Damron to Ask Re-instatement As School Head

Dr. John D. Damron, relieved of his duties last Tuesday night by the Pampa school board and ordered to step down immediately without further salary, said today he will ask for re-instatement as school superintendent.

Damron, given two hours to move out of his office by 12 o'clock Tuesday midnight, today released a copy of his notice of appeal from the school board's Tuesday night action.

Carr Announces Plans To Enter Governor Race

AUSTIN (UPI)—Former Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr announced for governor today, indicating he plans to hit hard on the issues of crime and "illegal and violent riots in our streets."

Carr, a 48-year-old lawyer from Lubbock, told a news conference at the capitol "I am formally announcing my candidacy for governor."

He said he is encouraged by public opinion polls and by the amount of financial support he has found.

Carr said the polls "show that I am the leading contender among all of the possible moderate and conservative candidates."

He said "it is my desire to give Texas continued progressive and conservative leadership."

Carr served four terms in the legislature, including two as speaker, and three terms as attorney general before losing in the U. S. Senate to Republican John Tower in 1966.

The issues of crime and riots were first on Carr's list of state problems. "Without taking anything from my opponents in this race, none of them can come anywhere near matching that record of proven accomplishment in fighting crime," he said.

"I will present to the people during this campaign a hard-hitting anti-crime program which, I hope, will forcefully and clearly demonstrate the leadership I can and will provide in turning the tide of vicious crime in Texas."

Juvenile Pickets Rend Man's Heart

TEANECK, N.J. (UPI)—Breathes there a man with heart so hard he isn't moved by pretty 9-year-old girls on a picket line?

Maybe. But he isn't John Kuehn, who sells pizza and other luncheon delicacies in the New Englander Restaurant here.

The noontime rush at the restaurant Thursday was marked by a juvenile picket line—four fourth-grade girls carrying placards protesting they are not permitted to buy the pizza.

"Two years ago we let the kids eat lunch here," Kuehn said. "Sometimes there were 60 of them in here and they all ordered the same thing—pizza."

"Well, we couldn't make pizza fast enough," he continued. "Some went back to school hungry and crying, so we stopped it."

Now, though pizza is still served, children are prohibited unless accompanied by a parent.

Then came the picket line—and the sorrowful young pizza lovers.

"Maybe we'll take on some more help to serve up the pizza fast enough," Kuehn said. "I'm wavering."

WILLING TO TALK 'PROMPTLY' Hanoi Said To Meet Some Conditions for Bomb Halt

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Hanoi appears to have met some—but not all—of President Johnson's conditions for halting the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam, in the view of administration officials.

They reported Thursday that there was some evidence that North Vietnam was willing to accept the President's stipulation that peace talks must "take place promptly" if American raids are to stop.

But there was no evidence that Hanoi was yet willing to agree to the President's demand for some reduction in the Communist military effort in return for an end to U.S. bombing, they said.

Administration officials for the first time acknowledged that they have received private information from Hanoi concerning its offer to talk peace if the attacks stop.

But they indicated that information through diplomatic channels was about the same as that being broadcast publicly by Hanoi. These public statements have said simply the Communists will talk if the bombing stops, but have declared the United States has no right to insist on any specific conditions.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, meantime, told newsmen Thursday that Johnson, in his State of the Union message, had not changed the "San Antonio formula" for peace talks.

But Rusk declined to say whether the President had stiffened his emphasis on reciprocal military reduction by the Communists. Other officials said it was possible to read that way.

LBJ Considers Asking For No-Strike Pledge

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Johnson administration is asking labor and management in major industries to consider pledging a strike truce for the next year or two while the balance of payments problem is straightened out.

Strikes or the mere threat of strikes can undo hard-won gains in overcoming the balance of payments deficit, the Treasury said Thursday, and both industry and labor bear a responsibility to prevent anything that would decrease exports or raise imports.

"While the United States is rich enough to afford the real cost which strikes impose, leaders of labor and management should be prepared seriously to consider whether there is any feasible way to give advance public assurance that there will be no work stoppage for the next year or two in industries capable of causing significant balance of

Authorities Try To Unravel Hoax On LSD Blindness

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—The state of Pennsylvania tried today to unravel the legal ramifications of a bizarre hoax—the story of six college youths blinded by the sun during an LSD "trip."

The administration, red faced and shaken following disclosure of the hoax, studied the tape recorded "confession" of a blind department head to determine what action, if any, to take.

Dr. Norman Yoder, state commissioner for the blind, who gave the first details of the story, was admitted to the Philadelphia Psychiatric Center, a private, non-profit institution with 130 patients.

"Dr. Yoder stated the whole thing was a fabrication," Gov. Raymond P. Shafer said Thursday, just one day after he had told another news conference he believed the story to be true.

Yoder, 53, apparently "attended a lecture on the use of LSD by children and became concerned and emotionally involved," the governor explained.

Dr. Louis Alikakos, medical director at the Philadelphia Psychiatric Center, said Yoder was "undergoing examinations and treatment for emotional disturbance."

Yoder's fantasy was revealed last Friday when he told a reporter in Washington that six western Pennsylvania college students were totally and permanently blinded 18 months ago when they stared at the sun for 6 to 8 hours while under the influence of LSD, a hallucinogenic drug.

The story made newspaper and television headlines from coast to coast.

"Everyone who knows Dr. Yoder knew him as man of unquestioned integrity and honest, totally devoted to his work," said Dr. Thomas W. Georges, Jr., secretary of health and Yoder's immediate superior.

Targets Near Hanoi, Haiphong Smashed

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. Marines battling through heavy artillery fire trapped and virtually wiped out a reinforced North Vietnamese company on South Vietnam's dangerous northern frontier, American spokesmen said today. The Leathernecks reported killing 162 North Vietnamese.

American pilots took advantage of clearing skies to smash targets near Hanoi and Haiphong in North Vietnam Thursday and shot down one of the MIG jets that tried to stop them, the U.S. spokesman said. But they reported two U.S. planes shot down in the raids and a third lost over North Vietnam Tuesday with five airmen missing.

The Marines reported eight Leathernecks killed and 39 wounded in the six-hour battle in the rain just below the border Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) and two miles from the American bastion of Con Thien that the North Vietnamese have been trying to knock out for six months.

A company of the 4th Marines, moving out on patrol after intelligence officers reported North Vietnamese building up for another major offensive, ran into sheets of fire coming from holes blasted out by the artillery duel that has ripped the border for more than a year. At first the Leathernecks figured they faced only a platoon.

The Marines replied in kind to the rifle and machine gun fire. A second Leatherneck company swung in to block the North Vietnamese retreat. A third Marine company—about 60 Leathernecks all together—joined the fight and discovered the North Vietnamese were out in force.

The Leathernecks swung around and began pressing in. Apparently the North Vietnamese radioed for help. From the North Vietnam side of the border, big guns boomed. U.S. spokesmen said 67 rounds slammed into Marine positions.

The Leathernecks fought forward and smashed the North Vietnamese force. At dusk the Marines pulled back into a defensive position for the night.

In the air, American pilots flew 112 missions against North Vietnam's war machine center Thursday, spokesmen said. They enjoyed for the first time since Jan. 6 weather clear enough to use visual sighting—instead of radar guiding—to hit targets in the Hanoi area.

White House Guests Startled by Singer

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Negro songstress Eartha Kitt, eyes flashing with anger, stunned guests at a White House luncheon Thursday by declaring that American youth are rebelling because of the Vietnam war. Her impassioned remarks left Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson in tears.

"You send the best of this country off to be shot and maimed," she said. "No wonder the kids rebel and take pot. They don't want to go to school because they're going to be snatched off from their mothers to be shot in Vietnam."

Mrs. Johnson, seated at a table about 15 feet away, turned pale. Her 50 guests sat in stunned silence.

"Boys I know across the nation feel it doesn't pay to be a good guy," Miss Kitt continued in a rising voice. "They figure that with a (police) record, they don't have to go off to Vietnam. They can't get to you and they can't get to the President, and so they rebel in the streets."

Hughes' Defense
As the sultry singer paused for breath, the wife of New Jersey Gov. Richard J. Hughes rose from a table on the other side of the room. Her face was flushed as she said: "I feel morally obligated. May I speak in defense of the war?"

The matronly looking woman told Miss Kitt her first husband had been killed in World War II. She said she has eight sons, one of whom has served in the armed forces.

"None of the others want to go to Vietnam," she said. "But all will go. They and their friends. I will kiss them goodby and I will feel that this is our contribution to our country."

