PAMPA -- Company officials said today that no settlement had been reached in the toxic tort lawsuit against Hoeschst Celanese.

"There are talks going on," said Herb Reed, a spokesman for the international chemical company, "but nothing's finalized."

Hoeschst Celanese has been sued by 800 plaintiffs who say their health has been damaged after exposure to the Pampa plant's emissions.

The plaintiff's attorney, Tom Upchurch, did not return calls made to him today.

WHEELER -- The Wheeler County Junior Livestock Show is set to begin Friday, Jan. 14, with 296 animals at the Wheeler County Show Barn.

The show will include an estimated 196 hogs, 75 lambs, 15 steers and 10 heifers, according to Wheeler County Agent Don King.

The show begins Friday when the hogs and lambs are weighed in and ends with the premium animal sale at 7 p.m. Monday. Hogs will be shown at 10 a.m. Saturday and lambs at 6 p.m. Saturday. After being weighed and measured at 1 p.m. on Sunday, the beef cattle show will begin at 3 p.m.

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) -- The military fired rockets into the mountains and set up mortars in a city square in a new offensive against Indian rebels in southern Mexico.

The Indians surprised the government with their New Year's Day rebellion in Chiapas, a poor, predominantly Mayan region. The rebels said they were fighting for socialism and to improve the lot of Indians who lack food, education, housing and potable water.

The revolt also has surprised ordinary Mexicans, unaccustomed to guerrillas at home, and rattled other Central American countries, many of which are just emerging from years of civil wars.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, speaking in a nationally broadcast address Thursday, defended the army's actions, while also taking steps to build support for the government in the poverty-stricken region.

Thursday night, four military planes fired rockets near the community of Cerro Huitpec, three miles southwest of San Cristobal de las Casas, a city of 80,000 that has been occupied by the army since the peasants started their attacks against the government.

Rocket attacks also were launched in Tenejaba, 16 miles from San Cristobal de las Casas.

There were no reports of casualties. The rockets apparently were aimed at a mountain with a television transmission tower on its peak.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) -- A little more than a week after President Clinton returned to his boyhood home for a holiday visit to his 70-year-old mother, he was back to lay her to rest.

A somber Clinton, joined by his stepfather and half brother, came to the funeral home where his mother was lying late Thursday for an hour's private tribute.

Funeral services for Virginia Kelley, who died in her sleep early Thursday after a battle with breast cancer, will be held on Saturday.

"It's been a fairly long day," White House press aide Jeff Eller said outside the funeral home. "He's in pretty good spirits, considering he lost his mother."

Clinton flew to the town where he grew up on Thursday afternoon, after being notified of his mother's death in a 2:30 a.m. EST phone call from stepfather Richard Kelley. First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton and their daughter, Chelsea, were to arrive later today.

PHOENIX (AP) -- Amid growing fears of violent crime, the federal government and cities across the country are cutting off a little-noticed source of guns on the street: their own law enforcement agencies.

The widespread practice of selling weapons that have been seized from criminals or retired from police use has come under increasing scrutiny as the nation debates tougher gun control.

Local landmark damaged in car crash

Pampa business plans to reopen after being run down by auto

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS, News Editor

Owners of Jay's Drive Inn say the local eatery is scheduled to reopen Monday following a Thursday night crash which made hash of the east side of the building.

A 1984 Plymouth Horizon crashed trunk first into the building at 924 W. Alcock at about 10:20 p.m. The car was parked with engine running on the south side of Allsup's, 309 N. Hobart, and backed inside the restaurant, police said.

The driver of the vehicle, Amy Michelle Saxour, left the engine idling while she went into Allsup's. As she left the store, she saw her husband David Lee Saxour, 23, 514 N. Faulkner, run north past her without her daughter, 18-month old Stephanie Deonna Saxour, records show.

Saxour told officers the child had gotten out of her safety belt and climbed into the front seat, where she hit the gear shift knocking the car into reverse. Saxour told officers he tried to control the vehicle but was unable to, officials said.

The drive-in was closed at the time it was struck, said manager David Whitson. He was outside when he saw the Plymouth strike a pickup, begin spinning and crash into the building.

A new employee had just walked away from the inside counter when the Plymouth struck, he said. The employee had glass shivers on him but was uninjured. Two others at work were unhurt, Whitson said.

Restaurant equipment was shoved two to four feet to the west. Dwight Dennis and co-owner Aldo Dennis were waiting today for insurance adjustors to complete their work before cleaning and repairing the restaurant. The building is owned by Jay Gist.

Dennis said he had driven away from the restaurant and decided to return to check on something. As he drove up, the Plymouth was still running and the toddler was still inside.

A 1978 Chevrolet pickup, owned by Jeremy Elliott, 1330 E. Kingsmill, was struck as the Plymouth reversed its way into the restaurant.

The Plymouth is owned by Donna Clancy, 105 N. Nelson. Stephanie Saxour was taken by private vehicle to Coronado Hospital, where she was treated and released.

Damage to the restaurant is estimated at $15,000. No citations have been issued and the investigation is continuing, said Lt. Allan Smith.

Pampa's street improvement project proceeds to phase two

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK, Staff Writer

With work on the first phase of the city's Comprehensive Street Improvement Project finished, plans for the second phase are being drawn up.

In Phase 1 of the project, streets in Pampa's southeast and southwest areas were re-paved or paved for the first time. The work on that phase began last March and was finished in October, said City Engineer Richard Morris.

Some of the streets affected by the first phase of the street project included Murphy Avenue from Barnes Street to Talley Street; Denver Avenue from Reid Street to Tignor Street; Scott Avenue from Barnes Street to Tignor Street; Brunow Avenue from Barnes Street to Tignor Street; Malone Avenue from Barnes Street to Talley Street; Wilcox Street from McCullough Avenue to Albert Street; Rider Street from Buckler Avenue to Montagu Avenue; Doyle Street from Alcock Street to Montagu Avenue; and Davis Street from Alcock Street to Montagu Avenue.

In the second phase of the Comprehensive Street Improvement Project, scheduled to begin in the spring or summer of this year, the downtown area as well as a number of streets in the central, north, northwest and west parts of town will be worked on, said Morris.

"Most of it is going to be re-hab of the existing pavement and re-surfacing," he said.

By "re-hab"ing, Morris said the pavement will be taken up in some areas, along with the base material, and then be refinished. In an effort to save money and time, much of the base material that is taken up will be re-used, Morris said.

As for traffic in the downtown area and along some of the major thoroughfares affected in the project, such as Harvester Avenue, Duncan Street, 23rd Avenue and Kentucky Avenue, Morris said no plans have been drawn up yet and may not be until a contractor is awarded the project.

"We don't have a definite plan for the way we are going to route traffic at this time," he said. "Some of it could be worked out when the construction contract is taken, and then we'd do what they did with Hobart. They're not doing the construction on it like they originally planned, as far as (breaking it into) phases. I think the idea that the contractors had helped the project move along."

Concerning possible delays in beginning and then completing Phase 2 of the project because of construction on Hobart Street, Morris said he believes there won't be much of a problem.

"The way Hobart is going, they may have an early completion date on Hobart and that should help us," he said of the state highway department's project.

Last week, Area Engineer Jerry Raines of the Texas Department of Transportation, the agency overseeing construction on Hobart Street, said work on the thoroughfare is about 30 to 40 percent finished and is ahead of schedule.

As for the city's repair and replacement of water lines, which is being funded by money from the street improvement project, Morris said the project is continuing well. A crew from the city's water department is working on lines west of Cuyler Street in the downtown area.

Some of the water lines being replaced are 40- to 50-years-old and have been clogged up or corroded, Morris said last week.

Pampa's Comprehensive Street Improvement project was funded by a bond issue approved by voters in 1992, and affects more than four miles of streets in the city.

Justice Department official's father-in-law involved with thrift

By JOEL WILLIAMS, Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) -- Top Justice Department official Webb Hubbell's father-in-law acted as the buyer in a land deal designed to benefit an Arkansas savings and loan whose failure has now embroiled President Clinton in controversy, court and thrift documents show.

Under the arrangement, Seth Ward was used as the buyer because Madison Guaranty S&L had a limit on how much it could lend its real estate subsidiary. Ward, however, was assured that he could walk away unscathed if the deal went bad, according to Ward's lawyer. Ward said there was no effort to disguise the buyer.

Madison operator James McDougal, a friend and business associate of Clinton and his wife, Hillary, even instructed Ward to "drive a prestigious automobile while you are in charge of this project," one letter shows.

McDougal and his failed S&L are now the focus of a federal investigation that is exploring allegations that thrift funds were diverted in the mid-1980s to help pay personal and political debts of prominent Arkansans, including then-Gov. Clinton.

Under subpoena from the Justice Department, the White House on Thursday began turning over the Clintons' personal records detailing their half-ownership in a real estate venture with McDougal, Whitewater Development Corp., that also is being investigated. The White House has said it was unaware of any wrongdoing and is cooperating in the investigation.

Hubbell, the No. 3 official at the Justice Department, has removed himself from the Whitewater investigation because his Rose law firm did work for Madison Guaranty before it failed. Hubbell later helped the government file a lawsuit in the thrift's 1989 failure and investigators are now questioning whether he properly disclosed his firm's prior work.

"Webb does not recall ever being asked about the extent of his father-in-law's dealings with the thrift," Justice spokesman Carl Stern said Thursday. "Webb does recall bringing to (the FDIC's) attention that his father-in-law had been an officer and had financial transactions with the bank."

S&L records and legal documents at the Pulaski County Courthouse in Little Rock, meanwhile, detail the role of Hubbell's father-in-law in the S&L land venture in Little Rock. They show that Ward was:

— Given a $1.15 million loan in October 1985 to buy the mostly undeveloped parcel in south Little Rock. Ward was not required to provide any personal collateral; the loan instead was secured by the land being purchased.

— Assured that the S&L would cover any "tax consequences" he might incur.

— Promised that the S&L would pay him $35,000 up front and additional commissions of 10 percent on the resale of undeveloped land and 4 percent for the resale of residential property in the parcel.

Hawk feather not such a good omen for San Antonio man

SAN ANTONIO (AP) -- The single hawk feather that a San Antonio man thought was a good omen when he found it didn't turn out to be a good omen at all.

It wound up costing him $300.

Tomas Tabares Ramirez said he stopped beside the road on a trip from San Antonio to Eagle Pass a few months ago when he found the feather from a red-tailed hawk lying on the ground.

Part of the Lipan Apache tradition that Ramirez said he likes to follow regards hawks as messengers, and acquiring a hawk feather is a good sign.

Ramirez said he picked up the feather and put it in his car. He later attached it to the mirror above his dashboard.

The good omen turned bad when Alex Hasychak, a special agent from the San Antonio office of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, confiscated the feather and issued Ramirez a citation. Ramirez has since paid a $300 fine.

Possessing a hawk feather, or the feathers or body parts of any of several wild birds, is against federal law. Only certain individuals or organizations with permits may possess them legally, Hasychak said.

Certain American Indians may obtain permits to have such feathers for religious purposes, but they must be registered with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and issued an identification card, the officer said.

Ramirez said the Indian traditions that come from both sides of his family are important to him. On weekends he serves at the American Indian exhibit at the Institute of Texas Cultures.

"He's been a volunteer here for several years, giving tours of our Native American area and explaining traditions," Lynn Catalina, a spokeswoman for the institute said.

But Ramirez is not a card-carrying Indian and has no permit to possess such feathers.

Many, including Lipan Apaches, never acquired official recognition from the Bureau of Indian Affairs because their ancestors refused to go to reservations. "I know who I am," Ramirez said. "The government doesn't have to tell me I'm this kind of person."

He said he no longer wants it. "If I got the feather back now, I wouldn't want to keep it," he said. "I'd probably have to give it away. After what has happened it seems sort of like bad medicine."

Unemployment rate drops again

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR., AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The nation's unemployment rate fell to its lowest level in three years, the government reported today, further testimony of a slow but firm economic recovery.

The Labor Department said the rate was 6.4 percent, down from a revised 6.5 percent in November. The November figure initially was reported at 6.4 percent, but was changed to reflect seasonal factors.

The government also reported that non-farm payrolls increased by a seasonally adjusted 183,000, to 111 million, with a gain of 68,000 jobs in the service sector leading the way.

Most economists had expected the December rate to be 6.5 percent or 6.6 percent. But they had expected a larger gain of about 220,000 in non-farm payrolls.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich speculated Thursday that job gains would be about 160,000 to 200,000.

Education Board tentatively OKs requirements for sex ed materials

By PEGGY FIKAC
 Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education has given preliminary approval to requiring state-developed sex education materials that stress abstinence and the failure rate of condoms.

The move headed off an attempt Thursday to halt work on the materials.

"I think it (the requirements) will tone down a lot of the rhetoric" about the materials, said board member Will Davis of Austin, whose proposed guidelines were endorsed 12-3 by the board. A final vote was scheduled Friday on the issue.

The materials — including a section on AIDS prevention — became the subject of controversy last year. That's when a 7th-grade teacher in the Houston area mistakenly distributed to students explicit information intended only for teachers.

A review of the materials prompted Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno to advise school districts to stop using them. He said he wanted Texas Education Agency staff to revise them and get board approval before making them available to schools.

The board didn't get a chance to approve the materials before they originally were sent out to elementary schools, for use at their discretion.

Versions of the curriculum also were developed for optional use by middle schools and high schools, but not distributed, Meno said. He said some schools had draft copies.

Board member Monte Hasie of Lubbock wanted to do away with the supplemental curriculum, calling it inappropriate.

But despite voting against Davis' guidelines, Hasie thanked the board for taking some action. "I think the people of Texas will appreciate us making these corrections," he said.

The board directed Meno to combine materials addressing prevention of pregnancy and acquired immune deficiency syndrome — and to ensure that they are optional to school districts, age-appropriate, and stress abstinence and the condom failure rate.

It said the curriculum also should include instruction on "refusal skills," be based on medical facts submitted by the Texas Medical Association, include a description of how to involve the community, and allow parents to excuse their children if they believe the material is inappropriate.

After the materials are revised, the board would look at them again.

Meno said the guidelines are consistent with the direction he was already taking.

Besides Hasie, board members Robert Offutt of San Antonio and Geraldine Miller of Dallas voted against Davis' motion.

Hasie, Miller, Offutt and member Bill Hudson of Wichita Falls also voted against supplemental school materials on drug abuse prevention and nutrition education. Hasie said he wanted more time to look over the materials.

During public testimony on the sex-education materials, some urged the board to reject them and others said they are crucial to students' health.

City holds steady on economic front, Hopson says

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
 Staff Writer

Pampa seemed to buck the trend of slight improvement reported by a majority of local governments last year, according to one local official.

Nathan Hopson, Pampa's intercity city manager and director of public works, said the city neither gained economic ground nor lost it last year.

