PAMPA -- State Senator Teel Bivins will be at the opening of the Gray County Republican headquarters at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in Suite 110 of the Hughes Building, according to spokesman Carolyn Stroud

SAN ANTONIO (AP) -- A Branch Davidian who lived at David Koresh's compound when a federal raid quickly became a bloody shootout is set to testify early this week in the murder trial of 11 Koresh followers, lawyers say.

Victorine Hollingsworth, 59, of England was classified as a material witness in the case. She is one of several Branch Davidians who are expected to be called as prosecution witnesses.

For nearly three weeks, jurors have listened to law officers describe the carnage of the Feb. 28, 1993, shootout that erupted at the Koresh compound near Waco after a failed raid.

Four agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were killed and at least 16 wounded in the shootout. Six Branch Davidians are believed to have been killed.

The gun battle led to a 51-day standoff that ended April 19 when fire destroyed the Davidian compound. Koresh and about 80 followers died, some from gunshot.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -- Five people underwent long-distance eye examinations over the weekend in one of the first tests of a NASA satellite deployed by the space shuttle Discovery last year.

Six Houston medical specialists tried out the $363 million Advanced Communications Technology Satellite on Saturday by examining patients in Boulder, Colo., more than a thousand miles away.

Color images of the retinas of five patients from the Fitzsimons Army Medical Center in Denver were beamed to the Johnson Space Center. Doctors spent about 45 minutes examining them.

On four of the five cases, the local medical specialists arrived at the same diagnoses as doctors in Colorado. In the fifth case, the examination was interrupted by the patient's constant blinking.

During a similar exercise last weekend, the Houston doctors were right in five of six cases.

BROWNSVILLE (AP) -- An attorney says he's working on a plea agreement for a 72-year-old folk healer accused of helping arrange a contract killing of a high school student.

Defense attorney Edmund Cyganiewicz said last week it was "very probable" that his client Maria Mercedes Martinez would plead guilty to a lesser offense and could become a witness for the prosecution.

Dora Garcia Cisneros, 56, is accused of enlisting Mrs. Martinez and three others in a conspiracy to kill Joey Fischer after the 18-year-old broke off a relationship with Mrs. Cisneros' daughter.

Fischer, an honor student at an upscale Roman Catholic high school, was gunned down in front of his Rancho Viejo home on March 3, 1993.

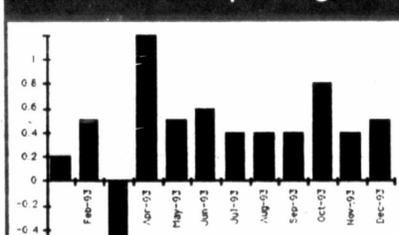

Jury selection was scheduled to begin today in the capital murder trial of Mrs. Cisneros, Mrs. Martinez and Daniel Garza, 43, who is nicknamed "El Guero" -- The Fairhaired One.

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan put the country on notice today that the central bank would "at some point" begin pushing interest rates higher in order to keep inflationary pressures from getting out of control.

While the Fed chairman left vague the timing of such a rate increase, he gave a strong indication in congressional testimony that rate hikes could come at any time.

He said the issue of when to raise interest rates would be discussed by the Fed's top policy-making committee, the Federal Open Market Committee, when it meets this Thursday and Friday.

Shooting involving U.S. convoy kills 15 Somalis

By THOMAS WAGNER
Associated Press Writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) -- U.S. Marines in a convoy carrying American diplomats opened fire near a crowded food distribution center today, and at least five Somalis were reported killed and many were wounded.

A U.S. spokesman said Marines shot after the convoy was fired on by at least two Somali gunmen. Somali witnesses said no one shot at the Americans and speculated the Marines fired because they believed several hundred Somalis in the street outside the food center were trying to block the convoy. U.S. officials said the convoy of three Humvees and two cars carrying two American diplomats was on its way to meet with representatives of clan leader Mohamed Farrah Aidid's coalition.

The U.S. spokesman, Steven McIlvaine, said the 22 Marines in the convoy reported they were fired on around 11 a.m. by at least two Somali gunmen, one from the bush and another from outside a building. He said they believed they hit

No American was injured but one Humvee was struck by two bullets and another by one shot, McIlvaine said.

The commander of Bangladeshi troops guarding a nearby traffic circle said that there could have been snipers but that his men did not see any. "The first fire that attracted our attention was American fire," said Maj. K.G. Haider.

Haider also said he felt the Marines fired "indiscriminately toward the crowd."

McIlvaine disagreed with the witnesses' accounts on nearly all points. He said the Marines know only to fire in self-defense. About 5,000 American servicemen are still in Somalia as part of the U.N. peacekeeping force, but the U.S. contingent is gradually withdrawing to meet President Clinton's order to be gone by March 31.

The U.S. mission began Dec. 9, 1992, when a U.S.-led multinational military force landed to protect relief supplies in this Horn of Africa country where 350,000 people died the previous year from famine and clan warfare. At least 32 Americans died in Somalia since the humanitarian mission began.

Moments after today's shooting, dozens of Somalis shouting "Americans, Americans! See what they did!" picked up the bodies of wounded and dead, put them on wheelbarrows and rolled them away, Somalis said at least five people died.

Journalists arriving at the scene saw the bodies of a woman and man in the street with wounds to the neck and head. The body of an elderly man lay near a blood-spattered wall. People lifted a writhing woman with head wounds off the street and placed her onto a wheelbarrow.

Snow, ice blanket area

Serious snow hits Texas Panhandle

From Staff and Wire Reports

Winter has arrived with its first big snowstorm of the year for Texas, dropping a foot of snow in the Panhandle. Portions of North Texas were expected to get up to 6 inches of snow by noon today.

Snow began falling in the Amarillo area about dawn Sunday. By late Sunday, the snow had moved into the Lubbock area. A winter storm warning was issued for the region between Lubbock and the Midland-Odessa area. New snow fell across the area Sunday night.

Pampa received six inches of snow yielding 0.69 inch of moisture. Most of the snow came Sunday morning, with only light snow continuing into the afternoon. Sunday's high was 27, and the overnight low dipped to a chilly 0 degrees.

Department of Public Safety Trooper L.B. Snider in Amarillo advised motorists to stay with their cars in case they slide off the roads in a snowstorm.

Snider said leaving the vehicle to walk for help is an open invitation to deadly hypothermia. If the car still runs, it is better to start the car occasionally to keep the chill off, he said.

DPS troopers are concerned with the next 24 to 36 hours as the thawing-refreezing cycle sets in. Snider advised drivers to be prepared when they travel with extra clothing, energy food and water. He encouraged drivers to allow more time for travel and extra space for maneuvering on snow and icy.

Snider said a number of minor accidents, including trucks jack-knifing on I-40 and vehicle slide-offs, have been reported in the recent storm, but no traffic fatalities or serious injuries were reported.

He said particularly slick spots are between McLean and Groom, where numerous slide-offs have been reported. Other slick areas are between Clarendon and Memphis, Quanah and Vernon, and in Oldham County.

The National Weather Service issued a snow advisory for much of North Texas for early today, to remain in effect throughout the day.

Accumulations were expected to be less than one inch by dawn today, with total accumulations of 2 to 4 inches later in the day.

Rain changed to moderate snow late Sunday in the Abilene, Wichita Falls and Greenville areas. The weather service said the rain would change to snow as the depth of the cold air near the surface increased and as the freezing line accelerated toward the southeast.

A winter weather advisory was issued through tonight for most of South Central Texas. The area covered by the advisory is along and north of a line from Eagle Pass to Karnes City to LaGrange to Huntsville.

Forecasters warned that the winter weather will begin as rain and sleet in the Hill Country and then change to sleet and snow.

Authorities warned that road conditions across the northwestern half of North Texas would deteriorate rapidly as roads become snow packed and hazardous. Snow and possibly blowing snow will also obscure visibility.

Traffic should be slow throughout today because of temperatures below the freezing mark today, the weather service said. But snow is expected to begin tapering off in the evening hours.

After wind chill readings near zero overnight, wind chills were expected to remain in the single digits throughout today, because of north winds averaged 10 to 20 mph.

Many women benefit by resisting an attack

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Experts advise women that it's hard to tell whether to resist a violent attacker even though a new government study finds that many who have talked or fought back think they wound up better off.

"It would be great if there was an easy answer to the question of when to resist," said Dean Kilpatrick, director of the Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at the Medical University of South Carolina. "But it's difficult because it depends on the situation, and each woman faces a unique situation with unique circumstances."

Anticipating that choice, more and more women are taking self-defense courses. Kilpatrick and other experts say a Justice Department study released Sunday helps explain why.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics found:

—61 percent of women who have resisted an attacker verbally or physically think they improved their situation.

—23 percent of women who resisted a rape, robbery or assault by arguing, reasoning or fighting back believed the self-protective behavior did not help.

—16 percent weren't sure.

The Justice study found that four out of five women took some protective action when their attacker was an intimate or other relative; just under three out of four did so when an acquaintance or stranger attacked.

The report comes as the case of Lorena Bobbitt, the Virginia woman who cut off her husband's penis, has expanded public debate over women who fight back. And Congress is working on a crime bill approved by the Senate with new rules of evidence for rape cases, funding for battered women's shelters and training for judges and police about family violence and rape.

Helen Neuborne, executive director of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund, a women's advocacy group, said "Congress must immediately pass" these provisions because the Justice report "demonstrates that violence against women in this country has reached epidemic proportions."

The data on women who have resisted an attacker comes from 400,000 individual interviews during 1987-1991 with a nationally representative sample of women in the National Crime Victimization Survey. The study estimated 2.5 million women a year were victims of violent crime.

Clinton approves visa for IRA chief

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -- With President Clinton's approval, the political leader of the outlawed Irish Republican Army is finally getting permission to come to the United States. The hope is that Gerry Adams' brief admission will contribute to peace.

Eight times in the past the Sinn Fein leader was denied a waiver to government rules banning leaders of organizations deemed to be promoters of terrorism. This time he won out after lengthy deliberations that involved Clinton and Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

The president "supports this difficult decision and believes it will help advance the cause of peace in Northern Ireland," the White House said Sunday.

Through a Sinn Fein press release Adams had declared his opposition to violence against innocent civilians. It was issued after Adams consulted with the U.S. consul-general in Belfast. He will attend a private conference on Northern Ireland Tuesday in New York and then go home.

The visa is good only for 48 hours. Adams cannot go more than 25 miles from New York while in the country nor engage in fund-raising.

BMW to buy Rover

By DIRK BEVERIDGE
AP Business Writer

LONDON (AP) -- The German automaker BMW agreed to buy the Rover car company from British Aerospace for $1.2 billion, merging two of the biggest European auto names.

The automakers said they were creating the world's largest specialist car manufacturer, producing nearly 1 million vehicles a year that will include BMW's luxury cars as well as off-road Land Rovers.

"The Rover and BMW model ranges complement each other," BMW Chairman Bernd Pischetsrieder told a news conference today. "In addition, our differing regional strengths provide a powerful synergy."

The deal cheered investors but angered Japanese car giant Honda, which owns 20 percent of Rover but had balked at increasing its stake to more than 50 percent when British Aerospace expressed a desire to sell out.

British Aerospace bought Rover five years ago from the British government on the belief that the companies' engineering capabilities would complement one another. These benefits were never as great as British Aerospace hoped.

Christopher endorses U.N. report on air strikes against Bosnian Serbs

By BARRY SCHWEID
 AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration today endorsed a report by U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali that gives the go-ahead for air strikes against Bosnian Serbs if they attack peacekeeping operations in two key Bosnia towns.

"We've endorsed that report," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said. "That could lead to the use of air power if there's not an agreement for the replacement of the Canadian troops at Srebrenica or for the opening of the airport at Tuzla."

In a letter Friday to the U.N. Security Council, Boutros-Ghali said he had instructed top U.N. officials to move "actively" with plans to open the Tuzla airport for relief supplies and to relieve Canadian units at Srebrenica with Dutch peacekeepers.

Boutros-Ghali said he would leave the final decision to launch air strikes with his special representative in the Balkans, Yasushi Akashi. The decision to use force would need the approval of the North Atlantic Council.

"Those matters will play out over time," Christopher said as the Clinton administration pursued what could be the last concerted diplomatic effort to settle the bloody conflict in Bosnia before the NATO allies implement a plan to attack the Serbs.

Still disagreeing with France's inclination to pressure the Muslim-led government into accepting settlement terms, the administration is sounding out visiting German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and British For-exchange is picking up, and we very much want to try to find a political solution to the problem and not one which is just ultimately going to be a military one or one where some kind of a solution is imposed on any of the parties."

The allied coordination is hampered by a rift between Washington and Paris that is based partly on France's commitment of 6,000 peacekeeping troops to the Balkans and the Clinton administration's refusal to deploy ground troops unless the parties voluntarily agree to a settlement.

"The American people would not understand a decision by this administration to impose large numbers of U.S. forces on the ground in a situation in which three parties continue to fight and slaughter," Michael McCurry, the State Department spokesman, said last week. "They would have no understanding of that."

The French, on the other hand, are reluctant to open fire because their troops could be attacked.

The Clinton administration has not shied away from threatening the Serbs. But it also has not made good on Clinton's campaign pledge in 1992 to lift a ban on arms to Bosnian government forces or to silence Serb artillery.

