Lillian Roberts' Apartment Was Just 'Big Peyton Place'

NEW YORK (UPI)—Lillian Roberts grew up in an apartment that was "one big Peyton Place" under a leaky roof.

The scene: Prostitutes, dope addicts, men and women at one another's throats, rats, roaches, cracked plaster.

Among the 2,000 persons in the Chicago ghetto building also were many valiant mothers who tried to bring their children up clean. Mrs. Roberts' mother, Lillian Davis, was one.

"She pricked our conscience very hard," Mrs. Roberts said. "As I got older I saw all things 'good time' really aren't good. Girls pregnant out of wedlock. Boys addicted to dope and in jail through robbing. I realized my mother was right and determined myself to do right."

The mother's preachments didn't save all her children. A son died the living death of a

Salvation Army Provides Kits For Inductees

Inductees leaving Pampa every month are among the more than 30,000 young Texans entering the Armed Forces in 1968 who receive the Salvation Army's Military Inductee Kit, according to Salvation Army state commander, Col. Paul Thronburg. The kits are presented during swearing-in ceremonies.

The popular kits containing toilet articles and other accessories are often the only luggage carried into military bases by young men and women recruits, Thronburg said.

Approximately 2,500 kits per month are being distributed at five Armed Forces examining and entrance stations in Amarillo, Abilene, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio. All inductees and enlistees enter service through one of these stations.

"The Salvation Army started the program nationwide last spring, and in less than a year distributed over 300,000 kits. It meets a real need, because many young people arrive at induction centers without so much as a razor or tube of toothpaste."

The cost of the program to the Salvation Army will be approximately $13,500 this year, Thronburg said. The merchandise in each kit is contributed free of charge by the manufacturers. However, the Salvation Army pays 44 cents per unit to cover packaging and shipping.

Each kit contains Gillette razor and blades, Palmolive shave cream and soap, Mennen talc, after shave lotion and foot powder, Colgate mouth wash and tooth paste, Wash 'n Dri deodorant, Wash 'n Dri premoist towelettes, Old Spice deodorant and Paper-Mate pen.

Selective Service Answers

EDITOR'S NOTE—Below are questions now being asked at draft boards. The answers are by Colonel Morris S. Schwartz, State Selective Service Director, 209 W. 9th Street, Austin, Texas 78701. He will welcome your questions.

Q—What is the first historical record of conscription of manpower for military service?

A—Probably an account in The Bible. In the Book of Numbers the following is related: "Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house to their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls; from 20 years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel, thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies." The account goes on to state that Moses and Aaron raised an army of 603,550.

Q—How can I find out how a friend of mine in the same draft board was classified at a meeting last week?

A—Go look on the bulletin board at the local board office and you will find his name and the classification given him. Anyone can inspect this list.

Q—When a registered man, or other person, is given a certain number of days to furnish information, or perform some

'Shanty Town' Is Designed By Architect

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The first architect-designed "shanty town" in history will be erected in the nation's capital next week to house 3,000 participants in the Poor Peoples March.

Originally designated "The City of Hope," the instant village is now being called "Resurrection City" by leaders of the march.

Government officials and march leaders, who have been holding talks all this week on a suitable site for the encampment, were reported near agreement today on a tree-fringed park alongside the famous reflecting pool, between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial.

Officials said the government is prepared to issue a permit for that site, restricting occupancy to 3,000 persons. Sewer and water lines are available in the area.

Although Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) officials like to refer to the encampment as a "shanty town," it will be a far cry from the slapdash conglomeration of makeshift buildings which that phrase implies.

Designed by D.R. John Wibenson, assistant professor of architecture at the University of Maryland, the "shanty town" will consist of prefabricated canvas and plywood shelters,

Heart Experts Urge Transplant Caution

By DAVID HASKELL

BOSTON (UPI)—The world's top heart experts agree heart transplants will some day be relatively normal operations, but many of them urge caution until numerous uncertainties are overcome.

Dr. Dwight E. Harken Thursday urged "restraint" in performing heart transplants, saying that a human heart transplant is "experimental."

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African surgeon who performed the world's first heart transplant, said, "It is difficult to look into the future, but I predict even Dr. Harken will be doing heart transplants in 10 years."

The discussions came at the close of the first annual John F. Kennedy Symposium on Recent Developments in Medicine and Surgery held at the Museum of Science.

"I want to emphasize that human heart transplants are experimental," said Dr. Harken, chief of the Division of Thoracic Surgery at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital here, explaining why heart transplants have not been performed in Boston.

Firsts for Boston

The world's first kidney and liver transplants were performed in this city.

Dr. Barnard, referring to Dr. Philip Blaiberg, the patient on whom he performed the world's third heart transplant, said, "One thing we must agree on—we had a man dying, but who was a world's eminent heart specialist, Dr. Paul Dudley White, who moderated the session, said, 'I have not been worried about the legal and moral aspects of the transplants. I have confidence in the ethics of my colleagues. There's been too much ado about this.'"

The ultimate answer, however, is "prevention, not transplants," Dr. White said.

One of the dramatic highlights of the symposium for the some 400 medical professionals attending was a color film shown by Dr. Norman E. Shumway of Stanford University of a recent human heart transplant he performed.

Gasoline, Big-Money Product, In Good Year

By FRED LANKARD
United Press International

Based on the first quarter demand for motor fuel, 1968 is shaping up as a great year for oil's big-money product - gasoline.

Demand for motor-gasoline through March averaged 204,540,000 gallons daily, up 6.9 per cent over the first quarter of last year. The significance of the increase is emphasized by the fact that 1967's first quarter gain was the largest of the year.

According to Bureau of Mines statistics, each month of the quarter showed a gain with January up 7.8 per cent over the previous January, February up 7.7 per cent and a March gain of 5.1 per cent.

Researcher Will Speak For Chemists

Dr. Johan Bjorksten of the Bjorksten Research Laboratories, will speak on "Some Problems Encountered in 25 Years as an Independent Chemist" when the Panhandle Plains Section of the American Chemical Society meets next Friday at the Helium Research Center, two miles west of Amarillo.

The talk will sketch the histories of a few developments with which chemists have been associated from concept to commercial production, pointing out particular pitfalls and unpredicted incidents along the way, according to Dr. James D. Woodyard, assistant professor of chemistry at West Texas State University.

Bjorksten founded the Bjorksten Research Foundation in 1953. It is a non-profit foundation, Prof. Woodyard stated, devoted exclusively to fundamental research on aging, with a view to finding new paths toward control of degenerative diseases and extending the most physiologically active part of man's life.

Coffee will be served from 7:30 to 8 p.m. at Friday's meeting and the program will start at 8 o'clock.

The Oil and Gas Journal quotes market analysts as predicting a second quarter gain of at least 5 per cent over the 1967 April-to-June period. Motor-fuel demand is expected to be up some 4 per cent in the third quarter and there are predictions of a 4.5 to 5 per cent overall increase for the year.

Reflects Several Trends
The first quarter increase, that was nearly twice the predicted surge, reflects several trends.

One is industrial economy growth that means more gasoline-burning trucks on the road. Another factor is increased new car sales and a third stimulus was relatively good driving weather over much of the country.

The unexpected demand also allowed the industry to keep gasoline stocks at a manageable level.

Refinery runs had been increased early in the year to meet a heavy heating oil demand in the East and there was speculation gasoline stocks might reach an uncomfortably high level between the end of the heating season and the start of the spring and summer motoring season.

Inventories Tigher
As of April 1 gasoline stocks were about 5.5 million barrels over the same date in 1967, but on a supply-demand basis, the inventories were tighter than last year. While gasoline production was ahead of 1967, the motor-fuel demand was eating up the surplus.

From the standpoint of prices the Journal reports that some major refiner-marketers expect the demand increase to balance gasoline supply and maintain a tight market that will sustain good prices.

Although the outlook is optimistic, the experts have offered a word of caution. They note that the seasonal increase of oil imports and continued high allowables in the major producing state could result in a crude oil glut that would depress the gasoline market.

Pacific Petroleum Search Expensive

NEW YORK — Oil companies paid the federal government a record-breaking total of nearly $603 million for the right to search for petroleum in the Pacific Ocean in a recent lease sale, Oil Facts reports.

Federal officials said the high bids reflected the keen competition among the 25 companies participating in the sale and the companies' awareness of the need to develop domestic reserves to meet the growing demand for energy. The acreage leased is 3 to 5 miles off Santa Barbara County, Calif.

Skelly Board Elects New President

The board of directors of Skelly Oil Company today elected Ernest B. Miller Jr., president and a director of the company, filling the vacancy left with the death of Don H. Miller in April.

Miller, 58, comes to Skelly from Getty Oil Company in Los Angeles where he was group vice-president of exploration and production. He is also a director of Getty.

An Oklahoman, Miller was born in Sapulpa and attended the University of Oklahoma where he received a BS degree in geology in 1930. He spent his early years on Texas with Tidewater Oil Company working his way up from a roustabout with the firm in Kilgore in 1934.

Miller was promoted to engineer in 1935, to district foreman in 1942, to district engineer in 1944 and then to chief production engineer of the mid-continent division in the same year. In 1954, he was made vice-president and southern division general manager, with offices in Houston. Miller was named group vice president of Tidewater and elected to the company's board of directors in the spring of 1965.

Miller became group vice-president and director of Getty Oil Company when Tidewater merged with the firm late last year.

He is a director of the American Petroleum Institute, the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association and is a past president of the Houston Petroleum Club. He is also a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers the Los Angeles Club and the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Miller and his wife Dorothy have three children, Ernest Bryner Miller, III, Russell Bryan Miller and David C. Miller.

Synthetic Crude By 70s Is Planned By Firm

DALLAS — Atlantic Richfield Company hopes to produce "significant quantities of synthetic crude oil by the mid-1970's," Robert O. Anderson, chairman, told the annual meeting of shareholders here today.

Forecasting a crude oil production deficit of as much as five million barrels of oil daily in the United States by 1980, Anderson declared:

"While part of this gap might be filled with imported crude oil, it is clear that our domestic production will have to be supplemented with synthetic crude oils locked in tar sands, shale or coal."

Atlantic Richfield, he said, has "been preparing for this eventuality for some time."