"It was pretty static," said Hopson. "From my viewpoint, as far as the city is concerned, we've been in a declining revenue situation for quite sometime. We held our own real well, but we didn't make any gains either."

On a national scale, 62 percent of the local officials surveyed by the National League of Cities said they enjoyed a good economic climate in 1993, an increase from 1992's total of 49 percent.

Sixty-five percent said their cities did better fiscally in 1993. Eighty-four percent said they were able to spend the same amount of money or more on city services, and expected to continue doing so this year.

Nearly half of the city responding to the survey — 49 percent — said problems with gangs had worsened, and 43 percent said violent crime in general had gotten worse.

"In Pampa, only one case of the most violent crime, homicide, was reported and is being investigated by the police department. The case of three Pampa residents recently murdered on New Year's Eve a few minutes before midnight is officially to be considered part of the 1994 statistics."

As for other crimes reported in the city, Lt. Allan Smith of the Pampa Police Department said the number of reported incidents increased last year as opposed to previous years.

In the first six days of 1994, Smith said about 150 incidents have already been reported.

The National League of Cities' survey was based on 374 responses from 1,052 questionnaires mailed during the fall to elected officials in cities with a population of 10,000 or more.

One of the biggest problems faced by city governments, according to the National League of Cities, was the impact of unfunded mandates, or federal rules, on municipal governments. In fact, 71 percent of the cities replying to the survey reported unfunded federal mandates as the No. 1 problem they face.

As for Pampa, unfunded mandates from the federal government, specifically the Environmental Protection Agency, has taken its toll on the city. Thanks to the environmental requirements, the cost of opening a new landfill to the city has skyrocketed from hundreds of thousands of dollars to an estimated $20 million over the 60-year life of the proposed pit.

Other persistent problems identified by more than 50 percent of those surveyed were poverty, teen pregnancy, unemployment, homelessness, a lack of affordable housing and the spread of AIDS.

the land for $1.75 million, which included the loan to Ward and a $600,000 loan the S&L gave its subsidiary, Madison Financial Corp., according to Alston Jennings Sr., Ward's attorney.

The land sold for some $3.7 million, more than double the original purchase price, in sales contracts when it was quickly resold "in various parcels to various purchasers," Jennings said.

There is no evidence in court documents that Hubbell was involved in the land transaction.

While the land deal apparently made a handsome profit for Madison, it mirrors the risky land ventures that sank some S&Ls in the mid-1980s, the former chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said.

"This is fairly typical of the daisy chains that were put together by S&Ls, and were often used to inflate values," William Seidman said. "It has all the connotations of those things. On its face, you would say the transaction looks like not a real economic transaction."

A director for Industrial Development Co. of Little Rock, which sold the land to Ward, said Thursday he was surprised to learn that McDou-gal's S&L was behind the land deal. "I thought that Seth Ward had financed it through them. That's all I knew. I thought he was buying it for an investment," John A. Riggs Jr. said.

In a brief interview Thursday, Ward said there was no effort to disguise the buyer. "I was the buyer," he said, adding he could have just as easily paid cash or taken out a loan from another bank.

Jennings said the reason Ward took out the loan was because Madison Financial could not carry the entire debt. "There was a limit on the amount that Madison Financial could borrow from Madison Guaranty," he said.

Charges dropped in deaths after teenage beer party

BURNET (AP) — Charge have been dismissed against a Burnet County woman in the deaths of two teenagers who were killed in a car crash after leaving a keg party at her home.

Janice Sanders, 40, faced charges of criminally negligent homicide and contributing to the delinquency of a minor in connection with the deaths of Garland "Cody" Hilliard, 17, and Jason Rojas, 19.

Burnet County Attorney Robert Klaeger said all charges against Ms. Sanders were dismissed at the recommendation of Ross Lavin, a former assistant, based on technical problems with the complaint.

"At this point, I can't tell you one way or another whether it will be refilled," he said.

Ms. Sanders acknowledged buying beer for minors attending her daughter's birthday party April 16 but said no one was intoxicated.

Tests showed Hilliard, the driver, had a blood-alcohol level of 0.19 and Rojas a level of 0.03 when their car hit a tree about a mile from the party.

When Ms. Sanders was charged last May, members of Mothers Against Drunk Driving praised the action for sending a strong message against giving alcohol to minors.

Lower Chinese textile imports could save U.S. jobs but raise prices

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Clinton administration order slashing textile imports from China by more than $1 billion could save American jobs but raise clothing prices in the United States. The move may also bring retaliation from China.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor announced quota reductions Thursday of 25 percent to 35 percent on 88 categories of Chinese cloth products including sweaters, knitted shirts and cotton trousers.

He estimated the action, effective Jan. 17, would reduce China's $7.3 billion in annual textile and clothing sales to the United States by $1.1 billion to $1.2 billion.

China's trade ministry protested the U.S. move, saying that if the United States insisted on having its way, China would have to adopt "corresponding, retaliatory measures."

"This will seriously influence Chinese-U.S. economic and trade relations," the ministry said in a statement issued via the official Xinhua News Agency.

U.S. textile manufacturers praised the move, saying illegal shipments of Chinese products through other countries to the United States, estimated at $2 billion a year, have cost more than 50,000 American jobs.

"China is an international outlaw. ... They have created a worldwide network in Third World countries to sneak goods into the United States," said Henry A. Truslow III, president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute.

The action should serve as a warning to other textile-exporting countries such as India and Pakistan, he said.

However, Tracy Mullin, president of the National Federation of Retailers, called on the administration to amicably settle the dispute. She said it threatens to restrict an important supplier of "moderate-priced consumer apparel that is not available at the same quality and price from other suppliers."

"If retailers now sourcing goods in China are made to look elsewhere, then it is the American consumer who will be forced to pay a higher price for a number of apparel items," Mullin said.

But Kantor told reporters the quota cut would have "little, if any, impact on American consumers" and instead showed the administration's determination "to stand up for U.S. jobs."

A senior trade office official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the administration expected the Chinese products would be replaced through increased domestic production and by shipments from other countries that have not met their quotas.

The quota reduction came after China rebuffed a U.S. request to meet this week to discuss tougher controls on illicit shipments and after four negotiating sessions over nine months failed to settle the issue.

The United States wants China to accept provisions, already accepted by 16 other countries, permitting the United States to reduce quotas swiftly and severely for specific categories of textile products if it discovers an illegal transshipment.

U.S. Customs Service officers have found Chinese goods relabeled in at least 25 other nations, including Honduras, Panama and Hong Kong, to disguise their origin, Kantor said.

Chinese firms also have overshipped — sent products directly to the United States even though their export quotas had been filled, he said.

"The violations ... clearly cost U.S. jobs. ... Obviously they are selling products in an illegal manner, which is then supplanting U.S. or other products," Kantor said.

The U.S. retaliation comes amid disputes between the United States and China on human rights and arms sales. Last spring, the administration extended China's "most favored nation" trade status until this June with the warning it would have to improve trade and human rights practices to win further extensions.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen is scheduled to visit China later this month to press for human rights and economic reforms. He will be the highest-ranking U.S. official to visit China since the bloody 1989 crackdown on democracy demonstrators.

China is by far the largest foreign supplier of textiles and apparel to the United States, with its goods amounting to 20 percent to 25 percent of the clothing and material sold in this country.

Its overall trade surplus with the United States, about $25 billion last year, was second only to Japan's.

At right, twin granddaughters Sheldie Watson and Kelsey Watson, who will be 2 on Feb. 8, show how they are bundled in warm clothing to protect them from the cold weather this morning, with a low down to 18. The high today was expected to reach only into the mid 30s, but sunny skies are expected to bring a high in the low 50s for Saturday as another cold front passes through the Pampa area. ## Storms, flu cause critical blood shortage; blood banks, hospitals appeal for donors

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Snowstorms, virulent flu and the holidays combined to create the nation's most critical shortage of blood in years, and at least one hospital is considering canceling elective surgery.

Blood banks are urging immediate donations to end the emergency.

"We are afraid lives will be lost," Marcia Lane of the American Association of Blood Banks said Thursday.

The shortage is the worst in the history of the American Red Cross, which saw its usual three-day supply of blood drop to a one-day supply this week, said spokeswoman Margaret McCarthy.

The Red Cross has only 33,000 units of blood in its national inventory, down from a normal level of 67,000. The most-transfused blood type, Type O, has dropped to 29 percent below emergency levels.

The situation is so dire that sharing of blood between blood banks with extra supplies has virtually ended, Ms. Lane said.

The Red Cross office in Dedham, Mass., for example, typically offsets shortages in Maine. But it didn't have enough blood earlier this week to ship to Eastern Maine Medical Center in Bangor, which on Tuesday ran out of a crucial blood product for several hours, said the hospital's Dr. Irwin Gross. Fortunately, the hospital had no emergency cases before it received a new supply of platelets, the blood cells pumped into trauma patients to stop bleeding, he said.

Surgeons there are considering canceling elective surgeries in upcoming weeks, and spent Thursday hoping another snowstorm on the way wouldn't bring casualties, Gross said.

"If we get even a few patients who are bleeding a lot, it could rapidly pull our inventory down to the point where we don't have enough for our emergency patients," he said. "It's one of those things that's causing me to lose sleep."

The areas hardest hit include 16 of the 45 Red Cross regions, which supply blood to their home city and surrounding counties. They are: Atlanta; Buffalo, N.Y.; Birmingham and Mobile, Ala.; Charlotte, N.C.; Cleveland; Columbus, Ohio; Dedham, Mass.; Detroit; Flint and Lansing, Mich.; Little Rock, Ark.; Los Angeles; Miami; Peoria, Ill.; and Philadelphia.

Nine other cities reported emergency shortages to the Association of Blood Banks: Dallas; Houston; Tampa, Fla.; Indianapolis; Chicago; New Orleans; San Francisco; and San Bernardino and Fresno, Calif.

Blood banks typically experience holiday shortages, but this year was unusually low. And while donations usually jump immediately after New Year's Day, they haven't picked up this year.

Tuesday, blood collections totaled 8,000 units less than expected, Ms. McCarthy said. Snowstorms across the East canceled blood drives this week and other donors were turned away because they have the harsh Beijing flu, which has sickened people in at least 17 states.

Blood banks asked people living in the hardest-hit areas to immediately call their local Red Cross or hospital to make appointments to donate blood. Donations need to be staggered because whole blood has a shelf life of 42 days, and blood products like platelets can only be used for five days after donation.

Proposal to put troops on border heats up Senate race

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Jim Mattox's idea to use troops to fight crime along the Mexican border is drawing fire from his Democratic rivals in the U.S. Senate race.

"It's a cheap way to pander for votes," says U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews of Houston.

Andrews came to the border Thursday to campaign against the Mattox proposal. He said the United States is trying to develop closer trade and tourism links to Mexico under the North American Free Trade Agreement, which went into effect Saturday.

"We can't accomplish that if local politicians and state elected leaders are championing putting military forces along the border to keep Mexicans out of Texas," he said.

Another Democratic candidate, Richard Fisher of Dallas, also campaigned in the Rio Grande Valley on Thursday and criticized the Mattox proposal.

Evelyn K. Lantz of Houston is the fourth Democrat seeking the party's nomination to run against Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison or one of six other GOP candidates.

The Mattox-campaign said military cutbacks abroad opened an opportunity to "deputize" U.S. troops to help fight crime and illegal immigration on the border.

"It's a heck of a lot cheaper to bring them here and use them here, and of course you would train them for it," Mattox's press secretary, Elna Christopher, said.

"As long as the federal government does not beef up the Border Patrol, the DEA (Drug Enforcement Administration) and those agencies, it makes perfectly good sense to use our military under civilian authority," Ms. Christopher said.

"The most irresponsible thing we could do right now — right at the moment of trying to create more trade, more tourism — is to put our American military forces on the border," Andrews told reporters at Gateway International Bridge linking Brownsville to Matamoros, Mexico.

Andrews said the solution was giving more resources to local police, the U.S. Customs Service and the U.S. Border Patrol.

Brownsville Police Chief Victor Rodriguez also disliked Mattox's proposal, arguing that border crime was a police, not a military, issue.

He suggested the government should provide more Border Patrol agents and give local police officers limited authority to transport illegal immigrants to immigration facilities.

Rodriguez said the Border Patrol is critically understaffed to handle the problem of undocumented immigrants who cross into Brownsville.

Rodriguez said his officers lose policing time because they have to wait for overworked Border Patrol agents to pick up undocumented immigrants.

Texas man cleared of girls' murders in Missouri

ST. LOUIS (AP) — With the elimination of a Texas man from their investigation, police say they have no solid suspects in the killings of two north St. Louis County girls.

Authorities confirmed Thursday that Gary Stufflebean was not in the St. Louis area when Angie Housman was abducted on Nov. 18, or when Cassidy Senter was abducted on Dec. 1. Both girls were later found dead.

Police cleared Stufflebean as a suspect in the killings after three weeks of poring over flight records and interviewing his business associates in Kansas, Texas and North Carolina.

Stufflebean, 37, is a corporate auditor who lives in a suburb of Houston and comes to St. Louis on business trips and to visit relatives. Police say he confessed to molesting a girl in Maryland Heights on Nov. 8, 10 days before Angie's abduction a block from her home in St. Ann.

Stufflebean is under house arrest while he awaits trial on charges of sexual abuse and attempted kidnapping in connection with the Maryland Heights attack.

"He's got real bad timing, but he's no longer a suspect" in the killings, said St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney Robert P. McCulloch.

Thursday night, the mother of the girl from Maryland Heights and Stufflebean's wife shouted at and shoved each other after the woman knocked on the door of Stufflebean's mother's home and asked to talk to Gary Stufflebean. Witnesses say the mother and another woman — who witnesses said was Stufflebean's wife, Maureen — shoved each other about 7:15 p.m.

Authorities did not charge the woman from Maryland Heights, after the Stufflebean family declined to prosecute. But police plan to charge the woman and her boyfriend with possessing a small amount of marijuana after officers found it in their car.

Diane Bone, Angie's mother, thanked police for working hard but said, "I get to wondering, 'Who could it be?' When I go to the store, I wonder if the person could be in the same store with me, or maybe it's the person driving up my street."

"I guess police are having a hard time," she said.

Chipping of the Greens to be done Saturday

For the fourth consecutive year, Pampa residents will have the opportunity to do something positive for the environment, themselves and the city.

Beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday, Clean Pampa Inc., along with the city, will be sponsoring the annual Chipping of the Greens program in which Christmas trees will be chipped into mulch for use by area residents in their yards and gardens.

"If anyone would like a bag of the chips, just bring a bag and we'll give them a bag full," said Pam Green, executive coordinator of Clean Pampa.

The program is conducted following the end-of-the-year holidays in an effort to help prevent Christmas trees from going into the local landfill, taking up much needed space, Green said.