The latest marker set down by the administration was to demand the Serbs permit the opening of Tuzla airport for relief shipments and stop interfering with a redeployment of U.N. peacekeeping troops in the eastern town of Srebrenica.

Christopher said last week the administration was "quite prepared" to carry out NATO and U.N. military threats. He insisted the United States was not just "standing by."

negotiations among the warring parties are due to resume Feb. 10 in Geneva, Switzerland. Last week, Christopher described the Muslims as the victims in the 21-month war, and he has called for adjusting the terms of a settlement so they can retain a little more of the territory wrested from them by Bosnian Serbs and Croats.

"We certainly can agree with a need to redouble — or whatever multiple you might want to use — the diplomatic efforts in an effort to try to secure an end to the fighting," Christine Shelly, the State Department's deputy spokesman, said Friday.

Governors say welfare reform can't mandate jobs; raise worries on crime

By JOHN KING
 AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton promised the nation's governors help in the crime war today and asked them to help him push legislation that would add 100,000 police to the streets and put three-time violent felons behind bars for good.

Members of the National Governors Association welcomed the promise of help, but told Clinton the federal package better not require any major new state expenditures. Specifically, the governors said a prison-building provision in Senate-passed legislation improperly meddles in state affairs.

"Be involved with us here as we work through this crime bill," Clinton told members of the National Governors Association at a White House meeting.

Repeating the themes of his State of the Union address, Clinton said he wanted crime legislation pending in Congress to include the new cops, a "three times and your out" sentencing provision, a ban on most assault weapons and sharp restrictions on possession of handguns by juveniles.

As he asked for their help, however, Clinton said he realized that in the rush to get tough on crime there might be things "that sound good here but which may or may not make sense out there on the front lines against crime."

On that point, South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, the NGA chairman, told Clinton "We do not need Congress to legislate and to mandate to the states. ... We need the assistance but we can't take more expense out of Washington and more rules out of Washington because our budgets can't take it."

The session was designed to deal primarily with crime and violence, but Clinton said he was open to discussing other subjects. Governors said they also wanted to discuss welfare reform, an issue on which they share Clinton's goals but they worried about the potential price tag.

The governors' principal objection to the pending crime legislation is a Republican-sponsored $3 billion prison-building provision in the Senate-passed crime bill. It would allow states to send overflow inmates to 10 new regional prisons, but only if they adopted "truth in sentencing" laws requiring felons to serve 75 percent of their sentences.

"Don't put some foolish regulations or guidelines on us," North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said Sunday.

Clinton has not endorsed the prison provision, and the governors' position may help administration officials who would prefer to offer prison-building grants to states instead of building new federal facilities.

On welfare, Democratic and Republican governors said they were in broad agreement with Clinton's goals, including a two-year limit on benefits in exchange for expanded child care, job training and job placement programs.

But the governors said they were worried that there will not be enough private sector jobs for welfare recipients and said many states cannot afford the alternative of creating additional public sector and community service jobs.

Oklahoma Gov. David Walters, a Democrat, said governors were eager to expand programs that move welfare recipients into work but that the White House should "not make it a precondition that we guarantee a job — because we can't."

Republican Gov. Pete Wilson of California said his staff estimated it would cost $432 million the first two years and $826 million in 1998 for his state to provide jobs to welfare recipients if required to do so.

"That is not a welcome development," he said dryly.

A key architect of Clinton's welfare initiative, Mary Jo Bane, an assistant secretary of health and human services, said the administration did not have a reliable estimate of how much moving welfare recipients into jobs would cost but said she thought Wilson's estimates high.

She promised the Clinton plan would "pay for itself" through savings in welfare and other entitlement programs.

Still, she cautioned that in the rush to limit benefits that the federal and state governments be mindful that many welfare recipients are single parents.

Government moves to track illnesses of Gulf War veterans

BOSTON (AP) — Thousands of Persian Gulf War veterans hit by mystery maladies moved the government to start tracking their illnesses.

"They don't want another Agent Orange," said Larry Hennessy, diagnosed with vocal cord cancer two years after he returned from duty.

Hennessy is convinced his Gulf service caused it. "I think it was related to the oil fires and the smoke from all the vehicles and the space heaters we had in the tents," said Hennessy, 42, of Randolph, who spent seven months in an engineering unit that built roads and paved air strips. Treated with radiation, his cancer is in remission.

Hennessy was among 88 men and women who served in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait who answered the call Saturday at a veteran's hospital here, some seeking treatment, others registering for future monitoring.

Most were combat veterans. Few had been treated since returning home.

Their medical information will be forwarded to the Persian Gulf Registry, a national data bank set up to track health problems. The Boston hospital is one of 32 designated as Persian Gulf Family Support Centers.

Over the past two years, thousands of Gulf veterans have complained of a range of maladies that have defied diagnosis.

"I hear most often of chronic fatigue, bleeding gums, respiratory problems, aching joints, headaches and memory problems, stomach problems and night sweats," said Shirley Jackson, Boston coordinator of the outreach program.

"This is a way for us to know what's going on, if certain people are having clusters of symptoms," she said.

The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs has identified 11,000 veterans whose health problems may be related to exposure to toxic substances in the Persian Gulf.

"A lot of people, when they got home from the war, didn't want to deal with their medical problems. It's important for them to register even if the symptoms are subtle," said hospital spokeswoman Holly Hickson.

"Guys are macho," she said. "Sometimes they'll say, 'Sure, I have a rash, but it goes away.' We want to track people over the long term."

Daughter: Mother killed father in burning house 15 years ago

TYLER (AP) — With her mother in jail, Tammy Russell says she's finally at peace with her father's death in a burning house 15 years ago.

Mildred Russell is in the Smith County Jail, charged with murder in the death of her husband, Jack, early on Jan. 22, 1979.

The Tyler Times-Telegraph, in Sunday's editions, quoted Mildred Russell, 49, as saying she left home after her husband threw an ashtray at her. She says she returned home to find the house had burned and her husband dead.

But Tammy Russell disputed the story, telling the newspaper that her mother loaded her, her two brothers and a sister into a car and that her father died in the fire while they drove around the neighborhood.

"We rode behind the house up and down the street, about a hundred times, slowly," Ms. Russell said. "We stayed driving in that area of that house all night long. ... I told her two times that the house was on fire and she wouldn't stop. She said it was the neighbor's chimney."

She said she eventually jumped out of the car and ran to the house, leaving her mother in the car with her brothers, Michael, 7, David, 5, and her-month-old sister Christina. Ms. Russell said she didn't see her father until his body was at East Texas Medical Center.

In December last year, investigators reopened the investigation into the fatal fire, which originally was ruled an accident. Mrs. Russell was indicted Jan. 18.

The original autopsy and a second exam performed last month after Russell's body was exhumed both show smoke inhalation was the cause of death. But what may have become a key to the investigation is a wound on Russell's forehead.

In a Dec. 15 affidavit, Tyler pathologist Dr. Stephen Bolesla said he "reviewed the original autopsy report and ... the autopsy was not a thorough autopsy."

Bolesla said what was described as "an abrasion or first-degree burn to the forehead; it is instead consistent with blunt trauma to the head."

Survey: Teen smoking, drug use increasing

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After declining steadily for more than a decade, smoking and drug use by teenagers is on the rise again.

An annual survey of 51,000 high school and eighth-grade youth in more than 400 schools found that fewer teenagers now see the peril in experimenting with cocaine and other illicit drugs.

The study by University of Michigan researchers found that 9 percent of eighth graders, 19 percent of 10th graders and 26 percent of 12th graders reported using marijuana in the past year — increases of 2 to 4 percentage points from a year earlier.

Eight percent of the eighth graders, 14 percent of 10th graders and 19 percent of the seniors said they smoked cigarettes daily — up by 1 to 2 percentage points.

"With more young people smoking cigarettes and using marijuana, and with the psychological and social constraints on use declining, the stage is set for a potential resurgence of cocaine and crack use in this population," warned Lloyd Johnston, the University of Michigan researcher who directs the study.

The findings provoked an outcry from the Clinton administration.

"These findings are more than a warning signal. They are an urgent alarm we must heed at once," said Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala.

"Every new generation of young people needs to hear the same clear and unambiguous message:

Drugs are harmful. Drugs are deadly. Drugs are illegal. Drugs will destroy your life," she said in remarks prepared for a news conference with Education Secretary Richard W. Riley and Lee P. Brown, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

Shalala said she would appeal to the presidents of television networks, movie studios, record companies and sport leagues to intensify efforts to spread the anti-drug message.

Riley said the Education Department would boost spending on programs to "offer children alternatives to the deadly lure of drugs."

The University of Michigan, under contracts with the National Institute on Drug Abuse, has surveyed high school seniors annually since 1975 on their use of drugs, alcohol, and tobacco. In 1991 it began questioning eighth and 10th graders as well.

Johnston said that in the past two years, the proportion of eighth graders using marijuana has increased by half, and among the high schoolers by one-fifth or more.

"These rates are still well below the peak levels reached in the late '70s, but they clearly represent a reversal of the declines we recorded for more than a decade," he said.

Back in 1979, 60 percent of seniors had tried marijuana, compared with 35 percent of the Class of 1993.

Among other findings:
— Use of stimulants, LSD and inhalants was up from a year earlier.

— Sixty-seven percent of eighth graders, 81 percent of 10th graders and 87 percent of 12th graders have tried alcohol.

— Fourteen percent of eighth graders, 23 percent of 10th graders and 28 percent of 12th graders admitted to binge drinking (five or more drinks in a row) in the previous two weeks.

— Only 53 percent of eighth graders see a great risk in smoking a pack or more of cigarettes a day. But 70 percent of seniors saw that as a great risk.

— Only 36 percent of the eighth graders, 30 percent of the 10th graders and 22 percent of the 12th graders perceive great risk in trying marijuana once or twice.

— Black students reported the lowest rates of use for virtually all the drugs, licit or illicit.

— Thirty-one percent of the seniors said they had used an illicit drug in the last 12 months; 17 percent had used an illicit drug other than marijuana.

— Two percent of the 12th graders said they smoked marijuana daily. One percent of the 10th graders and less than one-half of 1 percent of the eighth graders did.

— Thirteen percent of the eighth graders said they had tried marijuana sometime in their lifetime; 24 percent of the 10th graders and 35 percent of the 12th graders had used it.

— The number trying cocaine was 3 percent, 4 percent and 6 percent, respectively, little changed from 1992.

— The number trying LSD was 4 percent, 6 percent and 10 percent respectively. LSD use was up 1.7 percentage points among the seniors, and little changed among the rest.

— Twenty-six percent, 48 percent and 63 percent said they had been drunk at least once.

Four co-workers found shot to death in Tennessee after Taco Bell restaurant robbed

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Last fall, Patricia Mae Price married a minister's son and moved her five children from a crime-ridden Knoxville neighborhood hoping for a better, safer life here.

On Sunday, she and three co-workers were found shot to death in a Taco Bell restaurant in what authorities call the most brutal crime in local history.

"She saw the crime rate and drugs in the big city and wanted her kids to have a better life," her father-in-law, the Rev. Hugh Price, said. "She wanted them to grow up, to not be a victim of something like what happened to her. ... She really thought it would be better in Clarksville."

Price, 28; Marsha Klopp, Angela Wyatt, and Kevin Campbell, all 22-year-old Clarksville residents, apparently were the victims of an early morning robbery, police said.

Wyatt was pregnant, and Campbell, the father of a 2-week-old girl, was expecting a promotion to assistant manager. Klopp, an assistant manager, was married and the mother of one child.

Police found the workers' gunshot-riddled bodies in the storage room and kitchen of the restaurant, located on one of the busiest intersections in this city of 76,000 about 40 miles northwest of Nashville.

The restaurant safe had been blown open, the cash register emptied and 20 or more spent shells from a shotgun and a 9mm pistol were strewn about the restaurant.

Authorities said they did not know how much money was taken.

"I've seen some terrible things in my 28 years, but nothing this brutal," Tennessee Bureau of Investigation Special Agent Taylor said. "To kill them over what appears to be a few dollars is really bad."

Taylor said at least one suspect had been questioned about the slayings and investigators planned to begin interviewing hundreds of workers at businesses in the area in search of leads.

District Attorney General John Carney said five felony murder counts would be pursued in the case. Under Tennessee law, criminal charges may be filed in the death of a fetus after 24 weeks of pregnancy. Authorities were unsure of the age of Wyatt's fetus.

"This is the worst series of homicides in Montgomery County's history," Carney said. "This community has a lot of healing to do. It's a bad, bad crime."

Police said the murders probably occurred about 2 a.m. CST, just as the workers were finishing their Saturday night shift. A manager who arrived to open the restaurant about 7 a.m. Sunday noticed the night crew's cars were still in the lot and called police.

The bodies were taken to Clarksville Memorial Hospital late Sunday for autopsies by the state medical examiner.

TBI forensic experts also were assisting in the investigation.

Taylor said investigators found no signs of a struggle and no forced entry. The front doors were locked and investigators speculated that an employee may have let the killer or killers in through a back door that opens only from the inside.

The crime is the second quadruple slaying at a Taco Bell in three years. On Feb. 26, 1991, three workers and another person were found shot to death in the cooler of an Irving, Texas, Taco Bell.

