Tanker Search Is Still Fruitless

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (UPI)—Mounting hours of fruitless search caused open concern Saturday for the safety of 39 seamen — missing since Tuesday aboard an aging tanker loaded with molten sulphur.

"I've got long distance calls in all over the country trying to learn something," said Mrs. George E. Watson, wife of the first mate aboard the 524-foot Marine Sulphur Queen.

"All I can find out is that she is overdue" the Galveston, Tex. woman complained.

Nearly a score of fast Coast Guard and Navy planes flying from bases in North Carolina, Florida and Mississippi have been scouring the sea lanes from the Virginia Capes to the gulf port of Beaumont, Tex. for two days looking for some trace of the big gray-hulled vessel.

Four of the planes remained in the air all Friday night.

Thorough Search

"There is no possibility of having missed the tanker if it stayed on its track," said one of the search pilots flying out of the naval air station at Jacksonville, Fla.

"We're flying at 1,000 to 1,500 feet," he explained, "and from that height the tanker would look tremendous. Even if it drifted a little off course, we'd have seen it easily."

The Sulphur Queen is a T-2 type tanker. About 500 such ships were built during World War II and over the years 10 of them have broken in two. The last one to snap was the Pine Ridge which went down in 1960 off treacherous Cape Hatteras, N.C., with a loss of seven lives.

Because of these experiences the American Bureau of Shipping required that the T-2s be reinforced with metal straps — two on the upper deck and two on the bottom.

One bureau spokesman said that considering the number of T-2s built, 10 sinkings was not a "bad percentage" considering the pounding a tanker takes in heavy seas.

The Sulphur Queen left Beaumont last Saturday and was due at Norfolk at noon Thursday. She was to have checked in with her Norfolk agent at noon Tuesday and again Wednesday, but no word was heard either day.

One theory was that she perhaps deoured in the Atlantic to miss a storm that kicked up 20 foot seas along the Southeastern Seaboard earlier this week. However, this did not account for her failing to report by radio.

Flight Safety Refresher Course Slated In March

A Flight Safety Refresher Course sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Aviation Committee in cooperation with the Texas Aeronautics Commission, will get underway here March 6.

A campaign to get the names and addresses of all pilots, student pilots and other persons interested in aviation is being conducted in connection with the course. Invitations will be sent to all those who would be in the above three categories.

The course will be instructed by John G. Uranga of the TAC on Wednesday nights, March 6, 13, 20 and 27. It will take place in Lovett Memorial Library and is tabbed to start at 7:30 p.m. and wind up in two hours.

Four subjects will be covered in the course: Civil Aeronautics regulations, navigation, theory of flight and meteorology.

The course is designed primarily for private pilots and will be of particular interest to student pilots.

The course will not be too technical and will be taught with the aid of films as well as vocal instructions.

There will be no charge for the course.

Names and addresses are needed of all interested persons in the area — pilots, student pilots, anyone holding student permits, and anyone else interested. In order that they can be contacted in regard to the course, persons from surrounding towns and rural areas are welcome to attend.

"Buster" Carter is chairman of the CoC's Aviation Committee and members attending a meeting with Uranga Saturday afternoon were Jim Weatherford and Ed Myatt.

Seven More Burglaries Are Cleared Here

Seven more Pampa burglaries have been confessed to police by a trio of teenage schoolboys, running their total to 15 burglaries, since mid-December.

Eight burglaries had been attributed to the three youths up until Friday morning and Friday afternoon police renewed their questioning and obtained the additional confessions.

Latest statements from the boys brought admissions that they had staged two additional burglaries at Pampa Junior High School, St. Paul's Methodist Church, Lamar School, the 88 Bar, Pampa Chamber of Commerce office, and Sam Houston School.

Police Captain Denny Roan said Saturday five of the burglaries were committed one week ago between the hours of 9 p.m. Saturday and 12 Sunday noon.

Captain Roan said two of the youths were 13-year-olds and the other 14 years old.

Roundup of the youthful trio came when the stepfather of a boy, who had bought a defaced coin from another boy at school, reported the matter to police. A chain of questioning of two or three youths resulted in the first confession which led to the other two boys and subsequent burglary confessions, according to Captain Roan.

Places the boys previously had admitted burglarizing included Pampa Junior High School, Youth Center, First Christian Church, Church of the Brethren, Horace Mann School, Soil Conservation Office, Overton Clinic, and Stapleton's Laundromat.

Police have turned the cases over to juvenile authorities and the three youths have been released in custody of their parents.

Weatherman Helps As 'Bucketeers' Collect $2,309.14 In Local 'Brigade'

The weatherman finally smiled on Pampa's Bucket Brigade yesterday and the fourth attempt in as many weeks netted $2,309.14 for the March of Dimes in collections made by more than 100 civic and fraternal club members on downtown street corners.

Last year the bucketeers collected $1,446.48.

Added to the money by the Bucket Brigade will be another $194.19 taken in by High School girl members of the Sub Debs, Kit Kat and Las Cerasas clubs who conducted their Crutch Sale in Pampa's two banks and the postoffice until noon Saturday.

The grand total for all groups was $2,503.33.

The Bucket Brigade members from the Pampa Key Club, Esquire Club, Kiwanis, Knights of Pythias, Evening Lions, Noon Lions, Rotary and Jaycees worked the street intersections from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

NOW LET'S SEE, HOW CAN WE DIVIDE HIM FIVE WAYS? — Loyal Davies, the fellow behind the beef and to the left, finance director of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, is shown here as he looks over a prime beef, "Corky," owned by Bill Skaggs, right. Young Skaggs will enter "Corky" in the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show early next month and though the 15-month-old steer may not be the exact one . . . some such fine steer will be purchased by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce to give to the five-man team which gets the most points in the CoC's two-week membership campaign which starts tomorrow. A kickoff luncheon for workers in the campaign will be held at noon Monday in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn. The second place team in the campaign will receive a prime pig, also to be purchased at the Top Junior Livestock Show. Third place team gets a fryin' chicken and the last place team will get the booby prize of a goat . . . maybe tender enough to barbecue. (Daily News Photo)

CoC Membership Drive Workers To Be Treated To Rare Delicacy

Due to the generosity of a former Pampa, Charles Gunn of Amarillo, workers in the Pampa Chamber of Commerce membership campaign will kick off the drive with a most unusual luncheon tomorrow at noon in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Gunn, part owner of Gunn Bros. Stamps, is providing a Chukar Partridge for each worker attending tomorrow's luncheon.

Gunn and his son, Dan, delivered the partridges, 125, to chefs at the hotel yesterday afternoon and a picture on page three of today's Pampa Daily News shows Gunn and his son discussing preparation of the rare delicacy with the two chefs, E. W. Baker and William Hill.

Gunn said he was donating the birds for the meal as a "gesture of appreciation to the people of Pampa and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce" for all it had meant to him and his firm in the past.

The partridges were raised on the Gunn Bros. Game Farm just west of the Amarillo Country Club.

Gunn maintains his membership in the Pampa CoC.

Ralph Duncan of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce organization, Abilene, will be the keynote speaker at tomorrow's luncheon for campaign workers, held to get the drive underway.

A "whirlwind" campaign is planned and is to be concluded in two weeks if "all goes well." A total of $40,000 is sought in the campaign to take care of the CoC's current annual budget.

E. O. Wedgeworth, chamber manager, said the pre-campaign response has been "excellent" so far and prospects are bright for a successful project.

Loyal Davies, finance officer of the chamber, will head up the campaign which runs through Feb. 22.

Spanish-American Talks Postponed

By STEWART HENSLEY
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sudden postponement of high level Spanish-American defense talks Saturday highlighted growing difficulties in the Western camp over military planning.

Already at odds with France and Canada on NATO nuclear strategy, the United States announced a delay in negotiations with Spain for renewal of American air and naval base rights in that country.

The Defense Department said Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell L. Gilpatrick had "postponed" a scheduled Madrid visit next weekend to give both sides "more time to prepare" for the bases negotiations.

The present 10-year agreement expires next Sept. 26 but there can be two five-year renewals if the two parties agree on terms.

Otherwise, the United States would have 18 months to pull out.

State and Defense Department officials denied reports that the Spanish were dragging their feet on the negotiations. They also discounted speculation that the Spanish attitude might have been influenced by extensive talks they have had with high French military officials concerning increased cooperative arrangements between those two countries.

U.S. officials said the Defense Department simply needed more time to digest the results of preliminary talks which have been held in Madrid. But authoritative sources acknowledged that there apparently is a disagreement over price in military aid the United States should pay to Spain for renewal.

They said initial discussions have indicated the Spanish want $200 to $300 million in free U.S. Military equipment over the next five years. The United States was reported to feel that Spain should share the cost of this equipment and then pay in full for anything she gets during the second five-year period.

Diplomatic speculation that the postponement might stem from the general disarray in the Western camp over strategic planning was led by the administration's handling of the matter. A spokesman for Gilpatrick, as recently as Friday morning, said the deputy secretary planned to reach Madrid as scheduled late Thursday for four days in the Spanish capital. This word was given reporters just before Gilpatrick met at the State Department with Secretary Dean Rusk, chairman Maxwell D. Taylor of the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, and other top administration officials. Gilpatrick denied in Tokyo Wednesday that he had any plans to cancel or postpone the trip.

New Historical Group Is Named For Gray County

A new Gray County Historical Survey Committee has been appointed by County Judge William Craig to supervise the preservation and promotion of historical sites and activities in Gray County under the sponsorship of the Texas State Historical Survey Commission.

Members of the previous committee receiving re-appointment were C. P. Buckler, Tracy D. Cary, and Mrs. George Ingram. New members appointed to serve are Mrs. Katie Vincent, Mrs. Naida Talley Sparkman of Lefors, and Mrs. Thelma Bray, Wade Duncan, Clinton Henry and Joe Shelton, all of Pampa.

In October, 1962, the committee requested a Historic Medallion which was awarded to the Pioneer Cottage, built in 1903 and which has been moved to the park site at the intersection of Starkweather and Yeager Streets.

The City Commission of Pampa has officially designated the area as "Pioneer Park." The Cottage was given by Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Vincent of Pampa, and plans are nearing completion for its restoration and landscaping of the adjacent grounds.

No New Fighting Reported

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI)—Deposed Iraqi Premier Abdel Karim Kassem, who came to power in 1958 by revolt and executions, was shot Saturday by a firing squad of the nation's pro-Nasser revolutionary rulers, the rebel-held Baghdad Radio reported.

The radio, only source of information from Baghdad since young Army and Air Force rebels struck at Kassem's Defense Ministry with Soviet-built jets and tanks Friday, reported no new fighting Saturday.

(But Ankara Radio reported without confirmation fighting in the Iraqi capital between "paratroopers and Communists.")

The rebels claimed Friday that Kassem was dead, but he or his supporters apparently held out most of the day in fierce fighting for their defense ministry stronghold. Friday night, the rebel broadcast said the 600 men in the defense ministry, where the bachelor premier kept an apartment and often stayed, were crushed.

Humorist To Be Speaker For K-F Club

"Bob" Ringer, one of the west coast's reputedly excellent humorists, is to be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Top O' Texas Knife and Fork Club Tuesday evening at the Robert E. Lee Junior High School cafeteria, it was announced by Homer D. Johnson, president of the local club.

An author as well as a lecturer, Ringer has drawn recognition for his platform ability in Hollywood, where good speakers are almost as plentiful as blondes trying to break into the movies. He was rated by "experts" as the third-ranking speaker on the west coast.

A former sales consultant with an office in the movie capital, Ringer made an enviable reputation in training salesmen in the automobile field. It was this activity and the successful way he conducted the sales course which led him to the platform as his main profession.

Frederick W. Brook will introduce the speaker at the Tuesday night meeting. The event will get underway at 7:30 p.m. Deadline for the purchase of tickets at Malone Pharmacy is 1 p.m. Monday. Invocation will be given by J. E. Gunn.

Nursing Home Moves Forward In Meeting

The Pampa Community Nursing Care Home Campaign moved a step forward yesterday at an organizational meeting attended by business and civic leaders at the Coronado Inn when 12 more members were signed up on the Campaign Executive Committee.

The total members on the committee now number 21. The limit will be 60 on the Executive Committee, and 220 on the General Committee.

Because of conflict and prior commitments, a number of citizens who have expressed support of the project could not be present.

Arthur Teed, temporary Campaign Chairman, said "I have never before seen so many people in favor of a project, and this convinces me that Pampa will succeed in this endeavor as she has always done."

"Although we are off to a good start, there are obviously many other business and civic leaders who should and will want to be on the campaign committee, but have been unable to attend a meeting thus far."

A campaign chairman and two vice chairmen will be elected next week by the members of the Executive Committee. Teed will appoint a nominating committee sometime this week, it was reported at yesterday's meeting.

The campaign to raise funds for construction of a 50-bed nursing care home is expected to be completed about April 1.

The Top O' Texas Foundation, which was formed several years ago, is a non-profit organization supporting the project.

The Nursing Home will be self-sustaining and operated with the guidance of a Board of Trustees but under the direct management of a qualified administrator, Teed reported.

Approval of a tax service contract between the City of Pampa and Gray County is scheduled among other items when the City Commission holds its regular meeting Tuesday night in City Hall.

1962—IN HISTORY

Washington Window

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The word reaching Washington on Republican Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio is good. The good word on Rhodes comes via two channels, the political grapevine and reprints of editorials appearing in Ohio newspapers.

Editorial approval of Rhodes' performance in office so far probably is the more important. But the grapevine reports are much more interesting. The grapevine word is that Ohio's new Republican governor is a real pro. He talks the politicians' language. He is an organization man and tough.

The grapevine is describing Rhodes as a Republican Harry Truman. That is high praise for any politician. Harry Truman may have been the best Democratic politician ever to occupy the White House until John F. Kennedy came along. Rhodes is earthy, like HST.

The political Nice Nellies may not embrace Rhodes. But there is the beginning now of a love affair between the political pros and the governor of Ohio. This recalls Leo Durocher's brassy crack: Nice guys finish last.

The reference to Rhodes with the most socko impact is that he is a Republican Harry Truman. The Republican party would be better off today if HST had not been born a Democrat.

The editorial report on Rhodes is that he is doing a man's job on Ohio finances. The great state of Ohio has been living it up under Democratic auspices. Private accounts audited the books and told Rhodes Ohio was about $83 million in the red. The Columbus Dispatch remarked editorially on what happened next; a 9.1 per cent spending cut in all departments. This was to overcome a spending rate prevailing at about $55 million more than income. The Dispatch said:

"Steps, considered drastic by some and practical by others, especially taxpayers who have watched the state go deeper into debt despite high taxes, already have been taken by the new administration to effect solvency.

"The Rhodes administration deserves to be commended for the bold, forthright action it took to bring order to Ohio's financial house."

The Columbus Citizen-Journal was equally enthusiastic, as for example:

"Gov. Rhodes and his finance director, Richard L. Krabach, put the objectives of the state administration into focus with the simple statement that the emphasis will be on saving, not spending.

Emphasis on saving and against spending is developing as an issue that could be big in the 1964 presidential campaign. Rhodes that has been needed in Ohio for seems to be on top of that issue.

'Democracy' Is Talked Before Kiwanis Club

Democracy is a theory, and before it can work most effectively, the theory must be applied as a way of life.
 That was the message given to the Downtown Kiwanis Club Friday by the Rev. Carl Hudson, pastor of the Methodist Church at Miami.
 Hudson is district commissioner of the Santa Fe Boy Scout District and spoke in connection with the local observance of Boy Scout Week.
 "It's all right to fly your flags and write to your congressman about preservation of the Constitution," Hudson said, "but you also are going to have to do something about teaching the theory of Democracy as an actual way of life."
 Hudson told his listeners that there is only one organization in the nation today that really is teaching responsibility.
 "That is the Boy Scouts of America," he said. "This teaching of responsibility needs to be incorporated in a lot of our other institutions if the democratic way of life is to survive."
 Individual responsibility, Hudson stated, is the key to application of the theory of democracy.
 The speaker was introduced by Jay Leath, Kiwanian, and a member of the Adobe Walls Council at the Scout Service Center in Pampa.
 Jack Nichols, principal of Robert E. Lee Junior High School, announced that the Pampa Classroom Teachers Association will hold a public reception for Pampans in the school auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 18. Principal speaker will be Delbert Downing, former manager of the Midland, Texas, Chamber of Commerce.
 Joe Gordon, a Kiwanian for 25 years, was presented with the club's Legion of Honor award.

New City Hall At White Deer Formally Opened

The new City Hall at White Deer was formally opened yesterday noon with the citizens of White Deer and surrounding towns visiting and enjoying a chat with the mayor and other city officials.
 The building consists of seven main rooms. Included are the reception room, a conference room, the secretary's room, a small kitchen, a small utility room and a room for repairing gas and water meters and storing various parts and incidentals peculiar to utilities' maintenance and a small room for storing Red Cross supplies, including a hospital bed, two wheel chairs, several crutches and other items used for convalescents.
 Mayor Robert O. Eastham stated that the remodeling of the building cost the city approximately $11,000, including the office furnishings and heating and air conditioning unit.
 Eastham said he was well pleased with the new quarters and added that the city also had three fire trucks and two ambulances, manned by volunteers. The vehicles are housed in a separate building.
 "Discussion on erecting a new building was thoroughly gone through before deciding on remodeling the present site," Eastham said, "and the city was saved money by doing it this way, as these offices are adequate and will be for years to come."
 The mayor and councilmen were on hand to greet those who visited the building and punch, coffee and cookies were served. Yellow chrysanthemums and red carnations decorated the tables.
 Mrs. Horace Williams attended the registration desk.

Word has been received at the News of the death of Oliver J. Erzen, an employe of Cities Service Oil Co. and former Pampa resident. Mr. Erzen died Saturday of a heart attack in his home in Ottawa, Kan. Services will be held Tuesday morning in Chanute, Kan.

 Anyone interested in hearing Lednicki is invited to attend the Tuesday meeting at 9:30 a.m. in Lovett Memorial Library.

Seven Angus Steers Missing

W. D. Price and Son, ranchers, today were looking for seven head of 600 pound Angus yearling steers which apparently strayed from a wheat pasture near White Deer.
 The animals were on wheat in a field a mile north of White Deer and were last seen by a neighboring farmer last Sunday morning near town.

Rain In Rare Pampa Visit

Something unusual happened in Pampa last night. It rained. The light rainfall started around 7 p.m., let up for awhile and then began falling again about 10 p.m.
 The rain still was falling at midnight and the weatherman at that hour forecast some more light showers for today.
 Other than a couple of "traces" falls early in January, it was the first real rain of the year.

Norm Snead And The Peace Corps

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Almost everyone here except Rep. Victor Wickersham thought it was appropriate for gridiron star Norm Snead to go to work for the Peace Corps.

Snead currently is the quarterback for the Washington Redskins, who for years have been one of the most peaceable corps in professional football.

It was generally felt that his association with such an unbellicose organization as the Redskins would make him ideally suited for an off-season job as a Peace Corps consultant.

The Redskins are noted for hav-perhaps he also will be able to recruit a couple of tackles and maybe a fullback.

Despite the evidence that Snead and the Peace Corps were made for each other, Wickersham objected to his employment, basing his dissent not so much on the principle of the thing as the money.

