HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - This has been the season of special programs for television -and although some have failed, the successes have proved how valuable they are to networks on many counts.

The most recent success, of course, was Wednesday's memorable Fred Astair hour. And it is worth considering how it shapes up in various areas against an ordinary series. In the first place, this one hour—this single, solitary hour probably got more advance notice, more attention, more 15 reaction and more promotable newspaper comment than, say, 26 episodes of "The Mothers-in-

Then, for another example there was the Frank Sinatra special, with Ella Fitzgerald as his guest. It also got tremendous reactions, a good ratingand won more attention for NBC-TV than, say, 26 episodes of "The Virginian."

There was also the Jack Paar special. And it, too, earned a top rating in relations to most shows, as well as considerable reaction and plenty of the 17 publicity and newspaper space that seems to follow Paar—selor while your children are in school; Flexible hours. There is talk that the networks may cut back on specials next season because they had trouble selling some of their one-shot programs. In addition, the election year coverage on which the networks traditionally go all out drains off funds that can be used otherwise, and seems to necessitate more than usual devotion to bread-and-butter series pro-

Recognition Said Strong Force

WASHINGTON (UPI)-Psychiatrists, psychologists and others who tinker around in the behavioral sciences long have recognized that recognition is one of man's strongest motivating forces,

We all seek recognition in one way or another. If we cannot achieve it by constructive means, frequently we resort to destructive measures:

A lot of the kooky goings-on, and even many criminal acts, basically are struggles for recognition. Keeping this in mind, let us now consider how much junk mail has done to promote mental health in this country. Often maligned as a nuisance, junk mail actually has a will celebrate their 25th anniversary in February. On Feb. 13, 1943, the Marine Corps Women's Reserve program was announced and women swarmed to recruiting offices until a peak of nearly 19,000 women Marines was reached during World War II. Today, 2,700 women Marines gre on active duty, working in data processing, commissary, flight control (top photos) or other tasks. Bottom picture shows the Marine Corps Women's Reserve Band at Camp Lejeune, N.C., where it was organized in 1944, freeing male musicians for combat duty. At left, World War I Marinettes are sworn in to do clerical work for the Corps. About 300 women, forerunners of today's Women Marines, signed up in 1918-19 and this year marks the 50th anniversary of that occasion.