Irvine, Calif.-based Taco Bell, which has 4,500 stores worldwide, has set up counseling services for victims' relatives and co-workers in Clarksville.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The "Most Dangerous State" in America is Louisiana, according to a ranking of states based on crime statistics compiled by a Kansas publishing company.

The second most dangerous state was Maryland, followed by Texas, Illinois and Florida, according to Crime State Rankings 1994, a 459-page book published by Morgan Quinto Corp. of Lawrence. Rounding out the top 10 were California, Nevada, New York, Arizona and South Carolina.

At the opposite end of the scale, Vermont was found to be the safest of the 50 states, said Scott Morgan, president of the publishing company.

Morgan said the rankings were based on 16 factors, including overall state crime rates, juvenile crime statistics, crime clearances, police protection and expenditures and the change in crime rates over the past five years.

In all, Louisiana ranked No. 1 in two of the 16 categories — its murder rate of 17.4 per 100,000 residents, and its prisoner incarceration rate. The state had 478 people in state prisons per 100,000 residents, compared to the national average of 303 per 100,000. Louisiana was second in one category, fifth in three, seventh in one, eighth in three, 12th in two, 15th in one, and 22nd, 26th and 33rd in the other three.

"I realize that this distinction is not a flattering one for the beautiful Bayou State," Morgan said. "Certainly, you will find pockets of safe and dangerous areas in any state."

"However, when taken as a whole, the facts speak for themselves. Louisiana has the highest murder rate in the country and ranks high in violent crime and overall crime in general."

Maryland, the No. 2 "most dangerous state" according to the publication, ranked fifth in murder rate, 12.1 per 100,000 residents. Maryland also came up eighth in the prisoner incarceration category, with 380 people in state prisons per 100,000.

Morgan admitted that selecting the top 16 categories used to compile the crime rankings was subjective.

"But when you look at it, I think it's fairly telling," he said. "You can quibble about whether Louisiana is first or fourth, but it is definitely among the top states in the problem of crime."

Maine followed Vermont as the state considered safest. Next came Iowa, North Dakota, West Virginia, New Hampshire, Nebraska, South Dakota, Kentucky, Montana and Wyoming.

The book ranks the states in more than 450 categories, and Morgan said the 16 factors considered the most critical were used in determining which states are most dangerous.

Morgan said his company goes beyond the FBI's annual crime reports in compiling its statistics.

On the overall crime rate, Louisiana ranked fifth with 6,546 crimes per 100,000 residents in 1992. Florida was first, with 8,358, followed by Texas, Arizona and California. In violent crime, Florida was again leader, followed by New York, California, Maryland and Louisiana.

California, the nation's most populous state, led the nation in murders and non-negligent manslaughters in 1992 with 3,921, or 16.5 percent of the national total of 23,760. New York had 2,397, Texas 2,239, Illinois 1,322, Florida 1,208, Michigan 938 and Louisiana 747.

But although Louisiana ranked seventh in the total number of homicides, its murder rate of 17.4 per 100,000 was well above the 13.2 per 100,000 for second-place New York and 12.7 for both California and Texas.

New York had the highest robbery rate in 1992, 596.9 per 100,000 residents, with Maryland second at 429 per 100,000. Louisiana ranked eighth in this category, with 271.4 per 100,000.

Florida was the leader in aggravated assaults, 777 per 100,000, followed by New Mexico, South Carolina, Alabama and Louisiana.

The Crime State Rankings book is the latest in a series of annual reference guides which Morgan's company began publishing in 1990. The first in the series, State Rankings, compares the states in categories ranging from agriculture, transportation, government finance to social welfare.

For the last three years, the company has used statistics in that book to come up with a "most livable state" award — won twice by New Hampshire and once by Utah. The most recent livability ranking, released last April, ranked Louisiana dead last.

West Texas cities jockeying for extension route of Interstate 27

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK (AP) — From Pecos to Abilene, West Texans are lining up to tout their town as the perfect place to link Interstate 27 with I-10.

A pending study of a new north-south highway through the region is anxiously awaited by boosters who see the road as a pathway to prosperity that could spur unprecedented economic growth and smoother access to oil fields, farms and air bases.

The attitude is "not so much do we need this facility, it's where are we going to put it?" said Will Hagood, senior vice president of HDR Engineering Inc. of Dallas.

The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation contracted Hagood's firm last month to study whether a new route of some sort needs to link Lubbock with curving I-10 from El Paso to San Antonio.

Officials say the route wouldn't necessarily be an interstate extending I-27, which currently runs the 120 miles from Amarillo to Lubbock.

A new highway could simply follow existing roads in some places, officials say, or blaze a new trail.

But it's a prospective trade boost tantalizing enough to cause some jockeying among neighbors.

"The most immediate gain would be increased trade with Lubbock and Amarillo," said Charles Perry, chairman of the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance.

"Secondly, it would create a better corridor of trade with Mexico. Third, an interstate highway is an excellent economic development tool."

Midland and Odessa head the westernmost camp, which recommends a route that cuts through the two big Permian Basin cities and then heads through Crane and McCamey.

To the east, Abilene joined forces with Sweetwater and Roscoe to lure the proposed route that direction.

And in the middle, Big Spring and San Angelo are promoting a straight shot to Del Rio.

Everyone mentions the North American Free Trade Agreement as a reason to improve roads to Mexico.

"The interstate highways in this country were mostly built going east to west," Perry said. "Not only do we need to add to I-27, we need to add other north-south routes."

"With NAFTA coming on line, it's a very viable project," said Abilene Chamber of Commerce President Charlie Dromgoole. "If NAFTA had failed, it probably would have been a mute point."

A federal act in 1991 earmarked $2.9 million for what is now called the "Lubbock to IH-10 Route Study."

The engineering firm hopes to narrow down the best corridor — a strip 10-15 miles wide — by Aug. 31. A precise route wouldn't be selected until August 1995.

Factors under study include the region's topography, environmental sensitivity and population centers.

No winning ticket in Saturday's Lotto; jackpot at $8 million

By The Associated Press

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 13, 17, 20, 24, 39, 42.

In addition to the jackpot winner, there were 151 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,072.

There were 6,546 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $90.

And there were 113,872 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $8 million.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Welfare also feeding bloated bureaucracy

Occasionally, you'll see a spate of news stories about this or that private charity spending a sizable chunk on administration; and it's not uncommon for politicians or government bureaucrats to respond with calls for regulatory action supposedly to protect the public from being bilked.

Government officials would spend their time more profitably scouring their own social-welfare agencies for administrative bloat - because overhead in the public sphere exceeds that in any legitimate private charity.

Consider a recent Associated Press report: "The cost of running welfare programs is rising more than twice as fast as the number of people on the rolls, according to federal investigators who blame an overly complex and bloated bureaucracy."

According to the wire service, the feds spend up to $8 billion yearly helping states administer the three major welfare-benefits programs, and managerial costs increased by 43 percent from 1987 through 1991 - from about $3.4 billion to $4.9 billion - while the number of recipients increased on average only 18 percent, from 53.5 million to 62.5 million.

And the administration of the welfare program, of course, isn't the only bloated federal bureaucracy. With President Clinton and his wife getting ready to hit us with their version of a universal health care program, perhaps we ought to take a look at the federal agencies already involved in aspects of the nation's health. There's the Department of Health and Human Services, which seems easy enough. However, agencies shaded under its umbrella include Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration; Bureau of Health Care Delivery and Assistance; Bureau of Health Maintenance Organizations and Resources Development; Bureau of Health Professions; Centers for Disease Control; Food and Drug Administration; Health Care Financing Administration; and the National Institutes of Health, which under its umbrellas has the National Cancer Institute; National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute; National Institute of Arthritis, Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases; and the National Library of Medicine. Anyone who wants to see government health administration in action should read the best-seller And the Band Plays On about the federal bureaucratic reaction to AIDS. It's a frightening picture.

Economist Milton Friedman has pointed out for years that if you got rid of all the bureaucratic middle-folk, consolidated the various programs, and simply gave lump sums to all the nation's poor equivalent to the amount now flowing down all the "health-and-welfare" rat holes, each recipient would get a yearly dole putting him or her squarely in the middle class.

As it is, the most pampered welfare class consists of government administrators for whom federal social programs offer a first-class ticket to Gravytown.

Berry's World

"HEY - when I said there are too many guns in our society, I didn't mean YOURS!"

Making way for the politicians

The political difficulties of Boris Yeltsin reiterate the different standards by which progress is measured. Two experienced journalists recently reminded us of the experience of India soon after it wrested its way free of British colonialism. Nehru was a socialist and boldly oriented his country toward welfarism. The various international agencies looked on, and here and there demurred; one of the Marshall Plan godchildren extended credit for billions in U.S. agricultural surpluses, and Daniel Patrick Moynihan the Good, while serving as ambassador, contrived to persuade us to simply forget the indebtedness.

Meanwhile, poverty raged. But the Indians had gotten used to poverty, though every now and again, as in recent years, there is a capitalist gleam in the Indian eye, and genuine attention is given to what it is that makes for economic progress.

We are used to subsidizing welfare. To do so is a rational choice. But to expect that under such policies true economic progress can be made is self-deluding.

The primary incentives to human survival are biological. The human body cannot survive without food; and in many climates, it cannot survive without shelter. It has long since been pointed out that what makes the protracted torture of life under Fidel Castro possible is a) Cuba's climate, and b) Cuba's agricultural bounty. Russia lies in northern latitudes, and the production of food is an enterprise that absorbs the energies of a substantial proportion of its population.

The winsome notion that the state will provide a safety net does damage in only truly impoverished nations. It is one thing to talk about safety nets in Great Britain or the United States or Sweden, another to assume that a safety net can look after 147 million Russians.

It is not uncommon, in relatively impoverished societies, to find no one willing to work as a porter at an airport or as a nanny for working mothers. Two years before the fighting broke out, the published unemployment figures for Yugoslavia were 17 percent; but, again, no porters at the airports.

What Yegor Gaidar in Russia has been saying is that there is great wealth in his country but that the conversion of that wealth into economic productivity of an order that satisfies reasonable desires cannot be done without engaging in what Theodore Roosevelt used to call the strenuous life. For him it was shooting lions and tigers and charging uphill against Spanish musketeers. For the Russians, it means very hard work, frugal living, and an acceptance of only gradual progress, done through the division of labor and an increase in productivity.

The animus against the United States, everywhere remarked during the visit of President Clinton, has to do with the revolution of rising expectations brought on by American television. Such had been our anxiety to persuade the people living under communism of the relative weight of their ordeal that we succeeded in giving the impression that to live as we live, rather than to live as they did, was primarily a political decision. Overthrow communism and live like an American.

The disease is international. The political philosopher Albert Jay Nock referred frequently to the substitution of "political for economic energy as the means of acquiring wealth." The trouble, of course, is that what is created is less than a tangible increase in national output: It is an act of redistribution.

The government can take from John to give to James, but in doing so, wealth has not increased. Quite the reverse is what happens if John is discouraged from shouldering the burden that yields a surplus.

Yeltsin's general orientation has been correct, but what he faces is a political problem. Vladimir Zhirinovskiy is there to taunt him by suggesting to the Russian people that abstemiously though they lived, under communism, there was a security irreconcilable with capitalist practice.

Capitalism is a dynamic force. It is that iron face that can tell IBM in one year that it is a bloated mess, that can tell General Motors maybe it ought to quit making cars and go into lawn mowers.

Gaidar knows what it is that Russia needs. Yeltsin knows that the crystallization of economic truths does not necessarily breed a corollary crystallization of political will. And since so much emphasis has been placed on the superordinate value of democracy, the politicians are prevailing, and the economists are losing - along with the Russian people.

Drinking water for our health

If you had a cure for cancer, who's going to test it for you?

You may be a man or woman with impressive medical credentials. You may have discovered that dandelion greens cure cancer, but for a pharmaceutical company, there is no money in dandelion greens, and for you to conduct tests adequate to satisfy the Food and Drug Administration would cost millions.

Paul Harvey News has allowed itself sometimes to encourage informal public testing of some harmless home remedy - gin-soaked raisins for arthritis, supplemental zinc for macular degeneration. It's not because I have any wish to become a "medicine man" but rather because years of observation have taught me that the emerging science of nutrition deserves to be dignified.

I don't know if Dr. Fereydoon Batmanghelidj's idea is worth anything or not. This native of Iran, with a medical education in Great Britain, spent years trying to convince medical associations and medical publications in Britain and in the United States that eight to 10 glasses of his "medicine" each day would remedy many human ills.

Paul Harvey

But his prescribed remedy was "water" - and there is no money in water.

So he went public. Dr. Batmanghelidj wrote a book called Your Body's Many Cries for Water.

The author is convinced that "Americans are over-medicated" and that "our nation could reduce medical costs by 60 percent just by recognizing the medicinal value of water."

Maybe this doctor is just another opportunist selling books, but on the chance that he has something, let's listen:

"Chronic and persistently increasing dehydration is the root cause of most all currently encountered major diseases in the human body."

As a prisoner in Iran, Dr. Batmanghelidj treated 3,000 fellow prisoners suffering peptic ulcers. The only thing he had with which to treat them were antacids and water. None responded to the antacids. All responded to the water.

