finished with 72-hole totals of 278. He dropped a three-foot birdie putt on the first extra hole for the clincher. Wall missed a six-foot birdie attempt and had to settle for second place after leading through most of the tournament.

Leonard's brilliant comeback effort had apparently fallen one stroke edge. But he bogied that last hole after hitting his second shot into a trap and rimming the cup with the putt that could have given him the victory.

That gave Leonard another lease on life and he didn't let it slip. His dramatic birdie on the playoff hole overshadowed an earlier heroic effort when Leonard whittled five strokes off Wall's lead with four birdies on the front nine to go out in 32, compared with Wall's 37.

Erases Two-Stroke Margin
Leonard lost a stroke on the 11th with his only bogey of the day but his birdie on the 15th erased a two-stroke margin when Wall bogied that hole.

Wall, who faltered to a 74 Sunday after sweeping through eight straight sub-par rounds, fought back grimly with a birdie on the 16th to regain a stroke advantage, and he had the victory in his pocket until the lapse on the 18th hole.

Doug Sanders and Gene Litter ended in a tie for third with 279, a stroke back of Leonard and Wall.

Jerry Barber, Dave Ragan, and defending champion Mike Souchak were tied at 280 while five competitors, Julius Boros, Jim Ferree, Doug Ford, Bob Rosburg and Ken Venturi were next at 281.

Andrade Wants Shot At Brown

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—"Give me Joe Brown," said Bobby (Cisco) Andrade, the 30-year-old comeback kid who knocked out Raymond (Battling) Torres Saturday night in the Olympic "fight for lives."

"I want a shot at that lightweight title," Andrade said. "I have nothing to gain in a rematch."

A 2-1 underdog in the bout, Andrade was behind on every judge's card when he clipped 19-year-old Torres with a right to score a knockout in the seventh round.

Torres, of Reynosa, Mexico, had lost only once before in his entire career, to Carlos Ortiz last Feb. 4 in the Memorial Coliseum here.

Andrade, who had been in retirement until recently, now has a 43-6-1 record.

Double Steal By Penmates

CAMERON, W. Va. (UPI)—Two Red Sox players know how to take advantage of the long ball.

They pulled a double steal that gave them their freedom—at least temporarily — from the Mounds penitentiary.

In a baseball game here Sunday between the prison Red Sox and a local semi-pro team, a Cameron player hit a high fly ball to the outfield which caught everyone's attention. That's when the two Red Sox made their move.

Paul James Huffman, 26, and Gary Neal Albright, 28, walked quietly away from the Red Sox bench and left the field. Their absence was not discovered for several minutes.

The West Virginia state police teletype circuits sent out an alarm for two escaped prisoners dressed in baseball uniforms emblazoned with the team name "Red Sox." Two Red Sox who took advantage of the long ball.

Expansion For National? Milwaukee Wins 5th; Pirates Fall Again

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press International

There was a fist fight in Cleveland and a near riot in Detroit, but peace loving Del Crandall of Milwaukee caused the biggest disturbance in the City of Brotherly Love.

—Considering it was the sabbath, a lot of baseball people forgot their Sunday manners.

—Vic Power of the Indians and Earl Battey of the Senators exchanged punches as Washington swept a doubleheader from Cleveland 3-2 and 5-3.

—Angry Detroit fans showed the field with all sorts of debris in a wild scene reminiscent of the 1934 World Series but were placated when the Tigers won both ends of a twin bill from the first place Yankees, 12-2 and 3-2.

—And Crandall paced the on-rushing Braves to within 2½ games of the National League lead with his second straight perfect day at bat in a 7-3 triumph over the Phillies at Philadelphia.

The victory was the fifth in a row for Milwaukee and it was credited to Lew Burdette, who went the distance for his 10th triumph. Crandall, who had two homers and two singles in four trips Saturday, collected three singles and scored three of the Braves' runs. Ed Mathews helped matters with his 19th home run. Gene Conley was the loser.

The White Sox reclaimed third place in the American League by beating the Baltimore Orioles twice, 2-1 and 14-2, while the Red Sox made it three in a row over the Athletics, 4-2.