"It's been increasingly good over the years," Green said about the mulching program. "We're looking forward to a bumper crop this year.

I've seen a lot of trees that were sold in Pampa and I'd like to see them all composted rather than put into the landfill."

The mulching will be done by D.E. Ward and is scheduled to take place at 900 N. Duncan, where the trees are currently being collected. Ward does much of the tree-trimming for the city, Green said.

For more information about the program or disposing of Christmas trees contact the Clean Pampa offices at 665-2514.

National Geography Bee round scheduled at middle school

The first round of the 1994 National Geography Bee will be held at Pampa Middle School's auditorium Tuesday.

It will begin at 1:20 p.m. Tuesday with the final rounds for the top 10 students to take place at 1:20 p.m. Wednesday, according to school officials.

The geography bee will be the sixth such annual event sponsored by the National Geographic Society. Contestants will be students in the fourth through eighth grades in more than 45,000 schools across the United States and five U.S. territories, as well as Department of Defense Dependents Schools around the world.

The National Geography Bee is being sponsored by National Geographic WORLD, the National Geographic Society's magazine for children, and Amtrak.

The winner of the Pampa Middle School Bee will advance to the next level of competition, a written examination, from which contestants will go on to competition at the state level.

The national championship with its first prize, a $25,000 college scholarship, will be May 24 -25 in Washington, D.C.

More information about the National Geography Bee may be obtained by calling Cay Warner, a faculty sponsor of the event at Pampa Middle School, or PMS Principal Jermome Stewart, at 669-4900.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The Dallas Morning News on lawyer ads:

You need only turn on your television for an hour or so in the morning to see just how common lawyer advertising has become. Sandwiched between sitcom reruns is a seemingly endless stream of accident victims and criminal suspects praising the work of their attorneys. While a few of the commercials are straightforward, most are pretty cheesy.

Sixteen years have passed since the U.S. Supreme Court declared that lawyers have a constitutional right to advertise. But states still are struggling to determine what is permissible and what goes beyond the bounds of propriety. Although the State Bar of Texas forbids false or misleading ads, it continues to wrestle with what that means.

A proposal that had been pending before Texas' lawyers would have barred ads that contain unsubstantiated claims or that appeal primarily to emotions. Unfortunately, professional apathy seems to have doomed the effort. A referendum on the proposed reforms failed last [month] because a majority of the state's lawyers never bothered to return their ballots.

Someone might say that if a majority of Texas' lawyers are not especially concerned about the damage this advertising is doing to their profession's image, why should the public worry. But anyone who may be swayed by the unsubstantiated claims or emotional appeals made by these television commercials does have a stake in what happens.

No one is seeking to limit any lawyer's right to advertise his or her professional services. Rather, the whole motivation behind the proposed reforms was to raise that advertising to a higher plane. That is not at all unreasonable. Indeed, of the roughly 25,000 Texas lawyers who did return their ballots, 85 percent supported the new rules.

State Bar President Lonny Morrison says he would like another vote on the issue next year, and he and other like-minded reformers would be smart to press for one. Unless the legal profession gets its house in order soon, the Legislature may try to do so itself in 1995. And the state's lawmakers might not come up with a plan quite so palatable.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times on a tough sentence for first-time drug offender:

One year in prison for each of the 54 pounds of marijuana he was transporting: That's the sentence 31-year-old Pablo Diaz drew in the court of 105th District Judge J. Manuel Banales.

The judge made it perfectly clear that this was a send-'em-a-message sentence.

Certainly there's a need to underline society's determination to deal sternly with such offenses. And 54 pounds is a serious load.

Still, this is a troubling sentence. It must be considered not only in terms of its stated intent - to deter others - but in the context of the penalties routinely assessed those convicted on similar charges. According to a 1992 report by the federal Justice Department, the average sentence for drug trafficking is 66 months - quite a remove from five-plus decades.

Diaz had already been offered, and accepted, a plea bargain which would have given him 10 years' probation. That was scuttled when he could not come up with the $2,000 cash he needed toward the $5,400 fine that went with it. Obviously, he's no drug kingpin.

Moreover, this sentence, and others like it, have no impact whatsoever on the big operators who preside over this squalid traffic. They have the fancy lawyers and the connections to take on the system on even terms. It's the hapless mules like Diaz who draw the long hitches in the slammer, and there are always more willing to take their place, even knowing the risk involved.

First Amendmentitis at college

One up for Georgetown University! The background:

1. One Bradley Smith, a Californian who should find better things to do, runs something called the Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust. The thesis of that "open debate" is that the Holocaust probably never really happened, and if it did, it was of trivial significance, and the Holocaust Museum in Washington is a fine example of manipulative special-interest politics.

2. Student editors here and there are sent full-page paid ads expressing this position on the Holocaust, and many of them have proceeded to publish these ads. Their point of view, quite simply stated, is that the First Amendment guarantees the freedom of speech, and under the circumstances, in accepting such ads, they are merely doing their duty by the First Amendment.

3. In publishing the Holocaust-never-existed ads, the students are perfectly reflecting the epistemological pessimism of academic freedom. Forty years ago a figure of speech was constantly used in undergraduate education. It was to the effect that all ideas must "start out even in the race." By such ordinances, you aren't permitted, as a teacher, to postulate that, say, the Declaration of Independence pronounces higher ideals than the Communist Manifesto. No, because by doing so, you are suggesting that the curtain on communism has closed.

But curtains never close in an arena of free inquiry. That is what academic freedom, taken to the lengths it is taken in centers of nihilist thinking, is actually telling us. John Stuart Mill, the great muse of the open mind, taught us over a century ago that as long as a single person believes something to be so, it is not correct for society to consider the question as closed. Academic freedom patterned on such thought moved quite logically toward the deconstructionist position that nothing is ever proved, or provable.

4. The effect of such nihilism is properly shocking to Jewish sensibilities. If, some time after the Emperor Constantine was baptized, the historians of the period began to write that there had been no sacrifices of Christians during the preceding 400 years, one can imagine what would have been the rage of Christians who had survived martyrdom.

But this is an infected age. There are a couple of historians loose in the community who are telling us in current books that the Cold War was strictly the result of such bellicose monsters as Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Reagan. They are being dealt with by critics with quite extraordinary calm. One would have hoped that the critics had reacted as if they were survivors of the Gulag, or of the great purges in China, in the Soviet Union, in Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

But this is an age in which Oliver Stone can, with an apparently straight face, become rich by retailing the proposition that Lee Harvey Oswald wasn't guilty, but the Johnson administration was, as also the FBI, the CIA and the Warren Commission.

What is the motive of the Californian determined to throw spitballs at dead souls? A committee based in Atlanta (the "Center for Democratic Renewal") issues a report to the effect that such is the work of "anti-Semitic extremists." That isn't necessarily the case: The historical revisionist is not necessarily pro-communist, any more than Charles Beard was pro-Kaiser, or Charles Tansill was pro-Tojo.

But the important thing to remember about the First Amendment is that just as it guarantees us the freedom to pursue the truth, it guarantees others the right to deny the truth. There is no dispositive event in prospect, which allows the doubting Thomas physically to probe a wound, to verify its authenticity.

5. So how did Georgetown handle the situation when the students there published the Holocaust ad? The media board ruled that a public apology was in order, and that the $200 paid for the ad should be sent to the Holocaust Museum. The three top editors of the paper were given a guided tour of the museum, escorted by a professor of theology.

That last was not entirely appropriate, since the Holocaust was not a theological event, it was a historical event. And if we took every professor who disputes established historical events to a museum, we would need to ration the tickets.

Today is Friday, Jan. 7, the seventh day of 1994. There are 358 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
One hundred years ago, on Jan. 7, 1894, one of the earliest and most famous motion picture experiments took place at the Thomas Edison studio in West Orange, N.J., as cameraman William K.L. Dickson filmed comedian Fred Ott sneezing.

On this date:
In 1610, the astronomer Galileo Galilei sighted four of Jupiter's moons.

In 1782, the first commercial bank in the United States, the Bank of North America, opened in Philadelphia.

In 1789, the first U.S. presidential election was held. Americans voted for electors who, a month later, chose George Washington to be the nation's first president.

In 1800, the 13th president of the United States, Millard Fillmore, was born in Summerhill, N.Y.

In 1927, commercial transatlantic telephone service was inaugurated between New York and London.

In 1942, the World War II siege of Bataan began.

What was the big story of '93?

Paul Junior and I started out preparing a year-end retrospective.

We ended up with something entirely different: An American Family Album - 1993.

Selecting the most "significant" single story, we found ourselves eliminating the ones that had made the biggest headlines:

- The Holocaust in Waco.
- The Midwest flood.
- Record-high stock market.
- The bloody boomerang in Bosnia. NAFTA.

Instead, we concluded that from history's perspective, the 1993 news development of most lasting impact was the shotgun wedding of the medical profession and the health food store.

When the Food and Drug Administration went before Congress to object to that marriage, the objection was overruled.

Preventative medicine (nutrition) is now an accepted science.

As our country contemplates mandated "government medicine," a large part of that problem is resolving itself.

U.S. News as recently as last month was urging

Paul Harvey

"wait and watch" instead of surgery for gallstones, early prostate cancer, cataracts. It suggested "diet and exercise" even for failing hearts.

The American Medical Association Journal says that with nothing more than self-discipline relating to food, drinking, drugs, sex and smoking, this generation should live to enjoy a healthy hundred years.

And Robert Orben says we should not dread the prime-time years. We should anticipate them with enthusiasm.

He thinks one thing that might help is to raise the drinking age to 65.

It was not too long ago in the practice of medicine we were trying bloodletting, protracted bed rest and leeches.

We were using hot compresses where we now know cold is better.

Similarly, in preventive medicine, there are some snake-oil salesmen out there.

One day, I relayed a home remedy prescribing gin-soaked raisins to relieve arthritis. I thought it amusing.

I've since received scores of letters insisting it works.

"Soak white raisins in cheap gin for seven days. Dump the gin, and eat the raisins - nine a day."

Has to do with some active something in juniper berries. I suppose.

Gin-soaked raisin.

I am also hearing from some individuals who do not have arthritis wanting to know how they can get it.

The Big Story of 1993?

Medicine, nutrition and sanitation are presently adding 16 weeks to the average human life span every 24 months.

Happy New Year!

Clinton's wrap-around policy on Russia

WASHINGTON - Summed up in a bumper sticker, President Clinton's Russia policy would wrap all the way around the car. And then some.

There is no shorthand for the formula he's taking to Moscow next week.

Nor is there a simple summation of his message to the Eastern European nations now seeking to join the Western defense alliance created when they were the threat, not prospective partners.

In the complexities of a world transformed, with old enmities gone, but old suspicions persistent, Clinton's first presidential journey to Europe will be an exercise in balancing the aims and anxieties of West and East.

"We're in a period of transition now and I think the trick will be not to forget the lessons of the past, but not to be imprisoned by them," he said Wednesday.

Clinton said he wants to reach out to Central and Eastern Europe, to the market democracies that supplanted Communist regimes, with an offer of limited partnership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It's not all these nations want, but all he thinks it wise, or even possible, to offer now.

The president said he sees that as the avenue to a united Europe, not to simply moving the old East-West line eastward, toward Russia, Ukraine and other states that once were Soviet.

Clinton is leaving Saturday evening for a 10-day, five-nation journey to Europe, first to a NATO summit, later to Moscow, to confer with Boris Yeltsin, and to Prague, to meet with Eastern European leaders.

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

By the time he sees them, the alliance will have ratified his Partners for Peace policy, inviting Eastern democracies committed to open defense budgets and military cooperation to work with, but not actually within, NATO.

A NATO expanded to the borders of Russia stirs ancient fears of isolation, and so could strengthen the hand of extreme Russian nationalists, the very force that worries the leaders of bordering states.

Over lunch with two dozen columnists, commentators and top White House officials on Wednesday, Clinton said he had tried for a brief sumup of his message to Moscow, of U.S. support for both democracy and reform.

"We were trying to think of what our bumper sticker would be about the message," he said. "I think our slogan would be there needs to be more reform and more social service support, more attempts to build a safety net to deal with the consequences of reform, but not an attempt to slow down the reform effort."

There was laughter over the corn chowder and broiled fish as he tried "more reform, more support," and kept talking it out.

"I should have said when the bumper sticker stops," he smiled. "That would be the newest rap on me. Clinton endorses wrap-around bumper stickers. Safety device for automobiles."

The policy is meant to be a safety device too, a way to accommodate three blocs - the 16 NATO allies, the old Warsaw Pact states now seeking to join them, and Russia, Ukraine and other former Soviet states.

Clinton said his policy does not amount to giving the Russians veto power over NATO membership for their neighbors. But it is intended to avoid raising their concerns, drawing lines that would only promote insecurity. That would be the upshot of "security alliances that they're out of" but their neighbors are in, Clinton said.

"I believe it would be a critical mistake," he said.

Clinton said he believes NATO ultimately will be expanded to the east.

But at this point, his policy and reservations among NATO allies preclude it. NATO is committed to the defense of every member, and "you'd have all the questions about the consequences of security guarantees" if there were a push to add new nations, Clinton said.

Besides, defense budgets are down, U.S. forces in Europe are being cut from 326,000 to 100,000 - no lower, Clinton said - and Western allies are struggling against an economic slump.

Indeed, Clinton said one of his objectives in Western Europe will be to stir optimism, "sort of gin up the collective spirit."

Now that might fit a bumper sticker.

Public outcry, child slaying make crime the hot issue in California

By STEVE LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Spurred in part by the kidnapping and slaying of Polly Klaas, California's politicians are practically climbing over each other to offer tough-on-crime legislation.

Republican Gov. Pete Wilson, facing re-election and trailing in the polls, called a special legislative session on crime now under way and scheduled a crime summit for later this month in Los Angeles.

He has called for such measures as prosecuting minors as young as 14 as adults; enacting life sentences for more criminals, including first-time rapists, child molesters and arsonists; and building six more prisons.

"It's time to turn career criminals into career inmates," Wilson said in his State of the State address Wednesday. "To those criminals who are the most serious threat to society, we must send a clear and certain message: California is through with revolving-door justice."

Not to be outdone, the two leading Democrats running against Wilson, state Treasurer Kathleen Brown and Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi, are pushing their own anti-crime programs.

Brown, sister of former Gov. Jerry Brown and daughter of former Gov. Edmund G. Brown, asked viewers in a televised response to Wilson's address, "Do you feel safer than you did three years ago?"

Since convening Monday, lawmakers have joined the stampede. Assemblyman Terry Friedman introduced a bill to add 20 years to the sentence of people who have a gun on them during a crime.

The Assembly Public Safety Committee, usually one of the toughest hurdles for crime bills, approved five measures Thursday calling for long sentences for repeat felons.

Those proposals include a bill identical to the "Three Strikes and You're Out" initiative that parents of crime victims are trying to get on the November ballot. The bill would require life sentences for people convicted of three serious crimes.