This assumes the patient gets enough water, eight to 10 8-ounce glasses a day. And he says coffee, Coke, tea and juice are not satisfactory substitutes.

What he is prescribing for you amounts to 183 gallons of water this year, whether you feel like drinking it or not.

He says, "The scientific-medical establishment is still fighting diseases with palliatives - with drugs that treat diseases but neither prevent nor cure them."

Can Clinton afford a foreign policy?

President Clinton's first trip to Europe is now over, and his handlers are gratefully totting up the pluses: a number of good photo ops, announcement of the usual (prearranged) agreements, etc. There were also the inevitable minuses - notably a couple of flare-ups of the famous Clinton temper, when reporters insisted on asking questions about Whitewater.

In real terms, however, the accomplishments were few. NATO was formed as a military alliance for mutual defense against the Soviet Union. Now that the Soviet Union has disappeared, NATO is casting about for a new role. Some thought it might serve as a device for putting out local European fires, such as Bosnia. But NATO's European members, who might be expected to take the laboring oar in such enterprises, have proved understandably reluctant to become entangled in military expeditions that don't involve (as defense against the Soviet Union clearly did) their vital national interests.

Others think NATO should be enlarged to include the former Warsaw Pact nations of Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and perhaps Slovakia. But such an expanded NATO could only be understood as aimed at Russia - unless Russia, too, were allowed to join it. In that case, though, who would be the (even purely hypothetical) enemy of the alliance? Internal divisions would become the danger.

Mr. Clinton therefore fell back on the old technique of splitting the difference: inviting Poland, etc., to join a "Partnership for Peace" - becoming, in effect official candidates for future membership in NATO. If this truly leads to full membership, however, or indeed means anything at all, it can only become effective if the American people can be persuaded that any change in the present western borders of Russia, to the detriment of its neighbors, would constitute a threat to the vital interests of the United States.

That is not entirely inconceivable. But look two or three decades ahead and note how the picture may change. It is quite possible that by then Russia may be so concerned over the growing power of China that it will seek (and obtain) admission to NATO itself. In that case, the vital interests of the United States might suddenly involve, not containing Russia's western borders, but defending its eastern ones.

Complex as such problems are, Mr. Clinton probably prefers them to the awful simplicity of the one that defeated him in the Far East: What to do about North Korea?

The grim truth is that Kim Il Sung and Bill Clinton went eyeball-to-eyeball over the issue of nuclear proliferation, and Mr. Clinton blinked. Formerly, our policy was to take any steps necessary to prevent North Korea from making a nuclear bomb. Now it seems probable that North Korea already has one, and Secretary of State Christopher has suavely redefined our objective as resisting North Korea's embarking on "a nuclear weapons program."

Worse, yet, in view of this backdrop, is Washington's quiet surrender on the issue of nuclear inspections. North Korea has finally agreed to let an international team inspect its five "declared" nuclear facilities - but not the two "undeclared" sites where violations of the non-proliferation treaty are suspected. In sheer gratitude for Kim Il Sung's meaningless cooperation in the first five cases, we have agreed to abandon our annual joint military exercise with South Korea. The media, to their shame, are helping Mr. Clinton paper over this abject surrender.

What prompted that surrender? The suspicion is growing that Mr. Clinton feels he simply can't afford any international crisis that would draw either public attention or public funds away from the costly health-care scheme on which he has staked the success of his presidency.

If that is true, and if foreign desperadoes like Kim Il Sung have figured it out, we're in deep trouble indeed.

Women jurors: War between sexes polarized Menendez jury

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sexism and homophobia doomed any chance for a verdict in Erik Menendez' murder trial, said women jurors who also believe no jury is likely to convict Erik or his brother Lyle of first degree murder in the shotgun slaying of their parents.

"We were called ignorant asses and empty headed and 'those women,'" said one juror, a 36-year-old secretary who asked not to be identified. "We had one juror who would put on his sunglasses and be balancing his checkbook and cutting out coupons when the women were talking."

"There were insults, sexual comments. They tried to outshout us," said juror Tracy Miller, 27, a bookstore clerk.

When prosecutors raised the issue of homosexuality late in the trial, Miller recalled, several of the men showed new interest.

Juror Hazel Thornton, 36, said she tried to keep deliberations on issues such as burden of proof or the concept of malice, but men were more interested in whether Erik was homosexual.

In an interview with The Associated Press, four women jurors and two women alternates who heard Erik Menendez' case described 19 days of hostile deliberations.

Attempts to get comment from men on Erik's panel were unsuccessful. Two refused to comment when contacted by phone; a third didn't return a telephone message; there was no answer at the home of a fourth; and numbers for the fifth and sixth male jurors were unavailable.

But a man interviewed for the television program Inside Edition defended the jury and called claims of an anti-gay bias "ludicrous."

"Every juror went in there with an open mind trying to do the best that they could and trying to come up with the truth," said juror Bob Rakestraw, according to a transcript made available to the AP. "And it had nothing to do with the lifestyle that these two men led."

Rakestraw did not address sexism allegations in the interview, which was scheduled to air tonight.

Erik, 23, and Lyle, 26, were charged with first degree murder in the 1989 slaying of their wealthy parents, Jose and Kitty Menendez.

Prosecutors argued the brothers killed out of greed and hatred; the brothers claimed they feared for their lives after years of mental and sexual abuse.

Both juries deadlocked. Erik's jurors called it quits Jan. 13. Lyle's panel told the judge on Friday that after 25 days of deliberation they were unable to reach a verdict.

The women jurors said Saturday that five men voted for a first degree murder conviction, one for second degree. The women all voted for voluntary manslaughter.

After Erik's jury deadlocked, his lawyer had the women jurors over for dinner at her home and allowed them to talk with Erik on the phone.

The women said they believe the brothers should be allowed to plead guilty to manslaughter and not be tried again.

Betty Burke, an alternate on Erik's jury, said she expected to dislike him: "I looked at Erik and thought, 'There's a killer.'"

But his testimony about years of abuse turned her around. "No one could make up lies like that," she said. "I went home and thought, 'I could kill Jose myself.'"

Kevorkian begins petition drive to gain support for changing laws regarding assisted suicide

By JULIA PRODIS
Associated Press Writer

LIVONIA, Mich. (AP) — The right to choose death is fundamental, Dr. Jack Kevorkian said as he began a petition drive to make assisted suicide legal in Michigan.

Standing before a candlelit, flower-decked pulpit, Kevorkian urged some 700 churchgoers to help gather the more than 250,000 signatures needed to place a measure to amend the constitution on the state's November ballot.

"It's almost an insult to put this on the ballot. It's an insult to human reason. Why? Because that right exists. We have to remind ourselves that right is there," said Kevorkian, who has been present at the deaths of 20 people since 1990.

The audience at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church Sunday gave the 65-year-old retired pathologist standing ovations and many later demanded his autograph.

But two people holding Bibles interrupted his speech, one yelling, "This church has been cursed today!"

Kevorkian was invited to the church by its pastor, the Rev. Thomas Egglebeen, who is also a supporter.

"There are six or seven incidents in Scripture where a suicide is reported and it's treated kindly and tragically. In no way at all is the person condemned," Egglebeen said.

Kevorkian has been charged four times with breaking the law Michigan enacted last year specifically to stop him.

Three charges have been dismissed and Kevorkian has been freed from house arrest as Michigan's Court of Appeal reviews the law's constitutionality.

The national Hemlock Society and the grassroots Friends of Kevorkian have pledged to conduct the petition drive. Michigan Right to Life and some religious groups are working against it.

'It's almost an insult to put this on the ballot. ... Because that right exists. We have to remind ourselves that right is there.'

Meanwhile, a telephone poll of 601 likely voters statewide, conducted by the Detroit Free Press, found 58 percent of those surveyed supported the concept of assisted suicide.

Twenty-two percent believed it should be a crime. Sixteen percent said it is wrong but should not be criminalized. Four percent were undecided in the survey conducted Jan. 9-13 by EPIC-MRA of Lansing.

The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent.

Breakthroughs reported in Gaza-Jericho talks

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — PLO leader Yasser Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said today they had cleared most of the major hurdles for a deal to turn over control of the Gaza Strip and Jericho to Palestinians.

After negotiations that lasted into the early morning hours, Arafat said he and Peres would meet again in about a week in Cairo, Egypt, to finalize the deal.

Peres played down remaining differences, saying he was more optimistic than ever before.

"There had been very complicated problems," he said. "We were able to negotiate many of them, maybe most of them."

When asked what the two sides disagreed upon, he laughingly replied, "the drafting."

An Israeli official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that a final deal could have been made today, but Peres could no longer delay his departure for Washington.

Yasser Abed-Rabbo, a key adviser to Arafat, said, "Yes, I think so," when asked whether an agreement was that close.

Peres left before dawn to fly to Washington. Arafat left Davos to meet Swiss officials in the capital Bern. He was to remain Tuesday in Switzerland to address the U.N. Human Rights Commission in Geneva.

All weekend, Arafat and Peres displayed a new friendliness during joint appearances in this snow-covered Alpine resort. They were in Davos to attend the World Economic Forum, a privately organized gathering of political and business leaders from around the world.

The PLO leader took Peres by the hand Sunday to lead him up the stairs to the stage for a debate, during which they sat next to each other.

The brotherly gesture caused a stir when it was televised in Israel. It contrasted sharply with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's hesitation to shake Arafat's hand at the Sept. 13 signing of the Israeli-PLO accord that set up the current talks.

In Davos, Peres also translated into English questions for Arafat from a French reporter and enthusiastically shook hands with the PLO leader for photographers. Both leaders smiled and appeared relaxed together.

And the Israeli paid a tribute to Arafat that once would have been unthinkable, saying the PLO leader "personalizes the great suffering of the Palestinian people."

While ostensibly there for the conference, the two spent most of their time negotiating some of the problems that have delayed implementation of the peace accord.

Israeli sources said the outstanding issues related to technical border questions. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said an outline agreement had been reached on how much land around Jericho would come under Palestinian autonomy, and on security questions.

The question of border control around the new Palestinian areas has been particularly thorny. The two sides have been searching for a way to meet Israeli concerns about keeping out terrorists while not infringing on the Palestinian sense of sovereignty.

After a morning of talks with Peres, Arafat told the forum a final deal to begin the Israeli withdrawal would be reached "very soon."

Peres told Israeli television both sides made sacrifices. "With all the concessions, each side was faithful to itself," he said.

The Israeli team had "conceded on issues of image, of feeling," he said, apparently referring to more Palestinian flags and a greater Palestinian presence at the borders of the autonomous zones.

He said the Palestinians "gave in on security issues."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa said the two had agreed to keep Israeli agents from being visible at border crossings, apparently referring to suggestions that they would be behind one-way mirrors. Egypt has been a key facilitator in the Mideast talks.

Israel Radio cited Egyptian sources as saying there would be joint Israeli-Palestinian patrols in Gaza, apparently referring to securing roads to Jewish settlements.

Ex-Supremes singer Mary Wilson injured, son killed in wreck

BARSTOW, Calif. (AP) — Former Supremes singer Mary Wilson was injured and her 14-year-old son was killed when the Jeep she was driving hit a freeway median and overturned, authorities said Sunday.

Rafael Ferrer was pronounced dead at Barstow Community Hospital about two hours after the 7:30 a.m. Saturday crash, San Bernardino County Deputy Coroner Monika Padilla said.

Wilson, 49, was taken to Loma Linda University Medical Center, but her injuries weren't believed to be serious, Padilla said. Hospital spokesman David Schaefer refused to confirm or deny that Wilson was at the hospital.

Wilson and her son were traveling from Los Angeles to Nevada and Wilson may have fallen asleep at the wheel, Padilla said.

Wilson's Jeep Cherokee drifted to the right side of Interstate 15, and when she overcorrected the vehicle swerved across the highway, plowed into the median and overturned, Padilla said.

Barstow is about 100 miles northeast of Los Angeles. No other vehicles were involved in the crash.

Wilson, a Detroit native who lives in Los Angeles, was the only member of the Supremes to stay with the group from its 1959 inception to its breakup in 1977.

WWII airplane from Battle of Midway saved from bottom of Lake Michigan

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — It sank a Japanese warship in World War II and survived the Battle of Midway. Then the bullet-riddled dive bomber spent 50 years at the bottom of Lake Michigan.

The one-of-a-kind museum piece, complete with three machine guns, was hauled onto dry land early this month. The National Museum of Naval Aviation here is cleaning up the Douglas SBD-2 Dauntless for display. "We knew it had a historic significance when we pulled it up, but we weren't really quite sure how historic," museum director Robert Rasmussen said last week.

"This is probably one of the more significant airplanes that we or any other museum in this country have been able to stick together," he said. He showed a spot where MIDWAY was painted on the engine cowling.

Only a handful of World War II combat-flown planes of any kind still exist and no others from Midway have survived, Rasmussen said.

Museum officials located the pilot, who won a Navy Cross for sinking a Japanese light cruiser in March 1942 while flying the plane, Bureau No. 2106, from the aircraft carrier USS Lexington.

Retired Nav. Capt. Mark Twain Whittier said in a telephone interview from his home in Carmel, Calif., that he had no idea what had become of the plane until museum officials notified him of its recovery.

His log book confirmed he had flown it on numerous missions, but the most memorable was the bombing of about a dozen enemy ships at New Guinea.