Considered Fee Excessive

As a Democratic congressman from Oklahoma, he took the position that $75 a day was a somewhat excessive fee for the Peace Corps to be paying a rookie consultant.

In Oklahoma, football teams are more famed for their ferocity than their generosity. It was understandable that Wickersham would be opposed to a policy of Peace Corpsmen at any price. Either because of Wickersham's protest or in spite of it, Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver quickly converted his consultant to an unpaid status, making Snead the Peace Corps equivalent of a dollar-a-year man.

Snead thus became one of the few professional athletes to absorb a 100 per cent pay cut in a single off-season.

Not even George Preston Marshall, the open-handed owner of the Redskins, has been able to go that far. When Shriver leaves the government, Marshall may want to hire him as a consultant.

As for Wickersham, I have no information to indicate whether he ever played football. But judging from the way he was putting the rush on Snead, he could be an all-pro linebacker.

New York Bankers Have New Topic For Discussion

By JESSE BOGUE
UPI Financial Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Bankers of this state, whether they sit in the quiet elegance of an office in a Manhattan tower or among the more spare furnishings of a room in an elderly structure in a small upstate town, have a new and common topic for discussion.

It is a packet of proposals for changes in the state banking law. It is not likely that the state legislature will move speedily on them; much remains to be heard. But the fate of these proposals will be watched by bankers in many other states, some of which have had similar moves toward law changes. New York state's banks have almost $90 billion in assets. Oren Root, state superintendent of banks, notes modestly that they "are a significant factor in the credit apparatus of the United States."

During the last two days of last month, Root and representatives of the state's various types of banks appeared before a joint legislative committee to revise the banking law. Hearings were held at Albany, the state capital. Root keyed his proposals to the note that the state banking structure needed modernization. In his presentation, he had a comment which probably could have been said by the superintendent of banking in almost any state of the union.

Should Wait

There are some, he said, who believe any changes in this state's laws on the banking structure "should await a solution of the problems which exist among the supervisory agencies in Washington... problems of overlapping jurisdiction and contradictions in policy."

It must be recognized, therefore, that New York is not wholly the master of its fate in such affairs, and that, no matter what we do here, we will continue, to a greater or lesser degree, to be subject to policies and practices developed at the federal level.

But he said this was not a "valid argument" against doing what could be done in New York now. He said it might be "years before any effective reform takes place in the supervisory structure in Washington, particularly in view of the great divergence of opinion as to what is the right solution."

It was obvious also from the

Pampa Chamber of Commerce

WHAT IT IS HOW IT FUNCTIONS

WHAT IS THE PAMPA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE?

It is a voluntary organization of business and professional people who are investing their time and money in a community development program to promote the business, agricultural, industrial, and civic well-being of this community and its trade area.

WHAT ARE THE PURPOSES OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE?

To sponsor and encourage any activity that will lead toward the creation of more dollars for more people and improve the overall economic and civic welfare of the community. To provide a clearing house for community ideas, activities, and information; to translate community improvement ideas into action and to always be of the most service to the most people in the community.

HOW IS THE CHAMBER FINANCED?

Through membership dues only.

WHO CAN BELONG TO THE CHAMBER?

Any responsible citizen who is interested in the improvement of the community and is willing to make a financial investment in support of the organization. Dues vary according to ability and willingness to participate.

WHAT IS THE MONEY USED FOR?

To maintain an office and to finance the Chamber's Program of Work.

ARE THE OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS PAID FOR THEIR WORK?

The only paid employees are the manager and office staff, who devote their full time to Chamber of Commerce activities. Officers, directors, committee chairmen, and committee members all serve without pay.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE CHAMBER'S OPERATION?

A Board of Directors consisting of 24 members, determine the policies of the Chamber. Twenty-one members are elected by popular vote of the membership for three-year terms and three are appointed by the President, with the approval of the Board for one-year terms.

The Board of Directors appoint a manager, who is the executive officer of the organization. He is responsible for carrying out the policies set by the Board.

HOW DOES THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WORK?

Primarily through committees. The needs of the community are listed in the form of a Program of Work and committees are named to carry out the various projects. Some projects may be completed in a short time, while others may require several years of sustained effort. The Chamber of Commerce should not be mistaken for a social club. It is an action organization — a business institution dedicated to those projects that will provide a more abundant life for all the people of Pampa and its trade area.

WHAT ACTUAL BENEFITS DO MEMBERS RECEIVE?

Numerous services are available to members, however, the real benefits come indirectly through continuous development of the area. An active, well-supported Chamber of Commerce program provides increased incomes for farmers, more business for merchants and professional people, better workers and greater production for industry and more job opportunities for the working people.

A PLACE FOR EVERYONE

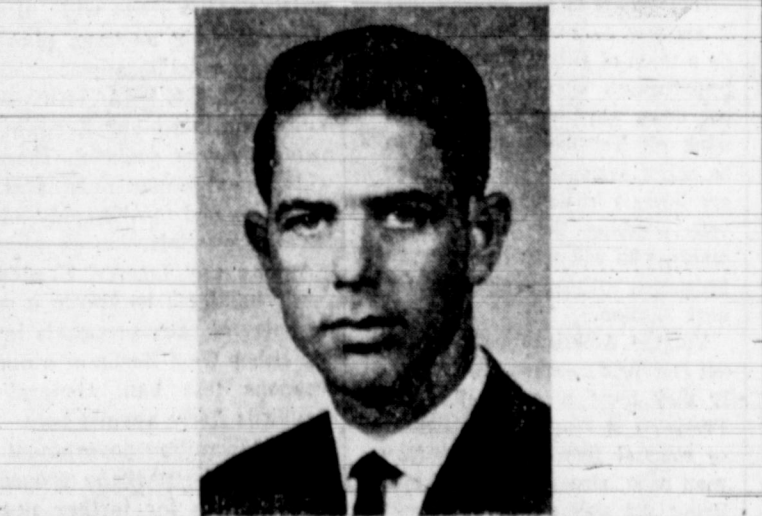

There is a place in the Chamber of Commerce for every type of member — some like to be active in the program through service on committees — others prefer to pay dues and not be active. In either instance, you are needed.

Kennedy-Rocky In 64— What Choice Is That?

With President Kennedy's popularity evidently at a high level, as measured by the opinion polls, there is a considerable tendency in some quarters to suggest that he may be almost unbeatable in his 1964 re-election bid.

Republican politicians no less than Democrats are counted among those taking this view.

It is interesting therefore that the President himself, by all accounts, does not hold to this notion.

He knows, of course, what the polls show. He is told, too, what any inquiring reporter is told: that in another election his Catholicism will not be a serious factor against him. He understands that his youth is largely eliminated as an issue.

Yet he is said to think of 1964 as another horse race.

Professional politicians are naturally more cautious than outsiders looking in. But Kennedy and his intimate political establishment believe the reasons for caution are ample.

At the outset, they regard New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller as the likely Republican nominee. The judgment is that this automatically makes New York, with its 43 electoral votes, a tougher fighting ground than in 1960, when Kennedy whipped Richard Nixon there by 383,000 votes.

Rockefeller's somewhat liberal coloring is seen, furthermore, as making him highly palatable to many California Democrats and Independents, who often swing away from Democratic candidates. Aided by the religious factor, Nixon carried his own state by 35,000.

Michigan and Pennsylvania went for Kennedy in 1960, but they are now under Republican governors. The President is concerned with organizational difficulties in both places.

Still worse is the immediate Ohio prospect. Kennedy lost the state by a whopping 275,000 and former Gov. Michael DiSalle was buried last fall by more than half a million votes.

Kennedy has not forgotten, either, that he won big Illinois by a skinny, disputed 8800 votes in 1960.

In the South, the President lost Mississippi's eight electoral votes and six of Alabama's 11. They went to Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia. The Ole Miss racial situation raises the odds that Kennedy may in 1964 lose all the 17 votes these two states now have after 1960 census revisions.

Further deflection—in Louisiana—is rated possible but not likely. Despite the President's concern over his party's organizational problems, history indicates that in presidential combat such matters are not often decisive.

But his aides say Kennedy roots his caution in more than this. They picture him as still persuaded that, his own popularity notwithstanding, this country is nearly as divided politically today as it was in 1960—when his actual vote margin was less than 120,000. If Republicans generally were as hopeful as the President is cautious, then 1964 might not turn out to be the Kennedy walkaway so many now seem to predict.

The real problem is, if it's a choice between Rockefeller and Kennedy—what's the choice?

Worst In The World

In a full page editorial, Life magazine urges immediate tax cuts—observing that "taxpayers have a good word for our tax system. It is one of the worst in the world."

At the same time, Life argues that four conditions must be met if a cut is to be accomplished with a minimum of risk. These are in summary: That the President rigidly enforce his announced policy of holding down nondefense spending with a balanced budget as the ultimate objective; that monetary policy should be tailored to resisting inflationary pressures and the decline in our gold reserves; that tax cuts should be made in a series of stages, over a period of years; and that, finally, the whole tax structure should be reformed in wholesale fashion. Life concludes: "If these four conditions are met, responsible men can give wholehearted support to tax cuts. We need a better tax system. This is the year to start getting it."

To say the perfectly obvious, there will be heavy controversy over the four conditions Life emphasizes, and just what they will specify. But the basic idea behind this program is inescapable. Tax cuts which resulted in inflation that, by further reduction in the value of the dollar, would more than offset the savings, must be avoided at all costs. And all cuts should bear a relation to a subsequent general overhaul of our antiquated tax system.

Down South

By THURMAN SENSING
Nashville, Tenn.

A GAMBLE WITH AMERICA'S FUTURE
Incredible, cynical, and illusory. These are the only suitable words to describe the Kennedy administration's proposed $98.8 billion budget. This proposal constitutes the biggest financial outlay in the country's history, either in peace or warfare. And Mr. Kennedy has the audacity to tell Congress: "I have felt obliged to limit severely my 1964 expenditure proposals."

The proposed budget is so irrational in character that it is difficult to make a straightforward criticism of it. This budget is a spend and elect budget, a budget that is an exercise in politics not fiscal planning.

If Mr. Kennedy's proposed tax cuts were accepted by Congress, the country would have—as Sen. Harry F. Byrd pointed out January 17th—"the greatest peacetime deficit in history." Thus the $98.8 billion budget is a prescription for national bankruptcy.

To begin with, it is being widely and accurately described as a "gambler's budget" or a "Las Vegas" budget. Mr. Kennedy has made the guess that with tax cuts the "growth rate" of the United States will soar and revenues will increase. But this is an assumption, not a prudent calculation. Such an assumption cannot be made. Time and again, changes in the economy produce dips that cannot be accounted for in advance.

For Mr. Kennedy to base his budget on great expectations of economic growth makes no more sense than for the average citizen to buy a $6,000 automobile in the belief that a maiden aunt may die and leave him the money. An individual's family economy cannot be based on guesswork. Most certainly, a nation's finances cannot be developed on the basis of a gamble.

This aspect of the budget aside, there is still the matter of appalling waste and spendthrift planning. Mr. Kennedy says he is attempting to hold the line. But the proposal reads otherwise. The President wants the federal government to get into the field of commuter transportation for big cities—to the tune of $500 million. He proposes that the nation build a high-voltage power line from the Pacific Northwest to Southern California for $35 million more than a private group is ready and willing to spend to construct such a facility. He asks that the Alliance for Progress receive a quick shot in the arm of $200 million. Overall spending on Latin giveaways would amount to $1 billion. The foreign aid total he suggests is $3.75 billion.

Increased spending can be noted all along the line. Funds for the Rural Electrification Administration program, projects that had their origin a generation ago in New Deal times, would jump $80 million. A new $1.2 billion federal aid to education program would be established. Space spending would reach an astronomical $6.1 billion.

The suspicion is growing in the country that a critical look needs to be taken at space spending. Landing on the moon—an administration goal—may satisfy more of a publicity man's purposes than a scientific need. In addition, space spending is rapidly getting to be part of the annual pork barrel. Various areas of the country are competing for space facilities the way they have sought river and harbor improvements in the past.

This budget is so fantastic that it appears to have been written by a team of young New Frontier braintrustees who were told to put down anything they could think of. Yet the budget has to be taken seriously because there are liberals in Congress who will vote anything the White House wants, who will seek to pass such legislation with no thought but the next election.

Yet the American people have not lost their common sense. Surely they must recognize that the President is playing with figures—colossal figures. The average man who struggles to make a living and stay out of debt must see the terrible peril in a budget based on illusions of new revenues, on deficits that mean crushing debt for the people of this country. For the President to use the word "frugality" in connection with his financial program is an insult to the intelligence of the American people and those who represent them in Congress. What he proposes could wreck the nation.

Removing Berlin Wall Is Khrushchev's Lure In New Packaging of Old Red Proposals

WASHINGTON—Premier Khrushchev is dangling a glittering lure as part of a proposed deal for a package agreement involving both West Berlin and a ban on nuclear testing.

The Kremlin ruler's come-on gimmick is an offer to do away with the Berlin Wall.

The price demanded for eliminating this hated East-West barrier is acceptance of a series of far-reaching concessions by the U.S., Britain and France. In effect, they amount to bowing to Khrushchev's key terms on both Berlin and a test ban, as follows:

- (1) Allied troops in Berlin to be put under United Nations command, and the city to be "neutralized." Two months after the UN command is set up, the Berlin Wall would be torn down.
- (2) Access routes from West Germany to West Berlin to be placed under United Nations control, with passage guaranteed by Russia and the U.S.
- (3) The Allies to give de facto recognition to East Germany by accepting troops of this Communist satellite as guards on the internationalized access routes from West Germany.
- (4) Agreeing to the Soviet's test ban plan limiting on-site inspections to three a year to determine if there is any cheating.

This package deal was presented several weeks ago to U.S., British and French disarmament negotiators in Geneva. This is the first disclosure of it.

State Department authorities believe there is a direct connection between this sweeping scheme and the Russians' recent sudden suspension of the seemingly promising Washington test ban negotiations and request that they be shifted to Geneva. U.S. officials anticipate the Reds will attempt to inject their package plan into the Geneva deliberations.

BACKSTAGE REACTION—The outlook on this latest Kremlin maneuver is very doubtful. There is wide disagreement over it among the Allies and top Kennedy administration officials.

Among the former, France, already has let it be known it wants no part of any proposals involving either West Berlin or a nuclear weapons test ban. General de Gaulle is flatly against both.

The Macmillan government favors using the package proposition as the basis for further negotiations.

So does Charles Stella, acting chief U.S. negotiator in Geneva. He has recommended this policy. That position also has the support of President Kennedy's three main foreign policy advisers—Secretary Dean Rusk, McGeorge Bundy, special White House assistant, and Dr. Walt Rostow, head of the State Department's Policy Planning Council.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff have not yet been consulted.

But on the record so far, they are opposed to the principal provisions of Khrushchev's glamorized proposal.

Several months ago, in a position paper, the Joint Chiefs took a

Question Box

(We invite questions on economic and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question: "In view of the fact that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that Sunday closing laws are secular rather than religious in origin, why should there not be a law preventing merchandising on Sunday?"

Answer: There should be no law because the state would be invading the province of the individual to determine a course of action as long as he is not using aggression against others.

There are several groups advocating Sunday closing laws. For at least 200 years, there have been religious groups which attempted to compel people to refrain from commercial activities on Sundays. Some of these contend such activities keep persons from attending church on Sunday; some contend it violates the commandment of keeping the Sabbath.

But there are several religious groups which contend the Sabbath is on Saturday (the seventh day of the week). These include the Jews, the Seventh Day Adventists and Seventh Day Baptists. The members of these groups, who have voluntarily refrained from business activity on Saturday are discriminated against by any law which prevents their pursuing their business activities on the day they do not regard as the Sabbath.

Another group which advocates Sunday closing laws consists of businessmen, who either voluntarily keep their places closed on Sunday or who want to close on Sunday but keep open in order to compete with other stores which are open on Sundays.

Again this is discriminatory, for they have the right to operate their businesses as they see fit, but they do not have a right to compel others to conform to their own ideas.

If Sunday closing were truly desired by a large number of persons, they could obtain it without resort to law. Their means would be to refrain from patronizing any establishment which opened on Sunday. Apparently the bulk of people want certain stores to be open on Sundays or they would not continue to patronize them.

White House is looking for a well-known executive to head the domestic peace corps that the President has asked Congress to approve. Apparently he is confident that will be done, and the search already is on for its director. Foremost among those who have been sounded out is Clark Kerr, president of the University of California. But he turned the job down. Under consideration are two mayors—Richard Lee of New Haven, Conn., and Arthur Naftali of Minneapolis. The new peace corps is to be separate from the foreign peace corps. It will be an independent agency directly under White House authority, and a name is still being sought for it.

Former UN Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, 1960 GOP vice presidential candidate, has rented a house in Georgetown, historic section of Washington. This has given rise to reports that Lodge has accepted a job in the Kennedy Administration, possibly with former Secretary of State Christian Herter, who is head of the trade liberalization program.

Investigation Demanded In Bay of Pigs Fiasco

By ED DELANEY

A resolution has been introduced in the Senate by Barry Goldwater of Arizona, calling for a full and thorough investigation of the Cuban "Bay of Pigs" invasion, April 1961. The Senate Republican Policy Committee also has launched a probe into that ill-fated fiasco. Immediately there were cries from the Democrats that the refractory Republicans were endeavoring to inject partisan politics into the issue. So much the better if it will establish who has been lying to the American people. Because some persons have been lying about that disgraceful episode in American history. No amount of verbal sophistry from the White House or from Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy can absolve the administration from full blame for the tragedy of that invasion.

It has been authoritatively asserted that the attempt failed, because the air coverage by U.S. planes, which the Cubans say was promised them, was withdrawn on orders of the President. Bobby Kennedy says, in an interview appearing in U.S. News and World Report: "I can say unequivocally that President Kennedy never withdrew U.S. air cover. There were never any plans made for U.S. air cover, so there was nothing to withdraw."

In a previous issue of the same publication, Manuel Penabaz, a veteran of that invasion and one of the ransomed prisoners, stated unequivocally that air coverage by U.S. Air Force was promised them by American officers. Whether those officers exceeded their authority to make such promises, undoubtedly would be revealed by a congressional investigation. Penabaz says the freedom fighters definitely were told the "air cover" would be back of them and they could not fail. "We did not fail," asserted that man who participated in the invasion, "we were betrayed."

They were betrayed by whom? Let us have all the facts. Another leader in that project was Antonio de Varona, a former Cuban prime minister. He asserts that a colonel of the U.S. forces at the camp where the Cubans trained in Central America, told them emphatically that the invaders would have full air coverage. Many others who were in that invasion expedition say the same. Goldwater says he talked with the President just after the invasion and he was given the impression that air cover for the invaders was part of the original plan. As a general in the Air Force Reserve, Goldwater is not unfamiliar with the necessary tactics for such operations.

In a wholly unconvincing statement to the press, when these conflicting versions of the Bay of Pigs fiasco were being brought into discussion, the President said the confusion is in the use of the words "air cover," without making clear that United States Air Force cover was not promised. The planes of the invaders, he said, were "flown by pilots not based in the United States and the planes were not American." Actually they were American planes given to the Cubans for their planned invasion, together with ships and all munitions they had.

