Two More U.S. Navy Jets Downed by Cong

All Five Crewmen Killed

SAIGON (UPI) — North Vietnamese anti-aircraft guns shot down two more U.S. Navy planes today, killing all five crewmen in the heaviest single air loss since raids began on the north. In ground fighting U.S. military headquarters disclosed another major setback.

The loss brought to 403 the number of Americans killed in action in Viet Nam since massive U.S. aid began in 1961.

A government spokesman said the Communists carried out three successive ambushes Tuesday which took a toll of 160 government troops killed, wounded or missing near the government district headquarters of Le Thanh in Pleiku Province, 223 miles northeast of Saigon.

The Pleiku action in which two American advisers were killed had been reported before. But only today did U.S. military headquarters disclose the extent of the Communist victory. Viet Cong losses in the Tuesday battle were put at 21 killed.

In other ground action Communist forces attacked three Vietnamese units southwest of Quang Ngai, a coastal city 340 miles north of Saigon. Government troops suffered a staggering setback there earlier this week. U.S. military advisers said naval bombardments by warships of the U.S. 7th Fleet stalled the Red attack only 10 miles from Quang Ngai and two miles from the airstrip.

A U.S. spokesman said the first American pilot was killed today when his A4 Skyhawk jet from the aircraft carrier Midway was hit by Communist ground fire during a raid on a coastal radar station near Thanh Hoa, about 75 miles south of Hanoi.

The pilot of another Skyhawk on the same mission saw the plane plunge into the Gulf of Tonkin about a mile offshore. The pilot of the stricken plane was unable to parachute.

The second downed plane was a modified A1 Skyraider dispatched from the Midway with four crewmen to search for the wreckage of the Skyhawk in hopes of saving the pilot. It was hit during the search operation and crashed about a half mile inland.

"There was no chance of survivors from either crash," the spokesman said.

Both of the planes lost Tuesday were F8 Crusaders. The (See JETS, Page 3)

'Race Is On' For House Speaker Job

AUSTIN (UPI)—In the words of a current hillbilly hit, "The Race Is On"—for speaker of the Texas House in 1969.

The entries are Reps. Gus Mutscher of Brenham, Gene Fondren of Taylor and Bill Parsley of Lubbock. For at least two of them, there will be "cryin' in the backstretch" and "heartache on the rail."

Although all three refuse to confirm or deny it, their colleagues confirm that all are seeking pledges of support from other House members.

Barring unforeseen developments, there will be no contest in 1967. Current Speaker Ben Barnes reportedly has well over 100 pledges from the 130-member House.

The pledges sought by Fondren, Parsley and Mutscher are conditioned on the assumption that Barnes will be ready to quit—or move up—by 1969.

None of the three 1969 candidates will say how many pledges he has, and the estimates circulated by their partisans frequently are inflated in an attempt to generate a bandwagon psychology.

A representative who is pledged to Mutscher estimated Fondren had nine pledges, Parsley 18 and Mutscher 20 to 30 as of the end of the 59th session May 31. This would indicate only that no one has a definite lead. "Members are not very anxious to give their pledges this early," said the Mutscher pledgee.

Fondren is the most conservative of the three candidates. He tangled with Gov. John Connally this year over industrial safety legislation. Connally drafted a mild version with no penalties or enforce-

Astronauts Rest For Space Flight

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — U.S. astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White, vowing "we are ready," today relaxed their rigorous training in the final hours before their planned departure Thursday on man's boldest venture into space.

Barring a late-hour hitch, the pair of college chums-turned-spacemen will ride a 108-foot-tall space machine into the skies at 8 a.m. CST Thursday on a four-day, 1,650,000-mile voyage that will challenge the best that Russia has done.

Hitches seemed unlikely. Doctors Tuesday gave McDivitt and White a critical medical clearance. Technicians said both the 7,200-pound Gemini-4 capsule and its two-stage Titan-2 rocket booster were in good shape.

Meteorologists said the weather outlook was sunny.

The two astronauts planned to meet with Flight Director Christopher C. Kraft and Houston Manned Spacecraft Center Chief Robert R. Gilruth today to go over details of the weather once again.

Otherwise, Kraft said "we couldn't look better," and was scheduled to hop a plane back to Houston today to guide the final countdown and launching via long distance.

Federal space agency spokesmen said McDivitt and White, after months of training that included 65 hours in their Gemini-4 capsule and 150 hours in simulators, planned to spend most of today "relaxing and reviewing mission plans and rules."

There was a chance, officials added, that the two might try to squeeze in a final "make believe" flight in a simulator sometime today.

The countdown called for technicians to load the gleaming white Titan-2 late today with 303,000 pounds of aerazine-50 and nitrogen tetroxide—the propellants that should hurl Gemini-4 185 miles into space, a U.S. record.

McDivitt said "we've got a good spacecraft" for the 62-orbit mission, which he will try to maneuver to within 20 feet of another satellite—the Titan-2 second stage which earlier will have propelled them into space and which will have entered a nearby orbit of its own.

Once that close, co-pilot White—wearing a $26,000 suit of space clothes with 22 protective layers—will climb out, using a hand-held jet gun, push himself on America's first "space walk" to within a few feet of the Titan-2.

The history-making "rendezvous" and "space walk" could put the United States one or two up on the Soviet Union in one daring and possibly dangerous leap. But astronaut physician Dr. Charles Berry "reaffirmed his confidence" in the men and equipment that will make the attempt, space agency officials said.

SITUATION EASED IN DOMINICA

Troops to Leave Santo Domingo

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson is pulling 2,000 U.S. Marines out of the Dominican Republic, but with the caution that a "very strong and sustained effort" still is needed to bring a measure of peace to that strife-torn land.

The Chief Executive made his announcement of the troop withdrawal Tuesday during his 43rd formal news conference, a 30-minute affair carried on nationwide television and radio and largely devoted to foreign policy matters.

Before his withdrawal order, U.S. military strength in the Dominican Republic area totaled 17,800 men, down by 4,000 from the peak reached shortly after Johnson first dispatched the Marines to Santo Domingo last April 28.

the area of propaganda—"Still is noted hour by hour," he said.

But he said that U.S. military commanders on the scene and Secretary General Jose A. Mora of the Organization of American States (OAS) believed the military situation has eased enough to permit further U.S. troop withdrawals.

Johnson vowed strong support for Mora and strong U.S. backing for OAS efforts to "enlarge and strengthen efforts for a peaceful settlement."

Two things remain to be done, he said. They are: —To find a broadly based government under OAS leadership.

—To begin the "comprehensive task of reconstruction" in the Dominican Republic.

Although most of his news conference, held in the ornate East Room of the White House, centered on U.S. policy in the Dominican Republic, the president made these other points: —He has asked Congress for a "very special" $89 million appropriation to begin the "massive effort" of lifting the economy of Southeast Asia. "This is the only way that I know in which we can really win," he said.

—The United States has begun feeding and clothing about 3 1/2 million citizens of the Dominican Republic, and has treated more than 15,000 persons in medical centers set up in Santo Domingo.

—He does not want to speculate on the possibility of all-out use of U.S. troops in combat against the Communist Viet Cong in South Viet Nam. He said a recent flare-up in the fighting there had been "anticipated," and that it was serious.

Johnson insisted that the United States has no desire to push it if it comes from a hardware store we have it. Lewis Hdw. Adv.

Marina Wants To Be Left Alone, Newsmen Told

RICHARDSON, Tex. (UPI)—Marina Oswald, who was unsuspectingly drawn into one of the nation's greatest tragedies, Tuesday happily became the June bride of a man who rode into her life on horseback.

"I just want to be left alone," said the radiant Marina Tuesday night following her wedding. With that, she and her husband, 27-year-old Kenneth Jess Porter, drove off to an undisclosed retreat.

The couple was wed in a small justice of the peace office in the tiny community of Fate, Tex.

The couple consented to a short press conference at Marina's home in Richardson, about 30 miles west of Fate.

The Russian-born Maria, 24, appeared happy but a little bit stunned by the attention.

The beaming bride, dressed in white, bore little resemblance to the woman who was escorted into the Dallas police station the evening of Nov. 22, 1963. She had just been told her husband, Lee Harvey Oswald, was suspected of killing the President of the United States.