"We caught them still in the harbor," Whittier recalled. "It was like dropping a pickle in a barrel."

The plane was transferred to a Marine squadron and shipped to Midway before the Lexington was sunk at the Battle of Coral Sea.

Of 16 Marine SBDs that took off from Midway on June 4, 1942, to engage an enemy fleet, eight were shot down and two others so badly damaged they couldn't be flown again.

A Marine pilot landed 2106 on one wheel after the battle. The plane had 219 bullet holes. No. 2106's bullet holes were patched and the plane was returned to the United States for training duty.

The plane crashed into Lake Michigan in June 1943 while attempting to land on an aircraft carrier.

Cosmonaut's shuttle flight marks new era

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The planet's two space superpowers already have exchanged handshakes and hugs, shared borscht and cranberry sauce, and toasted with apple juice — 140 miles above Earth.

This week, 19 years after the Apollo-Soyuz docking mission, five American astronauts and one Russian cosmonaut will pick up in orbit where their predecessors left off.

Sergei Krikalev will become the first Russian to fly on a U.S. space shuttle when Discovery lifts off Thursday on a science mission.

Unlike Apollo-Soyuz, which brought three Americans and two Russians together in orbit in 1975, astronauts and cosmonauts will occupy the same ship from launch through landing.

"This to me is a real landmark, not just because Sergei's on our flight, but because our two countries are working together," said Discovery astronaut Jan Davis.

Both countries say the mission is only the beginning of many joint space ventures.

The ultimate goal is an international space station, to be built using launch vehicles from both countries. Construction is scheduled to begin in 1997 and the station is expected to house permanent crews by 2001.

The two countries agreed on the joint station late last year. They also agreed to 10 shuttle dockings with Russia's Mir space station, beginning in 1995, to exchange crews, do research and upgrade the aging Mir.

The deal expanded on a 1992 agreement that arranged for Krikalev's flight and for an American astronaut to fly on Mir for three months in 1995.

Altogether, five American astronauts are to spend a combined 24 months on Mir. And another Russian cosmonaut — Vladimir Titov, Krikalev's backup for Discovery's mission — already is training for a shuttle flight early next year.

NASA has trained Krikalev and Titov as full-fledged shuttle crewmen since their arrival in November 1992. Both are pros: Krikalev already has spent 463 days in space and Titov 368 days.

"What is most interesting part of this mission for me is flying on space shuttle itself," Krikalev said.

"I have long period of time flying on Mir station. I flew on Soyuz vehicle. But this is new vehicle, new hardware, new experiments."

Marcia Smith, a specialist in space policy for the Congressional Research Service at the Library of Congress, said the cosmonaut and astronaut exchanges make for good foreign policy.

But she said it's risky to build a space station with the Russians given the country's political and economic instability.

"Apollo-Soyuz was not supposed to be a one-time deal. It was supposed to be a new era of detente. It was supposed to lead to other things ... but it never did lead to anything at that time," Smith said. "The same thing could happen again."

Krikalev has the crucial job of using Discovery's robot arm to retrieve a satellite deployed by the crew during the eight-day mission. The satellite, called the Wake Shield Facility, is being flown to see if it can create an ultravacuum for growing thin, pure semiconductor films.

Krikalev also will help conduct experiments in a pressurized module called Spacelab and take part in joint U.S.-Russian investigations involving radiation, physiology and Earth observations.

Texas town closes its library to make budget ends meet

SPLENDORA (AP) — Former Councilwoman Hazel McCracken worked so diligently to start a public library 14 years ago that the building was named after her.

Now, Mayor Grace Myers and the current council have decided to shut down the library, which costs $25,500 to run annually, because they could find no room for it in a $912,000 budget.

"A community that doesn't have its own library is about one degree short of being civilized," Ms. McCracken said.

"A lot of people use that little library. There's a good county library branch close by in New Caney, but I feel strongly that every community ought to have its own library."

The decision has shocked and angered many of the 1,000 Splendora residents, but the mayor said there was no other way to make ends meet, considering that the town has no property tax.

"Closing the library was a very hard decision that nobody on City Council wanted to make, but we had to do it," Myers said.

Budget cuts also include firing one of two paid police officers, which in addition to the library closure will save about $48,000, Myers said.

The town has taken other measures, such as increasing water service rates. That should allow Splendora, about 50 miles north of Houston in Montgomery County, to stay afloat without a property tax.

"When you even mention ad valorem taxes, people here start climbing the walls," Myers said. "We just don't have enough taxable property here to make even a minimal 15-cent tax rate worth it. And besides, people here pay enough in school and county taxes."

Sandy Martin-Springer, who resigned from the council recently in protest of what she calls "the rapping of the community by council," said there was a way to save the library without new taxes.

She said all it would take is for Myers and the council to "tuck in the belt" and manage city coffers more efficiently.

Her plan, nixed by the mayor, called for sparing the library by generating 24 percent of its operating income from donations and fees.

But Myers said that when the library solicited donations — an effort to avoid closing, about $1,590 in cash, checks and pledges was collected. That fell far short of annual costs, which include a $17,847 salary for one librarian.

Myers said 12,000 books and other materials will be sold to libraries that have been invited to examine the stock and submit bids.

The 80-year-old McCracken said she is saddened by the whole affair.

"It's a sad commentary that they don't realize the importance of a library to a city, but the decision's been made whether I like it or not," she said. "But some ladies are looking into whether it would be feasible to buy the books from the city and open a private library. I'm in ill health and don't get around much, but I'll do whatever I can to help that cause."

Report: Parolees down but system still a mess

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The number of prisoners paroled has decreased over the past three years, but the system is still a mess, says one prison board member, allowing thousands of murderers and other violent criminals to roam the streets.

"The criminal-justice system in Texas is still broken even though there have been great strides to improve (prison) capacity," said San Antonio lawyer and Texas Board of Criminal Justice member Allan Polunsky.

In San Antonio, nearly 4,000 convicted felons are living freely, having been paroled after serving only a fraction of their prison sentences, the San Antonio Express-News reported in Sunday's editions.

While thousands of parolees are living in communities around the state, statistics show the parole board has actually been reducing the number of prisoners paroled in recent years as the state continues building new prisons.

In 1993, 20,794 were paroled. That's a decrease from 23,486 in 1984, according to figures provided by the pardons and paroles office. In 1990, paroles peaked at 38,041.

The state's parole system has made front-page news in past years with such controversial releases as those of Raul Meza and Kenneth McDuff.

Meza was mandatorily released from prison after serving 11 years of a 30-year sentence for the rape and murder of 8-year-old Kendra Page of Austin in 1982. After being run out of several Texas towns, including San Antonio and Uvalde, Meza now is under parole supervision in Austin.

McDuff, sentenced to death in 1966 for the shooting deaths of two teenage boys and the rape-strangulation of their young companion, was twice paroled after his sentence was commuted to life in prison. Last year, he was convicted in the 1992 slaying of a Waco convenience store clerk and returned to death row. McDuff is currently on trial for the December 1991 murder of an Austin woman.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to "Old Fashioned," who wrote about the "in-your-face immorality" of living together prior to marriage.

When I was 24, I became engaged to a wonderful young man named Gary. We started planning our wedding when I felt a small lump in my breast. I went immediately to my doctor, who sent me to an oncologist. My worst fears were confirmed: It was breast cancer.

My parents, who lived 300 miles away, came to be with me for the surgery (mastectomy), but eventually had to go home. They returned as often as they could during my treatments, but they couldn't be with me all the time.

When I was sick from the chemotherapy, Gary stayed with me and slept on the floor beside my bed. He cooked what little food I could eat and held my head when I vomited. He cleaned my house and did my laundry. It soon became apparent that between driving back and forth to my house, caring for me and handling his job, poor Gary was exhausted, so I asked him to please move in with me. Believe me, there was no hanky-panky.

We are now happily married and my cancer is in remission. So, Abby, please tell "Old-Fashioned" that not all people who live together are immoral. And remember, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." (Matthew 7:1)

SHARON

DEAR SHARON: My prayers are with you and Gary. After this is published, I'm sure that thousands of readers will add their prayers to mine. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: This could save a life — or a family. Please alert your readers to the danger of leaving fireplace ashes where they can start a fire.

A neighbor cleaned out his fireplace and placed the supposedly "dead" ashes in a cardboard box on the back porch. Since the ashes looked dead, he intended to wait until morning to take them out to the trash can.

In the middle of the night, the ashes burned through the box and set the porch on fire. Since the smoke alarms were inside the house, they were useless. The family was lucky to escape with their lives.

Our fire chief said dead ashes are a constant source of house fires every winter. Please alert your readers.

BETTY H. IN PENDLETON, ORE.

DEAR BETTY: Thank you for a valuable reminder. According to the fire officials my staff consulted, ashes should be stored in a metal can with a lid for several days before disposing.

DEAR ABBY: My niece recently married. She is pregnant. The young couple and my niece's parents are planning a large church wedding (with a white wedding dress) and reception to take place 10 months after the original vows, when the baby will be about 2 months old. Is this socially acceptable? If it is, which date would they celebrate as their anniversary?

CURIOUS AUNT

DEAR CURIOUS AUNT: Any time a couple wants to enter into holy matrimony is "acceptable." And they should celebrate their anniversary on the date of their original vows.

DEAR READERS: If you or a member of your family has been treated by a psychiatrist, doctor or other health-care professional for alcoholism or drug addiction, and are willing to describe any problems, mistakes or bad outcome encountered in your treatment, please write and tell me about them. Your name and that of your doctor will be held in strict confidence. I plan to share your letters with the Group for Advancement of Psychiatry, a highly respected group of psychiatrists who are eager to know about your experiences.

Please send your letters to: Dear Abby, Treatment Survey, P.O. Box 539, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

You may have a modern romance, but on Valentine's Day it's OK to go gushy.

After all, candlelight is more romantic than a Mag-Lite, so look for an old-fashioned way to say "I Love You."

For her, consider a heart-shaped fabric and lace music box that plays "Fuer Elise," $12.95 from the San Francisco Music Box Company. For him, hunt antiques stores, auctions and flea markets for vintage cuff links, an heirloom watch or an old-time shaving brush and soap mug. If you're short on time, Cartier has a nifty shaving brush, $550 in ribbed goldplate. (Safety razor to match is $230.)

Old World gifts rank high on the charm quotient, says Nancy Linde-meyer, editor-in-chief of Victoria magazine in New York.

"Valentine's Day is supposed to be a time for indulgence and romance ... and the Victorian era was the period when keepsakes flourished," Lindemeyer says. "People were investing $30 for hand-painted lace and gold filigree Valentine keepsakes, and women even gave each other gifts."

So rather, perhaps, than a dozen long-stemmed roses, express your passion with a floral essence. Evelyn, $40 for 1.7 ounces of eau de parfum from Crabree & Evelyn, is derived from old-time rose stock carefully nurtured to full bloom by horticulturist David Austin in England.

If you're unsure of fragrance, consider an antique perfume bottle or atomizer. It'll look dandy on the dressing table along with Nina Ricci's vanity table set in curved matte goldtone. At Saks Fifth Avenue, the hair brush is $100, the comb $75.

Also worthy of the boudoir is vintage-style lingerie from Eileen West. Her white cotton collection with pin tucks, satin ribbons and beaded lace includes camisoles, drop-waist nightgowns with sailor collars and nightshirts. They're $68 to $120 at Neiman Marcus, Dillard's, Nordstrom, Saks, Lord & Taylor and Macy's.

"We've been designing Victorian sleepwear for almost 18 years," says West, a San Francisco designer, "and we're known for pretty, feminine, turn-of-the-century looks. The romance of the styles is perfect for Valentine's Day."

Those with a creative bent might want to try a handmade greeting card, penning wedding vows in calligraphy on a parchment scroll or composing an old-fashioned love letter.

If you want to say "I adore you" but suffer writer's block, letter-writing guides are a tradition, says Lindemeyer of Victoria magazine.

"If you think your great-grandfather was a fabulous letter writer," she says, "he may have had some help." The Victorian era was a very sentimental period, she says, "and every swain had access to books and magazines to help him write a letter to his beloved."

If you're totally tongue-tied, enlist Suzan Briganti, a San Francisco accessories designer, and friend. Briganti designs old-fashioned hand muffs and her friend writes, signs and seals a love letter to tuck into each muff pocket.

"With fashion going toward Victorian and Edwardian styling since last fall," Briganti says, "I felt it was the perfect time for the return of the muff."

In velvet, faux fur or wool the muffs are $70 to $200 at I. Magnin, Nordstrom and Dayton's, Hudson's and Marshall Field's.

Other accessories — cameo chokers on black ribbons, pendants, velvet portrait hats and lacy jabots and French cuffs — also have heirloom quality and nostalgic allure.

"A cameo on a pendant or choker is certainly very Victorian and romantic," says Linda Sease, public relations manager for Foley's in Houston. "And a cameo pin looks absolutely beautiful on an oblong lace scarf that you turn into an ascot."

Cameo pins by the 1928 Jewelry Company are $20 to $28 at Foley's.

For an old-fashioned romantic weekend, cuddle up by the fire at a country inn or bed and breakfast. If you must be modern, get tickets for two to a rock concert.

