PAMPA -- Henry Watkins Skinner remained in Gray County jail today after being indicted Monday for capital murder in the deaths of a Pampa family.

Gray County grand jurors charged the 31-year-old man with the New Year's Eve bludgeoning of Twila Busby, 40, and stabbings of her two sons, Elwin Caler, 22, and Randolph Busby, 20, in their east side Pampa home.

Evidence of all three murders will be presented during trial, said Assistant District Attorney Tracey Blades. The charge of capital murder requires that more than one be killed during the course of the same criminal transaction, she said.

Skinner is accused of battering Mrs. Busby and fatally stabbing Caler and Randolph Busby around midnight New Year's Eve at their home at 804 E. Campbell. He was arrested on outstanding warrants for unrelated offenses about 3:40 a.m. New Year's Day at the home of Andrea Reed at 705 S. Henry. On Jan. 4, he was charged with the three murders. Bond was denied on the capital murder charge.

PAMPA -- The Pampa City Commission officially passed three ordinances today which increase sewer and water rates.

The specially called meetings -- one Monday and one today -- were called to correct a mistake made during the second reading of the ordinance last week, when the new water rates were misprinted. The new rates will take effect 10 days after they are posted.

In other business, Bill Preston, of the Henderson-based Preston Consultant firm, was hired to advise the city in insurance purchases at a cost not to exceed $1,000 plus travel expenses.

The commission is scheduled to meet in executive session at 4 p.m. Friday in the City Commission Chamber to discuss hiring a new city manager.

AMARILLO -- Representatives for public schools around the Texas Panhandle are meeting today in Amarillo in the Region XVI headquarters to discuss the possible realignment of the University Interscholastic League.

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Governors are pushing a framework for compromise on health care reform that stops short of some of President Clinton's goals but includes a Republican concession that employers be required to make coverage available to workers.

The "Call to Action" approved Monday by the National Governors Association leaves open the question of how to pay for a major health care reform program, because Republicans and Democrats in the group were divided on the financing question.

Still, the governors suggested that their bipartisan consensus on an array of policy reforms should prove to Democrat and Republicans in Congress that compromise was possible.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) -- It's 3 o'clock and classes are over for the day, but fifth-grader Keisha Cox is settling down for several more hours at McKinley Elementary School.

With no one at home until evening, the school is her refuge. "There are people here to help you with your homework, and after you're done with your homework you can have a little fun," she said.

Around the country, assisted by social service organizations and private business, schools are staying open into the evening -- some until 10 p.m. or later -- to give children a safe haven in dangerous surroundings.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., wants the federal government to get involved in the so-called community school concept. At his initiative, the crime bill passed by the Senate late last year includes $400 million over four years for community schools. The bill is awaiting action by a joint House-Senate conference committee.

Ex-husband: Harding was in on Kerrigan plot

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) -- Tonya Harding's ex-husband claims she was in on the plot against Nancy Kerrigan from the beginning, convinced that skating judges wouldn't give her a fair shake, the ex-husband's lawyer says.

Jeff Gillooly struck a plea bargain under which he was to plead guilty to racketeering today and get two years in prison and a $100,000 fine in exchange for his testimony. "Tonya was in on it from the beginning," Gillooly's lawyer, Ron Hoevet, told The Associated Press on Monday night. "That's what Jeff has said, and I believe that to be the truth."

Investigators have gathered corroborating evidence, including telephone and bank records and videotapes, Hoevet said.

Last week, Harding denied any advance knowledge of the Jan. 6 attack and said she didn't learn until days later that people close to her may have been involved. She has not been charged.

Gillooly is accused of asking Harding's bodyguard, Shawn Eckardt, to send alleged hitman Shane Stant and alleged getaway driver Derrick Smith to Detroit to club Kerrigan on the knee, knocking her out of the national championships. Harding went on to win the championships, along with a spot on the Olympic team.

Gillooly told authorities that he and Harding began planning the attack in early December after she finished fourth at a competition in Japan and feared judges at the U.S. championships would hold it against her, Hoevet said. "They viewed Kerrigan as the

Harding: a bad day on the ice clear favorite, the fair-haired girl," Hoevet told The New York Times. "They thought what happened to Tonya in Japan was politics and that would hurt her in Detroit."

Meanwhile, a special committee of the U.S. Figure Skating Association was to meet today to consider whether to recommend removing Harding from the Olympic team.

On Monday, the U.S. Olympic Committee included Kerrigan and Harding on the team that will compete in Lillehammer, Norway. Michelle Kwan, 13, was named an alternate. The Games begin Feb. 12, but the roster can be changed as late as Feb. 21.

Pampans turn to snow sports

Jimmie Poole and his daughter Kandra were two of many who took to the slopes of Central Park Monday afternoon to enjoy the snow deposited in Pampa over the weekend. Students had the day off Monday, not because of weather, but because of a scheduled teacher's work day. Sub-freezing temperatures forecast for today in Pampa seemed to assure slick slopes at least through Wednesday. (Pampa News photo by Darlene Holmes)

Cold front continues advance across state

Compiled from staff and Associated Press reports

A snowstorm that dumped more than a foot of snow on the Texas Panhandle kept its bitter grip on the Lone Star State this morning.

In West Texas, where flurries first fell over the weekend, state troopers warned that slush could harden again into slippery road hazards.

Interstate 40 from Oklahoma to New Mexico was extremely slick, Department of Public Safety public information officer Wayne Beigle said. Several 18-wheelers had jackknifed around Amarillo, he said, and vehicles were sliding off rural roads. Patches of ice also covered U.S. 60.

"The next 24 to 48 hours are real critical," Beigle said. "Instead of the fluffy stuff, now we have hard-packed snow. I call it the thaw-and-refreeze stage."

Abandoned vehicles dotted roadside ditches throughout the panhandle. No serious injuries were reported from the accidents.

The high temperature in Pampa was expected to reach 30 degrees today, slightly warmer than the 22-degree high Monday. Dalhart and Amarillo reported one degree lows over night while Lubbock reported 15 degrees.

Five inches of snow remained on the ground in Pampa today.

Light snow or sleet was expected through today in some parts of South Texas, with light snow in the north, Guadalupe Mountains and Big Bend -- plus flurries in the west.

The arctic cold front dusted light snow along a line north of Austin to Kerrville, the National Weather Service reported.

Flurries were expected to melt in other cities

-- including San Antonio -- when they hit the ground.

The NWS issued a winter weather advisory for areas around Abilene, Brownwood and San Angelo, where as much as 4 inches of snow was already recorded. A snow advisory applied for cities south and west of a line from Coleman through Comanche to Hamilton and Lampasas.

Less than one inch of new snow was expected in North Texas, but travel was already hazardous with over two inches of snow on the ground and many bridges, and overpasses and roads iced over.

Light snow and flurries also stretched early today from near Andrews to near Midland and as far south as Monahans.

About an inch of snow was also expected to fall in Central Texas, according to the state Department of Transportation. It issued a winter travel advisory for the area and North Texas.

Amarillo dug out Monday from 10 inches of snow that closed schools and some businesses. About 70 miles to the southeast, Silvertown received 15 inches. In Canyon, a foot of snow shut down classes at West Texas A&M.

"It's slow going -- a lot of snow packed and icy roads," said NWS forecaster Ed Andrade in Amarillo. "Even though the sun is out, it's not melting."

Overnight lows until Wednesday were expected down to 0 in the Panhandle, warming into the 30s in South Texas. Daytime highs were expected to range from the 30s to near 50 in Big Bend river valleys.

Travel conditions were expected to improve this afternoon.

IRA advocate ready for peace

By PAT MILTON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) -- Gerry Adams, leader of the Irish Republican Army's political wing, arrived in the United States on an extraordinary 48-hour visa and declared, "This generation ... is going to see peace in Ireland."

Adams, whose legal Sinn Fein party supports the outlawed IRA, had been blocked at least eight times over the past two decades from entering this country. But the Clinton administration granted him a special visa to attend a conference starting today on peace efforts.

"Those who tried to kill me, I have to shake hands with them tomorrow in order to move the situation forward," Adams, who was wounded in the neck and shoulder in an attack 10 years ago, said Monday night on CNN's "Larry King Live."

"I want to see the gun taken out of Irish politics. I want to see the IRA disbanded, I want to see the British Army presence removed."

The broadcast was withheld from CNN's European satellite because British law bans

Adams' voice on television.

The conference is sponsored by the National Committee on American Foreign Policy, a private group that includes former diplomats such as former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Some hope the dialogue will help end 25 years of warfare over whether Northern Ireland should remain a British province or be allowed to unite with Ireland. The violence has killed 3,200 Catholics and Protestants. The focus of the conference is the declaration signed in December by Britain and Ireland, in which Britain agreed to give up control of Northern Ireland if most residents favored it. Protestants, who tend to oppose joining the overwhelmingly Catholic Ireland, hold a slim majority in the province.

Adams declined an invitation to join in the December pact, saying he wants certain "clarifications" from the British.

County Commission reaches agreement with Skellytown

County commissioners agreed today to pay Skellytown volunteer fire department $484 per run for firefighting services in Gray County.

Earlier, the commission heard from Johnny Miller, a Gray County rancher, concerning installing a gate across a county road.

Miller in the past asked the commission to close off part of a third-class county road adjacent to his property. He said people drive out on the road and dump their trash.

Miller said he intended to install a gate across the 20-foot wide caliche road as permitted by law in an effort to keep people from using his property as a dump ground. County Attorney Todd Alvey told commissioners today that Miller was fully within his rights under the law to take such an action.

In other business, commissioners voted to have a tax delinquent property at 813 Malone demolished.

Commissioners also changed the name on an insurance policy at the request of a representative of the insurance company.

Since the county's insurance policy with International Surplus Lines Insurance Company had expired, a company representative requested the name on the policy be changed to Coregis Indemnity Company.

In a move to clarify the titles of county offices, the commission noted that county offices were designated by precinct and there are no longer places within the precincts.

The commission also approved payment of salaries and bills of $198,590.45.

Inmate escapes in limo

CLEVELAND (AP) -- A man awaiting trial on bad check charges spared no expense on a getaway car after escaping from jail.

Jonathan L. Merino ordered a black stretch limousine, gave the driver $100 for the $45 fare and told him to keep the change.

Police searched for the 37-year-old native of Rochester, N.Y., today.

Merino walked out of the minimum-security Medina County Jail while on kitchen duty Saturday and called a limousine service from a gas station.

A gas station employee who found Merino's jail bracelet alerted police, who learned from the limousine company that a car was headed to the airport with a rider picked up two blocks from the jail.

The driver slowed to 50 mph after he was alerted by cellular phone that his passenger was most probably a fugitive. But Merino asked to be dropped off in downtown Cleveland before the driver spotted a police car.

Authorities said they don't know how he got the cash and a change of clothes.

Sheriff L. John Ribar said Merino escaped through a gate left open for his department's cars.

Law official: Powder burns consistent with suicide in Vincent Foster case

By RICHARD KEIL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gun found on Vince Foster's body last summer was tested by a federal agency and the powder burns "were consistent" with forensic evidence that the deputy White House counsel killed himself, a law enforcement official said today.

The official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, released additional details about the investigation into Foster's death in an effort to dispel speculation in a newspaper story last week that foul play, not suicide, could have been involved.

The .38-caliber revolver found in Foster's hand last July was tested afterwards by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the powder burns in those tests "were consistent" with those found on Foster's body, the official said.

The match was instrumental in leading U.S. Park Police investigators to conclude that Foster pulled the trigger himself, the official said.

"That was the key thing, along with other matters — how his body was lying, the indentation of the gun's trigger on his finger," the source said. "Suicide was the logical conclusion."

The Park Police concluded its investigation last summer, ruling Foster's death a suicide. Police, however, have not publicly released their final report, saying only that the evidence supported the suicide conclusion.

The testing of the gun and evidence such as the indentation of the trigger on Foster's finger, first reported in today's editions of the Daily News in New York and confirmed by the source, provide new details about how police reached their conclusion.

It came after the New York Post reported last week that paramedics who attended to Foster's body found the absence of blood unusual, and concluded that and other factors raised the possibility that the White House deputy counsel had fallen victim to foul play.

The Wall Street Journal, meanwhile, has filed a lawsuit demanding the release of the Park Police report on Foster's suicide.

In an editorial Monday, the newspaper said it wants the report because of speculation about foul play. The paper has been unable to get the report despite a Freedom of Information Act request filed in August, it said.

Noting the New York Post reports, the Journal editorial said: "If they are wrong, it's a great pity the complete Park Service police report has not been released to still such speculation."

"If they are right, the Justice Department and the Park Service Police have had a great deal to hide. Either alternative suggests that the report should be released forthwith."

U.S. Park Police Maj. Robert Hines said the files and documents requested by the Journal, The Associated Press and other news organizations cannot be released without authorization from the Justice Department.

The Journal said it has also filed a Freedom of Information request for a torn-up note investigators found at the bottom of Foster's briefcase.

The note said Washington was a place where "ruining people is considered sport," and it criticized the media, particularly the Journal. The government released the text, but the Journal wants a photocopy of the original.