She became a widow two days later. Oswald was shot to death in the Dallas police station basement by Jack Ruby.

Since then, she has lived as much in seclusion as possible, moving to Richardson, a Dallas suburb. She was easily able to support herself and her two little girls, June Lee 3 1/2, and Rachel, 1 1/2, through financial contributions from sympathetic Americans and from money she made selling personal effects.

Marina married Oswald in Russia, during his defection to that country. He brought her back to the United States with him, but kept her secluded as much as possible. He forbade her to learn English and did not al-

Congolese Rebels Murder 75 Whites

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (UPI)—Congolese rebels executed 75 white hostages in the remote village of Buta, a woman survivor of the massacre told authorities in Paulis today.

The report was radioed here by officials in Paulis, situated in the northern Congo.

The woman, who was not identified, was one of two persons who arrived by air today in Paulis about 180 miles northeast of Stanleyville. The other, a man, died soon after arriving, presumably of wounds.

Authorities said if the woman's report was substantiated there was little hope of finding many survivors among the 109 whites believed in rebel hands in the region near Buta.

If the death toll proved true, it would be the worst single massacre of white hostages in the Congo's bloody history. More than 300 whites were in rebel hands last December when Belgian paratroopers took the rebel capital of Stanleyville.

MOVIN' OUT — Sgt. Ellis Knight, Staff Sgt. David Armstrong, and Platoon Sgt. David Hawkins dismantle a 105 recoilless rifle in preparation for the annual summer encampment at North Ft. Hood. Company B, 2d Battalion, 142d Infantry, Texas National Guard, will spend two weeks undergoing field training. They will travel by military truck convoy. An estimated 80 members of the local unit will leave Pampa Saturday and return June 20.

Former Senatorial Candidate Bush Pondering Suit on Redistricting Plan

AUSTIN (UPI)—Republican lawyer Bill Cassin of Houston huddles with his client, defeated Senate candidate George Bush, today to see what they will do next in their suit over congressional redistricting.

Bush, a Houston oilman, led a GOP group into court in 1963 and won a ruling that the state's 23 congressional districts were unequal and unconstitutional. Now he is wondering whether they should contest the plan approved by the 59th Legislature this week.

"I don't want to do it if it's just carping or picking at something," Bush told UPI Tuesday, "but with just a look at the plan the legislature passed, the exceptions seem so glaring that I think we have to do something."

Bush said he would confer with Cassin tonight and should know by the end of the week what their strategy would be.

Other Republicans were more final in their criticism. U.S. Sen. John Tower, in a release from Washington, said the plan "completely ignores the community-of-interests principle."

The sole Republican in the legislature, Rep. Frank Cahoon of Midland, said a resolution passed Monday night making last-minute changes in the plan was "clearly unconstitutional."

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Some- where in my college records it says that I majored in economics.

Almost every time my wife sees my bank statement she wants to know how I could have majored in that subject and still know so little about it.

That, of course, is the beauty of economics. You don't have to understand it in order to enjoy it. I'll give you some examples.

Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., recently received a letter from a constituent who lives in a mountainous region in his district.

"I read in the paper that Congress was and the President was fighting poverty," the letter said. "That's good and I am for it, but tell the President if he has any poverty left over from some other place to please send it down here. It's better than us mountain folks has been used to."

New Concept
See what I mean? You don't have to know a thing about economics to recognize that Quillen's constituent has given birth to an entirely new economic concept.

All my life I have read of "share the wealth" programs, but to my knowledge this is the first time anyone has ever advocated a "share the poverty" program.

In theory, the proposal looks sound. It is, however, one thing to advocate a program and quite another to make it work.

The difficulty in this case is the old problem of distribution — how to get poverty out of the hands of the few and spread it around where it will do the most good.

Another new economic theory has been advanced by the National Federation of Independent Business, which recently undertook a survey of small business expansion and job creation.

One businessman reported that he had increased his sales while at the same time cutting his sales force in half. He said he did this by moving to a new location.

Need Help
"We needed extra help to curb stealing and shoplifting" at the old location, he explained.

This prompted the federation to suggest that new job opportunities could be created by encouraging shoplifting.

A third novel approach in the economic field was related to me by Sidney Yudin, distinguished editor, publisher and head copy boy of Roll Call, the Capitol Hill's weekly newspaper.

Yudin was having trouble collecting a bill for an advertisement he had printed. He instructed his office girl to include a threatening letter with the next statement.

The letter she composed read as follows:
"This account is long overdue. If you do not pay it soon, it will be even more overdue."

Short Cut to Justice
A car, parked on a slope with the brakes off, rolls downhill and smashes into B's car. To collect damages in court, does B have to prove the law of gravity?

Of course not. If a person had to prove every single fact in his case, lawsuits would last forever and a day. As a short cut to justice, the law allows a court to "take judicial notice" of the obvious. That is, a court may take some facts for granted even if they are not proved in the usual manner.

But which facts are so obvious as not to need proof? What do we know for sure?

The range of judicial notice is enormous. It includes not only basic scientific laws like gravity but also the habits of animals (that mules will kick), the events of history (that the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941), and the essentials of geography (that Missouri is east of the Rockies).

In appropriate cases, courts also have taken judicial notice that telephones are popular, that "OK" means approval, and that women patients don't wear fur coats in the dentist's chair.

True, there are pitfalls. For one thing, what was sure yesterday may be quite the opposite today.

For example, a modern court would scarcely take judicial notice — as earlier courts have — that most businessmen wear watches in their vests, that ping pong is too hard a game for children, and that beans are baked at home in almost every New England household.

A fire-drill was one of the utensils buried in Tutankhamen's tomb.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tuesday night's NBC-TV documentary, "Grand Canyon," narrated by naturalist - author Joseph Wood Krutch, combined a journey into beauty and splendor with a powerful statement against rapacious "improvers."

The dignified and maturely restrained hour, with its underscoring of veneration for nature and its forms of life, was timely and immediately relevant because of the Grand Canyon's recent confrontation with improvers and because of President Johnson's beautification drive.

In word and picture, Tuesday night's program contrasted natural beauty and "improvements" with devastating effect. Viewers may recall that in 1963, Krutch and the same producer, Gerald Green, combined their efforts for another outstanding documentary, "The Voice of the Desert," about the Sonora Desert of Arizona.

In both shows, Krutch read passages from his own writings. Tuesday night he expressed the frustration of all men and women who know that more and more they are getting a second-hand, commercialized, unfaithful look at the natural wonders of the country, as opposed to early - day American settlers. "I wish to know an entire heaven and an entire earth," he said.

Beautification, of course, is not a matter of merely tidying up the front lawn. Such issues as conservation, urban decay, water pollution and building of structures are at base matters that involve political and economic — above all, economic — conflicts, and "Grand Canyon" scored heavily with its attitude toward fast - buck operators, real estate hucksters and dams of questionable need.

Krutch brought up the typical opposing argument that "human needs come first." What needs?, he asked, driving home his point about those who seem incapable of experiencing awe for anything other than power, amusement of a banal sort, and shekels. What, the hour asked, could be more necessary than the preservation of the nation's natural resources as a constant renewing source of human inspiration?

The Channel Swim: Monday's Indianapolis "500" auto race will be seen Saturday on ABC-TV's "Wide World of Sports." The relationship of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill is the subject of the same network's "FDR" series June 25. The final round of the Women's Open championship of the U. S. Golf Association will be presented on NGC TV July 4.

LNA Chairman Protests Right To Work Bill

Roy Sparkman, acting chairman of the legislative and national affairs committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, urged members to write or contact their congressman in opposition to the proposed repeal of the right-to-work laws.

Sparkman said legislation is now pending in Washington which would repeal a section of the Taft-Hartley Law which would outlaw the right-to-work laws in 21 states including Texas.

Sparkman was speaking in absence of Don Lane, committee chairman, who was out of town.

Program for the regular monthly luncheon of the committee was presented by four members of the Pampa Toastmasters Club.

The four debated the resolution that the federal government can solve unemployment in the United States through various federal programs.