Then Mrs. Johnson got up from the table, tears welling in her eyes, looked directly at

Police Hold Back Demonstrators At Japanese Port

SASEBO, Japan (UPI)—The U.S. nuclear powered aircraft carrier Enterprise today dropped anchor and sent its crewmen on liberty to town where police lines held back leftwing demonstrators screaming, "Yankee go home."

About 400 demonstrators tried to storm into the "sailor town" section of Sasebo where crewmen from the giant carrier were on shore leave. They crashed into the police lines while shopkeepers slammed down their steel shutters. But the lines held and American sailors drifted out of sight into bars.

After about 10 minutes the students snaked toward another corner of the four-block square district of brass bars and neon lights. Police quickly reinforced the corner, and kept moving to block new incursions by the demonstrators.

In the district most of the sailors kept inside bars and cabarets that bore such names as "100 proof" and "Blondie Bar."

Some of the sailors were approached by pacifists passing out antiwar handbills.

"I don't want that," snapped a young sailor who then headed for the "Happy Bar."

The Enterprise skipper, Capt. Kent Liston Lee, earlier said he had "every confidence" his 5,250 crewmen would spurn efforts to get them to desert Japanese pacifists vowed they would convince sailors to leave the Enterprise as did four crewmen from the USS Intrepid who have reached political asylum in Sweden.

The sailors first were told they would not be permitted to leave the big U.S. Naval Base at Sasebo. But later authorities relented and let the liberty hungry men into the "sailor town" area just outside the base.

With them were men from another nuclear powered surface ship, the 3,200-ton frigate Truxton, and from the conventional frigate Halsey. The two smaller ships carried a total of 900 men.

DEAR ABBY: This morning I took my 6-year-old son to the dentist. We were the first appointment and arrived at the dentist's office right along with the dentist. He removed his coat and turned to give us a cordial greeting. To my amazement, this dentist was wearing a necktie with a most repulsive nude woman painted on it. I was shocked, as this dentist came very highly recommended. I didn't tell my husband as he would have scolded me for not leaving immediately.

My teen-age daughter has an appointment with this dentist next week. Should I send her to his office alone or go with her? Or should I cancel her appointment and report that dentist to the dental association? Do you think this man is safe to be around children? He is middle-aged, married, and very well off.

DEAR SHOCKED: I doubt that the dental association would do much about a dentist's choice of ties, although, I agree, yours showed very poor taste. I wouldn't worry about the safety of my children in this case, either. But if you are concerned, have your children take their teeth elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning to become engaged in the near future, and my boy friend and I are having a big difference of opinion on something I want you to settle.

I would like to have an engagement ring made with yellow gold. My boy friend prefers white. He says that since he is paying for it, he should pick it out and I should take what I get and like it. I told him that since I'm going to be wearing the ring, I should be the one to pick it out.

I also told him that most girls pick out their own engagement rings after the boy tells the girl how much he wants to spend. He doesn't agree with me and wants me to show him where it says it is all right for the girl to pick out her own ring.

SAN MATEO

DEAR SAN: You two sound as though you're ready for a BOXING ring, not an engagement ring. It doesn't "say" anywhere that the girl or the boy should select the ring. Engaged couples usually select the ring together. That way the man is certain his sweetheart gets a ring she will enjoy wearing, which should please them both.

DEAR ABBY: Like so many of your correspondents, I never expected to be writing a "Dear Abby" letter—but here I am: This is in reference to the "retired" school teacher who was given a farewell dinner party and a gift by her colleagues, then changed her mind and returned to resume her duties.

One of her colleagues wrote to say that he had collected the money for the "retirement gift" and dinner and was now red-faced because the teacher had not retired after all. It was even suggested that she return the gift.

Why was this "retiring" teacher honored in the first place? Because she had given long years of faithful service and had earned the right to retire, right? This being the case, perhaps she ought to have been welcomed back with outstretched arms.

The fact that she decided to return in no way diminishes her contributions for which her fellow teachers honored her. I see no reason for the honored one to return the gift or to be embarrassed because she postponed her retirement.

SPOKE MY PIECE
DEAR SPOKE: When you put it that way, neither do I.

Mrs. Myron Dorman reminded members of the District One, Garden Club Spring convention in Hereford Feb. 25 and 27.

It was announced 14 members participated in judging Christmas decorations. The club has received a book on abstract arrangements given as a prize by the district governor for making the best table decoration suggestion for the national convention in Dallas.

Mrs. Theima Bray, civic beautification chairman, reported the purple marten bird house is ready to be put up north of the Coronado Inn.

Mrs. Lee Harrah gave the program on "Beauty and Trees Expressed in the Bible." Three types of trees mentioned were the costly, which included ebony, alnum and gopher. Solomon Temple was made of alnum and Noah's Ark was made of gopher wood. The fruit trees included fig and olive, and forest trees, oak, fir and sycamore, she said.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Saturday Jan. 20

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A Saturday you may carry through with all promises that you have made to others with complete cooperation for others. You may find you are not so free to release the goodies that you can use from them if they find that you measure up to their expectations of you. Be happy and join recreations tonight.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) — The planets are with others today, so tread lightly or you get into trouble. Some civic matter requires much diplomacy in your part today also. Avoid jealousy in any of its forms. Rise above the petty.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) — There is much work to be done and you had better get at it or you lose the respect of some valued co-worker. Rid yourself of all obligations. Then you can go ahead and have a fine time with good friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) — Fine day for pleasure but be sure it does not cost too much and you don't get caught with a group of trouble-makers. Be sure you know what is expected of you by an admirer. Follow through if ethical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) — You must be more thoughtful of those at home if you are to lift that feeling of gloom there at this time. Think out ingenious ideas for increasing success in the days ahead. Be very practical.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 23) — Be sure you telephone first before you dash out to see close friends or you may find they are extremely busy and get in their way. Not the right time to discuss that plan with an associate. Wait a few days.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23) — Although you wish to supplement your present income, this is not a good day to start new ventures. Look after current interests carefully. Read, study more for good results.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) — Get yourself looking more charming and go after those important clients, etc., that improve your position, regardless of what dull associate says today. Steer clear of one who is not friendly to you. Be wise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 23) — You are puzzled by what another is doing, so be sure to do some investigating and all clear up nicely for you. Then make improvements in conditions around you. Get information from an expert later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 24 to Dec. 23) — Sacrifice some practical matter in a.m. so that you assist one who is in an unfortunate position and is very deserving. Show that you are a good pal. You may have to share that social pressure in p.m. also.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 24 to Jan. 20) — Important you follow all regulations that apply to you since it is immensely vital at this time. Do not irritate one who has power over you or it can lead to trouble. Have respect. Be wise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — If you loved Jan today, you can place yourself in a position to take advantage of some fine opportunity that comes your way to advance. Avoid that forgetful newcomer, he or she, is not up to anything good.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) — It is better if you handle that difficult problem today and put aside thought of pleasure. If you don't, it will only get worse. Then you can be with congenials in p.m. and in a happy frame of mind.

ROBERT E. REGAN receives safety award

Regan Receives Safety Award

Robert E. Regan, 2142 Aspen, a major figure in plant and community safety, has been presented the January Safety Profile Award by the publishers of Safety Product News magazine. Regan is supervisor of safety and plant security at the Celanese Chemical plant in Pampa.

Recipients of the SPN monthly Safety Profile Award are chosen for outstanding service in the safety field. Each winner is given a plaque inscribed with the achievements that characterize him as a leader in the safety field.

Regan is well known in the Pampa area as a teacher of safety technique. He has taught "Safety for Supervisors" with the Amarillo College extension program. Here he helped 16 Pampa area foremen, from six different companies, work out their plant safety problems.

Working with his colleagues at Celanese, Regan put on a safety seminar for students from eight Texas high schools. Last summer he lectured at the Corporate Safety Conference on "Hazards in Your Plant."

When not involved with industrial safety, Regan is a Boy Scout district chairman and is a member of the American Red Cross board of directors.

The Safety Profile Award is presented by monthly in recognition of the key role of the safety director in the plant and the community.

Damron

employment. Sincerely Yours, John D. Damron

Under Texas law, it is within the power of the State Commissioner of Education to reinstate Damron as school superintendent or to uphold the board's decision, after a hearing on the case before the commissioner.

In either case, Damron or the school board would have the right of appeal to the State Board of Education.

The next course of action could take the case into the courts.

The school board vs. superintendent controversy had its origin when the board at a meeting on Jan. 11 refused to consider Dr. Damron's contract for renewal. The board said it would not consider the contract until its anniversary date next July 1.

Dr. Damron considered the refusal as a rebuke. The next day he tendered his resignation to the board for acceptance if it wished and subject to a mutual agreement on the date of termination of his services as required by Texas school law.