He pointed out that the company has an excellent position in the Athabasca tar sands of Alberta, Canada, with about 500,000 net acres of rights, and has also acquired oil shale acreage, mostly in Utah and Colorado, and coal reserves in the western part of the United States.

"These accomplishments have been achieved in gradual stages as part of our long-range planning," Anderson said. "Our goal

Negro Youth Works To Go To Europe

By PAUL ENGLISH
GUTHRIE, Okla. (UPI)—Orville Roper, 17, is a Negro. His parents are on welfare. But Orville is going to Europe this summer—if he can dig up $1,200.

Orville has been selected as a delegate to go on a people-to-people tour of eight European countries this summer, and the $1,200 is the cost of the trip to each delegate.

The chances would usually not appear to be good for a youth in Orville's financial situation to come up with $1,200 within the next few weeks. The only income his mother and disabled father have is from welfare—an aid to families with dependent children check.

But Orville is accustomed to overcoming big odds.

Helping him overcome the odds this time are Gov. Dewey Bartlett, State Welfare Director L. E. Rader, Welfare Personnel Director Clifford E. Burns, his friends, fellow 4-H Club members and leaders, and Guthrie civic clubs.

Bartlett tossed $100 into the pot. Rader added $50 and Burns $25. Civic clubs have already raised $300. A bean supper, rummage sale and band concert are expected to boost the total.

Orville, a senior at Guthrie High School, has never let the fact that his family is "on welfare" keep him from trying to be a good student or participating in 4-H and school activities.

His selection as a people-to-people delegate, an honor prized by all 4-H members, climaxes eight years of 4-H work. He is only the second Negro selected in Oklahoma for the tour.

He won the state 4-H championship for tractor driving in 1966 and received an expense-paid trip to Waterloo, Iowa, for the national contest. He placed ninth.

Orville hopes to enter Oklahoma State University or Langston University next fall as an agriculture student.

He works five days a week, for two hours a day, as both a janitor and cafeteria helper at the school, earning $1.25 an hour. He hopes to apply it toward the tour expenses.

California not only has the most people of all the 50 states, it also has the most cats and dogs, The World Almanac reports. The official U.S. Census estimate as of July 1, 1967, was 19,163,000; an unofficial estimate puts the number of California's dogs and cats at 50 million.

Nebraskans Will See Big Political Spending During Primary Campaign

By WILLIAM B. KETTER
LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—To Nebraskans, big political spending was always something that happened "Back East" or "Out West."

But no longer. The presidential popularity contest here has spurred an unprecedented outpouring of campaign dollars by the major contenders.

On the ballot Tuesday are Robert F. Kennedy, Eugene J. McCarthy, and President Johnson on the Democratic side and Richard M. Nixon, Ronald Reagan, Nelson A. Rockefeller, Former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen and petition candidate Americus Liberator, a retired 57-year-old Valentine, Neb., cowboy, on the Republican side.

Kennedy, McCarthy and Nixon forces are spending the lions share of the campaign funds in the Cornhusker state. They acknowledge it is a key contest.

There is no way of determining exactly how much the "Kennedy Machine," with its band of imported celebrities, is spending in Nebraska but some estimates place the figure at between $150,000 and a quarter million dollars.

Political observers calculate McCarthy is doling out between $40,000 and $60,000 to woo Cornhusker voters, with the bulk of this going for television-radio and newspaper advertisements.

George B. Cook of Lincoln, Nixon's Nebraska campaign manager, said $75,000 has been budgeted for the former vice president's effort here.

Rockefeller's write-in campaign is a modest one from a fiscal standpoint. John C. Mason of Lincoln, chairman of the drive, said no donations have been received from the New York governor or his national campaign organization.

However, St. Clair enjoys an advantage over most people. The former professional football player is six feet, eight inches

Presidential Primary In Texas Anticipated

By DAVE ANDERSON
AUSTIN (UPI)—A Texas presidential primary may be closer to reality as a result of the dissatisfaction that resulted from last Saturday's precinct conventions.

For a change, it wasn't only the outsiders—usually liberal democrats—who were unhappy.

This time there were "rump" conventions by disgruntled supporters of Gov. John Connally, and Republican supporters of California Gov. Ronald Reagan went away unhappy from some of the GOP conventions.

There is nothing to prevent either party from staging a presidential popularity poll under present law.

Up to Committees
The state Democratic and Republican executive committees have authority to put any question they want on the ballot, including a presidential preference vote.

Such a poll would not be binding, and national convention delegates would still have to be chosen by some method such as the present precinct, county and state convention machinery. But the election code could be amended by the legislature to provide for a true presidential primary.

Some states have slates of delegates on the ballot, each slate representing one presidential candidate.

Others choose their delegates by convention or state committee, but allocate the votes according to the results of the presidential primary.

Primary Plan Shunned
Legislative attempts in recent years to give Texas a binding presidential primary found little enthusiasm.

Most politicians are happy with the present system. It gives the leaders of each party a great deal of influence over their state's national convention votes and gives them a power base from which they can wheel and deal in national politics.

At the same time, the system leaves an opening for those on the outside.

James EARL RAY: MAN ON THE RUN

Sleuthing by federal agents and newsmen has pieced together key moves in a year-long cross-country journey of the No. 1 man on the nation's wanted list—the suspected murderer of Martin Luther King Jr. The trail starts at the Missouri State Penitentiary with James Earl Ray's escape on April 23, 1967. Four months later, on Aug. 26, Ray, using the alias Eric Starvo Galt, rented a room at a Birmingham, Ala., boarding house saying he planned to stay three or four months.

On Aug. 30, he bought a 1966 white Mustang, paying $2,000 in cash. On Oct. 7, he checked out of the boarding house, after only six weeks, saying he was going to Mobile to look for work.

The trail picks up next in Los Angeles. Ray and a Hollywood songwriter, Charles Stein, made a Los Angeles-New Orleans round trip in the Mustang between Dec. 15 and 21. Ray also took dancing lessons at a Long Beach, Calif., studio during December. He mentioned to both Stein and a dance instructor owning a bar in Mexico.

Next came a bartending course. Ray began six weeks training on Jan. 20, 1968, graduating March 2 but declining a job the school had available for him. Ray said he was leaving Los Angeles to see a brother. On March 29, he turned up in Birmingham again, buying a .243-caliber rifle at a sporting store but turning it in next day for a .30-06.

April 4, Memphis: A man registering as John Willard but fitting Ray's description checks into a rooming house at 3:15 p.m., requesting a back room facing the motel where Martin Luther King was staying. At 6 p.m., King, standing on the motel balcony, was killed by a bullet from a .30-06 rifle.

Good Jobs Available For Mature Women

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Say the children have grown out of the nest and you want to get back into the job world. Say also that you once held a good position, but quit it to bring up the family and wonder now whether you can qualify. Is your age against you? What are your chances of success as a mature woman?

Excellent, says a woman who works constantly with personnel departments in business and industry. Office help, for instance, is especially at a premium.

But she warns, "when you're job hunting don't undersell yourself. Don't ask, 'What can I do?' and end up a salesgirl." This belittling of one's talents is one of the most frequent drawbacks of the mature woman going back to a job, says Bernice M. Gurvich, mother of three, clinical psychologist, and staff consultant with the Personnel Laboratory, Stamford, Conn.

Don't be afraid to look for the better jobs, she says. Remember that running a home and caring for the family is experience that the employer can use.

Take honest stock of your skills, Mrs. Gurvich advises. And perhaps the best place to look first is in the temporary job field. Here you learn quickly what skills the employer calls for and you find what you want to do long range while you also are getting back into a business routine.

Mrs. Gurvich points out that because of shortages of office help many firms offer on the job training programs too.

The psychologist discusses jobs for mature women, from the standpoint of the employer, in the current issue of Personnel Journal, the magazine for industrial relations and personnel management. She elaborated on her views from a telephone interview.

To Mrs. Gurvich, the woman who has the best chance for long term success is the mature one ("from her 30's on up, depending on how early she married"), who's had some setbacks in life but has good spirit, and one who is feminine rather than "one of the boys."

"Sweet young things are frequently just looking for a husband or (are) unsure of their goals," Mrs. Gurvich writes.

"The youngster is likely to be marking time in her search for a husband, or taking a job to expand the contacts available to her for marriage. . . the more mature woman has more stable concept of herself and her life and, therefore, a more stable job potential."

Change Ordered In Birth Control Pill Labeling

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) today ordered revised labeling for all birth control pills sold in this country effective June 30 to reflect results of British studies linking use of the contraceptives to blood-clotting.

The relabeling, to which eight makers of such pills agreed, is being revised to inform physicians of the British studies "which show that these drugs sometimes result in thromboembolic episodes (blood-clotting)," the FDA said.

In addition, advertisement will be required to reflect the news as of Sept. 1.

The pills are distributed only by doctors' prescriptions and the new labeling, a spokesman for the manufacturers explained, is designed to "provide physicians with more definitive prescribing information."

The FDA said information obtained in the British "controlled retrospective studies indicated a seven to ten-fold increase in thromboembolic deaths and diseases among women who took birth control pills compared to other women.

The highest risk group reported was in the 35 to 44 age brackets where the rate was four deaths among each 100,000 women taking oral contraceptives for one year compared to one death a year among 200,000 non-users.

Red Cross News

By Libby Shotwell, Executive Secretary

The National Red Convention that was held in Denver, Colo. May 5, 8th was a wonderful success. Mary BeEride, the High School delegate with Polly Wagner, was not able to attend due to illness. Polly took notes and will give them to Mary so that she may use the ideas presented at the Youth sessions in her work next year with the High School Red Cross.

Sunday afternoon we went to the Capitol Building where the board of Governors held a reception in the Rotunda for the guests of RC as well as the delegates. We met all of the persons on the board and were served punch and cookies at beautifully decorated tables with youth volunteers in the blue and white pinafores serving the refreshments. During the evening there was an international meeting with the speaker, Frederic Sjordet, Vice President of International Committee of the Red Cross, Geneva Switzerland guest speaker.