The impression conveyed by Mr. Kennedy is that it was these planes of the Cubans which were to provide the air cover. The whole invasion force, we are to assume, was in the hands of the Cubans and under the command of their leaders. In that way the United States could not be accused of invading Cuba. Very well, let us accept that. Cuban thority and by what right did the President of the United States presume to give a command to alien forces—which were not a part of the United States military forces? He has admitted he did give the command which resulted in the failure of the invasion.

There has been far too much lying in connection with the whole Cuban situation because of the political repercussions. The blame for that Cuban tragedy cannot be put on the Eisenhower administration. That is the difficulty the present administration finds so embarrassing. It is to be hoped the Republicans will delve to the bottom of the mess, even though it causes more embarrassment for some.

Yesterday and Today: Many of us remember the kindly reminder of America's beloved poet, Carl Sandburg, when he described the Labor temples of yesteryear. Most of them were located on the second floor of some poor low-rent building in typical American towns across the nation. Today the old halls have been almost replaced with newer quarters. But Labor today makes its real pitch in Washington, where the various national unions operate from massive new and impressive headquarters buildings. They are located in the heart of the District near the Halls of Congress and are staffed with highly skilled operators, public relations men, and first class lobbyists. Congressmen and Senators are constantly checked on their official activities and are told if they don't vote "right" they will be opposed at the next election by a candidate who will. The cost of these modern Labor Temples runs into millions of dollars and in many cases are more imposing than some of the new government buildings.

The following age brackets show the United States is certainly a young nation, regardless of all the talk of longevity. There are 35 million Americans between 5 and 14; 24 million between 15 and 24 and 22 million in the 25 to 34 year group.

The first United States coins were authorized and minted in 1792 when the mint was established and provided for the issuance of the following coins:

GOLD—Eagles: Each of the value of ten units or dollars, half eagles, quarter eagles.
SILVER—Dollars: Half Dollars, quarter dollars, dimes and half dimes.
COPPER—Cents and half cents.

Since the original act there have been many changes in the laws governing coinage and in the coins themselves. At various times coins in the 3-cent denomination have been issued, first authorized in 1851. A 20-cent piece was coined for the first time in 1875. And 2-cent pieces were issued from 1854 to 1873. The 5-cent coin was introduced in 1866. The Mints no longer coin or issue United States gold coins.

The Almanac

Today is Sunday, Feb. 10, the 41st day of 1963 with 324 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning star is Venus.

The evening stars are Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Aquarius.

On this day in history:

In 1933, a new feature in telegraphic service was introduced, with the delivery of "singing telegrams."

In 1937, Chinese Communists offered to end their 10-year civil war with the regime of Chiang Kai-shek in favor of a "united front" against the Japanese invaders.

And it is interesting to note that the billion-dollar Ford Motor Co. was founded in 1903 with an actual cash investment of only $28,000. At the time, Henry Ford would have been happy to cut you in on the enterprise for a few hundred dollars.

MALE HELP WANTED — The

No Such Thing As Average Day In The Texas Senate

55TH YEAR

THE PAMPA DAILY NEWS
SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1953

By VERNON SMYLLIE
Texas News Syndicate

AUSTIN—Come with me to the Texas Senate and let's watch. There's no such thing as a typical day. Every day is different. So let's just pick a day and see what happens.

This was Thursday, January 21—the eleventh day of the regular session of the Fifty-Eighth Legislature.

Lieutenant Governor Preston Smith's gavel raps the Senate to order at 10:15 a.m. The roll is called. All senators except one answer present. The presence of a quorum is announced. The Senate is in session.

There is an invocation. It is delivered by the Rev. W. H. Townsend, the Senate chaplain.

By unanimous consent, the senators dispense with the reading of the Journal's account of yesterday's proceedings. Then, on the motion of Senator Frank Owen of El Paso, the senator who is not present is granted a leave of absence for today to attend to important business.

Now is the time to receive messages from the House of Representatives. There is one. It is read. It informs the Senate in two terse sentences that the House has passed House Concurrent Resolution No. 10, congratulating the President of Mexico on Mexico's national frontier program. That's the program, you may recall, to convert Mexico's border areas adjoining the United States into a gigantic tourist showcase.

There also is one message from the Governor's office. It, too, is read. It, too, is terse. It's an appointment—an announcement of the selection of Charles W. Barfield of Houston to be branch pilot for the Galveston Bar and the Houston Ship Channel for a two-year period. The message asks the Senate's advice, consent, and confirmation.

There is an air of stiff formality as messages from the House and the Governor's office are read. Now the atmosphere becomes more relaxed as the senators introduce guests.

There are two introductions.

Senator George Parkhouse introduces the students of the Secretary's Workshop of the Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the Texas Education Agency. Senator Owen presents Mrs. Hubert Hudson, former Senate parliamentarian and the wife of a former senator.

Now the Senate considers House Concurrent Resolution No. 10. It is read and adopted.

Then comes a peppering of reports—nine in all—from chairmen of standing committees of the Senate. Senator A. M. Aiken Jr.

reports that the State Affairs Committee recommends passage of Senate Bills No. 3, No. 12, and No. 86. Senator Grady Hazlewood reports that the Finance Committee recommends passage of House Bill No. 150. Senator Bruce Reagan reports favorable recommendations by the Banking Committee for Senate Bills No. 121, No. 110, No. 63, No. 20, and No. 19. These recommendations follow an almost identical form. By the time the last one is read, you probably could recite it yourself.

Now Senator Hazlewood stands.

He makes a motion that House Bill No. 150 not be printed. This is purely a mechanical matter to speed passage. The motion is approved unanimously.

This brings up introduction of new legislation. Senator Parkhouse introduces a bill to authorize cities of 600,000 or more population to create a metropolitan transit authority. It is referred to the Committee on Counties, Cities, and Towns.

A parade of new bills follows. Senator Charles Herring introduces a bill relating to labor arbitration. It goes to the Committee on Labor and Management Relations. Senator A. R. Schwartz offers four bills—one concerning the Brazoria County Water Control and Improvement District—Brushy Meadows, one dealing with the Brazoria County Water Control and Improvement District—Lake Alaska, one providing exceptions to the requirement of fishing licenses, and one concerning a refund of motor fuel taxes paid by transit companies. The first two bills go to the Water and Conservation Committee. The next to the Game and Fish Committee, and the last to the State Affairs Committee.

the rules must be suspended again. They are. Then comes the third reading and final passage.

Now the lieutenant governor signs House Concurrent Resolution No. 7. It expresses the Legislature's thanks for service to the Texas Tech Marching Band. There are two resolutions—expressing welcome to visitors and two memorial resolutions.

At 11:34 a.m., Senator Herring calls for an executive session of the Senate so nominations by the governor may be considered. The Senate gives unanimous consent. The gallery is cleared and the doors are locked.

Twenty-four minutes later, the executive session is ended. The Senate has approved the appointment of Pat Bullock to the Board of Pardons and Paroles. J. Manley Head has been approved as a member of the Good Neighbor Commission.

It's 11:39 a.m. Senator David Ratliff makes a motion that the Senate adjourn until 11 a.m., Monday, January 28.

The motion carried.

In a matter of minutes, the Senate chamber is deserted.

World Of Religion

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Protestant churches across the nation will join today in the 41st annual observance of "Race Relations Sunday."

Sponsored by the National Council of Churches, Race Relations Sunday is intended to stimulate self-examination by local congregations of what they are doing—and might be doing—to erase barriers to human brotherhood.

A "Message to the Churches" which will be read from many pulpits says that belief in white superiority "is not, as is commonly supposed, merely a social theory."

"Racism must be understood for what it is—a religion competing with the Christian faith," asserts the message, prepared by Dr. George D. Kelsey, professor of Christian ethics at Drew University, Madison, N. J.

The U.S. Supreme Court will hear oral arguments Feb. 26-27 on two cases challenging the constitutionality of religious exercises in public schools.

The cases originated in Maryland and Pennsylvania. They deal with practices which are very widespread in American schools, such as daily Bible reading and recitation of the Lord's Prayer.

The court's ruling in these cases is likely to be much broader in impact than last June's prayer-in-schools decision. That dealt with a unique situation in New York, where state officials wrote a prayer for students to recite.

After hearing oral arguments, the court will take some weeks to deliberate in its ruling, which may be handed down in May or June.

A major experiment in "shared time" education is under consideration by Roman Catholic leaders and public school officials in Chicago.

The plan under study calls for construction of a new Catholic high school close by a $3 million public high school.

Catholic youngsters would take English, social studies and religion courses at the Catholic high school, and would go to the public high school for their mathematics, science, foreign language and vocational subjects.

Art Is Valuable In School Program

By DAVID NYDICK
UPI Education Specialist

Art, as a part of the school program, is usually considered a cultural subject. It even has been criticized as an unnecessary extra. Actually it is, and should be, a part of the total educational program.

Art is most interesting and valuable when it combines its cultural purposes with the academic program. This approach helps individuals to understand and appreciate art as a part of their daily activities. Art is a visual language that can be read and understood by them. The school program provides students with the opportunity to think and work creatively at their own level using a variety of materials.

A good art program is much more than a check list of things to do throughout the year. It is based on the daily classroom situation. It brings to the children experiences of emotional and intellectual quality. These experiences encourage creative work.

Typical Lesson

Let's take a look at a typical lower grade lesson. The students use cloth scraps, yarn, assorted papers, paste, and scissors to develop a picture of winter games.

This project grew out of a study of weather. The class was studying clouds, temperature and the fall of snow. The snow was used to develop interest in the picture which was called "warm clothes for winter snows."

A unit of this nature is an excellent example of a total program. The basic subject involved was science. Arithmetic was involved with the temperature. Language arts and reading were involved in research. The art project was used to give meaning to what had been learned. The students, in using the art materials, were developing motor skills (cutting), color sense, etc. This inclusion of many subjects is called correlation.

This type of program leads to a real appreciation of art. The children begin to realize that through art they can express themselves. They begin to recognize that art can bring feeling and interest to their regular activities.

Understand Aims

An understanding of the aims and methods of the school art curriculum is important to you as parents. Your youngster's activities at home can lead smoothly into the school's program. Supply your child with a variety of materials so that he can learn to use them. Naturally, he must follow some rules with such items as paint and clay. Do not make these rules so strict that he will hesitate to use the materials. You probably can arrange a spot where he will not do harm if he is messy. Perhaps a smock or old clothes and a large sheet of paper on the floor will answer your problem.

Art has two purposes. In school it supplements other areas of the program. Probably its greatest value is in the pleasure it creates. As adults with increasing leisure time, they can enrich their lives with the beauty and creativity which can only be expressed through art.

OTTAWA—Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, admitting that the dispute with the United States over nuclear weapons policy would be an issue in the forthcoming election campaign:

"Our policy is to ensure a strong Canada, economically and politically, whose freedom will be ensured without a loss of sovereignty or domination by any other country."

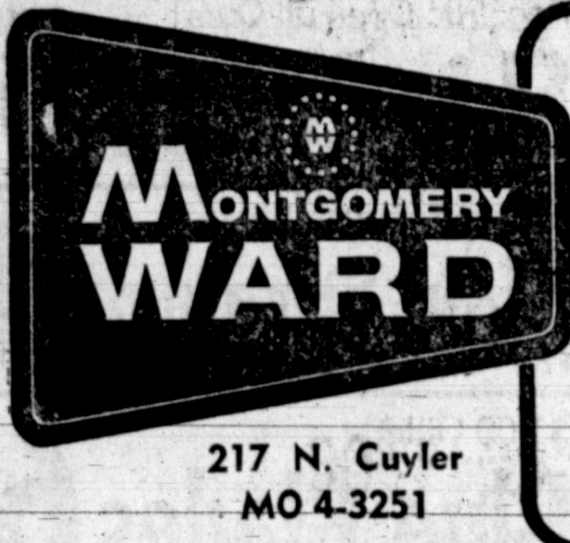

Oil Exports Of Mexico Increase

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Mexico exported close to four million barrels of petroleum and petroleum products last year, over a million barrels more than sold abroad during 1961.

Petroleum imports along Mexico's border with the U.S. declined. Figures for the first nine months of 1962 show Mexico exported 3,450,000 barrels of petroleum, and year-total figures are expected to approach four million. In 1962 2.5 million barrels were sold abroad.

Petroleum imports for 1962 declined by a quarter-million barrels. Most of this was to areas along the northern border, where transportation shortcomings have made it impractical to deliver domestic petroleum products.

Harvesters Roar To District 3-AAAA Crown

Pampa Rambles Past Monterey For Victory

Pampa's Harvesters wrapped up the Dist. 3-AAAA Championship with a 51-42 victory over Monterey Friday night in Lubbock's Coliseum.

Monterey, the defending champions of the district, made a game attempt to slow the Pampa winning machine, but was gobbled up by the Harvesters in the second half.

The victory gives Pampa a season mark of 27-1 and extended the Harvester winning streak to 22.

12-0 In District

The Harvesters, with a 12-0 district mark, have two games left on the regular schedule with Amarillo and Plainview.

Monterey, the only team left in the running with Pampa prior to Friday's tussle, is tied for second place with Plainview. Both teams own 8-4 district marks, four games behind league-leader Pampa.

Pampa, enjoying a four game lead with only two games left, will meet the winner of Dist. 4-AAAA in a bi-district game following the conclusion of the regular schedule.

Monterey threatened to snap Pampa's winning streak and keep the race alive for first place as the Plainsmen led, 28-23, at half.

Pampa put on a blistering second half rally that overcame the first half deficit.

Gordon Balch paced the Harvesters in the opening minutes of the game with seven of Pampa's 12 first quarter points.

Pampa, bowing to the defensive efforts of Monterey, trailed at the end of the first quarter, 12-15.

Gordon Balch took over the scoring chores for Pampa in the initial period as he bucketed seven of Pampa's first quarter points.

The Harvesters and the Plainsmen took turns leading in the first quarter with the score being knotted on two occasions, 4-4 and 5-5. Monterey rallied in the closing seconds for the three-point first quarter advantage.

Swanson took over the scoring duties from Balch in the second period as the 6-0 guard added seven points.

The Plainsmen padded their lead to six points midway in the second frame, 20-14, with five minutes left in the quarter.

Pampa pulled within three points, 19-22, as Randy Matson cashed in on the 1-1 situation for two free throws with two minutes remaining.

The Lubbock team traded Pampa three field goals for two in the final minutes to lead, 23-28 at half.

The Harvesters, who have trailed at half in four district games this season, rallied for 15 points in the third stanza to take over the lead from Monterey, 38-35.

Two baskets by Kreis and one by Balch in the first minute of play in the second half moved Pampa into the lead, 28-28.

Monterey tied Pampa at 31-31 and 33-33 before the Harvesters started moving away to a three point lead at the end of the third quarter.

Kreis, with two baskets in the first minute of the final stanza, was joined by Matson with one basket giving Pampa six straight points in the opening minutes, pulling Pampa to a nine-point margin.

Trade Baskets

The teams traded baskets until the last three minutes of the contest when Pampa went into a semi-stall, leading 47-39.

Matson gave Pampa its biggest lead of the game, 10 points, on a tip-in with 1:52 left.

Pampa, showing team balance in the scoring column, was led by Kreis with 15 followed by Swanson with 14.

Bob Schmid, 6-5 center, was high for Monterey with 16.

The Harvesters host Amarillo Tuesday night in the next conference game for the Pampans.

In a "B" game preceding the varsity tilt, Monterey's Lancers downed the Shockers, 58-50.

FORWARD WALL — Pampa's front three basketball players — Gordon Balch, Randy Matson, and Gary Sikes — give the Harvesters one of the best rebounding teams in the state. Matson, 6-6½, is averaging over 20 rebounds a contest. The threesome play a vital part in Pampa's bid for the state championship. (Daily News Photo)

Nelson Speeds Past Southern In Will Rogers Indoor Games

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Former Olympic silver medal winner Eddie Southern and Cliff Cushman of Texas will have to live on their laurels, for they did nothing but eat dust from younger runners in the Will Rogers Indoor Games here Saturday night.

West Texan Ted Nelson, who runs for Texas A&M, ran away from the field in the special 500-yard dash, winning by seven yards over Randall Walker of Northeast-Louisiana State in the five-minute race.

Ralph Alspaugh, former Texas sprinter, led for two laps before fading to third during the torrid finish by Nelson. Southern ran fourth and Cushman last in the five-man race.

Southern was a contender until the stretch where he faded badly and lost third place to Alspaugh. Cushman never was in the race. Both Southern and Cushman are in the Air Force.

You could have thrown a blanket over the field at the finish of the 60-yard dash, but Dennis Richardson of Abilene Christian stuck out his chest to win in 6.2. It was close all the way as seven sprinters zipped down the track in a straight line. Richardson didn't lunge in front until the final step when he nipped SMU's Billy Foster.

Richardson's 6.2 tied a meet record set by Foster last year.

Jerry Dyes of Abilene Christian both were clocked in 6.3.

John Roderick, an SMU freshman, won the 60-yard high hurdles in the record time of 7.4.

Texas Aggies Crush TCU

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Texas A&M pulled away in the second half to crush winless Texas Christian 85-69 and keep a glimmer of hope alive for the Southwest Conference Basketball title.

The win left the Cadets with a 4-3 conference record. It was the seventh loss in as many starts for the Frogs.

A&M, paced by guard Bennie Lenox's 18 points and 17 each by forwards Jerry Windham and Gerald Wodard, built up a 20 point lead mid-way in the second half.

Guard Bobby McKinley was the TCU scoring leader with 17 points. Archie Clayton, the 6-10 center, bucketed 13 and forward Don RGosick hit 12 for TCU.

Arkansas Rips Baylor Bears

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — The in and out Arkansas Razorbacks were definitely "in" Saturday afternoon as they walloped Baylor 75-65 and kept alive their hopes for second place in the Southwest Conference basketball race.

Skippy Coffman took the opening tip for Arkansas and drove in for a bucket. And 2-0 was the closest Baylor came the rest of the afternoon.

Arkansas Coach Glen Rose swept the bench in the second half.

Tommy Boyer drove in 31 points including 11 of 12 from the free throw line to lead all scorers and keep his seasonal free throw average above 90 per cent.

Ronnie Phelps' 15 was high for keep his seasonal free throw average above 90 per cent.

Ronnie Phelps' 15 was high for the losers.

Harvesters Play Haltom City In Bi-District

With Haltom City leading Dist. 4-AAAA with an 8-0 district mark, Pampa will probably meet the Ft. Worth team in a bi-district clash the last week end of this month.

Haltom City must win one of its two games left to take the Dist. 4-AAAA crown outright. Haltom City has already clinched a tie for the crown and is expected to win its remaining two games.

The winner of the clash between these two districts will meet the winner of a battle between the district winners of 1-AAAA and 2-AAAA in a regional tilt. The regional winner will go to the state tournament.

The starters for Haltom City are: guards Billy Arnold, 6-1, and Sammy Peterson, 6-0, forwards Larry Lake, 6-3, and Dickie Lanier, 6-2; an' center Barry Williams, 6-4.

Williams, the biggest man on the team, is a sophomore and weighs 180 pounds as compared to Matson, 6-6½ and 220 pounds.

The game will be played on either Feb. 22 or 23.

Texas Batters SMU Mustangs In The Dugout... No. 16

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas crushed Southern Methodist 77-62 Saturday night to complete the first half of the Southwest Conference basketball chase with a perfect 7-0 record and a stranglehold on first place in the loop.