The board then called an executive session last Tuesday night to act on the resignation. Dr. Damron was called in after more than an hour's deliberation and informed an agreement had been reached to accept the resignation and terminate his services and salary immediately.

Dr. Damron, before the board had taken a vote, immediately withdrew his resignation and asked for a vote of confidence. The board ignored withdrawal of the resignation and voted 5 to 0 to terminate the superintendent's services immediately "for cause" and cut off his salary two hours later at midnight.

Dr. Damron said that before the board voted he also asked to be granted a hearing on specific charges before action was taken to terminate his employment. He said his request was refused.

Since he withdrew the resignation before the board action on it was taken, Dr. Damron contends he was "fired."

Texas law says a school superintendent's services cannot be terminated immediately without mutual agreement on the time of termination unless there are criminal or morals charges involved.

Dr. Damron indicated in the light of that fact, the board should have given him a hearing.

No Teenage Court Slated This Week

No teenage court will be held Saturday morning because John Warner, corporation court judge, will be out of town as one of five adult sponsors for a First Methodist Church youth group.

The next teenage court will be held at 9 a.m. Feb. 3.

Mr. and Mrs. Warner, Melvin Dennis, Mrs. Thelma Bray and Fred Watkins, music and education director, are sponsoring 17 members of Senior High Methodist Youth Fellowship on a weekend trip to Red River, N.M. and will return Sunday.

It is understood when an appeal is filed with the State Education Commissioner, as has been done in the current case, the commissioner has 30 days in which to set a date for a hearing before him in Austin. Such a hearing will require the presence in Austin of board members, other school officials and witnesses.

Art Speaker Tells Teachers Creativity in Class Simple

To be creative in elementary school art classes, Pampa teachers are learning all they need do is turn a child loose with a minimum of materials and a few basic instructions.

Mrs. Enid Bates, art consultant for PESO (Panhandle Educational Service Organization) Amarillo, has taught a three-part lesson in art to Pampa elementary school teachers. Her last class in stitichery, was given Thursday at Baker Elementary School.

In her first session, presented Jan. 4 at Baker School, she explained basic concepts and materials used in children's art classes.

The four fundamental concepts of art are line, form, color and texture. Lines, whether light, curved, straight, smooth, rough, heavy, divided or broken, help to hold a composition together. They show direction and divide space, she explained.

"Texture can be described as the way something feels to the touch—or looks like it would feel. It should not be confused with pattern, which deals in the visual repeat of a line, color or shape," she said.

Hue refers to the pigments or actual pure colors themselves. Value is the lightness or darkness of a color. We change the intensity, the brightness or dullness of a color when we make it more neutral or gray by adding some of its complementary color, she explained.

In giving suggestions on the use of color in school displays, Mrs. Bates said "color has pre-planned effects on its viewer. Complementary colors in equal intensity are unpleasant, but can have a harmonious effect when one is softened to enhance the strength of the other."

In teaching children to build and create displays, Mrs. Bates suggested balancing areas of color, pattern arrangements, and space between pictures or other items displayed.

"It would be wise to set a limit on the number or variety of colors because too many at once can be distracting. Discrete use of color can provide a bright setting—or accent for a display—but total absence of color can be equally dramatic. Black, white and grays used in proper light and setting are unique and can attract viewers," she said.

Mrs. Bates' second lesson, on puppetry, stressed that puppetry allowed children to play many parts. It combines several lessons in one, for arithmetic and science are used in measuring and construction of the stage, scenery and costumes. Reading and creative writing are given tangible objectives in developing the story and musical talents are practiced.

"Puppets can provide an environment for children to play many parts. By playing these parts and comparing their experiences against those of the story characters, they become involved with life and develop a sense of personal value."

"Through the puppetry, they can live in the form of any character they choose because they are no longer limited by their own physical and environmental characteristics," she said.

Styrofoam balls, wadded tissue, pipe cleaners, spoons, paper plates, stuffed paper sacks or socks, sticks, construction paper, any of these things added to a little imagination, a little creativity, can give a child insight into the meaning of his life, she said.

Stitichery, the lesson Thursday, is also a creative thing. Children explore all kinds of stitches and even invent a few of their own. We stress that teachers not use copying kits, or patterns but develop their own ideas and those of the children with a variety of materials, she said.

"Stitichery is kind of like painting with yarn. It is all other forms of children's art is a learning process and requires time and practice of the teacher and student," she said.

Alaska Subject Of Illustrated Talk

69th YEAR THE PAMPA DAILY NEWS FRIDAY, JANUARY 20, 1967 3

About 175 persons attended the two-hour color film on Alaskan wildlife and fishing expeditions sponsored by the Pampa Kiwanis Club, Thursday night in Pampa Junior High School Auditorium.

Cecil Rhode, Moose Pass, Alaska, narrated the double-feature film, which illustrated where to go to catch the big fish, the Great Bear trout which grow big enough for two to fill a washtub.

Rhode is a sourdough in Alaska that term is reserved for those who have lived there long enough to know Alaska and its wildlife well. He homesteaded 37 years ago on the shores of Kenai Lake, south of Anchorage and lives with his wife and son in a wilderness log cabin.

The film showed how to pan for gold nuggets with skin-diving equipment and took the audience on a mountain goat hunt by cruiser through an inland waterway with water clear enough to see the bottom, 35 feet down.

Photos of snow and ice covered mountains, with clear, blue lakes at their foothills, showed views of Rhode and his associates stalking grizzly bear, moose, caribou and Dall sheep, in all seasons.

Rhode, a naturalist, big-game hunter and photographer, explained the effects of nature on Alaska, the reactivation of volcanic mountains and changes in land composition caused by Alaskan earthquakes.

Mr. Smith died at a Tyler hospital Tuesday. He was a former Miami resident and had been city attorney in Tyler more than 40 years.

He explained the effects of nature on Alaska, the reactivation of volcanic mountains and changes in land composition caused by Alaskan earthquakes.

 LAUNGESTON, Tasmania (UPI) — The Tasmanian world champion axeman, Ron Sheriff, was killed while felling trees. Sheriff, 37, was clearing bushland near Sheffield for a hydro-electric power project.

Accused Thief of Trawler Returned to United States

BROWNSVILLE, (UPI) — A Port Isabel shrimp fisherman accused of stealing a trawler last week from its berth in Port Isabel, was returned to the United States Wednesday after Mexican fishermen found him swimming in the ocean off the coast of Tampico.

Bernardo Arenas Estrada, 37, was jailed in Cameron County after County Judge Oscar Dancy ordered a psychiatric examination.

Estrada was found by Mexican fishermen near where the trawler "Captain Cracker" had been run aground. The skipper of the Mexican trawler "Don Ricardo" said Estrada — babbling almost incoherently — told them that a man had been murdered aboard the "Captain Cracker" and that he had been thrown overboard.

Mexican fishermen said they were unable to find either the body Estrada claimed was aboard the "Captain Cracker" or a trace of the other two men he said had been aboard.

Washington Window

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson's proposals for protecting the dollar will be haunted in coming weeks by Sen. Mike Mansfield's call for a cut in U.S. forces stationed in Europe.

Many members of Congress view Mansfield's plan as an attractive election-year alternative to the package unveiled by the President on New Year's Day for cutting the balance of payments deficit.

Johnson won't like it, of course, and his Senate Democratic leader didn't plan it that way. Mansfield's central idea, in proposing a "substantial" troop reduction a year ago was not to help the U.S. balance of payments posture.

Mansfield and some of the 44 other senators who support his troop withdrawal resolution contend that 200,000 U.S. troops — plus about 500,000 dependents and other American civilians — have no business in Europe 20 years after hostilities ended there, particularly when European nations are trimming their own defense outlays.

Persuasive Argument

Some see the U.S. dollar drain as a central persuasive argument for removing some of the six-division U.S. force from Europe. The financial burden of supporting that force, in terms of dollars spent abroad, is simply too great in this view.

Whatever importance is assigned to balance of payments effects, return of U.S. troops would certainly curb the spending of dollars abroad. Estimates vary, but the Pentagon said removal of 35,000 troops, due to take place this spring, will reduce overseas spending by some $75 million.

The President has made it clear that overseas dollar outlays must be reduced. His blueprint for making the cuts involves such actions as mandatory restrictions on investments abroad by U.S. enterprise and regulation — perhaps by a penalty tax — on European travel by Americans.

Murphy Says GOP To Gain Seats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman George Murphy of the Republican Senate Campaign Committee, predicted Thursday the GOP would pick up 10 Senate seats, and perhaps as many as 14, in the November elections.