At 10 the following morning the opening plenary session took place in the Civic Auditorium Arena. Although this is a customary sight and each convention is opened by the parade of the flags, we all thought that Denver had done an exceptional job. Two hundred Red Cross Hospital Volunteers with all of the uniforms used by the ladies since the beginning of the service in the hospitals were there, the 50 Registered Nurses with their lovely blue caps over their white uniforms and sparkling white oxfords made a beautiful sight, then came the First Aid Instructors and water Safety instructors wearing the sweaters with the insignia of the RC on the sweaters. More than 150 young people marched in to the auditorium carrying the small red cross flags. Over 750 volunteers were on the Stage! Our chairman of National Red Cross, E. Roland Harriman, gave the opening speech. Then the work began. The sessions were well conducted and the speakers were of the best. There were 3,600 delegates at the Convention from very state except Alaska! Persons from Pampa represented the Plains area and for once we were glad Amarillo delegates did not go as they were here to go to the Miami Disaster. The next Convention will be held in Atlanta, Ga., and they hope that all chapters will send a representative to

What A Pharmacist Must Know

You have often heard people say that all a pharmacist has to know when dispensing a prescription is how to count out the already prepared capsules or tablets. This is not true. Pharmacists are taught much more, while attending a college of pharmacy.

A pharmacist must know the art of compounding and how to store medicines to preserve potency. He must know the safe dosage of thousands of drugs. He must know their actions, uses, and precautions while taking them, and how to combine them safely with other drugs. And, he must use this knowledge to check the safety of every prescription he dispenses.

YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a medicine. Pick up your prescription if shopping nearby or we will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people entrust us with their prescriptions. May we compound yours?

A FLOWER FOR MOTHER — Flowers will decorate the scene today as many Pampa mothers wear them during the day's activities. Shown here giving their mother and wife a flower to mark the day are members of the W. C. Newlin family, 1413 N. Russell. They are, left to right; Philip, 7; Carol, 11, "Mother," Mrs. Newlin (Joyce); John,

LET DAD DO THE COOKING — Saving Mother a day of work in the kitchen is the way some Pampans will let Mom know their feelings. Here, a Pampa family watches as Dad cooks on the barbecue grill. They are the Jud Jasmins, 948 Terry Road. Jasmin, left, is manpower planning and development assistant at Cabot. To his left are son Paul, 10, and "Mom," Faye. Nearest the grill are Todd, 5; Scott, 2; and Mark, 8.

A NEW DRESS FOR MOM — New Spring finery is often among the salutes to Mother on her special day. Shown here selecting a new dress to celebrate the occasion are Mr. and Mrs. John W. (Judy) Warner, 1816 Beech.

Looking on while Mom tries one style in a Pampa dress shop are the children, Mike, five, and Sandy, four. Warner is a Pampa attorney and city judge.

A SUNDAY DRIVE — The James McCarley family, 1809 Duncan, takes Mother for a Sunday drive in this picture. Many Pampa families will take short trips together to get "Mom" out of the house for a while as they observe her special day today. Here, Mrs. McCarley

La Cultura Club Members Hear Reports On Two Presidents; Arthur, Cleveland

La Cultura Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Philip Rapstine with Mrs. William Chafin, president, presiding. Mrs. Malcolm McClelland led the group in the club collect. After roll-call and the reading of the minutes, the treasurer's report was given. Old and new business was discussed, including installation of officers. Several committee reports were given.

The program was given by Mrs. W. W. Hampton, who gave a report on "Chester A. Arthur." "Arthur was a stylish widower when he became President," she began. "He was a country boy, born into a parsonage family. He forged ahead in his schooling through sheer ability, working his way through law school by teaching positions. He became a successful, yet sympathetic lawyer. He worked with the Republican Party machine because it was effective in getting results. He won many appointments of honor, the most notable of which was collector to the port of New York. Arthur proved himself a good officer, honest, and efficient, yet independent in forming his own policies. After the assassination of Garfield, Arthur stepped up from the office of vice-president, to the office of President, as an unknown. His administration was most noted for Civil Service reform. Little was actually known about his personal life until after he died, which made him misunderstood by many of his associates," Mrs. Hampton concluded.

The program was continued by a report on Grover Cleveland read by Mrs. Rapstine in the absence of Mrs. Lee Foxworthy. "Grover Cleveland was the son of a poor minister," Mrs. Rapstine began. "His father died when he was young so he helped support the family. He taught briefly. He went west and became a legal clerk and later a lawyer. He remained a bachelor for a long time and took no interest in the Civil War. He had great power of concentration and at the age of 44, emerged into political prominence. He gained experience and respect as reform mayor of Buffalo and Governor of New York. He was elected as the First Democratic President in 28 years in 1885 as 22nd President. He was elected to the office again in 1892. He sought to end waste and corrup-

Others present were Mmes. Scott Nisbet, Arnold Wesley, John Ellis, Carl Adcock, Paul White House when he married Hartin, and Jimmy Hayes. Mrs. Frances Folsom. He retired and David Pilcher was welcomed as a new member.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Joe and I have also "free" (divorced) and been married for 18 years we seemed instantly attracted and have had a fairly happy to each other. He asked me for marriage. Joe isn't the jealous my telephone number and said type, but I think he carries it he'd call me. He also gave me to the other extreme.

We've been very friendly with a rather weird couple who live across the street from us. Pete is 50, short, fat, and very unattractive. Aggie is his third wife. She's cute, and sexy, and about 25 years younger than Pete. She obviously married him for his money.

Lately Pete is getting much too friendly with me. He puts his hands on me, and once made a direct proposition, which I turned down gracefully. It seems the four of us are spending more and more time together, during which time Pete tries to play "footsies" with me. Last night he even took his shoe off and practically had his foot in my lap. I loudly told him off, and my husband just laughed. Aggie doesn't care who Pete plays footsies with as long as it isn't her. (I think she must have something else going for her.)

Anyway, Pete suggested the four of us take a month's vacation together. I started making up excuses why we couldn't, but my husband was all for it.

Is our marriage sick? I don't care to spend all that time with this couple. Why should my husband want to? And why should not he be annoyed that another man makes passes at his wife?

DEAR WIFE: Your marriage IS sick, and so is Joe in the area of husbandhood. A man who respects his wife and his marriage would not tolerate any monkey business, much less encourage it. Tell Joe that if he enjoys Pete's company, he should see him without you. And you could be right about Aggie's having something else going for her. Just make sure it's not Joe.

DEAR ABBY: Two weeks ago I met a very attractive eligible bachelor at a party. I am

By MRS. O. A. WAGNER

Good to be back in the harness again, as the old saying goes; after surgery on my right eye, in Amarillo recently. Am doing fine, but time passes slowly when one is counting the days.

Nice crowd out for the monthly this week, which was the regular monthly birthday party. Those present having birthdays this month were Mmes. W. D. Darby, S. A. Barnard, Lyda Stockman and Messrs. Joe Shelton, and H. C. Wilkie, who is now a young sprout of ninety-four. Everyone received a nice gift from the Altrusa Club, who were hostesses.

Mrs. Barbara Roop and Mrs. Cora Long were in Childress recently, to attend the funeral of their nephew, Raymond Long. We extend our sympathy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Moseley were in Cyril, Okla. this week to visit their son, D. E. Moseley and other relatives.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Darby this week are their daughter, Mrs. and Mrs. Bill Davis and small son William Richard, called "Shorty," of Las Vegas, Nev. They arrived Tuesday and expect to return home May 10th. I imagine he was a spoiled "Shorty" after visiting his grandparents.

We also extend sympathy to Mrs. Ada Osborne on the loss of her brother, Mr. Ross Hartman, of Andrews, Tex. Burial was in Odessa, Mrs. Osom and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cavin attended.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Lawrence had a nice outing Wednesday, going to Lake Meredith fishing. Luck was pretty good, among the catch H. M. got a nice pike.

T. W. McMillan is back with us for the summer, after spending the winter in Sprindale, Ark. with a daughter Mrs. Helen Orr and will spend the summer here with his son, C. O. McMillan, 617 N. Sloan.

Mrs. Jessie VanHuss has returned from Houston where she visited her children, a daughter, Mrs. W. M. Weir and family, another daughter, Mrs. Raymond Nice and family. She attended the Senior Center meeting this week.

Mrs. P. H. Gates was also back with us after a couple of weeks in the hospital.

Miss Lucy Herlacher who fell in her yard about a month ago and broke two ribs, and right arm or wrist, and was in Highland General Hospital is with her sister, Mrs. Fields and family in Groom, and reported to be improving.

Saw Mrs. Marie Fitzgerald downtown since my return, and she is still having to use a crutch after her fall in Amarillo during the Christmas season. It was good to see her out.

Mrs. Ruby Sioval took "Yours truly," to the center this week, was good to be back.

Mrs. Louise Sewell has not been very well lately, and is in Highland Hospital. Mrs. Julia Bell and daughter, Mrs. Eva Johnson, of Booker, shopped here recently and called on Mrs. Mollie Hethcock. Mrs. Bel is Mrs. Hethcock's sister-in-law.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hogsett celebrated their 45th Wedding Anniversary May 1 at home with relatives and dinner. Congratulations.

The Altrusa Club was hostess, and those serving refreshments were: Mmes. Mary Louise Dunkel, chairman; J. Flannigan, Lillian Snow, Miss Lou Ella Patterson, Ruth Sewell, Flossie Anderson, Elizabeth Taylor.

Red Cross volunteers with transportation: Mmes. Olive Hills and John Hesse. See you next week.

Hollowell-Jones Vows Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hollowell, west of the city, announce the marriage of their daughter Kathy Hollowell to Robert Jones of Pampa. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jones of Pennsylvania. The ceremony was performed May 4 by the Rev. Albert Maggard in the first Pentecostal Church parsonage. A reception, in the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. The bride was honored with two bridal showers, in the home of Rev. and Mrs. Albert Maggard and in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Young.

Basic Issue in Heart Transplants

Almost as amazing as heart transplant surgery itself has been the number of medical scientists condemning such operations.

Nobel Prize-winning German surgeon Werner Forssman, for instance, called it "a crime to perform an operation in a field where fundamental research is not yet finished."

Shortly after the first operation in South Africa, the Soviet Union announced that it had banned heart transplant operations on humans.

Opposition has centered on two points. One is the as yet unsolved problem of getting around the body's mechanism for rejecting foreign tissue.

The other is the who, how and when of deciding that a potential heart donor is "dead," especially since doctors are able to keep a patient in a comatose state of "non-death" for indefinite periods.