Mullins resigns as vice chairman of Federal Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — David W. Mullins Jr., today announced his resignation as vice chairman and member of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mullins' resignation, effective Feb. 14, provides President Clinton with his second opportunity to appoint a Fed governor. Wayne D. Angell is retiring later this month and is expected to be succeeded by economist George Perry of the Brookings Institute.

Mullins, 47, said he plans to enter private business. "Since most of the financial and economic problems, which have been the focus of my professional energies in recent years, have been essentially resolved, I feel now is the appropriate time to turn to new and different challenges," he said in a statement.

Mullins' resignation came a day after Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, served notice on Congress and the nation that the Fed was poised to increase interest rates.

Greenspan said it was only a matter of time before the institution would move to constrict the money supply. He said the aim would be to avoid the mistakes of past Fed chiefs who waited too long before tightening up on credit and thus allowed inflation to get out of hand.

Mullins was sworn in as a board member on May 21, 1990, and as vice chairman on July 24, 1991. Before joining the Fed, he was assistant secretary of the treasury for domestic finance from 1988 to 1990 and played a major role in developing the savings and loan bailout.

He plans to be a partner in Long-Term Capital Management, L.P., a recently formed investment management firm specializing in the development and application of sophisticated financial technology on a global basis. The firm is headquartered in Greenwich, Conn.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan said in a statement:

"I wish my two departing colleagues well in their future endeavors. Only those of us who have had the privilege of working with David Mullins and Wayne Angell on a day-to-day basis can fully appreciate the contributions they have made to the success of the Federal Reserve system during their tenures. To say they will be missed in an understatement. They have been close personal friends and trusted colleagues."

Angell, a Kansas banker, farmer and university professor, has not announced his plans. He leaves office Feb. 9.

Successors to Angell and Mullins requires Senate confirmation.

Both Mullins and Angell have said they will not attend the Thursday-Friday meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank's monetary policy-making body, which controls short-term interest rates.

The FOMC is comprised of the seven Fed governors and five of the 12 presidents of Fed regional banks.

Mullins noted that his government tenure included the 1987 stock market crash, S&L crisis, banking system problems and the U.S. and world recessions.

"In my view, much progress has been made in addressing these problems," he said in his statement. "U.S. markets are vibrant and healthy, the U.S. banking system is well capitalized and profitable, the nation's financial system is sound."

French journalist killed, Australian colleague wounded in Algeria

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A French journalist was slain and an Australian colleague wounded Tuesday, becoming the latest foreign victims of the two-year Islamic insurgency against Algeria's army-backed regime.

The attack came a day after the hard-line defense minister, Lamine Zeroual, took office as president. He vowed to keep fighting militant Muslims while also offering talks on ending the rebellion.

The two journalists were shot at midday in the Casbah, a crumbling, alley-filled neighborhood that is a stronghold of extremists. Security officers, who said the two men were working for Australian Broadcast Inc., called it a terrorist attack.

Olivier Quemener, 34, died soon after reaching a hospital, officials said. His Australian colleague, Scott Allan White, 35, was reported in serious condition. Further details were not immediately available.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, but it appeared to be part of the civil war that has killed 3,000 people. At least 27 foreigners have been slain since militants declared last year that foreigners would be targets.

The insurgency was touched off by an army coup in January 1992 that blocked an expected victory by Islamic fundamentalists in Algeria's first multiparty-parliament elections. Unrest has persisted despite curfews, army sweeps and trials in secretive anti-terrorism courts.

Muslim militants have targeted foreigners partly because their skills and investment are vital to the economy. They also have attacked Algerian intellectuals and journalists, but Quemener was the first foreign journalist killed.

LHS calculator team takes first place

LEFORS — Lefors High School's calculator team won first place in UIL calculator competition, according to superintendent Joe Roper.

Members of the team also won at the University Interscholastic League academic practice meet Saturday in Clarendon.

Bryan Bockmon won second, Ginger Hannon won fourth and Michelle Helser won third in individual competition.

Jana Durocoza won first in physics.

The school's computer science team — Angie Turpen, Tommy Cox, and Dennis Williams — won second.

Ginger Hannon won fourth in math competition. Jennifer Williams won fourth in poetry interpretation.

Texas Salvation Army assisting quake relief

Six Texas Division Salvation Army officers have gone to California to relieve Salvation Army officers there who have been working around the clock assisting earthquake victims, according to Capt. Todd Smith, The Salvation Army Texas divisional secretary.

"We received word Friday ... that officers were needed to relieve those who have worked tirelessly since the earthquake hit," Smith said. "We immediately pulled together a team of top-notch officers, experienced in disaster relief."

Texas Salvation Army officers leaving for California include Auxiliary Capt. Dan New, Dallas, Oak Cliff; Maj. Harvey Harwell, Galveston; Capt. Paul White, Lufkin; Capt. Edward Alonzo, Abilene; Capt. Charles Trask, Victoria; and Capt. Ernest Branscum, San Angelo.

These officers will work under the command of Col. George Church, Southern California divisional commander, and will assist as needed. The team is scheduled to return Feb. 5, and a second team of Texas officers is scheduled to depart the same day for another week, if needed. Both teams consist of bilingual officers.

The Salvation Army Southern California Division has been on site since the initial quake hit Jan. 17, managing park tent cities; distributing water, tents, meals, diapers, coats and blankets; and counseling and comforting the grieving and disoriented, Smith said.

FEMA authorities and public officials requested Salvation Army officers to assist at each of the 18 disaster assistance centers.

In cooperation with the Department of Housing and Urban Development, The Salvation Army is implementing Project E.A.R.T.H. (Earthquake Aid for Relocation and Transitional Housing) for families and persons who no longer have residences.

The Texas Division is still only accepting monetary donations, according to Lt. Col. Jack T. Waters, Texas divisional commander. "Gifts in-kind, i.e., clothing, food and blankets, are being handled by divisions closer to the disaster site," Waters said. "But monetary donations are desperately needed and can be immediately put to use where it is needed most."

Checks should be marked "Disaster Relief" and sent to the local Salvation Army or to The Salvation Army Texas Divisional Headquarters, P.O. Box 2608, Dallas, TX 75221. Credit card contributions can be made; further information can be obtained by calling 1-800-725-9005.

GOP criticism of phone records' destruction a political attack, Richards' campaign says

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican criticism of Gov. Ann Richards' destruction of her office's long-distance telephone records is politically motivated, Richards' campaign says.

Chuck McDonald, spokesman for Richards' re-election effort, said Monday that the GOP is trying to allege that Richards did the same thing that U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison did. Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, is scheduled to go to trial Feb. 7 on ethics charges.

"There has been no allegation of any wrongdoing of any kind against Ann Richards, but the Republicans want news articles the week before the trial, making the same allegations against Ann Richards that were made against Sen. Hutchison," McDonald said.

Republican officials denied the charge as they turned up the criticism.

GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said Richards and her aides have lied about when her long-distance telephone records were destroyed.

"Gov. Richards and her staff have attempted to lie their way out of trouble, changing stories, falsely placing blame on others, and raising disturbing questions about the governor's credibility," Meyer told a news conference.

At dispute is why and when Richards began to destroy her itemized long-distance telephone records after each month's bill was paid.

Last week, Richards said her office was following the same procedure as former Gov. Bill Clements by destroying the records monthly.

Clements, a Republican, denied that and has demanded an apology.

Later, Richards' staff said the decision to destroy the records was made in 1992. They changed that to 1993 in later statements.

Over the weekend, Richards' press secretary Bill Cryer said the office likely will start preserving the records.

Meyer said he didn't know if the records were destroyed illegally, and he stopped short of charging that they were destroyed to cover up something.

"Obviously they were concerned about something that was in there, or they wouldn't have done it," he said.

Richards, in Washington, D.C. attending the winter meeting of the National Governors Association, didn't think the controversy was that important.

"It just tells me that this is political season," the governor said.

She added, "We tried to follow the letter of the law, the staff did. And they are going to assemble, I think, everything they possibly can assemble for anybody that wants to see it."

The Travis County district attorney's office has said they will ask the governor's office for an explanation about the destruction of the records.

Meyer noted the decision to destroy the records was reached about the same time that an investigation opened into Hutchison's tenure as state treasurer. She was elected to the Senate in a June 5 special election runoff. Her Treasury office was raided June 10 by the district attorney's office.

"You don't make a major change in policy and begin destroying official state records and forget about the timing and the reasons, especially when a United States senator has been the subject of a political investigation on similar charges," he said.

Hutchison is charged with using state employees, state facilities and state funds for personal and political purposes while she was Texas treasurer, and then altering records to cover-up her activities.

She has denied any wrongdoing, and claims the charges stem from a Democratic-plot to hurt her re-election effort.

Andrews tops Democratic rivals in funds for campaign for Senate

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Houston Congressman Mike Andrews began 1994 tops in fund raising among candidates vying for the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat held by Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Campaign finance reports filed Monday with the Federal Election Commission show Andrews started the year with $496,207 in cash on hand. For the six-month period that ended Dec. 31, Andrews had $295,025 in contributions and $199,147 in expenditures.

Andrews had four times more money to kick off the year than former Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, identified by polls as the Democratic frontrunner in the March 8 primary.

Mattox trailed both Andrews and Dallas businessman Richard Fisher, reporting $113,779 in cash on hand as of Dec. 31. He received $206,990 in contributions and spent $93,211 during the six-month period.

Fisher reported $339,866 in cash on hand — $250,000 from a personal loan to his campaign. He received $176,047 in contributions and spent $86,180.

Neither Andrews nor Mattox reported any campaign debts.

The Mattox campaign went on the offensive, with campaign manager Harmon Lisnow saying the money-raising efforts "were geared to kick off after the Jan. 3 filing deadline, following the deadline for this report."

"And we've been on target since that time," Lisnow said in a statement.

Lisnow said the campaign expected to be outspent in the primary. "Our opponents include a multimillionaire who spent $2 million of his own (money) in last year's special election and a congressman who could transfer the huge amounts he's gotten from the insurance and medical industries," Lisnow said of Fisher and Andrews.

Andrews led the pack in contributions received during the last six months from political action committees — with $169,875 or 57.5 percent of his funds raised coming from PACs.

For the six months that ended in December, Hutchison received $328,603 from PACs, accounting for 21 percent of her contributions. Mattox reported 3 percent, or $7,450, of his contributions were from PACs. Fisher received no PAC money.

Andrews campaign spokesman Scot Sutherland denied the Mattox campaign statement. "As usual, he takes the low road," Sutherland said. "Before this race is finished, we'll have raised far more money from individuals and smaller contributors than Jim Mattox will."

Fisher campaign spokesman Martin Johnson sidestepped the criticism, but said: "This campaign is not about money ... Our opponents in this campaign are professional politicians of the past and Richard Fisher represents the future."

Hutchison's campaign war chest dwarfs those of her Democratic rivals. For the last six months of the year, her campaign took in $1,548,087 in contributions and spent $926,786. She began 1994 with $1,493,291 in cash on hand and $11,362 in debts.

Hutchison, who ran in the May special election and June runoff for the seat once held by Lloyd Bentsen, raised $8,536,566 last year and spent $7,196,135.

Her campaign fund-raising is expected to go into low gear as her trial on ethics charges approaches. She will go on trial Feb. 7 in Fort Worth on charges that while state treasurer she used state employees, state facilities and state funds for personal and political purposes and then altered records to cover up her activities.

Fortuneteller sorry about her role in teen's murder plot, lawyer says

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A fortuneteller is remorseful about her involvement in a plot to kill a high school student, her attorney says.

"I just don't have a reason as to why she would get involved, and that's the unanswered question," attorney Edmund Cyganiewicz said after his client, Maria Mercedes Martinez, pleaded guilty Monday to conspiracy to commit murder.

"She's basically a very good lady and I just don't know how she got involved in this."

Mrs. Martinez, 72, agreed to testify against Dora Garcia Cisneros, who is accused of paying cash to have 18-year-old Joey Fischer killed, and Daniel Garza, who is accused of hiring the gunmen with Mrs. Cisneros' money.

Mrs. Cisneros, the wife of a prominent Brownsville surgeon, is accused of plotting Fischer's death after he broke off a relationship with her daughter in 1992.

Fischer was shot to death in March 1993.

Investigators say Mrs. Martinez was a card-reading fortuneteller who advised both Mrs. Cisneros and Garza. The indictment accuses the fortuneteller of serving as an intermediary between Mrs. Cisneros and Garza.

All three were charged with capital murder, which is punishable by death or life in prison. Cyganiewicz said Mrs. Martinez pleaded guilty to the lesser offense in part because of incriminating statements she made to investigators before she was indicted.

"Mrs. Martinez cooperated with the authorities from day one. I think that had a lot to do with it," Cyganiewicz said. "And quite frankly, I think the state would probably even agree that her testimony is very important and is necessary to at least try the other defendants."

Mrs. Martinez faces two to 20 years in prison if the judge follows the recommendations in the plea agreement. She will be sentenced after she testifies against Mrs. Cisneros, 56, and Garza, 43.