At work in her home studio in Pampa, Brenda Dyson prefers pastels to paints. Her subjects vary but tend toward flowers and music.

A Shamrock girl finds happiness in Pampa's art world

Brenda Dyson never studied art until after she married and moved to Pampa.

"Shamrock didn't have any art courses," the 1977 Shamrock High graduate said, "so I didn't know I was interested in it."

About seven years ago, she signed up for an art class at the Pampa campus of Clarendon College after she had her daughter, Amanda.

"I've always liked to draw and doodle," Dyson said. "Two of my grandmothers liked to paint — actually, it was my grandmother and great-grandmother."

That first class in drawing led to other classes.

"I was better than I thought," she said.

Since that first class, Dyson has gone on to work in other media, participated in several shows, and sold a few pieces of art along the way. She won an honorable mention in the Best of the Southwest show in Amarillo and has entered the 14th annual Pampa Fine Arts Association member show Saturday and Sunday. Her most recent sale was a large pastel several months ago.

"It was kind of nice that someone like it well enough to buy it," she said, "but then again, I spent lots of hours on it, and it was kind of sad."

She her husband, Ronnie, has been a big supporter of her art career.

"Ronnie's been real supportive," she said. "He baby sat in the evenings with Amanda while I was taking classes. He encouraged me to keep at it. I tend not to work on it a lot."

Pastels, she said, are her favorite medium.

"I like pastels," Dyson said, "because of the rich colors. I tried oil paints once, but couldn't do anything with it."

She also likes pencil and ink.

"It's kind of neat that you can take a blank piece of paper and pencil and make a picture," she said. "And in black and white you don't have to worry about color."

Her subject matter is varied but appears to run to music and flowers. A large pastel of a cello player and two more of brightly-colored flowers grace the walls of her home. At least one of them will be in the Pampa Fine Arts Member's Art Show.

"My mom says I do strange things," she laughed. "I don't do landscapes. They're hard. I do things with interesting shapes that appeal to me. When I attempt landscapes, they don't turn out too well."

Although she's working on what appears to be a New Mexico landscape, her studio, slipped into one of the Dysons' bedrooms, is decorated with pen and ink drawings of musical instruments.

"I've got a corner of the room," she said. "Ronnie's got his computers in the other corner. He takes up more than one corner."

The bedroom used to be the nursery, she said, explaining the large colorful rainbow that fills one wall. And her talent apparently has been passed along to her daughter, Amanda, now eight years old.

"Amanda loves to draw," she said.

Despite her successes, Dyson is hesitant about her work.

"I need a lot more experience," she said.

Still, there is little doubt among her peers that her career will blossom like the pastel flowers framed on the walls of her living room.

Names in the news

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Kenny Rogers doesn't mind if the line between truth and fiction gets blurred now and then in supermarket tabloids.

"There's always an element of truth to those stories," Rogers says in TV Guide's Feb. 5 issue.

But the three-time Grammy winner wouldn't distinguish between true and false in recent tabloid reports on his own life. Three women who said he lured them into phone sex games sued; he countersued. One woman has since dropped her claim.

"I'm embarrassed by it," Rogers said. "No one likes to see personal information put on the streets. It's just not pretty."

Still, he said he keeps going back to the tabloids to keep tabs on stars like Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson.

"I don't even care whether it's true," he said. "I want to know. I don't want to be uninformed."

LONDON (AP) — Emma Thompson added another prize to her already brimming resume for her role as the charming and intelligent English housekeeper in "The Remains of the Day."

Thompson's performance in the film and in "Much Ado About Nothing" earned her the best actress honor Sunday at the Evening Standard British Film Awards. Last year, she took home an Academy Award and a Golden Globe for "Howards End."

In the best actor category, screen newcomer David Thewlis beat Oscar-winner Sir Anthony Hopkins for his portrayal of a homeless drifter in Mike Leigh's "Naked." Hopkins was given a special award for achievement.

Ken Loach's "Raining Stones" won the best film award and its writer, Jim Allen, won best screenplay honors.

NEW YORK (AP) — They don't have time for a honeymoon just yet, but Edward James Olmos and Lorraine Bracco got married anyway.

Olmos, the grim police lieutenant on "Miami Vice," and Bracco wed Friday in a private ceremony at a Manhattan hotel, Paul Bloch, Miss Bracco's publicist, said Sunday. He declined to provide details.

Bracco was nominated for an Oscar for "GoodFellas."

It was the second marriage for both and they had no immediate plans for a honeymoon, Bloch said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — So the earth below may roll every now and then, so what? Yakov Smirnoff says his house has a lot of other things going for it.

"We put in ... a sandbox that looks like a sand trap in the back, so it looks like the yard is part of the golf course," the Russian native said.

The comedian is trying to sell his three-bedroom, ranch style Pacific Palisades house for about $2.3 million.

The home was not damaged in the Jan. 17 quake, he added.

"Because it's on the 18th hole, I was afraid it would be in the 18th hole," he quipped.

Smirnoff and his family have moved to Branson, Mo., where he performs at the Osmond Family Theater.

NEW YORK (AP) — Andrew Giuliani's mother was stunned when her boy caught flak for his antics during Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's inaugural address.

"I was startled when people were so astonished," Donna Hanover Giuliani said in an interview with The New Yorker magazine.

Andrew, who turned 8 on Sunday, stood beside his dad during the mayor's Jan. 2 address on the steps of City Hall, blowing kisses at friends and mugging for cameras.

He even read out a passage of the speech his father had overlooked — giving his parents a chance to look on the bright side.

Fashion

'Immoderate Style'

NEW YORK (AP) — Diana Vreeland loved lacquer red and leopard spots, and both are much in evidence at the Costume Institute of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Vreeland is being honored through March 20 with a retrospective of her more than half-century as czarina of American fashion. She was fashion editor at Harper's Bazaar from 1936-62, editor-in-chief of Vogue from 1963-71 and special consultant to the Costume Institute from 1972 until her death in 1989. The museum calls her "perhaps the last great tastemaker of the 20th century."

The exhibition includes photographs, costumes and memorabilia. Though most of the clothing represents styles she championed, a few are from her personal wardrobe. One such is a red silk velvet Chanel evening suit circa 1938 with a gored knee-length skirt and peplum jacket.

The Sneaker Is a Shooin'

NEW YORK (AP) — The lowly sneaker has gone high-fashion, receiving special recognition at the Council of Fashion Designers of America awards dinner on Feb. 7.

Addas, Converse, Keds, Nike and Reebok have been named to accept the special award on the sneaker's behalf. The CFDA cites the high-tech footwear for its "uniquely American influence on the world of fashion."

Calvin Klein is a dual award winner, receiving the Menswear Designer of the Year and the Womenswear Designer of the Year awards. Richard Tyler and John Bartlett are recipients of the Perry Ellis Award for New Fashion Talent.

The CFDA is a non-profit organization of American fashion designers that helps maintain professional standards and promote the industry as an art.

Romancing the Stone

NEW YORK (AP) — Legend has it that diamonds became a girl's best friend in 1477 when Archduke Maximilian of Austria presented a diamond engagement ring to Princess Mary.

Five hundred years later, diamonds remain the "romance stone" of choice, and Valentine's Day is one of the most romantic of the year. The American Diamond Industry Association estimates some $200 million in diamond jewelry will be purchased as gifts for Feb. 14.

A Natural Extension

NEW YORK (AP) — Nicole Miller, more or less the final word on men's conversation ties and silk print underwear, is introducing men's and boys' swimwear.

The swim shorts include cotton prints and nylon Tactile solids to retail for $35 to $45 for men and $32 to $40 for boys. Print motifs include surfing, sailing and Miller beer. Coordinating T-shirts, athletic pants and anoraks also will be available.

Miller also has stuck a creative toe into the waters of designer kidswear, creating her signature prints under a licensing agreement with TJF Corp. of New York. The collection of dresses and separates will retail for about $40 to $75.

The kids' clothes will be in stores on a limited basis for spring before a full fall launch. Textured and thermal knits based on prints of cats, dinosaurs and endangered species will have coordinating solid separates.

On the drawing boards are kids' back-to-school accessories including printed backpacks, fanny packs and baseball caps.

Cowboys beat Bills for championship again

PAMPA — Pampa booters dropped two to Lubbock Coronado Saturday, the boys losing 5-0 and the girls 4-1.

"The score didn't show it, but we took them to a very challenging match," boys coach Daniel Barker said, adding that the Harvesters are suffering with injuries. "We had a couple chances that we could've capitalized on but didn't."

ATLANTA (AP) — Tony Dorsett, Randy White and Jackie Smith, all Dallas Cowboys, were among six elected to Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Also making the Hall were former Minnesota Vikings coach Bud Grant, San Francisco 49ers cornerback Jimmy Johnson, and running back Leroy Kelly of Cleveland, selected as senior nominee.

Dorsett, third all-time leading rusher and 1977 rookie of the year, made it his first year of eligibility. Dorsett retired with 12,739 yards rushing.

White, defensive tackle for Dallas from 1975-88, also was elected in first year of eligibility. A nine-time Pro Bowl selection, White was co-MVP in 1978 Super Bowl.

Smith, tight end with Cardinals from 1963-77, finished with one season for Cowboys.

Johnson spent 16 seasons with 49ers and finished with 47 interceptions.

Grant coached the Vikings 18 seasons, leading them to four Super Bowls. He had a .620 regular-season winning percentage, and his 168 NFL victories place him eighth on career list.

Kelly starred for the Browns 1964-73, replacing Jim Brown. He led the league in rushing in 1967 and '68. Kelly had 12,329 total yards and made Pro Bowl six straight years.

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — American speed skater Dan Jansen set a world record in 500-meters at World Sprint Speedskating Championships, below the 36-second mark for the fourth time in his career.

Jansen was clocked at 35.76 seconds and reached a speed of 33.24 mph in breaking his old record of 35.92 seconds, sixth time Jansen set or tied world 500-meter mark.

Three-time Olympic gold medalist Bonnie Blair won all four races during two-day competition and set world points record for her first world championship since 1989.

Jansen topped men with 144.81 points, followed by Russia's Sergei Klevchenja's 145.31 and Japan's Junichi Inoue's 145.67.

Blair led women with 157.40 points, followed by Germany's Angela Hauck's 159.02 and China's Rui Hong Xue's 159.08.

ALTENBERG, Germany (AP) — Cammy Myler stunned Europe's top lugers, becoming first American woman to capture a World Cup race.

The 25-year-old Myler, fifth two weeks ago, her best showing this season, and fifth at 1992 Olympics, finished in 1:28.24, followed by Germany's Jan Bode at 1:28.400 and Austria's Doris Neuner with 1:28.501.

Germany's Gabi Kohlisch, finishing 14th, won overall World Cup title in women's singles with 83 points, one ahead of Bode.

Teen-age cousins Tobias and Markus Schiegl of Austria were surprise winners in men's doubles. 1992 Olympic gold medalists, Stefan Krause and Jan Behrendt of Germany, won overall men's doubles with 95 points. Second were Schiegl with 71.

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Randy Weber popped longest ski jump in the final round to lead three local teens to top spots in normal hill national ski jumping championships.

The three earned trips to Winter Olympics and were just 2.5 points apart. Weber, 16, jumped 92.5 and 94.5 meters for 256.5 points and first national title. Ryan Heckman, 19, went 91.5 and 93.5 for 254.5 points and Todd Lodwick, 17, first-round leader and winner of large hill championship, jumped 93 and 92 meters for 254 points.

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Pete Sampras, blasting aces as fast as 126 mph, won his third straight Grand Slam title, overpowering Todd Martin in straight sets in Australian Open championship.

Sampras, with 13 aces, overcame an early threat, winning a first-set tiebreaker, and rolling to a 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-4 win.

Top-seeded Sampras became first man in nearly three decades to win Wimbledon, U.S. Open and Australian Open consecutively. Sampras won $322,000, ninth-seeded Martin $161,000.

On Saturday, Steffi Graf reasserted her dominance with a nearly flawless performance for her fourth straight Grand Slam title and 15th overall with 6-0, 6-2 defeat of No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in 57 minutes. She earned $322,000, Sanchez Vicario $161,000. Sanchez Vicario won only 12 first-set points. Top-seeded Graf needed only 6 hours, 23 minutes, to complete all seven matches during two-week Australian Open.

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles signed free-agent reliever Lee Smith to a one-year contract, virtually guaranteeing that closer Gregg Olson will not return for 1994 season.

Smith, 36, is baseball's all-time saves leader (401) with a 2.91 ERA over 14 seasons. He will receive $1.5 million plus incentives.

Olson, Orioles' all-time saves leader, developed elbow problems and pitched only eight innings after the All-Star game.

Smith, a five-time All-Star, had 46 saves in 1993, one short of his career high. He gave up 11 homers and had a 4.50 ERA with St. Louis before being traded to the Yankees.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Bill Glasson shot 7-under-par 64 and came from two strokes behind to win Phoenix Open by three strokes with 16-under 268 for his sixth career title.

Glasson won $216,000. Bob-Estes finished second at 271. Mike Springer, Jeff Maggett and Blaine McAllister tied for third at 272, while Rick Fehr, who started the day tied with Andrew Magee and Dan Forsman, shot 71 and dropped back to 273 with a final-hole bogey. Tom Lehman also finished at 273.

