PAMPA — A six-month-old Pampa baby was in critical condition today in an Amarillo hospital while police questioned two people in connection with the child's injury.

The infant, Jacob Tyler Brown, was reported to be suffering from shaken child syndrome. He was rushed Friday to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where physicians told police the child was suffering a subdural hematoma which appears to have been caused by shaking. Pampa authorities said the injury reportedly occurred between 2 and 3 p.m. Friday in Pampa. There is no other apparent trauma, said Det. Bracie Shering.

PAMPA — Pampa's City Commission is scheduled to meet at 4 p.m. Thursday in City Hall to discuss a financial report for the last fiscal year.

Following the open session of the meeting, the commission will go into executive session to discuss hiring a new city manager, at which time a representative of Ralph Andersen and Associates, a Dallas-based search firm will address the commission.

The mayor and commissioners have interviewed three applicants for the position.

Pampa has been without a permanent city manager since the former city manager, Glen Hackler, resigned last June to become the assistant city manager of Midland.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — As the noose of suspicion tightened around Tonya Harding, her lawyer urged Olympic officials not to throw her off the team based on her ex-husband's claim she gave the OK for the attack on Nancy Kerrigan.

"All Tonya is asking for is her measure of fairness and jurisdiction that is represented by every one of the team members who will be wearing the United States flag on their uniforms," Robert C. Weaver Jr. said Tuesday.

Weaver made the appeal after Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, pleaded guilty to racketeering and agreed to testify that Harding approved the Jan. 6 attack that knocked Kerrigan out of U.S. figure skating championships, the qualifying competition for the Olympics this month in Lillehammer, Norway.

In exchange for the guilty plea, prosecutors agreed to recommend two years in prison and a $100,000 fine.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The state missed a chance two decades ago to strengthen the two freeway overpasses whose collapse in the Los Angeles earthquake caused the death of a police officer, public documents show.

Motorcycle officer Clarence Wayne Dean plunged to his death Jan. 17 when his vehicle sailed off a ramp at the wrecked interchange of Interstate 5 and State Highway 14.

Documents obtained by The Associated Press under a public records request last month reveal that the 1971 Sylmar quake northwest of downtown Los Angeles inflicted extensive damage to two bridges then under construction at the interchange.

The bridges were 80 percent complete at the time. The six other freeway structures that failed last month were either complete in 1971 or not yet built.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil rights groups kicked themselves for their too-little, too-late support for Lani Guinier last year when her nomination to be the nation's top civil rights enforcer withered and died under conservative attack.

That's not going to happen this time with Deval Patrick, the groups say.

Yet even before President Clinton nominated Patrick as the Justice Department's assistant attorney general for civil rights, one conservative was labeling the 37-year-old Boston lawyer "a stealth Guinier."

That remark from Clint Bolick, president of the conservative Institute for Justice, was made Monday, a day before Clinton announced his selection.

Pampa ISD zero-tolerance policy hailed as success

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

With the 1993-94 school year more than half way over, Pampa Independent School District's zero-tolerance fight policy is being hailed as a success.

This year, school district officials reported only five fights involving students, a total dramatically down from last year.

Bryan Hedrick, the Pampa Police Department's school resource officer, attributes the fact that fewer fights are taking place to better communication between students, school officials and parents.

He also said changing the way authorities have traditionally dealt with juveniles has made a difference.

"At this age ... these students want to be treated like young adults, so when we came up with the policy ... we said, 'If you want to be treated like young adults, it's time to be responsible for your actions,'" Hedrick said.

For those students that insist on fighting, however, the zero-tolerance policy calls for stricter penalties, outside of the school system.

In addition to the possibility of in-school suspension, students in the PISD caught fighting are arrested, charged with disorderly conduct and brought before a judge.

"Not only is it going to get you in trouble at school," Hedrick said about fighting, "you're going to be arrested and you're going to face up to a $250 fine."

For the school's part, John Kendall, one of Pampa High School's assistant principals, said the program has given students added security as they walk the halls and added that he believes that while they might not openly do so, students support the get-tough program.

"I feel fortunate because we do have a great student body and they do respond to the things that we do," he said. "Of course, they understand the rules that we make as a result of things that keep coming up constantly and have become a problem."

Both Hedrick and Kendall agreed that peer pressure is often the reason.

The zero-tolerance program is more than a get-tough program, however. The key seems to be in the ability of the faculties and authorities to take the initiative in the situation.

As the school resource officer, Hedrick spends the majority of time he's at work in the schools, especially Pampa High School. This gives him the opportunity to listen to students.

Ultimately, however, the solution to violence in schools might be at a higher level and involve society as a whole.

Earlier this year, the National School Board Association cited "changing family situations" as a primary cause for the nationwide increase in public education. They also said television and violent song lyrics have played a role in increasing school-yard violence.

Clinton set to lift trade embargo

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is primed to lift the 19-year economic embargo on Vietnam, administration officials say, spurred by progress on the MIA issue and urged on by Clinton's top advisers, senators and business interests.

A memo on its way to the president's desk embraces a "consensus recommendation" that the embargo end, the officials said.

Clinton's advisers included Secretary of State Warren Christopher, Defense Secretary Les Aspin and national security adviser Anthony Lake. Some veterans groups and families of missing Americans want the ban to stand.

But Clinton is in favor of resuming normal trade relations. Other officials said Clinton has been leaning for weeks in the direction of ending the embargo as the best way to speed the search for servicemen unaccounted for from the war.

The White House was insisting publicly today that Clinton has not made a final decision. "The president — as of last night — unequivocally had not made a decision ... anybody who says otherwise is just guessing into the future," spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers told reporters today.

There was no word today from Vietnam, which has been eager for an end to the embargo. A spokesman for Vietnam's Foreign Ministry said the government would have no immediate comment, but American businessmen in Hanoi were expressing relief.

"I'm ecstatic that we're getting close," said James Rockwell, a Hanoi-based consultant for several U.S. companies including Chrysler Corp. "I've heard tons of stories flying around today. But that's great news for everybody."

"It puts us in business," said Peter Ryder, president of Manolis & Company Asia Ltd., a real estate development and investment firm in Hanoi.

While there are varying views among Clinton's advisers whether lifting the ban would achieve that goal, a majority do believe that a change on trade would improve chances for getting more cooperation from Vietnam in determining the missing Americans' fate, the officials said.

Teenager ordered to state hospital by judge

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Lubbock judge ruled Tuesday that a teenager accused in a man's shooting death is going to a state hospital. The estranged wife of the shooting victim has been indicted in the student's sexual assault.

The Levelland eighth-grader was ordered to Vernon State Hospital by State District Judge Andy Kupper after testimony showed the boy suffers from major depression and post-traumatic stress disorder.

The lanky 14-year-old, who was holding a Bible, hugged and kissed his parents after the hearing.

The youth was scheduled to go on trial this week in the shooting death of Jackie Condren. But the trial was indefinitely suspended.

Condren, 54, was killed Sept. 19 with a .45-caliber handgun as he watched television in his Levelland home.

A grand jury last month indicted his estranged wife, Johnell Condren, on two counts involving intercourse and oral sex with the boy in August 1991, when he was 12. The 40-year-old woman was married to Condren for 11 years.

The teen will be sent to the hospital for at least 90 days.

Court testimony showed the youth was on parole with the Texas Youth Commission for a sex offense with a 4-year-old girl at the time of Condren's death.

Prosecutors said a 13-year-old boy also has been accused in the homicide.

Three mental experts Tuesday testified that the older teen showed signs of major depression and post-traumatic stress disorder from sexual abuse, allegedly from Condren's widow.

Phil sees his shadow -- six more weeks of winter

By JEFFREY BAIR
Associated Press Writer

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil should have stayed in bed. Despite overcast skies, the famous rodent predicted six more weeks of winter when he was pulled from his cozy, hay-filled burrow this morning.

About 2,000 people showed up at Gobblers Knob outside this western Pennsylvania town to find out whether Phil would see his shadow — a sign of six more weeks of winter, according to tradition. They jeered the bad news, delivered as a light snow fell and the temperature hovered at 2 below.

"Remember the Roman adage, 'Don't kill the messenger,'" said Jeffrey Lundy, a member of the Inner Circle club that stages the town's Groundhog Day festivities.

The groundhog's prediction actually has nothing to do with the sun — the Inner Circle club drafts the forecast in advance.

The groundhog forecast is based on a German tradition brought to the Pennsylvania hills in 1887. If a woodchuck, or groundhog, emerged from its burrow in early February and saw its shadow, it would be frightened and return to its hole for another six weeks.

Violence monitor is planned for television

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents would know when a violent show was coming up on cable television — and could block it — under a system devised by the industry to derail congressional efforts to force a reduction in televised mayhem.

The cable industry also said Tuesday it would set up an independent monitoring system to track violent shows and issue public reports.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce telecommunications subcommittee, termed the plan "the dawning of a new era."

And Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said he is sufficiently satisfied with the monitoring proposal to drop legislation that would have required federal monitoring of violence. But he left the door open to renew the effort if television doesn't improve.

The four major broadcast networks said they will join in the independent monitoring program, with a system in full operation by September.

But the over-the-air broadcasters declined to join in the rating system or the proposal for technology that would allow shows to be blocked.

That rating system could be in place in six to nine months, and the technology to block shows within a year, cable officials said.

Both cable officials and broadcasters denounced gratuitous violence on television, but both also said they were concerned that any congressional action could violate their First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and the press.

The cable industry also called for a concentrated series of anti-violence broadcasts termed Voices Against Violence as well as the rating, monitoring and channel blocking plans.

And a broad spectrum of cable networks endorsed the effort, ranging from American Movie Classics to the Weather Channel and including MTV, ESPN, HBO, Discovery, the Learning Channel, Lifetime, Court TV and CNN.

Winston H. Cox, president of the Showtime network, said the cable industry assumes there would be one independent monitoring program for both cable and broadcasters.

Cox said the cable industry plans the rating system to give parents more information on the shows that appear. However, it was not yet clear how viewers would learn the rating.

The rating could be aired or in a guide — or the rating could be coded into a broadcast and a violent show automatically blocked.

Cox said sports and news shows are not expected to be rated.

But while CBS Vice President Martin D. Franks said the four major broadcast networks were open to the idea of a single monitor, they were inclined to have their own system separate from cable.

And while Franks spoke of an annual report on violence, Cox talked about reports two to four times a year.

The biggest difference focused on cable's endorsement of a plan for rating shows and finding ways to limit the access of children to them, though Cox said the success of such a venture may hinge on whether the broadcasters eventually choose to join in.

"There should be no surprises to viewers when they turn on their TV," said Cox, representing the National Cable Television Association.

He endorsed the so-called V-chip, a technological device that would permit parents to block from their television sets any program that was rated as violent.

Authorities: Crash that killed seven was deliberate

By JULIA PRODIS
Associated Press Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Kai Chanhthavong, who fled at age 3 with her parents from war-torn Laos, wanted nothing more than to be an American girl, roller-skating and giggling about boys with her friends, dreaming about a career as a TV journalist.

What she didn't want was her family-arranged suitor — a man 20 years older who paid $15,000 for her to become his bride.

Now investigators are wondering if Kai's spurned husband-to-be, Khamphong "Pong" Phonemalay, deliberately drove a van into the path of a tractor-trailer, causing a wreck that killed himself, 17-year-old Kai and her family.

"She wanted to live a normal teen-age life and date young men her age. This was contrary to their marriage agreement," sheriff's Lt. Ivan Deering said Tuesday.

Investigators had hoped to find clues by translating letters found in Phonemalay's locker at work. But they turned out to be only love songs he was writing, and none mentioned Kai.

"We cannot call this a murder-suicide because we don't have any concrete evidence, like a suicide note or a conversation he may have had with someone where he discussed doing this," Deering said.

"But the circumstances could certainly lead you to that conclusion."

Mike Kosciolk, Phonemalay's supervisor at Special Mold Engineering in Rochester, where Phonemalay was a toolmaker, said the couple clearly didn't get along. "I don't think she really liked him that much, not as much as he liked her," he said.

One of Kai's friends, Sarah McCall, said Kai (rhymes with "eye") "didn't want to marry him from the beginning. She was just trying to live a normal teen-age life. But she couldn't because of him. Her parents were still living the Laos way of life."

Phonemalay had stayed at Kai's home for a while, but was living in an apartment at the time of his death.

"Every morning he used to come in her room and shine a flashlight in her face," Sarah told the Detroit Free Press. "He'd try to kiss her. She'd be like, 'Get away from me, get away!'"

The Free Press reported today that investigators found the couple's prenuptial agreement in the home. At the bottom, Kai had written, "I don't want to marry Kham."

Along with Kai and Phonemalay, Kai's parents, grandmother, 14-year-old sister Lai and a family friend were killed in the fiery crash Sunday on a rural, two-lane highway in southeastern Michigan.

Witnesses said the van he was driving crossed into the opposite lane and appeared to speed up before slamming head-on into a tractor-trailer. The truck driver was not hurt.

Investigators found no sign of mechanical failure. And they saw no skid marks or other evidence that Phonemalay applied the brakes.

Kai's body was found on the side of the road. She was wearing her Pontiac Central High School letterman's jacket.

Kai played softball and was on the swim team. Last year, she was a contestant in the Miss Teen-age Michigan Contest. She received an award for being the most friendly in the pageant. She kept the golden trophy in a china cabinet near her pink carpeted bedroom.

Friends and relatives said the Chanhthavongs overcame great odds to achieve the American dream.

Fleeing the communists in Laos in the late 1970s, Kai's mother, Songka, dodged bullets, hid in rice paddies and forded a river to get to Thailand. All the way, a pregnant Mrs. Chanhthavong held Kai tightly to her chest.

Richards, police chiefs urge flexibility in crime bill

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Gov. Ann Richards and state law enforcement officials are lobbying Congress to add 100,000 more police officers to the nation's streets.

But they're also delivering the message that Washington shouldn't attach too many strings to how federal dollars can be spent fighting crime and shouldn't divert money away from anti-crime efforts that are working.

With several police chiefs in tow Tuesday, Richards met for an hour with Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden of Delaware to discuss the massive crime package now before Congress.

A day earlier, the Texans made the same points to House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks of Beaumont. Both Brooks and Biden are key players as the House and Senate attempt to iron out their differences over the crime bill.