District Judge Rogelio Valdez denied defense motions Monday to try Mrs. Cisneros and Garza separately. Jury selection was scheduled to continue into next week.

Mrs. Martinez immigrated from Mexico in her teens. For the past 23 years she has run a small used-clothing shop in downtown Brownsville. Authorities say she practiced folk healing and fortunetelling in a back room.

During a pretrial hearing Monday, Garza's attorney angrily accused Cameron County District Attorney Luis Saez of breaking a pledge to drop the capital charge against Garza.

Defendant Paul Fatta identified as weapons buyer for Koresh compound at Davidian trial

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gun dealers called as prosecution witnesses say a disciple of apocalyptic preacher David Koresh shelled out thousands of dollars at a time for weapons.

Defense attorneys contend there's nothing illegal about that.

Especially in Texas.

"Except for Christmas, there's a gun show every weekend somewhere in Texas. There could be four, five, six gun shows every weekend," said dealer Morris Rodgers of Fort Worth during cross-examination.

Under questioning by prosecutor Bill Johnston, Rodgers testified he sold an AK-47 assault-style rifle to defendant Paul Fatta in July 1992.

Rodgers also said that in December 1991 he drove with Fatta, Koresh and another man named Henry McMahon to Indiana to buy firearms. Fatta and Koresh took "around $25,000" in cash from a briefcase to pay for about 50 guns, Rodgers said.

In cross-examination, Rodgers said he witnessed nothing illegal on the Indiana trip. Rodgers said he bought $50,000 worth of guns himself with a cashier's check.

Another gun dealer, Thao Dinh Le of Oklahoma, testified he legally sold Fatta an FN-FAL semiautomatic rifle in January 1992 for $1,150 and that on another occasion he sold him another semiautomatic rifle.

Fatta was known at gun shows for selling weapons along with camouflage accessories and special vests handmade by women at the Branch Davidian compound, the dealers said.

Fatta is one of 11 Branch Davidians on trial for murder and murder-conspiracy in the deaths of four federal agents during a failed raid and gun battle Feb. 28, 1993, at the Koresh compound near Waco.

Fatta was not present during the shootout. His defense attorney, Mike DeGeurin, says he was away with his son at a gun show.

But prosecutors contend Fatta was instrumental in the "massive arms buildup" by the Davidians as they "conspired to kill" federal agents.

Testimony has shown nearly 400 weapons, including some fully automatic rifles, were recovered from the burned remains of the compound.

DeGeurin has told jurors Fatta was buying guns as an investment with the idea that certain types of firearms would become more scarce as gun control laws were passed.

Indeed, both dealers who testified Monday said some gun prices have doubled in the past year or two.

The price of AR-15s has increased from about $500 to more than $1,000, and the price of AK-47s has gone up from about $150 to more than $300.

"There are some people who want to get rid of them, some people have to have one," Le said, referring to AR-15s.

"There's nothing wrong with what you do, is there?" DeGeurin asked.

"I don't believe so," Le said.

The defendants could face up to life in prison if convicted.

The Feb. 28 gun battles led to a 51-day standoff that ended April 19 when fire destroyed the Davidian compound. Koresh and about 80 followers died, some from gunshots.

Testimony in the Davidian trial resumed today with the prosecution calling more gun dealers who said they sold weapons to Fatta and Koresh.

House panel ready to act on quake aid requests

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will add up to $2 billion to a federal aid package for earthquake-ravaged Los Angeles today as Congress prepares for its first votes on the measure.

The House Appropriations Committee planned to vote today on the legislation, the centerpiece of Clinton's original proposal to ship $7.5 billion in government assistance to battered Southern California.

White House Press Secretary Dee Myers said the package for Southern California will be increased about $2 billion, to $9.5 billion, in a request being prepared by the White House.

"The reason is that FEMA's requests are bigger and additional damage from aftershocks," she said.

Administration and congressional officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, had said Monday that the increase for Southern California would be closer to $1 billion. Officials have said from the start that the amount of requested aid would grow as updated damage estimates arrived.

The Jan. 17 quake killed 61 people and produced damage that may total $30 billion.

Officials also said Monday that the aid package had grown with the addition of money for last summer's Midwest floods, the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake and U.N. peacekeeping operations.

One congressional official said $800 million would be added for the ongoing costs of the Midwest floods, and $400 million would be sought for the 1989 Loma Prieta quake near San Francisco.

And $1.2 billion would be added for American participation in United Nations peacekeeping operations, including the use of U.S. forces in Somalia and Bosnia, said Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee.

The administration had long planned to seek the peacekeeping funds. But this was the first time it was decided that the request would be attached to the earthquake measure, which is expected to move quickly through Congress.

Congress is virtually certain to approve the earthquake package. But fights are likely over conservative moves to force cuts elsewhere in the budget to pay for the aid and to bar the assistance from going to illegal aliens.

The full House plans to vote on the measure Thursday. Senate action will follow.

The administration would like to have the measure completed before Congress' next recess, which starts Feb. 11.

Administration officials spelled out some details of the extra funds they will seek in appearances Monday before the House Appropriations housing subcommittee.

Chamber's 'Partners in Progress' banquet scheduled for Thursday

The Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce Annual Banquet "Partners in Progress" is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center.

Dr. Barry Thompson, president of West Texas A&M University, will be the guest speaker. Special recognition will be given to Betty Henderson, named 1993 Citizen of the Year, and retiring board of directors Norman Knox, Richard Stowers, Ken Fields, Joe Wheeley and R.D. "Jimmy" Wilderson. Dr. Dawson Orr, board president, will present the 1994 board.

Don Lane, local attorney, will be master of ceremonies for the banquet. The Pampa High School Show Choir will provide entertainment, and Dyer's Bar-B-Que will serve prime rib, according to Nanette Moore, chamber manager. Tickets are available at the chamber office at 200 N. Ballard, she said, or by calling 669-3241 for reservations by noon Thursday.

Law official: Powder burns consistent with suicide in Vincent Foster case

By RICHARD KEIL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gun found on Vince Foster's body last summer was tested by a federal agency and the powder burns "were consistent" with forensic evidence that the deputy White House counsel killed himself, a law enforcement official said today.

The official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, released additional details about the investigation into Foster's death in an effort to dispel speculation in a newspaper story last week that foul play, not suicide, could have been involved.

The 38-caliber revolver found in Foster's hand last July was tested afterwards by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the powder burns in those tests "were consistent" with those found on Foster's body, the official said.

The match was instrumental in leading U.S. Park Police investigators to conclude that Foster pulled the trigger himself, the official said.

"That was the key thing, along with other matters — how his body was lying, the indentation of the gun's trigger on his finger," the source said. "Suicide was the logical conclusion."

The Park Police concluded its investigation last summer, ruling Foster's death a suicide. Police, however, have not publicly released their final report, saying only that the evidence supported the suicide conclusion.

The testing of the gun and evidence such as the indentation of the trigger on Foster's finger, first reported in today's editions of the Daily News in New York and confirmed by the source, provide new details about how police reached their conclusion.

It came after the New York Post reported last week that paramedics who attended to Foster's body found the absence of blood unusual, and concluded that and other factors raised the possibility that the White House deputy counsel had fallen victim to foul play.

The Wall Street Journal, meanwhile, has filed a lawsuit demanding the release of the Park Police report on Foster's suicide.

In an editorial Monday, the newspaper said it wants the report because of speculation about foul play. The paper has been unable to get the report despite a Freedom of Information Act request filed in August, it said.

Noting the New York Post reports, the Journal editorial said: "If they are wrong, it's a great pity the complete Park Service report has not been released to still such speculation."

"If they are right, the Justice Department and the Park Service Police have had a great deal to hide. Either alternative suggests that the report should be released forthwith."

U.S. Park Police Maj. Robert Hines said the files and documents, requested by the Journal, The Associated Press and other news organizations cannot be released without authorization from the Justice Department.

The Journal said it has also filed a Freedom of Information request for a torn-up note investigators found at the bottom of Foster's briefcase.

The note said Washington was a place where "ruining people is considered sport," and it criticized the media, particularly the Journal. The government released the text, but the Journal wants a photocopy of the original.

Mullins resigns as vice chairman of Federal Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — David W. Mullins Jr., today announced his resignation as vice chairman and member of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mullins' resignation, effective Feb. 14, provides President Clinton with his second opportunity to appoint a Fed governor. Wayne D. Angell is retiring later this month and is expected to be succeeded by economist George Perry of the Brookings Institute.

Mullins, 47, said he plans to enter private business.

"Since most of the financial and economic problems, which have been the focus of my professional energies in recent years, have been essentially resolved, I feel now is the appropriate time to turn to new and different challenges," he said in a statement.

Mullins' resignation came a day after Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, served notice on Congress and the nation that the Fed was poised to increase interest rates.

Greenspan said it was only a matter of time before the institution would move to constrict the money supply. He said the aim would be to avoid the mistakes of past Fed chiefs who waited too long before tightening up on credit and thus allowed inflation to get out of hand.

Mullins was sworn in as a board member on May 21, 1990, and as vice chairman on July 24, 1991. Before joining the Fed, he was assistant secretary of the treasury for domestic finance from 1988 to 1990 and played a major role in developing the savings and loan bailout.

He plans to be come a partner in Long-Term Capital Management, L.P., a recently formed investment management firm specializing in the development and application of sophisticated financial technology on a global basis. The firm is headquartered in Greenwich, Conn.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan said in a statement:

"I wish my two departing colleagues well in their future endeavors. Only those of us who have had the privilege of working with David Mullins and Wayne Angell on a day-to-day basis can fully appreciate the contributions they have made to the success of the Federal Reserve system during their tenures. To say they will be missed in an understatement. They have been close personal friends and trusted colleagues."

Angell, a Kansas banker, farmer and university professor, has not announced his plans. He leaves office Feb. 9.

Successors to Angell and Mullins requires Senate confirmation.

Both Mullins and Angell have said they will not attend the Thursday-Friday meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank's monetary policy-making body, which controls short-term interest rates.

The FOMC is comprised of the seven Fed governors and five of the 12 presidents of Fed regional banks.

Mullins noted that his government tenure included the 1987 stock market crash, S&L crisis, banking system problems and the U.S. and world recessions.

"In my view, much progress has been made in addressing these problems," he said in his statement. "U.S. markets are vibrant and healthy, the U.S. banking system is well capitalized and profitable, the nation's financial system is sound."

French journalist killed, Australian colleague wounded in Algeria

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A French journalist was slain and an Australian colleague wounded Tuesday, becoming the latest foreign victims of the two-year Islamic insurgency against Algeria's army-backed regime.

The attack came a day after the hard-line defense minister, Lamine Zeroual, took office as president. He vowed to keep fighting militant Muslims while also offering talks on ending the rebellion.

The two journalists were shot at midday in the Casbah, a crumbling, alley-filled neighborhood that is a stronghold of extremists. Security officers, who said the two men were working for Australian Broadcasting Co., called it a terrorist attack.

Olivier Quemener, 34, died soon after reaching a hospital, officials said. His Australian colleague, Scott Allan White, 35, was reported in serious condition. Further details were not immediately available.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, but it appeared to be part of the civil war that has killed 3,000 people. At least 27 foreigners have been slain since militants declared last year that foreigners would be targets.

The insurgency was touched off by an army coup in January 1992 that blocked an expected victory by Islamic fundamentalists in Algeria's first multiparty parliament elections. Unrest has persisted despite curfews, army sweeps and trials in secretive anti-terrorism courts.

Muslim militants have targeted foreigners partly because their skills and investment are vital to the economy. They also have attacked Algerian intellectuals and journalists, but Quemener was the first foreign journalist killed.

GOP criticism of phone records' destruction a political attack, Richards' campaign says

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican criticism of Gov. Ann Richards' destruction of her office's long-distance telephone records is politically motivated, Richards' campaign says.

Chuck McDonald, spokesman for Richards' re-election effort, said Monday that the GOP is trying to allege that Richards did the same thing that U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison did. Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, is scheduled to go to trial Feb. 7 on ethics charges.

"There has been no allegation of any wrongdoing of any kind against Ann Richards, but the Republicans want news articles the week before the trial, making the same allegations against Ann Richards that were made against Sen. Hutchison," McDonald said.

Republican officials denied the charge as they turned up the criticism.

Over the weekend, Richards' press secretary Bill Cryer said the office likely will start preserving the records.

Meyer said he didn't know if the records were destroyed illegally, and he stopped short of charging that they were destroyed to cover up something.

"Obviously they were concerned about something that was in there, or they wouldn't have done it," he said.

Richards, in Washington, D.C. attending the winter meeting of the National Governors Association, didn't think the controversy was that important.

"It just tells me that this is political season," the governor said.

She added, "We tried to follow the letter of the law, the staff did. And they are going to assemble, I think, everything they possibly can assemble for anybody that wants to see it."

The Travis County district attorney's office has said they will ask the governor's office for an explanation about the destruction of the records.