Speaking for the resolution was Doug Stormont and Earl Mattes and against was Calvin Hill and Bill Watson.

The committee met yesterday at noon in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

Bush

A South Texas district dominated by Webb County has no incumbent and an East Texas district represented by conservative Rep. John Deady of Athens has a decidedly more liberal face.

Bush said he was satisfied with Harris County, where it is rumored he might run for Congress. But he said he was unhappy with "inequities" in West Texas, on the Gulf Coast and in Dallas County.

"It took a mastermind to figure out how to cut Dallas up this badly," said Bush. The plan gives Dallas two seats, ties the northwest corner of the county to a district that stretches to the Panhandle and puts Southeast Dallas into a Central Texas district.

He said the splitting of Orange and Jefferson counties on the coast and Midland and Ector counties in West Texas destroys "contiguous areas with common areas of interest that are long-established."

"A lot of people will be protesting this thing," observed Bush. "It's logical that we will say something about it." He said he did not know when they would return to court if a decision was made to contest the plan.

"There are some things that are pretty fair about the bill," Bush said, "but there still are many inequities."

Construction Okayed For County FM Roads

The Texas Highway Commission today approved the expenditure of $96,000 for construction of new farm to market road mileage in Gray County as part of the 1965 FM road program, announced District Engineer Charles W. Smith of Amarillo.

The engineer said 3.3 miles in Gray County will be involved. The work will be under the supervision of G. K. Reading, supervising resident engineer, Pampa. This project involves the construction of a road extending from the end of FM 2477, 4.5 miles southeast Highway 70, southeast to McClellan Lake. The construction will include grading, structures, and surfacing.

Work authorized for this county is part of a 911.2-mile statewide farm-to-market road-building program for 1965 as approved today by the Texas Highway Commission. The program will include 207 individual projects in 153 counties to cost an estimated $23.5 million.

The action brings the total designated FM system to 37,779 miles, of which 35,026 had been built by April 30. Another 773 miles were under construction on that date.

The farm-to-market road program is an annual road-building undertaking of the Texas Highway Department as provided by State law. Total cost of the 1965 program is approximately one-half million dollars in excess of the basic statutory requirement of $23 million.

With addition of the new miles authorized for construction by the Commission today, the designated mileage, 3,027 miles represent the Texas portion of the Interstate and Defense Highway system and 25,712 miles are a part of the primary system (US- and State-numbered highways). Remaining mileage is farm-to-market roads.

Miss Pampa Out Of Lake Meredith Beauty Contest

Miss Pampa, 18-year-old Carolyn Marak, will not be eligible to compete in the Miss Lake Meredith Contest it was announced yesterday by the Pampa Jaycees.

Carolyn will represent Pampa, however, in the upcoming Miss Texas Pageant.

Spokesmen for the Jaycees said that a clause in the by-laws of the Miss Texas event state that a contestant cannot enter a beauty pageant prior to the Miss Texas contest.

John Callarman, publicity chairman for the Jaycees, said that Carolyn will represent Pampa in the Miss Texas Pageant, but not in the Miss Lake Meredith event.

Paula Sealey and Ruth A. Guthrie, first and second runner-up in the Miss Pampa contest will therefore represent the city in the Lake Meredith beauty contest.

The winner of that contest will be Borger's contestant in the Miss Texas Pageant.

The Miss Lake Meredith contest is slated for 1:30 p.m. Friday in Borger in conjunction with the Lake Meredith Celebration set Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Pampa Grocer Hurt in Wreck

A three-car wreck shortly after noon yesterday injured a 40-year-old Pampa grocery store operator and inflicted almost $1200 damage to the vehicles involved.

Driver of the car was Royce P. Miller, 521 N. Summer, owner of Miller Grocery, 2000 Alcock.

According to investigating officers, Miller veered off the roadway and crashed into two parked cars.

The accident occurred at 12:08 p.m. near the intersection of Alcock and Christy.

Miller was treated and released for minor injuries at a local doctors clinic.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Spear & Staff Inc. says the recent stock market correction may continue for a week or so but that it would use further weakness to purchase recommended securities.

The firm says it believes there is further room for gains before an important top is reached.

Colby & Co. Inc. says that although a technical rally may develop shortly, it believes the stock market remains vulnerable to the unexpected in almost any area of influence.

Robert T. Allen of Shearson, Hammill & Co. says he finds it hard to escape the conclusion that, were price-earnings ratios higher and speculation more rampant, these would have provided ample reason for a more substantial decline than has already taken place or is likely.

VOTERS "CHOSE"
WARSAW (UPI) — Communist officials said today 96.8 per cent of Poland's 19.5 million voters cast ballots in Sunday's national elections.

There was little choice in the voting. A single list of candidates for 460 parliamentary seats was on the ballot.

Job

(Continued From Page 1) ment provisions, but Fondren succeeded in getting the House to adopt an even milder version sought by the Texas Manufacturers Association (TMA).

The entire subject of industrial safety legislation died in the Senate. Labor representatives contended that was exactly what Fondren and the TMA wanted.

Parsley and Mutscher were both members of "the team" in the 59th Legislature, with Parsley heading the Rules Committee and Mutscher chairman of the redistricting committee.

Parsley got stung with a gubernatorial veto on his bill to give Texas Tech a medical school, but he successfully carried Connally's important water development legislation.

Mutscher won praises from many quarters for his painstaking work on the three redistricting bills, but also made some enemies. Fortunately for Mutscher, however, most of the enemies are those who got thrown into a race against another incumbent and thus may not be back.

He denied that the action signaled any such thing as a "Johnson doctrine" for sending U.S. troops to quell insurrections or Communist uprisings in the Western Hemisphere.

U.S. policy, he said, was exemplified by the "Alliance For Progress" program, is "well known and well advertised," and rests in the belief that "the principles of communism are incompatible with the principles of the inter-American system."

City Eating And Drinking Places Get State Okay

The sanitation rating of Pampa's eating and drinking establishments indicates the local program is "well organized and accomplishing satisfactory results," according to a report from the State Department of Health at Austin.

The report, filed with E. O. DeVoll, city health department, in a letter from James M. Dougerty Jr., administrative assistant of the Food Control Division, stated:

"The sanitation rating, computed to be 89.6 per cent compliance with items of sanitation and 87 per cent on enforcement methods, indicates the program to be well organized and accomplishing highly satisfactory results."

The appraisal was based on inspections made in Pampa by E. F. Herzik, state food and drug inspector.

Marina

She said that she and Marina were sitting on the back porch of Mrs. Clark's home one day about two months ago "when Kenneth came riding up on his horse."

"They just sort of clicked," said Mrs. Clark.

Porter was divorced in January, 1964. He and his former wife, Wanda Avora Porter of Richardson, had two children. Mrs. Porter was granted custody of them at the time of the divorce.

Porter is an electronics technician at the Texas Instruments plant in Richardson. The bridegroom, a tall, husky man, looked ill at ease at the press conference. He said little, leaving most of the answers to Marina.

Dear Abby.... Belief in Luck Explains Success of Enemies

DEAR ABBY: You don't waste many words so I won't either. Do you believe in luck?

DEAR BERNIE: Certainly. How else could one explain the success of his enemies?

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a neighbor who works from 12 to 18 hours a day in her yard. She mows the lawn at 11 o'clock at night and disturbs the entire neighborhood. Her son is studying to be a concert pianist, and he is still going strong at the piano at one o'clock in the morning. This may seem unbelievable, but at 5 o'clock in the morning she is out in her yard watering the grass and singing, "La la la la!"

Except for the crazy hours they keep, they are a delightful family. To whom should I complain?

BLURRY-EYED
DEAR BLURRY: First complain to your neighbor (with a song in your heart) and let her know that but for your neighborly spirit, you would have sung to the local police. There are laws about disturbing the peace — be it a drunken brawl, Chopin or "La la la la!"

DEAR ABBY: What does a boy do when he meets a girl his parents disapprove of because he picked her up in a movie show? My parents say she is trash, and they haven't even met her. When I first met Dianne (she is 15), I told my parents the truth about how I met her. They were very upset and told me not to have anything to do with her. I secretly dated Dianne for four months, and then I told my parents about it. They really became upset, and forced me to break up with Dianne for all time. This really hurt her. We liked each other a lot and she was a good kid. I think this is unfair and I want to know what you think.