"We're all interested in seeing more officers on the beat," said Austin Police Chief Elizabeth Watson. But, she added, "Don't rob from Peter to pay Paul."

The governor's concern is that Congress may cut monies for a grant program that funds 50 drug task forces in Texas — task forces that have intercepted more than $2 billion in drugs and arrested 68,000 people since 1987.

"As a consequence of that, a lot of drugs are confiscated that never make their way up to the Midwest or to the North," Richards told reporters outside Biden's office.

"I don't want (lawmakers) while they are up here pounding on their chests about how tough on crime they are to actually do something that could jeopardize the funds for law enforcement that we are using in Texas."

Arlington Police Chief David Kunkle said another worry is that funding for the 100,000 additional officers would dry up after five years. "There's no reason to assume five years from now we'll be able to pay for them," Kunkle said.

Despite the concerns, the law enforcement officials offered praise for the anti-crime measures. "We are very, very encouraged," said Dallas Police Department legislative coordinator Jim Spivey.

Added Watson: "I think the crime bill holds great promise ... The issue is not really the crime bill but the funding for it."

Police search for rape gang after four women attacked

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police say four women were raped and robbed by a group of five men who also may have earlier attacked a Hurst woman.

"It looks very much like they're related," L.J.C. Fortinberry, a detective with Fort Worth's sexual assault unit, said about the Hurst and Fort Worth cases.

The group of four women — ages 29, 30, 31 and 33 — were attacked before 1 a.m. Tuesday while moving one of the women into an apartment, police say.

The women were treated at John Peter Smith Hospital after the nearly three-hour ordeal.

"Our concern is that the attacks are going to continue until they're caught," Fortinberry said.

The Fort Worth attacks began when one of the women was stopped by a man with a handgun. He demanded she take him and four other men to the apartment, the report says.

Once inside, the men forced the women into a back bedroom and told them to lie face down on the floor, according to the report. "We gotta have $300 or you're gonna die," the victims quoted one of the men as saying.

The men took the women's jewelry, credit cards, checkbooks and automatic bank teller cards, according to the report. They forced the women to tell them the codes to their bank cards, the report says.

Two men took one woman to the teller machine, then returned to repeatedly rape and assault them, the report said.

In the Hurst attack, several men kidnapped a 26-year-old woman Saturday night from her apartment complex. They sexually assaulted her and left her in Fort Worth, the woman told police.

The woman was also forced to withdraw money from an automatic teller machine, police said.

Some of the men's faces were captured on videotape at automatic bank teller machines and when they stopped at a convenience store to buy lighter fluid to burn the Hurst woman's car. Those photographs were expected to be released today.

Woman OK after being buried in concrete during accident

AUSTIN (AP) — A Round Rock woman is recovering after being buried in concrete during a traffic accident.

Mireya Funair, 30, was up to her chin in concrete Tuesday morning, rescuers said. A truck tipped over and filled her car with some of its mucky load.

Fire Department Capt. Richard Collins said the woman was totally surrounded in concrete.

The accident happened when Funair was slowing down on an icy bridge.

A concrete truck started skidding on ice behind her. The truck hit a dry spot and tipped onto Funair's car, police said.

Firefighters had to cut the top of the car to extricate the woman.

"It turned out much better than I looked," said Collins. "The biggest problem was waiting to get the concrete truck out of the way."

The trucker is not expected to be cited, according to police.

Tuzla airport in northeastern Bosnia shelled

By SAMIR KRILIC
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The Tuzla airport in northeastern Bosnia had been shelled, apparently by Serbs, who have defied international efforts to reopen it for vital relief flights.

Fifteen rounds were fired at the airfield Tuesday afternoon and eight shells hit one of its three runways, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Bill Aikman. He said damage was minimal, and the main runway was not hit.

Bosnian Serb commanders, shrugging off threats of NATO air strikes if they refuse to allow the airport to open, have warned it is within range of their guns. They have shelled the airfield intermittently the past year.

Tuzla is the biggest enclave held by Bosnia's Muslim-led government outside of Sarajevo.

The airport there is important because the United Nations is hampered in bringing humanitarian aid to the besieged enclave overland. Routes from the east and west are controlled by Serbs. From the south, convoys have to pass through Croat-Muslim front lines.

Tuzla is getting at most 20 percent of the aid it needs. Opening the airport would allow the United Nations to double that, some estimates say.

But Serbs fear the airfield will be used to ferry arms to government troops. The Bosnian Serb leader, Radovan Karadzic, said Tuesday that it would be up to a self-styled Bosnian Serb assembly to decide whether it could reopen.

The war in Bosnia broke out in April 1992 when Bosnia's Serbs, armed by the Yugoslav federal army, launched a violent grab for territory after the republic moved for independence from Yugoslavia.

Muslim-led government troops and Croat forces, allies at first, have since fought for territory not claimed by Serbs, who hold 70 percent of the state. At least 200,000 people are dead or missing in the war.

The prime ministers of Pakistan and Turkey arrived in Sarajevo this morning in a show of support for the Slavic Muslims who have been the biggest losers in Bosnia's war.

The women, both leaders of Muslim states, were greeted with cheers and shouts of "Bosnia! Bosnia!" when they arrived at Bosnia's presidency.

"We go less as prime ministers and more as mothers, to focus the plight of Bosnians and help bring an end to the fighting," said Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan as she left Zagreb, Croatia, for Sarajevo.

Turkish Prime Minister Tansu Ciller said their trip was "a signal to the whole world that this is a moral issue, and that is what Europe should stand for."

Bhutto has accused the European Union and the U.N. Security Council of failing to stop "genocide" against Slavic Muslims in Bosnia.

On Tuesday, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali named the head of France's rapid deployment force as the commander of U.N. peacekeeping forces in the former Yugoslav.

Gen. Bertrand de Lapresle will replace Gen. Jean Cot, also of France, who is being recalled following disputes with his U.N. civilian chiefs over the authority to request NATO air strikes.

Son arrested for mutilation death of mom

BEAUMONT (AP) — A 45-year-old man talked about the end of the world and said his mother was "a source of evil" in the days before she was decapitated and her body badly mutilated, friends and relatives said.

Millet Harrison is being held at the Jefferson County Jail today after Tuesday's slaying at the home of his mother, 67-year-old Louise Harrison.

The woman was found in a front bedroom of her woodframe house. She had been strangled, decapitated, mutilated and stabbed at least 100 times, said Beaumont police spokeswoman Zena Stephens.

Authorities believe the gruesome mutilation was committed with kitchen utensils, screwdrivers and a hammer.

"This hasn't happened. This is just a bad dream. My mama isn't dead," said Shirley Harrison, who found her mother's body about 7 a.m. "I know she isn't dead. ... This kind of thing happens on television."

Police said Millet Harrison was sitting calmly on a living room sofa when they arrived. Murder charges against him were pending, officials said.

Shirley Harrison said her brother suffers from mental problems and had suffered a nervous breakdown during the holidays. She added that the family had tried to have him committed to a neurological hospital, but officials refused since he hadn't threatened to harm himself or others.

Millet Harrison most recently had worked as a computer programmer in Houston, his sister said.

Gray County Republicans open headquarters

The Gray County Republican headquarters is officially open for business.

Party headquarters, located in Suite 110 of the Hughes Building, will be open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, party officials announced Tuesday.

Gray County Republicans inaugurated their new headquarters Tuesday in the Hughes Building with a host of candidates and elected officials in attendance.

State Sen. Teel Bivins (R-Amarillo) came to talk victory with party locals.

He told the gathering of 30 that he sees the opportunity for Republicans to earn great victories in November.

Bivins, who is completing his sixth year in the state Senate, told Republicans that he believes the beleaguered U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison will be re-elected and that one of the three Republicans who oppose Rep. Bill Sarpalus will be victorious.

"We have a great shot to knock off Bill Sarpalus," Bivins said.

The most exciting race of 1994 is the governor's contest which pits charismatic George W. Bush against popular incumbent Gov. Ann Richards, he said.

"If you have comparable candidates," Bivins said, "Texas will vote Republican."

In other races, Bivins optimistically predicts Republican victories, citing opportunities to defeat Democratic incumbents Attorney General Dan Morales, Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent and Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers.

Study finds link between cigarettes, colon cancer

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Studies involving more than 165,000 people show strong evidence that cigarette smoking can lead to colon or rectal cancer in both men and women.

Two studies published today in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute suggest that a destiny of colorectal cancer, unlike some other conditions linked to tobacco, can be set for life by early smoking, even if the cigarette habit is later dropped.

"With colon cancer, if you smoke in your 20s, that risk stays with you," said Dr. Edward Giovannucci of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, the Channing Laboratory and the Harvard School of Public Health. "Even if you stop at age 40, you'll still be at greater risk."

The danger is also "dose-related," he said. "The more you smoke, the more the risk."

Other studies show that stopping smoking at any age does lower the risk of other cigarette-related disorders, such as heart disease and lung cancer, Giovannucci noted.

Dr. Jonathan E. Fielding of the University of California at Los Angeles Schools of Public Health and Medicine said in the Journal that Giovannucci's findings "provide the strongest epidemiologic evidence to date of a causal link between smoking and colorectal cancer risk."

The colon cancer conclusions are based on a Harvard School of Public Health study of 47,935 men and a Brigham and Women's study of 118,334 women. Both studies used questionnaires to determine the smoking history of the participants and then related that to the rate of colorectal cancer in the groups.

Giovannucci said the studies found a direct relationship between the amount of smoking, measured in "pack years," and the development of cancer. He said a pack year is equivalent to smoking one pack of cigarettes a day for one year. Thus, a person who smokes two packs a day can accumulate 20 pack years in just a decade.

In the men's study, 35- to 39-year smokers were almost 1 1/2 times as likely to develop cancer of the colon or rectum as those who never smoked.

Similar results were found in the women's study, with the risk doubling for women with a smoking history of 45 pack years or more.

Some earlier studies found no relationship between colorectal cancer and cigarette smoking. Giovannucci said this may have been because it can take 35 years for the effects of smoking to result in this type of cancer.

Giovannucci said the rate of colorectal cancer among women may increase sharply in the next decade.

"Since women really started to smoke in the 1950s, we should only now be starting to see the rise in colorectal cancer rates" among women, he said.

Fielding said in an editorial in the Journal that other studies have linked cancers of the pancreas, bladder and kidney to cigarettes, even though those organs, like the colon, never come directly in contact with the smoke.

Branch Davidian member lashes out at Koresh in trial

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Branch Davidians' unique view of the Bible and a sect leader's teachings about a feminine God appealed to young Victorine Hollingsworth.

So the Seventh-day Adventist became a Davidian disciple in the 1960s.

Twenty-five years later, the sect deteriorated into the kingdom of David Koresh — a "false prophet" who ridiculed followers, prescribed strict household rules and led his believers into trouble with the law, Ms. Hollingsworth said.

"I became very, very bitter and very angry with Mr. Koresh for the things that he brought us through," said Ms. Hollingsworth, 59, a prosecution witness Tuesday in the federal murder trial of 11 Branch Davidians.

Hollingsworth lived at the Davidian compound near Waco the day of a Feb. 28, 1993, gun battle between sect members and agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. She identified five defendants as gunmen during or after the shootout.

Defendants Livingston Fagan and Brad Branch spoke of shooting federal agents, she said. Defendant Jaime Castillo had a gun during the shootout and defendants Clive Doyle and Kevin Whitecliff were armed guards in the compound chapel during a 51-day standoff after the firefight, Hollingsworth testified.

The defendants could face up to life in prison if convicted of murder and murder-conspiracy charges.

Speaking in a thick accent of British and Carribean origins, Hollingsworth told of her long friendship with Fagan, 34, a former British social worker she said she thinks of as a son.

Hollingsworth testified that in a hospital after her March 21 release from the Davidian compound, she got upset at Koresh after seeing Fagan on television in chains after his release from the compound.

"He (Koresh) brainwashed us all in these type of things," she said. "I didn't believe anymore that Mr. Koresh was a prophet. I believed that he was a false prophet."

Hollingsworth told jurors of a world in which Koresh ordered men and women to sleep, eat and work separately. Husbands had to give their wives and children to Koresh, she said.

Branch Davidians studied the Bible almost daily, and up to 10 or 11 hours a stretch on Saturday, the holy day.

Koresh was hardly a benevolent dictator, according to testimony.

"Mr. Koresh put people down all the time," Hollingsworth said. "He liked to find fault in people."

Hollingsworth, who is black, said Koresh criticized her race.

Because there was no running water at the Davidian compound, sect members used buckets for human waste and dug holes outdoors to dispose of it. Once Koresh scolded defendant Clive Doyle for helping her dig her waste hole, said Hollingsworth, who walks with a cane because of a leg problem.

"He (Koresh) said, 'Let everybody dig their own potty hole,'" she testified.

Life at the Mount Carmel compound included weapons training and rigorous physical workouts for young men and women, she testified.

"I know he told the ladies to do 50 pushups, 50 situps and 50 knee bends every two hours" so they would be in shape "to stop the American army," Hollingsworth said.

Koresh, whose real name was Vernon Howell, came to power in 1984 after a split within the sect.

The Branch Davidian roots go back to 1934, when the group was formed as an offshoot of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. In the late 1950s, Ben Roden led the sect. After his death in 1978, his wife, Lois Roden, succeeded him. She is the one who spoke of a feminine deity.

During the standoff, before a planned mass suicide — which ultimately was aborted because Koresh said he received a message from God — Hollingsworth said she prayed to her "heavenly father" and "heavenly mother" to be "put to sleep," lest she be blown up by a grenade.

Shortly after the Feb. 28 gun battle, Hollingsworth said, she was approached by Koresh about leaving the compound with an audio tape to give authorities containing his biblical "message." It was taken out by two other women after Hollingsworth refused to leave.

Convicted killer of teenage Galveston store clerk executed today

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — An ex-convict from San Antonio was executed today for killing a teenage convenience store clerk in Galveston nearly 14 years ago.

Harold Barnard, 51, was given lethal injection for killing Tuan Nguyen, 16, who was fatally shot as his father watched nearby during a 1980 robbery at the family store.

In a final statement, Barnard made a brief prayer, seeking forgiveness and protection for his family.

"God, please forgive me of my sins," he said. "Please look after my family... Bless and protect all good people. I am sorry for my sins. Lord, take me home with you."

He was pronounced dead at 12:27 a.m. CST, 11 minutes after the lethal drugs began flowing into his arms.