The California senator said there was a "good chance" for Republicans to win senate seats from 12 states — Indiana, Nevada, Maryland, Idaho, Pennsylvania, Alaska, Arizona, Missouri, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Wisconsin and Florida.

A GOP victory of this magnitude in the Senate races would reduce the Democratic majority in the senate 54 to 46.

Murphy, in an informal news conference in his office, said he was particularly impressed by chances for a Republican gain in Indiana, where he said Democrats were "badly split" and Republicans were "coming together."

In California, Murphy said, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Gov. Ronald Reagan have nearly equal support among Republicans as possible presidential candidates.

He said "you don't hear much" in California about Govs. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and George Romney of Michigan.

Texas Tech Will Attack Traffic Problem by Starting Bus Line

LUBBOCK (UPI)—Texas Tech will attack its traffic problem by instituting a bus system to run periodic, regular routes through the campus.

A contract will be signed soon with Lubbock Transit Co. to provide six buses at a cost of $34,000. The project will begin with the start of the spring semester Jan. 29 and continue May 28.

Anyone will be able to board the buses; no charge or identification will be required.

Three routes will cover all dormitories, principal buildings and parking lots on campus. The buses will cover the various routes on a regular basis from 7 a.m. until 5:45 p.m. daily except Saturdays, when service will end at 11:45 a.m. The buses will not operate on Sundays or other days when classes are not in session.

Texas Tech has had more of a problem than most colleges. Its main campus sprawls 15 blocks from north to south and six blocks from east to west. In total acreage, it is the nation's second largest.

Bus stops will be designated at various points throughout the campus, school officials say, and buses will run at least every three to four minutes up to every 90 seconds at peak periods.

Routes have been designated red, yellow and green, and buses on those particular routes will be so designated.

Texas Tech is in its second year of operating under controlled campus traffic, regulated by traffic security officers who man five entry stations. Only faculty, staff and visitors are allowed to bring their cars onto campus streets.

Rotary Sees Slides Of Canadian Trip

Tom Willis of Borger, who narrated the program, said that the scouts traveled some 110 miles by canoe in ten days last summer.

Scout executive Steve Odom introduced Willis.

Reminder Issued On Tax Deadline

A reminder was issued today by Aubrey Jones, city tax assessor-collector, that April 1 is the deadline to file personal property for tax purposes.

Affected are all persons, partnerships and businesses of whatsoever kind or size, owning or controlling personal property inside the Pampa city limits as of Jan. 1 this year.

Jones said Texas law requires a full and complete statement be filed annually of all personal property connected with or used in the operation of a business, such as autos, trucks, trailers, furniture, fixtures, machinery and other equipment, supplies, merchandise, goods and wares.

The law requires that the personal property tax returns be filed with the city tax office on or before April 1 to avoid penalty.

Wilson Faces New Fight In Labor Party

LONDON (UPI)—Rebellion inside his Labor party erupted again today despite Prime Minister Harold Wilson's success in getting his brutal $2.4 billion budget cuts okayed by the House of Commons. A prominent party member demanded Wilson resign.

Member of Parliament Reginald Paget said in a statement that Wilson "can now go out into the desert bearing the faithfulness of his government with him and leave the field clear for a leader whose word may be believed."

Paget's demand followed resignations by two major labor party leaders and a revolt in the Commons by leftwing members of the party.

Wilson, as the dissension mounted, pushed through on a 304-9 vote of confidence his big budget cuts in Commons Thursday night. The opposition Conservatives abstained and his own rebels then walked out on another key vote.

Ex-Pampan Has New Celanese Engineering Post

NEW YORK, N. Y. (SpI)—Celanese Chemical Co. has named Richard M. McGhee as manufacturing director and Arthur L. Smalley, formerly of Pampa, as engineering and maintenance director. Both are new positions.

McGhee will be responsible for providing guidance and assistance to Celanese chemical plant locations on operating problems and will assist Robert L. Mitchell, vice president and general manager, operations, in coordinating the operations of the company's production organization. He had been director, manufacturing development and engineering of Celanese Corp.

In his new position, Smalley will be responsible for directing all equipment-related activities necessary to maintain present plant productive capacity, engineer and construct new operating units, and assist in longer range facility planning. Currently, Smalley is assigned as project manager of Konam N. V., a jointly owned Celanese chemical venture in Rotterdam, the Netherlands. He will take over his new assignment about Feb. 1.

McGhee joined Celanese in 1964 as corporate director of engineering. Two years later, he became director of manufacturing and engineering. Prior to joining Celanese, he was vice president of Petro-Tex Chemical Corp. in Houston. He also worked for Commercial Solvents Corp. and Wyandotte Chemicals Corp. in various engineering capacities. He lives in Greenwich, Conn., with his wife and six children.

Smalley joined Celanese in 1942 as a shift supervisor at the Cumberland, Maryland, fibers plant. In 1944, he was transferred to the then-new Bishop, Texas, chemical plant, where he served in various production capacities until 1951 when he was appointed unit superintendent of the new chemical plant here in Pampa. He was technical manager of the Pampa plant in 1964 when he was assigned to Rotterdam, the Netherlands, as a project manager of the Konam N.V. chemical complex, owned jointly by Celanese Corp. and Koninklijke Zout-Ketjen N. V.

Born in Houston, Smalley is a 1942 graduate of the University of Texas with a degree in chemical engineering. Now a resident of The Hague, he will move his family to the New York area in February.

Police Chief Reports New Addition to Force

Eugene F. Aufleger, 31, has joined the Pampa Police Department, Chief Jim Conner has announced.

Aufleger will start his duties tonight.

He has eight years of experience as a police officer with the Amarillo Police Department and served from 1961-64 as a Potter County deputy sheriff. He has also worked as a security officer at West Texas State University while attending the school.

He is married and the father of four children.

The addition of Aufleger to the force, now brings the Police Department only five short of its full strength.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

The Panama News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license, nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself. No more, no less. It is thus consistent with the Human Relations Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Salute to an American

A grateful government has just announced that it will decorate Rodney Gilbert, of Bernardsville, New Jersey. That seemed fitting and proper, and indeed overdue, since Rodney Gilbert started serving his country a half-century ago.

It was in the days preceding the entry of the United States into World War I, that it first called upon him. Mr. Gilbert had gone to China almost immediately upon being graduated from Harvard, with honors. He travelled the length and breadth of China, learned to speak most of the dialects, earned the respect of the political leaders of the time as a journalist. Both American Army Intelligence, G-2, and Navy Intelligence, ONI, employed him in those days, for he was already something of a legend in that vast continent.

In 1929, Mr. Gilbert returned to the United States and became an editorial writer for the old New York Herald Tribune. The management put a young writer across the desk from him to absorb some of his knowledge of the Far East, a chap named Henry Cabot Lodge. In years to come, he too would have some association with affairs around the world.

When General "Wild Bill" Donovan set about organizing the OSS in World War II, one of the first men he recruited for China duty was Rodney Gilbert, and off he went to the wartime capital of China. The fact that he had been an intimate of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, Hollington Tong, Chiang Kai-shek and Madame Chiang and other Chinese leaders for three decades made him a valuable liaison. He commanded the respect that many Americans in the diplomatic corps did not. General Chennault and Wedemeyer, and men like Whiting Willauer and Al Cox found that doors opened simply because Rodney Gilbert was there.

When World War II ended, Mr. Gilbert came back to his home in the woods in New Jersey and took up again his newspaper career. But only briefly. In Washington, the CIA was being organized to answer cold war pressures, and Rodney Gilbert was off again to the Far East for his government, this time to Taiwan. It was 1956 before he was able to return to his beloved hillside. He was rapidly losing his sight. For years, he had been plagued by deafness. But he wrote a book which not enough Americans read. One world figure who did read it was Nikita Khrushchev, and he promptly denounced the author—the only US published book to our knowledge, which that blistering dictator ever felt it necessary to attack, or maybe even to read.

When they actually present him the Cravat of the Order of the Brilliant Star, his eyes won't let him see it; nor will he hear the words of recognition and appreciation that are spoken. But his legion of friends, both in Free China and in Free America will be warmed that the Republic of China decorated a legendary American.

Sad to relate, his own United States Government has never saluted him with anything—except an income-tax return to fill out.

Time for Good Examples

During the 1964 presidential campaign there was an interesting demonstration of semantics concerning the word "extremist." Goldwater was portrayed as an extremist and by implication everyone who supported or voted for him was placed in that category.

This, of course, was nonsense. However, a recent action by President Johnson does rate the extremist label in the true and full meaning of the word. We refer to his call for legislation to curtail American travel abroad.