In the National League, the first-place Pirates salvaged a split with the Reds by winning the nightcap, 5-0, after dropping the opener, 6-5. The Cardinals took over third place with 6-0 and 8-1 victories over the Cubs, and the Giants may have saved Manager Tom Sheehan's job for a day or so with a 5-4 win over the Dodgers.

The fight between Power and Battey flared up during the sixth inning of the opener between the Indians and Senators. It came about when Power was thrown out at the plate trying to score from second on a single. Both players got in several good licks but Umpire Charley Berry got in the last word by ejecting both from the game.

The Senators beat Jim (Mudcat) Grant for the first time in his career after he had defeated them 14 times previously by breaking a 2-2 tie with three singles in the seventh inning of the opener. Tex Clevenger was the winner. Reliever Ray Moore was credited with the nightcap victory which Washington clinched with four runs in the fifth.

The furore in Detroit came about when Umpire Joe Paparella called Bill Skowron's drive down the right field foul line a two-run homer in the eighth inning of the nightcap. Detroit right fielder Rocky Colavito charged Paparella and the game was held up 10 minutes as irate fans rushed to the front of the stands and littered the field with refuse in the greatest Detroit demonstration since the 1934 World Series between the Tigers and Cardinals when St. Louis outfielder Ducky Medwick became a target of wrath for sliding roughly into Tiger third baseman Marv Owen. Skowron's homer tied the score at 2-2 but Colavito had the satisfaction of singling home Charley Maxwell with the winning run in the bottom of the eighth to bring Pete Burnside his fifth victory. The Tigers made a shambles of the opener when they raked Ralph Terry for seven runs in the second inning. Colavito hit his 19th homer with one on during the rally and Norm Cash connected with the bases full to make Frank Lary an easy winner.

Roy Sievers ran his hitting streak to 20 games in the White Sox' sweep of the Orioles. He doubled home both Chicago runs in the opener and connected for his 14th homer in the nightcap. The White Sox erupted for seven runs in the sixth inning of the second game. Gene Freese highlighting the rally with a three-run homer. Bob Shaw and Early Wynn were the winners.

Tom Brewer pitched an eight-hitter against Kansas City and hit his first home run of the season for Boston. Russ Nixon also homered Dick Hall his seventh defeat. The victory was Brewer's sixth against seven losses.

Rookie Tom Cheney of the Pirates limited the Reds to four hits in the nightcap. Don Newcombe started for Cincinnati but never faced a batter. He was ejected from the game when he became involved in an argument with Umpire Dusty Boggess over the length of one of his shirt-sleeves. Cal McLish replaced Newcombe and served up a home run to Bill Virdon on the first pitch. Don Hoak doubled home two more runs in the fifth.

The Reds won the opener with a 16-hit attack, 10 of which came off loser Vern Law, Pirate shortstop. Dick Groat collected seven hits in 10 trips during the doubleheader, including the 1,000th hit of his career. Bob Purkey won his ninth game in the finals.

Larry Jackson of the Cards set the Cubs down on four hits in the first game and Ray Sadecki won the nightcap with a six-hit effort. Ken Boyer's triple with the bases loaded sparked a five-run outburst in the fifth inning of the opener and Stan (The Man) Musial took over fifth place in the all-time major league base hit department with two singles in the nightcap. The two hits gave Musial a total of 3,252, one more than Nap Lajoie. Only Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Honus Wagner and Eddie Collins collected more.

Willie Mays tripled home Joe Amalfitano with the winning run in the eighth inning as the Giants first jumped to a 4-0 lead and then let the Dodgers tie the score. Reliever Billy O'Dell was the winning pitcher and Ed Roebuck the loser.

Who Is Responsible?

SPENDING for national security takes more than half of each tax dollar the federal government collects from you.

Virtually no one would oppose any needed amount of defense spending in today's unpredictable and dangerous world.

Senator Douglas of Illinois recently presented a display to his colleagues. One item was a lamp socket which, he said, sells in retail stores for 25 cents but cost the Navy $21.10.