BROKEN-HEARTED
DEAR BROKEN-HEARTED: You don't say how old you are, which is important. But assuming you are under 17, picking up a girl anywhere is a poor way to meet a "good kid."

Your parents should have met Dianne before passing judgment on her. However, I can't blame them for insisting that you break up. You did see Dianne on the sneak for four months, which proved to your parents you couldn't be trusted.

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to a columnist before, but after reading the letter from the mother who was "proud" that her two little sons were born with cleft palates because it was a "manifestation of God's work," I cannot refrain from commenting.

Can it be that this mother does not know that cleft palates can be corrected by surgery? I do not feel that "God manifests His work" by deforming infants at birth. If He did, He wouldn't give the surgeon the knowledge and skill to correct such deformities.

'After 30' Beauty Blueprint

MATURE BEAUTY—The older woman likes to look her best when on vacation. She selects skin cleansers, moisturizers and fresheners that pack without breaking (left). A special boon for those with graying hair is a foam-on hair rinse (center) that lasts through several shampoos. For night care she uses (right) an eye cream to ward off eye wrinkles.

By ALICIA HART
Beauty Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
The woman planning a vacation in the sun tends to take a long look in the mirror—especially if she is on the wrong side of 30.

Yet despite the cult of the young, a woman begins to reach her peak in personality and physical beauty in her 30s. Keep that in mind when hitting the resort haunts this season.

The woman on vacation will want to take care of her complexion quickly but effectively. This is easy to do. Select facial cleansers and moisturizers, for example, that are packable in light plastic containers.

A summer vacation calls for maximum skin care, especially when you plan to spend many hours in the sun.

According to specialists allow 10 to 20 minutes each day for your complexion care. Each morning and night, cleanse your face thoroughly with a cream cleanser that lifts grime and dirt. If you tend to make-up your face several times a day, remove old make-up with the cleanser before applying new. As a chaser select a skin freshener that helps return the skin to normal acid-alkaline balance. This guards against further skin dryness and is a cool, refreshing pick-up.

Daily exposure to the sun robs the skin of age-fighting moisture. It is up to you to retard this action. Smooth on a moisturizing lotion whenever you feel you need it.

Gardening News

By THELMA BRAY

Many trees and shrubs were planted in Aspen Park last week as a result of contributions by Mr. E. L. Green, Mrs. Walter Purviance and the Pampa Garden Club.

Thirty-four shrubs planted included Lilacs, Snowballs, Weigelia, Beautyberry, Flowering Quince, Red Barberry, and Golden Privet.

Sixteen trees planted included Purple-leaf Plum, Sunburst Locust, Silver Maple, Weeping Willow, Cottonless Cottonwood, Moraine Locust, and Smoke Tree.

Evergreen trees planted were Austrian Pine, Colorado Spruce and Ketter Juniper.

Mr. Butler of Butler's Nursery gave a generous reduction on the cost of these plants as well as donating several shrubs. Mr. Carl Wright, park superintendent, and his men planted all these trees and shrubs. A very grateful "thank you" to all these people.

Since the roses have been so beautiful this spring, the following quotes from the book "10,000 Garden Questions" might be of interest to readers:

"Roses are so closely associated with the painting, literature, music and even the politics of the world that they have for many centuries been an integral part of our culture. The rose is the very symbol of beauty and loveliness. Since the dawn of history it has been admired, appreciated, and linked with all kinds of human activities. It would be difficult to find an individual who could not recognize a rose — the best known and most loved of all our cultivated plants, and truly the 'queen of flowers.' Its majestic form, gorgeous colorings, and delightful perfume are unsurpassed. Even the thorns command respect. It is the standard of perfection by which all other flowers are judged."

When cutting the old flowers and seed heads from hybrid tea roses and everblooming roses, cut just above the uppermost 5-leaf leaflet, or where a plump, well-developed bud appears in the leaf axil.

Have you wondered where the "tea" in tea rose originated? Varieties allied to a Chinese species, Rosa odorata, are called tea roses. The odor of the flowers was thought to smell like fresh green tea leaves (not the beverage). At one time this species was called Rosa tea.

The bloom stalks of the Peonies, Iris and many other plants need to be cut back if this has not been done so already.

For those gardeners who follow the moon signs in gardening June 2 is the best time to plant seeds: June 7 through 10 will be good planting days.

Memo

Re: 'Slanted' Reporting

(This is one of a series of memos from Bob Segal, editor of the Valley Freedom Newspapers in Texas to members of the news staff. Mr. Segal writes a column for the American Way Syndicate which is distributed to more than 100 newspapers. Because his comments deal with matters of concern to our readers, we are reprinting them. We believe they apply equally in all areas. Your comments are invited).

Dear Staff Members:

The other day a member of a public agency, and its hired attorney, accused one of our reporters of having written a "slanted" story. Knowing something of the low boiling point of the two fellows involved, we didn't lose any sleep over the matter, particularly since neither of them brought their complaint to the editors of this paper.

But we did take time to examine the evidence.

It occurred to us that if there was only "slant" in the story, it was on the side of charity toward the complainants.

This brings up a point on which there is a spate of conversation in the learned circles of our trade — that thing called "objectivity."

You are under orders to write every news story "objectively." That is, you are supposed—as far as is possible—to approach every human transaction as if you were a resident of Mars come to visit this strange planet without preconceptions, prejudices or even discernible emotions about the human race. This is a patent impossibility, but we must strain at the gnat to approach this never-never land of Objectivity as often and as completely as we can image.

It is obvious, even to attorneys, that Justice is far from blind (in fact, she seems at times to wear bifocals), and objectivity is a delusion. Reporters, strangely enough, are part of the human tribe, and when they are brow-beaten, sneered at, or subjected to rudeness, they react just the way doctors, lawyers, carpenters and even Supreme Court judges do. They get sore; and their objectivity is bruised.

Well, sensibly or not, our job is to preserve what we can of our objectivity even in the face of rudeness, ignorance, daffiness or just plain boorishness. We might inquire, however, if objectivity serves its true purpose when, for example, a wild and noisy embroglio of political parties is made to read like the proceedings of the local poetry society.

Surely this is not objectivity in its highest sense.

Nevertheless, we remain dedicated to this objectivity thing in our news reports. I once more remind you of an obligation to exert the most extreme self-discipline in the face of both chronic complainers and accomplished flatterers.

Try, always, to give the reader the same general impression of an event that he would have gotten if he had, himself, occupied a front row seat.

And forget the habitual griping of a few public figures who define a "slanted" story as any one which does not depict them as persons of impeccable logic and immaculate judgment in all matters before the court.

Cordially,
The Editor

America Is a Paradise for Foreign Agents

By HARRY FERGUSON
UPI National Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) has infiltrated the Communist party in the United States so thoroughly that there was as much truth as there was humor in a recent cartoon on the subject. It depicted a leader of a Communist cell opening a meeting with this remark: "Comrades and members of the FBI."

A current joke around Washington is that the Communist party is largely supported by dues paid by FBI agents posing as Reds. But that does not mean that Moscow does not have spies scattered all through this nation. It merely means that the Russians are now using professional agents rather than members of the U.S. Communist party. There are many of them and they are highly dangerous.

America is a paradise for foreign agents because we live in an open society. Information is freely available here—information that would require years of hard digging to acquire any place beyond the Iron and Bamboo curtains. About three years ago Russian agents in this country were authorized to spend as much as $50,000 to get blue prints of American port facilities. They merely went to the government printing office and bought publications issued by the U.S. Army engineers. An FBI agent once counted 30 known Communists attending a scientific lecture and taking notes.

Spending $2 Billion
Russia probably spends $2 billion a year on espionage, and most of it in this country. The spy organization is called the State Security Service (KGB). It is big, tough and expert and Americans whose duty it is to combat it have a healthy respect for the enemy.