Not everyone has joined the crush. "A majority of the people in the Legislature, and a great majority of the public, is of a mind to put people away for jaywalking. People are in a mood to do something," Assembly Speaker Willie Brown said. "They are not in a mood to be rational."

"We go through this in cycles," said state Sen. Nicholas Petris. This time, he said, "it seems to be because of the Polly Klaas case."

The 12-year-old Petaluma girl was kidnapped from her home at knifepoint during a slumber party in October and found dead weeks later. The man arrested in the slaying was on parole at the time for his second kidnapping conviction.

Attorney General Dan Lungren denied that politicians are pandering to voters. "It's elected officials finally, finally following the lead of the people back home," he said.

However, California's prisons are at nearly double capacity and the state faces another multibillion-dollar revenue shortage. Some worry that imprisoning more people longer could hurt schools and other programs.

"Whose hide does it come out of?" asked Assemblywoman Delaine Eastin, chairwoman of the Education Committee.

Strangely, the tough-on-crime movement comes at a time when urban crime is down.

The state reported in September that serious crime in California's population centers dropped 3.8 percent during the first half of 1993 compared with the first half of 1992, although murders were up 6.5 percent. Figures for the second half of the year aren't out yet.

Nevertheless, there is a perception that the world is becoming increasingly violent, said Mark DiCamillo, executive director of the Field Poll, the state's best-known political survey.

"Crimes are more sensational, more shocking. More younger people are involved," he said. "It's becoming more prevalent in places you don't expect it."

A Field Poll published in November found crime the top issue on the minds of 1,003 California adults surveyed — ahead of the economy, schools, AIDS and illegal immigration. It was the first time crime topped the list since 1982.

That concern may be reflected in another statistic out Thursday: Gun sales in California rose 18.9 percent last year.

"Clearly many thousands of Californians feel they are not adequately protected by law enforcement," the attorney general said.

Backward caps banned from shopping mall

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — It may be fashionable to wear a cap backward, but don't do it at Sunrise Mall.

Although many consider backward caps to be a fashion statement, Sunrise Mall and law enforcement officials say they are a sign of gang affiliation.

The backward cap ban is one of several measures the mall implemented last year in an attempt to curb gang violence and other crime at the mall.

Some shoppers and mall merchants say they welcome the mall's policy and support its aggressive stance on crime. But not everyone agrees.

"When they first told me I had to turn my cap around I tripped out," said Ernest Guerra, a 19-year-old Moody High School student who said he is not in a gang. "I've worn my cap backward so long I don't feel comfortable wearing it any other way."

"But I turned it anyway. The second time I came in with my cap backward out of habit. I stopped wearing caps here 'cause I didn't want to get hassled anymore."

Guerra hasn't stopped frequenting Sunrise Mall's food court or patronizing its movie theater. But he said his friends didn't appreciate being told they could not wear their caps backward there. So they took their business elsewhere.

"We understood we would catch some flak from some people," said Scott Mandel, Sunrise Mall security director. "It is a damned-if-we-do, damned-if-we-don't thing."

"I'd rather have parents be upset at me than to ask me why I let their kids be shot at the mall."

A clash between two groups of young people at a mall in the Dallas suburb of Irving last month resulted in an innocent bystander being shot to death and two members of one of the groups suffering gunshot wounds.

The cap policy may be driving some business away, said Carlos Gonzalez, 20, a salesman at The Go Round, a mall clothing store.

"Just three weeks ago I saw a security guard hassle a woman because her two grown-up sons were wearing their caps backward," he said. "These people obviously were shopping. If it's obvious they aren't gang members, why run them off? They'll end up taking their business elsewhere."

Mandel said the mall's policy does not target youngsters. It targets anyone who refuses to comply with the shopping center's rules, he said.

"It's tough approaching someone we know is probably not a gang member, but we don't want a discrimination suit," he said. "Everyone has to comply."

Backward caps are not a problem at the Padre Staples Mall here, said mall manager Jim Baxter, who noted his mall doesn't have a dress code.

"Anyone with blue hair and a bone in their nose can come here," he said. "We love their money. We're more concerned with how people conduct themselves."

Barge runs aground, spills diesel on resort beach

By LISA M. HAMM
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A barge carrying more than 1.5 million gallons of diesel struck a reef off the Puerto Rican capital before dawn today, spilling fuel on palm-lined beaches all along its Atlantic coast.

The diesel blackened Escambron Beach in San Juan's Puerta de Tierra section and a private beach owned by the exclusive Caribe Hilton.

Currents moved the spill and its overpowering stench west, toward the walled, colonial city of Old San Juan, and east, toward the Condado and Ocean Park tourist sections.

The spill began about 4 a.m. (2 a.m. CST), when the line broke on the tugboat towing the Morris J. Burman barge. It wasn't immediately clear how much had spilled.

At least two of the barge's nine tanks ruptured.

Six-foot-high waves and 10-15 mph winds kept U.S. Coast Guard specialists from reaching the vessel, which was still leaking fuel 500 yards offshore at midmorning, Coast Guard spokesman Christopher Haley said.

Three C-130 cargo planes carrying equipment and special Coast Guard oil-fighting personnel were en route from Alabama and New Jersey, Haley said.

The oil spill comes at the height of Puerto Rico's winter tourist season. Vacationers began planning to leave early, said Ralph Perez, a manager at the Radisson Normandie Hotel.

Nearby hotels moved people to higher floors to escape the fumes, and some chartered buses to other beaches on the island.

"I just don't believe it. I walked down here just ready to lay in the sun. This is terrible," said Betty Sue Cooper of Dallas, who stood on the Caribe Hilton beach carrying sunglasses, a towel and fashion magazines.

Cooper said she had just arrived Thursday night but might go to the Bahamas instead.

Benito Pinto, a senior official with the U.S. commonwealth's

Department of Natural Resources, estimated the San Juan beaches would be closed for at least a month. Beaches and resorts outside San Juan were not immediately affected.

"We are talking about a disaster," Pinto said.

At midmorning, the spill was moving into the Condado Lagoon, normally a haven for kayaks and small sailboats.

The Coast Guard set up a containment boom to try to stop the flow.

"Fish, wildlife, marine life is going to be affected. They're going to die," Jose Burgos, duty officer for Puerto Rico's civil defense agency, said at the scene.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WHO WROTE THE BIBLE ?

AUTHORSHIP OF THE BIBLE, NATURALLY, CAN NOT BE ASCRIBED TO ANY ONE PERSON, OR GROUP OF PERSONS, BUT, WHEN WE VIEW ITS AUTHORSHIP CLOSELY, WE CAN ONLY GASP WITH AMAZEMENT OVER THE VAST ARRAY OF PARTICIPANTS WHO, WRITING OVER A PERIOD OF 1500 YEARS, CAME FROM EVERY WALK OF LIFE! ASSUREDLY ALL OF THEM WROTE UNDER THE INSPIRATION OF DIVINE GUIDANCE FOR, ALTHOUGH SOME WERE INTELLECTUALLY GIFTED, OTHERS WERE HARDLY LITERATE ENOUGH TO FASHION THE WORDS THEY WROTE! THEY WERE:

THEY USED EVERY AVAILABLE FORM OF EXPRESSION:
 KINGS, PEASANTS, PRIESTS, FISHERMEN, SHEPHERDS, GENERALS, LAWYERS, DOCTORS, TAX COLLECTORS, POLITICIANS, NOBLEMEN, MARTYRS, SOLDIERS, AND SLAVES!
 PROSE, POETRY, PARABLES, PRAYERS, SERMONS, SONGS, HISTORY, LAW, LETTERS, DIALOGUE, ANECDOTES, RITUAL, ROMANCE, BIOGRAPHY, EULOGY, ALLEGORY, PROPHECY!

THEY WROTE IN WIDELY VARIED SITUATIONS:
 IN PRISONS AND PALACES, CITIES, TOWNS, AND VILLAGES, PANK CAVES, AND ARID DESERTS, BY RIVERS, ON MOUNTAINS, IN DEFEAT, IN VICTORY, IN EXILE!

THEY WROTE ON ALMOST EVERY SUBJECT FOR MANKIND:
 GOD AND THE DEVIL, CHRIST AND THE HOLY SPIRIT, CREATION AND SIN, THIEVERY AND CHARITY, HATEFULNESS AND KINDNESS, HONESTY AND TRICKERY, PROPHETS FALSE AND TRUE, LIFE, DEATH, HEAVEN, HELL!

ABOVE ALL, THEY WROTE OF GOD'S PROMISES AND PLANS FOR HIS UNIVERSE, AND OF HIS LOVE FOR US, HIS CHILDREN!... WHAT A MAJESTIC HERITAGE IS OURS—THE HOLY BIBLE!

Aging Irish Catholic sisters look back on service

By DOUGLAS FREELANDER
The Houston Post

HOUSTON (AP) — They settled here to serve humanity for a time. Now they are leaving, replaced by a younger generation.

They are an aging generation of Catholic sisters who came to the United States in large numbers from Ireland during the early part of the century.

Some of them have recently died. Others are alive, well — and working. Still others are retired, but alert with vivid memories of the past.

Some came to the New World just for the challenge. Others were encouraged to immigrate because English-speaking sisters were in demand in the United States, and Ireland was teeming with sisters at the time.

Besides their work in the community, they and their predecessors are credited with being a major influence in the development of the Texas Medical Center.

Sister Marie Joseph Murnane, 79, who arrived from County Tipperary in 1930, was a nurse at St. Joseph Hospital for years and served as convent superior there.

She also served her order — the Congregation of the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word — in other cities, as a nurse specializing in obstetrics and gynecology, as a teacher, as a supervisor and as an organizer of missions.

The sister always aspired to be a nun, specializing in nursing. She came to the United States for "the drama of coming over here to this country."

"I could see Indians with head-dresses and everything, as I had read about in school. It's a little far-fetched, but we didn't know any better," said Sister Murnane, who now lives in St. Placidus Convent, a retirement facility at the Villa de Matel Convent.

A petite, alert woman with a memory like clockwork and exceptional strength for her advanced years, Sister Murnane is in retirement because her eyesight is bad.

When discussing the influence of her order in Houston, she remembers that the original center of medicine in Texas was not Houston, but Galveston, where St. Mary's Infirmary opened in 1866 as the order's first project.

The infirmary was a pay-as-you-can enterprise that pioneered a form of health insurance. It also was the first to departmentalize its medical staff.

In 1887, the congregation opened St. Joseph's infirmary, now St. Joseph Hospital, in Houston. Originally a 40-bed frame building on Caroline and Franklin, St. Joseph's Infirmary was Houston's first general hospital.

"We had established medicine in Houston before the medical center was ever conceived. In fact, I'm old enough to remember some of the doctors who first conceived the idea of the medical center," said Sister Murnane.

"We were to a great extent facilitators for the establishment of the medical center," she said. "Many of the services we had, and the doctors we had trained, became part of it."

"To heal the sick, have compassion for the poor — that is our whole thrust, that's our reason for being."

The origin and history of the order is the subject of Serving with Gladness, a book written by Sister Mary Loyola Hegarty and published by Bruce Publishing Co. in 1966, marking the 100th anniversary of the order's founding.

The author, now 75, came to Houston in 1936 from Cork, Ireland, and worked in the pharmacies at St. Joseph's and St. Mary's during the 1940s. She is now a resident at St. Elizabeth Hospital in Beaumont, serving as local superior at the hospital convent.

Reared and schooled in a religious environment, Sister Hegarty was among a group of 14 young Irish women aspiring to become nuns in the United States.

"I really don't remember a time when I didn't want to be a sister," she said. "But I did want somehow not to stay in Ireland. I had the feeling that Ireland had enough sisters."

She taught science and chemistry in schools and universities around the country, among other duties, and was superior general at Villa de Matel Convent from 1978 to 1986.

Because of her research, the history of the nuns who came to the Houston-Galveston area before the turn of the century has been restored. The congregation's original documents, stored in St. Mary's, were lost in the 1900 hurricane.

More than 6,000 people were killed in that Galveston storm. Ten nuns who were in the order's orphanage were drowned, along with 90 orphans. But the infirmary remained upright, sheltering a number of refugees.

James Talmadge Moore, who teaches history at North Harris College, said a significant number of sisters or aspiring nuns came to the United States from Ireland during the 1920s and 1930s. The first Irish sisters immigrated here around the 1850s.

St. Joseph Hospital administrator Raymond Khoury said that besides serving the needy, the sisters' selfless work influenced the development of hospitals in general, and the medical center would not be what it is today without their work.

Khoury said he is amazed the nuns were so successful at identifying, then meeting, community needs with the limited resources at hand, especially during the harsh Depression years.

"They lived a very humble life, yet they were able to have a big, magnificent vision," he said. "They were women of courage who served Houston, starting from nothing."

faith, in a mission. They adjusted to the culture and, with nothing really, were able to achieve their mission — which is serving God's people in their own way."

'True Love Waits' takes hold among teens, many churches

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The great American teen-age sex-out is gathering steam.

A campaign urging teens to postpone sex until marriage, started by the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board as an adjunct to a sex education program, has spread rapidly to other denominations and is well on its way to a goal of eliciting chastity vows from half a million teen-agers.

The "True Love Waits" campaign recently received its biggest boost to date when the nation's largest denomination, the 59 million-member Roman Catholic Church, joined.

In January, the National Federation for Catholic Youth Ministry plans to send to 180 dioceses literature discussing adolescent sexuality, including modified chastity pledge cards for Catholic young people.

Church officials say the gathering together of some of the nation's largest denominations for the program may herald a new sexual revolution among teens, and help convince government policymakers of the value of teaching abstinence to prevent disease and teen-age pregnancy.

"I hope it has a clear signal to society that ... sexual purity prior to marriage is a viable option for teen-agers, and one they are willing to stand behind," said Jimmy Hester, Southern Baptist coordinator of the campaign.

For religious groups seeking to combat what they see as a secular onslaught emphasizing sexuality without commitment, the idea of a teen chastity campaign has seemed a godsend.

"Everybody is saying, 'somebody do something.' ... Here, a vehicle comes along," says John Ashmen of Christian Camping International-USA.

The Colorado Springs-based organization recently endorsed the program for its camps serving more than 1 million youths.

Other denominations and groups that have signed on include the Assemblies of God, Pentecostal Church of God, The Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Campus Crusade for Christ. The campaign went international in the fall when the Evangelical Fellowship of Canada endorsed the program.

Kathleen Carver, associate director of the Catholic youth group, said she has been getting several calls a day from churches interested in participating in the campaign.

"I think it's a pretty positive and powerful sign ... we as a community, we as a nation take some sort of collective responsibility for our young," Carver said.

She said the Catholic effort will not give kids "101 reasons not to have sex before marriage," but will focus on positive reasons for chastity such as respect for the dignity of individuals and the value of a healthy lifestyle.