Meyer noted the decision to destroy the records was reached about the same time that an investigation opened into Hutchison's tenure as state treasurer. She was elected to the Senate in a June 5 special election runoff. Her Treasury office was raided June 10 by the district attorney's office.

"You don't make a major change in policy and begin destroying official state records and forget about the timing and the reasons, especially when a United States senator has been the subject of a political investigation on similar charges," he said.

Hutchison is charged with using state employees, state facilities and state funds for personal and political purposes while she was Texas treasurer, and then altering records to cover-up her activities.

She has denied any wrongdoing, and claims the charges stem from a Democratic-plot to hurt her re-election effort.

Andrews tops Democratic rivals in funds for campaign for Senate

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Houston Congressman Mike Andrews began 1994 tops in fund raising among candidates vying for the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat held by Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Campaign finance reports filed Monday with the Federal Election Commission show Andrews started the year with $496,207 in cash on hand. For the six-month period that ended Dec. 31, Andrews had $295,025 in contributions and $199,147 in expenditures.

Andrews had four times more money to kick off the year than former Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, identified by polls as the Democratic frontrunner in the March 8 primary.

Mattox trailed both Andrews and Dallas businessman Richard Fisher, reporting $113,779 in cash on hand as of Dec. 31. He received $206,990 in contributions and spent $93,211 during the six-month period.

Fisher reported $339,866 in cash on hand — $250,000 from a personal loan to his campaign. He received $176,047 in contributions and spent $86,180.

Neither Andrews nor Mattox reported any campaign debts.

The Mattox campaign went on the offensive, with campaign manager Harmon Lisnow saying the money-raising efforts "were geared to kick off after the Jan. 3 filing deadline, following the deadline for this report."

"And we've been on target since that time," Lisnow said in a statement.

Lisnow said the campaign expected to be outspent in the primary. "Our opponents include a multimillionaire who spent $2 million of his own (money) in last year's special election and a congressman who could transfer the huge amounts he's gotten from the insurance and medical industries," Lisnow said of Fisher and Andrews.

Andrews led the pack in contributions received during the last six months from political action committees — with $169,875 or 57.5 percent of his funds raised coming from PACs. For the six months that ended in December, Hutchison received $328,603 from PACs, accounting for 21 percent of her contributions. Mattox reported 3 percent, or $7,450, of his contributions were from PACs. Fisher received no PAC money.

Andrews campaign spokesman Scot Sutherland decried the Mattox campaign statement. "As usual, he takes the low road," Sutherland said. "Before this race is finished, we'll have raised far more money from individuals and smaller contributors than Jim Mattox will."

Fisher campaign spokesman Martin Johnson sidestepped the criticism, but said: "This campaign is not about money ... Our opponents in this campaign are professional politicians of the past and Richard Fisher represents the future."

Hutchison's campaign war chest dwarfs those of her Democratic rivals. For the last six months of the year, her campaign took in $1,548,087 in contributions and spent $926,786. She began 1994 with $1,493,291 in cash on hand and $11,362 in debts.

Hutchison, who ran in the May special election and June runoff for the seat once held by Lloyd Bentsen, raised $8,536,566 last year and spent $7,196,135.

Her campaign fund-raising is expected to go into low gear as her trial on ethics charges approaches. She will go on trial Feb. 7 in Fort Worth on charges that while state treasurer she used state employees, state facilities and state funds for personal and political purposes and then altered records to cover up her activities.

Fortuneteller sorry about her role in teen's murder plot, lawyer says

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A fortuneteller is remorseful about her involvement in a plot to kill a high school student, her attorney says.

"I just don't have a reason as to why she would get involved, and that's the unanswered question," attorney Edmund Cyganiewicz said after his client, Maria Mercedes Martinez, pleaded guilty Monday to conspiracy to commit murder.

"She's basically a very good lady and I just don't know how she got involved in this."

Mrs. Martinez, 72, agreed to testify against Dora Garcia Cisneros, who is accused of paying cash to have 18-year-old Joey Fischer killed, and Daniel Garza, who is accused of hiring the gunmen with Mrs. Cisneros' money.

Mrs. Cisneros, the wife of a prominent Brownsville surgeon, is accused of plotting Fischer's death after he broke off a relationship with her daughter in 1992.

Fischer was shot to death in March 1993.

Investigators say Mrs. Martinez was a card-reading fortuneteller who advised both Mrs. Cisneros and Garza. The indictment accuses the fortuneteller of serving as an intermediary between Mrs. Cisneros and Garza.

All three were charged with capital murder, which is punishable by death or life in prison. Cyganiewicz said Mrs. Martinez pleaded guilty to the lesser offense in part because of incriminating statements she made to investigators before she was indicted.

"Mrs. Martinez cooperated with the authorities from day one. I think that had a lot to do with it," Cyganiewicz said. "And quite frankly, I think the state would probably even agree that her testimony is very important and is necessary to at least try the other defendants."

Mrs. Martinez faces two to 20 years in prison if the judge follows the recommendations in the plea agreement. She will be sentenced after she testifies against Mrs. Cisneros, 56, and Garza, 43.

District Judge Rogelio Valdez denied defense motions Monday to try Mrs. Cisneros and Garza separately. Jury selection was scheduled to continue into next week.

Mrs. Martinez immigrated from Mexico in her teens. For the past 23 years she has run a small used-clothing shop in downtown Brownsville. Authorities say she practiced folk healing and fortunetelling in a back room.

During a pretrial hearing Monday, Garza's attorney angrily accused Cameron County District Attorney Luis Saenz of breaking a pledge to drop the capital charge against Garza.

Defendant Paul Fatta identified as weapons buyer for Koresh compound at Davidian trial

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gun dealers called as prosecution witnesses say a disciple of apocalyptic preacher David Koresh shelled out thousands of dollars at a time for weapons.

Defense attorneys contend there's nothing illegal about that.

Especially in Texas.

"Except for Christmas, there's a gun show every weekend somewhere in Texas. There could be four, five, six gun shows every weekend," said dealer Morris Rodgers of Fort Worth during cross-examination.

Under questioning by prosecutor Bill Johnston, Rodgers testified he sold an AK-47 assault-style rifle to defendant Paul Fatta in July 1992.

Rodgers also said that in December 1991 he drove with Fatta, Koresh and another man named Henry McMahon to Indiana to buy firearms. Fatta and Koresh took "around $25,000" in cash from a briefcase to pay for about 50 guns, Rodgers said.

In cross-examination, Rodgers said he witnessed nothing illegal on the Indiana trip. Rodgers said he bought $50,000 worth of guns himself with a cashier's check.

Another gun dealer, Thao Dinh Le of Oklahoma, testified he legally sold Fatta an FN-FAL semiautomatic rifle in January 1992 for $1,150 and that on another occasion he sold him another semiautomatic rifle.

Fatta was known at gun shows for selling weapons along with camouflage accessories and special vests handmade by women at the Branch Davidian compound, the dealers said.

Fatta is one of 11 Branch Davidians on trial for murder and murder-conspiracy in the deaths of four federal agents during a failed raid and gun battle Feb. 28, 1993, at the Koresh compound near Waco.

Fatta was not present during the shootout. His defense attorney, Mike DeGeurin, says he was away with his son at a gun show.

But prosecutors contend Fatta was instrumental in the "massive arms buildup" by the Davidians as they "conspired to kill" federal agents.

Testimony has shown nearly 400 weapons, including some fully automatic rifles, were recovered from the burned remains of the compound.

Administration and congressional officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, had said Monday that the increase for Southern California would be closer to $1 billion. Officials have said from the start that the amount of requested aid would grow as updated damage estimates arrived.

The Jan. 17 quake killed 61 people produced damage that may total $30 billion.

Officials also said Monday that the aid package had grown with the addition of money for last summer's Midwest floods, the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake and U.N. peacekeeping operations.

DeGeurin has told jurors Fatta was buying guns as an investment with the idea that certain types of firearms would become more scarce as gun control laws were passed.

Indeed, both dealers who testified Monday said some gun prices have doubled in the past year or two.

The price of AR-15s has increased from about $500 to more than $1,000, and the price of AK-47s has gone up from about $150 to more than $300.

"There are some people who want to get rid of them, some people have to have one," Le said, referring to AR-15s.

"There's nothing wrong with what you do, is there?" DeGeurin asked.

"I don't believe so," Le said.

The defendants could face up to life in prison if convicted.

The Feb. 28 gun battles led to a 51-day standoff that ended April 19 when fire destroyed the Davidian compound. Koresh and about 80 followers died, some from gunshots.

Testimony in the Davidian trial resumed today with the prosecution calling more gun dealers who said they sold weapons to Fatta and Koresh.

House panel ready to act on quake aid requests

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will add up to $2 billion to a federal aid package for earthquake-ravaged Los Angeles today as Congress prepares for its first votes on the measure.

The House Appropriations Committee planned to vote today on the legislation, the centerpiece of Clinton's original proposal to ship $7.5 billion in government assistance to battered Southern California.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the package for Southern California will be increased about $2 billion, to $9.5 billion, in a request being prepared by the White House.

"The reason is that FEMA's requests are bigger and additional damage from aftershocks," she said.

Administration and congressional officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, had said Monday that the increase for Southern California would be closer to $1 billion. Officials have said from the start that the amount of requested aid would grow as updated damage estimates arrived.

The Jan. 17 quake killed 61 people produced damage that may total $30 billion.

Officials also said Monday that the aid package had grown with the addition of money for last summer's Midwest floods, the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake and U.N. peacekeeping operations.

One congressional official said $800 million would be added for the ongoing costs of the Midwest floods, and $400 million would be sought for the 1989 Loma Prieta quake near San Francisco.

And $1.2 billion would be added for American participation in United Nations peacekeeping operations, including the use of U.S. forces in Somalia and Bosnia, said Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee.

The administration had long planned to seek the peacekeeping funds. But this was the first time it was decided that the request would be attached to the earthquake measure, which is expected to move quickly through Congress.

Congress is virtually certain to approve the earthquake package. But fights are likely over conservative moves to force cuts elsewhere in the budget to pay for the aid and to bar the assistance from going to illegal aliens.

The full House plans to vote on the measure Thursday. Senate action will follow.

The administration would like to have the measure completed before Congress' next recess, which starts Feb. 11.

Administration officials spelled out some details of the extra funds they will seek in appearances Monday before the House Appropriations housing subcommittee.

Chamber's 'Partners in Progress' banquet scheduled for Thursday

The Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce Annual Banquet "Partners in Progress" is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday in the Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center.

Dr. Barry Thompson, president of West Texas A&M University, will be the guest speaker. Special recognition will be given to Betty Henderson, named 1993 Citizen of the Year, and retiring board of directors Norman Knox, Richard Stowers, Ken Fields, Joe Wheeley and R.D. "Jimmy" Wilderson. Dr. Dawson Orr, board president, will present the 1994 board. Don Lane, local attorney, will be master of ceremonies for the banquet. The Pampa High School Show Choir will provide entertainment, and Dyer's Bar-B-Que will serve prime rib, according to Nanette Moore, chamber manager. Tickets are available at the chamber office at 200 N. Ballard, she said, or by calling 669-3241 for reservations by noon Thursday.

President Clinton needs better grade

At the end of his first year in office, let us consider how well President Clinton served the people of the United States of America and the Constitution he swore to uphold.

• The economy. Though growth occurred, it resulted from the low interest rates and a recovery that began before Clinton took power. He broke his 1992 campaign pledge to cut the taxes of the middle class, instead imposing the largest tax increase in American history, some $250 billion in new taxes. Clinton also advanced the nationalization of health care, seeking to put government in charge of one-seventh of the U.S. economy with more taxes proposed to cover the plan. Grade: F.

• Education. He offered measures in California and other states to spread school choice through vouchers and other programs — while using his taxpayer-supplied salary to send his own daughter Chelsea to the exclusive Sidwell Friends private school in Washington, D.C. Grade: F.

• Moral authority. Clinton recently has taken up moral uplift, speechifying about "the politics of meaning" and about how the country needs more and more government. Just as he hit his moralistic stride in December, The American Spectator published allegations that Clinton wantonly pursued women outside his marriage. Clinton never denied the infidelities. He only branded as "outrageous" allegations that he abused his official powers to cover up his actions. Grade: F.

• Foreign policy. In just one year Clinton got the United States humiliated by the petty tyrants of Somalia, Haiti, Serbia and North Korea. Well, at least he hasn't yet bumbled into a nuclear war, which is something. Grade: D-minus.

• Military policy. He continued the futile Somalian adventure begun under George Bush; twenty Americans have been killed there. His proposal to allow homosexuals to serve in the military has alienated many officers and enlisted men from their commander-in-chief. Grade: F.

• Cabinet appointments. Clinton promised a cabinet "that looks like America." That would be true if America were made up exclusively of leftist lawyers, enforcers of political correctness, professional whiners and special-interest apparatchiks like Ron Brown, the Commerce secretary who is accused of accepting $700,000 to promote the interests of communist Vietnam. And those were just the nominees who stuck around. Zoe Baird, Kimba Wood, Admiral Bobby Ray Inman, Morton Halperin and Lani Guinier were knocked out even before confirmation votes in the Senate. Grade: F.