Attorneys had sought to halt the punishment by claiming Barnard was mentally incompetent. The 5th U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court each rejected the claims Tuesday, clearing the way for the first execution in Texas this year.

Barnard and three others entered a 7-Eleven store in Galveston the night of June 6, 1980 and asked for a pack of cigarettes. When store manager Tuan Nguyen turned around to get the item, Barnard pulled a gun on the manager's son, also named Tuan.

Testimony at his trial showed

Barnard shot the youth once in the heart with a sawed-off .22-caliber rifle. Nguyen, a 10th-grade honor student at Galveston Ball High School, and his father had filled a bag with money but Barnard and his three companions fled the store empty-handed.

They were arrested driving a stolen car about 30 minutes later on Interstate 45 north of Galveston. The murder weapon was found inside the car.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Clinton's quack cure not worth the money

President Clinton's Big Project of his first year was his $250 billion tax increase of 1993, amounting to $50 billion a year for five years. Only later in 1994 will Americans find out how seriously that tax increase damaged the economy.

For his second year, the Big Project is enacting the so-called National Health Service, which would prove to be an infectious disservice to the American people. It would cost taxpayers up to $150 billion a year, according to the Clinton's administration's own estimates, or three times the cost of the 1993 Clinton tax increases. It would establish a central, seven-member National Health Board to limit prices, effectively bringing price controls and rationing to health care.

Is it needed? "We do not have a health-care crisis in America," advised Daniel Patrick Moynihan, a Democrat and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, last month.

The components of the so-called "crisis" are cost and coverage. On both points, the Clinton diagnosis is wrong:

- U.S. Consumer Price Index numbers show that the rate of increases in health-care costs continues to shrink, with medical-care costs in 1993 posting their smallest annual rise since 1973.

- On the matter of coverage, Clinton keeps saying some 37 million Americans lack health-care insurance. But, according to a study by the Capital Resource Institute, that number includes people without health insurance just part of the year, such as those between jobs. A more accurate estimate is only 14 percent without insurance on any given day.

If the government just gave each of these people health insurance worth $1,000 a year, the cost would be $14 billion a year, about 10 percent of the expensive Clinton proposal.

An even better way to care for those without insurance and to lower costs, however, would be to give greater tax breaks to persons, businesses and doctors; and to reduce the immense red tape wrapped around the medical profession by the federal government. Cut the immense costs government adds to health care and health care will become cheaper to buy.

Still, that figure of $14 billion suggests that even a worst-case scenario pegs the "problems" as a much smaller one than is being diagnosed by the Clinton administration.

The Clinton program, if enacted, would ruin the world's best healthcare system, which provides excellent coverage to almost everybody, while heaping up to $150 billion more on taxpayers' backs. This is one quack cure that ought to be refused.

Are they really public servants?

The past month prominently featured a day in the life of President Bill Clinton and another in the life of Adm. Bobby Ray Inman. A few thoughts crowd the mind on matters raised by both gentlemen. It has to do with public service.

Inman rather lost contact with his audience during an hour in which his mind appeared to be insufficiently focused on the questions at hand. The arrangement of the basic data is pretty straightforward: Clinton asked him to serve as the new secretary of defense, and Inman agreed to do so.

He gave as the basic reason for his change of mind that he saw no reason to endure the suffering and indignity of what lay ahead of him in what he had detected as a conspiracy between columnist William Safire and Sen. Bob Dole. Since no such conspiracy as he described is plausible (Safire's performance over the years rules out any possibility that he would tether his analyses to the ends of any public official), one was left with the bewilderment engendered in 1992 when Ross Perot suddenly pulled out of the presidential race charging that the Republican Party was threatening the happiness of his daughter.

The sense of it is that Inman's reaction was generated by a confluence of emotional and psychological factors. One assumes that he especially resented something in Safire's column — exactly what, the reader doesn't know. And, obviously, there had been a deep ambivalence on the question of taking on the SecDef job (he had already informed the White House that he probably would simply rent a condo in Washington and maintain his two houses in Austin and Colorado, intending to spend many weekends at home). With his nomination, Inman was exposed on deck to winds of adversity he hadn't ever felt before, and he decided to chuck the whole thing.

But since his analysis of his change of heart was not clear in his own mind, his rendering of it to the public was less than lucid.

But Inman did manage to refer more than once to his 30 years of public service. And this cliché, used with such frequency, is an unexamined summons to other people's admiration and indebtedness.

The same day that Inman was performing in Austin, Clinton was performing in Los Angeles. There he was garbed for The People: in shirtsleeves, no tie. And what he said was that he had campaigned for president because of his devotion to public service, and he wished the people to know that he was with them in any catastrophe, and that government, his government, would stay with them through the end of their troubles, however long it was.

He dropped $45 million of spare change into the stricken city's coffers and said that of course much more would be forthcoming. Estimates of the damage done vary from $15 billion to $30 billion.

Here we have a gentleman of great skills and intelligence calling attention to his 30 years of public service. To which one is bound to say: What exactly have been the sacrifices you have endured that you ask us to focus on?

Men and women in America who enter public service are not automatically entitled to gratitude for sacrifices made. To enter, let us say, a service academy is to take a larger risk of getting killed in combat, but professional soldiery is a way of life entered into willingly by whole classes of people, throughout the ages. The pay is often less than what one would have received following other pursuits that one's intelligence might make accessible.

But there are compensations in public work, varied in nature, that make up for such losses. I know a half-score men and women who lead miserable economic lives because they decided, at about the age when some people decide to join the Army, that they wished to devote their lives to music. One can, and does, feel sorry for the economic hardships they endure. But this doesn't entitle them to lay claim to immunities earned in exchange for public service.

The men and women who go to deserts and jungles to preach the word of the Lord and to perform corporal acts of charity living lives of penury — they are entitled to the special considerations of their fellow men. But his fellow citizens are not in debt to the public servant who touches down in Los Angeles and extends multibillion-dollar favors generated by other Americans, or to the public servant who goes from the University of Texas to the National War College to naval cryptography to intelligence analysis to the National Security Agency to the CIA.

Bobby Ray Inman is master of his own fate. Bill Clinton is master of his own fate, and also substantially master of our own. But then, we gave him that power, and we are masters of our own fate.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, Feb. 2, the 33rd day of 1994. There are 332 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Feb. 2, 1943, the remainder of Nazi forces from the Battle of Stalingrad surrendered in a major victory for the Soviets in World War II.

On this date:
In 1536, the Argentine city of Buenos Aires was founded by Pedro de Mendoza of Spain.

In 1653, New Amsterdam, now New York City, was incorporated.

In 1848, the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, ending the Mexican War, was signed.

In 1882, Irish poet and novelist James Joyce was born near Dublin.

In 1912, Frederick R. Law parachuted from the torch of the Statue of Liberty in a stunt filmed by Pathe News.

In 1961, the 600 passengers of a hijacked Portuguese ocean liner, the Santa Maria, were allowed to disembark in Brazil.

A hiding place in your house

The typical burglar is young and frightened and will be inside your house for only seven minutes.

He will pull out every drawer and dump its contents on the floor. He will open every door and sweep possessions off shelves, clean out closets and stuff all he can carry into pillowcases.

There is nothing you can do to your house to keep a 16-year-old burglar from getting in. You can, however, keep your treasures out of his reach in a skillfully concealed safe.

But hold the phone!
Some years ago, to protect my collection of early American coins, I talked to an acquaintance who sells safes. He advised against it, explaining that for all their careful bonding of employees, the buyer has no guarantees that the installer will not — accidentally or on purpose — spread the word that you have a safe in your house, an irresistible invitation to professional burglars.

So I ended up leaving my coins in a safe deposit box at the bank, where I protect their value but am "robbed" of the enjoyment sorting them on rainy days.

In Memphis, Tenn., Dan Perkins is able to provide area residents with "a safe safe."

He has made a science of concealing safes — in furniture, behind walls, under clocks and even less likely places that he reveals to no one.

Two hundred and fourteen of his clients have been burglary victims. No burglar has ever found one of his safes.

Paul Harvey

Custom Security is a difficult business to advertise. No two installations are identical.

There is an assortment of safes on display in the company's Memphis showroom — but most are not. Perkins prefers to hear the customer's objective, visit the customer's premises and then prescribe a one-of-a-kind installation.

Perkins and his people build safes as small as a cereal box and as large as a room in which the occupants of the house can hide from kidnapers or terrorists — fireproof with ventilation, food and water storage, and cellular telephone.

Perkins recommends householders have two safes in the house. Threatened with torture, a householder could lead an intruder to one — always the one containing articles of lesser value.

Perkins is called upon to install secret handgun compartments in cars.

Some such vehicles have been stolen and stripped and the handguns never found!

I would not even ask Perkins how he accomplishes that!

For one bookie, Custom Security install two safes. During a raid months later, eight FBI agents conducted a day-long search of the premises and discovered neither of the safes.

One woman, complaining that her safe had jammed, asked if Perkins could open it "without looking inside."

He promised to try, but as the safe door opened, the collection of sex toys spilled out onto the floor.

Safekeeping sometimes tests Perkins' confidentiality.

One man specified that he wanted a safe installed while his wife was out of town; she was not to know about it.

Perkins installed it without ever revealing that the customer's wife had previously also had a safe of her own secretly installed while the customer himself was on a business trip.

Perkins has been serving the Memphis area and is expanding nationwide as fast as he can reproduce elsewhere his confidential strategy for securing ultimately disciplined installers.

Crime summit forgot the real VIPs

Thirty-one years after Martin Luther King Jr. electrified America with his "I Have a Dream" speech, black America has finally awakened from its Rip Van Winkle lethargy and crossed another historic Rubicon: the black-on-black crime summit meeting.

In a perverse way, you could hardly blame blacks for shunning the fight against crime. White America had mounted a campaign that ordained black crime as far more threatening to America's moral fabric than the combined rapacities of white-on-white Watergate, interfamily mafia wars and the nation's white-controlled drug culture. "Law and order" was the conservative code for the restoration of "separate but equal."

Nonetheless, time finally ran out for blacks. White racism may be a major cause of black pathologies, but it's not the sole contributor. By the end of 1993, blacks had produced 50 percent of the prison population, turned black ghettos into war zones, transformed public schools into no man's lands, made homicides the highest cause of death among black males aged 19 to 24, and built drugs into a major ghetto industry. The black community had given birth to a generation of young black males suffering from what Emile Durkheim described as suicide anomie, or normless suicide.

It took the charisma, moral outrage and chutzpah of one black man, self-styled "country preacher" Jesse Jackson, to pull off this historic black-on-black crime summit. Despite his credibility problems and Bill Clinton's disdain, Jackson still comes the closest to being America's pre-eminent black statesman without portfolio. Let us honor prophetic vision and be grateful for his stewardship of Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream.

But let us be honest and acknowledge shortcomings. As a moral summons to action, the Rainbow Coalition-convened summit was a splendid success. As an analysis of causes and a blueprint for action, it was a dismal disappointment.

The summit issued more hot air than a cross-country balloon race. It had more preening peacocks jockeying for TV cameras than summit of world leaders.

It was the consummate media event. And the press couldn't resist the mesmerizing blandishments of all those stars: Jesse Jackson, Bill Cosby, Rev. Al Sharpton, Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders and Attorney General Janet Reno together in the same room! A discussion of the libidinal prowess of tsetse flies would have brought out the media for this group.

But the real heroes of the crime conference went unheralded. Only a couple of reporters recognized their true significance. The Charlotte Observer's Lori Montgomery astutely began her story with a description of Tyrene Wilson sitting "stone-faced" through the recitation of black-on-black violence. She had already lost 30 friends and relatives to violence since she turned 15.

"Please excuse me if I get emotional," she said, tears streaming down her cheeks, "but I've heard all this before."

The summit's other hero was a straight-talking brother, Rahime Jenkins. "We can come together in rooms like this," cautioned the D.C. prison guard, "But none of you call no shots on the streets of this community."

Jenkins insisted he meant no disrespect to the distinguished gathering or its initiatives, but he reminded the participants that the people on the streets are the ones who set the agenda on crime.

And so do black police chiefs — such as Charleston, N.C., Chief Reuben Greenberg and Los Angeles Chief Willie Williams — narcotics officers, prison officials, influential prison inmates, corrections officers, criminal court judges, ex-convicts and parolees. And yet this group was woefully underrepresented at the summit. They were missing in action.

Collectively, these MIAs wield 20 times the power and influence on crime than all of the summit participants put together.

And until the black MIAs are fully incorporated into the war against black-on-black crime, it will continue to be "a massive exercise in futility."

Movie buff seeks to restore grandeur of the silver screen

By RICK SMITH
San Angelo Standard-Times

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Time, a leaking roof and sometimes misguided "improvements" by former tenants have dimmed — but not destroyed — the grandeur of the Texas Theater.

A young San Angelo movie buff hopes to restore the 65-year-old movie palace to its former glory — with a little help from his friends.

Alan Salyards, 29, is in the process of purchasing the Texas from Telecommunications Inc. As part of the deal, he also is buying the Rita Theater on South Chadbourne Street. He did not disclose the purchase price for the Rita and the 1,100-seat Texas.

Salyards, a 1982 graduate of San Angelo Central High School and a former manager of the Village Cinema theater, said he began working in local movie theaters when he was in high school. He managed a theater in Alamogordo, N.M., before joining the Air Force and, later, working for an aircraft company.

He said he started thinking about buying the Texas when he moved back to San Angelo two-and-a-half years ago.

"I like movies, especially the classics, and what better place to show them than in a theater like the Texas," Salyards said.

He said he plans to show classic films at the Texas and also produce live theater. He said he is organizing his own local professional theater troupe to perform at the theater.

Salyards said he "fell in love" with the Texas when he was involved in some renovation work at the theater in the early 1980s.

"I just loved the theater," he said. "I love palace theaters."

The theater's huge auditorium resembles the courtyard of a Spanish villa, with elaborate wall decorations and a magnificent arch over the stage.

A church that briefly occupied the theater in the 1980s painted over some of the decorations and covered others with acoustic tile. The church also added rows of bare, fluorescent lights along the walls.

Salyards said he plans to restore the auditorium as nearly as possible to its early grandeur.

"By the end of the year, this will look quite different than it does now. It will be quite ornate," Salyards said, leading a recent tour of the long-closed theater.

Salyards said he plans to use the help of friends and volunteers to restore the theater's faded glory.