Allen W. Dulles, former head of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and probably the most efficient espionage man in the United States, describes the KGB:

"It is a multi-purpose, clandestine arm of power that can in the last analysis carry out almost any act that the Soviet leadership assigns to it. It is an instrument for subversion, manipulation and violence; for secret intervention in the affairs of other nations. It is an aggressive arm of Soviet ambitions in the cold war. If the Soviets send astronauts to the moon, I expect a KGB officer will accompany them."

Dulles says every Russian organization outside the Soviet Union is loaded with KGB agents—embassies, legations, trade missions, technical advisers and even the United Nations delegation. In some embassies the KGB agent may be chauffeur, but he gives orders to the ambassador.

Russians are natural born conspirators and they make excellent espionage agents. One man who knows what he is talking about says that at the height of the Stalin terror one Russian out of five was spying on somebody. The men in the top echelons of the KGB are dedicated and ruthless. During World War II the sister of V.S. Abakumov, a Soviet intelligence thief, was arrested for speculating in the black market. The case was referred to Abakumov, who instantly wrote out this order: "Speculation during war time is treason. Shoot her."

The Russians are experts in lining up Americans to obtain information. The other day Robert G. Thompson, a former member of the U.S. Air Force, was sentenced to 30 years in prison for passing secrets to the KGB while stationed in Berlin. It turned out that the Russians had paid him less than $300 a year for six years. One Russian agent was recruited when he was found riding on a train without a ticket. The KGB thought he had special qualifications and offered him a choice of joining up or going to prison for 25 years for violating the railroad rules. He joined.

Moscow trains its agents carefully. Capt. Nikolai Khokhlov, who defected to the Americans in 1954, said he was thoroughly trained in judo, the use of small arms and the fast driving of an automobile. One special weapon used by the Russians was a pistol about four inches long with three barrels in vertical alignment. The pistol had an accuracy of 25 feet and the sound of the shot was no louder than the snapping of your some stunning successes, but who walked out of the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa one day and turned over to the Canadian authorities all the Russian codes and ciphers.

Walter Krivitsky, chief of Russian espionage in Holland, is positive proof that he was carrying important information. It was so important that Russian agents were sent to the United States to kill Krivitsky and they accomplished their mission in a hotel room here in Washington.

NEW PROJECTS
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz has announced 94 new neighborhood Youth Corps projects in 31 states to help 38,503 needy young people stay in school or prepare for job-hunting.

Under the program so far, 63,821 summer jobs have been offered to young men and women aged 16 to 21. Wirtz said Monday he hoped soon to report additional projects that would raise the total of summer jobs to more than 100,000.

The projects announced will cover 27,982 school students and 10,531 drop-outs. The federal government's contribution of $20,186,100 will finance all but $2,860,800 of the total costs, with the balance to be met by local communities.

MEDICAL AGREEMENT
ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI)—Algeria and Cuba signed a medical agreement here under which Cuba will spend 50 doctors and nurses to Algeria. A team of 63 Soviet doctors is scheduled to arrive here today under a similar agreement with Russia.

Selari Belmont Threat

NEW YORK (UPI)—Trainer Harold Young may have another surprise for Saturday's 97th running at the Belmont Stakes, final jewel in racing's Triple Crown.

The 66-year-old trainer of long shot Sherluck, who won the 1961 Belmont and spoiled Carry Back's bid for Triple Crown immortality, is confident Selari, his 1965 entry, can pull another upset.

"The mile and a half of the Belmont should be to Selari's advantage," Young said Tuesday after shipping his Prince John colt to Monmouth Park (N.J.) from Garden State Park where he finished third Monday in the Jersey Derby. He will be vanned to Aqueduct in New York Thursday.

"He does his best running when some of the other horses begin to tire," Young concluded.

Selari will be the longshot in the Belmont, which probably will have only five starters, and his record is almost identical to that of Sherluck leading up to the finale.

A field of five, and possibly six, was shaping up for the $125,000 added Belmont. Tom Rolfe, winner of the Preakness, and Dapper Dan, runnerup in both the Preakness and the Kentucky Derby, already are entered along with Selari and Joseph Straus' La Cima, a newcomer to the classics.

Curly Lambeau Dies at Age 67

STURGEON BAY, Wis. (UPI)—E. L. (Curly) Lambeau, who organized the Green Bay Packers from a group of his high school pals and saw the team through one financial crisis after another, died of an apparent heart attack Tuesday night. He was 67.

Lambeau, a pioneer of the National Football League and a Hall of Fame member, died while mowing a lawn at the home of a friend.

Lambeau coached the Packers from 1919 through 1949, an NFL record for continuous service. His teams captured six NFL championships and tied for the title once. His 31-year record with Green Bay was 236-111-23. His teams finished out of the first division only twice, in 1948 and 1949.

A Green Bay native, Lambeau completed one year at Notre Dame where he played fullback for Knute Rockne. The immortal George Gipp was a halfback on the team. He returned home in 1919 after a year at college and organized a group of his old high school friends into a semi-pro team. Lambeau persuaded a local packinghouse to donate $500 for jerseys, and the "Packers" were born.

After two years of independent play, the Packers joined the American Professional Football Association, predecessor of the NFL, in 1921. Lambeau was a quarterback and played 10 seasons, scoring 109 points.

Lambeau's salesmanship is credited with saving the Packers from financial ruin more than once. And he also knew pro football would have to be spectacular to compete with the great college teams of the day, so he developed one of the best passing duos in the history of the game—Don Hutson and Arnie Herber.

SPORTS

58TH YEAR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, 1965

Veale or Koufax Is Controversy

By United Press International
There's a controversy among National League batters over who's the fastest lefthander—Bob Veale or Sandy Koufax.

Veale captured the Philadelphia Phillies vote Tuesday night and received unsolicited testimonials from Richie Allen and Dick Stuart.

The bespectacled pitcher, who is the defending NL strikeout king, fanned 16 Phillies to shatter his own all-time Pirate record en route to his third straight complete game victory, 4-0. Allen and Stuart each wiffed three times.

The triumph was the 12th straight for Pittsburgh and finally sprung them from ninth place into seventh.

In other National League games, Milwaukee trimmed Houston 2-1, St. Louis edged San Francisco 2-1 and New York battered the Chicago Cubs 10-5.

In the fast ball debate over Veale and Koufax, most batters concede Sandy has the best curve ball, but that Veale's fast ball is superior.

The most remarkable part of Veale's performance Tuesday was that he warmed up, then waited an hour and 25 minutes because of a rain delay, pitched one inning, then had to wait another 35 minutes because rain halted the proceedings.

But the giant 6-foot-6-inch, 220-pounder has bull-like strength. He struck out five of the last six batters on a night when he had first warmed up at 7:45 p. m. and finished the game at 12:45 a. m.

"I was a little tired toward the end," Veale grinned, but his catcher, Jim Pagnaroni argued: "He was throwing bullets right down to the last man."

The Pirates kayoed Art Mahaffey in the first inning with two runs on singles by Bob Bailey and Bill Virdon, a passed ball, a sacrifice fly and Donn Clendenon's single.

Hank Aaron and Mack Jones slammed back-to-back home runs in the eighth inning off Hal Woodeshick to bring the Braves from behind. Houston's Dick Farrell was removed from the game in the second inning when he was struck on the elbow by a line drive hit by Frank Bolling. Billy O'Dell won in relief.

The attendance of 28,691 in the Astrodome, gave Houston a total of 734,139 in 27 home dates, surpassing last year's total attendance by 8,366.

The Cardinals broke their five-game losing skid and the Giants five-game winning skid when Ray Sadecki threw a five-hitter and Dick Groat singled in the winning run in the sixth inning. The loss was the fifth for Juan Marichal, who has won seven. Willie McCovey homered (his 12th) for the Giants only tally.

Jim Hickman clubbed two home runs and drove in four runs and Joe Christopher plated three with three hits as the Mets whipped the Cubs. Ron Santo homered for Chicago (No. 10) off winner Larry Bearhart. Bob Buhl was the loser, leaving in the fourth—an inning after former teammate Warren Spahn was routed by 10 Chicago hits.

Medel TKOs McGowan

WEMBLEY, England (UPI)—Jose Medel, second-ranked bantamweight, today is eyeing Fighting Harada's world crown after Tuesday night's sixth-round TKO over Walter McGowan.