Overall grade: F. In just one year, the Clinton administration vaulted into a tight competition with the administrations of Lyndon Johnson and Jimmy Carter for the worst in recent memory. Only the next three years will tell if Clinton continues sinking so low he claims the national political booby prize.

FDA's attack on free speech

The Food and Drug Administration, trumpeting the danger of "snake-oil salesmen" peddling worthless nutritional supplements, has begun a crackdown that will supposedly protect unwitting consumers from fraud and deception. What it will really do is shield us from honest statements that the FDA doesn't want us to hear. The new rules are at war with the spirit of free speech and quite possibly also with the Supreme Court's interpretation of the First Amendment.

In December, the FDA issued new rules on nutritional labeling, as required by a 1990 law. In the past, all health claims for vitamins and other supplements were forbidden. From now on, it turns out, all health claims will still be forbidden, except those rare exceptions approved in advance by the censors at the FDA.

So far, they have permitted only two — that folic acid can head off birth defects and that calcium can prevent osteoporosis. Other plausible claims that have scientific evidence to back them up, such as the value of Vitamin E in deterring heart disease, are not allowed until the FDA is good and ready.

FDA Commissioner David Kessler justifies the new policy with the pious assertion that "consumers should have access to dietary supplements that are truthfully labeled and marketed." But his target isn't just false promises: The agency already had ample authority to take action against those. The real change, as the FDA acknowledges, is that now it can go after claims that are merely "unapproved," even if they are accurate.

The result is free speech for some but not for others. The Journal of the American Medical Association is at liberty to report its finding that Vitamin X-23 protects against cancer, but until such time as the food and drug bureaucrats are convinced, companies that make or sell Vitamin X-23 are not allowed to note that discovery — or even to quote from JAMA on their labels or promotional materials. They may speak only when and how the FDA says they may.

This is where the constitutional problem arises. In banning fraudulent claims, the FDA is on solid ground, since the Supreme Court has said falsehoods generally aren't protected by the First Amendment. But when government stifles truthful statements, it treats on vital democratic principles.

The only reason the FDA regulations are not plainly unconstitutional is that they affect "commercial speech" — statements made by a company to sell a product. On this type of expression, the court has not been a rock of consistency.

Starting in 1976, it said that commercial speech did warrant constitutional protection, abandoning its earlier view. The justices struck down several laws banning certain types of advertising, declaring that the government may not "completely suppress the dissemination of concededly truthful information about entirely lawful activity, fearful of that information's effect upon its disseminators and its recipients."

That describes with uncanny perfection what the FDA is doing here. The only complication is that the court has occasionally declined to follow its own reasoning. But most of the relevant precedents suggest that the agency has jumped its constitutional traces.

Northwestern University law professor Martin Redish argues that health claims for nutritional supplements should be classified not as commercial speech but as scientific expression, which enjoys high legal status. As he notes, it's hard to see why a vitamin maker may be punished for a statement that would be fully protected coming out of the mouth of Linus Pauling. The presence of a profit motive normally doesn't cancel your free-speech rights.

But even if these claims receive only the limited protection afforded commercial speech, the FDA goes too far. Why? First, because it forbids accurate information, not just deceptive statements. Second, because the harms the FDA aims to prevent are not terrible scary: The greatest risk in taking most supplements with alleged health benefits is a few wasted greenbacks.

Not least important, though, is that the agency could easily handle the alleged problem without gagging everyone in sight. It could require that health claims include a statement that they haven't been endorsed by the FDA. It could also mandate warnings about the hazards of excessive doses.

Instead, the FDA has behaved in the time-honored fashion of government censors everywhere, which is to maximize its power and minimize the discretion of ordinary citizens. Trusting David Kessler to decide what health claims you may hear is about as sensible as trusting Pat Robertson to decide what movies you may see.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, Feb. 1, the 32nd day of 1994. There are 333 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Feb. 1, 1790, the U.S. Supreme Court convened for the first time, at the Royal Exchange Building on Broad Street in New York. However, since only three of the six justices were present, the court recessed until the next day.

On this date:
In 1861, Texas voted to secede from the Union.

In 1893, inventor Thomas A. Edison completed work on the world's first motion picture studio, his Black Maria in West Orange, N.J.

In 1920, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police came into existence as the Royal Northwest Mounted Police merged with the Dominion Police.

An apology to Andrew Young

I want to take this opportunity to apologize to the former minister, civil rights activist, congressman, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and Atlanta mayor, Andrew Young.

I'm not certain what the former all-that is doing these days, but a man with his resume likely has wound up in some sort of consulting position. You name it, and our old friend Andy probably was right in the middle of it at some point during his incredible career.

But whatever he's doing and wherever he is, I want to set the everlasting record straight on something.

When he was mayor of Atlanta some eight or so years ago, Andy Young had the bright idea he might sell Atlanta's mighty Hartsfield International Airport to the Japanese.

The Japanese still could afford things in those days, and one thing they wanted to buy was the United States.

The joke that was going around at the time was, "The Japanese want to buy America, but the Arabs won't sell it to them."

The Japanese knew they couldn't just write one check for the entire country, so they started buying it piece by piece.

First, they bought all the golf courses. I guess airports were next.

A Japanese group did, in fact, approach Andrew Young with an offer to buy and operate Hartsfield, and the mayor actually dealt with the group in a serious manner.

When the news broke, I hooted in print. "Sell Hartsfield to the Japanese?" I scoffed. "Next, they'll want Stone Mountain and the Varsity Drive-In."

Other public opinion was the same, so the Japanese didn't get their hands on the airport, and Andy Young was belittled for even considering such a thing.

But Andrew Young apparently knew something the rest of us didn't.

He knew that Hartsfield would be in a lot better shape in the hands of foreign investors than it would be left in the open hands of Atlanta city government.

Read the papers? Seen TV? Hartsfield International Airport has been run like a private financial feeding ground for corrupt officials.

Who hasn't been implicated in the current scandal and trial that daily unearths more bribes and payoffs?

Bill and Hillary and Whitewater? Who in Atlanta has got time for that?

A prosecution witness has named the City Council president as a member of the payoff ring, and the current mayor has been named as a bribe-taker during his City Council days, although neither has been charged.

There was a videotape on television that showed Council President Marvin Arrington getting money stuffed in his coat pocket by a former airport shop operator who has admitted conspiring to bribe city officials.

Council President Arrington denies it was a bribe; he says it was a campaign contribution.

Right there in the old coat pocket. Mayor Bill Campbell also denies he took any bribes.

Meanwhile, former Aviation Commissioner Ira Jackson, also accused of taking payoffs, says it's all a plot to nail black officials. It was just a matter of time before somebody thought of that.

I don't pretend to know the whole truth, but I do know Andy Young apparently had it in his mind a group of people from the other side of the world might be better suited to run Atlanta's famed airport, rather than the local yokels at City Hall. And, it seems now, he was right.

And I publicly laughed at him. This is my official apology. I would eat that old column, except I think they keep stuff like that in computers these days.

And, for the record, I deny taking a bribe to write this. I simply have a conscience.

Would that everybody else did.

Outrageous Personage of '93 is ...

Welcome to the Fifth Annual Outrageous Personage of the Year awards. It is a black-tie affair, so put on your tuxedo before reading any further. Ready? Here we go.

Remember that the event this year is being co-sponsored by the Association of Sagacious Pundits, which will hand out Asps, little snake statues, to the winners.

I want to thank you for the outstanding array of candidates you nominated. They included Roseanne and Tom Arnold, Rush Limbaugh, Ross Perot, Ollie North, Mary Matalin, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., Hillary Clinton, Re. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, Joey Buttafuoco, Heidi Fleiss and Michael Jackson.

A person from Pensacola, Fla., and a wonderful woman from Salisbury, Md., ("Love your column!") think Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders ought to be chosen for proposing a study of drug legalization. We don't agree, but in a spirit of sportsmanship, we accept the nomination. A Cambridge, Mass., man anointed Woody Allen for his affair with his former lover's adopted daughter.

We got one letter that totally confounded us. "You are practicing censorship by not allowing Rush Limbaugh's friends to vote," complained a reader from Lancaster, Ohio. This is not true. What I said was that I was getting so many letters from Rush's listeners who wanted to nominate me for my own contest that I had to arrange for a special mail drop just for them. It's in Apia, Western Samoa (224 West Fiji Street), and I encourage all

Joseph Spear

Hardcore Dittoheads to write me there.

Let's get to the main event. As selected and certified by the Spear Foundation, the Outrageous Personages for 1993 are:

In fifth place and winner of the Brass Asp is Abraham Sofaer. This former federal judge and State Department official agreed for a while to represent Libya in the Pan Am 103 bombing case. That is taking the everyone-deserves-a-lawyer malarkey just a mite too far, in our judgment.

In fourth place and winner of the Bronze Asp is former Secretary of State Al Haig. Now a "business consultant," Haig accompanied a client to China, where he stuffed the Tiananmen Square massacre down the memory hole. "I think the time has come to take a different tack here," he said. "And Tiananmen is a long way behind us." To think that this dork was briefly in command of the White House.

In third place and winner of the Silver Asp is Bill Clinton. In November, he met with Salman Rushdie, the author sentenced to death by the late Ayatollah Khomeini, then tried to diminish the gesture by saying it was a brief encounter in a hallway. In December, he lashed out (through spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers) at Dr. Elders for daring to suggest that drug legalization be studied. A fleeting pox on the president.

In second place and winner of the Gold Asp is Randall Terry, founder of Operation Rescue. "I want you to just let a wave of intolerance wash over you," he preached to an Indiana crowd last August. "I want you to let a wave of hatred wash over you. Hate is good." Who admitted this brute to the human race?

And the Outrageous Personage of the Year and winner of the Platinum Asp is ... Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H. He accepted an offer of $920,000 on his Greenfield, N.H., estate from a Wyoming woman who put down a 10 percent deposit, then he refused to return her money when she learned she had terminal cancer. The Concord Monitor said Gregg appeared to have "the heart of a lizard." We think that's an unfair slap at lizards.

The Association of Sagacious Pundits wishes to announce also that it is giving its annual Posturing Asp award to Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., for calling Bill Clinton "the most corrupt, the most amoral, the most despicable person I've ever seen in the presidency." The Obnoxious Asp goes to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., for singing "Dixie" to black senator Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill. Both of these lovely statuettes are carved from stinkstone.

See you next year.

Conservatives attack civil rights chief even before Clinton nominates him

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deval Patrick, a 37-year-old Boston lawyer who is President Clinton's choice to be the nation's chief civil rights enforcer, is drawing conservative fire even before the president announces his pick. Patrick's nomination was expected today.

"Patrick appears to be a 'stealth Guinier,'" said Clint Bolick, vice president of the conservative Institute for Justice. "He has no paper trail, but is part of the same pro-quota chorus that produced Lani Guinier," Clinton's first nominee as assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's civil rights division.

The attack Monday by Bolick, who led the conservative charge against Guinier, brought administration backers to the defense of Patrick. A White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Patrick would be named by Clinton in an Oval Office announcement with Attorney General Janet Reno today.

Without confirming the choice, White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton will name "someone who has a solid record ...

who can be confirmed. That doesn't mean there won't be some controversy."

Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., a founder of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee in the 1960s, said, "From what I've read about him, and what I've heard about him, he seems to be a very capable and qualified individual."

But Lewis also alluded to growing criticism from civil rights groups of Clinton's failure to fill this post during more than a year in office. "It's important that the administration fill this position," Lewis said. "There are those who would prefer this position remain vacant."

Other civil rights leaders say Clinton has turned his back on blacks despite getting 82 percent of their votes.

Clinton withdrew the nomination of Guinier, a law professor, after critics claimed her writings advocated increasing black political power by radical means. Supporters said similar measures were used by the Reagan administration.

A day after her nomination, Bolick wrote about her in The Wall Street Journal under the headline, "Clinton's Quota Queen," a tag Republican senators repeated regularly.

One near-nominee, District of Columbia Corporation Counsel John Payton, withdrew in December after the Congressional Black Caucus complained he had not voted in recent elections and was lukewarm on using the Voting Rights Act to create black-dominated election districts.

Asked about Patrick on Monday, Mary Frances Berry, chair of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, said, "It's wonderful that the president is able to get someone of his quality."

Bolick, however, criticized Patrick's work during 1982-86 for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, of which he is now a director.

In a 1987 Supreme Court case, McCleskey vs. Kemp, Patrick challenged the death penalty as racially discriminatory. McCleskey, a black, was convicted of killing a white policeman during a robbery in Fulton County, Ga.

"Patrick argued solely on the basis of sociological data that the death penalty was unconstitutional because ... murderers of white victims were far more likely than murderers of black victims to get the death penalty," Bolick said.

Patrick lost 5-4; the court said no discriminatory intent was proved.

Report critical of human rights abuses in China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department's annual report on human rights around the world is "quite critical" of China despite some improvement last year, a senior administration official says.