Though he plans to operate the theater as a for-profit business, Salyards also plans to hold benefits and accept donations toward restoring the Texas.

"A lot of people are pitching in to help," Salyards said.

"My friends and their friends and other volunteers are going to be working on this."

Salyards said he never considered seeking non-profit status for the theater, which he hopes eventually will become the hub of a rural movie theater chain.

"I didn't want to go non-profit and have my hands tied," he said. "I want to be able to change things as I come up with new ideas."

Salyards said he hopes to have the title to the building within a few weeks and, after that, open the theater's doors within 60 days.

He is organizing a professional theater troupe made up of local writers, directors and performers and he hopes they will produce their first play in the Texas by April.

April. "If everything goes according to Salyards' schedule, the theater will begin showing classic and fine arts films a few weeks after the play opens."

Future live productions — including a planned summer musical — will rehearse in the Rita Theater, so as not to interfere with scheduled movies, and be performed in the Texas, he explained.

Salyards said he also hopes to rent the theater to local groups for various functions.

Because he will be restoring the theater on a limited budget, Salyards said he will take one step at a time.

"First, what we're going to concentrate on is cleaning the building and just getting the place up to code so we can get the doors open," he said.

Salyards said he is "excited" about the prospects for the theater.

"I wake up in the night with ideas about what to do and write them down," he said.

"I think San Angelo will support this theater. It holds a lot of great memories for a lot of people."

"Sure, there are other theaters in town, and you can rent classic movies on videotape."

"But where can you get atmosphere like this?"

"This is what a theater is supposed to be."

Study finds many drugs cost far more in U.S.

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug manufacturers charge 60 percent more for several dozen best-selling, brand-name drugs in the United States than for the same medicines in the United Kingdom, government auditors said today.

One contraceptive pill, Nordette, cost 17 times more at the wholesale level here than in Britain, said a report by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress. The tranquilizer Valium cost 10 times as much and the cardiac drug Inderal cost nearly nine times as much.

The report, requested by Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., provides ammunition for lawmakers who contend drug makers are ripping off the American public in the absence of government controls on prices and profits.

The British market is heavily regulated, with the government buying most drugs through the National Health Service.

"If we are serious about controlling health care costs, we must address the issue of prescription drug prices ...," Waxman said in a statement. "We must find a way to balance profits and price in a way that is fairer to the American consumer."

"These numbers translate into real costs to real people, particularly the elderly who purchase 34 percent of the drugs," said Waxman, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health and the environment.

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association challenged the GAO study, saying "it compares prices in the best health care system in the world with prices in one of the worst systems among major industrialized countries."

Robert F. Allnutt, the association's executive vice president, said the GAO also exaggerated the price differences by looking only at brand-name drugs and ignoring generics and U.S. rebates and discounts.

Robert M. Goldberg, a Brandeis University research fellow, said that in Britain and other European countries with price controls, "there's less innovation and less access to new and better drugs. That's the tradeoff for low prices."

An earlier GAO study found a similar disparity between prices for the same drugs in the United States and Canada. The drug industry argued then that Canadian firms conduct relatively little research.

But the GAO report said the private pharmaceutical industry in the United Kingdom remains "one of the world's leaders" in research and development, ranking third behind the United States and Japan in major drugs brought to market from 1970 to 1992.

The GAO, working from a list of the 200 drugs most frequently dispensed in the United States in 1991, compared the prices of 77 sold in the same form and dosage in the United Kingdom.

It checked the prices that manufacturers sold the drugs to retailers, not the prices consumers paid at pharmacies. The wholesale price is typically two-thirds of the retail price.

The 77 drugs "cost wholesalers 60 percent more in the United States than in the United Kingdom," the GAO said. Six out of seven drugs were priced higher in the United States; most were priced more than twice as high.

The differentials ranged from 62 percent lower for Zovirax capsules, an antiviral drug priced at 69 cents for a 200 mg capsule here and $1.81 in Britain, to 1,712 percent higher for the Nordette contraceptive tablet, which cost 84 cents apiece here and 5 cents in Britain.

A 5 mg Valium tablet that wholesaled for 45 cents in the United States cost 4 cents in the United Kingdom. Inderal, the heart medication, cost 37 cents for a 40 mg tablet here and 5 cents in the U.K., an 872 percent difference.

The price gap "tended to be dramatically smaller" for newer drugs — just 17 percent for those introduced since 1986. Pre-1980 drugs cost 120 percent more in the United States, the report said.

The GAO concluded that the price differences "are primarily due to the regulatory constraints that manufacturers face in pricing their drugs on the U.K. market and ... the lack of similar constraints in the United States."

Drugs account for only 7 percent of all U.S. health expenditures. But they are one of the biggest out-of-pocket medical expenses for many consumers, especially the elderly whose medicines can cost hundreds of dollars a month and are not covered by Medicare.

Leading indicators up 0.7 percent in December, government says

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge rose 0.7 percent in December, suggesting continued economic expansion later this year.

The Commerce Department said today its Index of Leading Economic Indicators now has risen for five straight months, including 0.5 percent advances in both October and November. The increase was in line with economists' expectations.

The cumulative increase for the five months was 2.5 percent, the largest such increase since a 6 percent rise over seven months in 1983.

Three straight moves by the index in a single direction are considered a good gauge of where the economy will be moving in the next six to nine months.

In another report today suggesting continued momentum for economic growth this year, the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Affairs said sales of new homes shot up 9.7 percent in 1993.

Sales totaled 669,000, highest since 676,000 in 1988. Sales in December jumped 11.4 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 862,000, highest since an 880,000 rate in March 1986.

After expanding at a torrid 5.9 percent annual rate in the final three months of 1993, many analysts had expected economic growth to slow because that rate of growth was not sustainable.

They now say growth will be further curbed in January by the effects of the severe winter weather and the California earthquake.

"But that shouldn't take away from the fact that the economy seems on much more solid footing now" than it was early in 1993, when growth came to a near standstill, said Laurence H. Meyer, head of a St. Louis economic forecasting service.

In fact, eight of the forward-looking indicators rose in December, two fell and one was unchanged.

Advancing, in order of their impact, from largest to smallest, were:

A rise in an index of consumer expectations; an increase in raw material prices, suggesting stronger demand; a decline in weekly initial claims for unemployment insurance; an increase in applications for building permits; an uptick in orders for consumer goods; slower business delivery times, a sign of increased orders; an increase in the inflation-adjusted backlog of orders at factories for durable goods, and rising stock prices.

Negative factors included: A decline in orders and contracts for new business equipment and plants, and a decrease in the money supply.

The average workweek was unchanged.

The various changes left the index at a seasonally adjusted 100.3, up 1.1 percent from a year ago and 1.4 percent from just three months ago.

The department reported last week that the 5.9 percent annual rate of increase in the fourth quarter pushed the economy ahead 2.9 percent for the year, the strongest performance in five years.

The fourth-quarter gain was even stronger than the 5.7 percent gain in the final months of 1992.

But after the show of strength at the end of 1992, the economy slowed to an 0.8 percent advance in the January-March period and just 1.9 percent in the next three months.

"We had a lot of momentum in the (this) quarter carried over from the fourth," Meyer said, predicting 3.5 percent growth from this January through March. For the year, he is forecasting an expansion of 3.1 percent.

Hair dye not linked with cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contrary to some earlier studies, hair dye causes almost no risk of lethal cancer, according to an American Cancer Society analysis of health data from more than a half-million women.

A study published today in the Journal of the National Institute of Cancer showed that only a small fraction of women studied appeared to have an increased risk of lethal cancer from hair dye and that even for these women the risk of developing two uncommon cancers is small.

"For more than 99 percent of women who use hair dye, we found no increased risk of fatal cancer, even with long-term use," said Dr. Michael J. Thun, an American Cancer Society physician in Atlanta and lead author of the study.

Thun said the conclusion is based on an analysis of data from 573,369 women enrolled in a cancer mortality study started in 1982 by the American Cancer Society.

In the study, women reported on their personal habits, such as diet and cosmetic use, before developing any illness. The type of illness and the number of women who develop it can then be compared statistically with lifestyle characteristics.

Thun said the analysis was undertaken after some earlier studies linked the hair coloring with lethal cancers.

"In the last 15 years, there have been a number of studies looking at occupational exposure to hair dyes," said Thun, but he said some of this research may have been flawed because researchers surveyed only women who already had developed a cancer illness.

The only link of hair dye to fatal cancer came in 0.6 percent of the women who used black hair dye for 20 years or more. These women, said Thun, had about a four times greater risk of developing non-Hodgkin's lymphoma or multiple myeloma than women who did not use the dye.

Though this may be statistically significant, said Thun, "it is based on very small numbers."

Both non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and multiple myeloma are uncommon diseases, he said. Women in general have only a 1.1 percent risk of dying of these disorders and the 20-year use of black hair dye increased that risk to 4.8 percent, he said. Other colors of dye did not show this relationship, he said.

Dr. Graham A. Colditz of Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School, said in a statement in the journal that Thun's study results "are a relief to the one-third of U.S. women who use these permanent hair dyes."

Good food, fortune combine to bring in New Year

By SHIRLEY CHENG
The Culinary Institute of America
For AP Special Features

This year, Feb. 10 marks Chinese lunar New Year, the most important festival of the year for the Chinese. Chinese lunar New Year is similar to Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays in the United States. Relatives and friends visit each other, no matter how far apart they live, in order to exchange New Year's wishes rather than gifts. However, the elder member of the family will always give each child "lucky money" in a little red bag for good health in the coming year.

Food is an integral part of the celebration, and a great deal of time and energy is spent preparing these festive meals. Breakfast is especially important because it is the first meal of the year. Dumplings are the most popular breakfast item. In northern China they are made of wheat flour dough and filled with meat, cabbage or chives. In southern China, rice dumplings with sweet filling are favored.

The New Year's Eve dinner is absolutely the most important of the whole year. Usually there are nine courses for this special meal, because the pronunciation of the Chinese character "nine" is the same as "long," which is a lucky word representing longevity and everlasting happiness.

The feast always includes flavors from the land, sea and air, including shark's fin, abalone, lobster, chicken, sweet rice cake and sea cucumber, a spineless marine creature considered a delicacy, relished for its gelatinous texture, and saved for special occasions.

Family and food are only part of the Chinese New Year tradition. There are 12 animals represented in the Chinese lunar year cycle. This is the year of the dog. If you are born in China in 1946, 1958, 1970, 1982 and 1994, then you are born under the dog year. According to Chinese fortune horoscope, dog people are loyal and honest. They can be depended on to keep secrets, but have sharp tongues, are emotionally cool, and do not mix well in social gatherings. They always seem to have money and make excellent leaders.

The following recipes are suitable for a New Year's celebration: sweet and sour fish, steamed dumplings, shrimp with tomato sauce and sweet rice pudding.

Good fortune, family and food all combine to make a happy Chinese New Year!

Sweet and Sour Fish

- 1 pound black sea bass filet
- 3 tablespoons dry sherry (reserve 2 tablespoons for sauce)
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 3/4 cup vegetable oil (reserve all but 2 tablespoons for deep-frying)
- 1 tablespoon chopped scallion
- 1 teaspoon minced ginger
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic

- 1 cup chicken stock
- 1/4 cup rice vinegar
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 10 tablespoons cornstarch (dilute 2 tablespoons in cold water)
- 1 teaspoon sesame oil
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1/4 cup carrot, cut into thin strips
- 1/4 cup daikon, cut into thin strips
- 1/2 cup cucumber, cut into thin strips

Score the fish diagonally with a sharp knife. Place 1 tablespoon of the sherry, the salt and pepper in a shallow dish, add the fish, turning to coat evenly, and marinate for 15 to 20 minutes.

To make the sauce, heat 2 tablespoons of the vegetable oil in a pan. Add the scallion, ginger and garlic; cook for 2 minutes. Add the chicken stock, vinegar, sugar and soy sauce. Bring the sauce to a boil and thicken with 2 tablespoons of the diluted cornstarch. Keep the sauce warm until needed, but do not allow it to boil again.

Heat the remaining vegetable oil in a deep skillet or wok over high heat (there should be enough to allow the fish to float easily in the hot oil). Add the sesame oil.

Coat the fish with the beaten egg and then dip it in the remaining 8 tablespoons of cornstarch to coat evenly. Slide the fish carefully into the hot oil and deep-fry until the fish is light brown.

Transfer the fish to a heated serving platter. Pour the sauce over the

- Sweet Rice Pudding
- 2 cups glutinous rice
  - 2 cups water (reserve 1 cup for the sauce)
  - 7 tablespoons sugar (reserve 3 tablespoons for the sauce)
  - 2 tablespoons vegetable shortening
  - 12 red dates, chopped
  - 1/4 cup lotus seeds, precooked
  - 1/4 cup chopped dried apricots
  - 2 tablespoons raisins
  - 1 cup red bean paste
  - 1 tablespoon cornstarch, diluted in cold water

Soak the rice in cool water to cover for 2 hours and then drain well. Transfer the rice to a basin or shallow bowl.

Steam the drained rice for 45 minutes, then remove it from the steamer. Mix in 1 cup of the water, 4 tablespoons of the sugar and the shortening; stir until well blended.

Lightly oil or grease a large bowl and arrange the dates, lotus seeds, apricots and raisins on the bottom of the bowl.

Spread half of the rice in a layer over the dried fruits, add the red bean paste, and top with the other half of the rice. Place the pudding in the steamer and steam for 40 minutes.

Remove the pudding and place it onto a serving plate. To make the sauce, bring the remaining 1 cup water and 3 tablespoons sugar to a boil and thicken with the diluted cornstarch. Pour the sauce over the rice and serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

- Shrimp with Tomato Sauce
- 1 pound fresh jumbo shrimp, peeled and deveined
  - 1 egg white, beaten
  - 7 teaspoons cornstarch (dilute 1 teaspoon cornstarch in cold water and reserve for the sauce)
  - 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
  - 3 tablespoons ketchup
  - 1 tablespoon oyster sauce
  - 1/4 cup dry sherry
  - 2 tablespoons chopped scallion
  - 1 tablespoon sugar
  - 1 tablespoon minced ginger
  - 1 tablespoon minced garlic
  - 1 tablespoon rice vinegar

Coat the shrimp with the egg white and then the cornstarch.

Heat the oil in a pan or wok over high heat. Add the shrimp and stir-fry until done, about 2 to 3 minutes.