The Longhorns, with five men scoring in double figures, jumped into the lead late in the first half, stretched the margin to 7 points by intermission and pulled away from SMU in the final 20 minutes.

Mike Humphreys was high point man for Texas with 15 points, but John Paul Fultz, Mutt Heller, Larry Franks and Joe Fisher added 13.

In this assignment I have considerable going for me. The Indians have a young and strong pitching staff and three recruits with excellent high minor league credentials. The new faces are Tony Martinez, a shortstop; Max Alvis, a third baseman; and Vic Davalillo, a center fielder.

Baseball men who have seen a lot of Martinez tell me that he'll make a third baseman or outfielder out of Woodie Held, which would be quite all right with me.

Martinez, a Cuban with a wide range, was the International League's most valuable player batting .287 for Jacksonville. He lived up to the rave notices about his fielding when I saw him in the Puerto Rican Winter League, where he was Caguas' MVP.

Davalillo, a Venezuelan transformed from a pitcher to an outfielder only a year ago, was a riot in the International League with Jacksonville, leading the wheel in five offensive departments including batting with .346.

Davalillo showed the way in triples and stolen bases, stressing his speed. He was the top hitter in the Venezuelan Winter League this winter with a better than .400 average. He covers tremendous acreage in center field, is faulted only on his arm, which is described as a little erratic. I'll settle for that and we'll work on it.

Alvis, who is out of the University of Texas, came quickly last summer with Salt Lake of the Pacific Coast League. He batted .319 with 25 home runs and 91 runs batted in. He is very aggressive.

While it would be highly unusual to bob up with three star rookies in one year, I point out the remarkable first year performances in 1962 of Richie Rollins and Bernie Allen of Minnesota and the Los Angeles Angels' Bob Rodgers and Dean Chance. We could get lucky.

Tebbetts' Task To Keep His Indians on Warpath

By BIRDIE TEBBETTS
Cleveland Indians' Manager As told to HARRY GRAYSON

My main mission in Cleveland is to keep the Indians on the warpath and not let them bog down in mid-season as they have for the past three campaigns.

Roth Snares Amateur Title

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Young Nancy Roth of Hollywood, Fla., turned long-batter hitter Saturday to beat hard-driving JoAnne Gunderson 2 and 1 for the Palm Beach women's amateur golf title.

Miss Roth, 23, turned the tables on the Providence, R. I. school teacher known as one of the longest hitters in women's amateur golf in a tight match decided by the trees dotting the breakers golf course here.

Each golfer found herself in trouble because of the trees several times, but on one occasion, a coconut palm helped Miss Roth. On the 16th, Miss Roth slapped her second shot into the palm, but the ball bounced back to the middle of the fairway, setting up a neat shot to the green. Although Miss Gunderson won the hole, Miss Roth said, "I would have been in big trouble if it hadn't been for that tree."

The 23-year-old Miss Gunderson, national women's amateur champion, was a slight favorite to win, and Miss Roth, who racked up her third tournament win in less than month, had been seeded second. They finished the qualifying rounds one and two. Miss Roth was fresh from victories in the Daugherty at Fort Lauderdale and the women's four ball at Hollywood, where she won with Margo Michaelis, also of Hollywood.

BOOSTER SHOT — Big Wilt Chamberlain seems to be getting a boost from Dave Budd of the New York Knicks as he leaps high to net one for the San Francisco Warriors at the Garden in New York.

HIM AND HIS BIG MOUTH

Dallas Texans Are Likely To Move To Kansas City

DALLAS (UPI)—Dallas Texans owner Lamar Hunt said Saturday he was "99 per cent convinced" the Kansas City would be the home of the American Football League champion Texans by May 15.

Everything hinges on a Kansas City drive to sell 25,000 season tickets by that date. Otherwise, Hunt indicated, the Texans won't move.

"I had rather play to empty stands here than in Kansas City," Hunt said in a 90-minute news conference during which he explained factors involved in what he admitted was a "calculated risk" decision to talk out loud about moving the team.

Hunt said "it took them a long time to convince me... and I hope I'm not wrong... but I am 99 per cent convinced that they will succeed."

A move to Kansas City would remove the "sorest spot" of conflict between the AFL and its long-established rival, the National Football League, whose Dallas Cowboys have competed bitterly against the Texans for patronage in a war that neither side was winning.

Sales Here

Hunt admitted that season-ticket sales here, even with a championship team, had not increased "substantially enough" to indicate the Texans could anticipate financial success.

This he blamed on the two-team situation and other factors, including what he said was a failure to "realize the effects of free television (of rival NFL games)."

Hunt said he believed the Texans had outdrawn the Cowboys "slightly" at the gate, but he described this as a "shallow victory."

Hunt emphatically denied that Cowboy owner Clint Murchison Jr. had any direct connections with the move to Kansas City, particularly as to offering any financial inducement.

"We have talked over pro football problems in general together several times in the past three years, but nothing about any specific move by either of us," Hunt said.

Points Out

He pointed out that last season five AFL cities outdrew the Texans financially on a dollar basis—San Diego by 59.5 per cent, Boston by 63 per cent, Denver by 69 per cent, Houston by 82 per cent and Buffalo by 92 per cent—although only Houston had as good a win-loss record (11-3).

Asked what he would do about moving the franchise if Kansas City sold only 20,000 or 22,000 of the 25,000 season tickets stipulated, Hunt said:

"That is a 'gray area' and only time will tell exactly what we would do, but we are not bound to move unless they get at least 25,000 paid sales by the May 15 deadline."

He admitted that a decision to stay here after so much publicity about moving would "hurt us" at the gate. But, he said that was the "calculated risk" he had to take.

Hunt admitted that the Internal Revenue Service's "Hobby Law," which keeps individuals or firms from showing repeated losses (more than four years) as a tax writeoff, was a major factor in his decision to move.

Under the law, the IRS could label the business a "hobby" and force payment of the written off taxes of the past four years.

Outdoors In Texas

By WILLIAM CLAYTON United Press International

Game wardens are the end of the chain of command on several of the big legislative outdoors issues this year, all of which appear to mean more work for the conservation officers, as many are called now.

If the Game and Fish Commission merger with the Parks Board is approved, wardens may have to use commission automobiles and some of their time in parks housekeeping duties.

If the bill is approved to give back trespass arrest powers to the wardens, they will start getting many calls from landowners wanting unwelcome visitors off their land.

If someone sponsors and gets through the legislature a bill to give game wardens arrest powers for water sports violations, wardens will have a new area of work to fit into their busy schedules.

Texas has now about 200 wardens and conservation officers. In the budget requests of the commission for the next two-year money period, there is a request for 10 more, or a 5 per cent increase. The commission also wants its wardens to get paid a bit more next year to cover cost of living raises.

Wardens' duties include patrol for enforcement of game and fish laws, supervision of coastal oyster and shrimp fisheries and sport fishing activities and the usual report-making that accompanies such a policing job.

But in addition, they are called on to do such tasks as collect water samples for pollution studies... speak before civic groups and school classes... gather census information on game... and, often and informally, to mediate trouble between various groups on our doors problems.

W. J. Cutbirth, assistant director of administrative services for the commission, said those duties would not be interrupted or changed radically by the bills pending in the legislature. He said he feels the current force of wardens working at their current rate of pay can handle the changes.

More Pros Register For Colonial Meet

FORT WORTH (UPI)—Sixteen more players were added to the field Saturday for the 18th annual Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament, May 9-12, making the field include all the current tour champions but three.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Jack Nicklaus and Ben Hogan previously had accepted invitations.

The latest list included Jack Burke, Bill Casper Jr., Bill Collins, Bruce Crampton, Jacky Cupit, Gardner Dickinson Jr., Doug Ford, Al Geiberger, Bob Goalby, Lionel Hebert, Tony Lema, Gene Littler, Billy Maxwell, Dave Ragan Jr., Doug Sanders and Bo Wininger.

HORNS OF A DILEMMA—Lorine and Jerry Tricomi try unsuccessfully to carry the husband's prize moose head into their Chicago home. The antlers of the animal, which Tricomi shot in Canada, measure 68 inches and are too big to get through door. Jerry plans to have a larger door made.

SKILL TO SPARE
 by Dick Weber

38-The 1-2-8-9

I'd just as soon never have the 1-2-8-9 spare facing me.

Any way you shoot it, there's always a chance you'll chop a pin and not get them all.

This is another spare that is sometimes shot from the western side, moving to the left instead of the right on the approach. Follow the Sparemaker and hit the 1 pin. The ball should take the 9. The 2 is supposed to get rid of the 8, but as I said, there's a narrow margin of error.

This leave is usually the result of a bad ball, one that probably dropped and went flat — didn't have enough roll.

NARROW margin of error.

Tigers Open Spring Drills

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI)—The Detroit Tigers became the first major league club to begin spring training Saturday with the start of their early camp at Tigertown.

Thirty-nine players went through a two-hour drill under a warm sun and temperature of 70 degrees.

The camp is composed mostly of minor league players, though pitcher Frank Lary, who missed most of last season because of a sore arm, and catcher Gus Triandos, acquired from the Baltimore Orioles in a trade, are due in shortly for some extra work.

Among the early starters was Jake Wood, 25-year-old infielder who slumped to .226 last season and lost his second base job to Dick McAuliffe.

Manager Bob Scheffing said he would try Wood at shortstop, as a fill-in player behind Chico Fernandez, but Wood said he wanted a chance to regain his second base job.

The initial workout was a light one. The players, under the direction of Scheffing and Don Lun, the Tigers' new director of minor league operations, did little more than play pepper practice, run and catch.

Sports Patrol

By OSCAR FRALEY UPI Sports Writer

STUART, Fla. (UPI)—The men whose business is baseball are getting ready today to head south for spring training and in every camp they will run the gamut of human emotions.

There will be veterans hoping to hang on for one more year and rookies brightly optimistic of at last hitting it handsomely in the big time of the majors. Sore-armed pitchers will work and wonder but as it gets under way, at least, hope will burn brightly in all of them.

Yet it is one of the most bitter periods of the year for a man who still feels he should be among them but long ago gave up his dreams of diamond greatness.

at Vero Beach, laid off a while and then gave it one last hungry try at St. Paul.

"They operated on the arm but it just never came back," he said stoically, the hurt showing only in his eyes. "If they hadn't operated, it might eventually have come around. But now it's all over."

Spoooner at 31 still looks fit enough for action. But a sore-armed pitcher who didn't last long enough to make his score, has to work to keep four daughters. Bartending in this tiny hamlet mid-way up the East Coast of Florida is his answer.

But his smile becomes a bit strained and fixed at this time of the year. Except for the fates, he, too, would be getting ready to join the locker room reunions. Even the veterans hoping to hang on for another year have brighter hopes than Spoooner. He has none.

Arnold Palmer Moves In On Phoenix Tourney

By HAL WOOD UPI Sports Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Arnold Palmer blasted a powerful 243-three-wood seven feet from the pin on the final hole Saturday then calmly sank the eagle putt to grab a one-stroke lead over arch-rivals Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus in the third round of the $35,000 Phoenix Open Golf tournament.

Palmer, seeking his third consecutive championship in this event, posted nines of 33-35-68 to go with his previous rounds of 68-67 for a 203 total — 13 under par for the 54 holes played.

Nicklaus and Player each birdied the last hole to post 204 totals. Gardner Dickinson and Don January came next at 205, followed by second round leader Jay Hebert and Johnny Pott at 206.

Palmer already winner of the Los Angeles Open this year, might have pulled further ahead of the pack except for an incident on the 13th hole. Just as he prepared to putt, and there was complete silence in the gallery of about $3,000, a girl giggled.

Three Putts

Arnie then three-putted the hole for a bogey and followed that with another bogey on the 14th when his approach went over the green.

But he made up for everything on the 18th. He blasted a 250-yard tee shot on the par-five, 523-yard hole. Then he pulled out his three-wood and rapped the ball the remaining 240 yards straight down the middle to the green. The ball landed on the front edge and rolled up about seven feet to the right of the pin exactly hole high.

While the gallery, then swelled to about 6,000, stood in hushed silence he rolled in the putt that gave him the one-shot lead.

Palmer had four birdies in addition to his eagle, getting down a 25-footer on the 12th hole.

Nicklaus was out in 33, back in 34, for a fine 67. And Player had 34-34-68. The National Open champ had about a 50-foot putt for an eagle on the 18th but the ball was slightly off line.

Chips From 80

Dickinson, playing with Palmer, pulled into contention by chipping into the cup from 80 feet on the 18th hole for an eagle that gave him a 68.

January was out in 31 Saturday with five birdies on the front nine. His longest putt was from 12 feet.

Hebert, who led the field by one stroke going into the third round, got off to a fast start by birdieing three of the first four holes. But he followed that with three consecutive bogeys and wound up with an even par 72.

The final round of the 72-hole event is slated for Sunday.

Clay-Jones Fight To Be Televised

NEW YORK (UPI) — The William H. King Enterprises of Louisville, Ky., have obtained closed circuit telecast rights to the Cassius Clay-Doug Jones heavyweight contenders' fight at Madison Square Garden, March 13, Harry Markson announced Saturday.

Markson, managing director of Madison Square Garden Boxing, Inc., said: "Intensive interest in the bout by many cities throughout the country prompted the King organization to apply for the closed-circuit rights."

Markson stressed that the Wednesday bout will not be televised in any fashion in the New York City area. He said also it is the first important Garden fight not televised to homes throughout the nation since the Jake Lamotta-Tiberio Mitri middleweight championship bout on July 15, 1950.

Illinois Whips Michigan State

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI)—Big Ten basketball leader Illinois chilled a late Michigan State rally Saturday to defeat the Spartans 91-86 for its sixth consecutive conference victory without defeat.

The victory gave the fourth-ranked Illini a commanding 6-0 record in league play and a 14-2 overall slate. It was the third consecutive conference loss for the Spartans who slipped to a 3-5 record.

The Spartans led for the first nine minutes of the game. Bob Starnes sank a field goal to tie the score at 16-all and then dropped in a free throw to put the Illini in front to stay.

The Illini moved ahead steadily, closing with a 44-35 margin at halftime and increased their lead to 14 points at 63-49.

Starnes paced Illinois with 20 points and Bill Small had 19. Sanders' 29 was tops for the Spartans.

SUCCESSFUL COACH—Ernest Sylva, coach of the Carver Wildcats, will take his team to the state tournament for colored high schools to be held in Prairie View on Feb. 15. The Wildcats won their district and posted a 19-6 season record. (Daily News Photo)

"I should never have let them operate on the arm," he grated bitterly while almost automatically polishing the mahogany of the bar behind which he presides. "I might still be up there."

His name is Karl Spoooner and the odds are that you still remember him when he was a fledgling in the chain of the now Los Angeles Dodgers.

Shows Promise

Spoooner's future glittered with promise a mere eight years ago. The husky kid from Oriskany Falls, N.Y., could throw the ball through a brick wall and he was tabbed as sure-fire major league timber even in his first season with Hornell of the Pony League in 1951.

They moved him around rapidly, giving him all the experience a youngster needs to earn his way into the majors. In 1952 he started with Miami and shuttled then to Newport News and Greenwood, Miss.

By the time he was 20, Spoooner was with Elmira and Pueblo and the following year, 1954, they had him on the threshold of the big leagues at Fort Worth. Before the end of the season he was up with the Dodgers because the brass knew that no longer could they keep him down on the farm.

Pitches Two Shutouts

It was no mistake, that move, as Spoooner demonstrated immediately. For the chubby-cheeked young man pitched shutouts in his first two games and set a record with 27 strikeouts in two consecutive games, fanning 15 in a game against the Giants and coming right back to strike out 12 against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"It was great knowing you were set with the big club in the spring of 1955," he reminisced. "But I cut loose before I was really ready, too enthusiastic, maybe, and I threw my arm out."

Spoooner still had a 10-6 mark that season but the ominous handwriting was on the wall. He couldn't throw that spring of 1956

GENE LITTLER AND CADDY IN SCOTLAND "Sometimes the caddy can give the golfer helpful hints."

2-Caddy or Pro?

With automobiles, golf in colleges, money for instruction and access to courses, American kids of today have it better than the youngsters of my generation.

At the risk of being branded an old fuddy-duddy, however, I must say that I don't believe they learn golf as thoroughly as we who had to caddy for spending—and sometimes eating—money.

Not that I'm against professional instruction. On the contrary, I don't believe that anyone can be a really good golfer, regardless of how great his potential, without sound advice from a good pro. Even the greatest got it early in their careers and still can't do without the pro. They turn to a teaching pro from time to time to iron kinks out of their games.

A caddy is around golf and golfers most of his out-of-school time. Caddies see the form that brings results and instinctively adopt it. At the same time they see and reject bad form as being unproductive. Any time a caddy shows promise, some pro is bound to take an interest in him—and the boy gets the instruction he needs to develop his game.

Sometimes, as in Scotland where bag-toting is a lifetime occupation, the caddy knows so much he can give the golfer helpful hints. It was the sound grounding in basics I got as a caddy that gave me the enthusiasm I have for golf.

World Boxing Meeting Opens

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The first world boxing convention opens here Sunday with delegations from the Philippines and Mexico leading a drive to bring the New York state Athletic Commission and the European and British boxing federation into the World Boxing Association.

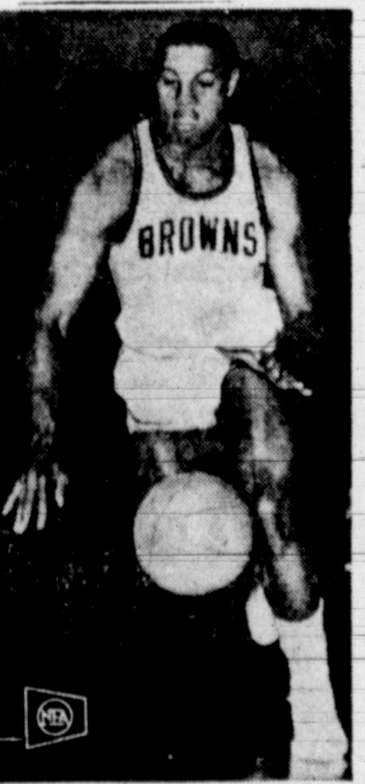

Latin America will hold the delegates' attention through Wednesday and global scope discussions will run Thursday through the Saturday, Feb. 16 closing. Some 30 top boxing officials, promoters and managers were expected, according to local organizing committee head Ramon G. Velazquez.

Velazquez said Cuba will not be represented "because they don't have professional boxing there," although Cuban fighters periodically appear on cards here.

Velazquez predicted the Latin American sessions will result in the formation of a Latin American boxing union which will include all Latin American countries. An existing "union" includes Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay.

The Latin American union would "not only regulate boxing in its zone, but also establish a rating system and promote Latin American championships." He said backers of the plan are "especially interested in promoting boxing in the smaller Latin American countries."

There are "good chances" that the British, European and New York groups will join the WBA, which became the successor of the National Boxing Association at a Tacoma, Wash., meeting last year, Velazquez said. The California Athletic Commission, the Oriental Boxing Federation and the present Latin American Union now belong to the WBA, he added.

HIS DAY IN COURT—Ernie Davis, who sat out the 1962 season of the football Cleveland Browns because of a blood disorder, drives in toward the basket in a game against Catholic Youth Organization coaches in Shaker Heights, Ohio. The former All-America is with a team of Cleveland football players.