Medel, the Mexican champion of his division, stopped the king at 2:52 of round six when Referee Ike Powell halted the bout because McGowan was in a dazed condition following a knockdown.

McGowan, who also was knocked down for a six count in the opening round, took several punches to the head and was unable to continue. Medel, however, had a badly cut left eye after the Scotsman connected in the second round. Both fighters weighed 116 3/4 pounds.

Molberg To UT in Baseball

STEVE MOLBERG Longhorn

Steve Molberg, Pampa's all-district 3-4A first baseman, has accepted a full baseball scholarship to the University of Texas.

Molberg was a three-year starter for both the Harvesters and the American Legion Rebels, making the all-district first team in both his junior and senior years. This past year, the 6'3", 185-pounder batted .351, leading the team in runs-batted-in, with three home runs, two triples and four doubles in district play. Molberg also fielded 1,000 on the season.

"Big Steve" is a member of a baseball family, as his father, Max, is a former professional player.

Molberg considered and rejected several professional offers before deciding on a college career first. Molberg becomes the first Pampa player to go to UT on a baseball scholarship, joining a long line of ex-Harvesters and Rebels in college baseball.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself no more, no less. It is thus consistent with the Human Relations Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Freedom Ideas for Sale

Perhaps one of the principal reasons why those of us who are engaged in communicating and selling ideas relating to freedom have had only partial success, at best, relates to our selling techniques.

This thought intruded recently when we were engaged in reading several books written by distinguished intellectuals of market place tends to confirm school.

The ideas offered by these writers were essentially shallow and often contradictory. But the techniques employed in their writing and in the presentation of their arguments were superb. They packaged their sophistries in most attractive garb. And the willingness of so many to accept these ideas relates, we believe, not to the ideas but to the packaging. A glance at the market place tends to confirm this belief.

A particular firm some years ago had pioneered in the development of a splendid product, gummed transparent tape. The usefulness of this tape is well known and it is a common product. But when it was first introduced, in large unattractive rolls for a very low price, there were few who sensed its potential.

The firm was actually in precarious circumstance and might have gone into receivership had it not suddenly obtained the services of a marketing expert. This man reduced the size of the rolls and made them attractive. He introduced the concept of thrust in conjunction with it by calling it "Scotch" tape. And carrying out the theme which comes to mind as we recall the proverbial thrift of the Scots, he dressed up the rolls in scotch plaid. Then he raised the price.

The firm began to make money and today is a leading industry. Another example: Some years ago a firm was organized called the "Crazywater Crystal Company." It took a small amount of epsom salts, put them in a bright package, extolled the virtues of "Crazywater crystals" and sold hundreds of thousands of packages at $1.50 each. The same amount of epsom salts could have been purchased at any drug store for anywhere from 10 cents to a quarter.

The government clamped down on this operation and put the people out of business. But they made a great deal of money, injured no one, and capitalized on the emetic value of epsom salts, which most people weren't buying.

This latter example seems to fit the procedure of the entrenched "pro-government" school precisely. It wasn't the content of the package that had the particular merit, it was the packaging that made it attractive.

Most of the political panaceas offered today are the same kind of merchandise, offered in quick-selling, installment-term units. The same results can be obtained more honestly, more effectively, and far less expensively if we only have recourse to the market. But because so many people are impressed with packaging, "pro-government" nostrums are "bought" by millions whereas the real merchandise offered in its strictly utilitarian clothing goes a-begging.

There are obviously two avenues of approach. We can begin the long and painful process of education, wherein people learn to become discerning and to challenge the content of what they buy rather than simply accepting the packaging. This process has begun and it should continue. It is having some effect.

The other, and more immediately practical step would be for those of us who care about freedom and the future of our way of life, to discipline ourselves in the communication arts so that freedom, too, can be brightly and attractively presented.

In this respect, an enormous amount of self-disciplinary work is indicated. Too long, those who believe in freedom, have succumbed to the temptation of seeking to advance their position by name-calling the opposition. But freedom has never been successfully advocated by dividing humanity into the "good guys" who agree with us and the "bad guys" who disagree. The only discernible result of this process is that the pro-freedom advocates are name-called in return. Hate and antagonism are engendered, rather than understanding.

The quick response of those who get an unholy delight in castigating their opponents often is this: "Freedom is so good that it doesn't require any salesmanship or any packaging. It is superior on its face."

But we should know by experience that even a solid gold bar must be sold.

And a nation that is prone to buy shoddy merchandise as a result of a sales pitch, will also buy superior merchandise when it is presented in a superior manner.

Freedom lovers, look to your sales tools.

That's My Shopping Cart!

Who wants more government controls placed on food and grocery manufacturers? Not the American consumer.

This was clearly shown in a recent nationwide study to find out what consumers really think about grocery manufacturers. Their products and how these products are packaged. The manufacturers have to know what the consumers want. Their livelihood and the wages and salaries of their employees depend upon it.

The objective study was made by Opinion Research Corporation, Princeton, New Jersey, for Grocery Manufacturers of America, Inc.

Four out of five and in some instances even a higher ratio of consumers, the study showed, are satisfied with the quality of food products, the ease with which they can be prepared and used in the home, their cleanliness and safety and their nutritional value.

Similarly most consumers are satisfied with present industry packages, including their convenience, range of sizes, information and pictures on labels, servings statements and level of fill. The few consumers who feel changes are called for in these areas (the number ranges from less than 1 out of 10 to only 7 out of 10) consider it to be the manufacturers' responsibility to make them rather than that of Government. Less than 1 consumer in 19 favors Government agencies making the changes.

Consumers also indicate almost no interest in standardization of food products. Only 1 out of 100 women asks for standardization of shapes or designs of packages. In regard to package sizes, 8 out of 100 women want an increase in the range of size available. Only 6 out of 100 would like to see sizes standardized.

Consumers have a choice of 8,000 items on supermarket shelves, two-thirds of which are new or improved within the past decade. They can buy their food for only 18 1/2 cents of each after-tax dollar compared with 26 cents in 1947-49. This is the smallest share of income spent for food anywhere in the world at any time in history.

All-in-all when the consumer speaks, she seems to be giving those who favor more government control of the food industry that typical warning from the aisles of the supermarket: "Hands off, that's MY shopping cart!"

A thought for the day—American political cartoonist William Mauldin said: "Look at an infantryman's eyes and you can tell how much war he has seen."

The Morality of Work
Exponents of the "share the wealth" philosophy are getting bolder each year. For example, take the statement of Dr. Alan Wade, associate professor of the School of Social Service Administration at the University of Chicago. He wants the government to provide a guaranteed $3,000 annual income to all persons, whether employed or not.

Dr. Wade made his giveaway proposal in an address last week to the alumni of the University of Tennessee School of Social Work, at Nashville, Tenn.

The sociologist said that in place of present tax laws, he proposes a reverse income tax. Persons who earned more than $3,000 would pay income tax as usual, while those who made less than that would receive enough funds to raise their standards to that level. "Some people," he admitted, "would say that this program would bankrupt the government. But a federal committee researching the possibility estimated that it would cost only $11.3 billion to raise the income of every family in the United States to a $3,000 standard."

The real flaw in Dr. Wade's giveaway argument is not whether the plan would bankrupt the United States. The flaw involves the morality of forced redistribution of wealth, for that is what the professor has urged. The $11.3 billion that he wants to redistribute in the form of handouts isn't money that Uncle Sam has had under a mattress for years and years. It is money that has to be taken out of the earnings of productive Americans. If the bureaucrats give away another $11.3 billion they will have to confiscate that amount from those who have made that money.

Now why should that be done? What is our society, after all? Is it a grab bag for drones? Is it communism, which theoretically takes from those who have and gives to those who have not? Certainly, the basic theory of our country is not communism. Nor is our country simply a scheme for defrauding the hard-working so that rewards may be given to the lazy and the incompetent.

Dr. Wade blandly ignores fundamental truths concerning human society and human beings. Society and government exist to provide a workable frame and public order for the energies of people. But his plan is a permanent subsidy program for the lazy. Yet the lazy have no vested right, under our laws and conceptions of public good, to be carried on the backs of the hard-working citizens.