The 193-nation survey was being released today. China was receiving special scrutiny because the administration has set an improved human rights record as a condition for renewing Beijing's most-favored-nation trade status.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the report notes that China made some improvement last year on the release of political prisoners but that its overall record remained poor.

China has taken a few more steps this year that are not reflected in the 1993 report. Those moves — release of more prisoners, opening of discussions with the Red Cross for inspection of prison conditions and agreeing to allow U.S. officials to verify that prison laborers are not producing goods for export — were expected to be included in State Department testimony to Congress today.

New reports of religious persecution, with new arrests of priests and bishops, have come even as China took those steps.

U.S. officials, eager to keep the pressure on Beijing, have repeatedly stressed that it has not yet met Clinton's conditions.

"More needs to be done," said the senior official, who characterized the State Department's assessment of China as "quite critical."

American businesses, fearing being shut out of China's multibillion-dollar markets, are pressing Clinton not to revoke China's most-favored-nation status granting lower tariffs.

Within the administration, support is building to consider separating the trade decision and human rights in the future if China shows enough improvement on human rights.

"On balance there probably has been progress, but I wouldn't want to overinflate the nature of the progress or to denigrate the importance of the most-favored-nation review status and being an important lever to use on the Chinese," State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said Monday.

The human rights report is expected to cover problems in perennial trouble spots such as Iraq, North Korea, Sudan, Syria and Iran. Other countries expected to be portrayed unfavorably include Saudi Arabia, Cuba and Turkey.

The report praises Russia's continued progress on human rights, but cites some lapses in press and personal freedoms after the October standoff between President Boris Yeltsin and the parliament, one official said.

Rabin says final Israeli-PLO peace accord still weeks away

JERUSALEM (AP) — Despite progress in Israel-PLO talks, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said it will take time to overcome differences, and other officials predicted today that an agreement was still weeks away.

Palestinians and some members of Rabin's Cabinet had said an agreement was close on the final terms for Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank city of Jericho.

Hopes had been high since a high-level bargaining session over the weekend in Switzerland, with both sides reporting good progress. But Rabin said several issues still needed to be resolved.

"I believe we are moving slowly in the direction of agreement. It will take time," Rabin told American Jewish leaders in a conference call Monday night. "It will take more time than we had expected."

Peace talks resume today in Cairo, Egypt, between Israeli and PLO representatives.

In Geneva, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat told The Associated Press he hoped Rabin would come to Cairo this weekend to sign the accord and set in motion the Israeli withdrawal.

Arafat said as soon as the Israeli pullout was complete he planned to visit Jericho and Gaza.

But Israeli Deputy Foreign Minister Yossi Beilin suggested on Israel radio that a full agreement might still be several weeks away.

Senior military leaders were quoted by Israeli newspapers as saying Foreign Minister Shimon Peres conceded too much during his weekend meetings with Arafat in Davos, Switzerland.

'Blink' the only new film to catch eye of moviegoers

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Blink caught the eye of moviegoers, while two other new films dropped from sight at the box office.

Blink, a thriller starring Madeleine Stowe as a partially blind woman in jeopardy, made $4.4 million over the weekend, finishing in fourth place, Exhibitor Relations Co. reported Monday.

The flops were the movie version of the old TV series Car 54, Where are You? and the McCarthy-era melodrama Golden Gate.

Car 54, with rock star David Johansen, was No. 17 with $791,000. Golden Gate, a movie about the persecution of Chinese-Americans starring Matt Dillon and Joan Chen, did even worse. Panned by even the most kind-hearted critics, it sold just $258,000 in tickets and didn't make the Top 20.

Robin Williams' Mrs. Doubtfire was No. 1 with $7.7 million. Philadelphia dropped to second place with $7.3 million.

The weekend's top 10 films, according to Exhibitor Relations, with weekend gross, number of North American theater locations, average per location, total gross and number of weeks in release: (Figures are based on actual receipts and projections where actual figures were not available.)

1. Mrs. Doubtfire, 20th Century Fox, $7.7 million, 2,249 locations, $3,442 per location, $172.5 million, 10 weeks.

2. Philadelphia, TriStar, $7.3 million, 1,562 locations, $4,684 per location, $36.6 million, six weeks.

3. Grumpy Old Men, Warner Bros., $5.1 million, 1,725 locations, $2,943 per location, $48.1 million, six weeks.

4. Blink, New Line, $4.4 million, 1,527 locations, $2,888 per location, $5.1 million, 1 1/2 weeks.

5. Intersection, Warner Bros., $4 million, 1,300 locations, $3,078 per location, $13.8 million, two weeks.

6. Iron Will, Disney, $3.2 million, 1,862 locations, $1,705 per location, $14.6 million, three weeks.

7. Schindler's List, Universal, $3.1 million, 354 locations, $8,658 per location, $23.5 million, seven weeks.

8. The Pelican Brief, Warner Bros., $2.8 million, 1,730 locations, $1,634 per location, $90.3 million, seven weeks.

9. Shadowlands, Savoy, $2.44 million, 1,023 locations, $2,387 per location, $16.9 million, five weeks.

10. Tombstone, Disney, $2.38 million, 1,709 locations, $1,394 per location, $47.3 million, six weeks.

Quake tensions bring sleepless nights

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New York may be the city that never sleeps. Post-quake Los Angeles has become the city that can't.

Some jolted out of a sound slumber by the magnitude-6.6 quake haven't had a good night's sleep since 4:31 a.m. on Jan. 17, besieged by worry and middle-of-the-night aftershocks.

"I haven't been able to sleep, I guess, because I'm still nervous," said Carolyn Greer, 42, whose home near the epicenter was damaged.

"I think subconsciously I'm listening for an aftershock because I want to get up and run to my kids," she said.

A magnitude-5.0 aftershock at 3:20 a.m. Saturday didn't help.

"Occasionally, I sleep all night, but I think it's because there's only so much the body can take," Mrs. Greer said.

Her husband and 10-year-old son, Robert Jr., haven't had any trouble getting to sleep. But 6-year-old daughter, Brittany, can only nod off in her parents' bed.

Mrs. Greer and husband Robert, 54, have tried to put Brittany in her own bed. Every time, she complains she can't sleep alone and they capitulate.

"The earthquake has affected her.

She feels safe sleeping in the bed with me and my husband. She's a big baby, though," Mrs. Greer said.

Mrs. Greer and Brittany aren't alone.

Dr. Winston Alt of the Sleep Disorder Center at the University of California, Los Angeles, said many are having trouble sleeping.

"With a higher level of general anxiety, people are going to have a rougher time sleeping," Alt said. "With each aftershock, there is a reliving of that traumatic moment at 4:31 in the morning."

Psychologist Chaytor Mason, a professor at the University of Southern California, said children can be particularly vulnerable.

"If they have night fears, you lie down with them and reassure them that you are there," Mason said.

One business is trying to capitalize on the search for safe sleep.

Michael Calka, general manager of the Brass Bed Factory in Van Nuys, is marketing a 900-pound steel "earthquake bed," equipped with a canopy.

"We came up with the idea ... to make a bed that would survive the roof caving in. This is it," Calka said.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know exactly how "Holiday Visitor" felt, and I disagree with your answer. ("Holiday Visitor" and her husband went to visit their daughter for Thanksgiving, and the mother was terribly upset to find the table set with paper plates and paper napkins, knowing that her daughter had plenty of fine china and lovely silverware.)

She said she thought it was "tacky" — and you said, "... the epitome of tackiness is criticizing the hostess."

My husband and I went to our married son's home for Thanksgiving dinner, and I nearly had a heart attack when I saw the table set with paper plates, no tablecloth, and the food served in plastic bowls!

They are quite well-to-do, have a nice set of china, an electric dishwasher, and a 17-year-old daughter to help.

I say, if people want to eat from paper plates, they should have a picnic.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Here's a letter from another "mom" with a different view of using paper plates for a holiday dinner:

DEAR ABBY: In response to the mother who was aghast that her daughter served Thanksgiving dinner on paper plates:

Oh, that we had nothing more serious to worry about than the kind of plates we ate from!

Our family of 14 married children and grandchildren were home with us for nine days at Christmas. Not only were days at Christmas. Not only were paper plates used, we had plastic forks, spoons and serving bowls.

After everyone had finished eating, my son-in-law went around the table with a large plastic trash bag, and everyone tossed the paper plates and plastic "silverware" in the trash bags.

I am sure that everyone there wondered if that would be their last Christmas dinner with the entire family. I have had two mastectomies in the last six months, and only god knows what's next. People should pay attention to the things that are really important in life, and count their blessings.

MOM IN MURRAYSVILLE, PA.

DEAR MOM: Thanks for a gentle reminder. We can all use it from time to time.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can settle this between me and my fiance. He proposed to me, and I accepted. Then he gave me the same engagement ring he had given to another girl. She had returned it after their engagement was broken two years ago. I didn't know him then, and I would not have known it was a secondhand ring if he hadn't told me. Abby, I feel funny wearing that ring, knowing its history. His whole family knows, and I'm too embarrassed to tell anyone. It's a beautiful one-carat diamond on a platinum setting. What is your advice?

FELLING HURT
IN BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

DEAR FEELING HURT: Tell your fiance exactly what you have told me. Then, suggest that he take the ring to the jeweler and ask that the diamond be used in an entirely different setting.

Library opens up the Virginia Woolf archives

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition at the New York Public Library includes images of Virginia Woolf's soulful face, with its delicately aquiline features.

But of course it's the words that engulf and captivate you, streaming out into the starry reaches of literary history off the pages of diaries, manuscripts, notebooks and the printed page.

The library has the largest single collection of Virginia Woolf papers in the world, with all 28 volumes of the diaries which some argue is her best work. About 200 items are on show in the exhibition, "Virginia Woolf and Her Circle."

They include the 1912 letter telling a friend "I'm going to marry Leonard Wolf," which obviously makes her very happy even if she's shaky on the spelling of his name. "All inner feelings to be lit up," she scribbles in 1922 notes for her novel "Mrs. Dalloway." The manuscript of "To the Lighthouse" is another exhibit, shown open on the first page of evenly penned lines.

And there's the first publication, in 1917, from the Woolfs' publishing venture, Hogarth Press: "Two Stories," which the authors, Virginia and Leonard, handprinted themselves.

The exhibition coincides with the completion of a project to microfilm the library's entire Virginia Woolf archives; the library says that's both to make the material more widely available and to preserve it.

"Now that the manuscripts may enjoy a rest, it seems a good time to share one of our most popular research collections with an equally interested larger public," said curator Francis O. Mattson, who wrote the exhibition catalog's introduction.

A diary entry in 1920 tells of Woolf's idea for a novel, eventually "Jacob's Room," using the "stream of consciousness" technique.

"I see immense possibilities in the form I hit upon more or less by chance 2 weeks ago," she recorded, referring to the use of characters' interior monologues she went on to employ to such notable effect.

A 1917 letter from short-story writer Katherine Mansfield, who also used that technique, pounces on the similarity of their aims. "We have got the same job, Virginia & it is very curious & thrilling," she wrote.

The exhibition's title indicates its range. Letters from friends such as Mansfield may touch on literary interests. Others from friends and family share personal matters from clothes and gossip to grief and bereavement. Parents, siblings, friends and homes are captured in period photos. Newspaper excerpts include a notice of the Woolfs' wedding in 1912 that a disappointed suitor of Virginia's pasted into his diary.

And there's the Sunday New York Herald Tribune of Oct. 27, 1929, which carried an essay by Woolf on Dorothy Wordsworth on the same page as a review of Woolf's work, "A Room of One's Own."

References to the Bloomsbury group abound among letters and papers. And the name of T.S. Eliot. "I have just finished setting up the whole of Mr Eliot's poem with my own hands," Virginia writes in a letter to a friend in 1923.

The poem is "The Waste Land," for the Hogarth Press edition of which Virginia set the type. Eliot's typescript of the poem with Ezra Pound's handwritten revisions and the first edition are on display — also a letter from Eliot to Leonard Woolf politely noting misprints.

Woolf began to keep a diary as a schoolgirl in 1897. She continued writing diaries all her life, with gaps that included periods of mental breakdown. Mattson estimates the diaries "may ultimately be recognized as her masterpiece, one of the world's greatest diaries."

The last entry was in March 1941, during World War II, four days before the madness overwhelmed her and she drowned herself.

The month before she had written to tell a friend she was reading the whole of English literature — "By the time I've reached Shakespeare, the bombs will be falling."

She imagined "a very nice last scene" in which "I shall fade far away, & quite forget."

The not-to-be-forgotten Virginia Woolf is very present, inner feelings lit up, in the exhibition, on view through April 9.

Pampa theatre group presents evening of suspense

Bill Hildebrandt, left, finds himself at the business end of a pistol held by Ronnie Holmes as Debra Sandefur watches in Act I's production of "Catch Me If You Can," a tale of suspense and murder. The curtain is scheduled to go up at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 18, 19, 25 and 26 on the play at Act I's theatre in the Pampa Mall, according to director Cheryl Shuck. (Pampa News photo)

Books

By PHIL THOMAS
For AP Special Features

Noted novelist John Hersey — "A Bell for Adano," "The Wall," "The War Lover" — turns to the short story in "Key West Tales."