Associated with this are all sorts of ethical-legal questions raised by theologians and lawyers. The controversy has tended to obscure two obvious truths: Every new medical technique has been unproven and dangerous in the beginning; and had the operation not been performed on him, Philip Blalberg of South Africa would be dead today, as would the young man whose heart was given to him.

The half-dozen others who have been operated on unsuccessfully would also be just as dead, as would their donors, had their operations never taken place.

One of the few doctors who has not been emotionally torn asunder by the questions surrounding heart transplant surgery is the man who first performed it, Christian Barnard of the University of Cape Town Medical School.

"It is the doctor's duty to treat a patient until he has no further means left with which to treat him," he stated in a letter to the American Trial Lawyers Association.

"So far as the donor in any transplant is concerned, the doctors in charge of this patient must continue treatment and supportive therapy until the stage is reached where all available means of treatment are exhausted. There the duty of the doctor ends as far as the donor is concerned. To minimize human error, it has been our policy that the donor is not treated by the transplant team but by a completely different team of doctors who specialize in the condition from which the donor is dying."

"As far as the patient is concerned, the same holds. That is, the doctor must continue treatment until he feels there is no further treatment by which he can benefit the patient. If he feels that heart transplantation is a possible method of treatment, then he has no right to withhold this if it falls within his capabilities."

"Long before organ transplantation was performed, doctors have had this problem and have had to come to a decision when respirators and heart-lung machines had to be stopped, so this is certainly not a new issue which has arisen since we embarked on transplantation of organs."

In simple terms, the only essential question concerning heart transplant surgery would seem to be: Is the physician to be permitted to continue fulfilling his duty of treating the sick with every means at his disposal, or is he not?

Might Not Right in College Riots

The forcible removal by police of some 500 kicking, screaming, "students" from the embattled halls of Columbia University in New York City may be one of the most salutary events to occur on the collegiate scene in years.

The university authorities must now complete their painful duty by meting out proper and adequate punishment to all those who participated in the seizure of five buildings on the campus and assorted acts of hooliganism.

For their part, students must realize that their voice can only be advisory. When legitimate pressure and protest fail, they have the choice either of removing themselves from an institution they voluntarily entered or abiding by the decisions of its duly constituted authorities.

Certainly no group, whether a minority or a majority, no matter how young and impassioned by idealism, can be granted the indulgence of breaking or observing the rules as they see fit, of trampling the rights of teachers and other students, of bringing the operation of a school to a dead halt until they get what they want.

RIISING IMMORALITY IN AMERICA

Why Hats Are Tossed Into Ring

NEW YORK (NEA). Gov. Rockefeller having tossed his hat into the ring last week, and Vice President Humphrey having tossed his in the week before, the total of people tossing their hats into the ring is now up to eight-counting Harold Stassen's hat.

For some misty reason when a person announces his availability for high office, it is incumbent upon the experts to say that he has tossed his hat into the ring.

Exactly what ring that refers to—and why he tosses in his hat brush we have never really understood.

What happens to the hat afterward is also hard to explain. But presumably it stays there in perpetuity. To our knowledge, Gov. Romney has never tossed his hat out of the ring.

And so, as this is a bumper year for hats tossed into the origin of this colorful phrase, we felt it would be a valuable contribution to human understanding to investigate the ring, we felt it would be a val-

And it might be. But, unfortunately, it is not going to work out that way. We have spent several days in diligent research. But the only thing we have turned up is a fellow named Hatten D. Ring—who turned out to be pitcher for the Dougherty Silk Sox in 1906.

And so, with our reflexes slowed down to a mumble, we mumbled our discouragement to the wife last night at dinner.

"Well," she said, "I'm surprised that you don't know the origin of that phrase. Why, it's as easy as falling on a log."

"Really?" we mumbled.

"All right," we admitted. "What about the ring?"

"The ring," the wife said, "is the eternal symbol of fidelity, perfection and promise, you know, like an engagement ring or the wedding ring."

"So," the wife said patiently, "that's why people say that a candidate for high office tosses his ring into the hat."

Over the years we have learned not to dispute the wife's definition and labels. It is much easier to make note of them and then reprint them in this space as a public service.

No body in his right mind would dare argue with a public service. And so, herewith, last night's final word:

Electorate: 100 million people qualified by law to vote for either one of two candidates.

Ethnic vote: Members of the opposition party.

Hat: 1. When worn an article of clothing. 2. When doffed, a handy receptacle for collecting money from a crowd. (See Ring.)

Ring: 1. A symbol of purity, fidelity, promise. 2. A conspiracy formed for defrauding the public. 3. An arena for conducting bull festivals.

Platform Plank: A gasoline additive for getting more mileage out of tired vehicles.

Political Machine: (See Platform Plank.)

Policy Statement: A notice from the insurance company saying that you are not insurable. (See White Paper.)

White Paper: A piece of paper, often white. (See Black Paper.)

Ward Heeler: 1. American statesman (1815)- 2. Catcher for the Dougherty Silk Sox (1806).

IRS Audits of Sen. Ed Long's and Fensterwald's Taxes Called Outcome of Probe of Agency's Bugging Practices, Denied

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service is retaliating against Senator Edward Long's embarrassing investigation of that government agency's clandestine eavesdropping activities.

The federal income tax returns of Senator Long, chairman of the Senate Administrative Practices Subcommittee, and his chief counsel, Bernard Fensterwald, are being audited by IRS agents.

Congressional aides of Long and Fensterwald say the tax probe is a direct outgrowth of the senator's subcommittee inquiry, although Internal Revenue Service officials privately deny this. IRS officials claim that the audit is routine.

In headline-making hearings last year, Senator Long exposed IRS bugging of more than 23 conference rooms in which tax agents were interviewing taxpayers whose returns were being challenged.

Information in the subcommittee's files shows that the recordings of several of the conversations of taxpayers and agents were used in their inquiries and preparation of tax cases.

The Doctor Says:

Rural Accident Deaths Higher Than Urban Ratio
Why are there more fatal accidents of all kinds in rural areas than in cities? There appear to be several reasons for this. One is that farming, lumbering and mining—occupations with special hazards sparsely populated areas where adequate first-aid measures are not always available.

THE APATHY OF WORRIES
Everyone is unhappy and worried about something, says the national press. Worried, yet 1967 was one of the most prosperous years in history. These worries have also caused a growth of apathy. Instead of voicing their worries, many seem to be holding the worries in, turning their backs on what is going on about them, and forming calloused shells of indifference.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Scherzo—Italian for "a joke"—is a brisk, vivacious musical movement written in quick triple time but performed with only one countable beat to the bar, says The World Almanac. The scherzo evolved from the minuet and, since Beethoven, has displaced the minuet as the third movement of the sonata and the symphony. Beethoven did not use the title scherzo unless the music was humorous, as in the third movement of his "Seventh Symphony."

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION: (1) What is a contract? (2) What makes a contract valid or invalid? (3) Can a contract be broken morally? If so, how? (4) Are there any situations where a contract cannot apply? (5) Can one person obligate another to a contract? (6) Is the United States Constitution a contract?

ANSWER: (1) A contract is an agreement between two or more persons to accomplish a specific purpose.

(2) If all parties agree to all the terms and conditions of the agreement it is a valid contract. It's invalid when there is not an agreement by each individual. Also, common law has long held that where one or more parties are induced into entering a contract by force or fraud, it is not a contract.

(3) We believe a contract can be broken morally by paying the damage suffered by the other party as a result of the breaking of the contract.

(4) We cannot think of any relation among men that can't be made on a contractual basis. If any of our readers can think of any situation where a contract cannot apply, we would be pleased to have it pointed out to us.

(5) One person cannot obligate another to a contract unless the principal has authorized the agent.

(6) The U.S. Constitution is not a contract. Only a few people authorized the signing of the constitution, so they were the only ones who entered a contract, and they could not obligate anyone else to a contract.

With Some Reservation

Concerning all the hullabaloo about "learning" for the poverty "stricken." Once there was a Injun 21 years of age living on a reservation. He decided he wanted a better job. He went to town and found the only job available was as a freight-checker.

The requirements included being able to type 45 words a minute in order to submit reports. He couldn't type. The job would not be open for 2 months.

He went to the library. There he found a book on typing instruction. But he was not allowed to check it out — some rule about Indians not being property owners.

He called on a white friend who endorsed his card and he was then able to get the book. He took the book to his tent. He was making $1.00 a day.

Automation Is Not Yet Perfect

DAVID O. WOODBURY
(American Opinion)

Some years back I wrote a book about automation which, though practically obsolete today, is still selling. It's hard to tell why, except that automation is a fascinating subject wherein the principles of replacing men with machines do not change but simply expand.

An automated device is different from an automatic one; the latter merely turns out a continuous stream of bolts or bottles of pop, all just alike. An automated device does the same but scrutinizes each piece when it is finished, to make sure it's up to standard. If the piece has defects it is rejected, and the machine examines itself to see what's the matter, corrects the error, then goes back to work. Here lies the seed of dissatisfaction in the labor force. Men lose jobs to machines because now the robots can "think," performing this hitherto exclusive human act much faster and better than man. A computer is the brain of the outfit, and no one can hope to compete with it.

One gets a close look at automation by observing its furthest. It "knows" when the house is cold and fires up until its thermostat tells it that things are warm again. My furnace is even better than that. When I turn up the thermostat nothing happens for four minutes. I complained to my contractor about this and he said, "Oh, this is the latest thing. Let me explain what it does and you'll see." Well, what the avant-garde deal downstairs does, when asked to heat, is to set about making an exhaustive chart of everything down cellar. It checks anything wrong, such as a leaky oil valve, a too-hot chimney pipe or faulty spark plug, it won't go. Also, it won't tell me what it discovered that was wrong. I have to get the plumber over to confer with the thing.

This illustrates the fact that automation is not yet perfect. No Signature Check

An amusing quirk of bank data automation was related to me by a friend recently. It seems he had given his college-student daughter, a sheet of signed checks with the amounts left out, to see her through her senior year while he went around the world. She was to cash one for whatever she needed. When he got back he found the canceled checks waiting for him and was pleased with her modest expenditures. What didn't please him was that two of the checks were signed by his daughter, not by him. "You forgot to sign those two, Daddy," she explained, "so I did it."