Charity is one thing; everyone wants to help people in need. But the aim of this help is to get people on their feet so that they won't be dependent on the public. Dr. Wade's plan would create a system of subsidized beggars — the most highly paid beggars in history.

The American way provides that a person can gain wealth according to his abilities, energies, intelligence, and capacity to save and invest. This "American way" is the source of our prosperity and our strength. If Americans come to feel that work is not to be rewarded — if they see the shiftless given as much as or more than the energetic then the fundamental incentive of our progressive society will be destroyed. Unquestionably, the nation will lapse into dependency and indolence.

Dr. Wade is completely wrong in his judgment. The public, instead of raising welfare recipients to $3,000 a year, should make very sure that there is a big gap between the welfare client and the self-reliant taxpayer. It is the existence of this gap that makes the dependent citizen want to be independent of handouts.

The professor is way off base on another matter. He told the social workers: "I believe that a person has a right to work at a job he likes, not just one of the menial, dirty tasks of our society." It is precisely this attitude that is behind much unemployment and welfare in the United States today. Many hard, unpleasant jobs go begging in U.S. cities. Housewives have difficulty finding domestic help. Cities can't find people to keep clean the streets and parks. Meanwhile, welfare recipients, who could and should take these jobs, are busy collecting their relief payments and running down to the corner liquor store.

For centuries men and women swept and shoveled. There is an ep on swept and shoveled. There is no stigma attached to hard manual labor. Many a prosper-

State Dept's Crockett Pushing 'Sleeper' Bill to Create 'Super Foreign Service' Under Himself, Sealed Off from Congressional Inquiry

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — An amazing piece of legislation is being seriously considered by a House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee, headed by Representative Wayne Hays, D-O.

Unknown to the public at large — as well as most members of Congress — this measure has all the earmarks of being the biggest "sleeper" of President Johnson's wide-ranging legislative program.

On the ground of establishing "one personnel system for the Department of State and to improve the morale of its employees," this extraordinary bill would:

—Create a new super foreign service by blanketing in thousands of civil service employees of the State Department, and thousands of other civil service employees on foreign duty of 22 other government agencies — among them the Peace Corps, U.S. Information Agency, Agency for International Development (in charge of foreign aid), Export-Import Bank, Federal Aviation Agency, Maritime Commission.

—Strip these civil service employees of their veterans' preference, job security and other safeguards under existing laws. Under this measure, they could be arbitrarily fired within days on the charge of being incompetent, inadequate or otherwise undesirable.

—Make the Deputy Undersecretary of State for Administration — now William J. Crockett, principal author of the sweeping bill — virtual czar over the new super foreign service, with power to hire, fire, promote, transfer, and to bar these employees from aiding congressional investigations of their agencies.

Unpublished charts prepared by Crockett — which some members of the Foreign Affairs Committee haven't even seen — illustrating the scope and range of the far-reaching legislation label the proposed new super foreign service as "The (State) Department and Domestic Field Establishment" and the "Overseas Field Establishment."

In the past State Department authorities have emphatically denied the existence of an "establishment" in the department. ZEROING IN — No. 1 target of this little-known bill is Otto Otepka, State Department security officer whom Crockett has long been trying to oust for always giving information to a staff member of a congressional committee. The measure would strip Otepka, and all other affected civil service employees, of their present right to discuss their cases with members of Congress under the provision: "The right of persons employed in the civil service, either individually or collectively, to petition Congress, or to any committee or member thereof, shall not be denied or interfered with."

Foreign Affairs committee members have been informed that at a high-level State Department conference, Crockett remarked, "Once this bill is passed, there will never again be an Otto Otepka in the department."

This secret axing authority is stressed in a memorandum in the hands of the sub-committee. It points out that the legislation, sponsored by Representative Hays and strongly backed by the White House, would:

—Make it absolutely impossible for Congress or its duly constituted committees to make any sort of independent inquiry into the personnel, administrative or other actions of the department. Thousands of skilled, knowledgeable, dedicated public servants would be effectively sealed off from congressional inquiry and contact, and all Congress could hope to obtain in the future would be carefully screened and audited reports and statements from the very individuals directly responsible for the department's policies and actions.

"The bill virtually guarantees that the Department of State will speak with one voice and, as a result, Congress will be dealing with a duly constituted 'mouthpiece'."

TWO BOMBSHELLS — Principal hatching provisions of the measure are Sections 22 and 25.

The former empowers the President to transfer to the new super foreign service, within three years, all civil service personnel of the State Department, and the 22 other government agencies. Those who balk are subject to immediate dismissal.

Section 25 divests them of existing veterans' preference, job security and other safeguards. Once part of the proposed new foreign service, they would lose all these rights and privileges. The American Legion is vigorously on record against the legislation. The government employees' union irately charges it was not consulted.

When State Department personnel got wind of the backstage measure, Crockett hurriedly called a conference attended by some 200. Obviously annoyed, he denied a sweeping "reorganization" was contemplated. He also chidingly characterized copies of the bill reputedly circulating among the workers as "boot-leg."

ORDER, DISORDER AND DICTATORSHIP

The surest way to destroy freedom is to begin breaking down law and order in its name.

A free way of life cannot exist without law and order. Because the one supreme enemy of freedom is force. Force can be wielded by government under a system of law which has become arbitrary and despotic. But it can also be wielded by a man with a club.

In a truly free country, the life, liberty and property of every citizen is protected by law. This is the kind of country in which good men prefer to live.

But if true freedom becomes impossible, history has proved again and again that men will choose slavery over anarchy. So those in our time who seek to enslave the whole world have found the promotion of the best means to their evil end.

The cleverness of this method lies in the fact that it seems to encourage the exact opposite of what its promoters really want. They call for rioting in the streets, when their real goal is a society where no man not approved in advance by an all-powerful government will dare to speak above a whisper.

The road to serfdom leads to regimentation and dictatorship. By breaking down the structure of a free state, those who aim at absolute power are removing all the obstacles to their seizure of power, working for the day when a tormented people will ask them to restore authority with an iron fist.

one of the department's auditors. Crockett denied that any "intrigue, ulterior motives or secrecy" was behind the legislation. These protestations were greeted with derisive laughter. Crockett admitted he was sending the bill to Congress with White House backing, and insisted its sole purpose was to create a "single foreign service designed to improve employe morale and know-how by interchange within the various agencies."

Critical committee members still have been unable to ascertain the probable cost of the legislation. They are convinced it will run into many millions of dollars. This belief is based on the ground that the measure not only involves costly changes in pay differentials, but vacation, health and retirement benefits, and the cost of an extensive rotation policy.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

Why Do Some Associations Start Good and End Badly?

By SAM CAMPBELL
Business Editor

Why is it that an association, at the beginning formed for honorable objectives, can so easily be corrupted into an instrument for the control of a profession, business or occupation?

As an example of such corruption, we see business groups that have become unions, not unlike the Labor Union.

The difference between a true association and a union lies not in the name that the organization is called by, but in the question of who owns what. If the members belong to the organization, that is a union. But if the organization belongs to the members, that is an association in the true sense of the word.

How To Know

If you join an association, how can you be sure it is truly an association? Or if you are a member of an association now, how can you know the organization is sticking to its proper job?

That's a hard question. I doubt that anyone would understand the answer unless he is willing to delve into the science of human organization. Briefly stated, the matter amounts to this:

Men combine into organizations for either of two purposes: (a) for protection; (b) to accomplish some positive objective.

The technical word to describe the protective type of organization is "commensalistic." That term means literally "eating together"—that is, a kinship of interests. Examples of such groups are the Labor Union, the Chamber of Commerce, and various professional groups.

Corporate Organization

The second type of organization—that is, the one designed to accomplish some positive objective—is the business—a company, firm, partnership, or corporation. The technical word used to designate this kind of organization is called "corporate." That description doesn't mean necessarily that the organization is incorporated, such may or may not be the case; the term simply means that the organization in question has the capacity to move as one body toward the accomplishment of its chosen objective.

All human organizations in the universe can be classified on this basis. Any given society or group was formed either for the purpose of mutual defense (commensalism) or for the purpose of positive (corporate) accomplishment.