Add the ketchup and oyster sauce. Cook for 30 seconds and then add remaining ingredients, including the reserved diluted cornstarch. Stir-fry for an additional 2 minutes.

Garnish with steamed broccoli florets and serve with plain rice. Makes 4 servings.

Shirley Cheng is a chef-instructor at the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y.

fish and garnish with carrot, daikon and cucumber. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

Steamed Dumplings

- 1 pound ground pork
- 1/2 pound Napa cabbage, chopped
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 cup chopped scallion
- 3 tablespoons soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons sherry

- 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger-root
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon sesame oil
- 1 teaspoon white pepper
- 1/2 pack of wonton wrappers

Combine all the ingredients except the wonton wrappers in a mixing bowl. Mix very well.

Place one piece of wrapper in your hand (the center should cover your palm), then put 1 tablespoon of the filling in the center of wrapper. Gently squeeze and twist the wrapper to form a "money bag" shape. Repeat until all of the filling has been used. Put the dumplings in a bamboo steamer and steam for 10 minutes. Serve the dumplings while they are very hot. Makes 4 servings.

It's simple, quick and French?

Chicken Provencale features baked boneless chicken breast halves and a fresh tomato sauce, served over fettuccine. The tomato sauce is flavored with sliced olives and garlic.

Better Homes and Gardens Magazine

The word provencale (proh-vahn-SAHL) describes foods prepared in the style of Provence — a region in southern France. These hearty, peasant-type dishes typically include tomatoes, olives and garlic as seasonings. Another hallmark: they are usually very simple to fix. Try the chicken dish below and you'll see what I mean.

Chicken Provencale

- 4 plum tomatoes, chopped
- 1/2 of a 6-ounce can pitted ripe olives, sliced
- 1 tablespoon olive oil or cooking oil
- 2 teaspoons dried basil, crushed
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 beaten egg white

- 1 teaspoon water
- 1/4 cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons snipped fresh parsley
- 1/4 teaspoon lemon-pepper seasoning

2 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves (8 ounces total)

- 2 teaspoons margarine or butter, melted
- 1 medium carrot
- 1 medium zucchini
- 3 ounces fettuccine
- 1 teaspoon margarine or butter
- Grated Parmesan cheese

For sauce, combine tomatoes, olives, oil, basil and garlic. Let stand at room temperature for 1 hour.

In a small mixing bowl combine egg white and water.

In a shallow bowl combine bread crumbs, parsley and lemon-pepper seasoning.

Dip chicken into the egg mixture, then roll in crumbs. Place chicken in a shallow baking pan. Drizzle with the 2 teaspoons melted margarine or butter. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 30 to 40 minutes or until no longer pink.

Meanwhile, in a skillet cook tomato mixture, covered, over medium heat for 7 minutes. Keep warm.

Using a vegetable peeler, cut carrot and zucchini lengthwise into long, thin slices. Cook fettuccine according to package directions, adding carrot and zucchini the last minute of cooking. Drain pasta and vegetables.

Toss with remaining margarine or butter.

To serve, divide fettuccine mixture between two dinner plates. Top each with a chicken breast half and tomato sauce. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Makes 2 main-dish servings.

Homemade bread, a real treat

By BARBARA ALBRIGHT
For AP Special Features

Even with the popularity of bread machines, there is nothing quite as satisfying as making bread from scratch. Kneading bread dough is the perfect therapy when you are "stressed out."

A bonus is that your home will smell great and you will end up with delicious, made-from-scratch loaves of bread.

When letting dough rise, I like to turn my electric oven on warm for one minute, just to take the chill out of the oven.

Then I place my bowl of dough, along with a bowl of hot tap water, in the oven to create a warm, draft-free environment.

For inspiration (and recipes), Beth Hensperger has an appealing and explicit book, "Baking Bread — Old and New Traditions" (Chronicle Books). The following are a few bread-baking basics from the book. You Need a Thermometer

Invest in a thermometer to measure the temperature of the liquid that is used to dissolve the yeast. As you become more experienced, you will be able to judge the temperature by feel. Where to Let Bread Rise —Turn the oven to 150 degrees F for 3 minutes. Turn off the heat and allow the dough to sit in the oven with the door ajar.

—Allow the dough to rise over a gas pilot on the stovetop, or inside the oven with the door ajar, or on top of the dryer while drying clothes.

—Place the bowl in or over a pan of warm water away from drafts.

—Take the dough for a nice ride around town in the back of a car. Dough loves the gentle motion and warmth. How Much Flour?

Use the recommended amount of flour to add as a guideline. For instance, on a humid day, you may need to add more flour. Add the flour one to two tablespoons at a time, until the dough is smooth and holds its shape. As you make more and more loaves of bread, you will soon get the feeling of when it is just right.

To determine if bread is baked, tip it out of the pan or lift it from the baking sheet and tap the bottom. If it sounds hollow, it's baked.

Other new bread-baking books on the market today include:

—"Bread Alone: Bold Fresh Loaves from Your Own Hands" by Daniel Leader and Judith Blahnik (William Morrow).

—"Brother Juniper's Bread Book: Slow Rise as Method and Metaphor" by Brother Peter Reinhart (Aris Books).

—"Great Whole Grain Breads" by Beatrice Ojakangas (A Fireside Cookbook Classic).

—"The Il Fornaio Baking Book" by Franco Galli (Chronicle Books).

Scripture scholars say titles important

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

Five Bible scholars were asked what they call the first 39 books of the Bible.

One said The First Testament, another the Hebrew Scriptures. A third called the collection the Hebrew Bible, and a rabbi referred to it as the Tanakh, an acronym for the Hebrew words Torah, Nebi'im and Kethubim.

Only one called the books by the name understood by most Americans: The Old Testament.

In retelling the story, Rabbi James Rudin recalled the intensity with which the scholars at a conference on seminary education in Dallas approached the issue of terminology. In an era of increased Jewish-Christian understanding, what's in a name is important when referring to Scripture considered holy by both faiths.

Although the word "old" in ancient times conveyed positive traits such as wisdom and experience, it has taken on more pejorative connotations in modern times, say leaders in interreligious dialogues. In a concept constantly reinforced in advertising, something that's old is to be discarded, to be replaced by the new.

Even some Christian Bible teachers in churches have long taken to referring to the two collections of holy writings as the first and second testaments for fear of losing their students' interest in the "Old Testament."

For those involved in Christian-Jewish relations, the distinctions are particularly important. Efforts are being made to allow each faith to hold on to its own teachings, including Christian beliefs that events in the Hebrew Scriptures foretell New Testament teachings, but to make them aware at the same time that Jewish people treat the Hebrew Scriptures as standing on their own.

A case study of particular interest is the new Roman Catholic catechism, a document that is sensitive to Jewish-Christian relations in some parts and lapses back into traditional language in others, according to two interfaith scholars.

In a discussion of the French version of the catechism — the English translation still has not been released — Sister Celia Deutsch, a professor of biblical studies at Barnard College in New York, and Rudin, interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee, said the new catechism in several ways advances Jewish-Christian relations, beginning with a strong stand repudiating the so-called "blood curse" interpretation of Matthew 27:25 that historically has been a source of anti-Semitic violence by those who would blame the Jewish people as a whole for the death of Jesus.

The compendium of Catholic teaching also points out that God's covenant with the Jewish people is irrevocable and the Jewish roots of Christianity. The catechism notes Jesus was born a Jew, and Mary is called a "daughter of Israel."

In discussing Passover, the catechism notes that Jewish and Christian people have their own religious understandings of the event.

By pointing out how the event is interpreted differently, "It doesn't destroy Passover to profess Easter," Rudin said.

But both interreligious leaders have concerns with other language in the catechism, beginning with the constant use of the term Old Testament. In one part, Rudin notes, the text says the "Old Testament's principal reason for being is a preparation for the arrival of Christ, the savior of the world."

In contrast to the approach to Passover, Rudin said, events such as The Flood and Noah's Ark in Genesis and the parting of the Red Sea and the manna from heaven in Exo-odus are interpreted in relation to Christian practices such as baptism and the Eucharist without balancing language explaining how Jewish people interpret the events.

Sister Deutsch also says the catechism doesn't talk about Judaism after Jesus.

"One is left with the impression Judaism quit with Jesus," she said.

Both Rudin and Deutsch say that Christian churches should not change their teaching that events in the shared Scriptures are related to Christian biblical teachings, but should note within catechism texts that their Jewish neighbors interpret the texts differently.

That way, an attitude of mutual respect would be fostered, the interfaith leaders said.

Otherwise, even though you say God's covenant with Israel is irrevocable, Deutsch said, "in point of fact this kind of thing is contradicting that. It doesn't really leave theological space for Judaism."

The program, by Mrs. Otto Mangold, will be "Coming to America in Colonial Days."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We are having a dispute with our neighbors. Since we can't seem to come to an agreement, we agreed to abide by your advice.

Our home has a swimming pool and a hot tub that are totally secluded. We can swim in the pool and relax in our hot tub in the nude without offending anyone. The problem is our neighbor's 9 year-old son, who occasionally climbs the fence to watch us.

Our neighbors feel that we should wear bathing suits because they can't watch their son 24 hours a day, and in their minds, what we do is immoral. Trust me, Abby, all we do is swim and/or sit around and talk — nothing sexual or kinky.

We are churchgoing Christians, but are not ashamed of our bodies. We are more comfortable in the nude; however, in this instance, I feel that our rights are being violated, and we should neither be forced to wear bathing suits nor made to feel guilty for what we do.

What do you think, Abby?
VICTIMS OF PEEKING
TOM,
VALENCIA, CALIF.

DEAR VICTIMS: You have a right to swim and use your hot tub in the nude on your property without being spied upon. Your neighbor's son has no business watching you. His parents are responsible for seeing to it that their son does not climb the fence and violate your privacy. Tell the boy — and his parents — you will not tolerate anyone violating your privacy.

DEAR ABBY: I found all those letters from people who had problems with their names very amusing. I think I qualify for that list. My name is Austin Six, and I have had letters addressed to "Austin Sex," "Austin Sicks," "Austin Sticks" and other varieties.

My wife and I often dine out with three other couples, and can you imagine what happens when I make reservations for a party of eight at 7 o'clock in the name of Six?

I once telephoned a man on a business matter. He was not in, so I left my name for him to return my call.

After three days, I had not heard from him so I called again, and he told me that he had been trying to reach me. He said he had been told to call operator Six in Austin, Texas.

It goes on and on, but I think I'll keep the name since I am now 76 years old and have learned to grin and bear it.

AUSTIN SIX IN IRVING,
TEXAS

DEAR AUSTIN: Cheer up, it would have been more confusing had your first name been Irving and you lived in Austin, Texas — then you'd have been Irving Six in Austin, Texas. This way, you are Austin Six in Irving, Texas ... aw, to heck with it!

Indian paintings delight

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition of Indian paintings spanning five centuries conjures up a flood of warm color and a variety of scenes: nobles at court, elephants in battle, lovely women in poetic gardens.

"The Greatest Delight: Painting of India from the Williams College Museum of Art" is a selection of about 70 works from the collection of the Williamstown, Mass., college. It's on view at the midtown Equitable Gallery through April 2, and will be shown at the college museum Sept. 3-Nov. 27.

Works exhibited trace parts of the history of painting in India: the earliest works are 15th-century illustrated manuscripts in watercolors touched with gold.

While most women may be interested in shopping for jewelry or new clothes, Susan Crane deals in everything from fire engines to computers

'Shop 'til you drop' takes on new meaning for Pampa woman

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

To those shop-o-holics out there, Susan Crane's job might seem heavenly in nature.

In the nine years she has been employed as the city's purchasing agent, she has literally helped spend millions of dollars buying equipment ranging from typewriters to computers to fire engines.

While it's true she didn't authorize and write a check for every purchase, she is the person responsible for writing specification, receiving bids and making proposals to the city commission, the group which ultimately make the decision.

"I believe that I'm here to streamline the purchases that are made for the city," she said. "I'm here to obtain the best service for the prices available with the money that is allowed."

One of the more demanding aspects of Crane's job is keeping up with the many local, state and federal regulation that apply to what she does.

Through organizations like the National Purchasing Institute and the Texas Purchasing Management Association, two organizations of which she is a member, Crane keeps one step ahead of regulations.

"You really have to be very, very careful," she said. "Sometimes you have to abide by state, local and federal laws when purchasing for a municipality and so you have to really remain on top of the statutes that come out."

Some of the benefits associated with being the purchasing agent for the city is that you learn about so much about how the city works, Crane said.

"I do enjoy working for the city. I've learned a great deal of information about purchasing and products from working for the city," she said.

As for the people she works for, Crane gives them credit for making her job easier.

"We have such a good staff now that they are so easy to deal with that they make my job easier," she said.

Crane's job seems to require not only general knowledge but also the ability to work closely with others, specifically the heads of the city's departments. Because the city often purchases equipment on a schedule, Crane's days are often spent talking to the fire chief or the director of the library or with the supervisor of animal control.

She speaks with them, getting specific details as to what is needed and then draws up the specification after talking to vendors. When the specification are drawn up, they are mail and bids are returned, she said.

The bids are opened as prescribed by law and reviewed by Crane and someone from the department wanting to make the purchase. If everything checks out, a bid proposal is then submitted to the city commission.

Municipal work seems to run through Crane's veins. Prior to working for the City of Pampa, she worked in the city utility department in Canadian.

A native of the Gulf Coast region of Texas, Crane said she first came to the Texas Panhandle 13 years ago. As for outside the office, Crane stays busy raising a 12-year-old daughter.

Although she admits missing the coast and all it had to offer, Crane said she has come to appreciate the panhandle for its people.

"The people are nice up here," she said. "I was raised on the coast and when I first moved to this area and I passed someone in the street, they would wave at me and I would think, 'Do I know them?'. It finally dawned on me that these people up here are just very friendly and I think it's one reason I like it so much."

Anger can be constructive and creative

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine
For AP Special Features

When it comes to anger it's not what you feel — it's what you do about it.

There are four basic ways to react to anger, W.W. Meade wrote in an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan. You can acknowledge your emotions and deal with them. Or you can repress your feelings, refusing to admit being angry — which may eventually lead to ulcers, heart disease, and even cancer.

You can use anger to mobilize your energy to react in creative and constructive ways, or act out anger without concern for consequences.