Foreign Holdings

Congress is about to give its blessing to a new foreign aid agency, in the fond hope that it will help to solve an increasingly embarrassing problem of our own devising.

This is the large and growing accumulation of "soft" currencies for which the U.S. has no use. These are the baths, dinars, drachmas, kyats, hwan, pesetas, rupees, soles, sucres and other currencies acquired by the U.S.

The Doctor Says:

DR. HAROLD T. HYMAN

There is a saying that a single good illustration is worth many pages of text. And sometimes one or more case histories accomplish more than dozens of sermons.

For example, take a report that appeared in the Journal of the Florida Medical Assn. some time ago. It details the histories of three women who sought treatment in the emergency ward of a hospital.

The second was a 65-year-old who'd had a cold that had hung on for 10 days. The third was a 21-year-old in the eighth week of a pregnancy that was complicated by pain in the appendix region of her abdomen and some bleeding.

Each of the three was given a shot of penicillin. In each instance, the injection was made into a deep muscle. The two older women died almost instantaneously. The young pregnant woman survived for approximately 25 minutes.

The physicians who made this report and the editors of the journal who published it deserve a special citation for their honesty and courage. No one knows how many similar irregularities have occurred throughout the world, leaving the medical profession and the public none the wiser.

What makes this report the more appalling is the fact that none of the three women was in such imminent danger that injection treatment was warranted. Two of the three indeed, may never have needed penicillin at all.

All three might still be alive and a new baby born had they received thoughtful care and, at most, a dose of penicillin by mouth.

In my view, there are at least three possible partners of these tragedies. The first is the know-it-all patient who demands a shot of penicillin and who shops around until he finds a doctor who will do his bidding.

The second is the physician who caters to the customer even though he knows better. And the third is the drug manufacturer who pushes injectable rather than ORAL products because the margin of profit is so much greater.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK — I know a woman named Ariadne Maria Elektra Sabbo Eurydice Pasmezoglu Van Metre Thompson, and it isn't that mouthful of name that stuns me, even though she has written two published books, may write a play, knows Tennessee Williams or struck a chord in my memory.

Now let's get the name business over with first. She is St. Louis Greek and her mother believed in giving the children undeniably Greek names in sufficient quantity to keep the franchise.

According to Senator Douglas, the military wast as much as $3,000,000,000 a year through present procurement practices. This huge sum of money, he pointed out, could be saved and used for missiles and other real defense purposes.

The nation is entitled to a dollar's worth of defense and military power for every one of the billions of dollars thus spent.

in payment for surplus commodities and dollar loans. No one is sure just how much of this "money" is on hand, since it is spread thru dozens of government accounts.

No one is sure just how much of this "money" is on hand, since it is spread thru dozens of government accounts. As of the end of 1959, however, the U.S. stood to collect $3 billion "worth" of foreign currencies on loans outstanding, plus interest. And the IOU's keep mounting.

The only trouble with all this "wealth" is that, for the most part, the U.S. can't spend it. India, for example, already owes us the equivalent of $729 million in rupees and has just agreed to borrow back more than 500 million of the rupees she will pay us for 16 million tons of wheat over the next four years.

In fact, the Budget Bureau estimates that U.S. agencies will need $2.3 billion in foreign currencies to meet overseas costs in fiscal 1961, but that only $130 million of the U.S. hoard can be used.

This is because more than 80 per cent of the "need" will occur in Canada, Britain, France, Germany, and Japan, where U.S. supplies of local currencies are negligible.

The new aid agency, the International Development Association, is the brainchild of Sen. Mike Monroney (D-Okla.), who conceived it as a means of putting U.S.-owned foreign currencies to use.

Monroney's idea got nowhere until the Treasury decided that it could be used to entice other "hard" currency countries into shouldering more of the growing burden of development assistance.

As finally approved by representatives of the leading nations last September, the plan called for the World Bank to operate an IDA, which would collect a fund of $1 billion within five years—$753 million in gold or dollars from 17 prosperous countries (including $320 million from the U.S.) and $237 million (90 per cent in local currencies and only 10 per cent in gold or dollars) from 51 poorer countries.

