PAMPA — Pampa's observance of the National Day of Prayer is set for 12:20-12:40 p.m. Thursday at City Hall, 200 W. Foster. The event, in its third year, is open to anyone who wishes to come pray on the main floor of the City Hall building, say organizers.

PAMPA — Pampa's Red Cross office will be offering three lifesaving classes this month beginning next week.

On Monday, May 9, an infant and child CPR class will be held. The next week, on May 16-17, a standard first aid class and advanced CPR class will be conducted in the Red Cross's office located at 108 N. Russell. All classes will begin at 6 p.m.

The cost for each class is $15. For more information, call Lynda Duncan at the Red Cross office at 669-7121.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — In matter-of-fact language, a Secret Service agent's report captures the horror of that awful day in Dallas more than 30 years ago.

Spread-eagled across the trunk of a racing limousine, Agent Clint Hill could see that John F. Kennedy was "bleeding profusely" with "part of his brain missing." A piece of the president's skull, "with hair on it," lay on the leather seat beneath him.

"They've blown his head off," Jacqueline Kennedy screamed, according to Hill, as the limousine sped toward Parkland Memorial Hospital, the fatally wounded president slumped in the back seat.

Hill's report — among thousands of yellowed, faded government documents released Tuesday by the National Archives — concludes with a description of how Kennedy was rushed into the hospital's emergency room and Secret Service efforts to contact the White House and protect Vice President Lyndon Johnson, his wife and Mrs. Kennedy.

The report doesn't note what historian William Manchester recorded in his book The Death of a President — that Hill repeatedly slammed his palm in frustration on the car's trunk en route to the hospital.

DALLAS (AP) — Texas A&M University will come under the scrutiny of state auditors this month when they begin their first audit of management controls at the school and its system.

The move comes on the heels of a request from State Sen. Carol Parker, D-Port Arthur, who in a March 31 letter asked state Auditor Lawrence Alwin to do the audit quickly. The management audit had been scheduled for 1995.

A&M officials said Tuesday they consider the examination routine. Still, it comes nine months after the Texas Rangers began a criminal investigation into allegations that former Texas A&M Board of Regents' chairman Ross D. Margraves Jr. and other top administrators may have used their positions for personal gain or the benefit of their business and/or political associates.

Margraves resigned last week in what he called an attempt to deflect criticism from his alma mater and has denied wrongdoing.

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas horse tracks can begin simulcasting in-state and out-of-state races beginning Thursday under an agreement approved by the Texas Racing Commission.

The Racing Commission approved the agreement Tuesday between Trinity Meadows Raceway outside Fort Worth, Manor Downs near Austin and Bandera Downs in Bandera.

Track officials sought the agreement during an emergency commission meeting Monday. The futures of the tracks might be imperiled if they were not allowed to simulcast a full menu of in-state and out-of-state races soon, they said.

Simulcasting allows people at one track to wager on a race televised from another track via satellite.

The agreement was made possible by a deal late Monday between Sam Houston Race Park, the state's newest and largest horse track, and the Texas Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association, which represents horse trainers, owners and breeders.

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 60 percent of the state school districts that serve disabled students in nursing homes are violating special education requirements, according to a state survey. However, the Texas Education Agency has refused to identify the districts that fall short of meeting the standards.

The survey said that 17 of the 261 children found in Texas nursing homes were not being served by their local districts, despite a federal law that guarantees access to education for disabled children. The districts were unaware of the children, according to the report prepared for the Senate Committee on Health and Human Services.

Plaintiffs, chemical company settle suits

By JEFF CARRUTH
Staff Writer

Hoechst Celanese corporation and all but a few of the more than 800 plaintiffs listed in two suits against the Pampa chemical facility and other defendants have reached a settlement in the cases filed in courts in Sweetwater and Houston.

Pampa plant manager Jerry Moore said the parties signed on to a settlement this week that was agreed to in principle earlier this year.

According to Moore, the agreement, the terms of which are confidential to the parties who signed it, resolves the lawsuits against the plant.

Hoechst Celanese made no admissions of responsibility in the agreement to being the cause of the plaintiffs' health problems allegedly relating to emissions generated by the Pampa plant, Moore said.

Moore said the company felt it was in its best interest to settle to "mutually agreeable terms" so that "we can get on with our business."

The case filed in 32nd District Court in Sweetwater largely dealt with alleged water contamination while the toxic tort case in 215th District Court in Houston related to alleged air contamination.

Plaintiffs in the cases included Kingsmill residents, owners of property near the facility and railroad employees who worked at times inside the plant yard.

Of the more than 800 plaintiffs listed between the two suits, between 15 and 20 refused to sign the settlement, according to plaintiff Karen Son of Pampa who did not sign the settlement.