Helium Controversy Flares

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall will take steps Monday to get the government off the hot spot on its billion dollar helium conservation program but there is some doubt he will succeed.

If he doesn't, Congress and the courts could become involved.

At stake is $155 million in "unjustified profits" in 22-year helium purchase contracts signed in 1961 with four companies by the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines. But the contracts had no renegotiation or other recapture clauses, and that is where Udall is on the grid.

Congress and the Budget Bureau insist he must persuade the companies to accept such clauses, but they, with valid ironclad contracts in hand, are in no mood to risk their multi-million dollar helium plant investments or other uncertainties inherent in renegotiation.

On Monday, the companies will parade one by one for preliminary talks into the office of John M. Kelly, assistant interior secretary for minerals. Udall will be present, and the die could be cast for a toe-to-toe battle or a love feast. Udall likes the contracts which were awarded on a noncompetitive basis. He thinks the government got a good bargain. And so do the four contracting companies — Northern Natural Gas, Cities Service, Phillips Petroleum, and Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co., jointly with National Distillers and Chemical Corp.

But the General Accounting Office — GAO, the congressional watchdog over federal spending, threw up its hands in horror.

Here were contracts awarded without bids, it told Congress and President Kennedy, under which helium, a gas that had been wasted by the companies in processing home-heating natural gas, was now going to be bought by the government for $2 a thousand cubic feet — 62.5 billion feet over a 22-year span — at an "unjustified" profit of $155 million.

This, it said, was in addition to $138 million in legitimate profits, plus a lot of special allowances such as $27 million to pay the companies for natural gas shrinkage as the helium is extracted. It called the $2 price a "processing" fee and said Interior like an innocent babe blindly accepted it without requiring the companies to produce cost data or other pertinent factors.

The companies and Udall are armed with facts to disprove this. But Udall still faces the renegotiation problem. Should he hit a stone wall, he could cancel the contracts. But if he did that where would the government get helium which is vital to missile development, medicine, welding, electronics research, etc.?

At a press conference Wednesday, Udall staunchly defended the contracts but admitted Interior "made a mistake" in not insisting upon renegotiation clauses so the government could recover funds over and above "an equitable return."

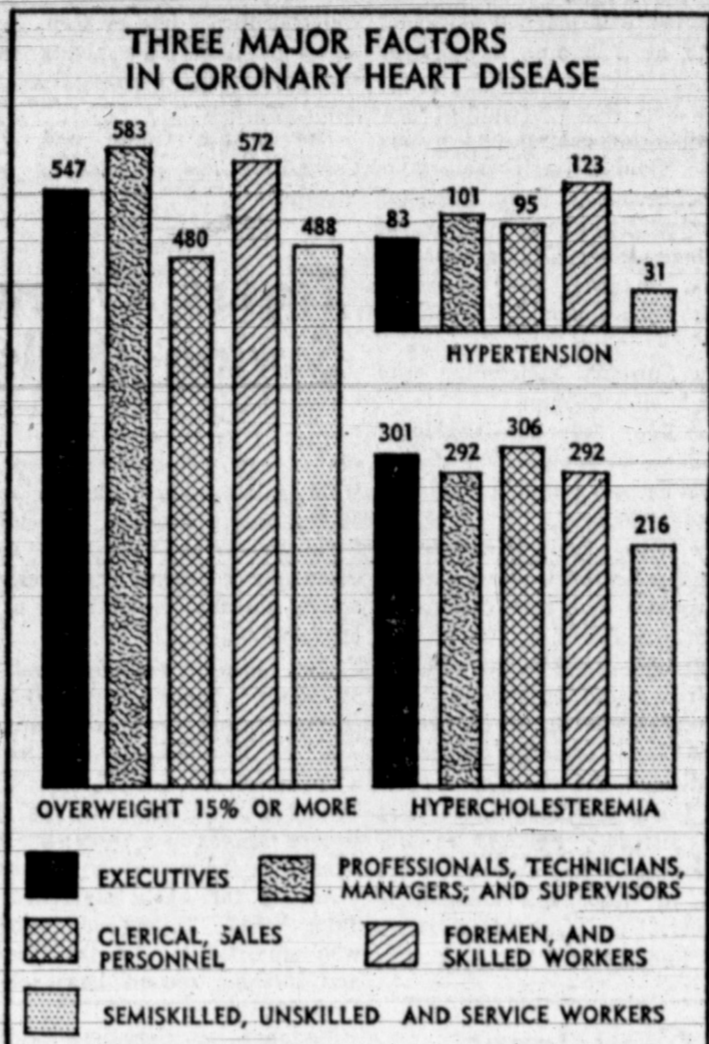

He said that at the conferences Monday "We will take a pretty strong position—I believe the companies are entitled to an equitable return on this monopoly gas, but no more."

Asked what would happen if the companies turned down renegotiation, Udall replied: "We'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

Asked "What is it that causes the oil industry to get such a good deal from the department?" Udall rejoined: "If you could see my mail you wouldn't think the oil industry was favored."

The four companies have access to the biggest helium reservoir in the world in the Hugoton Field area of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. If the government didn't deal with them — as Udall explained when he was called on the congressional carpet in 1961 — it would have to build its own plants and pipelines, then obtain helium by right-of-domain condemnation.

The cost, and time lost would be astronomical, and Congress undoubtedly would buck. There advisers think they made a good deal.

DEADLY TRIO—Overweight, hypertension (high blood pressure), and hypercholesteremia (excessive serum cholesterol) are three major factors associated with a risk of developing coronary heart disease. Combinations of any two—or of all three factors—are associated with a 50 per cent risk before age 65. "Patterns of Disease" publication study is based on prevalence of abnormality per 1,000 males, in the 40-59 age group studied.

IT MIGHT AS well be Spring on the calendar for it certainly is in our head. Can't think of anything worse than a case of Spring Fever in mid-winter, can you? All of those golfers out on the Country Club greens Tuesday afternoon... that group of picknickers in Central Park on Wednesday afternoon... and the Pampa Harvesters starting baseball practice didn't help our pre-mature case one bit. The surest cure for what ails us is a foot of snow over a layer of ice... and that just might happen too before this column is read. But in the meantime, we dream of crisp cotton frocks... picnics in the park... vacation time... planting Spring bulbs... sitting on the patio on a lazy Spring evening watching the stars sparkle in the sky as a gentle breeze stirs the leaves in the trees and wafts over our way the aroma of a steak sizzling on the barbecue grill.

With the calm patience of the woods I wait for leaf and blossom when God gives us Spring. —John Greenleaf Whittier.

THERE IS A cordial invitation being extended to Pampa citizenry by the Pampa Classroom Teachers' Association to be guests at a reception and to hear Delbert Dean Downing of Midland, humorist-philosopher, on Monday evening, February 18 at 7:30 p.m. in Robert E. MATURE PARENT

Dear Mrs. Lawrence: We recently told our 4-year-old boy that we're expecting another child. At about the same time another boy in his play group began to push him around. Now he has resumed bed-wetting. We are sure that it's his worry over the coming baby and his trouble with this older boy that accounts for this. We are giving him as much love as we can to help him.

ANSWER: Other people's love is fine — but to credit it, we all need a little self-respect.

So I remind you that your small one's self-respect may have been depleted by his discovery that he has less control of his world than he thought he had. He thought himself the only possible pebble on your beach. He thought he could count on human kindness. Now he's not sure of either of these things. He faces intrusion by a baby in the home he expected to remain unchanged. He's experiencing his powerlessness to control another human's aggression.

By losing control of his bladder, I think that he's telling us that he's suddenly got scared of his uncontrollable world.

So, in addition to giving him "love," I'd like to see you start work on repairing his shaken sense of self-respect.

Give him the time he needs to button his own pajamas. Show him how to fold up your table napkins after meals. Let him spread his toothbrush with paste. Give him as many opportunities as you can that will bring back into control little parts of this big world that has so suddenly turned unmanageable.

"Love Is Not Enough" is the title of a book by Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, one of this country's great child psychoanalysts.

American Legion Auxiliary Has Business Meet With Mrs. Shelton

The American Legion Auxiliary met Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. Joe Shelton, 2121 Williston with eight members present.

Meeting opened with pledge to the American flag and repeating the preamble to the constitution of the auxiliary.

During the business session, Mrs. Cordie McBride reported that during the past month dinner was served to a member during the loss of a loved one; and a telegram was sent to another member when she lost her sister.

Mrs. J. M. Turner, membership chairman, reported 41 members have paid their dues with only six more members needed to make 100 per cent for this year.

The group voted to buy dime cards to give to all members to fill for the remainder of the year as a money-making scheme to take care of finances.

The group voted to bring health and comfort articles to the next meeting to be sent to the Children's Home in Panhandle as there are many children of veterans in the home.

Following a report from the Council of Clubs given by Mrs. L. K. Stout, the auxiliary voted to help sponsor Melvin Munn's Teaching Machine display sometime in March.

Mrs. Katie Vincent dismissed the group with prayer. Refreshments were served during the social hour.

Parent-Teachers' Association Records February 17 Red Letter Day In Annals

February 17 is a red letter day in the annals of parent-teacher associations for it was on that day in 1897 that the organization, now known as the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, was born.

This infant organization was to grow to great heights, nurtured by a group of women who believed the child to be the hope of the world. The women were inspired and led by Alice McLellan Birney of Georgia and Phoebe A. Hearst of California, who called together the, then, National Congress of Mothers.

They would have been pleased had 50 attended from over the United States but, to their amazement and delight, more than 2,000 came. The women left the meeting fired with enthusiasm to return home and organize mothers' clubs — and they did. Today the far-flung organization numbers more than twelve million women and men in some 47,000 units. The Texas Congress, organized in 1909, numbers more than 766,000, with some 2700 units.

The objectives of that first meeting are the objectives of PTA's today: the welfare of children and youth in home, school, church, and community. Many activities, which are accepted as part of the community and school system today, were started or encouraged by the PTA. They include the hot lunch program, health examinations, prevention of juvenile delinquency, raising the number and quality of the nation's schools and teachers, better teacher salaries and tenure, school bond issues, improved school equipment, health, school libraries, parent education, scholarships, moral and spiritual development — the list is almost endless as each new chapter is added.

Whether by speeches, pageantry, tributes, project dedications, special ceremonies, the membership will call attention this month to the PTA founding and growth.

Said Mrs. W. J. Danforth of Fort Worth, president of the Texas Congress, in her February message to the membership: "Part of our American heritage is the founding, by those pioneer women, of this great folk movement. . . Each generation adds its own chapter. . . I pray that ours will be a worthy addition."

Parisienne Designer's Clothes Make Any Woman Look Like Lady

PARIS (UPI)—Pierre Balmain, whose clothes would make almost any woman look like a lady, hiked up the waistline and widened shoulders in his spring styles today.

Balmain, 46, a polo player and student of architecture before he took up designing, makes clothes so elegant (and expensive) that women plan to hold onto them for years.

Therefore changes in style at his salon near the George V Hotel are slow and easy. His skirts still just barely cover the knee in his spring collection, his shoulder is wider, but round and soft through cut, not from padding.

This new shoulder was noticeable, to the chattering fashion reporters, and Balmain friends at the showing when for example, paraded in a brown-and-white tweed straight coat, casually slung over a white jersey sleeveless sheath dress, its top slightly bloused.

Balmain also firmly belted his spring clothes. But while avant-garde designer Pierre Cardin boldly belted suit jackets, Balmain's belts discreetly were hidden. His straight suit skirts, not the jackets, had belts, of the suit fabric or of leather. This eliminated that half-finished look that keeps some women from taking off a suit jacket.

Balmain's suit blouses therefore were tucked inside the skirts, and usually sleeveless with soft long bows at the neck. Unlike other Paris designers, Balmain's jacket linings did not match his blouses of printed silk and chiffon.

His suit jackets, ending just below the waistline, were loose at the waist and had medium-sized collars and small lapels. Each suit jacket had a large button or bow fastening right below the bustline for a high-waisted effect.

The crowd admired his color combinations such as a turquoise heavy silk suit with an olive green sleeveless linen blouse trimmed with turquoise.

Ruth Millett Women Understand Secret Language

Part of the misunderstanding between the sexes comes from the fact that women don't speak the same language as men—when they're talking to other women, that is.

Oh, it's English all right, and the words make sense, but the real meaning. . .

So for the benefit of men, here's a little guide to certain phrases they may overhear being exchanged between women:

When one woman asks another, "How old do you think she is?", she means, "I bet she's much older than she lets on."

When a woman begins a conversation with another woman with, "I couldn't help but be amused," you can be sure some other woman is going to get a good going over.

When a woman says "I simply can't wait to hear what you thought of her house," she really means, "I think her taste is atrocious, don't you?"

There's one thing about women's conversations with women. They may not always agree with each other, but they never misunderstand.

means. "I think her taste is atrocious, don't you?"

When a woman asks, "What do you think of her husband?" she's actually telling what she thinks about him—not much.

When a woman relates the news that another woman's husband has just been given a big promotion, or that some other bit of good fortune has come her way and adds, "It couldn't have happened to a nicer person," the unspoken conclusion to the sentence is, except

Ownbey-Archer Say Nuptial Vows

Announcement is being made of the marriage of Miss Nancy Lena Ownbey and James Calvin Archer on Monday, January 28, in a double-ring ceremony performed in Miami, Okla.

Mrs. Archer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ownbey of Spearman. Mr. Archer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl G. Archer, also of Spearman.

For her wedding, the bride wore a blue wool suit with Winter White hat encircled with a veil. Matching Winter White accessories completed her ensemble. She carried white gardenias atop a white Bible, which was a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Archer was graduated from Spearman High School in three years. She was a drum major, head twirler, member of the high school band, worked on the school newspaper staff and was crowned Miss Hansford County in its annual rodeo celebration. She has just completed her freshman year at Oklahoma University, where she pledged Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority.

Mr. and Mrs. Archer are at home at 9310 Waverly Drive in El Paso, where both are enrolled at Texas Western College.

Fluffing, sometimes called "shedding," is natural in most new carpets. Loose bits of pile show up on the surface. Regular vacuuming will soon remove these loose bits, and fluffing does not affect the quality of the carpet.

'Dark Continent' Forms Topic For PWA Meet

The Presbyterian Women's Association met Wednesday morning in the Educational Building of the church with Mrs. R. W. Orr and Mrs. Earl Casey as hostesses during the coffee hour.

Mrs. Homer Johnson, presiding at the business meeting, asked members to prepare for World Day of Prayer, which will be held March 1. She also asked that members look for the film "Question Seven," sponsored by the United Church Women, which will run from March 7 to the 29th in a local theater.

In presenting a program on the soul and future of Africa — "Light From The Dark Continent," Mrs. Berton Doucette said, "When you study Africa and observe the rapid events taking place, you have a 'front seat on history.' Nothing in Africa is simple, only complex. There are many differing peoples, tribes, languages, customs and religions, kinds of government, climate, soils, stages of development, levels of education. That is why everything pertaining to Africa seems so contradictory and confusing. Things are happening fast on this Dark Continent and what was fact yesterday is a fallacy today."

Mrs. Doucette continued, "Of the continent's estimated 250 million people — 86 million are considered Mohammedan; 35 million Christian; 75 million associated with primitive religion. The rest — 54 million are labelled 'no religion.' In a showdown battle for the soul and future of Africa — Islam, Communism and Christianity are fighting it out in the towns and villages."

"You may ask 'What part does religion play in the life and development of this great continent?' The answer is 'A great deal.' The Christian churches have introduced a better way of life to these peoples, has helped to remove ignorance and superstition in some areas. The Churches have raised the status and importance of African women in their tribes. At least, in those tribes they have been able to reach."

"It is not surprising that the story of religion in Africa is chiefly the story of missions and missionaries, for from David Livingstone to Albert Schweitzer, with many a lustrous name sprinkled between, missionaries have written a story of heroic devotion to

Dear Abby...

Look For Other
And Better Breeds
By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You keep saying in your column that boys want GOOD girls, so how come when you go out with a boy he tries to get as much as he can from you? I am 17 and don't understand it.

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: If this is your common experience with boys, then you are going out with only common boys. There are other and better breeds. Look for them.

DEAR ABBY: Every Saturday my 17-year-old daughter baby-sits from ten in the morning until six in the evening for a Mrs. Thatchroof. She has an adorable three-year-old, well-behaved boy. The last three Saturdays Mrs. Thatchroof's sister has brought her noisy, ill-mannered four-year-old to Mrs. Thatchroof's, leaves him there and goes off with her sister. The four-year-old teases the younger boy and my daughter spends eight hours being a referee. Don't you think if my daughter must care for two children she should be paid double? Should she ask Mrs. Thatchroof? Or should her sister be asked? Would it be proper for my daughter to do the asking? Or should I?

DELAWARE AVENUE

DEAR DELAWARE: Your daughter should speak to Mrs. Thatchroof privately. If she has invited her sister to deposit her son at her home to be cared for, Mrs. Thatchroof should pay for it.

DEAR ABBY: I need help. When I met Johnny he had no mustache, and when I married him he had none. All of a sudden, two years later, he decided to grow one. I think it makes him look too old. (He is only 25). He thinks it looks good. When I tell him to shave it off, he says I'm jealous and don't want other women looking at him. This isn't true. I don't like the feel of it, either. Am I wrong to demand he shave it off?

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Don't let a little mustache come between you, but

Discussion On "Youth Of Today" For Merten Home Demonstration Club Meet

The Merten Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. at the Courthouse Annex with Mrs. Jack Prather as hostess.

Mrs. Bob Brandon, chairman, called the meeting to order and led the group in the Club prayer. Mrs. V. Smith and Mrs. Bob Brandon gave an interesting program entitled "Youth Today—Tomorrow's Adults."

Some of the things mentioned were "religion is a basic part of most youth's education"; "the very base of our society rests upon the educated man in every walk of life"; "educated mothers, plus educated fathers are the two most important factors in the adequate growth and development of their children"; and "our youngsters told us in the White House Conference study, 'We want a safe place to let off steam, a safe place to play"—a safe place to play meaning educational play periods." They ended the program with his statement "Our young people are what we make them."

During the business session, the next meeting of the Council was discussed and everyone was reminded that it will be in the Annex, February 12, at 1:30 p.m. There will be a Valentine Party with everyone bringing a "home-made" valentine. The group was reminded also, of the Annual FFA Livestock Judging Contest and that the Council handles the selling of food during those days.

The committees made their reports after which the recreation leader, Mrs. Don Malson, led a game called "I Went Shopping".

The hostess served refreshments from a Valentine decorated table.

Attending were: Meses. Bob Brandon, V. Smith, Jack Prather, T. G. Groves, W. L. Groves, Robert Sailor, Don Malson, Elbert Tempin, and J. Lloyd Larimore.

The Mature Parent

Withdrawn Criticism Often Opens Eyes

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

A young woman infatuated with a dashing, attractive man-around-town sought psychoanalytic help for the tensions involved in their relationship.

In session after session with her doctor, she struggled to strip the man of the fascinations spun around him by her imagination. He would say, "If two other women have had to divorce him because they couldn't get along with him, what makes you think you could take marriage to him? ... If he spends so much time golfing and night-clubbing, he can't be very deeply committed to his work. ... How real can be the feelings of a man who hasn't seen his son in three years. ..."