We have always believed that Americans should see America first, to get a better appreciation of our great country, but we don't think Washington should have the right to tell Americans that they cannot travel to friendly nations.

In trying to keep American dollars at home the President has a laudable aim, but we think he could achieve it without a law, complete with penalties. What this country needs are some good examples, and we'd like to nominate Hubert Humphrey as Good Example No. 1. The Vice President's recent nine-nation junket to Africa was no tourist-class trip, and in the course of it he gave away enough millions of US dollars to send an army of American tourists abroad, first class. Nor is Hubert Humphrey the only VIP who has been delegated to travel overseas to invest heavily in that thing called "world opinion." One of the most extravagant investors in this field was Bobby Kennedy who sank hundreds of millions into propping up Sukarno on one famous trip. This kind of foreign travel should be stopped forthwith.

Equally important, we think the President should try to get Senators, Congressmen and other Federal bigwigs to start serving as good examples. At present many of them definitely are not. They seem to think they are cheating their constituents, not to mention themselves and their families, if they don't get to see the big wide world close-up. And the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., was not the only legislator who demanded the best in accommodations, plus personal service, from members of our diplomatic corps, the military and other government employees available as flunkies. All of which leaves a lot of dollars lying around in those foreign countries.

Our betters who indulge in this say it doesn't really cost anything because they're dipping into blocked funds, a residue of foreign aid past, available for the use of "authorized personnel." This is all well and good, but why restrict this bonanza to the bureaucrats? Why not make the blocked funds available to the people who provided them in the first place, the American taxpayers? It is something for the President to ponder.

Don't Be a Statistic

It wasn't the best of years, but neither was it the worst, as far as accidents go.

An estimated 112,000 people died in accidents of all kinds in the United States in 1967. This was about 1,000 less than in 1966. Fatal accidents in and about the home — 28,500 — showed a decrease, while motor vehicle deaths were about the same as the record high of 53,000 set in 1966. Because more miles were traveled in 1967, the rate per 100 million miles was slightly below the previous year's.

About 100 more people died in fires in 1967 than 1966. The total was 12,200. Figured on a per capita basis, the rate declined slightly because of an increase in population.

Property destroyed by fire, however, zoomed up by more than $200 million to an estimated total of nearly $2.1 billion. Riots in U. S. cities accounted for more than $65 million of that, but single disasters, such as the Apollo spacecraft fire, which killed three astronauts and cost $75 million—and the destruction of Chicago's McCormick Place—$52.5 million—were not far behind. Both these disasters took place

Leaving Body to Science Helps Medical Students

From time to time I get letters asking how to go about leaving one's body to science. This is a very worthy intention. As the Demonstrators' Association puts it: "Let the dead teach the living." Our medical and dental schools are chronically handicapped by having an inadequate number of bodies for their students to work on — now that the once-popular robbing of graves is generally frowned on. (Many persons do not know that dental students, although they spend most of their time on the head and neck, must dissect the entire body.)

The best plan is for you to contact the school of your choice in the state where you live. The American Medical Association (535 N. Dearborn, Chicago, Ill. 60610) or the American Dental Association (211 E. Chicago Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611) can assist you if you do not know the name and address of such a school. It is important that it be in your own state because most states have laws forbidding the shipment of bodies across their boundaries for dissection. Many schools will be glad to send you a wallet card reading:

"To Whom It May Concern, I have willed my body to—School of Medicine for the purpose of medical research and teaching. Signed: _____"

Others have developed a bequeathal kit of legally valid forms which you may fill out. It is well, however, to make sure that the relative who will be responsible for disposing of your remains is in sympathy with your generous intent. Otherwise he can, in most states, have that portion of your will set aside.

Remember, too, that some schools will reject a body that has been subjected to a surgical operation, or has been mutilated by an accident or homicide. Furthermore, when an autopsy has been performed the body is of no use for dissection. In many cases the performance of an autopsy will yield more benefits to science than a routine dissection, but the latter is still the best way for future doctors to get a thorough foundation in basic anatomy.

If you do not wish to leave your entire body to science, may I suggest that you leave your eyes to an eye bank? It, too, will furnish you with a wallet card.

Now it's Elbee Jay's economic team that is shook up. They are the guys what tell the little feller they have plans on how to spend his money when he has already gone broke on taxes.

The economic council is made up of three members. The one who homesteaded the chairmanship was a fellow named Ackley (from the Greek; akros — the end).

Well, they are gettin rid of Ackley. But just like horse-hair snakes in a creek, if you pull one out there's two to take his place. Ackley is going over to put the arm on poor Italy.

I hope they don't listen to his bushwah over there. If they let him tickle their tills they won't have enough pasta left to make a pizza.

The whiz who is taking the chair is an expert on baffle gab. His name is Okun (from the German; Orkan — hurricane). Him and Ackley not only think alike — they look alike. It'll be tough to tell where one leaves off and the other one begins.

Okun says, "When employment is high, a reduction in the unemployment rate by 1 percentage point yields a bonus of extra output amounting to 3 percent."

So you see, with a Hurricane like that in Washington us little fellers ain't got much reason to rejoice.

In January, so far, the current year is off to a relatively quiet start. But if the record of almost every other year is a guide, 1968 will have its share of calamities.

Sad to say, it is a statistical certainty that more than 100,000 Americans, now alive, will perish in accidents, large ones and small ones, before next January.

All Kinds Of Things Lay Eggs—

Hack Away at $200 Million Yearly Foreign Aid Waste

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA)— Interviews by this reporter indicate hidden waste in foreign aid, running at about $200 million a year, could be corrected.

That $200 million a year comes out of the U.S. taxpayer's pocket. This costly waste results in part from the too-rapid deterioration of buildings, port facilities, highways, weapons, vehicles, aircraft, machinery and equipment we provide for other countries.

This deterioration results from slippish maintenance in a goodly number of the nations the United States is helping.

Because of this maintenance gap, vehicles and other equipment are laid up for repairs so frequently and for such long periods as to require two or three machines, trucks or airplanes to do the job that should be done by one. Poorly maintained roads crumble and traffic slows down. War missions and peacetime construction jobs are held up because the needed vehicles and equipment are worn out or are being repaired.

Some of this maintenance lag is inevitable in crash programs and in countries short of a maintenance tradition and skilled maintenance men. Much of the lag, however, could be prevented if the government and private experts this reporter has talked to are correct in their analysis.

This waste shows up in both economic and military assistance programs. If maintenance weaknesses were corrected, the impact of U.S. aid could be increased sharply without increasing expenditures. Conversely, American aid could be cut back appreciably and dollars saved without lessening the effectiveness of American help.

Experts in the field and in Washington indicate four steps, if vigorously carried out, would do much to correct the problem.

1. — More U.S. assistance should be in training foreign nationals in the care and repair of the equipment, buildings, docks and highways we help them build.

2. — We should teach budget makers of countries receiving aid how much cheaper it is to provide funds for maintenance than to buy extra equipment needed if adequate maintenance has not been provided.

3. — We should do more to teach the users of tractors, trucks, airplanes, machinery that proper operation of these vehicles could add years to their useful lives.

4. — When Americans sign an aid agreement with a country, they should insist on an ironclad proviso that money be provided for maintenance of items furnished through U.S. aid. We should insist that maintenance funds be used for des-

Question Box

(We invite questions on economic and the proper functions of government which will not insure answers.)

QUESTION: Federal government policy (untested but nevertheless real) today is to take the money equivalent of the life of several persons with the hope of saving even one traffic death or prolonging the life of one sick person. Isn't that valuing one life more than several lives—the one sometimes being identifiable, the several never? Wouldn't a proper value be less-than-one-for-one? If one's lifework isn't the proper standard, what is?

ANSWER: It would appear that the questioner is correct in saying that the present policy of government is to take from the many to help the few, and placing a greater value on the life of the lesser group than on the lives of the many.

We do not know what the "proper value" should be. We think the only individual who can determine the proper value is the person himself. Each individual should have the right to make the decision for himself. It is not the amount that is important; it is the depriving of individuals of their opportunity to use their own value judgments.

It is conceivable that all or most of the individuals could decide voluntarily that the life of one is so important that they would give a greater portion of the "money equivalent of their lifework" than they would have taken from them in taxes. But it would be their own judgment, their own choice, and not the decision of some impersonal third party in Washington, or Sacramento or the local court house or city hall. If a man has a right to his life, and to the product of his life, he has a right to say how it will be used peaceably.

The proper standard ideally would be determined by each individual as to how he would best use his life and products in a peaceable manner.