MAUNA LANI, Hawaii (AP) — Raymond Floyd won $240,000 and the title of the Senior Skins.

Two-time defending champion Arnold Palmer finished second with $115,000, including $70,000 the final day.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills played for Super Bowl history Sunday, and they got it.

By winning their second straight NFL championship, the Cowboys were proclaimed the team of the '90s. By losing their fourth straight Super Bowl, the Bills ensured they will live in infamy.

Dallas won 30-13 because Emmitt Smith did his usual and because of two unlikely stars, James Washington, starting only because the Cowboys played an extra defensive back, and gaffe-prone defensive tackle Leon Lett.

Washington had a hand in 17 of Dallas' points, the most important a 46-yard touchdown return with a fumble forced by Lett 55 seconds into the second half. Smith, who was named the game's MVP, rushed for 132 yards, 61 on the go-ahead drive that immediately followed Washington's return.

While commissioner Paul Tagliabue used the "team of the '90s" label as he presented the Vince Lombardi trophy to coach Jimmy Johnson and owner Jerry Jones of the Cowboys, Dallas players were more reticent.

"It's too early," said defensive end Charles Haley, who played on San Francisco's "team of the '80s."

"Dynasty? Naw," said guard Nate Newton. "We're just a good team trying to get better every year."

In the Buffalo locker room, someone said jokingly, "Go for five in '95."

Smith, surprisingly named the game's MVP over Washington, scored twice, as Dallas became the 10th straight NFC team to win the league's title game.

They did it by outscoring the Bills 24-0 in the second half after trailing 13-6 at halftime.

It was Washington who turned the game around as the Cowboys became just the fifth team to win in consecutive years and tied San Francisco and Pittsburgh with four Super Bowl victories.

In addition to his fumble return, which tied the game at 13-13 just 55 seconds into the second half, he intercepted a pass in the fourth quarter that led to another score, and forced a first-half fumble that led to a field goal. Both fumbles were by Buffalo's star running back, Thurman Thomas, whose frustration seemed to symbolize the entire team's — he finished with just 37 yards in 16 carries.

Smith rushed for 61 of his yards on the next drive, scoring from 15 yards out to give Dallas a 20-13 lead. Lett, Haley, Jim Jeffcoat and Darren Woodson, meanwhile, all made big defensive plays to shut down a Buffalo offense that had rung up 216 yards in the first half but got just 98 after intermission.

It was not a great day for Troy Aikman, last year's MVP. The Dallas quarterback was 19 of 27 for 207 yards, but couldn't get the ball in the end zone in the first half, when Buffalo's Jim Kelly was moving the ball up and down the field with ease, passing for 176 yards before intermission. But Kelly finished with just 260 yards on 31 of 50 passing in the first Super Bowl without a touchdown pass in 20 years and just the third ever.

Smith, the league's MVP in the regular season, added the Super Bowl MVP award to his collection.

After being held to 41 yards on 10 carries in the first half, he took over after Lett and Washington had combined to tie it and Jeffcoat and Haley had combined on a 13-yard sack of Kelly on Buffalo's next series.

Dallas then got the ball on its own 36 and Smith carried for 9 yards, then ran for 3 yards, then 9, 7, 14 and 4. After Aikman hit Daryl Johnston for 3 yards, Smith dashed 15 yards up the middle on 3rd-and-three for the score that gave Dallas the lead for good.

Smith scored again from a yard out 5:10 into the fourth quarter after Washington had returned an interception 12 yards to the 34.

"Washington is a big play player, he was a big motivating factor to get things going," Smith said. "I felt Washington made the biggest plays in the turnaround. Washington had a great game all day. I wish he could have had the MVP also."

Eddie Murray, who had field goals of 41 and 34 yards in the first half, added a 20-yarder with 2:50 left, leaving Buffalo to start over next year.

"After they get big turnovers, you begin to press," said Buffalo coach Marv Levy, who joins Bud Grant, elected to the Hall of Fame on Saturday, and Don Shula as the only coaches to lose four Super Bowls.

"I said little to them after the game. I told them I admired them. We'll try it again. I think this is a team that will fight back."

ATLANTA (AP) — Some journalists took up the opposition to the Georgia state flag flying outside the Super Bowl, warning that the protest will be much greater if it isn't resolved before the 1996 Olympic Games.

"They need to get this cleared up before the Olympics," said Terry Foster, a columnist for The Detroit News. "They haven't seen anything yet."

About 100 marchers demonstrated outside the Georgia Dome Sunday and about 50 journalists briefly left the press box during the national anthem before the Dallas-Buffalo game to protest the flag, which includes the Confederate battle emblem.

"A lot of us felt we just couldn't come down here and be silent," Foster said. "Every time we see the state flag it hurts us."

Many people say the flag is offensive, with some black leaders calling it a symbol of slavery and discrimination.

"We are horrified and shocked that this symbol of racism and division continues to fly as the official symbol of the state of Georgia," said state Rep. Tyrone Brooks.

The marchers were led by Brooks, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and state Sen. Ralph David Abernathy III, son of the civil rights leader. Most of the marchers carried placards asking that the flag be changed.

"The campaign to change the flag was escalated during Super Bowl week so that we can begin to prepare for the Olympics and other big events going on in the state," Brooks said. "We will not stop until this flag is changed."

Atlanta police, Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents and State Patrol officers watched the demonstration.

A small pro-flag group also demonstrated outside the stadium, waving Confederate symbols and urging that the state banner remain the same.

The Georgia Legislature adopted the flag in 1956 as a sign of defiance against federal desegregation efforts. Gov. Zell Miller's attempts last year to change the flag failed.

NORV TURNER HEADED TO WASHINGTON? Dallas owner Jerry Jones said he's sure the Cowboys will lose top offensive assistant coach Norv Turner.

There have been persistent reports Turner will become the new coach of the Washington Redskins.

"We'd lose one hell of a coach," Cowboys receiver Michael Irvin said. "I promise you I'd give up some of my salary to keep him here. I really do appreciate this coaching staff. They believe in me."

Jones said he already had given the Redskins permission to talk with Turner, adding that other teams interested would have to seek permission.

"He's going some place," Jones said. "I'm sure Norv is going to get a head coaching job and more than likely he will be playing the Cowboys twice a year."

Vibrant Ryan heads skyward with the ball during the opening game of the Pampa mens' basketball league. In the first game of the season, Triangle Well Service downed Larry Baker Plumbing 36-17.

Men's basketball league takes to Pampa courts

The Pampa men's basketball league took to the court last week in their first games of the season.

Sponsored by the Pampa recreation department, the opening games tipped off Wednesday night at Pampa Middle School.

Games will be played every Wednesday night through Feb. 9. After Feb. 9, games will be played on Monday and Wednesday nights from Feb. 14 through March 30, according to coordinator Shane Stokes, recreation superintendent for the City of Pampa.

"There used to be a basketball league at the Pampa Youth Center," he said, "but it disbanded in the mid-80s."

"We'll play three games a night," Stokes said. Time restraints this year, he said, held the league to 10 teams.

"I think it will do well."

Stokes said he had already had to turn down the formation of eight more teams.

"Next year, we should be able to expand the number of teams and add volleyball," he said. "There has been a lot of interest in volleyball. I think it will do well."

Smith draws Bowl award with MVP performance

ATLANTA (AP) — At half-time in the Super Bowl, Emmitt Smith sought out offensive coordinator Norv Turner in the Dallas Cowboys locker room.

Smith, the MVP who won his third straight rushing title, had gained a mostly insignificant 41 yards in the first half and the Cowboys trailed Buffalo 13-6.

"Emmitt held out his hands," Turner recalled. "He said, 'See these hands? Get the ball in these hands.'"

No sooner said than done. After James Washington returned a fumble 46 yards for the tying TD, the Cowboys stopped Buffalo and took over at their own 37 to begin Operation Emmitt.

Smith got the ball on six straight plays. Five times he hit the right side on counter runs, following behind Nate Newton and Kevin Gogan, 303 and 319 pounds worth of offensive linemen.

On the seventh play, Smith rested. After Troy Aikman gained 3 yards on a pass to Daryl Johnston, it was back to the meat ticket as Smith ripped off the final 15 yards for the go-ahead touchdown, shedding tackler Jeff Wright at the line of scrimmage.

The drive was eight plays for 64 yards, with Smith's piece of the action seven runs for 61 yards.

"When you get a play that works, you run it until they stop it," he said. "If they don't stop it, you run it and run it and run it."

On that single drive, Smith gained 20 more yards than he had in the first half, a half in which the Bills seemed to have solved Dallas' offensive schemes.

"They presented problems in the first half," Smith said. "They hurt our draw because they didn't rush it. They sat and read and made plays. They didn't give us lanes."

After his one-man ground assault, Smith went back to Turner again. "I said, 'Coach, you've got to find someone else to get the ball to.'" just kept following his blocks, running through tackles. He finished with 30 carries and 132 yards and tacked on a fourth-quarter touchdown on fourth-and-1 just for good measure.

The huge haul of yards and the two TDs made Smith the MVP, completing the first regular season-Super Bowl MVP sweep in NFL history.

"Being MVP of the league and this game, too, you can't ask for anything more. I mean, I started out missing the first two ballgames and got hurt in the midpoint of the season and was behind everybody in rushing. I was able to capture that and get back in and help the team win. I mean it's been a great, great season for the team and for myself."

Once the Cowboys had the lead, they seemed to squeeze the life right out of the Bills. Smith

Dorsett retired with 12,739 yards rushing. White, defensive tackle for Dallas from 1975-88, also was elected in first year of eligibility. A nine-time Pro Bowl selection, White was co-MVP in 1978 Super Bowl. Johnson spent 16 seasons with 49ers and finished with 47 interceptions. Grant coached the Vikings 18 seasons, leading them to four Super Bowls. He had a .620 regular-season winning percentage, and his 168 NFL victories place him eighth on career list. Kelly starred for the Browns 1964-73, replacing Jim Brown. He led the league in rushing in 1967 and '68. Kelly had 12,329 total yards and made Pro Bowl six straight years. CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — American speed skater Dan Jansen set a world record in 500-meters at World Sprint Speedskating Championships, below the 36-second mark for the fourth time in his career. Jansen was clocked at 35.76 seconds and reached a speed of 33.24 mph in breaking his old record of 35.92 seconds, sixth time Jansen set or tied world 500-meter mark. Three-time Olympic gold medalist Bonnie Blair won all four races during two-day competition and set world points record for her first world championship since 1989. Jansen topped men with 144.81 points, followed by Russia's Sergei Klevchenja's 145.31 and Japan's Junichi Inoue's 145.67. Blair led women with 157.40 points, followed by Germany's Angela Hauck's 159.02 and China's Rui Hong Xue's 159.08. ALTENBERG, Germany (AP) — Cammy Myler stunned Europe's top lugers, becoming first American woman to capture a World Cup race. The 25-year-old Myler, fifth two weeks ago, her best showing this season, and fifth at 1992 Olympics, finished in 1:28.24, followed by Germany's Jan Bode at 1:28.400 and Austria's Doris Neuner with 1:28.501. Germany's Gabi Kohlisch, finishing 14th, won overall World Cup title in women's singles with 83 points, one ahead of Bode. Teen-age cousins Tobias and Markus Schiegl of Austria were surprise winners in men's doubles. 1992 Olympic gold medalists, Stefan Krause and Jan Behrendt of Germany, won overall men's doubles with 95 points. Second were Schiegl with 71. STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Randy Weber popped longest ski jump in the final round to lead three local teens to top spots in normal hill national ski jumping championships. The three earned trips to Winter Olympics and were just 2.5 points apart. Weber, 16, jumped 92.5 and 94.5 meters for 256.5 points and first national title. Ryan Heckman, 19, went 91.5 and 93.5 for 254.5 points and Todd Lodwick, 17, first-round leader and winner of large hill championship, jumped 93 and 92 meters for 254 points. MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Pete Sampras, blasting aces as fast as 126 mph, won his third straight Grand Slam title, overpowering Todd Martin in straight sets in Australian Open championship. Sampras, with 13 aces, overcame an early threat, winning a first-set tiebreaker, and rolling to a 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-4 win. Top-seeded Sampras became first man in nearly three decades to win Wimbledon, U.S. Open and Australian Open consecutively. Sampras won $322,000, ninth-seeded Martin $161,000. On Saturday, Steffi Graf reasserted her dominance with a nearly flawless performance for her fourth straight Grand Slam title and 15th overall with 6-0, 6-2 defeat of No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in 57 minutes. She earned $322,000, Sanchez Vicario $161,000. Sanchez Vicario won only 12 first-set points. Top-seeded Graf needed only 6 hours, 23 minutes, to complete all seven matches during two-week Australian Open. BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles signed free-agent reliever Lee Smith to a one-year contract, virtually guaranteeing that closer Gregg Olson will not return for 1994 season. Smith, 36, is baseball's all-time saves leader (401) with a 2.91 ERA over 14 seasons. He will receive $1.5 million plus incentives. Olson, Orioles' all-time saves leader, developed elbow problems and pitched only eight innings after the All-Star game. Smith, a five-time All-Star, had 46 saves in 1993, one short of his career high. He gave up 11 homers and had a 4.50 ERA with St. Louis before being traded to the Yankees. SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Bill Glasson shot 7-under-par 64 and came from two strokes behind to win Phoenix Open by three strokes with 16-under 268 for his sixth career title. Glasson won $216,000. Bob-Estes finished second at 271. Mike Springer, Jeff Maggett and Blaine McAllister tied for third at 272, while Rick Fehr, who started the day tied with Andrew Magee and Dan Forsman, shot 71 and dropped back to 273 with a final-hole bogey. Tom Lehman also finished at 273. MAUNA LANI, Hawaii (AP) — Raymond Floyd won $240,000 and the title of the Senior Skins. Two-time defending champion Arnold Palmer finished second with $115,000, including $70,000 the final day.