As a sop to Monroney, the plan included a provision allowing any member to contribute, as "supplementary resources," the currencies of other members, but only on condition that they agree. As a practical matter, the World Bank wants no part of the U.S. hoard of foreign currencies, since they would have no greater use for IDA than for the U.S. in adding to the resources of the underdeveloped countries.

This fact went unnoticed, however, when the Senate approved U.S. participation in IDA on June 2. "The purpose of the pending bill," said Sen. Prescott Bush (R-Conn.), "is to provide a use for idle funds which belong to the United States, which are locked up in foreign currencies." No one challenged this point. On the contrary, most of the debate centered on an amendment (which was adopted) designed to retain congressional control over these currencies, by requiring an appropriation in order to transfer them to IDA.

Thus the myth that there are the same as dollars was preserved. House approval of the measure awaits action by the Rules Committee, but no trouble is expected. By the end of the year, IDA should be in business with its real purpose intact: To transfer $733 million worth of resources (including $443 million from other "hard" currency countries) to the poorer countries, by way of long-term, low interest loans.

CRUCIAL PENNSYLVANIA SWITCH TO KENNEDY TRACED TO POTENT 'UNKNOWN' 'RINGSIDE' CLARK

LOS ANGELES — The most sought after and probably the most influential single delegate at this Democratic Convention has yet to say a word in public, appear on TV, or be any more noticeable than numerous other more or less anonymous participants in this quadrennial event.

Yet James "Ringside" Clark, Philadelphia trucking executive and professional football club owner, has been zealously courted by all the major Presidential candidates, and may really have determined the outcome of the Democratic nomination.

Virtually unknown outside of Pennsylvania's 81-vote delegation, Clark has played a decisive role in the victory of Senator John Kennedy and the ill-fate of his less successful rivals.

Working backstage with Representative William Green, powerful Democratic Chairman of Philadelphia, Clark engineered the coup that swung more than two thirds of Pennsylvania's delegation to Kennedy at a crucial moment in the tense pre-convention maneuvering.

At the Pennsylvania caucus that cast this momentous ballot Kennedy singled out Clark for public recognition of his timely support by pushing through a throng of delegates and newsmen and personally thanking him.

"Are we going to do all right here?" asked Kennedy clasping "Ringside's" hand with the double grip of the prize fighter.

"Everything is going just as planned," replied Clark, beaming over his bow tie.

"Thanks a lot," said Kennedy with a broad smile. An hour later in his hotel headquarters, Kennedy got the good news that his long wooing of Clark had paid off handsomely — with 64 of Pennsylvania's 81-votes.

HOW IT WAS DONE — The Kennedy wooing of the unknown but potent delegate from Philadelphia extended over quite a period and included meetings with the candidate, his father, the former Ambassador to England, and brother Robert, his top campaign manager.

The senior Kennedy even invited Clark to visit with him at the family's swank vacation home on Cape Cod. That was done after Representative Thomas O'Neill (Mass.) told Senator Kennedy, "If you want the Pennsylvania delegation, you've got to talk to Jim Clark. He is as powerful in Democratic circles in that state as Representative Green and Governor knowing a blessed thing about the women around them and closest to them. Women keep them happy and blithe in spite of knowing the appalling ignorance of men."

"Why the duplicity by women?" "Because we have to be. From the moment we are born until our last breath we are in vicious, constant, unrelenting competition with other women. We have to fake, lie, plot, plan, connive, wheedle, pretend and drown ourselves in mendacity. It's awful and we wouldn't have to do it if men had the simple wit to learn a few things about us. I don't think men are stupid, far from it. But they are ignorant. In 30,000 years, maybe longer, they haven't advanced at all in their knowledge of women yet women are around them all their lives."

"I think you ought to write a book."

"I am," she said.

Everybody's Money

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKYSEYER

The bipartisan activity to choose a new head of state to serve four to eight years in this troubled world starts in Los Angeles today.