Public opinion polls throughout the country indicate that U.S. citizens are dissatisfied with our policy in Vietnam. Each year more troops are requested, but victory seems no closer. Echoing this discontent, Congressional leaders are questioning the wisdom of a strategy which is not committed to victory.

The Senate Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee issued a unanimous report on the conduct of the air war in Vietnam. This report indicates that despite its enormous technological capability, the U.S. is not putting it to effective use.

Another section of the report stated: "All military witnesses stated that the closure, neutralization or isolation of the port of Haiphong was the single most important thing which could be done in North Vietnam from a military standpoint." Yet the Defense Department has consistently refused to approve any such action against Haiphong. If the citizens of this Republic are to continue to pay the

The ultimate in automation in our opinion is a snowball maker for youngsters. It looks like two cups of snow, handles on them. You simply open the device, scoop up enough snow, and then close it to form a perfect snowball. The sales clerk told us one of the big selling points was to tell prospective purchasers they would keep Junior's mittens clean. What next? . . . Another gadget that fascinated us was a little steel box containing a light that was guaranteed to blink on and off for a year. It had no other purpose and you couldn't shut the blinker off after it was started. Something like that could send you to a psychiatrist in no time.

Today's smile: A restaurant waiter, who had not given the best of service, looked at the meager tip left by a departing patron and said: "Is that the best you can do?" "No," replied the patron, "but that's the best that you can do."

An engineering professor believes Italy's famous Leaning Tower of Pisa can be straightened through an electrical hook-up that would dry up the water from the soil on the high side and this permit the structure to settle. Frankly, we do not know why anyone would want to straighten it because it's been one of Italy's biggest tourist attractions for centuries.

Thoughts while shaving: Some mathematical genius figured out the average man of 70 has spent 20 years working, another 20 sleeping, seven in walking and outdoor sports, another seven watching movies, TV and other entertainment, five in shaving, bathing and dressing, three years waiting for buses, trains and people, three years eating, and five years talking on the telephone, smoking, reading newspapers, etc. The other seven years he probably spent helping his youngsters with their homework . . . Most barber shops we visit these days display signs saying "No Shaves." We asked one of our favorite hair trimmers about it and he told us he would shave a patron, but the price would be $1.50, which he considered excessive. He explained that he would spend as much time scraping the whiskers off a man's chin as he would in giving a hair cut, so the price should be the same. Frank Loesser, the hit song writer, got the idea for composing his popular song "On a Slow Boat to China" from an old gambling cliché. Usually during a poker game someone would say to the fellow who was losing: "If I could get you on a slow boat to China I'd become wealthy." . . . And Jimmy McHugh got the idea for his "I Can't Give You Anything but Love Baby" from an overheard conversation between a fellow and girl who were looking wistfully at a jeweler's window in New York. . . . The Honolulu (Hawaii) ADVERTISER reported in a story: "Airplanes are overbooked and luggage is sent to the wrong destination." Don't worry about it. Love always finds a way.

Famed Minister To Be Speaker at Harrah Methodist

Dr. Clovis Chappell, one of the world's prominent preachers, has been engaged for the Harrah Methodist Church's "Week to Believe" meetings Feb. 25 through March 1, it was announced yesterday by Rev. Walter White, pastor.

The 76-year-old retired minister has won widespread recognition as both a preacher and a writer. He has held pastorates in Memphis, Tenn., Houston, Texas, Oklahoma City, Okla., Dallas and Birmingham, Ala. Highland Park Methodist Church in Dallas has one of the largest denominational congregations in the world with over 11,000 members.

In a poll of subscribers conducted by The Christian Century Pulpit several years ago, Dr. Chappell was chosen one of the 10 most effective preachers in America. Dr. Andrew Blackwood, formerly professor of Homiletics at Princeton University, made a list of the 40 outstanding preachers of the last four centuries and included Dr. Chappell in the list. The steering committee for the "Week to Believe" meeting at the Harrah Methodist Church is composed of Mrs. J. T. Richardson, general chairman, B. T. Clemens, Frank Totty and the Rev. White.

Services open to the public will be held throughout the week at 7:15 p.m. daily. There will also be a 6 a.m. breakfast each morning during the meeting period.

Religion in America

By DAVID POLING
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

According to the car insurance underwriters, the clergyman of this country should be classified as "hazardous." Many of the big casualty companies consider the minister a poor risk — clergymen travel a lot and while they are driving are often preoccupied. Some companies put the pastor in the category of circus performers and military men.

On the other hand, life insurance companies generally give the minister and full-time religious worker special rates that are much lower than most other professions. Clergymen, for instance, do not drink so much as the rest of the population. They live longer and are not in the heavy-smoking category. The Presbyterian Ministers' Fund has historically given seminarians, as well as ordained pastors, a much better break in the purchase of life insurance.

Back to the busy, traveling, motoring minister. He does drive a lot and the cost of his automobile is often the biggest item in his personal budget. Yet few of today's preachers can match the hazardous record described by St. Paul when he was telling the folks in Corinth about his missionary happenings:

"Three times I have been beaten with rods; once I was stoned. Three times I have been shipwrecked; a night and a day I have been adrift at sea; on frequent journeys, in danger from rivers, danger from robbers, danger from my own people, danger in the city, danger in the wilderness, danger at sea, danger from false brethren; in toil and hardship, through many a sleepless night, in hunger and thirst, often without food, in cold and exposure. And apart from other things, there is a daily pressure upon me of all my anxiety for all the churches."

—II Corinthians 11:25-28

On the other hand, the insurance company is correct in saying that the pastor of today is a driving hazard because he is "preoccupied." Look at some of the things that are in daily contention for his time and ability:

—He may have at least a dozen people who are critically ill. This means not only regular home visits but traveling to and from city hospital, several times a week. And finding a parking space.

—He lives under the constant strain of always being an able and understanding counselor. Christian Century Magazine suggests that the average minister spends 12 hours a week listening to the heartaches and sorrows of people in trouble. The couple threatening divorce or the teen-agers threatening marriage are just part of the regular season schedule for the pastor.

—He has to have something to say Sunday. Every Sunday. He is not backed up by a team of clever speech writers or a host of bright researchers who provide a sparkling sermon on personal morality, war and peace or the generation gap. So he studies his Bible, prowls through the library, and trusts God that he can again, this Sunday, be coherent and inspiring to a flock that needs to be led.

The preoccupation of the pastor—just one of the perils of the ministry. It's nice that the car insurance companies can share some of the burden!

Bob Jones, Leading U.S. Fundamentalist, Dies At Age of 84

GREENVILLE, S.C. (UPI)—Bob Jones Sr., one of Christianity's leading fundamentalists and founder of the "world's most unusual university," died Tuesday. He was 84.

A spokesman at Bob Jones University gave no cause for death, saying only that it came "after a long illness." Jones, already an internationally-known evangelist in 1927, decided to build a school "that will dispel the idea that is going around that if you have old-time religion, you have to have a greasy nose, dirty fingernails, baggy pants and that you must not shine your shoes."

Bob Jones College first started in College Point, Fla., with 88 students. It moved later to Cleveland, Tenn., and in 1947 opened in Greenville as Bob Jones University.

Jones decreed that boys and girls going to his university had to keep their bodies at least six inches apart and forbade them Hollywood movies.

Drinking was strictly forbidden, and sexually integrated groups were not allowed to use the gymnasium, the swimming pool or the tennis courts at "the world's most unusual university."

No Negroes attend the school and the university, with Bob Jones Jr., as president, has told the government it does not expect any federal education funds.

UCLA And Houston To Vie In Astrodome

NEW YORK (NEA) — The biggest college basketball crowd of the season is expected in Houston's Astrodome tomorrow night as top ranked UCLA clashes with second ranked Houston.

There is still speculation about whether or not Lew Alcindor will be playing. The most recent word was that if the All-American was not fully recovered he would not play.

Some 53,000 fans are expected to sit and stand in Houston's Astrodome Saturday night, Jan. 20, to view the clubs that met in last season's NCAA semifinals. It will be the biggest crowd ever to see a basketball game in America.

Before their encounter in the NCAA, Hayes, Houston's 6-8 All-American, said, "No way Lew's gonna run over me." The prophecy was somewhat correct. Hayes scored 25 points to Alcindor's 19 and pulled 24 rebounds to 20 for the UCLA ace. But Alcindor, the 7-1 1/2 center, and the Bruins ran over the Cougars in general, 73-58, on the way to the national title.

After the game, a disgruntled Hayes was quoted as saying his teammates "choked." He also had advice for Alcindor. "He's not aggressive enough, particularly on offense," said Hayes. "Defensively he just stands around. He's not at all, you know, what they put him up to be."