Being hep to banking practices, my friend raised his eyebrows about this oddity to his banker. It was not that his daughter had tried to forge his signature—she hadn't. But how come the bank honored two drafts on his checking account, signed by a non-depositor, even if they knew she was "all right?" Was that sound banking practice? The banker puzzled over the two offenders for a while and then laughed. "Oh, that's automation for you," he replied jovially. "You see, all incoming checks go through a mechanical sorter, and the magnetic numbers on them tell the machine whose accounts to charge them to. No human eye ever sees them. Efficiency!"

"Be Our Guest"

Meaning, dear reader, that if you let a blank check, "personalized" with those numbers, escape your possession, anybody, anybody can sign his name to it and cash it on the Be-Our-Guest principle. Bank people admit to me that this might be unfortunate, but what are they to do? There simply aren't enough girls in the world to sort out and recognize every authorized signature on every check our affluent society writes. And there isn't time these days to train a specialist, or a gang of them, in a big bank with, say, fifty thousand depositors, to know every John Henry in the lot. It has to be done by automation. So, a few magnetic hieroglyphics are good enough for the check sorter to recognize you by, even though you didn't sign them yourself. Thus, in effect, you sign your checks for the fun of it.

Now, automation does offer such genuine magic. It is getting to be essential everywhere, doing incredible things in the home, in industry, in the air and in space—everywhere that we want a thing done quickly and done right. If there were no automation in this furious world, it would not be so furious any more but would slow down to the pace of the One Hoss Shay. There'd be no millions of jobs in factories, no "cheap" appliances like cars and washing machines and electric power, no such achievements as finding out what the surface of Mars is like, or what the bottom of the sea has to offer in the way of food.

As the matter stands, people who lose their present jobs through automation can get better jobs in brand new industries created by automation. Those who huck it and won't learn the new tricks must expect to be downgraded. Either you use your brains, for a change, by teaming up with machines that are companions rather than slaves, or you get pushed out of mass production. You go up or you go out.

Automation is thus one of our many institutions that is controversial, a badge of distinction of some kind to "liberal" minds. To believe in it, to some of these types, is to be some kind of a kook.

Amazingly, human beings themselves are by far the most automated devices in the modern world. Automation is as old as humanity, really. Eve demonstrated an ancient flaw in it when she ate the apple. She was told not to, but her feedback circuit went wrong and tempted her beyond endurance. The heat of automation is this "feedback" gimmick, which is the ability of a particular creative train of events to inspect its own results, then telegraph back into itself a description of what's wrong with the quality of the product, and order an overhaul of the machinery, meanwhile suspending operation. Under the pressure of modern existence, people seem prone to make the same mistake Eve did.

Without our conscious knowledge our bodies perform automated acts on a hundred different internal fronts. The slightest of them involves intricate checking mechanisms, capable of making hairline corrections to obtain better results. Sometimes this automation fails. The sufferer from palsy, whose hands shake uncontrollably, is a victim of feedback gone out of control. His muscles cannot stop overcompensating.

Most unfortunately, the whole human race seems in danger of falling into the opposite predicament—no feedback at all, mentally or morally. Cause no longer leads to effect; the two are getting a divorce. Thus, the beautiful ability of the eye to direct the hand falls in millions of auto drivers, leading them to kill and maim each other. Worse, much worse, the brain no longer can be relied upon to pay attention to the information stored in it. In consequence, venal politicians and ambitious tyrants pull off stunts that should not result in instant hailing into the courts of logic and restraint. Devoid of nature's automation, people let things go, without reacting to the demands of dangerous situations.

Let us proceed much further and we'll have to go back to caves and learn to establish civilization all over again. Eve and her famous apple are on our necks once more.

BOOK REVIEW

On Territory And Aggression

Reviewed by Gordon B. Eble
(The Freeman)

ON AGGRESSION By Konrad Lorenz, translated by Marjorie Kerr Wilson (New York: Harcourt, Brace & World, Inc., 1968), 306 pp., $5.75.

THE TERRITORIAL IMPERATIVE By Robert Ardrey (New York: Atheneum, 1966), 306 pp., $4.95.

Robert Ardrey here assembles a vast amount of material from the works of natural scientists and adds his personal interpretation—or more correctly, his extrapolation. The work is tightly focused on the single subject of territoriality.

Territory is any area of space which an animal or group of animals defends as an exclusive preserve, and territoriality is the inward compulsion to possess and defend such property. Ardrey notes in his introduction that only one book (a 1920 work) has been devoted entirely to territoriality and that one was about birds. But considerable material on the subject is tucked away in the pages of scientific journals.

Ardrey develops his thesis that man is a territorial animal linked firmly to his piece of earth, and he argues that male competition—human as well as animal—is primarily for possession of property, and only secondarily for possession of the female. This inquiry describes the physical behavior of many species, and also speculates on the emergence of values and natural morality among humans as concomitant phenomena.

Property as pivotal in affairs of men was acknowledged by our Founding Fathers and emphasized by political writers preceding them—as attested by the popularity of such slogans as "Life, Liberty, and Property." Of late the private property principle has not only been ignored, but aggressively attacked in the flight toward nonproperty social structures—welfarism, socialism, communism, and the like. Ardrey roots man's institutions in his biological heritage and challenges those who attribute our behavior solely to environment or culture, rejecting its hereditary basis.

Konrad Lorenz is frequently referred to in Ardrey's work, but at the time Ardrey was writing, Lorenz's work had not been translated from the original German. It has since become available in English.

Lorenz's focus is on aggression which he defines as "the fighting instinct in beast and man which is directed against members of the same species." A naturalist by profession and choice, Dr. Lorenz is also a doctor of medicine and a philosopher. From this solidly based vantage point he has considerable leverage on his biological materials and their human implications.

Somewhat less well structured and less readable than Ardrey's work, due in part, perhaps, to the difficulties of translation, Lorenz nevertheless provokes reflection. Territoriality is one of the causes of aggression, but not the only one. Aggressive behavior in the animal kingdom has evoked a parallel development of reliable, inhibitory mechanisms which prevent a species from destroying itself. Man is unique in that he has developed enormous aggressive capabilities and destructive power without a parallel development of reliable, natural inhibitions.

Lorenz finds aggression healthy, innate, and ineradicable. His principal point is that the survival of mankind—considering the awesome destructive power now at our disposal—depends on our success in limiting the natural and reliable inhibitory mechanisms evolved by other organisms rather than trying to sweep aggression under the rug as immoral or curable. This tack will not work because aggressive drives are a necessary part of our nature.

Students of the free economy will be reassured to find effective natural principles at work in human nature itself, which are consistent with the ideology of competitive enterprise. We are better equipped to defend the market place, where competition is aimed at serving the consumer. If mankind eliminates competition or advocates its neutralization, at hazard is ultimate survival. It may be a sign of the times that concurrently with the progress of socialism highly competitive physical-contact sports, such as football, mushroom in popularity—a modern equivalent, so to speak, of bread and circuses.

Fortunately for the serious student, both works are heavily referenced and additional study in areas of particular concern is facilitated. Lorenz is slightly less desirable in this aspect than Ardrey because much of his source material, understandably, is in German. Both books are likely to become well-thumbed by those who want a better understanding of why we are and what we are.

Wit And Whimsy

A man was reading a prepared address to a meeting of industrialists, and he swung into his speech with gusto:

Mr. Blank—The average business man is tired. He has worked long and diligently in difficult times, and he is weary. He is physically and mentally exhausted. But he isn't nearly as tired as the girls who have to type all this hogwash.

There came a long tense pause while a delighted audience began to yelp its appreciation. The speaker stared at his script in unbelief and dismay.

Mr. Blank—Why, I never wrote anything like that!

Sportsman (having emptied both barrels at a rabbit)—There, Jack, I'm sure I hit that one.

Gillis—Well, 'e certainly did seem to go faster after you shot at him, sir.

Demunicipalize The Garbage Service

By E. W. DYKES
(The Freeman)

Mr. Dykes is an architect of Canton, Ohio.

This article first appeared as "Big Wars from Little Errors Grow" in the January, 1964, FREEMAN. But recent events indicate that someone must have missed the point.

A friend recently chided us libertarians for being so engrossed in "pursuing our busy little seminars on whether or not to demunicipalize the garbage collectors" that we tend to ignore the most vital problem of our time: war and peace.

Well, I'm not so sure. On the assumption that the "garbage issue" is more fundamental than the "war issue," I take up the gauntlet exactly as our friend has flung it down.

War—like many other of today's problems—is the culmination of the breaking of libertarian principles, not once, but thousands of times. We are challenged to jump in at this point and apply our principles to get out of the unholly mess resulting from years and years of errors on errors. The challenge might just as well have been in terms like this: "You are a second lieutenant. Your platoon is surrounded. Your ammunition is gone. Two of your squad leaders are dead, the third severely wounded. Now, Mr. Libertarian, let's see you get out of this one with your little seminars."

My answer: "Demunicipalize the garbage service."

Must Learn Why

Now, wait, before you cross me off as a nut. I have a point.

That second lieutenant is a general. And so is the prospect of lasting peace until man learns why it is wrong to municipalize the garbage service. You can't apply libertarian principles to wrong things at their culmination and expect to make much sense or progress. You have to start back at the very beginning and that is precisely what our little seminars are for. There are people who build for tomorrow, others who build for a year, some who look forward a generation. The libertarian, a part of "the remnant," takes the long view—forward to the time when war will be looked upon as we now look upon cannibalism, a thing of the past. And believe me, unless someone takes the long view, wars will continue.

Suppose a group of doctors in a meeting on cancer prevention decide to do with cancer as the state proposes to do with war: "Outlaw it." What chance would the doctors have? None. And precisely for the same reason that the state can't outlaw war: They don't know what causes it.

I think I know what causes war. In an unpublished article called "War, the Social Cancer," I developed the thesis that war is the malignancy resulting from the growth of interventionism, which invariably becomes uncontrolled, once started. Without interventionism—starting way back with things like the garbage service—war simply cannot happen.

Is There A Faster Way?

What do we do in our little seminars? We make the case for freedom, which cannot coexist with interventionism. Slow? Of course, painfully slow. But who can really say and prove there is a better—or faster—way?