But such comments only increased his patient's resistance. She would cry, "His wives didn't know him as I do! And he is devoted to work! He just works so hard that he can't keep it up without some relaxation. He knows that seeing him upsets his children. So he sacrifices his own wish to see them to avoid making them unhappy!"

One day her doctor changed his tactics. He said:

"So what? Suppose he didn't telephone you last night? A man as dedicated to his work as he is is bound to forget a promise to call a woman occasionally. As to his comments on that night club dancer, what was wrong with them? You say you love his delight in women. ..."

His patient promptly began to experience her own conflicting feelings. She began to question that "devotion" to work. She thought:

me a year ago and it wasn't business that kept him away from a telephone last night."

She found herself recalling the casualness of his recent reference to an illness of one of his children and thought, "He's a poser. His kids don't really mean anything to him."

She began to feel anger and contempt. The weaknesses which her idealizing imagination had turned into strengths became clear to her—and her infatuation was over.

Until her doctor withdrew his criticism of her hero, her own doubts about him could not be felt, she could not find her own balance.

This column is for the parents of infatuated children.

POLLY'S POINTERS
Man's Hat, Gloves Disguise Lone Woman
By POLLY CRAMER

POLLY POINTERS
DEAR POLLY—I travel a great deal attending meetings out of the city. There are times when I have to drive several hundred miles at night alone. I always carry a man's hat and wear it so nobody realizes I am a woman driving alone.

R. B.
DEAR POLLY—If you have a bedridden patient in your home, many times their heels wear thin from contact with the sheet. Try placing soft rubber pads in the heels of white socks to give the wearer a cushion for the heels and more comfort. The same cushion can be used for the elbows by pinning to the nightgown sleeve. A small narrow pillow under the knees of a patient with back trouble will often make him more comfortable.

I keep a salt shaker filled with flour near my stove. When I fry eggs I shake a little flour into the hot fat. The eggs brown nicely and the fat does not pop. To give fried eggs a "want-more" flavor, add a dash of cornmeal to the hot fat and brown slightly before breaking the eggs into it.

JUST SUSIE
GIRLS—You have no idea how you influence my everyday living. Just today there was nothing I wanted less than a fried egg sandwich for lunch, but I was curious to see if the flour really did keep the fat from spluttering and splattering. Well, it did and I had a fried egg sandwich.

POLLY
DEAR POLLY—Painting behind appliances or in other hard-to-reach places is always a problem. To make the job easier, take a small piece of synthetic sponge, about one-half inch thick and three or four inches square, and tack it to the end of a yard stick. Wipe the paint on in the tight spots.

Mrs. I. W.
GIRLS—This would be good for washing as well as painting. Also, a clean sponge on the yardstick might help in smoothing down wallpaper in close quarters.

POLLY
DEAR POLLY—We have a small garage and, with the lawn mower, the children's bikes and so on, it is hard to judge whether or not the car is in far enough to close the door. From the ceiling we have suspended a string which touches the windshield when the car is in the right position.

MRS. H. S.

Three-Meal Deal Best For Dieters

Q—I'm trying to lose weight. Should I skip at least one meal every day?

A—Meal skipping is a poor way to lose weight. It actually may increase appetite for the next meal or for between-meal snacks which results in increased food intake. Skipping of meals is likely to lead to the choice of unbalanced diets. Actually, several small and regular meals each day may provide greater satisfaction to the person on a reducing diet than the normal three-meal pattern.

Q—Can fruits and vegetables supply all the protein I need?

A—The American Dietetic Association's booklet, "Food Facts Talk Back," answers your question as follows: Because people usually consume a limited variety and quantity of fruits and vegetables, it is difficult to obtain adequate protein from these sources. Vegetarians, in addition to eating fruits and vegetables, usually eat a variety of grains, legumes, and nuts which contribute toward adequate protein in the diet.

Other people who exclude meat from their diet derive proteins from milk, cheese, and eggs. Dried beans are one of the best plant sources of protein, but even when two portions (2 cups of cooked beans) are used in a day, one would still need to eat 12 to 15 servings of other fruits and vegetables such as potatoes, oranges, peas and squash in order to get enough protein. Therefore, most persons prefer to use meat, eggs, cheese and milk to obtain the proteins they need every day.

Mrs. Joe Archer came as a beatnik, dirty shirt and all, and did "A Furry-Starry Pree Little Thriggs."

Mrs. Dickerson gave "Appreciation of Husbands." Mrs. Bill Kindie told a story about Homer, a pet mountain lion; and the rest of those attending went on a walk through the jungle with "Starz and a Boa Constrictor."

Refreshments were served. Attending were Meses. Charles Williams, Bill Kindie, Eddie Clemmons, Joe Archer, Ray Dickerson, hostess, and Scoot Teel. Three guests were present, Mrs. James Baliff, Mrs. Tony Bivins, and Miss Linda Poarch.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Martin Honored With Reception On 60th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Martin were honored on the occasion of their 60th Wedding Anniversary with an Open House given in their home, 838 East Malone by their daughters Mrs. Eva Rickard of Norman, Okla., Mrs. Hazel Marshall of Cedar Vale, Kan., Mrs. Lois Smith, 816 E. Malone and their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lawrence Martin, 1120 E. Francis.

Miss Rose Magnus became the bride of William B. Martin with wedding vows exchanged on Feb. 1, 1903 in a ceremony performed in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Magnus, who resided near Otto, Kan. Mr. Martin was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Martin, who lived in the same community.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin farmed during the early years of their married life. They came to Pampa from Kansas in 1930. Mr. Martin worked for oil field contractors until his retirement five years ago at the age of 78.

Refreshments were served to friends, who called during the afternoon, from a table appointed with a gold-Damask cloth and an arrangement of yellow rose-buds flanked by crystal candelabra holding white tapers.

Mrs. Martin wore a white carnation corsage and Mr. Martin, a red rosebud boutonniere.

RUTH MILLETT

The authors of a booklet called "Your Important Years" point out that the mature person resents labels like "senior citizen" and "oldster," partly because they are too cute, but chiefly because he dislikes any label, preferring to think of himself, as he always has, as an individual.

The older person has a perfect right to want to be regarded as an individual — because he is one, every bit as much as he was as a child, as an adolescent, or in his middle years.

Just look around at all the older persons you know. Are there any two of them alike? Of course not.

Some are hard workers, some are idle. Some are independent, some have given up. Some have courage, some seem defeated. Some are long-faced, some are happy-looking. Some like to laugh, others like to sigh. Some are interested in everything new, others are interested, mainly in themselves. Some are set in their ways, some are venturesome. And so it goes.

If you think all older persons are alike, or if you tend to group them all together, you just aren't well-acquainted with many older persons.

Yet that seems to be the biggest injustice done today toward older persons — lumping them all together and referring to them as our "senior citizens," and regarding them as a problem simply because they have passed from middle to old age.

So look carefully — and listen intently to the next so-called "senior citizen" you happen to meet. It just might happen that you will discover how "young" he is — despite his years — if you will bother to find out what he is thinking, what he has been doing, and what he is planning to do.

Don't automatically dismiss him as being an "oldster" whose important years are past.

— Oleg Cassini, known best for his official role as designer for Jackie Kennedy, accented the shaped, sinuous artistry for which he is famous. Beginning with a group of supple, wool jersey sweater costumes and continuing through brilliantly colored chiffon dresses into long, skinny evening dresses sparkling with beads, the clothes were significant for their sex appeal. The latter, also known as a "look of allure," added up to a shape that was youthful and feminine. Cassini's ideas for little evenings, long on fashion, revolved around pleated crinkly chiffon dresses with swirl-skirts joined by brief bodices. These came in vibrant tones of purple, moss green and

Mission Work With Japanese-Chinese Colorful Theme For WMU Program

"Witnessing To Oriental Americans" was the theme for the colorful Royal Service program presented by the Women's Missionary Society of First Baptist Church on Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Lewis Tarpley introduced the program. Group singing was led by Mrs. Bob Allen accompanied at the piano by Mrs. E. Douglas Carver.

— Davidow continued the easy-fitting silhouette. But the look was straighter and leaner in the back. Coats were straight-lined and in full or seven-eighths lengths rather than cropped. A number of suits came with self belts. Others had soft loops or strings of leather to give a gentle circle around the waist.

— Pattulo-Jo Copeland stressed a tidy, quiet look in town clothes with a full complement of feminine appeal as well. Young, swinging jacket suits had pretty colored or printed blouses. Many had white bows at the neck and some had a collar worn outside. All the jackets were as smartly tailored as an officer's, with wide shoulders and slim hips. The softening touches came via a floating ascot scarf over one shoulder, interesting buttons, a wide silk-cummerbund at the top of the skirts or via crocheted edges. For evening, both short and long Patullo clothes were self-contained dresses with the coverup built in. A woman's shoulders being an invariable asset (and her upper arms frequently not) Jo Copeland kept the shoulders visible or veiled them lightly with one layer of organza or soft drapery. She advanced also the off the shoulder dress. The black dress in the collection was slim and sinuous.

and by Mrs. E. Douglas Carver. Facts about the people and countries of the Orient was related by Mrs. George Henderson, Mrs. Gene Fort and Mrs. Tom Stewart through the question, "Did You Know?" Mrs. Bob Andis explained the basic principles of language missions located in the United States. Work with Chinese was given in detail by Mrs. Tommy Burns. Mrs. Bill Chapin told of the work with Koreans and Mrs. Charles Crowson told of the work with the Japanese people.

Mrs. Bob Allen led group singing of "Whosoever Will." The program closed with prayer and devotional thoughts by Mrs. S. E. Waters.

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Bill Erwin, WMU president, emphasis was placed on the associational banquet, which is to be on Feb. 28 at 6:30 p.m. in the First Baptist Church dining hall. The banquet is in honor of the 75th Anniversary of Women's Missionary Union, which was organized May 11, 1888.

Approximately 70 members and guests attended the meeting, which was followed by a luncheon served in the dining hall.

Pot-Roasts in the Oven
You can cook pot-roasts and other braised meat dishes and stews in the oven as well as on top of the range. If you wish, first brown the meat on top of the range. Then place in an oven-proof baking dish and cover tightly. Cook in a slow oven (300 degrees F.). The time will be approximately the same as that recommended for top-of-the-range cookery.

Meat for Reducing
For all you who have resolved to lose weight, remember that lean meat is important in a reducing diet. Meat leaves you with a feeling of satisfaction and prevents hunger pangs for a longer period than other foods. It provides necessary high quality protein, vitamins and minerals. Ladies Auxiliary to Veterans of Foreign Wars met Tuesday evening in the Veterans Hall, Foster Street, with Mrs. Jesse Beard, president, presiding.

Mrs. Earl Eckroat opened the meeting with the Chaplain's Prayer.

Following the secretary's report by Mrs. Vernon Stuckey, she read correspondence from Ann Marshall, Department of Texas president, regarding change of election of officers to April with installation in May. "Newly-elected officers will not take office until after the Department president has been installed at the state convention, which will be held in Lubbock in June," she read. Announcement was made of the District Nine meeting to be held Feb. 23-24 in Panhandle. The Department president is planning to attend the meeting, it was reported.

Mrs. Beard, who attended the Mid-Winter Round-Up in Austin in January, reported on that meeting.

It was announced that the local auxiliary had met its honor roll requirements for February by contributing to the Palsy Fund Drive, Heart Fund through United Fund Drive. To complete requirements, an Americanism program will be presented later this month in Veterans' Hall with a well-informed speaker; date and information to be announced later.

A love gift offering was approved to be presented to the Department president. A contribution was also made to Korean Cottages, which is a project of the National president made for this year. $100 will build a cottage, it was reported.

RUTH MILLETT

A recent column in which I reprinted a reader's letter suggesting that a mother is in large part responsible for whether children look up to, admire, and respect their father has brought forth a number of "How about...?" letters from other readers.

How about (some say) writing a column telling the men they also have a responsibility for making their children think their mother is something pretty special?

Of course they do. Men can do it easily by often praising the mother in front of the children and never finding fault with her in the children's hearing.

Young children who are used to hearing their father praise their mother for everything from how pretty she looks to what a good manager she is, and how much she does to make home a happy place, are sure to have a higher opinion of their mother than children who constantly hear how she has done this wrong, or forgotten that, or neglected something else.

But that isn't the whole story in the letters about that column. Some women protested that it is almost impossible for a wife to build a man up to his children, if he is set on tearing down the image of the kind, loving, patient father.

If a man is harsh with his children, if he never praises them for anything they do well, if he is so cross and irritable around the house that the children dread his homecoming, a life can talk her head off about how much their father really loves them and get nowhere at all.

One wife even said in her letter, "I think our children actually hate their father in spite of everything I can say, because he is so critical of everything they do, so short-tempered with them and so unnecessarily harsh in his punishments."

Chiang Says Indonesia Doomed To Be Communist, Plans Mainland Invasion

YEAR

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1953

TAIPEH, Formosa (UPI) — Generalissimo Chiang Kaishek, president of Nationalist China, feels Indonesia is doomed to become an all-out Communist state and will "cause more unrest and chaos in the Pacific area."

In an exclusive 2 1/2-hour interview with United Press International at his beach house on the southern coast of Formosa, the 75-year-old soldier-statesman said his armed forces are ready to "return" to the Chinese mainland and he believes his expeditionary force will be launched "sometime this year."

The president told UPI that he strongly favors Malaysia, the proposed confederation of Malaya with Singapore and three British states on the north coast of Borneo-Sarawak, Brunei, and North Borneo—as a safeguard against the spread of communism.

Fast Action Urged

Chiang warned the United States and other Western countries they had better act fast to save Asia from the grasp of communism.

Referring to Indonesia, he said the power and influence of the Communists is not necessarily confined to the high levels of government but has reached the common masses of the people. He blames this on food shortage and declines in tin and rubber exports.

He made a point of emphasizing that he has no intention of picking an arbitrary time and place for what he invariably refers to as a "return to the mainland" but will send his armed forces only after there has been an internal revolt in Red China.

"There is no solidarity of forces in Communist China," he said. "Even now there is a serious split and disorder in the armed forces. We will move when the time is right. I will lead the striking forces which will go to the assistance of our enslaved countrymen on the mainland."

Answers Quickly

The generalissimo talked easily and answered questions without the slightest hesitation. He appears to have recovered completely from an illness of nearly a year ago. The interview started promptly at noon and continued for an hour, then through a lunch which featured squid and shark's fin soup among other Chinese specialties. After lunch the interview was resumed in the sunny living room of the residence overlooking a sandy beach. Chiang reiterated he does not ask or expect the United States to supply troops for the "return." He hopes for logistic support from the American government but says the most important thing is to have American spiritual and moral support.

Controversy Raging On 'Good Will' Meals As A Tax Deduction

By JOSEPH D. HUTNYAN
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is being asked to be a little more explicit in describing when the clinking of cocktail glasses is for business and when it is strictly for fun.

The National Restaurant Association claims confusion in this point plunged restaurant sales downward in January, and the situation may get worse.

The source of the association's apprehension is the new expense account regulations that went into effect this year. The real issue may be the survival of what the restaurant group calls the "good-will" business meal.

The association's counsel, Thomas W. Power, said the good-will lunch definitely is deductible as a business expense, if the public only understood the "clarifying" information being put out by IRS.

But he added: "Proper understanding is virtually nonexistent."

Issues Denied

This was promptly denied by IRS Commissioner Mortimer M. Caplin, who said he felt the revenue service had been pretty clear on the issue. Caplin said the business meal is deductible.

Caplin and Power collided on the issue in an exchange of letters. Ironically, the friction seemed to be caused by the words "good will."

Power used them almost every time he referred to the touchy subject. Caplin avoided the term, referring to the issue as "the quiet business meal."

In an interview Power defined the subject of the dispute as "a meal where food and beverages are furnished for the creation of good will alone."

Caplin said the lunch he was referring to was treated in IRS literature as follows:

"Business meals furnished to an individual under circumstances which are generally considered to be conducive to a business discussion may be deducted."

Power claimed that a spot check by the association in some of the nation's big cities showed that restaurant business dropped in these establishments from 10 to 30 per cent in January.

He said Caplin didn't help the situation any when he told a recent lunch meeting here that "good-will entertaining is out."

"It absolutely is not," Power added. He said that legislative documents on the law show that the business meal exception includes the expenditure which "merely promotes good will."

"A majority of the business entertaining in America is of that nature," he said. "It is designed not to discuss business but merely to promote good will. In many instances, it isn't even desirable or appropriate to discuss business."

A check with the IRS revealed that the agency's lawyers are studying this conflict of interpretations. A spokesman said the IRS would issue another clarifying directive in the near future.

Police Dog's Training To Start Soon

Charles Gunn of Amarillo, who is contributing 135 Chukar partridges for tomorrow's Pampa Chamber of Commerce Membership Campaign Kickoff Luncheon, has also made another contribution to Pampa, announced some time ago.

Gunn has contributed a police dog to the City of Pampa and is providing the dog's training.

Gunn said yesterday that the dog had been obtained and is now "getting acquainted" with its trainer. Within a week from now, a 16-week training course for the dog will get underway and the dog is expected to be delivered to the Pampa Police Department within about 17 weeks.

Gunn pointed out that the officer who will work the dog in Pampa will take part in the last two weeks of the dog's training.

Pampa Police Chief Jim Conner has named patrolman C. L. Wallace to work with the dog when it is accepted and "sworn in" as part of the force.

Cancer Crusade Drive Is Planned

Mrs. Kermit Lawson, Crusade chairman of the American Cancer Society, and House-to-House Chairmen Mrs. A. D. Hills, who will head this division of the Crusade this year, and Mrs. Bob Sanford, who was chairman last year, met Friday with the Unit president, Mrs. Jack Foster, to plan the crusade which will begin April 1st.

The 29th of April has been set for the house-to-house drive, which coincides with that of Amarillo and other area cities for the purpose of utilizing publicity releases from national and state offices.

National Crusade Chairman Ralph Edwards of radio and TV fame, has issued the challenge to all local units to "better their best" because the need is increasingly great.

Mrs. Lawson, Crusade chairman for 1962, was recipient of the State Recognition Citation for having exceeded the quota for this county. It is her goal this year not only to "Better our Best" but also to place Gray County on the honor roll of the Texas Division for 1963 for the seventh consecutive year.

A district-wide crusade workshop will be held Thursday, Feb. 21, at the First Baptist Church in Borger. All interested citizens are invited to attend.

Lions Club's Farm-Ranch Program Set

The Pampa Noon Lions Club will observe its annual Farm - Ranch Day Thursday at the club's regular meeting in First Methodist Church.

Farmers and ranchers from the Top O' Texas area will be guests of the club at the luncheon with the principal address to be given by L. L. (Red) Males of Cheyenne, Okla.

Males, a country banker, also is an ardent soil conservationist and his address will be illustrated with color slides.

Males first became interested in soil conservation more than a quarter century ago when he first began to watch the soil being lost through erosion and flying through the air in dust storms.

Males is an advocate of the theory that there cannot be soil conservation without water conservation and that the two go hand in hand.

Ministers Also Have Problems!

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (UPI)—"I sure hope the Lord didn't have as much trouble planning the world as we are over our little church with the high steeple."