The nominee in each of the two major parties can render a patriotic and human service by speech the technique of choosing a leader in the United States.

Such clarification will dispel the wicked illusion that Nikita S. Khrushchev is the opposite number of the next president of the United States. Unlike Mr. K., the dictator, the next president has a rigidly limited term of office.

In addition to his mandated retirement at the appropriate time, the next president is dependent for his power on his capacity to elicit voluntary support from Congress and the public.

Even on key appointments and in foreign commitments, the next president is subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

Likewise, in implementation of his distinctive constitutional powers, the next president is limited by his capacity to persuade a majority in Congress to appropriate sufficient funds to make his presidential authority a reality.

Unlike conditions prevailing in the Kremlin, the next President is subject to an orderly procedure for removal in the event of malfeasance or misfeasance in office. Under the Constitution, any president can be impeached by his capacity to persuade a majority in Congress to appropriate sufficient funds to make his presidential authority a reality.

On the other hand, in the Soviet dictatorship, heads of state were liquidated by death, as in the case of Lenin and Stalin, and by inner manipulative tactics by rival Bolsheviks, as in the case of Malenkov and Bulganin. Other aspiring rivals for the top job have been beaten off through assassination and exile.

Accordingly, in his acceptance speech, the chosen candidate of each U.S. party should make crystal clear the different moral position of American leadership. Basic in these differences is the ability of the individual voter in a secret, or Australian, ballot to select from among the candidates.

This freedom of choice is morally vitally different from the Soviet mockery of limiting the right of suffrage to ratifying the dictatorship choice of the Communist Party bosses.

The American people have heard from leftists much talk derisive of the habit of "guilt by association," that is, judging men by the company they keep.

The chief standard-bearers of both parties of the U.S. should promptly scotch Mr. K.'s impudent effort to achieve an undeserved semblance of virtue by associating himself in the public mind with the image of the next president of the United States.

Patriots, whether Democrats or Republicans, should denounce Mr. K.'s efforts to insinuate himself into the campaign, and to hint as to his preferences. And this view is not merely based on the technical ground that no foreign officeholder should intrude in our

Other Things May Change, But Not Dentist's Chair

By HENRY McLEMORE

Either my dentist lives in a cave, on an island which can be reached only by rowboat, or all the articles of late on the tremendous strides made by the dental profession are mouthwash.

I went to the dentist yesterday, and actually whistled on my way. Furthermore, I was disappointed when the receptionist told me I'd have to wait a few minutes, so eager was I to get in the chair and experience the joys of painless, carefree, downright jovial dentistry.

For hadn't I read that the demon drill, with its buzz and bite like a rattlesnake was a thing of the past, replaced by the use of sound waves or something equally miraculous? Sure I had.

So when the receptionist told me it was my turn, I rose from my chair with a bounce and a smile, told her "Thank you, ma'am," and meant it, gave the dentist a cherry greeting, and hopped in the chair as willingly as if it had been an overstuffed sofa.

"What you gonna hypnotize me with, Doc?" I asked. "A bright silver dollar, or just by looking me in the eyes and talking real low and steady? Don't make me do anything silly."

He didn't answer, but went on looking through one of those trays with all the drills in it.

"How do those sound drills work?" I asked. "A dentist in Sweden used them first, didn't he? I don't know anything about them, but they must work on the same principle as those noiseless dog whistles. A man can't hear 'em, but dogs can."

The dentist turned around from his tray of drills, gave me a good look, and said, "Mr. McLemore, what are you talking about? I have no intention of hypnotizing you, and where did you get the idea that I employed noiseless dog whistles in my work?"

With that he said, "Open, please," just as George Washington's dentist must have said to him, and set to work with the same kind of tools used by the first dentist I ever went to.

The drill hanging from his overhead gallows, droned the same sad and melancholy tune.

The drill was as hot as a pistol, just as it has always been. I flinched just as always, grabbed the arms of the chair and rolled my eyes appealingly toward the nurse, pleading for her to make the dentist stop.

I was given the same pinkish water to roll around in my mouth, the same Sahara dry cotton buds to hold under my lips, and was told the same old story, "This might hurt a bit."