The 15 stories included in the late author's final book all are stunning examples of the writer's craft at its best. All are set in Key West and tell of that Florida city's past, present and future.

"God's Hint" is set in the past and tells of a time when the natives of Key West secured a very profitable living by salvaging cargoes from ships unfortunate enough to run aground on their shores.

The richest among them is Squire Eagan, beautifully described by Hersey as "A big bear of a man, he has a chestnut beard and sideburns like huge ficus bushes sticking out on either side of his face. He is a Methodist, with embers for eyes and a whip for a tongue."

He also is very bright with an eye always to business, even when he is preaching in church, as this story delightfully illustrates.

"Did You Ever Have Such Sport?" is a revisionist look at John James Audubon, still widely known and praised as a most skillful illustrator of birds. Hersey tells of a much darker side of Audubon, that of a bird slaughterer. An excellent story despite its grim subject matter.

Hersey turns to love and its often bittersweet consequences in "The Two Lives of Consuela Castanon." Consuela is an enormously obese girl that men have always liked but never loved. Then, a man comes into her life who loves her, or says he does. Consuela spurns his advances at first but eventually she falls in love with him. Sadly, she loses him when she plans to do something that she thinks will make him happy.

Pampa woman re-elected to board

A Pampa woman has been elected to the Amarillo Area Foundation Board of Directors for a second term.

Mrs. Wiley (Phoebe) Reynolds was elected to serve a second term on the board of the public charity which is designed to help panhandle communities.

The foundation distributes money to area communities through grants to nonprofit organizations for the enrichment of the quality of life of the people in the 26 counties of the Texas Panhandle, according to Jim Allison, executive director.

"In 1993, education; youth-child care; children's services; and projects to benefit the handicapped and needy were primary benefactors of grants from the Amarillo Area Foundation and its supporting organization, The Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation," Allison said.

The board of directors approved approximately $6.1 million in grants and distributions to support diverse projects of numerous nonprofit organizations in the panhandle.

The board sets policy and make final decisions for all grants from designated and undesignated funds, he said.

It also protects the long-term interest and growth of the foundations' assets and ensures that income and other funds are distributed in a manner consistent with donors' wishes and the changing needs of panhandle communities.

The board includes Lawrence Pickefs, chairman; Ted Nicklaus, first vice chairman; John Mar-maduke, second vice chairman; Carole Durrett, secretary; Danny Con-klm, treasurer; Frank Ladd; Rebecca King; J. Avery Rush, Jr.; Ron McVean, Jr.; Beth Duke; Bill Lowe; Phoebe Reynolds; Don Powell; Tom Bivins; Tom Patterson; Don Riffe; Jay O'Brien; Becky Dodson; Richard Ware; and Wales Mad-den, Jr..

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Important arrangements must be methodically molded today and not be left to chance. You may feel very lucky, but events may not bear this out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be sensible about your involvements today or else you might be drawn into something where you could be penalized by another's mistakes. The lines of demarcation must be clearly defined.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Strive to be impartial in your relationships with others today. Those you think will assist you, might not, while those who are the least likely could come through on your behalf.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of trying to goot others into doing things for you today, stand on your own two feet. Even if you get their help, you might still have to do all the real work yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There are indications you might be more of a risk taker today than usual. This could impel you to take chances you normally wouldn't. Unfortunately, it may not be a good day for longshots.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) For the sake of both your image and self-esteem, don't talk about things you intend to do today which you may never start. Keep mum and let the results speak for your record.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If it is necessary for you to convey some critical information from one source to another today, it might be wise to make notes instead of committing it to memory.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't walk around like you have the world on your shoulder today, but, by the same token, don't treat financial matters with indifference. If you do, it could be costly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not expect others to do things for you today you wouldn't do for them if the roles were reversed, even though you might kid yourself into believing you would.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In case you're wondering how someone you've been competing against outmaneuvered you, it could be because you revealed your intentions to the wrong people prematurely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Financial commitments should not be made impulsively today, especially in situations where friends are involved. There's a possibility several things could go wrong.

CANYON — Pampa finished fifth in the boys' division and seventh in the girls' division at the 21st annual Amarillo Invitational held last weekend at West Texas A&M.

In the boys' division, Jeremy Nunn and Bryan Stout finished in second place.

Nunn was clocked at 5:16.35 in the 500 freestyle while Stout had a 1:08.78 in the 100 breaststroke.

In the girls' division, Talitha Pope had the best finish for Pampa with a third-place in the 50 freestyle. Her time was 26.53.

FOOTBALL

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — A tired but happy Dallas Cowboys arrived home from their second-straight Super Bowl victory over Buffalo to a low-key welcome from family and friends.

The players deplaned at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport inside a large hangar closed to the public and sheltered from 36-degree temperatures.

A Texas-size celebration is planned Feb. 18 in downtown Dallas, after several players attend the Pro Bowl in Hawaii this weekend and coaches attend NFL scouting combine in Indianapolis following weekend.

HONOLULU (AP) — Running back Emmitt Smith, quarterback Troy Aikman and cornerback Thomas Everett of champion Dallas Cowboys were among five players who won't play in the Pro Bowl because of Super Bowl injuries.

The league announced defensive end Bruce Smith and receiver Andre Reed of Buffalo also will miss NFL's All-Star game at Aloha Stadium Sunday.

Rodney Hampton of the Giants will replace Emmitt Smith, Bobby Hebert of Atlanta fills in for Aikman and Leroy Butler of Green Bay takes Everett's spot for NFC. Houston receiver Haywood Jeffires and defensive lineman Sean Jones will replace Reed and Bruce Smith for AFC.

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Harper of the Los Angeles Clippers, who averaged 28.7 points, 7.0 rebounds and 5.3 assists per game leading his team to 2-1 record, is NBA Player of the Week.

BASEBALL

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bo Jackson signed a one-year, $1 million contract with incentives with the California Angels.

After missing most of 1991 and all of 1992 because of hip problems, Jackson hit .232 with 16 homers and 45 RBIs in 85 games for Chicago White Sox last season. He turned down an arbitration offer to become a free agent.

Jackson's football career ended with a hip injury in the playoffs for the Raiders in January 1991. In July 1989 at Anaheim Stadium, he led off All-Star game with a long homer to center and was MVP.

CHICAGO (AP) — Third-baseman Robin Ventura and the Chicago White Sox avoided arbitration, agreeing on a four-year contract.

The 26-year-old Ventura won third straight Gold Glove last season and batted .262 with 22 home runs and 94 RBIs. A lifetime .269 hitter, he has 66 home runs and 348 RBIs in 639 games since joining Chicago in September 1989.

HOCKEY

TORONTO (AP) — Rookie center Jesse Belanger of the Florida Panthers was selected NHL Player of the Week. Belanger had four goals and four assists in four games, including game-winning goal against Buffalo and game-tying goal against San Jose to help Florida extend unbeaten streak to nine games.

TENNIS

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Michael Chang struggled with his serve but beat Tommy Ho 6-3, 6-4 in first round of the San Jose Open. Chang will face Denmark's Kenneth Carlsen, a 6-1, 6-2 winner over Ken Flach.

In earlier first-round matches, fifth-seeded Karsten Braasch of Germany had 17 aces in defeating Steve Bryan 7-6 (7-4), 6-4; No. 6 Renzo Furlan of Italy ousted qualifier Brian Devening, 6-2, 6-1, and eighth-seeded Luiz Mattar eliminated Brandon Coupe 6-3, 6-3.

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Fifth-seeded Ivan Lendl opened the Dubai Open with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Germany's Carsten Arriens.

In other matches, Australian Patrick Rafter beat Morocco's Younes El Aynaoui 6-3, 2-6, 6-3; Australian Thomas Muster, seeded second, downed Australia's Darren Cahill, 7-5, 6-2; Alexander Volkov of Russia defeated Australian Jason Stoltenberg 6-4, 7-6 (7-2), and France's Fabrice Santoro was beaten by Russian Andrei Cherkasov, 6-3, 1-6, 6-2.

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — Czechs David Rikl and Martin Damm posted victories in the first round of the Marseille Open. Rikl beat wild-card Leander Paes of India, 7-5, 6-4, while Damm defeated Jan Siemerink of Netherlands 6-4, 6-2.

Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland eliminated Rodolphe Gilbert of France 6-4, 6-2 while another Frenchman, Stephane Simian, ousted Yevgeni Kafelnikov 6-3, 6-7 (2-7), 7-6 (7-5).

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Top-seeded Julie Halard of France swept past New Zealand qualifier Claudine Toledoa 6-0, 6-0 in first round of the Amway Classic.

No. 3 Ginger Helgeson ousted Nadine Ercegovic of Croatia 6-3, 6-3; South African Tessa Price downed Andrea Vieira of Brazil 6-2, 6-2, and Ann Henriksen beat Nanne Dahlman of Finland 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

NEWBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — Army fullback Akili King was recovering from stab wounds after he and three West Point cadets brawled outside a bar.

King, sophomore at U.S. Military Academy, was stabbed in the chest just below heart and thighs. James Ray was stabbed in thighs and buttocks, according to Lt. Col. Don McGrath, West Point spokesman.

King and Ray, former Army football player, were in stable condition at academy's Keller Army Hospital.

According to police, Landis Maddox, Army defensive back, cadet Ernest Smith, Brian King, Akili King and Ray left Pop's Paradise when approached by a man early Sunday.

Cowboys could have Super Bowl 'three-peat'

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — How far can the Dallas Cowboys carry this championship thing? As far as loyalty and free agency will allow.

The Cowboys, as presently constituted, will be heavy favorites to become the first team to win three straight Super Bowls. Not only are they supremely talented and superbly coached, but the Cowboys are a young team.

Except for Jim Jeffcoat, Mark Tuinei, Bill Bates, Elvis Patterson and Eddie Murray, they have no one with as much as 10 years experience. Only tackle Tuinei and placekicker Murray are fulltimers.

But the makeup of the new NFL already is causing rumblings.

Most of the blockers are free agents, as is middle linebacker Ken Norton. If the rest of the league, particularly the Buffalo Bills, can't stop the Cowboys, maybe lucrative contract offers from the competition can.

"I know that we did something that very few teams have done, and that's win back-to-back Super Bowls," Troy Aikman said after the 30-13 victory Sunday over the unfortunate Bills, who have lost the last four NFL title games. And if we're able to keep all our guys in place and go into next year with the players we have now — so at least there's some continuity and there's some guys who have learned — then I think we've a chance to do some special things in Dallas.

"But it's hard to say with free agency and who is going to take off for the money ... and they should. You know, there are a lot of guys who deserved to be paid and, hopefully, we'll be able to keep them all. But it will be tough."

The Cowboys already went through tough times in contract dealings. Emmitt Smith missed all of training camp and the first two games of the season in a protracted holdout. When he finally signed, the Cowboys began playing like champions. Smith was the league MVP, then won most valuable player honors in the Super Bowl.

Aikman emptied the vaults, too, including an $11 million signing bonus in December.

But how well can they operate behind a patchwork line, which could be their lot if the Cowboys can't sign Pro Bowl center Mark Stepnoski, Pro Bowl guard Nate Newton, plus John Gesek and Kevin Gogan, who started in the Super Bowl?

"Of course I want all those guys back," said Smith, who won his third straight rushing crown this season. "It's kind of premature to say what kind of team we're going to have next year, considering that we have a number of free agents, including the offensive linemen who will be testing the market."

One man who almost certainly is gone is offensive coordinator Norv Turner. He headed to Washington today for what appears to be a go-through-the-motions interview before he is offered the Redskins' head coaching position.

"We're still going to have basically the same players," said tight end Jay Novacek said, "but anytime you miss a key person like that, a person that ran the offense, a person that made us do what we did, you're going to miss that. We wish him all the best of luck.

"Unfortunately, the way it sounds, he'll probably go to Washington. We'd just as soon have him somewhere else."

America apparently would prefer seeing the Bills anywhere but the next Super Bowl. However, most of their key players are signed and the Bills have displayed a level of perseverance unmatched in professional sports; they are the first team to lose four straight championships in any sport.

"Sometimes you feel like you are beating your head against the wall," Steve Tasker said. "But as long as there's a chance for us to come back, we are going to keep fighting."

Pampa guard Rayford Young (left), who was the team's leading scorer with 19 points against Borger last week, will be in the lineup against Dumas at 7:30 tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse.

District-leading Pampa hosts Dumas

After a one-sided win over archrival Borger, 76-52, last Friday night to take over sole possession of first place in the District 1-4A standings, the Pampa Harvesters host the cellar-dwelling Dumas Demons at 7:30 tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse.

While the Harvesters are sitting atop the standings, the Demons are stranded at the bottom. Pampa walloped Dumas, 94-38, in the first meeting between the two teams.

The Harvesters, 5-0 in district play and 18-8, overall are ranked No. 13 in Class 4A in the latest Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll.