According to Son, who holds a copy of the 17-page "Confidential Settlement Agreement and Release," the defendants agreed to pay $25 million in damages. Hoechst Celanese also requested that all documents subpoenaed by the plaintiff's attorneys be returned to the company.

Son said three firms representing the plaintiffs received $4 million each in legal fees. Some plaintiffs would receive settlements under $30,000 while others would be given access to a trust fund to cover medical expenses in case of future illness designated as related to environmental factors.

Texas law has no provision capping the amount attorneys may receive in fees in contingency cases.

According to Moore and Son, the plaintiffs' attorneys, which include Wayne B. Barfield Sr. and Tom Upchurch Jr. and Associates of Amarillo, filed a motion requesting they be dismissed as counsel on the cases for the remaining plaintiffs who did not sign.

"As far as I know, my lawyers have walked off and left me," Son said, adding that she is considering an appeal of the lawyer's motion of withdrawal.

The receptionist at Barfield's office said the attorney would not comment on the case. Calls to the Upchurch firm were not returned.

Son said she attended a hearing in Houston on Monday where she was informed of the terms of the agreement. A plaintiffs' attorney based in Houston told Son that she ought to settle or she would get nothing, she said.

Moore said the suits were discouraging to Celanese since the company is committed to the environment and tries to stay ahead of regulatory deadlines.

"This is something that should have never come up," Moore said. "There was never any basis for the suit."

"It's distasteful to pay people money who you don't think deserve it. ... But that's the way we run our legal system," he said.

Moore said the company is continuing its program of buying property around the plant and paying for the relocation of some households.

Defendants in the suit filed in Sweetwater included other divisions of Hoechst and Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company.

A motion for non-suit in a test case of three railroad workers and their families in Houston was filed in 215th District Court in December. At that time, Stephen Ricks, a member of the Upchurch law firm, said the plaintiffs intended to proceed with the suit in Sweetwater.

An employee of the Nolan County District Clerk's office in Sweetwater said April 25 was the last day that papers were filed in the case there.

A spokesman in the Harris County District Clerk's office said Friday that a partial judgment document was filed April 8 and that a non-suit petition was filed April 20. Another employee of the Harris County office said today a motion of withdrawal of attorney was filed Monday.

The original suit was filed in 1988.

Pet owners reminded it's time for annual shots

Pampa's Animal Control Office is reminding owners of pets in Pampa that it is time for the pets' shots.

Once again this year, the Animal Control personnel are not alone in their efforts.

On Friday, Saturday and Monday, Pampa's four veterinarians will vaccinate pets against a wide range of deadly diseases for reduced fees.

Dog owners are being asked to bring their pets in on Friday and Saturday, while people who own cats are being asked to bring the felines in on Monday.

Pets will be vaccinated against diseases including parvo, distemper, leukemia in cats and rabies.

Rabies, perhaps the best known of the diseases that animals are vaccinated against, is still a problem faced by many pets and their owners.

Recently in Amarillo, a boy was bitten by a stray dog which had rabies and as a result his entire family had to undergo expensive inoculation against the disease.

Sandy Burns, Pampa's Animal Control supervisor, said that while rabies is fairly common in rural environments, people don't often see or hear much about it because the animal often dies before it is diagnosed.

Rabies is often transmitted from wild animals, like bats, skunks and coyotes, to pets, like dogs and cats, when they encounter each other in yards, at parks or in the country, Burns said.

During the summer months the problem is often increased as more animals are running about the area. Pampa's Animal Control Office often deals with as many as 300 pets and dozens of wild animals per month in the summer, Burns said.

While it makes good sense to vaccinate pets, it is also the law. In addition, to the vaccines, pet owners are required to make sure pets wear their tags at all times.

For more information about getting pets vaccinated, call the animal control office at 669-5775, or your local veterinarian.

Although people are welcome to bring their animals in anytime during regular business hours on Friday, Saturday and Monday, appointments are preferred.

Israel, PLO sign autonomy pact

By KHALED DAWOUD
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel and PLO leader Yasser Arafat signed a historic accord today that starts Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho and opens an era of Palestinian self-rule.

The signing came after months of tortuous negotiations, setbacks and violence. Even the ceremony itself was disrupted when Arafat walked out of the hall in a last-minute dispute over a map, startling diplomats and dignitaries.

He returned a few minutes later and signed, writing notes on disputed sections. Rabin then signed after an aide translated Arafat's Arabic writing.

The dispute produced an extraordinary scene as President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, Secretary of State Warren Christopher and others negotiated with Arafat on stage as speeches continued.