I suppose, in a way, we can be thankful—so long as wars persist—that there are men willing to tell my son how, when, and where he will fight. I am not willing to be a party to telling their sons what they will do, because that would mean abandoning my position. Probably, in a world at this stage of evolution, there have to be both kinds. I can guarantee at least one who disavows initiated violence, but only if I hold fast to that position myself.

Depend on it, this view always will be scorned by those who cannot look past tomorrow. You may also depend on it that a time will come when the little seminars will bear fruit. Listen to Albert Jay Neck:

The fascination and the despair of the historian, as he looks back upon Isaiah's Jewry, upon Plato's Athens, or upon Rome of the Antonines, is the hope of discovering and laying bare the "substratum of right-thinking and well-doing" which he knows must have existed somewhere in those societies because no kind of collective life can possibly go on without it. He finds tantalizing intimations of it here and there in many places, as in the Greek Anthology, in the scrapbook of Aulus Gellius, in the poems of Ausonius, and in the brief and touching tribute, Bene Merenti, bestowed upon the unknown occupants of Roman tombs. But these are vague and fragmentary; they lead him nowhere in his search for some kind of measure of this substratum, but merely testify to what he already knows a priori—that the substratum did somewhere exist. Where it was, how substantial it was, what its power of self-assertion and resistance was—of all this they tell him nothing.

Few Clues

Similarly, when the historian of two thousand years hence, or two hundred years, looks over the available testimony to the quality of our civilization and tries to get any kind of clear, competent evidence concerning the substratum of right-thinking and well-doing which he knows must have been here, he will have a devil of a time finding it. When he has assembled all he can get and has made even a minimum allowance for speciousness, vagueness, and confusion of motive, he will sadly acknowledge that his net result is simply nothing. A Remnant were here, building a substratum like coral insects—so much he knows—but he will find nothing to put him on the track of who and where and how many they were and what their work was like.

Now, turn to William Graham Sumner:

If we can acquire a science of society, based on observation of phenomena and study of forces, we may hope to gain some ground slowly toward the elimination of old errors and the reestablishment of a sound and natural social order. Whatever we gain that way will be by growth, never in the world by any reconstruction of society on the plan of some enthusiastic social architect. The latter is only repeating the old error over again, and postponing all our chances of real improvement. Society needs first of all to be freed from these meddling—that is, to be let alone. Here we are, then, once more back to the old doctrine—laissez faire. Let us translate it into blunt English, and it will read, Mind your own business.

Again I say: We will never end wars if we do not, at the minimum, understand why the garbage service should be removed from the jurisdiction of the police force, that is—government.

A Big Surprise

(Industrial News Review)

Mount, Oregon, is a peaceful rural community of 1,800 persons lying in the lush, rolling hills of the Willamette Valley. It is a religious and agricultural center. The visitor is immediately struck by the neatness of the community and its environs. There are thousands of similar communities throughout the United States.

No one was more shocked than the residents of Mount Angel when they were advised by poverty officials that 40 per cent of the people living in the community were poverty-stricken.

It seems that the people of Mount Angel are on the wrong side of the arbitrary line that officialdom has drawn between poverty and affluence. So now, Mount Angel is officially classed as a blighted area. The first step, apparently, is to establish a poverty office for which the residents of the Mount Angel area must put up one third of the cost. Then, the people must be educated, they must develop a new attitude, they must learn to ask for help—whether they need it or not. The good federal shepherd is ready to take them under his wing.

Not surprising, as a poverty official found, "Most of these people don't know where to find help. We point them to the employment office, welfare, to the abundant foods program or wherever they qualify." The good people of Mount Angel didn't even know they needed help, but they will learn, as will all the inmates of the welfare state, as times goes on.

Another Heart Operation

Getting Along With The Government

(Wall Street Journal)

Since Washington has a rather distorted view of auto economics, you'd think that the industry would try to clear things up; instead, the auto makers sometimes only fuff the picture further.

The latest clash between the government and the auto companies centers on car safety and, especially, on what it costs. Several senators believe that the industry has been trying to make safety the scapegoat for recent increases in car prices.

Such suspicion is understandable. When shoulder belts were made standard equipment on Jan. 1, in compliance with Federal regulation, General Motors announced that prices were to be raised by a sum equal to the amount previously charged for the belts as optional equipment. Ford, Chrysler and American Motors quickly took similar steps.

As auto executives desperately tried to explain to skeptical legislators recently, though, safety was scarcely the only reason for the Jan. 1 price increase. The per-unit cost of assembly-line installation of shoulder belts on every car, after all, is a good deal less than the cost of putting the belts in an occasional automobile.

Another sizable factor in the price increase is inflation, which is boosting costs for the auto companies along with everyone else. Unfortunately that fact runs counter to some prevalent economic notions in Washington—and there is plenty of room for blame there too.

One popular notion among the authorities for instance, is that price boosts are not the result of inflation but the cause. For several years now the government has seemed to feel it was perfectly safe to flood the banks with funds and spend its way ever deeper into debt; all it had to do was persuade businessmen to keep prices down.

This price guidance is related to another peculiar Washington assumption—namely that manufacturers, and particularly auto manufacturers, can pretty much dictate what retail prices will be. Life in the auto industry might be more peaceful, if less competitively healthy, if that were so.

Anyone who has shopped for a car in recent years can tell you that the producers' suggested list prices provide only a bargaining starting point. With expensive imports pouring into the U.S. at an increasing pace and adding to the frenzied, retail competition seldom has been more brisk.

And the buying public, which really isn't as gullible as its federal protectors usually assume, is often offsetting higher prices by settling for somewhat less showy but equally usable models. This at least raises the possibility that some of the manufacturers' higher prices may not stick.

So far as we've noticed further more, none of the federal critics of Detroit's prices is saying that the increases have anything to do with the government's prolonged cultivation of labor union power. Yet this power recently has been pushing up wages at a pace a good deal faster than either inflation or the gains in productivity. If the auto companies, in such circumstances, tried for very long to avoid even attempting to raise prices, the U.S. eventually might have to do without the auto companies.

There's little chance that the industry will be able to persuade Washington of the economic facts of life any time soon. No politician ever lost many votes by attacking high prices or by criticizing General Motors. In the future, in fact, the auto makers may run into even more trouble.

That will certainly be true if, on occasion, they continue to be less than candid both with Washington and the public. (The height of something-or-other was "American Motors" announcement that shoulder belts would be a "mandatory option"—meaning a buyer couldn't get a car without them and without paying the optional equipment price.) At times it appears that the car makers share officialdom's low opinion of the consumers' intelligence.

On most points the auto makers have a good case. But they'll have to present it effectively if they want to get along better with either the government or the public.

A Gift Cancelled

(Washington, D. C., Evening Star)

Boston has seen a dramatic and unusual confrontation between normal human decency and the aggressive Puritanism of the New Left in this case the Students for a Democratic Society.

A Boston realtor, Maurice Gordon, offered to give a half million dollars to Boston University's new School of Nursing. To his astonishment and that of the university administration, the school was put under a picketing siege by the S.D.S. on the grounds that Mr. Gordon allegedly owns slum properties. The picketing grew into threats of personal violence against him and his family if they attended the dedication of the building scheduled to bear his name.

Eventually, the realtor withdrew his gift and his name. The university president has made a public apology to him and said that he understands the withdrawal action.

This is, no doubt, a "triumph" for the intellectual hoodlums of S.D.S., but it's hard to see what has been gained. Mr. Gordon will probably think twice before giving away any money. The university will have to make up the missing half million from other sources, presumably benefactors whose standards match those of the S.D.S., if such there are.

The student action, of course, even on their own premises, a verdict of guilty without a trial.

files in the face of just about the entire history of public beneficence. The Judaic-Christian ethic has always related the atoning of sins by the doing of good works. By the standards of the S.D.S. there is no doubt that Carnegie, Guggenheim and Henry Ford Sr., were all miserable sinners in the hands of an angry, leifing God. Yet so far none of the foundations bearing those names has reported a decline in applications for grants for students of democratic and social persuasions.

Agriculturally Speaking

By FOSTER WHALEY County Agriculture Agent

On Wednesday and Thursday of last week we attended a two day short course at the Bushland Experiment Station on weed control.

One of the latest developments we learned about is the use of Propazine by aerial application. Up until this year, the Experiment Stations and the developers of Propazine had recommended a high gallonage application of propazine per acre as a pre-emergent spray. Since a total mix of 20 gallons per acre was recommended, this completely eliminated aerial application.

Dr. Allen Weise, weed control research specialist, determined through test, with a specially equipped aircraft last year that complete control with as little as one gallon of total mixture per acre could be obtained. One pound of chemical was dissolved in the one-gallon mixture.

Revolutionary

In my opinion this will revolutionize weed control in irrigated sorghums. The Food and Drug Administration has approved the application with the lower water rates. Most irrigation farmers are glad to have this done on a custom basis because of the fact they are at their busiest season. It is important to have the propazine applied immediately after the last row has been planted. It takes a rain to activate the chemical. Should a mild farmer be delayed about getting the chemical on the ground after planting and a rain would fall before getting the chemical applied, his entire summer plans could be upset.

Bushland Says Atrazine, Propazine New Weapons For Weed Control

BUSHLAND (Sp) — Grain sorghum producers on the High Plains of Texas have another weapon at their disposal for use in controlling weeds.

The new procedure is aerial application of atrazine and propazine.

"Field trials with aerial application of these herbicides in 1966 and again in '67 gave excellent control of careless weeds," points out Dr. Allen F. Weise, who heads up the weed control program for the area. He is located at the USDA Southwestern Great Plains Research Center here.

"Results of these trials have resulted in significant changes in weed control in grain sorghum," he says, "to include labels for aerial application of both atrazine and propazine."

Furthermore, the tests showed that a minimum amount of carrier to be used in aerial application would be one gallon of carrier for each pound of herbicide to be applied. Ground application studies in conjunction with aircraft trials indicate that the total amount of carrier can be safely reduced to 10 gallons per acre, Weise explains.

"Apparently, the most important consideration when applying either atrazine or propazine is good coverage," the researcher points out. "Total gallonage of the carrier is of minor importance."