I was poked in the gum with the same sharp needle, and got the same old feeling as if I had been socked in the mouth by a tanking middleweight.

That's why I say that either my dentist is a hermit, out of domestic political affairs.

In addition to this general rule, Nikita is out of bounds because in practice and in theory the Bolshevik is uncompromisingly opposed to the concept of free elections anywhere.

It would be poison for any American candidate to fall for the booby trap that Khrushchev, hostile to Eisenhower, will be willing to talk to a successor if he meets his approval.

Mr. K. is as much out of line as the warped "earth is flat" scientists who scorned Copernicus. Everybody's money in the United States will be more secure and everyone's liberty will be better protected if, in the forthcoming campaign, there is bipartisan determination to put Mr. K. in his place.

The desirable candidate won't freeze his hands by freezing into a precise blueprint his strategy for action in an unpredictable world of stresses and strains in the next eight years.

It would be folly to telegraph our punches in advance. Survival — economically, politically and morally — depends on strengthening the nation, and on having the courage to desist from the temptation to appease demagoguery at home and abroad.

The new president will affect the international balance of power by exposing the weakness of the moral foundations on which the Soviet system rests.

Students Take Summer Subjects To Better Their Chances For College

By VIRGINIA IRWIN
Daily News Staff Writer

Summer school. These two words used to horrify the imagination of most teenagers. But today many students attend summer school voluntarily and seem to enjoy it.

"I didn't have to decide to do in the summer; so I decided to go to summer school to strengthen some of my subjects," said Martha Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Price, 520 W. Cook. "I'm taking the courses simply for extra credit. I think it will better my changes of getting into a better college."

All students interviewed agreed that they had more time to study in the summer. They also stated that most students study harder for summer school because they are paying for the courses.

Many of us aren't required to take these courses. No absences are counted; so we're not even forced to attend. But we're paying to learn; so we study harder. This is a good chance to strengthen your knowledge or simply to gain credit to graduate early," said Sue Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Collins, 312 N. Ward. "I personally want to graduate early so I can work to go to college," she added.

Summer school at Pampa High School costs $12 per course, and a student can take as many as three courses. It is open to persons in the ninth grade or above. The driver education course is open to anyone over 14 years of age.

There are just under 200 enrolled in summer school this year, according to Cameron Marsh, who is co-principal of this session, along with Paul Payne. "Voluntary summer school as a method of getting ahead has increased in the driver education course," said Marsh. In fact, its enrollment is almost 100 per cent voluntary. However, in other courses, voluntary registration is down from four or five years ago," he said.

Courses offered in summer school are English; history; math, except for solid trigonometry, algebra II, and analytics; drivers education, and sociology. Eight teachers conduct the courses.

The session is held from 7 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. for eight weeks. Classes are 1 hour and 40 minutes long. Each course is equal to one semester of work during the winter term.

According to Marsh, the courses taken the most are sophomore and senior English, junior math and junior history. Marsh also commented that the number of students attending summer school because of failures during the regular term has dropped considerably in the past few years. Sandra Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Rogers, south of town, stated that she is attending summer school because it offers a chance for further advancement. "I simply want to graduate with a few more credits," she said. "Summer school is more relaxed than the regular term," said Martha Price. "The teachers have more time to work with each student and give more help. Thus, you not only have to learn, but you feel that you need to learn."

Some Footnotes On Germination Theory

By DELOS SMITH
UPI Science Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Science is moving in on the people who think they're doing a favor to apples, pears, and other fruits by eating them, and these people include many scientists.

The well-established theory that it is advantageous for any plant to tempt man, beast, and bird with irresistible and succulent fruit has been assailed by Dr. I. Gindel, a plant scientist.

This theory holds that fruit seed needs to be freed of the fruit before it can germinate, and fruit plants have evolved their wondrous aromas, shape and taste in order to attract eaters who by eating free the seeds.

Gindel's contention was that the fruit was not something the plant had to get rid of in order to propagate itself. The fact is, he said, fruit serves the reproductive drive of the plant from the instant it is set until it falls to the ground loaded with seeds chemically eager to sprout in any likely place.