Young Catholics interviewed at World Youth Day in Denver said the prevalence of sexually transmitted diseases has made many youths receptive to hearing about the values of postponing sex until marriage.

Campaign officials say one key to the program's success is teens' rebellion against what they see as an unfair portrayal of them in popular culture as a monolith of uncontrolled libidos.

Nearly half of the teen respondents to a Time-Cable News Network poll in April said it is wrong to have sex before marriage, and two-thirds of the respondents ages 13 to 17 said they were still virgins.

Campaign officials do not know how many teens have signed pledge cards vowing not to have sex before marriage, but some initial reports indicate the campaign is progressing toward its goal of 100,000 chastity vows from Southern Baptist youth and 500,000 pledges overall. At a summer camp in Oklahoma, more than 13,500 teens embraced the program.

Sting, Billy Joel lead in nominations for annual Grammy recording awards

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Enduring pop music star Sting, who has experimented with rock, jazz and fusion, picked up six Grammy nominations Thursday, including record, song and album of the year.

Billy Joel, who also was nominated in those categories, received four, as did R.E.M. and Whitney Houston, whose single, "I Will Always Love You," set a record for the number of weeks on the chart as No. 1.

Songwriter Alan Menken and producer David Foster, whose credits include The Bodyguard, received five nominations.

Nominated for record of the year were: "A Whole New World," the theme from the Disney movie Aladdin, by Peabo Bryson and Regina Belle; Houston's "I Will Always Love You"; Joel's "River of Dreams"; "If I Ever Lose My Faith in You" by Sting; and "Harvest Moon" by Neil Young.

The song of the year nominees were Young's "Harvest Moon"; "I'd Do Anything for Love," performed by Meat Loaf and written by Jim Steinman; "If I Ever Lose My Faith in You," by Sting; Joel's "River of Dreams"; and the Aladdin theme, "A Whole New World," written by Menken and Tim Rice.

Nominees for album of the year were Kamakiriad, by Donald Fagen; the soundtrack from the movie The Bodyguard, most of which is performed by Houston; Joel's River of Dreams; Automatic for the People by R.E.M.; and Sting's Ten Summoner's Tales.

The record of the year category recognizes performers. Song of the year recognizes writers. Album of the year recognizes both the artist and the producer.

Among those shut out from the major categories were Janet Jackson, Nirvana and Mariah Carey.

Nominees for best new artist were Blind Melon, Toni Braxton, Digable Planets, Belly and SWV (Sisters With Voices).

Nominees for best classical album, which recognizes the artist and producer, were: Bartok: The Wooden Prince & Cantata Profana, Pierre Boulez conducting the Chicago Symphony Orchestra & Chorus; Berg: Violin Concerto/RHIM: Time Chant, James Levine conducting the Chicago Symphony; Debussy: Le Martyre de Saint Sebastien, Michael Tilson Thomas conducting the London Symphony; If You Love Me (18th Century Italian Songs), Cecilia Bartoli, soprano; and Venetian Vespers, Paul McCreech conducting the Gabrieli Consort & Players.

The nominations were decided by members of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences. Winners are then chosen in a final balloting of the 6,500 voting members.

Winners will be announced March 1 at the 36th annual Grammy Awards ceremony. To be eligible, the recordings had to be released between Oct. 1, 1992, and Sept. 30, 1993.

The ceremony, hosted by Gary Shandling, will be broadcast live from Radio City Music Hall by CBS.

Jazz pianist Bill Evans, classical pianist Arthur Rubinstein and the soul singer Aretha Franklin were awarded lifetime achievement awards during a ceremony at the Apollo Theater where the annual nominations were being announced. Both pianists are deceased. Franklin has 15 Grammy Awards to her name.

The academy also gave Norman Granz, founder of the Verve and Pablo record companies, its trustee award.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After being out of work for many months, I was guaranteed a job with a small newspaper if I took a course in writing, so I enrolled at a small college in Washington state, not far from where I live.

Halfway through the course, my teacher, an attractive 29-year-old woman, gave me this assignment in her own handwriting: "Write an essay on the first time you made love, using contemporary language - no euphemism!" (This was not the first suggestive assignment she has given me.)

I told my teacher I didn't care for the assignment, but she insisted that in order to pass the course, I had to complete it. I want that newspaper job, and I need a passing grade to get it, but things are getting very touchy at home.

I am 60 years old, and to tell you the truth, I can hardly remember the first time I made love, so the essay wouldn't be very good anyway. What should I do?

ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON THE SPOT: Tell your teacher that you consider her assignment as a tasteless invasion of your privacy, and unless you are offered an acceptable alternative, you will appeal to the dean, the president, the regents, and any others with clout at your college.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe I'm old-fashioned (I'm 43), but I have a gripe I wonder if anyone else has.

I vowed a couple of years ago that I would not attend any more bridal showers for girls who were living with their boyfriends.

I always thought the reason for a bridal shower was to help the new couple get set up for house-keeping. The last three shower invitations I received were from couples who had been house-keeping for a couple of years already, so I'm sure they must have enough sheets, towels, dishes, etc.

Abby, when are we going to stop rewarding all this in-your-face immorality? Does anyone else feel the way I do? Sign me...

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: I'm sure many do, but the present generation is far less judgmental than preceding generations.

DEAR ABBY: In the fall of 1988, you published a poem that stated you could measure your success by the way your children described you when they're talking to a friend.

My husband and I had been married only a few months when I read that poem in the Rocky Mountain News. I copied it in longhand, hoping to do it in needpoint one day for my mother-in-law. (My own parents were long gone.)

I have searched in vain for a copy of that poem. I can't even remember the author's name. Can you please help me?

D.D.H. IN DENVER

DEAR D.D.H.: Bingo! I found it, and it's worth a second time around:

Success
by Martin Buxbaum

You can use most any measure
When you're speaking of success
You can measure it in fancy home,
Expensive car or dress.
But the measure of your real success
Is the one you cannot spend.
It's the way your kids describe you
When they're talking to a friend.

Park buildings to stay open

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After years of closing their doors for the winter, the lesser-known buildings in Independence National Historic Park now have the go-ahead to stay open all year.

The park, which encompasses Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell, will resume full-scale, year-round operations for the first time in eight years, thanks to an extra $900,000 in its operating budget, Rep. Tom Foglietta, D-Pa., announced recently.

Army turns over Presidio building to park service

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Army has surrendered one of its buildings at the sprawling Presidio to the National Park Service, which plans to turn the famous 217-year-old military post into a park and educational center.

With the 6th Army Band playing "This Land is Your Land," a brief changing-of-the-guard ceremony recently marked the Presidio Museum's transfer to the park service.

"This is the first building that the National Park Service is assuming responsibility for at the Presidio," said Dave Rice of the park service's public information office.

There are about 800 buildings at the Presidio and 500 have historical value, according to Rice. The park service occupies several other buildings at the 1,480-acre military installation, but the other buildings are all still considered military structures, he said.

The next building to be handed over to the service is the Letternen medical complex, slated for transfer in January.

The Presidio's grounds include the major viewing point for the Golden Gate Bridge, which the park service says will be preserved and enhanced.

The three-story museum, which had been closed for inventory and cleaning, reopened with the ceremony and will remain open Wednesdays through Sundays. It will also serve as a temporary visitors center.

The museum is located in the former Presidio Hospital, which was built in 1862. Its exhibits include two restored refugee cottages, built to house people displaced by the 1906 earthquake and fire. It also has an exhibit on the Panama-Pacific International Exposition of 1915 as well as Army uniforms and historic artillery.

Under the park service plan, more than 70 percent of the land in the Presidio will be devoted to open space. Increased recreational facilities would include 11 miles of hiking trails, 11 miles of biking routes and the post golf course's being opened to the public.

Most of the structures would eventually be leased to public and private organizations involved in research, education and training.

Public hearings have helped to develop final plans for the park, said Bob Chandler, Presidio general manager for the park service.

A group of black World War II veterans urged that the military contribution of blacks be recognized. The Presidio was once home to units of the Buffalo Soldiers, the renowned black cavalry unit, and the Presidio stable where Buffalo Soldiers kept their horses still stands.

John Triplehorn, left, hopes that the army's excavation of the old Pampa Air Base east of town will yield artifacts for the new Freedom Museum. Ground-breaking ceremonies on one of the wings of the museum, above, were last month. With construction scheduled to be complete in April, another wing is slated to be built next year. ## Possibility of new artifacts as progress on museum continues

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

What one county official hopes will serve as a monument to world peace is being erected as a monument to wartime memorabilia at Memorial Park.

John Triplehorn, president of the Freedom Museum USA being established at 600 N. Hobart, said preliminary renovation and expansion of a vacant building on the site is expected to be completed by mid-April.

The museum should be a rarity in the nation because it will contain military artifacts representing all five branches of the U.S. Armed Forces — the Army, the Navy, the Marines, the Air Force, and the Coast Guard, Triplehorn said.

"It (the museum) will be an educational tool to enlighten children who have never been exposed to this country being involved in a (prolonged military) conflict," said Triplehorn, a former First Lieutenant and company commander for the U.S. Army in Vietnam and Gray County Veteran Service Officer. "By teaching them what has gone before, we hope to help them avoid some of the pitfalls in the future. In other words, being militarily prepared is essential for remaining free."

Southwest General Contractors of Amarillo is in charge of the museum construction project, which began about three weeks ago, Triplehorn said. The project is expected to increase the size of the building used for the museum from its current floor space of approximately 3,000 square feet to roughly 5,000 square feet.

The building at 600 N. Hobart — an historical landmark that was built by the Works Progress Administration during the late 1930s and served as a water-pump station — is being expanded toward the west. An additional expansion of the museum building toward the east is scheduled to begin sometime after the end of 1995, Triplehorn said.

The total cost of the project is about $165,000, including materials and labor, all of which was raised over the last three years through a joint effort by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 1657, in Pampa; Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association (PAAFRA); and the 14-member board of directors of Freedom Museum USA, equally divided between VFW members and PAAFRA members, Triplehorn said.

The VFW post in Pampa has 235 members, and the PAAFRA has more than 800 members, Triplehorn said.

The new museum being established at Memorial Park is expected to be one-story in height and feature a multi-colored brick exterior and hot-tar roof, Triplehorn said. The planned centerpiece for the museum is a B-25 bomber to be placed between the war memorial monument on Memorial Park and the museum building, he said.

Triplehorn said he hopes a team from the Defense Ammunition Center and School in Savanna, Ill., will contribute to the museum some military memorabilia of historic significance from the artifacts that the team uncovers during a planned excavation later this month on the grounds of a former U.S. airbase about 12 miles east of Pampa. Among the items believed to have been buried at the site as part of disposal of property of the former airbase, which trained pilots during World War II, are military training aids, weapons, engines, communication equipment, and officer supplies, Triplehorn said.

The team from the Defense Ammunition Center and School is expected to arrive in Pampa about Jan. 20, Triplehorn said.

Triplehorn estimated that 250 to 500 artifacts have thus far been donated toward establishment of the Free Museum USA, including weapons, documents, newspapers, magazines, uniforms, airplanes, and a Huey Helicopter from the Vietnam War era that were directly or indirectly related to American participation in military conflict with other countries or other nations' participation in military conflict with the U.S.

Those wishing to donate such military memorabilia may contact Triplehorn at his veteran service office number of 669-8040 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Cruising Alaska's inside passage

By JENNIFER MERIN
For AP Special Features

GLACIER BAY, Alaska (AP) — Our ship glides slowly through the frigid waters, dwarfed by the craggy ice cliff ahead. We're about 250 feet, about a third of the ship's length, from one of the monumental glaciers lining Glacier Bay.

A thunderous crack off the starboard bow alerts us to an ice block, almost as large as the ship, breaking off the glacier. The new iceberg crashes and bobs in the sea then drifts toward the mouth of the bay.

We're traversing the Inside Passage, that part of Alaska which separates British Columbia from the Pacific Ocean. We marvel at the glaciers' complex patterns, a mix of white and bright blue, gasp in awe at the glacial calving and applaud nature's magnificent transformation. The blue, by the way, is attributed to the density of century-old ice.

When George Vancouver discovered Glacier Bay in 1794, he found a mere indentation in the solid ice mass. In 1879, naturalist John Muir reported the ice had retreated 48 miles up the bay. By 1916, Grand Pacific Glacier was at the top of Tarr Inlet 65 miles from Glacier Bay's mouth. Such rapid glacial retreat is known nowhere else, and scientists have been tracking it in an effort to learn how glacial activity influences climate change.

The glacial calving highlights a journey filled with natural and man-made splendor. Inside Passage cruising starts in Vancouver, British Columbia, and ends in Vancouver or Anchorage. It attracts about 300,000 passengers each year for the 7- to 14-day trip.

From May through September, passenger ships ply the 1,000-mile route through scenic channels, sounds and inlets, passing isolated islands covered with snow-capped peaks; unspoiled forests of spruce and hemlock where American eagles, brown bears, otters and other protected animals flourish; and pristine rivers and lakes that offer some of North America's best fishing.

Ships call at historic towns that date to Indian settlements established before Russian colonial days and the boom years of the gold rush. Three popular ports are Ketchikan, Juneau and Sitka, where museums, national parks and interpretive centers display totem poles, Russian relics and artifacts of gold fever.

Ketchikan, surrounded by Tongass National Park's rain forests, has a free-wheeling frontier ambience, carefully preserved along Creek Street. Creek Street was once a raucous red-light district but now is a charming area of quaint restaurants and shops selling local handicrafts.

Neighboring Saxman Village, home to more than 350 Indians, boasts the world's foremost collection of totem poles. Nearby Misty Fjords National Monument, best seen by bush plane, features panoramas of soaring granite cliffs, cascading waterfalls and serene lakes.

Juneau, Alaska's capital, was built up by prospectors Dick Harris and Joe Juneau who found gold in the surrounding mountains. Squeezed between Mount Juneau and Gastineau Channel, the historic town is dominated by a gracious capitol building, governor's mansion, modern government office towers and the onion-domed St. Nicholas Russian Church.

Shore excursions feature downtown sightseeing and sumptuous salmon bakes, rafting down Mendenhall River, flightseeing over Mendenhall Glacier or landing to hike over its craggy, icy terrain. One can pan for gold, fish or play golf within sight of the glacier.

Sitka was founded in 1799 by Alexander Baranov, the Russian czar's enterprising governor, who moved his fort closer to colonies of others whose pelts he sought. Indians attacked in 1802, but two years later they had been driven off and Sitka was established as the capital of Russian America.

Russia's political domination of Alaska ended in 1867, when the United States purchased the territory for $7.2 million in gold. But Russian cultural influence is still evident in local restaurants serving up Russian specialties and in Sitka's New Archangel Dancers who perform Russian folk dances for tourists.