Now the problem with an association commences when it mixes these two separate functions. When the Labor Union, for instance, moved from the purely protective function and entered the business field (pension funds, hiring halls, real estate etc.), the leadership thereof acquired a power over the livelihood of its members. Thus the Labor Union executives, by giving work to some and withholding work from others, by rewarding some and penalizing others, can actually compel the members to do their will.

In a very meaningful sense, therefore, the Labor Union member confesses "I belong to the Union". He in fact does, or at least his livelihood does—which is almost the same thing.

Similarly, a Chamber of Commerce which is endeavoring to act as a clearinghouse for community trade has invaded the business field. By the power of differential treatment, it will acquire power over its members.

Once a protective organization steps out of its proper function the tendency is for it to defend its new-found role by seeking special legislation to reserve for itself a favored position in the market-place.

To summarize, when a protective association undertakes a marketplace activity, look out. There's trouble ahead.

Pull Up A Chair

By Frank Markey

If domesticated animals had remained wild creatures removed from any human control, their life spans, according to experts, would be no different than they are today. Apes reach full maturity at about 18 years and live as long as man. Chimpanzees and orangutans are known to reach 25; squirrels, 15; deer and antelope, 25; wild dogs, 20; and cats 10 to 25. Baboons, lions, horses, bears, donkeys, rhinoceros, hippos and giraffes have recorded life spans of about 30 years, as do some large whales. And elephants are known to have survived for 70 years.

Today's smile. We liked the one about the new member of a golf club who was playing the course for the first time. On the first tee he hit the ball, which by some miracle landed on the green and rolled into the cup making a hole in one. On the second tee he accomplished the same thing and said to his fellow players: "Gosh, I thought I had missed that time."

In this day and age of freedom marches and all kinds of picketing it's hard to believe the only appeal the Washington police made to Coxe's army of the unemployed when it marched on the nation's capital in 1964 was "Please keep off the grass." How times have changed! . . . A graphic fact of what technological change and automation can do to jobs is seen in the cigar industry where 50 years ago 125,000 workers produced 4 billion cigars a year. Today, 30,000 workers produce 7 billion cheroots annually.

Thoughts while shaving: A builder friend tells us the new trend in home building calls for the living room to be placed in the rear of the house, facing a lawn or terrace, with the kitchen and other utilitarian rooms in the front. That insures privacy from traffic noises and affords a better view. . . . Did you ever hear of "Patronatology"? Well, that's the term to designate the study of the derivation of family names. . . . The five leading causes of 1964 accidents on New Jersey's Garden City Parkway, according to a survey, were: lack of attention, failure to have the car under control, following too closely, improper lane changing, and driving too fast for road conditions. The same causes as everywhere else. . . . We never knew it 'til now that in the early days drinking cups were often made in the form of a face, and that's how they came to be called mugs. . . . If anyone wants to bet you $100 you can't name the oldest continuously inhabited community in the U.S., take the wager and tell him it is Oraibi, Arizona. Archaeologists say this tiny Indian village, near Winslow in the heart of the Zane Grey country, has been in existence since the early 1300's. . . . Maybe the reason Canadians are good skaters is the fact there are 200 skating rinks in a city like Montreal. It's the national sport there. . . . The Washington (D.C.) DAILY NEWS reported: "The ejection of John Blank as vice-president for manufacturing has been announced." That's really getting rid of him.

Country Editor speaking: "Your mouth is one thing you open by mistake."

Question Box

(We invite questions on economic and proper functions of government which will not injure anyone)

Question No. 769: "Who gives the President of a FREE country the right to tell FREE country they must belong to a union — or any other organization — in order to work in a system of free enterprise?" Mrs. Jacqueline Propst.

Answer: There is no such grant of power either to the President or to the Congress. The subterfuge used is the authorization to regulate commerce between the states. Under that provision of the Constitution, the federal government has intervened in all sorts of private activities.

Actually, the federal government should have no power to intervene at all in any employer-employee relationships. But under the Wagner act, many employers were pressured into signing closed shop contracts.

Then under the Taft-Hartley act, Section 14 (b) provided that states could enact laws prohibiting compulsory membership in unions. Nineteen states have adopted laws which say a worker cannot be prevented from employment either from membership or non-membership in a union.

President Johnson received extensive backing from union officials and funds in the 1964 election on his agreement to seek repeal of Section 14 (b). His demand for repeal is seen as payment of his debt to his supporters.

Walter Rogers Reports

Rogers Sure Excise Tax Reduction Bill to Pass

Congress is preparing to enact the fourth major tax-reduction program of the past five years. The House of Representatives will pass — and I'm sure passage will come by a wide margin — the "Excise Tax Reduction Bill of 1963." As you may know from press reports, the bill provides for a series of excise tax reductions and eliminations effective July 1. In a full year, these reductions will amount to an estimated $1.75 billion. A second series of excise tax reductions and eliminations due to take effect on Jan. 1, 1967, 1968, and 1969, the aggregate drop in excise taxes is expected to be $4.3 billion.

For years, I have campaigned to bring about a major revision in the tax structure. Excise taxes are a legacy of wartime, enacted in the first place to discourage the production and sale of items made with vital war materials as much as to raise revenue. Jewelry and luggage are two such classes of products and they are two of the four categories of items on which 10 percent retailers' excise taxes are to be repealed effective July 1. The others are furs and toilet preparations.

In addition to the retailers' taxes, manufacturers' excises of 5 and 10 percent will be repealed on a long list of items effective July 1. These items are: Air conditioners, business machines, cameras and film, electric and gas oil appliances, freezers, musical instruments, pens and mechanical pencils, phonograph records, playing cards, radios and phonographs, refrigerators, sporting goods (except fishing equipment), and television sets. Also due for complete repeal July 1 are taxes on the rent of safety deposit boxes, a seemingly small item but one which has netted $7 million annually in tax revenue.

The excise tax reduction concerning automobiles calls for reductions in the 10 percent manufacturers' tax to 7 percent on July 1 (reunds will be granted to May 24); to 6 percent on January 1, 1966; to 4 percent on January 1, 1967; to 2 percent on January 1, 1968; and total elimination as of January 1, 1969.

It is good to know that progress is being made in reducing to some extent the heavy tax burden on the citizenry. However, I am disappointed that further success has not been obtained in reducing income taxes. I have long advocated an increase in the individual and dependents' exemptions. I proposed an increase in this exemption from $600 to $1,000. Anyone with children knows that a $600 exemption from income taxes is completely unrealistic. Actually, an exemption for dependents should be closer to $2,000. If this increase in the exemptions could be accomplished the additional money available to the low and middle income classes as a result of this income tax reduction would in my opinion provide substantial added vigor to the economy. It would serve to create additional purchasing power in those segments of our economy where additional spending money is most needed. It would contribute to the betterment of large families and would serve in many instances to help relieve the poverty which we are supposed to be warring against.

When I first introduced this legislation during my early years in the Congress, I had six dependents. Some of the other Members of Congress facetiously called this "a bill for the private relief of Walter Rogers." However, my dependents have grown up and I have only two left. My desire and advocacy of this type of legislation has continued to grow stronger each year, and I hope to see it enacted.

WALTER ROGERS
MEMBER OF CONGRESS

Foreign Commentary

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

At the Paris meeting of NATO defense ministers, the United States found itself criticized for actions which on their face seem to contradict the goal of world peace. Unfortunately, they reflect the world as it exists.

The criticism stemmed from the fact that the United States now also is the world's major seller of arms.

It arose not from any repugnance against the traditional "merchant of death" but rather because the efficiency of U.S. manufacture and the quality of the goods were shutting out others in a highly competitive market.

For example, British manufacturers have complained that competition from the United States gradually is killing off the British aircraft industry.

France Unhappy Too
French President Charles de Gaulle was annoyed because West Germany turned to the United States for development of a military tank rather than to France.

In Paris, therefore, U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara felt it necessary to assure NATO members the United States would buy arms from them if prices were competitive and also to assure them that the United States does not use pressure salesmanship to force its Allies to buy American weapons.

Many factors control the sale of U.S. weapons abroad. Among its Allies, the United States seeks standardization so that weapons and ammunition may be interchangeable.