"It is only a happy accident in nature" that one stage of this many-staged reproductive chemistry—the stage man calls "ripening"—delights the palates of the many varieties of fruit-eaters which include not only insects but fungi.

Gindel accepted established fruit science up to the point where the fruit is ripe and ready to drop off the plant. The science shows that the chemistry of the fruit up to this point has the effect of preventing the enclosed seed from germinating.

Its Chemistry Changes Science has not pursued the matter beyond that point because the ripe and edible fruit has been taken to be the end-result, which it is from the standpoint of fruit-eaters but isn't from the viewpoint of the plant.

When the fruit drops, Gindel said, its chemistry changes: You can measure it, in one particular, by a pronounced shift in acid-alkaline balance. Chemically the fruit is as alive as the seed, and its new purpose is to encourage germination rather than to prevent it.

Gindel practices his science at the Agricultural Research Station at Rehovot, Israel. To prove his point, he gathered the fruits of a number of native forest trees and shrubs. These he planted in poor sandy soil (chemically quite apart from the rich forest floor litter where the fruits would have fallen if left alone) and got a surprisingly high percentage of seed germinations which occurred inside the fruit.

Rosie Clooney Once Electioneered A Bit

"TV-Off Camera" By DOC QUIGG

United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI)—In this election year let us consider the electioneering experience of Rosemary Clooney, the well-known chanteuse and mama.

When she was a tot of 6, she turned on her cheery voice on street corners in behalf of the mayoral candidacy of her grandpa Andrew Clooney. He got elected mayor of Maysville, Ky., two consecutive terms.

"My sister Betty, who was 3, sang with me—things like 'Home on the Range,'" she said. "Grandpapa would talk on the street, and he'd turn around and say 'sing' and we'd go on for half an hour, if he'd let us."

"Maysville's population was a little over 6,000 then. He was in two terms and then we lost to Mr. Buckley. I'll never forget, Betty and I were walking along—let's see, I think it was West 2nd St.—and Mr. Buckley owned a garage there, and my little sister handed him a handbill saying, 'Vote for

A. Clooney.' Miss Clooney by that time had three years of singing experience behind her. She had made her public debut at the age of 3 with a solo rendition of "Sweethearts on Parade" before the Maysville Rotary Club.

By the time she was 16, she was singing on radio station WLW in Cincinnati. Her career has kept blooming through nightclubs, movies, television, and the sale of more than 25 million records, while her home life was also a bloom—five children born in the space of five years and six weeks.

Miss Clooney came here from her Beverly Hills home for a brief hello in connection with issuance of her latest record album, which RCA Victor has titled "Clap Hands, Here Comes Rosie." She disclosed that her next television venture will be an NBC special on Thanksgiving Day in which she and her husband, actor Jose Ferrer, will examine a subject they know something about—the family.

Not a single cracked egg since Chevy took over the route

That '60 Fleetside pickup you see takes whatever kind of road comes along, and makes about 250 stops a day delivering eggs house to house for Mr. Harry Hansen of Missoula, Montana. "With my precious truck," Mr. Hansen writes, "I always had some cracked eggs. Cargo damage always cut into my profits. But the new Chevy eliminated that problem completely. I haven't had one cracked egg with my new truck and I've had up to a ton of eggs in it without any difficulty... I didn't know a truck could ride so nice."

Chevy rides nice, all right; takes good care of fragile cargoes. But that's not even the half of it. Torison-spring suspension also means longer life for the truck, extra thousands of working miles, because the sheet metal and body components take less of a beating. You can run off-the-road or over back trails at faster safe speeds, too; get in more trips a day, make more money. Those facts are as true of the big Chevrolet heavyweights as they are of the pickups. Any model you name. Get one on your job and you've got the world's most efficient, most economical way to haul any load over any road. Your dealer will be happy to prove that statement any day you say.

"I'm getting close to 20 miles to the gallon," Mr. Hansen states, "and that's on stop-and-go delivery."