DENTON - Lee-Anne McBride of Denton graduated from the University of North Texas during fall commencement ceremonies on Dec. 18.

McBride received a bachelor of science degree with a major in elementary education.

Parents of the new graduate are John McBride and the late Jane-Anne McBride of Pampa.

With more than 27,000 students, the University of North Texas is the fourth largest university in the state. UNT is the largest and most comprehensive university in the North Texas region with more than 130 undergraduate and graduate degree programs.

Lee-Anne will begin her career as a seventh grade life science teacher at Longfellow Middle School Academy in the Dallas ISD. She is the granddaughter of LeeRoy and Mary McBride and Hattie Stephens, all of Pampa.

Coast Guard Seaman Apprentice Jay B. Boone, son of Freddie and Brenda Boone of 316 N. 7th St., Canadian, Texas, recently graduated from Coast Guard Recruit Training Center.

During the training cycle at Coast Guard Recruit Training Center, Cape May, N.J., students are taught general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training leading toward qualification in one of the Coast Guard's 26 occupational fields.

Studies also include first aid, seamanship, Coast Guard history and regulations, close order drill and damage control.

The 1990 graduate of Canadian High School joined the Coast Guard in September 1993.

Navy Seaman Apprentice Enrique A. Delacruz-Lopez, son of Jose P. and Maria R. Delacruz of 412 D Ave., Olton, Texas, recently completed basic training at Recruit Training Command, San Diego.

During the cycle, recruits are taught general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 occupational fields.

Studies include seamanship, close-order drill, naval history and first aid.

Although the Navy is getting smaller, the state-of-the-art ships, aircraft and high tech systems in today's fleet require bright, talented young men and women to operate them. The Navy has over 60,000 job openings this year, most of them which include guaranteed training.

He is a 1993 graduate of Olton High School.

SAN DIEGO — Navy Petty officer 1st Class Fannie M. Preston, the 37-year-old son of Fannie and Mary Preston of Pampa, joined more than 8,000 sailors and Marines in an amphibious landing exercise dubbed "Kernel Raider."

The massive exercise off the coast of Southern California, involving 14 ships, 11 shore commands and one Canadian unit, was designed to test the Navy and Marine Corps' ability to project power ashore.

"USS Wadsworth was the anti-air warfare coordinator for the entire amphibious groups," said Preston, a 1974 graduate of Pampa High School.

The 3,600-ton ship and its crew are key components of the Navy's strategy, which emphasizes Navy and Marine Corps operations in regional areas. In the past year, naval forces have practiced and proven the strategy to be workable, realistic and valid. Naval expeditionary forces are now shaped for joint operations close to shore overseas and tailored for national needs at home.

A Navy operations specialist aboard the guided missile frigate, homeported in San Diego, Preston supervises 12 sailors who operate surface and air surveillance radars.

"It was a challenge working the long hours on watch," said Preston, "but I feel that a mutual respect among the crew was gained through this exercise."

FIGURE SKATING

DETROIT (AP) — Scott Davis, in an electrifying display of jumping, spinning and showmanship, upset Brian Boitano to win his second straight U.S. Figure Skating Championship.

Davis made himself a strong medals contender for next month's Olympics with six triple jumps, including two triple axels.

Boitano, 1988 Olympic champion returning from five years as a professional, was second. Davis was first with six judges; Boitano got three other first-place votes, and both qualified for Lillehammer Olympics. Aren Nielsen was third.

In pairs, Jenni Meno and Todd Sand won the technical program, ahead of Kyoko Ina and Jason Dungeen, and veterans Karen Courtland and Todd Reynolds.

FOOTBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Reeves' work in turning around the Giants earned him Associated Press Coach of the Year.

Reeves, who led Denver to three AFC championships in 10 years, took the Giants to an 11-5 record and playoff berth his first season. He brought stability and confidence back to a team that went from Super Bowl winners under Bill Parcells to 14-18 in Ray Handley's two seasons.

Reeves was runaway winner with 68 votes from 81 national media members. Jack Pardee, who guided Houston from 1-4 start to AFC Central title, was second with six votes. Next with two votes each were Chicago's Dave Wannstedt, Jimmy Johnson of Dallas and Don Shula, who set career victories mark this year.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dallas running back Emmitt Smith and Los Angeles Raiders receiver Tim Brown were among six NFL Players of the Month.

Smith, Minnesota defensive end Chris Doleman and Detroit kicker Jason Hanson were NFC players on offense, defense and special teams. Brown, Houston cornerback Cris Dishman and Raiders kicker Jeff Jaeger were AFC winners.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M junior running back Greg Hill, a central figure in a summer job scheme that culminated with his school winding up on NCAA probation, will forego his final year and enter the NFL draft.

The violation of NCAA rules resulted in five-year probation for Texas A&M athletic department along with a one-year ban keeping the football team off television and out of bowl games.

Hill reached 2,000 rushing yards quicker than anyone in SWC history. For his career, the 5-11, 205-pounder gained 3,262 yards on 631 carries in 30 games and scored 33 touchdowns.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court refused to order Marianna reinstated as women's basketball coach at Southern Cal, saying she failed to show she should earn the same as men's coach George Raveling.

Stanley refused university's $96,000 salary offer last summer, asking for a three-year contract with pay equal to Raveling's. USC promptly hired former All-American, Cheryl Miller, to succeed Stanley as coach.

U.S. District Judge John Davies said she failed to show a likelihood of success, and his ruling was upheld by 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

BASKETBALL

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks traded veteran guard Derek Harper to the Knicks for Tony Campbell and a 1997 first-round draft choice.

New York, leading the Atlantic Division at 20-8, was desperate for backcourt help after losing Doc Rivers for the season with a knee injury and Hubert Davis for several weeks with a fractured bone in his right hand.

Harper, 32, is the Mavericks' all-time leader in assists (4,790), steals (1,457) and 3-point field goals (645). He was averaging 11.6 points on .380 shooting with 3.5 assists in 28 games this season. His career average is 15 points and 6.1 assists per game.

Campbell, a 6-7 swingman, averaged 7.1 points on .492 shooting in 22 games this season.

GOLF

CLEVELAND, Calif. (AP) — Dave Stockton, who dominated senior tour in 1993, dominated regular PGA players in the first round of the Mercedes Championship, the first tournament of 1994, with a 67 in the two-tier tournament.

Stockton led by three strokes over senior Bob Charles of New Zealand and was two better than Fred Couples, Nolan Henke, Brett Ogle of Australia and Vijay Singh of Fiji, who topped regular tour players with 3-under-par 69s.

Lee Trevino, Dale Douglass, Bob Murphy, George Archer and Jim Colbert had 71's.

In regular tour section, Greg Norman, Phil Mickelson, Scott Simpson and Grant Waite had 70's, one off the pace.

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Nick Price on the regular tour and Dave Stockton on the senior circuit were PGA Players of the Year.

Price, 36, won four tournaments and a record $1,478,557, and broke Fred Couples' two-year hold on player of the year award. Stockton won five senior tour titles and a tour-leading $1,175,944.

Sean Murphy won player of the year on the Nike tour, Bob Murphy was voted rookie of the year on the senior tour and Vijay Singh of Fiji was selected regular tour rookie of the year.

TENNIS

CLEVELAND (AP) — Monica Seles, who hoped to return from stab wounds to play the Australian Open, will skip the year's first Grand Slam because she is not in good enough shape.

Seles, former No. 1 player, has been sidelined since an attack in Germany last April when a man reached from the stands and stabbed her in the back. Seles, 20, has been rehabilitating and practicing at home in Sarasota, Fla.

Pampa tests Levelland in non-district tilt

By L.D. STRATE Sports Writer

If basketball nets were combustible, they could have been set ablaze in the fourth quarter of the Pampa-Amarillo High game Tuesday night at McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Harvesters outscored the Sandies, 22-8, hitting 9 of 10 field goal attempts and 3 of 3 free throws in racing to a 54-44 win.

The Harvesters were trailing, 36-32, going into the fourth quarter.

"We were glad to catch fire," said Harvesters' head coach Robert Hale. "Amarillo High is always a big game. They've got some big old boys and it's always good to come out and play well enough to beat them."

The Harvesters are now 12-7 for the season and only three of those games have been played at McNeely Fieldhouse.

"It took us awhile to get used to playing at home. It's almost like playing on a foreign court," Hale said.

Sophomore guard Rayford Young and senior center Seivern Wallace led Pampa in scoring with 13 points each. Young scored 11 points in the fourth quarter and 6-6 senior Justin Collingsworth tossed in 7 of his 12 points in the final period.

"Rayford had a real good quarter. When he hit a 3-point on an in-bounds play that just seemed to ignite him. It really got him going," Hale said.

Young's 3-point goal from the corner gave Pampa a 5-point advantage, 41-36. The Harvesters went on to score eight more points, four by Young, to give Pampa a 13-point lead before the Sandies finally got on the board.

"Justin played a real solid game for us and Seivern was active all night for us in the paint and on the boards. It was one of his better games," Hale said.

Junior guard Duane Nickellberry also added to the Pampa surge, scoring four of his six points in the last eight minutes.

"Duane is doing a good job of giving us some leadership. Although Hank Gindorf didn't score any points, he's beginning to do some other good things for us. He's a good shooter, but other parts of his game are starting to come around," Hale said.

Wallace leads Pampa's balanced scoring attack—at 14 points per game. He's followed by Young, 12 points; Nickellberry, 11 and Laury 9. Gindorf and Collingsworth are both around 6 points.

Pampa is on the road again this weekend, taking on Levelland at 4 p.m. Saturday.

"Levelland has a real good team. I know they beat Hobbs, N.M. recently. They're in the running in that district, which has Plainview in it," Hale said.

Levelland may be Pampa's toughest test yet. The Lobos have an 18-3 record and three starters return from last season's 21-12 club.

"We're playing pretty well so far. We've had some young kids who have come through for us. We're about like we've been the last five years, not very big, but fairly quick. You might say we're similar to Pampa," said Lobos' coach Dan Harris.

Levi Hayes at 6-2 is Levelland's tallest player. Todd Jones, a 5-10 guard, averages 17.0 ppg to lead the team in scoring.

Levelland is ranked No. 14 in the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll, compared to Pampa's No. 9 ranking.

"I don't pay any attention to the polls. I'm too busy to worry about it. We're in a monster district with Plainview and Estacado. A lot of teams have good records here," Harris said.

Tennathon set at Youth Center

A 40-hour "tennathon" is scheduled for the weekend of the 14th at the Pampa Youth and Community Center. In an effort to raise money for the Pampa High School tennis team and the Crisis Pregnancy Center, local tennis players Trent and Torey Sellers will take on doubles partners for the entire two-day period.

The tennis marathon, which is set to begin at 6 a.m. and end at 10 p.m. Saturday, will also include a fast-serve competition and feature prizes for the winner and the longest-playing individuals.

The brothers will play on opposite sides of the net for the full 40 hours while participants, who have solicited pledges, fill in the doubles spots throughout the weekend.

Trent Sellers competed in a tennis marathon a few years ago, which ended up going into the Guinness Book of World Records. Sellers said that he has no intention of breaking that record next weekend. His motive is solely to raise money.

"It should raise a good couple of thousand," he said. "This is just a fun little community thing to do."

Sellers said there are still slots available for participating in both the tennathon and fast-serve competition, and he can be reached at 665-9384 for more information.

Skater attacked

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — First Monica Seles, now Nancy Kerrigan.

For the second time in eight months a major athlete was attacked in the arena in which she performs.

Kerrigan, the 1993 U.S. figure skating champion and 1992 Olympic bronze medalist, was beaten after practice Thursday by a man who hit her on the right leg with a club or metal bar, then escaped.

The blow severely bruised her knee and bruised her quadriceps tendon, an injury that could impede her jumping and landing ability.

"I'm not going to lose faith in anybody or anything like that," Kerrigan told ABC-TV from her hotel. "It was one bad guy. I'm sure there's others and this kind of thing has happened before in other sports, but not everybody is like that."

"The people who were worried about me, wondering what happened, those are the people that I want to tell that I'm OK. It's not the most important thing — skating — so if I can't I'll have to deal with it. ... It could have been a lot worse."

Dr. Steven Plomaritis, who examined Kerrigan, said there was no fracture but "the discomfort could preclude her from participating at her capacity."

Kerrigan is scheduled to compete in the technical program Friday and the free skate Saturday at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships. She is one of the favorites for the gold medal at next month's Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

She skipped her practice scheduled for Thursday night but plans to practice Friday.

"She sustained quite a blow, not only physically but mentally," said Kerrigan's agent, Jerry Solomon.

Seles, who was stabbed in the back April 30 when a fanatical supporter of Steffi Graf reached from the stands during a match in Germany, still cannot compete.

Her agent, International Management Group, announced Thursday that Seles would not be ready for this month's Australian Open this month. She was No. 1 in the world at the time of the stabbing.

"I was hoping we would not have one of these Monica Seles-type attacks on athletes, so this is horrifying," U.S. Olympic Committee president LeRoy Walker said by telephone from his Durham, N.C. home.

"We are very concerned about it."

He said the situation — including the need for security at practice sessions — would be discussed at a USOC executive board meeting in Durham next week.

Kerrigan was attacked as she paused after practice to speak with Dana Scarton, a reporter with the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. While they were talking, the man ran up to Kerrigan and struck her. Scarton said the instrument could have been a wooden club or crowbar.

Packers ready for another shot at Lions

By The Associated Press

Redemption is a big word around Green Bay this week as the Packers prepare for Saturday's first-round playoff game against Detroit.

After four interceptions and a fumble in a 30-20 loss to Detroit last Sunday — a loss that cost Green Bay the NFC Central Division championship and home-field advantage, setting up Saturday's rematch in the Pontiac Silverdome — the Packers say they are ready for another shot at the Lions.

"I think the good thing about playing that game (last Sunday) was we got another chance at them for redemption. But I think I learned a lot from that game," said Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre, who threw the interceptions and wound up leading the NFL during the regular season with 24 pick-offs.

"Brett tries to do so much. He takes so much on his shoulders," said Green Bay coach Mike Holmgren. "But he's got to let other people help. He made some bad decisions in the last game. He knows that."

Favre also threw 19 touchdown passes, third in the NFC, this season, and is counting on bouncing back on Saturday.

On the other hand, the Lions (10-6) figure what worked last week probably won't work again. So they're planning some new twists to their overall defense.

"That's what you do with any good quarterback," Lions' linebacker Pat Swilling said. "You have to change looks, make him work hard to beat you."

This will be the third meeting this season between these two longtime rivals. On Nov. 11, in Milwaukee, the Packers (9-7) ended a four-game Detroit winning streak with a 26-17 victory.

In that game, Favre completed 24-of-33 for 259 yards. But he also threw two interceptions.