"Both pre- and post-emergence aerial applications were studied," Weise points out. "In the pre-emergence trial, one and two pounds of active ingredient of propazine per acre was applied in two and one-half and five gallons of water carrier per acre, respectively. This compared to ground applications at 32 gallons of water carrier per acre, and weed control was equal with either type of application."

Atrazine worked well when applied post-emergence by airplane to six- to ten-inch sorghum, he adds. Again, the same rate was used as with propazine and compared with ground sprayer applications at 32 gallons of water carrier per acre. All applications at the one pound per acre rate killed one and one-half inch careless weeds. Watergrass control was obtained with the two-pound rate used in five gallons of water and containing five percent non-toxic agricultural oil.

"Other pre-emergence trials were conducted with propazine using one pound of active ingredient per acre in a water carrier ranging in amount from one-half to four gallons per acre," adds Weise.

"All treatments gave 100 percent careless weed control. Ground applications at the same rate of propazine in 4.8 and 20 gallons of water carrier gave a total kill of all weeds, regardless of the amount of carrier."

Aerial application of atrazine as a post-emergence was also checked at the rate of one and two-tenths pounds of active ingredient per acre. The sorghum and careless weeds were both about five inches tall at the time of application, and a water carrier containing one-half percent surfactant was used at amounts ranging from one-half to four gallons per acre.

"All applications resulted in a complete kill of careless weeds within 12 days," explains Weise. "However, when only one-half gallon of total carrier was used, weed kill was somewhat slower. Comparative ground applications at 4.8 and 20 gallons of water and surfactant carrier also gave complete kills."

Water, Inc. Official Warns Of Possible Water Shortage

The following farmers are installing underground pipeline systems for the better utilization of underground water: Jack Stephens, Taylor Estate, Gregg Lamb, Eakin Bros., Hubert Henderson, Turner Kirby and Abe Lewis.

There are a number of land-leveling jobs being carried out in the Gray County Soil Conservation District. Dr. Hampton has completed a land-leveling job on his farm north-east of Pampa. Moody farms have a job under construction at the present time. Don Wallberg has completed a job on his farm north-east of Pampa.

A good job of land-leveling will make more efficient use of our underground water, and be a labor saver also. Should you need any technical assistance of this nature you may contact your local soil conservation service office in the court house annex.

Weather Is In Agriculture Scene Across The State

By JIM TURNER

According to the 1963 survey made by the Soil Conservation Service, there are 88.5 million acres of brush in Texas. This means that 82 per cent of our 107 million acres of grassland is infested to some extent with light to heavy brush stands. Fifty-four million acres of this brush is so thick it is almost totally stopping the growth of grass. It is estimated that brush uses 146 million acre feet of water per year — or 40 per cent of the water used in Texas each year.

ASCs News

By EVELYN MASON

Cotton farmers in Gray County will vote the middle of May on whether they want to be able to sell or lease their cotton allotments outside the county.

The referendum on the question will be conducted May 13 through May 17. Ballots may be returned by mail or delivered by hand to the ASCs county office during that time. Mailed ballots must be postmarked not later than May 17 and must arrive at the ASCs office before the ballots are counted on May 22.

The only question to be decided by the balloting is whether 1969 upland cotton allotment may be transferred to farms which are located in other counties by sale or by lease. Transfers of allotments by an owner to a farm that he owns or controls may be made across county lines without regard to the outcome of this referendum. In no case may transfers be made outside the State. An affirmative vote by at least two-thirds of the county's cotton farmers who vote will permit such transfers by sale or lease for 1969.

Three similar referendums were conducted in 1965, 1966 and 1967, and growers in 95 counties throughout the cotton belt have already voted.

Some Damage Reported

Downy mildew and maize mosaic virus are being reported in some Upper Gulf Coast counties in grain sorghum fields.

The harvesting of carrots and onions continued active in South Texas and spring vegetables are now being harvested in Upper Gulf Coast producing counties. Early peach varieties in North-east Texas should be ready for harvesting within two weeks, the service said. Berries in East Texas are also ripening.

Pecans are in full bloom or have set a good crop as growers keep a careful watch on the development of the nut casebearer in order to properly time their control measures.

1966 or 1967 — to approve such transfers for the 1969 crop. Gray county rejected approving transfers in all three of the past referendums.

Since voting is by mail, a large response is expected. Copies of the ballot are being sent to all cotton farmers together with information on the referendum. Any producer who has a question should contact this office. Cotton can be transferred within the county regardless of the outcome of the referendum.

The Board of Directors of Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3, South of the Canadian River in Texas held its regular quarterly meeting in White Deer on Monday of last week.

The meeting was also scheduled as a public hearing to hear applications for water well permits under Exception To Spacing Rules of the District. The Board also formally approved a number of permits applied for under regular minimum spacing rules.

The Board also heard county commissioners problems concerning road maintenance brought on by the excessive amount of tail-water from irrigation wells running down the county road ditches. Reports from the three counties indicate that in some areas the county road ditches were filled with irrigation tail-water. In several places last week the tail-water ran over the county roads, making travel or maintenance impossible. The road ditches that were full when the rains came resulted in stoppage of some school bus routes for several days.

Coordinating Study

Trigg Twichell of the U.S. Geological Survey is coordinating a study of the Ogallala Formation, the principal aquifer in the High Plains, as its major target.

"Ground water pumped from the sand and gravel of this formation has been used for irrigation in the rich farming areas, and this use has exceeded natural recharge from precipitation," Twichell said.

TERMITE CONTROL

Home builders are reminded by Phil J. Hamman, assistant Extension entomologist, that pretreating a new home for termite control is relatively inexpensive and highly desirable.

Resolution Passed

The Board of Directors of the Panhandle Water Conservation District passed a resolution in 1967 requesting all irrigation well owners to take the necessary steps to prevent the waste of water pumped for irrigation purposes. The failure to do this has now caused a number of irrigation farmers to get themselves in a bind. The wheat needs the water, but the lack of a tail-water-recovery system is allowing the water to escape from the lower end of the rows into the county road ditch and damage the adjoining farmers and create a road maintenance problem.

Take Needed Steps

It is hoped that those irrigation farmers who are allowing excessive waste of water will take — as quickly as the situation permits — steps to put in tail-water-recovery systems. Should any irrigation farmer have doubts about the profit to be made from tail-water-recovery systems, then let him ask a farmer who already has one in.

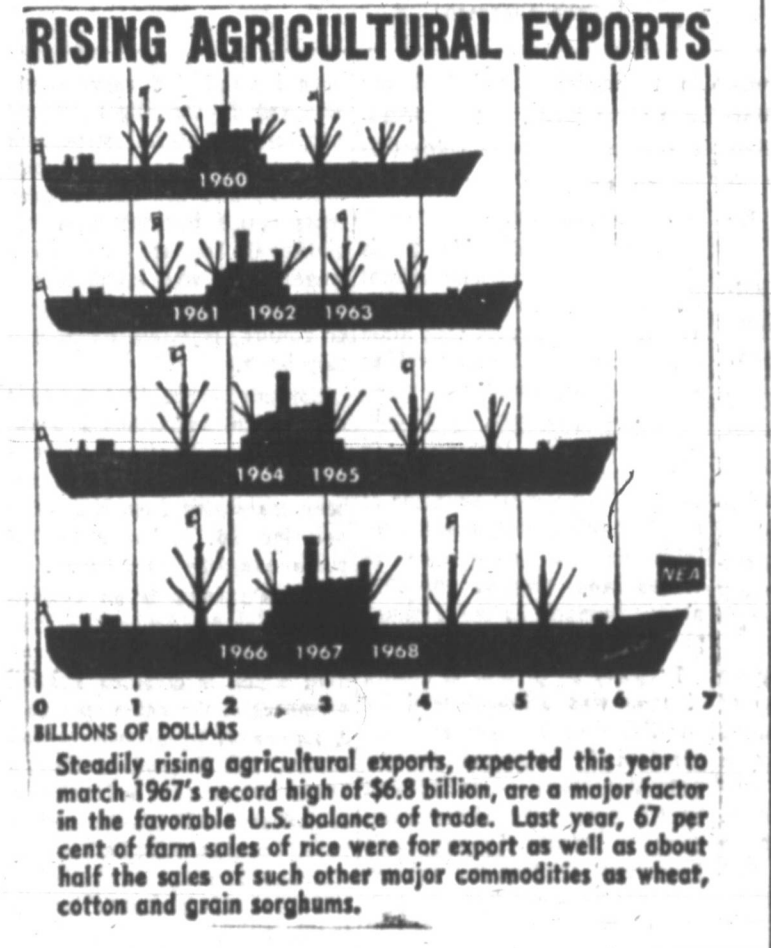

Authority

We have just received a copy of a paper written by J. B. Humber, who is an authority in the field of water. We are carrying a portion of his paper:

"The importance of an adequate supply of water of good quality is immeasurable. Since the human body is composed of approximately 90 per cent water, it is just as important as food. In fact, it is the 'staff of life.'"

The biological requirements of water for human consumption are that certain limits on quality are mandatory. However, the degree of purity may vary considerably more than that required for most industrial processes."

One Rural Person In Four Is Poor, Texas A&M Extension Man Says

COLLEGE STATION — In rural America one person in four is poor, according to a summary report by a Texas A&M University agricultural economist on "The People Left Behind."

The President's National Advisory Commission on Rural Poverty completed its work in September 1967, and the President released its report entitled "The People Left Behind."

W. E. Black, Extension economist in marketing and policy, said the commission concluded that the rural poor are mainly in the South. Within Texas, rural poverty is heavily concentrated east of a line drawn from Denison to Laredo, he said.

According to the commission's report, hunger, disease, inadequate education and housing, unemployment and the fading influence of rural development head the list of rural problems.

Black said the report indicated that educational facilities and opportunities have short-changed rural people. Low levels of educational achievement by rural people give some indication of poor quality of education.

"The commission reported that one rural house in four is substandard deteriorating or dilapidated — compared with one in seven houses in urban areas," Black said.

The commission concluded that rural poverty can't be cured from within. The rural poor — people and communities — do not have the means to escape poverty.

"Therefore, the commission offers recommendations that would provide the aid for people and communities who are able to help themselves and would lighten the load of those who can't help themselves," Black said.