"But then," the letter to the editor of the Charlotte News continued, "he didn't have us to put up with."

The writer was a minister who said his congregation just couldn't get together on plans for a new church.

"About the only thing we've been able to agree on so far is that our steeple ought to be higher than anybody else's," said the minister, whose name was withheld by the newspaper in its edition Thursday.

He said some members of the congregation wanted a modern building while others preferred a traditional one; some wanted a wooden church, others demanded brick. There also was disagreement over whether the structure should be one story or two stories.

If that wasn't enough, the minister said, the arguments even extend to sex and age. He said the men want the church painted white, the women baby blue and the youngsters polka-dot.

The minister said he offered a solution: a split level church, half brick, half wood, modern outside, traditional inside, with white ceiling, baby blue walls and polka-dot floor.

"I thought my suggestion was pretty good," he wrote, "but the members, God bless 'em, would not budge an inch."

So, he concluded, he will probably have to build a separate church for each member or hunt a new home for himself.

Foreign Commentary

Back in 1961, in Algeria, it struck this reporter as an incongruity that even in the midst of bloody rebellion French-built schools continued to rise in the backcountry and new industrial structures to go up along the Algiers waterfront.

Some months later, in the new black African republic of Mali, it also seemed noteworthy that the only real link between scattered tribesmen was a common knowledge of the French language.

In the Quai d'Orsay in Paris, officials of the French Foreign Ministry are fond of remarking that France devotes more than twice as much of its gross national product to the aid of underdeveloped countries as does the United States.

These are factors upon which President Charles de Gaulle leans heavily as he moves to tighten French ties with Africa even as he moves to implement his grand design for Europe.

Paris dispatches say that De Gaulle's visions for Africa could bring him into new conflict with the United States and Britain.

Nucleus of De Gaulle's Africa would be the French-speaking community of new African nations into which France has poured both money and lives and with which she has maintained remarkably stable and friendly relations.

Even Guinea, the lone dissenter who rejected membership in the French community, shows signs of returning at least partially to the fold.

President Sekou Toure, who once said Guinea would "prefer poverty in freedom to riches in slavery," is expected to visit France this year.

The French record of aid to its past and present overseas territories is impressive.

Nearly 40,000 French teachers work in countries scattered throughout the world. She built three universities in Algeria and contributed to higher education in Morocco and Tunisia.

Santa Fe's PR Man Dies

CHICAGO (UPI)—Raiph Ater, 50, Amarillo, Tex., special representative of public relations for the Santa Fe Railroad, collapsed and died on a near north side street early today.

The body was removed to a hospital, where Ater was officially proclaimed dead. The coroner's office later attributed death to a heart condition.

Police said no marks of violence were found on the body, and Ater's wallet contained $19.

Ater, a native of Crowell, Tex., joined the Santa Fe in 1936. He served with the line in its Chicago office from 1938 to 1947, when he was transferred to Amarillo.

Engineers To Met Feb. 21 In Borger

The February meeting of the Panhandle Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, AIME, has postponed its regularly scheduled second-Tuesday meeting of the month to Thursday, February 21 in order that it may secure the appearance of C. V. Millikan of Tulsa, Okla., a petroleum engineer, as its guest speaker.

Millikan, one of seven Distinguished Lecturers, chosen by the board of directors and Distinguished Lecturer Committee, will speak on "Producing Oil... Style of Engineering."

The Feb. 21 dinner meeting will be held in the Borger Hotel, according to James C. Hamilton of Borger, newly installed chapter chairman.

Amount Of Oil In Ground Is Not Current Problem, Says Oilman

TULSA, Okla., (Spl) — The amount of oil in the ground is the least important of many considerations involved in the future supplies of the domestic oil industry, a spokesman for the nation's independent producers said Saturday.

Minor S. Jameson, Jr., executive vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, said: "For the foreseeable future, there is evidence that the physical stock of petroleum in the United States will not be the limiting factor."

Continued advances in technology can increase greatly the amount of oil recoverable from the nation's reservoirs, and industry has demonstrated its ability to cope with economic problems as they arise, he said.

Jameson added: "In the final analysis, government policy will be the controlling factor in the long-range outlook for U.S. supply. Under sound policies, domestic oil supplies can continue to expand at reasonable prices to the consuming public."

The IPAA official took exception to a recent forecast by M. King Hubbert of Shell Development Co. that the domestic oil industry is nearing its peak of production and will start to decline sometime after 1967.

Jameson said Hubbert puts the U.S. peak of production in the Record Demand For Gas During Long Cold Spell

OKLAHOMA CITY — January's record-breaking cold weather resulted in an all-time high for deliveries of natural gas in the five state midcontinent area served by Cities Service Gas Company, Kirby E. Crenshaw, president of the company, said.

An estimated total of 1.8 billion cubic feet of gas was handled by the company's pipeline system on January 23, about five per cent above the maximum day's delivery last winter.

The gas was delivered to 380 communities in Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Nebraska and Texas through Cities Service Gas Company's pipeline system which totals nearly 7,000 miles.

As an indication of the cold weather's intensity on January 23, temperatures on the company's system fell as low as 18 degrees below zero at Tonganoxie, Kansas, near Kansas City. At Kansas City, the gas transmission company's largest market area, the thermometer registered ten below zero on the same day and averaged three below for the 24-hour period, according to the company's records.

Wichita averaged only one degree above zero for the period, and Independence, in the "warm" southeastern corner of Kansas, averaged zero. The effects of the low temperatures were intensified, Crenshaw said, by strong north winds with gusts up to 30 and 50 miles per hour.

The unprecedented demand for natural gas also resulted in a new record withdrawal of gas from underground storage. On January 23, the company withdrew 380 million cubic feet from its nine storage fields located in eastern Kansas.

The figures on gas volumes are based on preliminary figures, Crenshaw said, and actual measurements will await final computation of meter charts from the company's system.

Gas Firm Announces Dividends

AMARILLO — At a meeting of the Board of Directors of Pioneer Natural Gas Company held recently in Amarillo, the earnings for the year 1962 were released.

The net income of Pioneer Natural Gas Company and its subsidiaries for 1962 was $5,611,610, compared to $4,996,199 for the year 1961. The net income amounts to $1.57 per share on the 3,582,164 shares of common stock outstanding at the end of 1962 compared to $1.42 on the 3,513,979 shares outstanding at the end of 1961.

A regular quarterly dividend of 26 cents per share was declared on the outstanding common stock, payable March 7, 1963, to stockholders of record at the close of business on February 22, 1963.

The company's annual report to the stockholders and Proxy Statements will be mailed about March 15, 1963.

How Firm Is Alliance Between Red China And The Russians?

By HENRY SHAPIRO
United Press International

The uneasy Soviet-Chinese alliance has, in recent months, suffered such severe jolts that its formal dissolution would appear almost unavoidable.

The ideological divergences, conflicts of national interest and rough rivalry for influence in the Communist camp since 1954 have reached such proportions as to raise the question whether the 13-year-old alliance has ever been meaningful.

The alliance was formalized in Moscow on Feb. 14, 1950, when Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty of friendship, alliance and mutual assistance with the Soviet Union.

The parties undertook to act jointly in the prevention of aggression by Japan "or any other state associated with Japan," and to render each other assistance in the event of attack. The "other state" was obviously the United States.

Aid Stops In 1954

The treaty was supplemented by an economic agreement which promised China substantial credits and technical aid "without which Peking would have been unable to launch its grandiose plans for industrialization."

There was no public disclosure of promised military aid. But there is adequate evidence that the Russians helped in training the Chinese army and supplied military equipment up to and including the Korean War.

But there appears to have been little military cooperation after 1954 and it is generally believed in the West that Russia has denied China nuclear know-how and has not delivered any of the more sophisticated modern weapons.

Also, by 1961 Soviet exports to China had dwindled to the lowest point in the history of the alliance. And all Soviet technical experts by then had withdrawn or been expelled.

The Communist Scandal

The character of Soviet-Chinese cooperation had undergone critical transformation in all respects and the growing rift between the two great powers had become a major public scandal in the Communist world.

Given the size and power of China, its traditional pride of culture, the independent success of the Chinese Communists in seizing power and the geographic remoteness from Moscow, rivalry and conflict were inevitable.

They were muted in Stalin's time, partly due to the legendary stature of the Soviet dictator which empowered the Communist world to speak in one voice—the Kremlin's.

The conflict inescapably erupted soon after Stalin's death and his denigration by Khrushchev which surprised and shocked the Chinese. It was aggravated by the subsequent clash of personalities between the practical, moderate and ebullient Khrushchev and the subtle, intellectual, doctrinaire Mao Tse-tung.

Steps Toward Rift

The early caution and restraint, gradually disappeared, marked by these milestones:

—After the Middle Eastern crisis of 1958, Khrushchev, apparently without consulting the Chinese, agreed to a summit meeting within the U. N. Security Council and presumably the participation of Nationalist China. After a hurried trip to Peking, Khrushchev yielded to Chinese protests and repudiated his agreement to the summit conference.

—The Chinese undertook to organize their ill-fated communes against the opposition of the Russians who considered them "primitive" and "unfeasible."

—The Chinese made no secret of their resentment at Khrushchev's efforts to achieve an accommodation with the United States during his visit to Camp David. The Chinese press virtually ignored Khrushchev's visit to the United States.

—In February, 1960, during the 10th anniversary of the alliance, Khrushchev toured India, cementing friendly relations with that country in complete disregard of Chinese interests. ("It is a sad and stupid story, bloodshed over useless territory," Khrushchev told this correspondent in 1960 when asked to comment on the Sino-Indian border dispute.)

—The Sino-Soviet conflict appeared to reach a climactic phase with the Soviet agreement to remove their nuclear missiles from Cuba which the Chinese promptly denounced as a "Munich" and "surrender to the imperialists."

Chinese Are Ignored

The Chinese had no more voice in the Soviet decision than Fidel Castro. This time their indignation knew no bounds. To Khrushchev's explanation that "the American tiger had nuclear teeth," Peking's official "People's Daily" reported with words like "betrayal," "fright" and "cowardly surrender."

Khrushchev himself, in his speech to the East German party congress last month, while conciliatory in tone toward the Chinese, vigorously reaffirmed his policy of "compromise and concessions."

He rejected the Chinese proposal for a Communist summit conference to discuss cleavage within the camp on grounds such as a meeting might produce a final split and urged a cooling of passions. He left it to the Chinese to make the final step.

In view of these circumstances, it is reasonable to suggest that, with the exception of the first five or six years, the Sino-Soviet alliance — the so-called "monolithic bloc" — has lacked substance and reality. It appears to have been monolithic only in the Western mind.

Not only has there been little or no consultation and agreement on questions of major political, diplomatic, economic and military policy, but some of the institutions needed to draft and implement such policies were not even set up.

Future Uncertain

There is no Soviet-Chinese counterpart to NATO. China is not a member of the Warsaw Pact, although it has participated in some sessions as an observer.

While the Russians have unreservedly supported Peking's claim to Formosa, it is by no means certain — following the Cuban affair — whether Moscow would rush to China's aid if the Chinese tried to seize Chiang Kai-shek's island and ran into full-scale war with the United States.

In spite of the critical state of present relations, the bonds of common interest may still provide over-riding reasons for maintaining the alliance, shaky as it may be.

It appears that Moscow and Peking might prefer to continue what they call their "family quarrel" indefinitely and maintain the vestiges of alliance.

How Tough Are Marines?

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C. (UPI)—Are the Kennedy Marines as tough as the Roosevelt Marines? That's the question the Marine Corps will attempt to answer for President Kennedy next week in a 50-mile hike by 20 Leathernecks.

The project by 10 captains and 10 lieutenants is a physical fitness test for Marine officers issued in 1908 by President Teddy Roosevelt. The old executive order recently was presented to Kennedy as a curiosity piece by the Marine commandant, Gen. David Shoup.

Kennedy wondered if present Marine officers could pass the 1908 test. Shoup said he would find out.

The hikers will carry 24 pounds of equipment during their three-day outing. The last lap will be the most demanding. The Marines will have to jog 200 yards, rest 30 seconds, jog 300 yards, rest one minute, and then run the final 200 yards at full speed.

Announcement of the hike immediately drew a challenge from a group of mailmen at Winston-Salem, N. C., who offered to hike with the Marines and "leave them in the dust."

"We have some pretty tough walkers," said Don S. Linville, 40, president of the Winston-Salem Letter Carriers Association. He said his mailmen walk an average of 8 to 12 miles daily on their routes and frequently carry 40 pounds.

"We just want to prove to the President that we in civil service are in just as good shape as the men in the armed forces," said Linville.

Coffee Break.... ...with d. e. w.

WE'RE STILL chuckling over some of the jokes that Delbert Downing of Midland told at the Classroom Teachers' Reception held Tuesday night in the Lee Junior High ... particularly about the "dog who chases cars" and the little old lady who went into the chicken-raising business. The speaker wasn't just funny he was hilarious and provoked unsophisticated laughter. It was a lovely way for the teachers to say "thank you" and we want to exchange "thank you's" with them ... especially for the lovely arrangement of Spring flowers, which was used in the table decorations and which Geraldine Rampy, who is a neighbor of ours, brought by our home after the reception was over.

It is not the shilling I give you that counts, but the warmth that it carries with it from my hand. — Miguel de Unamuno.

HOUSEWIVES OF PAMPA arise from your television chairs and unite! That is, if you care that the Merv Griffin Show is going off the air the latter part of March to be replaced by a weepy soap opera. There is something we can do about it ... or attempt it. We have been highly indignant about the network taking this delightful early afternoon show off the air. We wrote a paragraph about our indignation and sent it off to the network people. This week an answer came back:

"Thank you, thank you, thank you for the write-up, for sending the clipping, for your deep interest in the show. Needless to say, Merv, and the entire show staff share your disappointment and so, judging from the wire, phone calls and letters pouring into this office, do a swelling number of people."
"If any of your people, would care to write the network about our cancellation, please ask them to direct their correspondence to: Mort Werner, Vice President, Programming Department, NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, New York."
"Again, thank you... from Merv, from me, from all of us. Faithfully, Bob Shanks, producer."

SIGNS OF SPRING ... which we always look for as soon as Christmas is over: Park employees scattered all over Aspen Park this week constructing a foot-bridge across the little creek that runs through the park. Too, it looks as if the long-awaited construction is about to start on the park shelter ... which needed only certain length telephone poles for completion. Are those rosy cheeks and springier steps of certain business men around town due to the approach of spring ... or is it their daily work-outs at the newly-opened Health Club on West Foster? Now then, if Biz Hoover and Haskell Maguire could just be persuaded to set aside some time for "puny" ladies, they would have the feminine population beating a path to their door. Speaking of "puny", the other morning when we were at the high school getting some information from Dona Cornutt about the Career Clinic we walked from Cameron Marsh's office down to the Little Harvester Newspaper office ... which is the entire length of the building. This was done at approximately 8:25 a.m. in the morning when all of the students were either dashing to first hour classes ... frantically trying to open lockers ... or just standing in groups in the hall ... sort of an obstacle course, as it were. We walked down to the Little Harvester office and back ... doesn't this at least qualify us for "oldth fitness?"

ABOUT THE CAREER CLINIC: Betty Malone of St. Louis, Mo., who is a home economist associated with United Van Lines, as a moving consultant, was one of the conferees for the Career Clinic ... and she was a most attractive, vivacious one. She stopped by our desk, during her whirlwind of speaking appearances here, for a brief chat. And she had some of the most amazing statistics and interesting comments to make about moving problems. She said that at least "41 billion families will change their address this year." She has the answer to all moving problems from transporting a parakeet to moving a small foreign car. Most enthusiastically, she mentioned the wide range of careers that are open to girls majoring in home economics ... as dietician and nutrition experts for large companies ... hospitals ... slick magazines ... in the fashion field ... and in the transportation world. She's the first moving consultant in the industry ... having "pioneered" this field for others to follow. Paul Musgrave, who is associated with Pampa Warehouse and Transfer Co., was instrumental in bringing this busy, busy gal to Pampa for the Career Clinic.

PAMPA'S GOING Pan-Hellenic ... on Monday morning of last week, representatives of the Pampa Alumnae Chapters of Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Delta Delta, and Pi Beta Phi met in Inga Pratt's home on North Gray to discuss the need for organizing a Pan-Hellenic in Pampa for all alumnae of nationally affiliated sorority groups. The outcome of that meeting were plans for an Organizational Tea to be held next Sunday afternoon, March 3, in the Citizen's Hospitality Room. All alumnae in Pampa from national sorority groups are invited to attend the tea. Members of Alpha Delta Pi, Tri Deltas and Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Chapters will be hostesses.

CONFIRMATION of Pampa's hospitality: For those of you who heard Dan True order a sandwich during his television weathercast last Thursday evening ... to munch on while waiting to speak before the Travis PTA meeting, here is the sequel to the story: Wayne and Dell Brown (she's PTA treasurer) stopped by Zebbie's and got him a barbecue sandwich with all the trimmings ... the television time taken for the request probably made that one of the most expensive sandwich orders in history!

THERE'S BEEN a series of Sweetheart Parties going on this week for the youth of the First Baptist Church ... the decorations for it were simply beautiful. The ceiling of the banquet room was literally covered with sparkling stars and there were handmade red and yellow roses all over the room ... entwining trellises and lining the ledges. Each table was centered with a gold enrusted crown holding a single gold taper. Jack Parker and Virginia Whitten were the guiding lights, but they had the support and enthusiasm of the whole church behind them. The fountain in the middle of the room was what intrigued us the most ... Bob Gordy had used a great deal of ingenuity to create a fountain that really worked! There were some pretty decorations, too, at St. Vincent de Paul's Installation banquet for choir officers this week. Real logs had been sawed into attractive centerpieces with simulated axes fitting into slots ... and there were Cherry Trees with red bubble-gum used as cherries! ... all dreamed up by Lillian Smith. Mrs. Leonard White is the new choir president with Mrs. John T. Price serving as vice president, Jack D. Edwards as secretary-treasurer and Lillian Smith and Mrs. Billy Hayes as librarians.

LOOKS LIKE we're running out of room and we did want to tell you about the art classes the Pampa Art Club are starting in the Pampa Youth and Community Center for the exceptional children of the community: Ruth Nerstiel and Robin Gantz were the instructors this week. And we did want to mention the World Day of Prayer services on March 1 and about the film "Question 7", which is being sponsored by the United Church Women's Council to be shown at the LaVista Theater March 17-20. But more about this next week ... see you, d.e.w.

Jack O. Miller, director with Mrs. Marie Jones technical director

"Manana Is Another Day" is a three-act comedy with music set in a sleepy little town of Cuernavaca, Mexico.

The action centers in the Diaz Boarding House, where American tourists "sometimes" stop to enjoy the color and flavor of life south of the border.

Hilarious action centers around the boarding house handyman and the bus drivers who bring the tourists to the house. There are school teachers, maiden aunts, salesmen and love interests interwoven into the plot to provide a funny and entertaining evening in the theater. Music and dancing adds additional color to the plot of events.

Dear Abby
By Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can you help me cure a woman of "Telephonitis"? She calls me on the phone and I can't get her off the line. She's very interesting to talk to, but she takes up more of my time than I can spare. Besides that, my arm gets tired. She has a car, and her children are in school all day, but she prefers lengthy telephone conversations to a visit in person. She does this to others, too. It's getting to be a daily thing. How can I cure her without being impolite?