Playoff preview

Barry Sanders, who finished with 1,115 yards rushing despite not playing since suffering a knee injury on Thanksgiving Day, might see action for the Lions, who are returning to the playoffs for the first time since 1991. It will be the first playoff game for Green Bay since 1982.

The Packers and Lions have met 127 times since 1930. But this will be the first time they've ever met in postseason play.

In an AFC playoff game Saturday, the wild-card Pittsburgh Steelers play at the West champion Kansas City Chiefs.

Sunday's games will have the Minnesota Vikings at the New York Giants in the NFC and the Denver Broncos at the Los Angeles Raiders in the AFC. All four are wild-card teams.

Drawing byes this weekend will be East champion Buffalo and Central champion Houston in the AFC and East champion Dallas and West champion San Francisco in the NFC.

Steelers at Chiefs

The Steelers (9-7) will be seeking their seventh straight victory at Arrowhead Stadium when they take on the Chiefs (11-5).

Of course, the Steelers have not played in Kansas City against Joe Montana, the AFC's second-rated quarterback this season — his first with the Chiefs — who has the third highest playoff rating for a quarterback in NFL history.

Montana will be facing a Pittsburgh club that depends on a defense that ranks first overall in the AFC with an average per-game yield of 283.2 yards and third in the AFC against the rush with an 85.5-yard average. A key member of that defense is cornerback Ron Woodson, who had eight interceptions this season and who returned a punt 80 yards for a touchdown in the Steelers' 27-3 win at Kansas City in 1992.

The Chiefs, 7-1 at Arrowhead this season, last beat the Steelers in Kansas City in 1971.

Vikings at Giants

The Giants, coming off two straight season-ending losses, including a 16-13 overtime defeat Sunday by Dallas that cost New York the NFC East title and home-field advantage, will try to bounce back against the Vikings.

Both low-scoring clubs are hoping their veteran quarterbacks take charge.

Jim McMahon, 8-3 as a starter this year for the Vikings (9-7), won the Super Bowl with the Chicago Bears in 1985. In one of the playoff games enroute to that title, McMahon led the Bears past the Giants 21-0. Giants quarterback Phil Simms guided New York to victory in the 1987 Super Bowl.

Simms figures to have more help than McMahon because the Giants' running game, led by Rodney Hampton, is the best in the NFL with a per-game average of 138.1 yards.

Broncos at Raiders

It's another rematch of a game last Sunday, when the Raiders (10-6) rallied from a 30-13 deficit in the regular-season finale to beat the Broncos 33-30 in overtime at Los Angeles. They also beat the Broncos earlier in the season.

The Broncos (9-7) will be counting on John Elway, the AFC's top-rated passer, to keep them from being the 14th NFL team to be swept in three games in a single regular season-playoff year. Last week, Elway passed for 361 yards, the third highest total of his career.

Denver's defense certainly knows about the Raiders' passing combination of Jeff Hostetler to Tim Brown. They connected 11 times for 173 yards and two touchdowns last week.

Rangers sign Howell to one-year contract

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Rangers have signed free-agent pitcher Jay Howell to a one-year contract for the 1994 season.

The Rangers did not disclose further terms.

Howell, a 38-year-old righthander, pitched for the Atlanta Braves in 1993, compiling a 3-3 record with a 2.31 ERA in 54 games, his most appearances in a season since 1989.

He allowed just one run in 22 innings over his last 20 appearances in the regular season.

Howell began his career in Cincinnati in 1980. He has a major league career record of 54-52 with a 3.23 ERA and 153 saves in 488 career appearances with Cincinnati, the Chicago Cubs, the New York Yankees, Oakland, Los Angeles and Atlanta.

He earned 16 or more saves in seven consecutive seasons from 1985-91 with a career-high 29 in 1985.

Rockets' Maxwell goes into hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets Guard Vernon Maxwell was being treated at a Houston hospital today after complaining of heart palpitations, team officials said.

Maxwell, 28, was admitted to Houston's Methodist Hospital Thursday night and was listed in stable condition, team President Todd Leiweke said.

The six-year NBA veteran was undergoing additional tests today.

Leiweke said as soon as the results of those tests were known, the team would release a statement.

Hospital spokeswoman Sharon Thornton confirmed that Maxwell was a patient but refused, at his request, to release information about the Gainesville, Fla., native.

Although Maxwell has slumped recently, he has been instrumental in Houston's best start in the team's history.

The Rockets climbed to a 26-4 record with Wednesday's 114-102 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

Maxwell, the team's third-leading scorer, is averaging 13.9 points, 5.2 assists and three rebounds per game.

He's Houston's assists leader and one of the top 3-point shooters in the league, hitting 53 of 171 attempts.

Maxwell has started and played in every game so far this season but had hinted about sitting out Saturday's game against the Philadelphia 76ers.

"Rudy had that look in his eye like I should sit out," Maxwell said in today's Houston Chronicle. "I've been having problems doing anything on the court. I've been stinking up the gym."

Texas Tech running back Byron "Bam" Morris announced Thursday during a news conference that he would pass up his final year of college eligibility to make himself available for the draft. (AP photo)

Tech's Morris to turn pro

LUBBOCK (AP) — With a word of thanks but regret to Texas Tech, junior tailback Byron "Bam" Morris made himself available for the NFL draft.

Morris' announcement Thursday wasn't unexpected.

He was the nation's leading scorer and ranked second nationally in rushing last season with 298 carries for 1,752 yards and 22 touchdowns. He broke Earl Campbell's single-season Southwest Conference rushing record of 1,744 yards, set in 1977, and won the Doak Walker Award honoring the nation's best running back.

"If you can do that in one season and accomplish all that, then I don't think there's any other thing you have to prove," he said. "I'm definitely ready."

The 6-foot-2, 240-pound Morris said he had not talked to any teams and had no preference where he played.

"Certainly this is Bam's decision and something he needs to do, and boy, we concur 100 percent," coach Spike Dykes said. "This business is for him."

Dykes readily acknowledged the void created in the Red Raider offense by Morris skipping his senior year.

Morris said he decided Monday after talking with Dykes, his parents and his brother, former Chicago Bear Ron Morris.

"My brother talked to some people and they said some good things," he said.

Morris said he would spend the next month getting in better shape and trimming his 4.6-second time in the 40-yard dash.

Harvesters schedule game with Childress

The Pampa Harvesters have added another game to their basketball schedule before the district season starts.

The Harvesters play Childress at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Clarendon Junior College gym in Clarendon. Admission will be 1 dollar for students and two dollars for adults. Only the varsity game will be played.

It will be the final non-district game of the season for the Harvesters, who open 1-4A play next Friday night at Dumas.

"Childress has a good outfit with some big players. It ought to be a good game," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale.

Childress, which has 14-5 record, lost to Canyon, 65-50, Tuesday night. The Bobcats are led by David Seal, a 6-8 junior.

West Virginia slips by 7th-ranked Temple

By The Associated Press

It doesn't happen very often. Twelve times in 11-plus seasons to be precise, Temple lost a home game.

The seventh-ranked Owls were beaten by West Virginia 49-47 Thursday night on a rebound basket by Pervires Greene with two seconds to play. Since John Chaney took over as coach at Temple for the 1982-83 season, the Owls have a record of 96-12 at McGonigle Hall.

"We'll take it very gladly, no matter how it looked," West Virginia coach Gale Catlett said. "We're a senior ball club, so we've been through these games a lot before. When you have that experience, you generally know what to do when you have to. There was a lot of pressure on this game. They're highly ranked and we had a seven-game win streak. I think both teams were feeling that."

If there was a lot of pressure, it showed in the shooting. The Mountaineers (8-1, 2-0 Atlantic 10) were the better team at 37.7 percent. Temple (6-2, 1-1) was at 28.8. They also combined for 32 turnovers.

"There's going to be more like that. I've been saying this. I've said all along that we have problems with players inside," Chaney said. "If Ricky (Brunson) or Eddie (Jones) have off nights, we're in trouble."

College basketball roundup

The victory was the Mountaineers' eighth straight since a season-opening loss to Virginia Tech.

In other games involving ranked teams Thursday night, it was: No. 4 Kentucky 84, Notre Dame 59; No. 6 UCLA 89, Oregon 73; No. 11 Louisville 80, South Florida 56; No. 15 Wisconsin 71, Penn State 56; No. 23 George Washington 89, Rutgers 69; and No. 24 California 70, Washington State 54.

Brunson, who finished with 14 points, tied the score 47-47 with a 3-pointer with 15 seconds left. West Virginia's Ricky Robinson rebounded an aerial 3-point attempt, but was too strong with the follow. Greene, who scored 13 points, then put in the game-winning basket.

Aaron McKie had 17 points to lead Temple, which was trying to become the seventh Division I team to win 1,400 games. He was 6-for-18 from the field, matching Jones' 4-for-12 effort and much better than Brunson's 4-for-20, including 1-for-7 from 3-point range.

"We can't get going if the big guys don't do some scoring," Chaney said. "I think we'll lose three or four more in the conference."

No. 4 Kentucky 84, Notre Dame 59

The Wildcats (11-1) won their ninth straight game and tied a school mark with their 30th consecutive victory at Rupp Arena. Kentucky, led by Tony Delk's 16 points, forced a season-high 34 turnovers and led by 25 points five minutes into the second half. The Fighting Irish (4-6) were led by Monty Williams with 19 points.

No. 6 UCLA 89, Oregon 73

Ed O'Bannon and Tyus Edney had 15 points each as the Bruins (8-0, 1-0 Pac-10) won their eighth straight over the Ducks and 26th in 29 meetings at Pauley Pavilion. Oregon (4-6, 0-1) scored the first two points of the second half to get within eight points, but were never closer than the way. Freshman guard Kenya Wilkins led Oregon with 17 points.

No. 11 Louisville 80, South Florida 56

The Cardinals (10-1 1-0 Metro) won their 10th straight behind a balanced scoring attack led by Greg Minor's 19 points. Louisville's Clifford Rozier, who scored 14 points and had nine rebounds, left the game with 4:42 left with a right thigh bruise. Jesse Salters led the visiting Bulls (7-4, 0-1) with 11 points.

No. 15 Wisconsin 71, Penn St. 56

The Badgers (10-0, 1-0 Big Ten) are off to their best start since 1911-12, when they won 15 in a row. Michael Finley had 23 points and visiting Wisconsin pulled away throughout the second half, leading by as much as 20. Michael Jennings led the Nittany Lions (7-3, 0-1) with 15 points and leading scorer John Amaechi was held to four points.

No. 23 George Washington 89, Rutgers 69

Yinka Dare had 20 points and 13 rebounds as the Colonials (7-3, 1-1 Atlantic 10) cruised at home to break a two-game losing streak. George Washington led by at least 17 points over the final 15 minutes. Waliyy Dixon paced the Scarlet Knights (3-6, 0-2) with 14 points.

No. 24 California 70, Washington St. 54

Lamond Murray had a career-high 36 points, the most for a Cal player since Mark McNamara had that many against UCLA in 1982. Murray was 10-for-12 from the field, including 4-for-4 on 3-pointers. Jason Kidd added 13 points, eight assists and five steals for the Golden Bears (8-2, 1-0 Pac-10), who won their sixth straight. The visiting Cougars (10-3, 0-1), led by Tony Harris' 14 points, were held to a season-low in scoring.

Baseball owners one vote short of passing revenue proposal

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Baseball owners who want increased revenue sharing convinced two more teams to join their group but still are one vote short of passing a proposal.

Management negotiator Richard Ravitch got a 20-8 vote Thursday for his plans, but needs a three-vote margin from the 28 teams.

The Florida Marlins and Texas Rangers, among the group of 10 teams that thwarted Ravitch last August, switched sides. But an eight-club bloc held together in opposition: Baltimore, Boston, Colorado, Los Angeles, the New York Mets, the New York Yankees, St. Louis and Toronto.

An alternative proposal by large-market clubs received 11 votes: the eight voting against Ravitch's plan plus the Marlins, Rangers and Detroit Tigers. The debate will continue when owners reconvene at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., from Jan. 17-19.

"I'd be a liar if I said I hadn't hoped we'd come to a conclusion today," Ravitch said. "We've been at it a long time and it would be nice if we got on to the main event of negotiating with the union."

Even if a plan is passed, it won't be implemented unless the Major League Baseball Players Association agrees to a salary cap. That is unlikely without a work stoppage.

"There will not be revenue sharing without a salary cap," said Milwaukee Brewers president Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council.

"We all understand this is the first part of the equation, and the second will be a more difficult one," John Harrington of the Boston Red Sox said that while Ravitch's plan considered only revenue from broadcasting and ticket receipts, the large-market alternative took into account all money, including revenue from parking, concessions, luxury suites and stadium advertising.

"The large-market clubs have a particular position, and we put forth a plan today that was very significant," Harrington said. "It would literally transfer triple the amount of money that is being transferred today among clubs. In light of that, I would say it was a very productive day. Although it received only 11 votes, we're very optimistic that it will garner more and more support before Fort Lauderdale."

While teams divided into two sides when they discussed revenue sharing at Kohler, Wis., last Aug. 10-11, they split into three this time.

The eight voting against Ravitch were in the large-revenue bloc, while Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Minnesota, Montreal, Pittsburgh, San Diego and Seattle formed the small-revenue caucus. The other 13 clubs were in the middle.

NL home teams now give only 72 cents from each turnstile ticket over $1 to the visiting team, and AL home teams give 20 percent of each ticket to the visiting team and 3 percent to the league. AL teams also equally divide 20 percent of their cable TV money. For NL games on cable, home teams pay opponents 25 percent of the cable revenue from that game.

Five teams on superstitions — Atlanta, the Mets, the Yankees, the Chicago Cubs and the Chicago White Sox — also make payments to the central fund that are split equally among all the clubs.

When owners meet at Fort Lauderdale, they also intend to vote for a new commissioner. U.S. Olympic Committee executive director Harvey Schiller and Northwestern University president Arnold Weber are considered the front-runners, and the executive council will discuss the search when it meets on Jan. 17.

Selig, who has been in charge of baseball since Fay Vincent's forced resignation on Sept. 7, 1992, repeated he has no intention of becoming commissioner.

"We're working with less than five," said Atlanta Braves chairman Bill Bartholomay, the search committee head. "We will have a recommendation of one or more at the Jan. 17 meeting."

Southwest Conference winter roundup

DALLAS (AP) — A weekly round-up of Southwest Conference sports outside the realms of football and men's basketball.

BAYLOR — It's just under one month before the Bears take to the diamond for a Feb. 1 opener against always-tough Texas Wesleyan in baseball. Soph 1B-OF Traynor Reitmeyer of Houston hopes to keep moving up as a regular in the infield while Texarkana pitcher Brent Bearden (5-2 in 1993) has a chance to be one of the SWC's most outstanding relief pitchers.