The way Hayes states such matters gives the impression of almost naive honesty, rather than of malice or envy or sour grapes.

"Lew's my friend," said Hayes. "I mean like at Louisville after our game we went shopping together for record albums and sunglasses for him. He got some Cannonball Adderley and I got the Supremes, who are out of sight."

"Anyway, a guy's gotta be honest with his friend. And Lew is sometimes lax on the court. But he'll get over it. In a few years he'll be a very good ballplayer."

Neither Alcindor nor Elvin's teammates were terribly upset by his remarks.

"Elvin's a great leader," said Houston coach Guy Lewis. "He made a talk in front of the club about that 'choke' quote. He said it really wasn't that way. He may have said it, but it was right after the game and he was down. Everyone got a big laugh out of it, and we went out and swamped North Carolina in the consolation game."

Lewis, though, differs from his star on Alcindor. "He tears you up," said Lew-

Not even his doctor knows for sure.

Lew Alcindor's celebrated left eye gets another examination today and that may finally determine whether the UCLA superstar will be able to play Saturday night in the Astrodome against second place Houston in the collegiate basketball "game of the year."

Alcindor didn't even suit up Thursday night as top-ranked UCLA ran its winning streak—the second longest in collegiate history—to 47 straight with a 93-69 victory over Portland.

Press To Honor Berry in McAllen

AUSTIN, Tex. (Sp) — Tall, talented Raymond Barnett Berry, known as Number 82 on the Baltimore Colts' NFL football team, will be paid tribute by the press of Texas at an Honor Banquet in McAllen on Saturday night. Occasion will be Texas Press Association's 21st Annual Mid-Winter meeting.

Previously honored by TP/ as "Texan of the Year" have been: Paul Richards, manager of the Baltimore Orioles; Van Cliburn, world renowned pianist; Dan "Hoss" Blocker of tv Bonanza fame; C. B. Thornton, Litton Industries; Dale Evans, rodeo personality and Allen Ludden of "Pase word."

A copper, engraved plaque bearing Berry's picture in uniform will be presented to the distinguished athlete by Perryton Publisher Harold Hudson and president of TPA.

Introducing the honoree will be Hometown Publisher Tom Stealy of the Lamar County Echo in Paris and Cleo Clements of the Lewisville Leader. Clements headed the nominating committee that selected Berry for the honor.

Although born in Corpus Christi, the athlete was reared in Paris and educated in Paris schools. He played football in Paris and for the Schreiner Institute and Southern Methodist University before joining the Colts 13 seasons ago.

"I really don't know if Alcindor plays to his capacity. But whatever he puts out is more than good enough. He's a great player."

Hayes feels Houston is better prepared for UCLA now. "All of us know what to expect," he said. "We aren't nervous. We're looking forward to beating them. I think we can."

In Houston, where 38,000 tickets were sold the first week of sales, there is an atmosphere of excitement and optimism. The feeling pervades the household of the "Big E," as Elvin is known around town.

Smoke Screen Set Up By Players Association

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
NEA Sports Editor
HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (NEA)—

The formalized steps of the player associations of both the National and American Football Leagues to seek certification from the National Labor Relations Board as official representatives of their groups is a smoke-screen.

Neither is particularly interested in becoming a registered labor union. The real purpose is to prevent a power grab by outside forces working for the Teamsters Union, and the NFL Players Association is the one most threatened.

The players' convention in this idyllic setting — ostensibly for socializing, golf and routine association meetings — was invaded by Teamster representatives seeking their own certification as representatives of the NFL.

Bernie Parrish, a former defensive back for the Cleveland Browns, has been the recognized leader of this wedge play, but in the current meetings he was joined by the imposing figure of ex-teammate Jimmy Brown. Brown's power lies in his influence over the Negro players in the NFL. Brown was reported to have received $50,000 from the Teamsters on the premise that he could deliver the Negro bloc of 173 players.

The American Football League Players Association, with Jack Kemp re-elected for a third term as president, has one advantage in warding off the Teamsters. The AFL group has 100 per cent backing from its players, all of whom signed authorization cards designating the association as the sole and exclusive agent.

The NFL Players Association, however, does not have carte blanche from its individual members, which may be a problem in getting NLRB certification, and also leaves it open to infiltration by the Teamsters' organizers.

Kemp, the veteran quarterback of the Buffalo Bills, is an experienced negotiator for the AFL players and now deals from strength, which is assured unity. For Kemp, who was once a Goldwater worker and is an avowed right-wing Republican, the position of union leader is an anomaly. He is not ready to join forces with the NFL Players Association in a united front against management (pro football owners) because he doesn't want the AFL players, weaker numerically, "to get swept along in forces diametrically opposed to ours."

He meant specifically that as long as the Teamsters posed a threat to the NFL group, the younger league's players would play a lone hand. Even the impending merger of the pro football leagues by 1970 can't force him to change his mind because certification by the NLRB would still leave Kemp's association as the bargaining group for the nine AF Leagues.

"The full purpose of this step," he said, "is to preserve and assure the association's position as the recognized spokesman for the players against the continuing intervention of outside labor organizations. It precludes the type of traditional union organization which does not recognize all aspects of this business."

"For instance, we will never bargain collectively in the matter of player salaries. Our job is to represent the players in all matters which pertain to conditions of employment—the fringe benefits, pension and insurance, legal rights and advising the players of what's happening in professional football."

However, Kemp and John Gordy, the Detroit Lions' guard who was elected president of the NFL group, are in amicable agreement on goals. At the current meeting, a joint committee was formed to discuss the ramifications of an eventual merger of their groups.

The NFL players used to look down their noses at their young AFL brethren as striplings from another planet. With the coming of the Super Bowl, inter-league exhibitions and imminent absorption, a change in attitude had been perceptible. Kemp and his gang are accepted as equals.

LEAPING INTO action tonight against the Plainview Bulldogs will be the Pampa Harvesters' starting five — Jimmy Cornutt, Johnny Carlos, Bo Lang, George Bailey and Beau Bond. The game is the opener of the second round in District 3-4A and begins at 8 p.m.

Pampa Plays At 8

Pampa's roundballers tangle with the Plainview Bulldogs in the inaugural of the second round of District 3-4A play in the Harvester Field House at 8 p.m.

Paced by the hot hand of George Bailey, who is presently only five points out of the district scoring lead, the Harvesters will be seeking their tenth district win in a row and victory number 20 for the season against only two losses.

Plainview ended the first half in third with a 6-3 record behind Monterey with 7-2. Tim Lane's 20.3 average heads the Plainview attack and is helped by 6-6 Hollis Shewmake with a 15.3 mean, which is listed as seventh highest average in district scoring.

In other games in the district Coronado (11-10) visits Amarillo (9-9); Lubbock (3-17) hosts Caprock (8-11); Palo Duro (12-7) visits Tascosa (13-5) and Borger (8-12) goes to Monterey (20-3).

Lonborg Recovering In Boston Bachelor Pad

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jim Lonborg isn't quite up to running any 100-yard dashes yet, but he's doing right nicely, thank you.

From his bachelor apartment in Boston where he's recovering from a knee operation which followed a skiing accident on Christmas weekend, the big, good-looking Cy Young award winner said he hopes to be throwing hard by late March and thinks there's "a definite chance" of his being ready to pitch for the Red Sox by opening day.

Lonborg's left leg is encased by a thick cast but he already has begun a program for recovery under the supervision of Red Sox trainer Buddy Leroux and plans on reporting for spring training in Winter Haven, Fla., on Feb. 23.

"All the pain is gone," reports the Boston pitcher, "and the cast isn't that bad. I can walk around on it pretty well. So far I haven't gone more than 50 yards from the apartment here but I'm feeling better all the time."

"Buddy and I figure it'll take to stretch out again after they the muscles four or five weeks take the cast-off in the middle of February. It should be somewhere around the end of

LSU's Maravich Remains On Top In Scoring With 45 Per Game

NEW YORK (UPI)—Pete Maravich of Louisiana State and Joe Allen of Bradley are well on their way to setting new major college single season basketball records.

Maravich, the remarkable sophomore gunner, has averaged 45.0 points per game through games of Jan. 13 and Allen, a senior center, boasts a .714 field goal percentage. Both those figures, if maintained for the remainder of the season, would establish NCAA records, reports National Collegiate Sports Services.

Maravich, who swelled his scoring lead over Niagara's Calvin Murphy to 5.3 points per game, appears certain to smash the 13-year-old record of 41.7 established by Frank Seivy of Furman. Maravich's mark is the highest average ever this late in the season.