SORE EAR, TIRED ARM

DEAR SORE: The moment you hear her voice, say, "I'm sorry, I am in the midst of something and can't talk to you right now. I'll call you when I'm free." If you get "free" and have the time, return her call. If you haven't — don't. If she calls again, repeat the treatment until the patient is cured.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 and have started to like girls. My problem is I can't dance. I would like to learn how to dance from the nicest girl I know but I am not sure how to go about it. Should I invite her to my home, or should I go to her home? I have very few dance records and she has many. Should I invite her to my home and tell her to bring her records?

UNINFORMED

DEAR UNINFORMED: No. Tell her you'd like to learn how to dance, and let her take it from there. She'll probably invite you to her home. If she doesn't — ask the next to the nicest girl you know.

DEAR ABBY: I need some advice about a very touchy problem. I have the sweetest mother-in-law in the world, but one thing irritates me. We live far enough apart to write letters, and she writes to me at least once a week. I have never gotten a letter from her saying she is fine. Every time she writes she has just had an attack of something or other, or else something "dreadful" has just happened to her. It's getting so I hate to open her letters. I am always writing her that I am sorry to hear about this and that and hope that she is feeling better. I've tried ignoring her complaints, but in her next letter she asks how come I didn't mention her illness. Any suggestions?

DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: KNOW your mother-in-law's complaints for what they are, and don't let them get you down. It does her a world of good to be able to tell someone about her "attacks" and the "dreadful" things that have happened to her. Reply with com-

Miss Babcock Bride Of Joe Charles Thornton

Miss Janice Lee Babcock became the bride of Joe Charles Thornton in a double-ring service performed on Friday evening at five o'clock in the Church of Christ in Groom with Gaylord Cook, minister, officiating.

Miss Babcock is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Babcock of Groom. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Thornton of Groom.

Vows were repeated in a setting of white gladioli flanked by spiral candelabra holding white tapers.

BRIDE

Given in marriage by her father with the "her mother and I" avowal, the bride was gowned in floor-length peau d'ange lace and tulle. The figurine bodice of lace featured a Sabrina neckline edged in pearls and long sleeves which tapered to petal points over the hands. The bouffant tiered skirt of tulle was overlaid with lace tiers. Her elbow-length veil of Bridal Illusion, sprinkled with pearls was held to a coronet of pearls.

She carried an orchid arranged with stephanotis and white roses atop a white Bible.

ATTENDANTS

Miss Tommie Babcock, bride's cousin, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Cherie Kooz and Mrs. Aimee Lamberson, sisters of the bride. They were dressed identically in Emerald Green peau de soie complemented with matching headpieces and gold slippers. Each carried a single long-stemmed white rose.

Jerry Thornton served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Alan Babcock and Stocky Lamberson. Bobby Babcock and T. J. Kooz seated the wedding guests.

Greg Kooz carried the rings to the bridal pair.

Eugene Carter, vocalist, presented a selection of traditional nuptial songs.

TINTS AND DYES

Use tints and dyes to revitalize curtains, sweaters, hand-mechanisms, gloves, and unmatched hosiery.

The hand that rocks the cradle runs a lot of fenders on the family car.

Mrs. Joe Charles Thornton, nee Janice Lee Babcock

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Babcock chose a navy and white double knit with navy accessories and a corsage of light green carnations.

Mrs. Thornton, mother of the bridegroom, wore a Blue Brocade dress with black patent accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

In observing bridal traditions, the bride carried a masonic penny, which belonged to her father, in her shoe.

As she approached the altar she presented her mother with a rose. After vows were repeated, she presented the bridegroom's mother with a rose; each taken from her own bouquet. The bridegroom's boutonniere was also a rose taken from her bouquet.

Lynita Brown, as flower girl, wore a dress frock designed with an Emerald Green peau de soie bodice and white skirt complemented with gold shoes.

Guessing Games And Humor Keep Grip On Public Fancy

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
Hollywood Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — "The Indestructibles" of television—the 10 longest-running, regularly scheduled television programs—include two guessing game shows. "What's My Line?" and "I've Got a Secret."

Their long-running success is a combination of deeply planted roots dating back 13 years for "Line," and 11 for "Secret" and, above all, ordinary people.

It is the constant parade of people — people with offbeat occupations and in offbeat situations — which has given both shows their great success.

Television fans say so, and so do Mark Goodson and Bill Todman, the creators of both shows.

Says Goodson: "The real entertainment comes from watching people as themselves, placed in a format which creates a tension. It is the competition that exists between panel and the opponent. In turn, the viewers at home identify themselves with panelist and opponent in some fashion."

Added Phillip for "What's My Line?" includes the weekly mystery celebrity, the week-naured John Daly, the sharpness of its veteran panelists in playing the guessing game.

These draw the publicity. But it is the show's guests, ranging from lady plumbers and girde manufacturers to a cow manicurist, a man who blows himself up with dynamite at county fairs, a girl who sells life insurance for chickens, an 11-year-old boy who writes a column of advice to parents — these are the people who intrigue its weekly local audience.

Ask Chester Feldman, producer of "I've Got a Secret," the reason for the success of his show, and he says:

"I can tell you in two words—Garry Moore."

That Garry Moore is the fans of Garry will partially agree. But again, it is people and their competition with the panelists. The people who guest on the show make confessions as incredible as the occupations turned up on "What's My Line?"

They have included the 100-year-old man on his honeymoon, a Holstein cow that had quints, the girl who announced she was becoming Mrs. Tommy Manville (the renegade and she sued) the man who squeezed a hard-boiled egg into a milk bottle by building a fire inside. Merle Oberon dressed like a fashion model in a $9.95 outfit.

Such are the stars of "I've Got a Secret" who guarantee the show an always-curious audience.

Tied with "Line" at 13 years of regular television exposure is Jack Benny. He wears as well on home screens as he did on radio for 18 years. Many other radio personalities failed in the visual switch, but Benny walked into the electronic picture zone without altering either himself or his show.

As he says, "I had no show to alter. We've always been different every week."

His long-established character of the fellow who hates to part with a dime, who won't admit his right age, and who vocally delights in the blueness of his eyes was as tailor-made for television as radio.

"It is the character," Benny says about his success. "Everyone knows someone like the fellow I play. The jokes aren't that important, and we try to do everything in good taste."

55TH YEAR THE PAMPA DAILY NEWS SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1963 17

There are other keys of Benny's character, for 26 years, and Dennis success—letting others get laughs Day, for 24 years. They know the while he deadpans—others such as Benny character as well as two of announcer Don Wilson, who has the show's writers, Sam Ferrin been with him for 29 years; Ro- and George Balzer.

Jimmy Wants To Sing

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Academy Award winning movie star James Stewart wants to try his luck with a musical, using voice trained through years of singing "Ragtime Cowboy Joe."

Although he's known as a top film actor, Stewart's voice is rarely heard in song, except for an occasional social rendition of the aforementioned Western classic.

But that doesn't mean Stewart can't sing. The lanky actor recalls that "I sang 'You'd Be So Easy to Love' in the picture 'Born to Dance' about 30 years ago."

With the current trend toward casting non-singing actors in lyrical roles, Stewart stands ready for anything musical that might come along.

"I got all steamed up last year," he said during a cocktail hour chat in the living room of his Beverly Hills home. "They wanted me to do a musical version of 'Dodsworth.' I think I can sing well enough. It's the type of thing Walter Huston did when he sang 'September Song' in 'Knickerbocker Holiday.'"

However, Stewart's vocal aspirations were not to be fulfilled in "Dodsworth." Entangling legal complications stood in the way of releasing the show for production as a musical.

His singing career having taken a temporary setback, Stewart thinks there's some chance he might go back on stage, a dramatic arena where he got his start before coming to Hollywood.

"I'd like to do a play," he said. "The last time I did one was in 1948. I took Frank Fay's place in 'Harvey' on Broadway."

Stewart, who says "I figure I've got ten more years" as an actor, is one of the first stars returning to 20th Century Fox since that giant movie lot shut down production last year.

At that time, Stewart was set to star in Fox's movie, "Take Her She's Mine." The shutdown made it appear the picture might never get into production and Stewart offered to buy it for filming at another studio. Fox turned down his offer and he reports back next month.

"The picture was supposed to go last fall," he said. "I was all set with costumes and everything. Then they closed the studio. I didn't know where to go but things are starting to smooth out now. This was very sudden; the decision to open the studio."

It has been a year since Stewart worked in a picture, a layoff he considers too long.

"I'd make three pictures a year if I could find them," he said.

WALK LIKE A MAN IS NUMBER ONE ON UPI RATINGS

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Four Seasons' recording of "Walk Like a Man" stepped up to first place this week in the United Press International ratings of the nation's top 20 tunes.

"Hey Paula" by Paul and Paula, last week's No. 1 tune, slipped one position, exchanging spots with "Walk Like a Man."

There were no changes in the next six positions from last week. The Rooftop Singers' "Walk Right In" remained in third place, Dion's "Ruby Baby" stayed in fourth, "Rhythm of the Rain" by the Cascades in fifth, the Rebels' "Wild Weekend" in sixth, Bobby Darin's "You're the Reason I'm Living" in seventh and "What Will Mary Say" by Johnny Mathis in eighth.

Eydie Gorme's rendition of "Blame It on the Bossa Nova," unlisted last week took over the ninth position, and "From a Jack to a King" recorded by Ned Miller jumped from 13th to 10th.

Washington Window

By LYLE C. WILSON
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — This is the birthday month of the 16th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, the graduated income tax amendment. The tax is 50 years old.

You wouldn't believe how lightly the income tax flicked the pocketbook in the first years after President Woodrow Wilson began to collect it. President Kennedy is the ninth in that office to be confronted with the income tax riddle. The correct answer is a distribution of the tax burden or of tax deductions fair and satisfactory to all hands. It can't be done.

Like it or not, the graduated income tax is here to stay. It has a sinister past. It has been described as a tax system based on the fair proposition of ability to pay. But it was proposed originally by Karl Marx in the Communist Manifesto as a tax for the redistribution of wealth.

By reason of its graduated rates close to the level of confiscation, the income tax has become in the United States a tool, some for wealth distribution.

Scared by Long
 The late Sen. Huey P. Long came to Washington more than 30 years ago, braying his campaign slogan: Every man a king! Redistribution of wealth was basic in Huey's political strategy. He was selling something for nothing and in exchange he got votes. His followers swarmed far beyond the boundaries of Louisiana.

Huey might have been elected president if he had lived. FDR was in the White House and he sought to check Huey with some New Deal wealth distribution. Long's redistribution of wealth ballyhoo was gaining such a following that it was almost in a mood of panic that FDR sent his own tax revision program to Congress in June 1935.

Kennedy now is withdrawing somewhat from the redistribution of wealth idea in taxation. He is saying now what the business community tried to tell FDR in 1935 and thereafter: That confiscatory tax rates in the upper brackets would discourage initiative and discourage the use of risk capital and, in short, put a crake on the economy.

How Times Change
 In the first year of the income tax, a married person with two dependents and a $5,000 net income paid $10. At $8,000 the bite was $40, rising to $60 on the $10,000 family, $260 on $25,000; $2,310 on $100,000; $25,010 on $500,000. Times have changed.

Wars and the welfare state boosted taxes over the years until the $5,000 family was paying $577. The tax ranged from there to $411,224 on $500,000. A 1942 revenue act boosted the bite on $500,000 to $443,000.

The record over the years as compiled by the Internal Revenue Service shows income taxes generally rising sharply under Democratic administrations and declining under Republican — not merely declining for the rich folks, but for the little guys, too.

For example: The family man with $5,000 net who paid Democrat Wilson $10 back there in 1913, paid only $3 to Herbert Hoover's Republican tax collectors in 1929. The 1913 tax of $40 on $8,000 was down to $14. But the $100,000 family tax was up from $2,310 to $14,846 in 1929. The $500,000 family was up from $25,010 to $110,846. Karl Marx redistribution of wealth was here to stay.

Foreign Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
 UPI Foreign News Analyst
 Japan, whose economy has enjoyed sensational growth since the end of World War II, is hoping for another boom.

Some of it, Japanese businessmen hope, will come from increased trade with the Soviet Union and Red China. There are bugs in both cases.

A new treaty with the Soviet Union provides for two-way trade totalling about $670 million and means an increase in Japanese-Soviet trade of almost 50 percent.

For trade with Red China the prospects are for about $100 million in 1963 as compared with $75 million in 1962 and $55 million in 1961.

Reds Like Credit
 Obstacles are anxieties over reaction of the United States and a desire on the part of both Red China and the Soviet Union to do business on credit.

Since Japan recognizes the Nationalist Chinese regime on Formosa and not the Peking regime, trade with the Red Chinese is conducted on a "friendly" basis with firms who do not trade with those on Formosa.

Among other things, the Chinese want special steel and agricultural tools.

The Japanese steel industry is especially eager for such a market because it faces a glutted market at home.

Japanese steel, shipbuilding and machine tool industries also are eager to expand trade with the Soviet Union.

Japanese exports to the Soviet Union in 1960 were valued at $39 million. Last year they surged to $118 million.

Siberian Development
 A Russian lure to increased Soviet trade is possible Japanese participation in vast Siberian development plans.

Japanese economic growth in 1962 amounted to around 5 percent, about double the U. S. growth rate but below what the Japanese have been led to expect in the years since World War II. Since 1950, the Japanese growth rate has averaged better than 8 percent.

Now, however, the steel, textile oil refining and coal mining industries drastically are reducing output.

The Japanese also are pressing hard in other parts of Asia. They hope for expanded trade soon with Korea, and are using war reparations and grant and loan agreements to push products elsewhere.

Library Gets Books

Among the new books recently placed on the shelves at the Lovett Memorial Library are the following novels: Madame Castel's Lodger by Frances P. Keyes; the story of General P. G. T. Beauregard, first idol of the Confederacy, told in a superb biographical novel. They Walked Like Men by Clifford Simak: science fiction at its best. Devil's Harvest by Frank Slaughter: a most explosive and intriguing novel by a doctor-turned-writer; set in Laso with two scientists with rival ideologies. Mysteries: Sleeping Dogs Lying by Kenneth O'Hara: a gripping tale of suspense and international intrigue. Night of Shadows by Frances and Richard Lockridge: a broken luteon date leads to a rendezvous with murder. Non-fiction: The Priceless Gift by Eleanor Wilson McAdoo: the love letters of Woodrow Wilson and Ellen Axson Wilson revealing Wilson's deep personal thoughts and innermost emotions.

The Greek Stones Speak by Paul MacKendrick: a companion piece to "The Mute Stones Speak," this book tells the story of Greek archaeology. The Baroness and the General by Louise Hall Tharp: the extraordinary life of Baroness von Riedesel, wife of the German general who commanded the British mercenaries in the Revolutionary War. Operation Bernhard by Anthony Pirie: the story behind the greatest forgery of all, 1,000,000 counterfeit English pound notes during World War II. Contemporary Flower Arrangement by Rae Goldson: design and technique in modern methods showing ideas for using flowers, fruits and foliage in fresh and original ways. The Last Portage by Walter O'Meara: the biography of a man caught between two worlds of the frontier, born a white but raised an Indian. The Tuntsa by Teppo Turén: the story of a Finnish couple and some countrymen who were determined to come to America and made their trip in an old 30' boat. All in the Same Boat by Earle and Barbara Reynolds: a "must" for every armchair traveler who has wanted to take a voyage around the world.

Masterpieces of War Reporting edited by Louis Snyder: the great moments of World War II unforgettably recorded by top correspondents.

KEYWEST, Fla. — Paris Jackson, skipper of the two-man shrimp boat attacked by Cuban jet fighters, reflecting on the incident:

"It really scared me. God! I was really scared. We just lay there (on the deck) because there wasn't anywhere else to go."

Amendments Here Again

By VERNON SMYLIE
Texas News Syndicate
AUSTIN — There probably will be three or four dozen amendments to the Texas Constitution proposed during the current session of the Texas Legislature. But don't raise your eyebrows about that. It's only normal.

This is the forty-third time the Legislature has met in regular session since the present all-inclusive Constitution was adopted in 1876. During that period, some 2000 constitutional amendments have been proposed. That means there have been an average of about 47 changes proposed each time.

But constitutional amendments, at best, are long shots. They have a long road to travel before they are really meaningful. Only slightly more than 10 per cent reach a vote of the people and less than two-thirds of those ever become part of our basic state law.

A proposed constitutional amendment takes the form of a joint resolution. It is subject to all of the ordinary pitfalls of the legislative process, plus one extraordinary pitfall: It must be passed by both the Texas Senate and the Texas House of Representatives by a two-thirds vote of the total membership. That part — of the total membership — should be noted along with the two-thirds requirement. It means a two-thirds vote of the senators and representatives present at voting time won't do. The legislators in favor of the amendment must include at least 100 of the House's 150 members and 21 of the 31 senators.

If a proposed amendment stands the test of the two legislative chambers and comes out approved, it is ready for submission to the people. The only obstacle which it sidesteps is sidestepped at this point. It isn't subject to consideration by the governor. Some governors put their stamp of approval on proposed amendments, but the governor isn't empowered to veto them.

Constitutional amendment proposals may be put to a vote of the people either at a special election or a regular election. The decision rests with the Legislature. The Legislature also decides the way a proposal shall be phrased. The choice which rests with the voter is one of FOR or AGAINST. Proposed amendments have to be advertised once a week for four weeks sometime during the period three months before election in a newspaper in each county in Texas. In the counties where there are no newspapers, no advertising is required. The courts have held that if a few papers miss the full publication run in counties having newspaper in each county in Texas passed by the people, is not invalidated. It still goes into effect.

An amendment passes if it is favored by a simple majority of the people casting votes. The secretary of state canvasses the returns with either the governor or the attorney general or both. A proclamation declaring the amendment to be part of the Constitution then is issued by the governor.

That completes the amending process. But frequently the hardest part of the fight is still to come. That is the crucial battle to push enabling legislation — the measures that actually put the amendment to work — through the Legislature.

There have been two classical examples of this problem in recent years.

The voters overwhelmingly approved a constitutional amendment authorizing the expenditure of State funds to advertise Texas. They also made way for regulation of the small loan industry by authorizing an amendment permitting flexible rates of interest.

But, for practical purposes, both amendments remain in wraps. There has been a start toward developing a State financed advertising program, but it is only a start. An act carrying out the purposes of the small loan amendment has yet to be passed by both legislative chambers.

This problem undoubtedly comes from the fact that it is far easier to agree on a general principle than to work out minute operational procedures that give the principle real substance and meaning. But it's a problem, nevertheless, and a big rock in the long road that all constitutional amendments must travel.

One other thing: I mentioned the number of regular sessions of the Legislature that have taken place since the adoption of the present Texas Constitution.

That was for a reason. The Legislature can consider proposed constitutional amendments only during regular sessions. During special legislative sessions, the amending procedures are off limits.

SKELETON CREW — At first glance these men seem to be working on the remnants of some huge dinosaur. The objects are aluminum, not bone, but will be used to form the backbone of the C-141 StarLifter cargo jet. Massive part in the foreground, which stands over 15 feet tall and weighs 1,680 pounds, will support the plane's wings. It was produced on a 35,000-ton press by Alcoa in Cleveland, Ohio.