Dumas is struggling at 0-5 in district and 3-20 for the season.

The convincing win over Borger gave Pampa a solid, inside track to winning its sixth consecutive district championship. The game, played on Borger's home floor, figured to be one of those thrillers where the outcome would probably be decided on which team made the final bucket. Pampa had other plans. The Harvesters took charge late in the first quarter and never looked back. Led by sophomore guard Rayford Young's 19 points, the Harvesters shot better than 50 percent from the floor in each quarter. They finished at 58.2 percent (32 of 55) for the contest. Borger ended up shooting 42.9 percent (21 of 49).

Team	District	Overall
Pampa	5-0	18-8
Borger	4-1	18-8
Randall	3-2	9-17
Caprock	2-3	8-18
Hereford	1-4	7-18
Dumas	0-5	3-20

"When you're feeling good and playing hard, chances are you're going to shoot the ball well also," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "The main thing was that we had such a good team effort from all of our kids."

Pampa led by as many as 17 points in the first half and were up by 32-18 at intermission.

Wheeler, Groom affected by realignment

The University Interscholastic League announced district realignments today, showing that several area schools will be affected. Among them, Wheeler moved from class 2A down to 1A, and Groom jumped from six-man to 11-man football.

"Our kids have been gearing for it," Groom football coach Terry O'Dell said. "They realize there's nothing they can do about it and there's nothing we can do about it. It's going to be tough - I think we're going to have to get to work."

District 1-1A will feature both newcomers Wheeler and Groom, both teams which went to their respective playoffs last season. They will join last season's 1-1A champ, White Deer, which was expected to move up to 2A this year.

Sammorwood will replace Groom in six-man district 1-1A, while Highland Park will take Wheeler's spot in 2-2A.

New Alignments for the 1994-95 school year:

District 2-2A (football and basketball) - Highland Park, Canadian, Clarendon, Memphis, Panhandle, Wellington

District 1-1A (11-man football) - Booker, Groom, Shamrock, Sunray, Wheeler, White Deer

District 1-1A (six-man football) - Follett, Higgins, Lefors, McLean, Miami, Samnorwood

District 1-2A (basketball) - Claude, Sunray, Vega, White Deer

District 1-3A (basketball) - Booker, Groom, Shamrock, Wheeler

District 1-4A (basketball) - Allison, Fort Elliott, Follett, Higgins

District 1-5A (basketball) - Lefors, McLean, Miami, Kelton

Bills will come battling back, Levy says

Buffalo expected to make few changes in going for fifth straight Super Bowl appearance

By JOHN F. BONFATTI
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Despite losing four straight Super Bowls, Marv Levy says his Buffalo Bills will be "remembered fondly" by NFL historians.

"However, we are not yet putting the remains to rest," Levy added. "I'm not giving a final eulogy. This team is going to come battling back."

That wouldn't be a surprise. Written off after losing their second, then their third straight Super Bowl, the Bills fought their way back into the title game again, only to lose 30-13 Sunday to the Dallas Cowboys.

The question Levy and general manager John Butler must now answer is how much better a good team has to get to be a great team capable of winning a championship. "I don't think a whole lot," Butler said Monday. "In the AFC, we must be pretty good. And in the world championship, we were 30 minutes away."

Butler said he still hasn't put his finger on what exactly it will take to make the Bills Super Bowl champions, but that he, Levy and the Bills coaching staff hope they will have answers once a thorough review of the team is completed.

One thing's for sure. Butler and Levy say there's no need to make wholesale changes.

"What I don't want to do is all of a sudden after a ball game like this get a knee-jerk reaction and say,

"OK, boy, we've got to get rid of this and that," Butler said Monday. "We'll evaluate, but we're not going to break up the Bills," Levy said. "That would be an overreaction."

Most immediately, the Bills must decide what to do with their free agents. Two starters in the defensive backfield, cornerback Nate Odomes and free safety Mark Kelso, are in the group of players who could be signed by other teams, as are offensive line starters Howard Ballard and John Davis.

Two other special teams standouts — Steve Tasker and punter Chris Mohr — are also free agents, along with offensive guard Jim Ritcher and linebacker Richard Harvey.

The Bills could protect two of those players by naming them either a franchise or transition player, which would allow the Bills to match any offer to retain the player's services.

But that is not foolproof. Buffalo named tackle Will Wolford a transition player last year, but lost him when the Indianapolis Colts came up with an ingenious contract the Bills couldn't match.

For that reason, Butler said he's not sure the franchise or transition designation "is worth the paper it's written on."

Three other Bills — defensive end Phil Hansen and safeties Matt Darby and Kurt Schulz — are restricted free agents. The Bills could match any offer they received and would be compensated with draft picks if those players left.

Don't look for Buffalo to dip into the free agent pool. The Bills are already very close to the projected $34 million salary cap the NFL is imposing next season.

"The likelihood of free agency is slim for us," Butler said.

More likely, the Bills will try to add talent through the draft. The Bills will draft next-to-last in the first round this year, but they are hopeful the league will give them an extra, high draft pick as compensation for Wolford's loss.

Free agency, and the freedom of movement it gives players, may force Buffalo away from its traditional approach of making draft choices sit and watch for a season or two.

"With the situation the way it is right now, rookies are probably going to play a lot faster," Butler said. "We have some young kids coming that we feel are pretty good football players. A lot of them are going to get their chance to perform in a more significant role."

Butler listed two priorities — offensive line and defensive backfield — when asked about where the Bills would be looking to improve.

"When a team starts to go downhill pretty fast, it maybe happens on the offensive line, and maybe we need to get some youngsters there to get ready," he said.

"I think that's going to be one of our (priorities)," he said, noting that center Kent Hull is 32, Ritcher is 35 and facing shoulder surgery and Davis is 28 and facing knee surgery. "It's time to get some youngsters in the fold."

Butler said the added emphasis on the passing game is also on his mind. "In this league, you better have every defensive back you can get,"

The Bills signed running back Thurman Thomas to a four-year contract at the start of the season. (AP photo)

he said. "You see so many three- and four-wideout sets and everybody throws so well that half your time is spent in nickel and dime. That's how Dallas played the whole game last night."

The Bills will not make wholesale changes, however. They signed

Bruce Smith and Thurman Thomas to four-year contracts at the start of the season and renegotiated the contracts of Jim Kelly and Darryl Talley during the season.

"We kept the core of our team, and that's what we decided to do from Day One," Butler said.

Turner expected to be Redskins new head coach

ASBURN, Va. (AP) — A month later than they expected, the Washington Redskins are again turning to the offensive overseer of their archrival to reverse one of the NFL's most rapid collapses in history.

The Redskins planned to fly Dallas Cowboys offensive coordinator Norv Turner here today for an interview with owner Jack Kent Cooke before naming him to replace Richie Petitbon as their head coach.

The interview is mainly a formality. The Redskins were looking only at Turner to replace the franchise even before Petitbon was fired last month at the conclusion of a 4-12 season, the team's worst in 30 years.

A deal was to have been completed four weeks ago during the Cowboys' break between the regular season and the playoffs. It was abruptly aborted when NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue invoked a league rule that prevents job interviews of coaching candidates until after their final game.

Since then, the Phoenix Cardinals also have expressed an interest in Turner after firing Joe Bugel last week. The Redskins, however, appear to remain the 41-year-old Turner's first choice.

"I'm looking forward to doing my own deal," Turner said after the Cowboys captured their second straight Super Bowl, defeating the Buffalo Bills 30-13. "Everything I've seen about the Washington job is very positive."

Contractual details and salary reportedly have already been worked out and the only thing that remains is the interview with Cooke. Assuming it goes well, the Redskins planned a news conference for late today or Wednesday.

In Turner, the Redskins see a clone of Joe Gibbs — a self-effacing workaholic obsessed by details and quietly enthusiastic in contrast to the remote stoicism that was Petitbon's main character trait.

Gibbs, who took the Redskins to four Super Bowls over 12 years, abruptly resigned last March after they fell to a 9-8 record in the 1992 season.

College hoops has another No. 1 team

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

In a record year of changing No. 1s, there's a familiar name atop the rankings.

On Monday, Duke became the sixth school to hold the No. 1 spot this season. It was the fifth straight poll with a different team on top.

The Blue Devils (15-1) are No. 1 for the third straight season, and their first game with the new ranking will be Thursday night at No. 2 North Carolina, the first 1-2 matchup since top-ranked UNLV beat Arkansas 112-105 on Feb. 10, 1991.

This was supposed to be a good Duke team, but not as good as the ones before it that made the Final Four part of their regular schedule.

"I'm very surprised," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said Monday.

"I think that going into the year we had a lot of questions about our group and midway through the year we still have a lot of questions. I've had opportunities to coach teams that have been No. 1 before and this team is very much a developing team. We think it is an honor to be voted No. 1 at any time because you may never be voted No. 1 again."

The Blue Devils got the chance to be No. 1 when UCLA (14-1), the top team for just one week, lost to California 85-70 Sunday.

The other teams to hold No. 1 this season were North Carolina, Kentucky, Arkansas and Kansas.

Since Arkansas' five-week run ended last month, there has been a different top-ranked team every week.

Duke was No. 1 for five weeks last season and was the top-ranked team the entire 1991-92 season, the year the Blue Devils won their second straight national championship.

Being No. 1 can still be special even for a program that successful.

"I wouldn't say it is not important because it's always nice to be honored," Krzyzewski said. "It is an honor but it's not an accomplishment, an achievement or something you strive to do. It just happens.

"What I think it shows is that there are a lot of good basketball teams but not the dominant ones that have been there the last few years."

The previous record for No. 1 in a season was five in 1989-90, when UNLV, Syracuse, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma all spent time at the top.

Duke got there this week by being named No. 1 on 51 ballots and receiving 1,587 points from the national media panel to easily outdistance the Tar Heels (17-3), who received three first-place votes and 1,429 points.

Kansas (19-2) was four points behind them with two first-place votes.

UCLA, the last unbeaten team this season, dropped to fourth with one first-place vote, while Connecticut (18-1), which had seven first-place votes, reached its highest ranking of the season at fifth. The Huskies were followed by Arkansas, Kentucky, Purdue, Louisville and Temple.

Massachusetts led the Second Ten and was followed by Arizona, Michigan, Indiana, Syracuse, Wisconsin, Alabama-Birmingham, Saint Louis, California and Missouri.

Maryland led the last five with Minnesota, New Mexico State, Florida and Cincinnati behind the Terrapins.

California (12-4), ranked sixth in the preseason, returned to the rankings after a one-week absence with the win over UCLA.

Florida (16-3) and Cincinnati (14-5) were the other newcomers this week.

The Gators, who have won eight of nine, were last in the rankings early in the 1989-90 season, while the Bearcats came back after dropping out for one week.

The three teams that fell out of the rankings were West Virginia, which had been 19th, Georgia Tech, 21st, and Marquette, 22nd. They had four losses among them, half by Georgia Tech.

After the earthquake: In futuristic freeways, will concrete be obsolete?

By SALLY STREFF BUZBEE
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Some day, Californians may no longer have to worry about massive concrete bridges crumbling underneath their cars or crushing them during earthquakes.

The proof lies below three normal-looking highway ramps, just north of Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles, researchers say. Two years ago, the ramps were upgraded to survive quakes — not with concrete or steel, but with the same lightweight, once-secret fibers used to make the stealth bomber.

And when the earth shook Jan. 17, the ramps held. "What we have are the beginnings of an entirely new type of material for the civil construction industry," said Frieder Seible, a University of California structural engineer.

"Soon it won't be just steel, concrete and timber anymore."

But some skeptics say Seible's defense-conversion dream is still years off.

So-called composite materials must prove they are durable and cost-effective before governments can routinely use them to build bridges, they say.

"They've shown they can work in the lab. But now we must see how they perform in the field," said Mohsen Sultan, a California Department of Transportation bridge engineer. "Safety must be our primary concern."

Seible, his colleagues and a consortium of private companies are working to prove what's safe.

Last year, they won a $10 million federal defense-conversion grant to build the world's first bridge made entirely of composites. Construction on the 450-foot-long San Diego span, over Interstate 5, will start in three years.

Sometime in the next two years, UC researchers will replace a concrete roadbed on an Interstate 80 bridge in Northern California's Sierra Nevada range with a section of composites, strong enough to carry trucks but light enough that Seible's two elementary-school children can hoist a chunk big enough to fill a supermarket cart.

The new roadway will make the bridge weigh less. It will better resist snow and road salt.

"Every spring they have big potholes there, and every year they spend money to fix them," Seible said. "We're going to change that."

But it is California's destructive quakes, not potholes, that have given composites their biggest boost.

Initially, after the 1989 Loma Prieta quake in San Francisco, highway officials wrapped steel jackets around thousands of bridge support columns. During quakes, those columns are violently pushed side-to-side. Steel keeps them from crumbling.

All but one of the eight bridges that collapsed during January's magnitude-6.6 Los Angeles quake were on a waiting list for the steel retrofit. Bridges that had already received the steel upgrade remained standing.