"Rage rises in our brains in response to an event," said clinical research psychologist Steven L. Fahrion, director of the Center for Applied Psychophysiology at the Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kan. "It elevates our blood pressure and heart rate, drains blood from our limbs and puts our bodies in a state of readiness for fear or flight."

Resentment is an integral part of anger.

"Anger does develop in a predictable way," said Matthew McKay, co-director of Haight-Ashbury Psychological Services in San Francisco. "You have to believe that someone is out to harm you deliberately. Let's say you're waiting in a line of cars at a tollbooth. Your expectation is that another driver won't cut in ahead of you.

"If someone does, you become offended at his lack of consideration for you. The feeling that you don't count causes you pain. This, plus the trigger thought that he is doing this deliberately, leads to indignation and resentment."

If you thought the driver was rushing his sick child to the hospital, you wouldn't be angry.

McKay said anger was sometimes necessary. If you feel threatened by someone invading your personal space, anger helps you keep that person at an appropriate distance.

"Rage is also a useful response in recovery from abuse, whether sexual, physical or emotional," McKay said. "After a woman who's been hurt realizes that she is not the worthless person she imagined herself to be, anger helps her turn that blame around and place it upon the person who hurt her. That is the first step in recovery."

Fahrion said you can avoid getting angry in the first place — but only if you act fast.

"You have up to three seconds between the time an episode occurs and your body begins to rev up, to exert control," he said. "We can demonstrate that experimentally. If you stay detached and don't let the event engage your sense of personal worth — that means you must keep your ego out of it — you can walk right by the door that leads to anger."

Another alternative is to manage anger.

"Some people use an internal monologue to rev up their feelings of anger until they feel forced to act it out, but an external monologue would be much more helpful," Fahrion said. "Get into the shower, talk out loud to yourself about the situation and your reactions. If you keep your feelings inside, you begin a kind of vicious circle that will amplify your anger rather than discharge it."

If you harbor resentment like a constantly rumbling volcano, psychologist McKay advised watching for the symptoms and committing yourself to stopping it.

Class 3A powerhouse moving on up

Southlake Carroll becomes part of restructured 4A

By JAIME ARON
 Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Ledbetter, who built Southlake Carroll into a Class 3A powerhouse immediately after moving up from 2A, is getting the chance to do it again.

Carroll's swelling attendance boosted the two-time defending 3A football champion into Class 4A in the biennial realignment released Tuesday by the University Interscholastic League.

"You always like another challenge," Ledbetter said. "I think it'll do our school good."

It'll also help level the playing field in Class 3A, where Carroll won 71 straight regular-season games and the last two state titles in football.

The Dragons' success began almost immediately after they moved from 2A to 3A in 1986.

They went 9-1 in their first season en route to a 113-5-1 record and three titles in their 3A tenure.

"It was kind of unbelievable what we accomplished over the last eight years," Ledbetter said.

Now there's the challenge of stepping up to 4A, where they'll be in District 9 with Azle, Coppell, Fort Worth Brewer, Boswell and Justin Northwest.

Carroll played most of those schools the last few years in non-district games.

Getting Carroll was only part of the restructuring of Class 4A, which grew by 15 schools to 188. Two districts were added, leaving 4A only two short of the UIL's goal of 32 districts.

A big reason for the 4A growth came by raising the class' maximum attendance figure by 90 to 1,599 students. That helped the class add 15 schools from 5A and 11 from 3A.

Lost from 4A in the shuffle were the programs that arguably represented the class' best and worst — perennial power A&M Consolidated and Houston Davis, which snapped a national-record 80-game losing streak in its season finale. They're among 11 4A schools moving up to 5A.

Like Carroll, Consolidated's new district foes will be many teams they've played the last few years as non-district opponents.

"It couldn't have worked out better for us," said coach Ross Rogers, whose District 15-5A foes include Bryan, Huntsville and Tomball.

Rogers said the best part of the move into 5A is that the top three finishers in district play go to the playoffs instead of the top two in 4A. Plus, he's moved into a six-team district where half the teams will be in the postseason.

Consolidated went 3-17 as a 5A team in 1986-87, then it moved back to 4A and Rogers was hired. He's taken them to at least the quarterfinals each of the last four seasons, including winning the state title in 1991.

"We'd like to still think we have the capabilities of winning the district championship, but it's going to be difficult," Rogers said.

Difficult doesn't even begin to describe the challenge facing the Davis Panthers.

After winning their season finale for their first victory since October 1985, coach Chuck Arnold was hoping things were looking up. He had no idea that meant going to 5A after only two seasons in 4A.

"The numbers game is going to get us," said Arnold, whose school has enough attendance to be classified 5A but has few students coming out for football.

Also ready for the change they're faced with, but not happy about it, are the six-man teams being forced to begin playing Class A 11-man football.

Fearing that some schools were too big at 90-plus students, the six-man attendance cutoff was whacked to 79. Among the schools forced into Class A 11-man football is Fort Hancock, winner of five of the last eight six-man titles, and Christoval, which sent Jack Pardee to the NFL.

One of the most interesting moves was made by Zapata, a 3A South Texas school big enough to be 4A but asked to be made a 5A school because of travel restraints.

Rather than taking long bus rides to play 4A foes, Zapata is in District 29-5A with neighbors in Laredo and Eagle Pass.

All changes are tentative because schools have until Feb. 14 to submit a written appeal that the State Conference and District Assignment Review Board will hear Feb. 18. Successful appeals also can be challenged by other schools.

Realignment, and the subsequent reshuffling of districts, is an adjustment of the classes based on a range of Average Daily Membership, a number derived by a formula that basically means a school's total attendance.

Harvesters subdue Dumas for District 1-4A win number six

The Pampa Harvesters are making rapid progress toward a sixth straight District 1-4A championship.

Starting the second round of district play, the Harvesters chalked up another win in a big way Tuesday night, rolling past Dumas, 90-49, in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa improved to 6-0 in the district race and 19-8 for the season. Dumas drops to 0-6 in district and 3-21 for the season.

"Dumas had a chance to stay with us at the first, but our press was working good and we pulled away from them. We had another opportunity to get all of our players into the game," said PHS coach Robert Hale.

Both teams started slow, but with the score tied at 6-all, Seivern Wallace's dunk off a Dumas turnover with

1:23 left in the first quarter seemed to ignite the Harvesters. The rout was on as Pampa ran off 16 unanswered points. The Harvesters built a 21-point bulge at halftime.

Wallace led all scorers with 24 points while pulling down 8 rebounds. Rayford Young followed with 22.

Dumas could not find a way to solve Pampa's relentless press. The Harvesters forced Dumas into 15 first-half turnovers, including 9 in the first half. Dumas finished with 29 turnovers while Pampa had just a dozen. Pampa had a 29-20 rebounding edge for the game.

Phillip Reed and Chris Edwards led Dumas with 13 points each.

In other district games last night, Randall defeated Caprock, 65-51, and Borger won over Hereford, 89-82. Borger remains in second place behind the Harvesters with a 5-1 mark.

Pampa visits Caprock for another district clash, starting at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — A pair of players from three different teams — including Patrick Ewing and John Starks of the New York Knicks — were among 14 reserves selected for the NBA All-Star game.

Also selected by coaches in each conference were teammates Karl Malone and John Stockton of the Utah Jazz, and Dominique Wilkins and Mookie Blaylock of the Atlanta Hawks.

Horace Grant of the Chicago Bulls, Alonzo Mourning of the Charlotte Hornets and Mark Price of the Cleveland Cavaliers will join the Eastern Conference team.

Keyin Johnson of the Phoenix Suns, Danny Manning of the Los Angeles Clippers, Clifford Robinson of the Portland Trail Blazers, David Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs and Latrell Sprewell of the Golden State Warriors will join the Western Conference.

NEW YORK (AP) — Clyde Drexler of the Portland Trail Blazers was suspended without pay for Tuesday's game at Sacramento and fined $2,500 by the NBA for bumping an official.

Drexler, who will start for the Western Conference in the All-Star game, was punished for bumping Dan Crawford during Sunday's game against the Knicks in Portland. He was ejected with 3.1 seconds remaining in the third quarter. The ejection carried an automatic $250 fine.

NEW YORK (AP) — Center Patrick Ewing of the New York Knicks, who averaged 29.4 points and 12.6 rebounds, was chosen NBA player of the month.

The Knicks went 12-4 in January, as Ewing had double figures in points and rebounds in 11 games. He scored 30 or more points nine times, including 42 against Detroit Jan. 13, and grabbed 15 or more rebounds six times.

HOCKEY

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After years of false starts, owners of the city's hockey and basketball teams reached agreement on a new arena with luxury boxes in South Philadelphia.

Flyers owner Ed Snider will build Spectrum 2 with help from outside financing, and 76ers owner Harold Katz signed a 29-year lease.

The arena will be adjacent to the city-owned Spectrum, which does not have luxury seating the teams consider essential to remain competitive financially in the NHL and NBA. The project is expected to cost more than $100 million.

It will seat 19,500 for hockey games and 21,000 for 76ers games and concerts. Construction will begin in the spring.

NEW YORK (AP) — Right wing Cam Neely of the Boston Bruins was selected NHL player of the month. The 29-year-old Neely scored 13 goals including three game-winners, and added four assists in 10 games. The Bruins were 6-2-2 in his appearances.

With 36 goals in 31 games, Neely was five behind league-leader Dave Andreychuk of Toronto. Neely leads the NHL in game-winning goals with 10 and shooting percentage at 27.7.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jeff Seymour, a walk-on at Tennessee, died at a Knoxville hospital of what the school said was apparently a ruptured cerebral aneurysm.

The university said an autopsy was being conducted on the 20-year-old junior defensive back from Cockeysville, Md. Seymour entered the university in 1991 and joined the football team as a non-scholarship player in the spring of 1992. He never played a game.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, who already signed free-agent catcher Dave Valle, signed Damon Berryhill to a minor-league contract. Berryhill, who became a free agent when Atlanta failed to offer a contract, would get $700,000 if he makes the team, and Boston has a $1.1 million option for 1995. He made $1 million last year, hitting .245 with eight homers and 43 RBIs.

Outfielder Dwight Smith agreed to a one-year contract with the California Angels. Smith hit .300 last season for the Cubs with 11 homers and 35 RBIs.

Outfielder Eric Anthony and Seattle agreed at $1.1 million, more than triple the $350,000 he made in 1993. Infielder Mike Bordick and Oakland agreed at $1.05 million, more than twice his $400,000 salary, and catcher Brent Mayne and Kansas City settled at $500,000, more than double last season's $225,000.

Kenny Rogers and Texas settled just prior to appearing before an arbitrator. Rogers made $1 million last year, going 16-10 with a 4.10 ERA.

TENNIS

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — Boris Becker returned to the circuit after a two-month layoff and showed no rustiness, beating Britain's Jeremy Bates 6-2, 6-4 in the first round of the $538,000 Marseille Open.

Becker is now working with Nick Bollettieri, former coach of Monica Seles and Andre Agassi. In their first-round matches, Joern Renzenbrink of Germany defeated eighth-seeded Alberto Berasategui of Spain 6-1, 6-4; Carl Uwe Steeb advanced when sixth-seeded Carlos Costa of Spain retired in the second set with an injury; Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden ousted Czech Daniel Vacek 6-4, 6-3, and Spain's Tomas Carbonell beat Omar Camporese of Italy 6-4, 6-3.

Class 3A powerhouse moving on up

Southlake Carroll becomes part of restructured 4A

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Ledbetter, who built Southlake Carroll into a Class 3A powerhouse immediately after moving up from 2A, is getting the chance to do it again.

Carroll's swelling attendance boosted the two-time defending 3A football champion into Class 4A in the biennial realignment released Tuesday by the University Interscholastic League.

"You always like another challenge," Ledbetter said. "I think it'll do our school good."

It'll also help level the playing field in Class 3A, where Carroll won 71 straight regular-season games and the last two state titles in football.

The Dragons' success began almost immediately after they moved from 2A to 3A in 1986.

They went 9-1 in their first season en route to a 113-5-1 record and three titles in their 3A tenure. "It was kind of unbelievable what we accomplished over the last eight years," Ledbetter said.

Now there's the challenge of stepping up to 4A, where they'll be in District 9 with Azle, Coppell, Fort Worth Brewer, Boswell and Justin Northwest. Carroll played most of those schools the last few years in non-district games.

Getting Carroll was only part of the restructuring of Class 4A, which grew by 15 schools to 188. Two districts were added, leaving 4A only two short of the UIL's goal of 32 districts.

A big reason for the 4A growth came by raising the class' maximum attendance figure by 90 to 1,599 students. That helped the class add 15 schools from 5A and 11 from 3A.

Lost from 4A in the shuffle were the programs that arguably represented the class' best and worst — perennial power A&M Consolidated and Houston Davis, which snapped a national-record 80-game losing streak in its season finale. They're among 11 4A schools moving up to 5A.

Like Carroll, Consolidated's new district foes will be many teams they've played the last few years as non-district opponents.

"It couldn't have worked out better for us," said coach Ross Rogers, whose District 15-5A foes include Bryan, Huntsville and Tomball.

Rogers said the best part of the move into 5A is that the top three finishers in district play go to the playoffs instead of the top two in 4A. Plus, he's moved into a six-team district where half the teams will be in the postseason.

Consolidated went 3-17 as a 5A team in 1986-87, then it moved back to 4A and Rogers was hired. He's taken them to at least the quarterfinals each of the last four seasons, including winning the state title in 1991.

"We'd like to still think we have the capabilities of winning the district championship, but it's going to be difficult," Rogers said.

Difficult doesn't even begin to describe the challenge facing the Davis Panthers.

After winning their season finale for their first victory since October 1985, coach Chuck Arnold was hoping things were looking up. He had no idea that meant going to 5A after only two seasons in 4A.

"The numbers game is going to get us," said Arnold, whose school has enough attendance to be classified 5A but has few students coming out for football.

Also ready for the change they're faced with, but not happy about it, are the six-man teams being forced to begin playing Class A 11-man football.

Fearing that some schools were too big at 90-plus students, the six-man attendance cutoff was whacked to 79. Among the schools forced into Class A 11-man football is Fort Hancock, winner of five of the last eight six-man titles, and Christoval, which sent Jack Pardee to the NFL.

One of the most interesting moves was made by Zapata, a 3A South Texas school big enough to be 4A but asked to be made a 5A school because of travel restraints.