HOUSTON — What has become an almost annual trek for the Cougars' golf team occurs on Feb. 10-12 as UH travels to the International Collegiate Invitational at Monterrey, Mexico. Junior Eric Bogar of Houston notched a team-best round of 65 in fall tournaments to post a 73.5 average while Sugar Land's Brad Montgomery posted a 76.9 average mark in autumn matches.

RICE — Getting set for the brunt of their 1994 campaigns, the Owls' swimming and diving teams are relying on some experienced individuals. Standout freshman Ginny Farmer of San Luis Obispo, Calif., owns the SWC's ninth-fastest clocking in the 200-yard freestyle at 1:53.19 while Plano's Kurt Wagner continues to excel as a senior in the 50 and 100 freestyle events.

SMU — Under first-year head coach Cathy Marino, the Lady Mustangs are preparing for their Feb. 21-22 opener in the Oklahoma State Guadalajara (Mexico) Invitational. Junior Kori Johns of Austin is coming off a knee injury and should be an impact player while freshman transfer Amber Paulos of Arlington seeks to hone some of her solid junior skills for the 1994 squad.

TEXAS — After a solid cross-country campaign and SWC men's title in that sport the Longhorns' indoor track contingent seeks its third consecutive SWC Indoor crown. Seniors Danny Castro of San Antonio and Randal Grizzle of Buda are two probable scorers in the 5,000 meters while football wideout-track hurdler Justin McLemore of Waxahachie is sound.

TEXAS A&M — Coach Ted Nelson is about to take the wraps off the 1993 indoor Aggies' track and field teams. High jumper Lee Pool of Duncanville is a potential 7-0 competitor while 1992 SWC Outdoor 400-meter hurdles winner Richard Murphy of Longview has another chance at NCAA Indoor qualification. The women's team must replace All-America heptathlete Kalleen Madden of Yoakum.

TCU — The Lady Horned Frogs' basketball team continues to show improvement in the defensive areas and hopes to remain competitive in SWC games behind the likes of Houston's Donna Krueger. Krueger tallied 16 points in a recent contest against Wyoming in the Cowgirl Invitational while Mansfield's Stephani Gray is ninth in SWC steals per game at 2.0.

TEXAS TECH — After the most successful season (43-15) in school history, the Red Raiders' baseball team is set to move to a higher level if the pitching staff can develop quickly. SWC Freshman of the Year Clint Bryant (.366) of Lubbock joins senior Saul Bustos (team-leading 12 home runs) of Midland as contact hitters for coach Larry Hays' 1994 edition.

SWC DATES

- Jan. 8-13, NCAA Convention, San Antonio
- Jan. 12, SWC Volleyball Coaches Meeting, Dallas
- Feb. 2, National Football Letter of Intent Initial Signing Day.

Trail Blazers rally past Hornets

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers came to town with their backcourt tandem of Clyde Drexler and Terry Porter sidelined with sprained ankles.

But the playing field — or the court in this case — was leveled by the absence of Hornets stars Larry Johnson, out with a sore back, and Alonzo Mourning, out with a sprained ankle.

In a matchup of the remaining healthy players, Portland came back from a 21-point deficit to beat Charlotte 116-110 Thursday night. In other NBA games, New York defeated Milwaukee 92-86 and Golden State beat San Antonio 102-98.

The Hornets entered the game with a 12-2 record at Charlotte Coliseum, but they were playing as team that had never lost there — and still hasn't.

"They came out with a lot of confidence and were ready to put us away," Portland forward Tracy Murray said. "But we had a lot of fight left in us."

Down by 20 at the half, Trail Blazers coach Rick Adelman screamed at his team in the locker room.

"Rick hit it to us hard at halftime," Hornets guard Eddie Johnson, who said Portland forward Cliff Robinson, who got the message. He scored 21 of his 29 points in the second half. "We came out the second half a changed team. We knew they were going to shoot it up tonight, so if the percentages fell, we had a chance to come back."

"It was just like we were freezing up in the first half," Adelman said. "We were very impatient. We simply weren't playing as a team. We reversed that process in the second half."

Portland outscored Charlotte 35-18 in the third period, with Robinson scoring 12 points, to take control of the game.

"We've given up 83 points in the third quarter of the last two games (including 48 against Atlanta on Tuesday night)," Charlotte coach Allan Bristow said. "Some teams have trouble scoring 83 points in a game."

The Hornets did make one final 7-1 run after the Trail Blazers took a 15-point lead on a jumper by Jaren Jackson with 2:48 left to play. Charlotte closed to 114-110 on Hersey Hawkins' 3-pointer with 32 seconds to play.

Two free throws by Rod Strickland, who finished with 25 for the Blazers, ended the scoring.

"In this league, no lead is safe," said "Rick hit it to us hard at halftime," Hornets guard Eddie Johnson, who scored 31 points.

Surgeon general wants adults to stop smoking around kids

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents who smoke make children "innocent victims" of their addiction, Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders said Thursday. She urged adults to quit smoking inside their homes and cars.

Elders joined ear, nose and throat doctors in launching a new campaign to dramatize the hazards of secondhand smoke and get smoking banned in and around day care centers and schools.

Nine million children breathe secondhand smoke regularly, and at least half of all kids under 5 live in a home with at least one adult smoker, Elders and others told a news conference.

"Hundreds of thousands of children every year will suffer acute attacks of asthma ... brought on by secondhand smoke," said Dr. David R. Nielsen of Phoenix, a leader of the American Academy of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery campaign.

And tens of thousands of infants under 18 months are hospitalized each year with bronchitis and pneumonias "that probably could have been prevented without this exposure," said Nielsen.

The campaign was launched at a public elementary school, where children paraded in with Stop Smoking signs.

"People simply are unaware of the dangers to which they are exposing their children," said Joan Lunden, the host of "Good Morning America" and spokesperson for the campaign.

"Parents don't hesitate to keep their children out of an asbestos-filled school ... and yet they will still allow smoking in elementary schools today, and in day care centers," said Lunden, daughter of a cancer surgeon.

"Secondhand smoke affects ... children for their entire lives. As adults they're twice as likely to develop lung cancer if their parents smoke," said Elders.

She said 750,000 young children are exposed to smoke in day care centers, and 83 percent of schools "still allow smoking some place on the premises."

"We as adults have a choice. But our children have no choice. So we need to get secondhand smoke out of our schools, out of our restaurants, out of our cars as parents, out of our homes ...," said Elders. "Your children are innocent victims of your addiction."

Several children added their voices to the chorus of smoking critics at Stevens Elementary School, including 5-year-old Wesley Dorfman, a kindergartener badgering his mother to quit.

"This has really gotten to me," said Shawn Rubbin, 34, an art director and pack-a-day smoker. "Something's trying to tell me something in a big way. I need to seriously, seriously quit."

Wesley had long complained that "the smoke stinks and everything else," his mother said, but lately he's begun bringing home "specific information about what it's doing to him — or what it could do to him."

"It is doing something to me. It's making me sick. I want no one smoking around me, Mommy," Wesley chimed in. "Tell my Dad that you'll quit smoking."

"I'm going to tell him," promised Rubbin.

Lull in fighting nurtures teen banditry in Somalia

By NEJLA SAMMAKIA
Associated Press Writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — They hire out stolen cranes and cars to foreigners, steal guns and rent them to people who need protection from other thieves.

Teenage gunmen are making a living during a lull in clan fighting by ambushing Somalis and foreigners alike, stealing sunglasses, cameras, cars and pickup trucks. They even loot warehouses.

Many people believe the stealing will not stop for years.

"It will take us very long to change the young militiamen, bandits," said Yusef Mohamed, a former law professor. "They have no education, no jobs. It will take more than peace."

In early December, the United Nations sponsored a meeting in Ethiopia of Somali faction leaders and international aid groups on how to establish a strong police force and create employment for the young.

The plan is for 10,000 national police who would be trained by experts from Egypt, France, Germany and Italy. Mogadishu now has 3,000 policemen, mostly from the old force, who have only light rifles that are no match for the automatic weapons and other heavy arms used by the thieves.

"We want to rehabilitate the militiamen, to get the big weapons out and to move the militia into more productive areas — jobs, training," said U.N. special envoy Jonathan Howe, a retired U.S. Navy admiral. "We want to see young people in positions other than shooting guns."

For now, young warriors are concentrating on loot.

In December, thieves made off with electronic equipment and telephones from a warehouse of the U.S. construction company Brown and Root. A teenager grabbed a camera from a Belgian peacekeeper and others stole ammunition from American troops.

There are almost daily attempts by young Somalis to enter one or another of the American bases in Mogadishu, and officials believe the aim is robbery.

Computers, medicines, radios, electric generators and other stolen goods are sold openly at Mogadishu markets.

"The bandits steal cars from United Nations warehouses, they paint them and rent them back to people at the U.N. or to foreign reporters," said Ali Giro, chief of the Somali Central Investigation Department.

"We know the vehicles. We can point to them. But the robbers are very well armed, better than our detectives."

Guns stolen from international peacekeepers or local guards sometimes end up in the hands of Somalis hired by foreign journalists and aid workers to provide protection from bandits.

Giro said the looters rent out stolen vehicles for about $3,000 a month.

At Mogadishu's port, the United Nations unloads food from cargo ships with cranes hired at $50 an hour from Somalis who stole them during the civil war in 1991.

"It's very difficult for the U.N. to arrest anyone," said Keshav Jadhav, chief engineer for the Mogadishu Port Authority. "There's not enough proof. Even the port emblem can be removed."

The looting began during the civil war that brought anarchy to Somalia and combined with drought to create widespread famine. Nearly every building in Mogadishu is in some degree of ruin. Most have been stripped of electric sockets, light and plumbing, window panes and door frames.

Nor is banditry exclusive to the militiamen.

"Sometimes they are not from a specific clan or faction," Giro said. "Most of them function on their own. The faction leaders don't allow banditry."

Faction leader Mohamed Farrah Aidid, who controls southern Mogadishu with the city's most heavily armed militiamen, has said he cannot control all the men in his clan. Northern Mogadishu, held by his rival, Ali Mahdi Mohamed, also has its share of crime.

"They fought the previous government, now they have taken up arms because of a lack of work," said Leonardo Vincenzo, an Italian hotel manager who is devising a plan to trade jobs for arms. "The leading gunmen have succeeded in recruiting other young people."

He envisions jobs projects like cleaning streets, building a formal cemetery and reconstructing wrecked buildings. But that will require substantial outside financial help, which is not likely without peace.

Unemployed Somali youths loiter at a Mogadishu square, many making a living by stealing sunglasses, cameras, cars and pickup trucks. (AP photo)

Murder victim's widow charged with sex assault on teen suspect

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

LEVELLAND (AP) — The latest tangle in a Texas Panhandle murder web prompted the label "reverse Joey Buttafuoco" from a defense attorney Thursday.

Two boys — ages 13 and 14 — stand accused of fatally shooting auto parts manager Jackie Condren on Sept. 19.

Now Condren's widow has been indicted on charges she has had sex for at least two years with the older boy.

Johnell Condren, 40, surrendered Thursday at Hockley County Jail and was released on $3,000 bond. She was indicted Wednesday on two counts of aggravated sexual assault with a child under age 14.

"What I've been claiming all along is that my client is a victim," said Ray Lopez, attorney for the 14-year-old, whose trial starts Jan. 17.

"This woman, and to some degree her husband, caused this problem," said Pat Metzke, who represents the younger boy. His trial date has not been set.

The Associated Press could not reach Mrs. Condren for comment. Her attorney, Sam Faddoul of Lubbock, declined to comment.

District Attorney Gary Goff said the sex allegations surfaced when police started investigating who shot the 54-year-old Condren in his home.

The neighborhood boys were arrested days after the murder, the first since August 1991 in this town about 25 miles west of Lubbock.

Goff has said the Condrens weren't living together at the time he was killed.

Metzke called the case "reverse Joey Buttafuoco" after the Long Island, N.Y., man sent to prison for the statutory rape of 16-year-old Amy Fisher. Fisher claimed she shot Buttafuoco's wife at his urging.

Metzke said the older Levelland boy was "confused, not by his own choosing. ... He believed he was freeing his girl."

Statements from several boys corroborate the boy's claim to police that he had sexual relations for years with Mrs. Condren, the attorneys said.

Lopez said his client says Condren himself encouraged the sex. And the boy feared Condren's threats, he said.

"We feel that these people created a monster," Lopez said.

The 14-year-old suspect, in custody in Lubbock, accumulated a lengthy record of juvenile crimes and served a nine-month stint at the Texas Youth Commission.

The 13-year-old suspect, released to his family in Levelland, never ran into trouble with police before the murder, Metzke said.

Both attorneys say the older boy has been blamed as the trigger man. The murder weapon belonged to the 14-year-old's father, Lopez said.

The district attorney has said Wednesday's indictment of Mrs. Condren won't stop his murder prosecution.

But Lopez said he plans to bring out the sex allegations — and call Mrs. Condren as a witness — because the boy suffered psychological damage. He made no bones about his reaction to Mrs. Condren's charges: "We're not disappointed."

Grand jury re-indicts Hutchison

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison was re-indicted Thursday on an official misconduct charge that alleges she misused state employees and computer equipment and covered up evidence when she was state Treasurer.

The indictment by the Travis County grand jury followed a judge's ruling on Dec. 28 that four of five charges in previous indictments were too vague for Hutchison to defend against.

Visiting Judge John Onion Jr. gave prosecutors 10 days to try and fix the faulty indictments. Travis County First Assistant District Attorney Steve McCleery said the remaining charges either would be amended by prosecutors or returned to the grand jury, which could issue new indictments on those counts.

On Thursday, the grand jury handed up a re-indictment on a felony official misconduct charge carrying a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

David Beckwith, a spokesman for Hutchison, said: "The prosecutor's difficulty in obtaining indictments that pass muster is not a technical matter of finding the right wording, as he claims. His problem is that no crime has been committed."

The re-indictment provides more detail of the prosecutors' allegations against Hutchison.

It accuses Hutchison of misusing treasury employees and computers for personal and political purpose and then having altered the computer archive records.

It says that the computer files and directories of 10 former top-level Treasury employees "were intentionally omitted."

Hutchison, a Republican, has denied any wrongdoing. She says the charges against her a Democratic-driven plot to hinder her re-election chances. She is seeking election this year to a full, six-year term.

"At some point, the public should demand an end to this open-ended, taxpayer-funded, political persecution," Beckwith said.

The district attorney's office has denied that politics has played a part in the investigation.

Hutchison was state treasurer from 1991 through June 1993, when she won a special election to the Senate.

She was originally indicted in September, but those charges were dismissed after her attorneys discovered that one of the grand jurors was ineligible to serve because of a pending theft charge against him.

Another grand jury indicted her Dec. 8 on virtually the same charges. They include two felony and one misdemeanor count of official misconduct, and felony counts of tampering with physical evidence, and tampering with governmental records.