Harding didn't object in plot against Kerrigan

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tonya Harding didn't object to the plot to knock rival skater Nancy Kerrigan out of the national championships, though Harding didn't think bodyguard Shawn Eckardt could carry it off, The Oregonian reported today.

Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, said in his confession to authorities that he came up with the plot because he felt judges unfairly ranked Harding fourth at a December skating competition in Japan and wouldn't give her a fair shake at the national championships coming up, the newspaper said.

Gillooly, bodyguard Shawn Eckardt, alleged hitman Shane Stant and alleged getaway car driver Derrick Smith have all been charged with conspiracy to assault Kerrigan Jan. 6 by hitting her above the right knee with a police baton at a practice rink in Detroit just before the national championships.

Gillooly is expected to plead guilty today or Tuesday in Multnomah County Circuit Court to a charge alleging he plotted the attack. His lawyer, Ron Hoevet, has said Gillooly will make a statement and answer questions following his court appearance.

Harding has not been charged. The U.S. Figure Skating Association went through the formality Sunday of telephoning the U.S. Olympic Committee to say that Harding was still on the roster for the Winter Olympics, along with 11 other skaters and 10 alternates.

The USOC was to deliver the paperwork to the International Olympic Organizing Committee today in Lillehammer, Norway.

The association made the call with the understanding that alternates can be named until Feb. 21, two days before the Olympic skating competition begins.

The women's alternate is

Michelle Kwan, the 13-year-old from Lake Arrowhead, Calif., who finished second to Harding at the national championships in Detroit.

A special committee of the USFSA meets Tuesday to start considering whether Harding violated the organization's code of conduct. It has set a deadline of Feb. 10 to make its recommendation, but could act sooner, said committee chairman William Hybl.

J. Barlow Nelson, a Tulsa, Okla., lawyer and national figure skating judge, said Harding should skate very well if she is allowed to compete in the Olympics.

"She's not going to be gunshy of an audience," he told the Tulsa World. "She's been under a lot of scrutiny. But if she can skate the way she's been looking on TV ... she'll be great."

Gillooly appeared before a grand jury on Saturday and has reportedly accepted a plea bargain in which he pleads guilty to racketeering and agrees to testify against Harding. The charge carries a two-year prison term.

Gillooly only agreed to testify against Harding after learning that she had dropped her cover story while being interrogated by the FBI, said his brother, John Gillooly.

"Whatever implications were made against him, he has to rebut," John Gillooly said Sunday. "If it involves implicating her, that's probably the crux of it."

After talking to the FBI for 1 1/2 hours on Jan. 18, Harding lied to Jeff Gillooly, telling him she had told them nothing, John Gillooly said.

"Jeff would have fallen on his sword for Tonya if Tonya had told him the truth. But she didn't," Hoevet told The Oregonian newspaper. Hoevet didn't return telephone calls Sunday to The Associated Press.

Deputy District Attorney Norm Frink said he didn't expect any indictments to be handed up soon.

Quoting sources familiar with Gillooly's confession to the FBI, The Oregonian gave this account: Gillooly hatched the plot and began discussing it with bodyguard Shawn Eckardt before Harding returned from skating in Japan. The first she heard of it was when she returned the week of Dec. 12, a month before the national championships in Detroit.

Gillooly and Harding both felt the U.S. Figure Skating Association was prejudiced in Kerrigan's favor, noting Kerrigan was featured on brochures and the cover of the magazine promoting the national championships.

When Harding said she doubted Eckardt could successfully knock Kerrigan out of the competition, Gillooly told her someone else would do the actual assault. The plan then seemed forgotten.

But Eckardt, acting on his own, contacted his friend Smith, who had recently moved to Arizona. Smith agreed to carry out the plan with the help of his nephew, Shane Minoaka Stant.

Smith and Stant drove from Arizona to Portland. On Dec. 28, Eckardt met with Gillooly and Harding and they agreed to go ahead with the plan.

Harding called the skating rink outside Boston where Kerrigan practiced to get her schedule. But Stant failed to carry out the plan in Massachusetts and went to Detroit to try again.

Harding got Kerrigan's room number at the hotel where she was staying, and relayed it to Gillooly, who arranged for it to get to Smith and Stant in Detroit. They had hoped to attack Kerrigan in her hotel room, but failed.

Following her fourth-place finish in Japan, Harding complained to reporters that after skating a clean technical program, she received lower scores than skaters who had fallen.

Harding didn't object in plot against Kerrigan

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tonya Harding didn't object to the plot to knock rival skater Nancy Kerrigan out of the national championships, though Harding didn't think bodyguard Shawn Eckardt could carry it off, The Oregonian reported today.

Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, said in his confession to authorities that he came up with the plot because he felt judges unfairly ranked Harding fourth at a December skating competition in Japan and wouldn't give her a fair shake at the national championships coming up, the newspaper said.

Gillooly, bodyguard Shawn Eckardt, alleged hitman Shane Stant and alleged getaway car driver Derrick Smith have all been charged with conspiracy to assault Kerrigan Jan. 6 by hitting her above the right knee with a police baton at a practice rink in Detroit just before the national championships.

Gillooly is expected to plead guilty today or Tuesday in Multnomah County Circuit Court to a charge alleging he plotted the attack. His lawyer, Ron Hoevet, has said Gillooly will make a statement and answer questions following his court appearance.

Harding has not been charged. The U.S. Figure Skating Association went through the formality Sunday of telephoning the U.S. Olympic Committee to say that Harding was still on the roster for the Winter Olympics, along with 11 other skaters and 10 alternates.

The USOC was to deliver the paperwork to the International Olympic Organizing Committee today in Lillehammer, Norway. The association made the call with the understanding that alternates can be named until Feb. 21, two days before the Olympic skating competition begins.

The women's alternate is

Michelle Kwan, the 13-year-old from Lake Arrowhead, Calif., who finished second to Harding at the national championships in Detroit.

A special committee of the USFSA meets Tuesday to start considering whether Harding violated the organization's code of conduct. It has set a deadline of Feb. 10 to make its recommendation, but could act sooner, said committee chairman William Hybl.

J. Barlow Nelson, a Tulsa, Okla., lawyer and national figure skating judge, said Harding should skate very well if she is allowed to compete in the Olympics.

"She's not going to be gunshy of an audience," he told the Tulsa World. "She's been under a lot of scrutiny. But if she can skate the way she's been looking on TV ... she'll be great."

Gillooly appeared before a grand jury on Saturday and has reportedly accepted a plea bargain in which he pleads guilty to racketeering and agrees to testify against Harding. The charge carries a two-year prison term.

Gillooly only agreed to testify against Harding after learning that she had dropped their cover story while being interrogated by the FBI, said his brother, John Gillooly.

"Whatever implications were made against him, he has to rebut," John Gillooly said Sunday. "If it involves implicating her, that's probably the crux of it."

After talking to the FBI for 10 1/2 hours on Jan. 18, Harding lied to Jeff Gillooly, telling him she had told them nothing, John Gillooly said.

"Jeff would have fallen on his sword for Tonya if Tonya had told him the truth. But she didn't," Hoevet told The Oregonian newspaper. Hoevet didn't return telephone calls Sunday to The Associated Press.

Deputy District Attorney Norm Frink said he didn't expect any indictments to be handed up soon.

Quoting sources familiar with Gillooly's confession to the FBI, The Oregonian gave this account:

Gillooly hatched the plot and began discussing it with bodyguard Shawn Eckardt before Harding returned from skating in Japan. The first she heard of it was when she returned the week of Dec. 12, a month before the national championships in Detroit.

Gillooly and Harding both felt the U.S. Figure Skating Association was prejudiced in Kerrigan's favor, noting Kerrigan was featured on brochures and the cover of the magazine promoting the national championships.

When Harding said she doubted Eckardt could successfully knock Kerrigan out of the competition, Gillooly told her someone else would do the actual assault. The plan then seemed forgotten.

But Eckardt, acting on his own, contacted his friend Smith, who had recently moved to Arizona. Smith agreed to carry out the plan with the help of his nephew, Shane Minoaka Stant.

Smith and Stant drove from Arizona to Portland. On Dec. 28, Eckardt met with Gillooly and Harding and they agreed to go ahead with the plan.

Harding called the skating rink outside Boston where Kerrigan practiced to get her schedule. But Stant failed to carry out the plan in Massachusetts and went to Detroit to try again.

Harding got Kerrigan's room number at the hotel where she was staying, and relayed it to Gillooly, who arranged for it to get to Smith and Stant in Detroit. They had hoped to attack Kerrigan in her hotel room, but failed.

Following her fourth-place finish in Japan, Harding complained to reporters that after skating a clean technical program, she received lower scores than skaters who had fallen.

Hundreds in South Africa lay flowers for victims of Station Strangler

MITCHELLS PLAIN, South Africa (AP) — Hundreds of mourners offered flowers and lit candles in church Sunday for the young victims of a serial killer, and police were criticized for acting slowly because the victims were not white.

Since 1986, police have linked the so-called Station Strangler to the murders of at least 19 young boys, all from Mitchells Plain. The strangler is believed to lure his victims from train platforms before sodomizing and strangling them. Ten bodies have been found since Jan. 20.

Police called off their search for more victims on Friday, but residents and neighborhood watch groups from other suburbs continued combing the bushes and dunes of this Cape Town area community on Sunday.

"If these were white children, this murderer would have been caught long ago," Allan Boesak, a regional African National Congress leader, told the cheering congregation of 500 at the Anglican church.

Mitchells Plain is a community of racially mixed descendants of blacks, whites, Malays and Hottentots.

Nine boys were found dead before the killings appeared to have stopped in 1992. Until the new discoveries were made, police believed that the murderer was either dead or in prison on other charges.

At the service in the local Anglican church Sunday, ANC President Nelson Mandela sent a written message that was read to the congregation:

"To lose a child in such appalling circumstances is one of the greatest tragedies that can befall a human being. This dangerous, sick man who threatens the safety and peace of mind of your community must be found."

Her face etched with pain, Kathleen Samaai had to be supported as she lit a candle for her 14-year-old son, Neville, whose body was found on Thursday.

Small children sat silently in front row pews, holding cardboard signs reading: "Stop killing our children," and "Children have a right to grow with affection and security."

Rev. Keith Benjamin pleaded with the community to forgive the killer, and urged the Station Strangler to surrender to police.

"Please, please stop killing our children," Benjamin said.

Report says many nations lag in education of girls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 85 million more boys than girls receive elementary and secondary education worldwide, according to a report that says the gender gap in education leads to more babies, more disease and greater hardship.

The study, released Sunday by Population Action International, documents for the first time the gap in 112 countries and estimates the cost of equalizing education.

"Educating girls is one of the best investments any country can make," said Joseph Speidel, president of PAI, which works for worldwide access to family planning and population stabilization.

Based on 1991 data, it says $6.5 billion annually could educate 76 million more girls to close the gap in countries where it is most serious.

The annual cost is estimated to triple over the next dozen years, but the report says it would pay back in lower fertility rates, fewer infant deaths, better hygiene, reduced poverty and higher literacy.

"The educational status of women has a great deal to do with how many children they have and therefore population stability," said Shanti Conly, a population researcher who edited the study.

Prominent economists and social scientists have come to agree in recent years that educating women helps improve conditions in developing countries, especially for rural people.

The study rates each country on a 100-point scale according to the educational attainment of women, female-male enrollment ratios and the percentage of females enrolled.

France and Canada, where women average more than 11 years of schooling, top the list, both with scores above 99.

At the bottom, scoring 21, is the central African nation of Chad, where the average woman has less than a month of formal schooling and there is one girl in secondary school for every five boys.

The United States, with 95 girls for every 100 boys, ranks sixth, following Finland, Norway and Belgium.

Among those near the top, rated "very good," are some less-wealthy countries, including Cuba and Mongolia. A few Asian, African and Middle Eastern countries are in the "good" category, including the Philippines, Botswana and Kuwait.

In China, the proverb "married daughter, spilt water" underscores traditional feelings that girls contribute little to a family. The world's most populous country rates "fair," with 86 females enrolled for every 100 males in primary schools and 73 per 100 in secondary grades.

The biggest gender gap in education is in India, where 33 million girls would have to be enrolled to match each boy.

Among ways suggested to increase female enrollment: Hire more female teachers to overcome cultural taboos against having girls taught by men; build schools closer to rural communities to overcome reluctance to have girls travel long distances; and provide separate girls' schools in some countries.

Speidel said girls' education should be given a top priority worldwide, but more children of both sexes need to be educated.

Worldwide, 69 percent of the 1.28 billion children ages 6-17 are in school. In poorer countries, enrollments average less than 50 percent, according to PAI demographer Nada Chaya.