Rather than taking long bus rides to play 4A foes, Zapata is in District 29-5A with neighbors in Laredo and Eagle Pass.

All changes are tentative because schools have until Feb. 14 to submit a written appeal that the State Conference and District Assignment Review Board will hear Feb. 18. Successful appeals also can be challenged by other schools.

Realignment, and the subsequent reshuffling of districts, is an adjustment of the classes based on a range of Average Daily Membership, a number derived by a formula that basically means a school's total attendance.

Harvesters subdue Dumas for District 1-4A win number six

The Pampa Harvesters are making rapid progress toward a sixth straight District 1-4A championship.

Starting the second round of district play, the Harvesters chalked up another win in a big way Tuesday night, rolling past Dumas, 90-49, in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa improved to 6-0 in the district race and 19-8 for the season. Dumas drops to 0-6 in district and 3-21 for the season.

"Dumas had a chance to stay with us at the first, but our press was working good and we pulled away from them. We had another opportunity to get all of our players into the game," said PHS coach Robert Hale.

Both teams started slow, but with the score tied at 6-all, Seivern Wallace's dunk off a Dumas turnover with

1:23 left in the first quarter seemed to ignite the Harvesters. The rout was on as Pampa ran off 16 unanswered points. The Harvesters built a 21-point bulge at halftime.

Wallace led all scorers with 24 points while pulling down 8 rebounds. Rayford Young followed with 22.

Dumas could not find a way to solve Pampa's relentless press. The Harvesters forced Dumas into 15 first-half turnovers, including 9 in the first half. Dumas finished with 29 turnovers while Pampa had just a dozen. Pampa had a 29-20 rebounding edge for the game.

Phillip Reed and Chris Edwards led Dumas with 13 points each.

In other district games last night, Randall defeated Caprock, 65-51, and Borger won over Hereford, 89-82. Borger remains in second place behind the Harvesters with a 5-1 mark.

Pampa visits Caprock for another district clash, starting at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Syracuse turns back Huskies in Big East shootout

By The Associated Press

Fifth-ranked Connecticut had no defense for what happened against Lawrence Moten and No. 15 Syracuse.

Moten scored 31 points and Syracuse turned Tuesday night's game at the Carrier Dome into a shootout, winning 108-95. It was the Huskies' first loss of the season in the Big East and stopped their 10-game winning streak.

"As a team, we played a perfect game tonight," Moten said. "We couldn't have played any better. I would never have believed we could score 108 points on Connecticut."

Syracuse (14-3, 7-3) matched its highest point total in a conference game, set in 1983 against Boston College.

College basketball roundup

"The most difficult thing about the game is giving up 108 points. We prided ourselves on being a good defensive team," Connecticut's Donyell Marshall said.

In other games, No. 6 Arkansas beat Vanderbilt 89-76, No. 13 Michigan defeated No. 8 Purdue 63-62 and No. 10 Temple routed Rutgers 84-45.

Connecticut (18-2, 8-1) played its second game without coach Jim Calhoun, who has been hospitalized with walking pneumonia. The Huskies, who beat Syracuse 75-67 at Hartford on Jan. 10, led 51-48 at halftime but could not hold on.

John Wallace had 25 points for the Orangemen. He and Moten each had 10 rebounds.

"They are not any less of a team because of the way they played tonight. They may be even better because we played as well as we can play. If we hadn't beaten them tonight, I don't know if anybody would. At least now there might be a chance," Syracuse coach Jim Boheim said.

Marshall scored 30 points and Brian Fair had 25 for Connecticut. The Huskies gave up 100 points for the first time this season.

No. 6 Arkansas 89, Vanderbilt 76
Roger Crawford and Scotty Thurman each had three baskets during a 19-0 run early in the second half that sent Arkansas past visiting Vanderbilt.

The Razorbacks (15-2, 6-2 Southeastern Conference) led just 46-43 before breaking loose for five minutes. Crawford finished with 16 points and Thurman had 10.

Ronnie McMahon hit six 3-pointers and scored 26 points and Billy McCaffrey had 17 for Vanderbilt (10-7, 3-5). Frank Seckar made five 3-pointers for the Commodores and finished with 16.

No. 13 Michigan 63, No. 8 Purdue 62
Juwon Howard scored after an offensive rebound with 21 seconds left and Michigan won at Purdue in a battle for first place in the Big Ten.

Glenn Robinson scored 36 points for Purdue (17-3, 5-3). His basket with 8:31 left gave the Boilermakers a 53-42 lead.

Robinson and two teammates each missed short shots in the final seconds. Purdue also hurt itself by making just 8-of-20 free throws in the game.

Howard had 17 points and 17 rebounds. Dugan Fife scored eight of his 12 points in the stretch for Michigan (14-4, 6-2).

No. 10 Temple 84, Rutgers 45
Senior Eddie Jones equaled a career-high with 30 points and host Temple ran away from Rutgers.

Rutgers scored the first five points of the game, but the Owls responded with an 18-0 burst; Temple led 46-13 late in the first half.

Jones outscored Rutgers 18-3 by himself at one stretch. Aaron McKie, who had 22 points, scored 11 during Temple's early spree.

Temple (14-2, 7-1 Atlantic 10) made 22-of-23 foul shots. Charles Jones scored 16 points for Rutgers (6-11, 2-6).

Bulls, Knicks are pro basketball's hottest teams

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer

Who's the best team in the NBA? After Tuesday night, it's almost too close to call.

The Seattle SuperSonics and Houston Rockets continued their downward cycles with losses, while the New York Knicks and Chicago Bulls kept playing perfectly.

The result today is five teams with nearly identical records. The Sonics, 31-10, still own the best record in the NBA — a bragging right they've held since late December. But just a half-game behind them are the Knicks and Rockets, both 31-11. The Atlanta Hawks are 30-11 and the Bulls are 31-12.

If the question changes to who's the hottest team in the NBA, it's a toss-up between New York and Chicago. The Knicks won their fourth straight and 13th of 16 Tuesday, beating Boston 114-79.

"We hadn't gotten back into the rhythm we had at the end of last season, and people were saying we were old," the Knicks' Charles

Oakley said. "We'll see them all at the end of the season."

Chicago beat Denver 118-98 for its ninth victory in 10 games.

"It's one of the best road games we've played all year," coach Phil Jackson said.

Seattle, meanwhile, lost to New Jersey 104-103 for its fifth defeat in six games, and Houston lost to Utah 104-88 for its fourth straight defeat on the road.

"We're not playing with an attitude, we're just playing," Seattle coach George Karl said. "We're just not focused. We lack the enthusiasm and aggressiveness that got us off to such a great start. It's not going to get any easier if we play like we did tonight."

In other games, it was Indiana 116, Washington 96; Miami 88, Milwaukee 82; San Antonio 112, the Los Angeles Lakers 97; Phoenix 108, the Los Angeles Clippers 106; and Sacramento 102, Portland 97.

Knicks 114, Celtics 79
At New York, the Knicks held an opponent to less than 80 points for the fourth time this season, out-bounded the Celtics 56-35 and held them to 33 percent shooting from the field.

Seven New York players had at least 10 points, led by Patrick Ewing with 23 and Charles Smith with 14. Dino Radja had 14 points for Boston.

"That was as much energy and enthusiasm and efficiency as we've had in a long time," Knicks coach Pat Riley said.

Bulls 118, Nuggets 98
At Denver, Scottie Pippen scored 28 points, Horace Grant and B.J. Armstrong had 19 apiece and the Bulls shot 59 percent from the field.

Denver coach Dan Issel was impressed.

"They (Bulls) played hard, they played together as a team and they passed the ball well, and that's why they're three-time world champions. You don't win three straight championships because of one player; you win it because of great efforts like they gave tonight."

Nets 104, SuperSonics 103
At East Rutherford, N.J., the Sonics were playing for the last shot when Ricky Pierce dribbled the ball off his foot. He retrieved it at half-court and missed a wild hook shot as time expired.

"We played great defense the last 10 seconds," Nets coach Chuck Daly said. "This was a game we would have lost at the beginning of the year."

Kenny Anderson led New Jersey with 26 points. Shawn Kemp had 26 for Seattle.

Jazz 104, Rockets 88
At Salt Lake City, Karl Malone scored 29 points — 15 in the fourth quarter — and Utah held Houston scoreless for the final 4:56. John Stockton added 26 points and 13 assists and Jeff Malone chipped in 13 points.

"We played well as a group and I think I did a good job on Hakeem," said center Felton Spencer, who finished with 12 rebounds and held Olajuwon to just seven, two on the offensive end.

Suns 108, Clippers 106
At Phoenix, the Suns didn't let Danny Manning take the final shot. Los Angeles inbounded to Manning with 3.5 seconds left, but he had to pass it out to Gary Grant because of defensive pressure. Grant missed a 25-footer as time expired.

Cedric Ceballos scored 37 points and Dan Majerle had 21. Ron Harper had 28 points for the Clippers and Manning had 26 points and 18 rebounds.

Spurs 112, Lakers 97
At San Antonio, Dale Ellis scored a season-high 32 points and David Robinson had 30 for San Antonio, which has won four in a row and 15 of its last 18.

"Right now we've got seven guys who are playing very well. Now all we need to do is find an eighth who can play at this level," Spurs coach John Lucas said.

Pacers 116, Bullets 96
At Indianapolis, Reggie Miller reacted to his All-Star snub by getting nine assists and five steals to go along with his 25 points.

"Everyone just knows me for my scoring. There are other things I can do out there on the floor," he said. "I looked to try to pass first, try to get everyone in it, and at the same time try to get the looks here or there."

Troubled Thomas hopes Bills hold together Longhorns hold off Rice, 85-70

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — The day after the worst day of his life wasn't so great, either.

There was the long flight from the mainland with his two sick, but still active, aisle-running young daughters. Then there was the bump in the night.

"The past two days have been something else," Buffalo Bills running back Thurman Thomas said Tuesday before practicing with the AFC Pro Bowl squad.

On Sunday, he lost two fumbles and blamed himself for the Bills' 30-13 Super Bowl defeat by the Dallas Cowboys. He spent most of Monday on the flight with his family, then late that night he was jolted awake by an earthquake.

"I'm tired, not from the Super Bowl, but from my kids," Thomas said. "They're 4 and 2 and they were running around on that plane and driving me crazy. They had colds and that made it even worse."

After Thomas and his family settled into their hotel, a quake on the neighboring island of Hawaii was strong enough to shake them from their sleep.

"At first I thought my kids were shaking the bed," he said.

"Then I realized what it was and I was scared. I've never felt anything like that before. I started trying to think how many floors of the hotel were above me and wondering whether they were going to come down."

Thomas shook his head, laughed and said, "The day I had was almost as bad as losing four Super Bowls."

Although he shouldered the blame for the Super Bowl loss, saying his second fumble turned the game in the Cowboys' favor, Thomas wasn't moping as he reported for the NFL's all-star game.

"I figure that over my career

I've won a lot more games than I've lost for the Bills, but it just happened to be the most important one that I lost," he said.

"We've won so many games over the last four years, but it all comes down to one game, the Super Bowl."

"I do feel good about us getting there. I think a lot of teams would trade places with us. Sure, we've lost four straight, but like my mother says, there isn't anything wrong with being second best; so long as you're not last you should feel good about yourself and what you've accomplished."

Thomas said he hopes the Bills can make it back to the Super Bowl again and laughed about the sign some Bills fans held up when Buffalo beat Kansas City to earn the Super Bowl berth.

"Maybe next year it can say, 'The Bills are Back. Deal with It America V,'" he said. "I know we're probably going to have some changes, lose some players (to free agency), but we will just have to hold together like we did this year. Nobody thought we would be in the Super Bowl this year."

"I know (teammate) Cornelius Bennett said after the game Sunday something like, 'Go for five in '95.' I say no, go for one — one Super Bowl win."

decided a 17-point Texas lead to 61-58 with 6:57 to play.

But the Longhorns opened a 17-3 run, featuring crowd-raising monster dunks by Burditt and Tremaine Wingfield, giving Texas a 78-61 lead with 2:01 left.

"I am certainly proud of our guys' effort in the second half," Wilson said. "We just need to play that way for 40 minutes. You have to give Texas credit for their aggressive style of play. We are going to have to get used to it. We are going to have to make adjustments."

The Owls, who were led by Torrey Andrews with 23 points and Adam Peakes with 22, never got closer than 15 points down the stretch.

Burditt said the Longhorns planned to go inside and get Andrews in foul trouble. Andrews picked up his third and fourth fouls early in the second half before fouling out late in the game.

"It was the plan to pound into the paint," Burditt said. "We felt if we got Torrey Andrews in foul trouble, we felt Rice was less of a threat for us."

"Burditt is as good as any big man in the league in terms of finishing off shots and playing defense," said Rice coach Willis Wilson.

The Longhorns improved to 13-6 overall and 5-1 in the SWC.

Redskins expected to hire Turner as new head coach today

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — The Washington Redskins are looking for Dallas offensive coordinator Norv Turner to be another Joe Gibbs and turn their fortunes around.

Two years after winning the Super Bowl, Washington plummeted to a 4-12 record this past season.

The Redskins scheduled a news conference today to formally announce a successor to fired coach Richie Petitbon after Turner met for more than five hours Tuesday with team owner Jack Kent Cooke and general manager Charley Casserly.

"We'll see you all tomorrow," Turner said cheerfully, departing in a car with Casserly Tuesday night from the Redskins' headquarters here, 35 miles west of the nation's capital.

Turner and Cooke shook hands on a multi-year contract. The Washington Post, reported, quoting sources. The length of the contract and salary were not mentioned, although three years is normal for NFL head coaches.

Petitbon, the Redskins' defensive coordinator for 14 years before succeeding Gibbs last March, had a two-year contract with an annual salary of $450,000.

Upon firing him Jan. 4 at the conclusion of the Redskins' worst season in three decades, Cooke said he would honor the terms of that contract, which calls for Petitbon to be paid a second year if he doesn't take a job elsewhere.

Cooke and Casserly were both mum when questioned after their meetings with Turner, as were other Redskins officials. But both were all smiles leaving their offices Tuesday after NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue's intervention a month ago prevented them from finalizing the deal then.

Less than 36 hours after Turner helped take the Cowboys to their second straight Super Bowl title with a 30-13 win Sunday night over the Buffalo Bills, he was on a plane headed here.