The commission urged national policy designed to give rural

Shrine Circus Starts Today

The annual Shrine Circus sponsored by Pampa Shriners will kick off the first of three performances today at 2:30 at the Rodeo Arena east of Pampa. Two other performances are scheduled for Monday, one at 4 p.m. and the other at 8 p.m. Tickets for children 12 and under are priced at 75 cents and adult tickets are $1.25.

Money derived from the project will be used to aid the Pampa Shrine Association's Crippled Children's Fund. Jerry Sims is circus chairman for the local Shriners.

The Khiva Shrine Circus is produced by Carden-Johnson and lasts for approximately two hours. Star attraction of the three-ring circus will be the Zaccchins cannon act, which for many years was the closing attraction of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus.

Also featured will be pretty girls, dancing elephants, aerialists performing without benefit of nets, prancing ponies and strutting poodles, caged animals doing feats, clowns — and, of course, the traditional fanfare of introductions and the vivid hues of sequin, satin and feathered costumes.

Truth of the matter is the movie-going public, as well as viewers of television, don't care what entertainers think so long as they stick to the business of performing.

Curiously, this decision has affected the so-called star system.

Most of the top boxoffice attractions keep their mouths shut. Julie Andrews, Sean Connery, Steve McQueen, Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson, David Niven, Elvis Presley, Dean Martin and Henry Fonda are examples.

Political Activity Of Many Big Stars May Draw Public's Veto At Boxoffice

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Vanessa Redgrave doesn't mind grabbing thousands of American dollars in Hollywood, and then running back to England to march against us in protest rallies about Vietnam."

"Robert Vaughn is an actor, why is he sticking his nose into politics where he doesn't belong?"

"Marlon Brando gave up two movies and decided to devote a year of his life to civil rights. Who does he think he is?"

These statements and others from questioning citizens and cynical observers all go together in one large caldron of criticism about Hollywood, its performers and the future of show business stars.

It began when Frank Sinatra escorted Jackie Kennedy during the inaugural festivities after President John F. Kennedy's election in 1960.

Some of them have spoken up or asked to be counted, but not at the cost of placing their politics, or social stands above their careers.

The same may be said of the most successful television stars — Jackie Gleason, Jim Nabors, Lucille Ball, Andy Griffith, Lorne Greene and a dozen others.

Safety Subject For Speaker At Area School

WHITE DEER (SPL) — The American Trucking Association presented a program on driving safety entitled "Safety Magic" to the White Deer High School student body recently.

Narrating the program was Sgt. Carl Pike, on leave from the Sheriff's Department of Kent County, Mich. He is a Magician as well as a traffic expert, and uses magical illusions to show his audiences the courteous and common sense way to safe driving. Sgt. Pike and His "Safety Magic" show have appeared before millions of television viewers.

Sgt. Pike has published a booklet on "How to Keep From Growing Old" which he related to the audience. He covered the eight following rules:

Always pass the car ahead on hills. It gives the fellow meeting you such a thrill.

Always speed! It shows you are a man of pep.

Always hold the middle of the road. You are entitled to a half, so select the part you want.

Always race with locomotives to crossings. Engineers like it and it breaks the monotony of their job.

Always speed up when entering a main highway from a crossing. You have as much right there as the other fellow.

Always shove on your brakes when skidding. It makes the job more artistic.

Always drive close to pedestrians in sloppy weather. We call this game "Muddy Tag."

Always make your turns without looking. You make acquaintances that way.

"We haven't gotten out a bulletin to the airlines yet to tell them of the attorney general's opinion," Elliott said.

"But it's just a matter of time. After we notify them of the ruling, we'll expect compliance."

Italians Believe It's Possible To Be Good Catholic, Commie

ROME (UPI) — Twenty-one per cent of Italians believe it is possible to be a good Roman Catholic and a good Communist at the same time, a survey showed today.

The poll appeared just before the national elections May 19-20. In the last general elections in 1963 the Communists got 25.3 per cent of the vote.

Ninety-eight per cent of the Italian population is Roman Catholic but only about 37 per cent attend Mass regularly.

DENVER (UPI) — The eyes of Texas are upon him—constantly, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey quipped Thursday when he introduced Texas congressman Jim Wright to a Denver audience.

"We have a Texan in the White House," Humphrey said. "And President Johnson never lets me go anywhere without having a Texan tailing me to keep an eye on me."

THE LIGHTER SIDE Russian Inventions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the press of momentous events here at home many people may have overlooked a significant development overseas.

The Russians have started inventing things again. Last week they claimed to have invented the bicycle and a couple of days before that they retroactively invented the fire engine.

Experts on the Soviet Union presumably are studying these reports closely. For when the Russians discover they invented something, it may be a sign they are having technical difficulties.

Greatest Period
The greatest period of Soviet inventiveness was the early post-war years when the United States alone had "the bomb" and was undisputed world leader in most other technological fields.

During that era, the Soviets operated what virtually amounted to an "Invention of the Month Club."

Among other things, they invented razor blades, radio and television, rifles, submarines and dynamite.

But once they caught up with the United States in nuclear weapons and missiles, the inventions began to taper off.

And after they beat us in sending up the first space vehicle, the inventions seemed to stop altogether.

New Wave Begins
If, as it now appears, a new wave of Russian inventions has begun, this could mean their technological progress is slowing down.

I don't claim any expertise in such matters, but a couple of random thoughts did cross my mind.

One possibility is that unexpected bugs have turned up in the Soviet space program. Invention of the bicycle would give them something to boast about in case the United States beats them to the moon.

Invention of the fire engine could be an implied warning to Czechoslovakia and other satellite countries that recently have been giving off sparks of independence.

Things To Watch
Assuming I am on the right track with this analysis, here are the days ahead:

Invention of the eggroll—this would undoubtedly mean a further worsening of Soviet relations with Red China.

Invention of Won Ton soup and fortune cookies, a Sino-Soviet war might be in prospect.

Invention of the French harp—would mean that Breshnev has had a falling out with De Gaulle.

Invention of bagpipes—would mean the Russians are having economic troubles and have adopted Scottish penny-

Champagne Flights In Texas May Soon Become 'Root Beer Flights'

AUSTIN (UPI) — Champagne line passengers are treated to airline flights over Texas may soon become "root beer flights," a spokesman for the Texas Liquor Control Board indicated today.

The board is preparing to clamp down on sale of alcoholic beverages on board flights over the state after getting an attorney general's opinion saying that such in-flight sales are illegal.

At the same time, the Licensed Beverage Industries, Inc. in its monthly newsletter, says the Civil Aeronautics Board has outlawed free drinks on airliners.

The CAB ruling says that a "reasonable charge" must be made for beverages and entertainment to insure that all air-

The LBI newsletter reports that the CAB feels serving free cocktails aloft is "unfair to non-drinking passengers."

In effect, the ruling says, airlines may not divert any part of their gross revenues for the provision of extra services which not every passenger may want.

If the drinks can't be given away in flight, and if they can't be sold over Texas, the champagne flights appear to be headed for a "dry spell" when they cross the state.

Lynwood Elliott, legal counsel for the Texas Liquor Control Board, said today the agency is preparing to begin enforcement of the ban on the sale of drinks in over-Texas flights.

Advertising doesn't jerk...

IT PULLS

"If there is one enterprise on earth that the quitter should let alone, it is advertising. Advertising does not jerk—it pulls. It begins gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day, year after year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

Nude Trend Endangers The Job Of Costume Designers In Hollywood

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The trend toward nudity in movies has made the job of the costume designer almost as obsolete as buggy whip manufacturing.

Riot Control Is Due In Training For Reservists

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Riot control training will begin immediately for 200,000 Army reservists, it has been announced today.

The move will increase to more than 500,000 the number of specially trained civilian soldiers who would be available for riot duty. More than 300,000 National Guardsmen already have received such training.

The Army said all but 60,000 of its civilian reservists would receive the training.

For those in the enlisted ranks, the training will consist of 33 hours of instruction and drill. Officers will receive an 18-hour course.

The training program is to be completed in five weeks—by June 17.

"This specialized training will permit the Army to make use of reserve units in civil disturbances, if required," the Army said. "When so used these units would be on active duty under federal control."

The so-called organized reserve has never been used, and until now has not been considered available for duty in riot situations.

The Army said the training will be given to all organized reservists except those in hospital, medical, legal, postal, selective service, reserve school, travel censorship, strategic military intelligence, army reserve command and units already alerted for possible mobilization.

A spokesman explained that many of those in the excluded units, such as hospital and medical experts, would be available for riot duty but do not need the training to perform their missions.

1950), and a lookalike for actor Stuart Whitman, recently designed the wardrobe for "Valley of the Dolls."

All but one of two of the characters appear in the nude at one time or other in the film. Body make-up specialists are losing their lowly status and soon will achieve the heights of wardrobe designers unless the nude trend is reversed.

Instead of dealing with flowing skirts, fancy bodices, high-fashion hemlines and other intricacies of the couturier, the film wardrobe designer must design ways to keep his cast from being arrested.

According to Travilla, who also is a highly regarded private couturier whose creations are sold in top stores across the country, some actresses have a compelling desire to be seen in the nude.

"Others refuse to uncover at all," he said.

"Then there are those in the middle. They will agree to appear in the nude but not entirely. That means we must create flesh-colored patches for the bosom and flesh-colored panties that cannot be detected on screen."

"It's not easy. I quit designing for movies eight years ago because I tired of trying to dress Marilyn Monroe, Jane Russell and Betty Grable to reveal as much as possible to make them sexy and exciting—and still pass the censors. Now nobody worries about the censors."

"The actresses themselves differ. Some are real exhibitionists. If we don't undrape them altogether—for a movie, then they'll pose in the nude for a girls magazine."

Travilla has designed wardrobes for some 100 pictures since 1944, but he is amazed at the young actresses coming along today.

"These youngsters think nothing of taking off their clothes," he said. "But I still admire performers who refuse to appear nude."

"It is possible to achieve the same effect by hinting at nudity while remaining fully, if provocatively, dressed."

Travilla's greatest test is his current assignment, "The Boston Strangler." He must undress 14 actresses appearing as nude corpses in the film.

"But there are 150 other speaking roles in the picture, so at least I've got some lives on to dress," he concluded.