Allen is aiming his sights on Lew Alcindor's one-year mark of 40.7 in field goal percentage in returning to the top after a failed to complete a turn. My partner and I had made 5-6 turns before this but on this particular one the front part of my skis caught, my skis went down and in and one of my knees went pop!"

The pop Lonborg heard came from his left knee. Two ligaments were torn and it took a two-hour-and-10-minute operation to repair the damage.

Since the surgery, Lonborg has received nearly 1,000 letters and cards. Most were of the get well quickly variety. A few said, "ya bum, ya, whaddya go skiing for?"

Despite what happened to him the lanky Boston right-hander says he would never rule out skiing as a form of recreation for other ballplayers.

"I think skiing is a fabulous sport," says Lonborg in all seriousness, "and I think most ball players would enjoy it because it's exciting and has an element of danger connected to it."

"I skied real hard that day. It was about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and we had to back down the hill to catch the lift down to the bottom. There wasn't any other way to go down but ski. You couldn't very well take your skis off."

"So I skied down tired and

Skating Champ Defends Title

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Peggy Fleming, the world figure skating champion, began the defense of her senior ladies U.S. title today, competing against 11 contenders in the school figures.

The championship will not be decided, however, until the free skating event is completed on Saturday night.

Tim Wood, a student at John Carroll University, Cleveland, surprised the audience at the Spectrum Thursday night by taking over first place in the school figures for the senior men's title on the opening day of competition at the U. S. figure skating championships.

The 19-year-old pre-law student from Bloomfield Hills, Mich., defeated Garry Visconti, the defending champion from Detroit, and Scotty Allen, a Harvard Freshman, in the six compulsory figures.

Texas Southern Favored In Meet

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Texas Southern's stable of speedsters, led by the incredible Jim Hines, loomed as favorites in the third annual National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) indoor track and field championships tonight and Saturday.

The Texas school finished runnerup last year to Southern University of Baton Rouge, La. The Louisiana school, two-time winner of the NAIA indoor, will not defend its title this year because of conflicting final examination schedules.

Hines tied the world mark of :05.9 in the 60-yard dash preliminaries last year and duplicated the feat in winning the finals. He also is co-holder of world records in the 100-yard dash (:09.1) and the 100-meter dash (:10.0).

A record number of 384 athletes representing 77 schools and track clubs are entered in the two-night stand. In the NAIA championship division, 284 trackmen have entered from 47 member institutions.

In addition to the NAIA and open events, the meet also will feature four women's races and five high school events.

Four of the world's five leading long jumpers and a sparkling duel in the two-mile run are expected to be among the top events.

Ralph Boston, co-holder of the world long jump outdoor mark, Bobby Beamon of the University of Texas at El Paso, Jerry Proctor of the University of Redlands, Calif., and Clarence Robinson, representing the University of New Mexico track club head the long jump field.

Beamon defeated Boston two weeks ago by jumping 26-9 at the San Francisco national indoor championships. Proctor gained national prominence last year when he broke Jesse Owen's high school record with a leap of 25-7.

The two-mile will pit Van Nelson of St. Cloud, Minn., State against Billy Mills, 1964 Olympic 10,000-meter champion, and Kerry O'Brien, who is well on his way to becoming Australia's No. 1 two-miler.

Helicopters Used In Golf Tournament

NAPA, Calif. (UPI)—The PGA used a helicopter to blow off frost from frozen greens at Silverado's north course today in an effort to complete first round play in the $125,000 Kaiser Open Golf Tournament and get in the second round before darkness.

A total of 39 players, 21 on the front nine and 18 on the back nine, were caught by darkness in Thursday's opening round and they teed off first today before second round play got underway.

It was the first time in PGA play since last winter's stops at Phoenix and Tucson that a helicopter had to be used to help blow the frost off the greens. Thursday's opening round was delayed an hour and a half at the start because of frost despite the fact all 18 greens had been covered the night before.

While cold weather caught the Napa Valley in its grip during the night the opening round was played in bright sunshine with the temperature in the 60s.

Dave Marr, Rex Baxter and Howie Johnson, three players who didn't cut it very big on the tour a year ago, were among the early first round finishers and they posted matching four-under-par 68s to share the lead.

A stroke behind them were PGA champ Don January, Jacky Cupit, Ted Makalena, Bert Greene and Jim Wiechers, while at two-under par at 70 were Arnold Palmer, George Archer, Wes Ellis, Charlie Sifford and Babe Hickey.

A total of 146 were in the Kaiser field which hopefully was to be cut to the low 20s and ties after today's second round if they get it in.

West Stars Think Of Beating East

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The first thought of the Western All-Stars in Sunday's 18th annual National Football League Pro Bowl game is to beat the Eastern Conference team, but a secondary competition could be almost as interesting as the primary objective.

West Coach Don Shula of the Baltimore Colts announced he would platoon his backfields. The starting unit is made up of quarterback John Unitas and flanker Willie Richardson of the Colts, Gale Sayers of the Chicago Bears and Bill Brown of the Minnesota Vikings.

But the interest of a goodly number of the more than 50,000 fans expected in the coliseum Sunday will be on how well the West's second backfield performs in comparison with the Unitas-led platoon.

The second backfield for the West is made up of three Los Angeles Rams, quarterback Roman Gabriel, halfback Les Josephson and flanker Bernie Casey along with Mel Farr of the Detroit Lions, who did his undergrads playing locally at UCLA.

Labor Movement Begun In Football

NEW YORK (UPI)—Collective bargaining, a term common to labor organizations, industry, business and government, has suddenly appeared on the football field.

Collective bargaining, which in its simplest form means union-management negotiation, is being commonly discussed by some 600 players in the National Football League who belong to a union known as the NFL Players Association.

The association leaders got together Thursday in New York to discuss its aims and goals and collective bargaining made up much of the conversation.

Purpose of the meeting was to strengthen the union's lineup for scheduled collective bargaining talks with NFL club owners. John Gordy of the Detroit

WE ARE IDOLATERS

"And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the work of their own hands. Then God turned, and gave them up to worship the host of heaven." Acts 7:41, 42.

There are three definitions of idolatry: (1) The worship of a physical object, especially a man made image, as a god. (2) The worship of God as the true object, with faulty ideas about Him. (3) Excessive attachment or veneration for anything else. Respect or love borders on adoration. This last definition applies more aptly to us.

Many of the world's people are idolaters. There are 520,000,000 people in the world who worship before the image of Buddha. One hundred and sixty five thousand of these live in the United States of America. There are 310,000,000 Hindus in the world that worship the gods of Hinduism. At one time they had thirty million gods. Petronius, the Roman satirist, once said: "It is easier to find a god in Athens than a man."

But in enlightened, Christian (?) America, we have turned from God to worship idols.

1. We worship at the shrine of life. Satan made an accusation which is true of too many: "Yea, all that a man hath he will give for his life." Job 2:4. But Jesus once said: "Whoever seeks to save his life shall lose it." Lk. 9:24. We venerate and have excessive attachment for life itself — not for the purpose, aims, accomplishments of life, but simply living, animal existence. We fear and dread death, not so much for the consequences of sin, or the uncertainty of the beyond, but because it means a cessation of our existence in this world.
2. We worship at the sacred and hallowed altar of marriage. I do not wish to be misunderstood. God is the author of marriage. It is both good and honorable (precious). There is no earthly relationship so tender and vital. But the purely social aspects and compensations of marriage we love and adore and worship. In many instances it is the physical and sensory satisfaction. The glamor, pomp, show and finery often take precedence over everything else. We have not given enough emphasis to the meaning of marriage (witness: 400,000 divorces granted in USA last year). We have not been interested enough in the kind of companion our son or daughter is getting, the things they mutually share, the common background of religion, education, economics, but the social and physical ends accomplished.
3. We worship the belly. "Whose god is their belly . . ." Phil. 3:19. I suppose there is no place on earth where people give as much time and money in the planning and preparation of food as in this country. Of our eight hundred billion dollar income for 1968, about one hundred and fifty billion will be spent on food. We spend one hundred times more on feeding the body than feeding the soul. Our philosophy: "Let us eat, drink and be merry."
4. We worship in the temple of sex. Jas. 5:5; Eph. 2:3. Our attitude and behavior toward the purposes and functions of the biological have not been what they ought. It is, in many instances, made the chief aim of life. Apart from it marriage is nothing, life is nothing. Business, industry, commercial enterprise misuse and capitalize upon it for financial gain. It sells everything from matches to mansions and from cards to Cadillacs.
5. We worship in the chapel of death. There is more emphasis on death than preparation for it. Vast expenditures of money that can benefit on one except our own vanity. Lk. 9:60.