"I guess it might be ... I'm ready to go," Turner said before his departure from Dallas when he was asked if becoming Washington's new coach was a done deal.

The Redskins' hiring of Turner was all but completed four weeks ago when Tagliabue invoked a league rule that forbids the interviewing of coaching candidates until their last game has been played. No other names were even floated.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones had earlier given the Redskins formal permission to talk with and hire Turner during Dallas' bye week between the end of the regular season and their first postseason game as long as it didn't interfere with his team's playoff preparations.

"Norv had a window of about two or three days and they had about a day and a half of communications before the league called," Jones said last week. "There's a $500,000 fine, so it's not in the best interest of either side to talk about it."

The Phoenix Cardinals also had expressed an interest in Turner after firing Joe Bugel last week, but Jones said they never made the required formal request to interview him.

Cooke and Casserly began taking a serious look at the 41-year-old Turner in December after the Redskins faltered under limping quarterback Mark Rypien and his backups behind an offensive line decimated by knee and hip injuries. The more they looked, the more they found similarities between Turner and Gibbs, who compiled a 140-65 record and took the Redskins to four Super Bowls in his 12 years at the helm.

Like Gibbs, Turner was a protégé of former Los Angeles Rams and San Diego State offensive guru Ernie Zampese, from whom they both picked up workaholic habits and a devotion to details.

In their most recent jobs, both also turned mediocre teams with losing records and unheralded offensive rosters into Super Bowl champions within two years.

When Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson lured Turner away from the Rams in 1991 to replace Dave Shula, now Cincinnati's coach, the Cowboys had the worst rated offense in the NFL.

"His system is so easy to learn, and he is the major reason we've been so successful," Super Bowl MVP Emmitt Smith said of Turner. "It scares me to think he will be at Washington. Within a couple of years, I expect him to have the personnel he wants and be running an offense just like he did with the Dallas Cowboys."

Turner is expected to retain four members of Petitbon's staff — defensive backs coach Emmitt Thomas, offensive line coach Jim Hanifan, tight ends coach Russ Grimm and offensive assistant Charley Taylor.

Minnesota quarterbacks coach Dick Coury reportedly will replace offensive coordinator Rod Dowhower. University of Michigan receivers coach Cam Cameron and Phoenix assistants Bobby Jackson and Pete Rodriguez also are expected to be named as assistants.

touchdown celebration that ended seconds later when Buffalo's Don came up with another big play," Washington told reporters after the game.

DALLAS (AP) — Leon Lett, a household name because of two nationally televised gridiron blunders, has redeemed himself with a solid Super Bowl performance.

At least that's what his fan club is hoping for Lett, the Dallas Cowboys' talented defensive lineman who plays solid football but occasionally errs in front of millions of viewers.

"He definitely redeemed himself. I think the last few games he's done exceptionally well. It was just that mistake in the Miami game where everybody was kind of down on him," said Judeene Thetford, who answers the Leon Lett Fan Club's toll-free number in Granbury, 35 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

That Miami mistake, of course, was Lett's disastrous attempt to fall on a blocked field goal in the waning seconds of the game. He became the staple of late-night monologues after skidding into the live ball, which was twirling about the icy Texas Stadium field.

Miami recovered and the Dolphins kicked a field goal to win 16-14.

"The club started after that game. That's when we came up with the idea to start something for him to try to pull him up," said Thetford, who also ships "Lett's Got" Super Bowl caps and "Leon we love you, you're one of us" T-shirts to club members.

In his most recent nationally televised appearance, Sunday's 30-13 Cowboys' Super Bowl victory, Lett's efforts again prompted jokes from late-night television host David Letterman and Jay Leno. But this time, the punch lines were about Buffalo's four straight Super Bowl defeats.

The heavily-favored Cowboys trailed by a touchdown at halftime. But just 55 seconds into the third quarter, Lett began the Dallas comeback by jarring the ball loose from Buffalo's Thurman Thomas. James Washington returned it 46 yards for a score, and the Cowboys went on to score 17 consecutive points.

During Washington's weaying run to the end zone, Lett got up off the ground, hustled downfield and delivered a key block.

"The guy that you guys tried to embarrass all year long, Leon Lett, came up with another big play," Washington told reporters after the game.

Lett's fan club is too new to have organized any sort of Super Bowl activities, having been formed after Lett's Thanksgiving Day gaffe. But Lett says members had Leon on their minds on the one-year anniversary of his infamous Super Bowl blunder.

Lett personified the dangers of showboating in last year's Super Bowl, prematurely beginning a touchdown celebration that ended seconds later when Buffalo's Don came up with another big play," Washington told reporters after the game.

It didn't really matter, since Dallas won 52-17, but Lett's name would be forever associated with premature hot-dogging.

And what does Lett, a notoriously shy person who generally avoids any kind of publicity, think of his fan club?

He hasn't spoken to them either.

"He knows about this club, and he knows that we were supporting him," Thetford said.

AG lawyers fired in 'purge' of protectors of consumer rights, reforms

DALLAS (AP) - Several top lawyers in the Texas attorney general's office have been fired in what state consumer advocates called a purge of reformers and protectors of consumer rights, according to a published report.

A spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales Tuesday told The Dallas Morning News the terminations were personnel matters that he could not discuss.

William O. Goodman, who led the lawsuits against psychiatric hospitals in Texas that were improperly committing clients, was among those dismissed.

Those also terminated include Ann Kitchen, who law requiring a certain level of charity care by nonprofit, tax-exempt hospitals.

The newspaper also said W. Scott McCollough was fired Monday after nine years of initiating lawsuits that helped reduce telephone and electrical rates.

Mary Boyd, executive director of the state's Advisory Commission on State Emergency Communications - which is charged with putting the 911 emergency communications system in place statewide - told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that she was distressed by McCollough's firing.

McCullough, an expert in utility and communications law, is representing her agency in several highly technical, ongoing cases and so far has "saved our commission millions of dollars," she said.

AIDS victim's family says 'Philadelphia' stole his story

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The family of a lawyer who successfully sued the firm that fired him after he contracted AIDS filed a $10 million lawsuit Tuesday accusing the movie Philadelphia of stealing his story.

The family of the late Geoffrey Bowers sued Tri-Star Pictures, director Jonathan Demme, producer Scott Rudin and others associated with the movie.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. "We made the mistake of trusting people," said Dana Bowers, one of Geoffrey's brothers. "They betrayed us."

Lawyer Daniel Felber said Geoffrey's brothers, Dana and Charles, and their mother, Alberta Bowers, all of Medford, Mass., shared their memories with people involved in the film with the understanding that they would be paid and that Geoffrey Bowers would be mentioned in the credits.

They said a dollar figure was never agreed upon, and that they thought negotiations were still in progress until the movie came out.

Tri-Star spokesman Ed Russell denied that Philadelphia was the story of Geoffrey Bowers.

"Philadelphia is a fictional story which addresses a regrettably recurring theme of AIDS discrimination in this country," Russell said in a statement issued on behalf of himself, Demme and Rudin. "Tri-Star pictures is very proud of Philadelphia, and there is no merit to the lawsuit. We are confident we will be vindicated."

Tri-Star has said the movie was inspired by dozens of cases, including that of Clarence Cain, a senior attorney with Hyatt Legal Services in Philadelphia who was fired seven years ago after he learned he had AIDS. He sued for discrimination, won $157,000 in 1990, and died two months later.

Geoffrey Bowers died at age 33 on Sept. 30, 1987, two months after testifying before the New York state Division of Human Rights. Last December, the state ruled that Bowers' former employer, the New York law firm of Baker and McKenzie, had discriminated against him.

Charles Bowers said that Rudin contacted him about a movie deal in October 1988, and Dana Bowers said Philadelphia contained dozens of similarities to their brother's life and personality.

Besides the discrimination case, the movie recreated conversations and events that only could have emerged from hours of "highly personal and extremely emotional" interviews with Bowers' loved ones, Felber said.

The family's attorneys said Rudin sold the movie rights to Orion Pictures. In December 1991, Tri-Star acquired Orion's rights in bankruptcy court.

"We went to see my brother's story, standing out in the cold waiting to buy a ticket like everybody else," Charles Bowers said. "It seems like they're saying, 'Little guy, go away.' That hurts."

Royal watchers doubt Camilla is out of Charles' life

LONDON (AP) — Some royal watchers doubt reports in Britain's tabloids that Prince Charles has put Camilla Parker Bowles out of his life for good.

Anthony Holden, who wrote a biography of the heir to the British throne, said he thinks the reports are part of a campaign by the prince's purported friends to refurbish his image.

And James Whitaker, the Daily Mirror's royal correspondent, quotes unidentified friends of Charles as saying the prince was outraged at reports that he has dumped Mrs. Parker Bowles.

Three Sunday newspapers reported the prince cut all ties with the 46-year-old wife of an army brigadier to remove any obstacles to his eventual ascension to the throne.

Nigel Dempster, The Mail on Sunday's gossip columnist, said friends of the prince told him Charles is no longer accepting telephone calls from Mrs. Parker Bowles.

But Whitaker and Richard Kay, the Daily Mail's royal correspondent, reported Monday that Camilla spoke to the prince in Sydney last week.

The Prince of Wales, who is touring Australia, has made no comment on the reports.

In 1992, newspapers published transcripts of an intercepted phone conversation allegedly between the prince and Mrs. Parker Bowles expressing their love.

Community Concert artist

Judy Carmichael, pictured above, will play stride, swing and boogie piano for the Pampa Community Concert Association at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium. Miss Carmichael will entertain concert-goers with the music of Fats Waller, Duke Ellington, Hoagy Carmichael and James P. Johnson, among others. The pianist was nicknamed "Stride" by Count Basie because of her command of the stride jazz style of music played by Waller and Johnson. By reciprocal agreements, concert association members in Borger, Plainview, Hereford and Dumas may also attend the Pampa concert. (Columbia Artists photo)

Study: High tolerance may boost risk of alcoholism

NEW YORK (AP) — Young men who showed little effect from the equivalent of rapidly drinking three or five beers were much more likely to become alcoholics than men who felt very drunk, a study found.

The effect appeared not only among offspring of alcoholics, who are at increased risk of alcoholism, but also in other men.

The finding may help prevent alcoholism by persuading children of alcoholics to become abstainers if they can drink others under the table, said study author Dr. Marc Schuckit.

At the least, he said, it should warn them that if they drink until they feel like stopping, it may be too much.

The finding carries the same message for people who are not children of alcoholics, although the relative insensitivity to alcohol appears to be less common in them, he said.

The work is reported in the February issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry. Schuckit is a psychiatry professor at the University of California, San Diego, Medical School and director of the Alcohol Research Center of the San Diego Veterans Affairs Medical Center.

A relative insensitivity to alcohol may be one inherited trait that puts children of alcoholics at heightened risk of alcoholism, he said.

His study related the alcohol response of 223 men, who were around age 20 when tested, to their risk of alcoholism by the time they were recontacted an average of 9.3 years later.

The testing used two alcohol doses that produced the same blood alcohol concentrations as drinking about three and five beers within 10 minutes. The larger dose would get somebody legally drunk in most states, Schuckit said.

The men's response was assessed with some biological markers and two indicators used in the new analysis: body swaying and a questionnaire that asked men how much they felt high, intoxicated, sleepy, floating, nauseous and other sensations.

By the time of the followup, 42 of the 124 men with alcoholic fathers and 13 of the 98 other men had become alcoholics. Men with alcoholic mothers had been excluded from the study.

The 20 percent of men who had shown the least reaction to alcohol had a 43 percent rate of alcoholism, versus 11 percent for the one-fifth of the men showing the greatest reaction.

Among the men with alcoholic fathers, the rates were 56 percent versus 14 percent, and among the other men, the rates were 24 percent versus 9 percent.

Schuckit said men who are relatively resistant to the effects of alcohol may drink more to feel its effects, and then progressively more as their bodies build up tolerance. So they may be more likely to reach intakes that put them at high risk for alcoholism, he said.

Religious leaders question modern technology ethics

By KARIN LAUB
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish leaders from around the world met in this holy city Tuesday, seeking answers in ancient tradition to difficult questions raised by modern technology.

How to deal with babies made to order, motherhood past menopause and artificially prolonged life?

"No religion has really dealt with these challenges," said Dr. Patricia Baird, who headed a Canadian government commission that studied the revolution in reproduction technology. She was to present the field's latest developments at the gathering.

The four-day conference, "Religious Leadership In Secular Society," was overshadowed by a call by Israel's chief rabbinate to stay away, arguing that each religion should seek its own answers to ethical issues.

But dozens of rabbis came anyway, mingling in the lobby of the Jerusalem hotel with more than 450 participants that came from 97 countries.

Michael Melchior, chief rabbi of Norway, said he agreed with the chief rabbinate that the different religions should maintain their own character.

"But there are so many issues we are up against in modern society that I think it is very important to have a forum like this," said Melchior.

Participants included the conservative Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger and Cardinal Carlo Maria Martini, frequently mentioned as a possible future pope.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and head of the Anglican Church, the Most Rev. George Carey, was to arrive for the conference's last session on Friday. Baird cited one example she would discuss: the splitting of embryos to produce several identical fertilized eggs, recently done in the United States.

The technological advance opens the possibility of freezing some of the clones and implanting them later into the same mother, or even another mother in another generation, Baird said.

"With this technology there is a great potential for harm as well as benefit," said Baird. "I think we have to think through the consequences very carefully, not just for the individual but for our social fabric."

Margaret Earley, who teaches ethics at Alverno College in Milwaukee, Wis., said everyone was pressing for answers. "Science and technology are moving so much faster than we have the time to reflect on."

Earley said she regretted the boycott call by the chief rabbinate.

"We all live in secular societies and we are all in the same boat. We should talk to each other," she said.

But Moshe Friedman, spokesman for the chief rabbinate, said discussion would be limited.

"Theological issues are not matters for argument or cooperation between us," said Friedman. "You can talk to them about electricity, about housing rates, even about prisoners of war, but not education or theological issues."

The conference is jointly sponsored by Bamot, an independent Israeli group dealing with science and society, and Tantor, an ecumenical institute established by the Vatican in 1964.

Former chief rabbi Shlomo Goren, who had been invited to speak, backed out. So did Jerusalem's Chief Rabbi Yitzhak Kolitz. Goren said he canceled at the urging of Orthodox Jews in the United States.