The PLO chief negotiator, Nabil Shaath, said Arafat refused to sign maps of Jericho and Gaza because he wanted to make clear they were still disputed. He agreed to sign when Rabin offered a letter saying arguments over the areas were not yet settled, Shaath said.

After the quarrel, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told the audience that some last-minute give-and-take was required.

"Nowadays you can watch how birth is being given on television," he joked.

Today's signing ended the more than six months of negotiations over principles agreed to Sept. 13 in Washington. Under that accord, Israel and the PLO committed themselves to Palestinian self-rule and an Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and Jericho, but left the details to negotiators.

Many Palestinians consider the agreement the first step toward an independent state, something Israel has said it would resist. Israel seized the West Bank and Gaza Strip in the 1967 Middle East War.

In the Gaza Strip, the first effects of the accord were immediately felt. Israel released hundreds of Palestinian prisoners, and senior Palestinian police officers arrived to coordinate the deployment of 9,000 police who will take over once the army withdraws.

Dozens of relatives sang and waved Palestinian flags, then hugged and kissed 225 prisoners who got off buses on the outskirts of Gaza City.

Israel has pledged to withdraw its army from the two areas in three weeks.

Arafat, dressed in military uniform and black-and-white checked headress, called the accord a "true beginning to complete the march of peace and guarantee the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people," but he did not mention a Palestinian state.

Rabin also spoke of a beginning, setting off on a "daring road" that he envisioned could end in peace despite the obstacles.

"We have hope but much trepidation that the two peoples could live on the tiny patch of land, each under their own fig tree as the prophets said," Rabin declared.

Mubarak, Christopher and Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev signed as witnesses, with the American and Kozyrev representing their nations as sponsors of the Middle East peace process.

Agreement on signing the accord came earlier this morning after a more than six-hour meeting between Arafat and Rabin.

Shaath announced an agreement was reached, but later in the morning made clear this was achieved by putting off three of the main issues until after the signing.

These were the number of Palestinian prisoners to be freed, the exact size of Jericho and whether a uniformed Palestinian guard would stand on the bridge crossing from Jordan to the West Bank.

He said those issues would be negotiated after the agreement was signed.

An earlier impasse was apparently broken when Israel raised to 25 square miles the amount of land it would withdraw from around Jericho, increasing its offer of 21.5 square miles.

Gad Ben-Ari, Rabin's spokesman, said negotiators were still trying to deal with the exact size of Jericho and the bridge crossing this morning but that the snags had not endangered the signing.

Florida enacts $685 million program to save the Everglades

EVERGLADES NATIONAL PARK, Fla. (AP) — An infrared satellite image of the endangered Everglades tells the story.

Thin white lines signify 120 miles of canals that sliced up and drained for development about half of the 8,000 square miles of the Everglades' marshlands 80 years ago. Red denotes the sugar plantations where marshland once existed.

Farther south, a pink blush in the water represents the plant-choking algae that environmentalists say is caused by phosphorus-rich agricultural runoff.

Gov. Lawton Chiles on Tuesday signed into law a $685 million plan to save the dying Everglades from decades of pollution — a plan environmentalists say is actually a death warrant for America's biggest marshlands.

"We know that we are robbing the lifeblood from South Florida," Chiles said from a boardwalk in Everglades National Park. "After years of neglect, it is time to start cleaning up the River of Grass."

The law settles a 1987 lawsuit filed by the federal government accusing Florida of poisoning the Everglades.

Under the plan, a system of giant marshes will be created to filter out pollution before it reaches the heart of the Everglades.

Chiles estimated that farmers and sugar growers will pay one-third to one-half of the $685 million cleanup cost over the next 20 years. The rest will come from a property tax of up to 10 cents per $1,000 of value.

But environmentalists contend the filtering marshes will be like giant septic tanks that could spill more concentrated pollutants into the glades during major storms.

U.N. tests latest Serb promise for peacekeepers

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serb promises proved useless again today, as troops blocked U.N. peacekeepers and a 51-vehicle convoy from heading to Gorazde for the third straight day.

The standoff was the latest in a long series of clashes over Gorazde, a Muslim enclave in eastern Bosnia that suffered dearly under an intense three-week assault last month.

The Bosnian Serbs halted their relentless shelling of the city only after NATO threatened air strikes. The Bosnian government, however, says Serb soldiers and weapons remain in the enclave 35 miles southeast of Sarajevo in violation of the NATO ultimatum.

Since Sunday, Serb troops have stalled the U.N. convoy, which includes 160 British peacekeepers, at Rogatica, about 25 miles to the north.

In a tactic seen time and time again in the 2-year war, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic reportedly promised to free the convoy Tuesday after speaking with the U.N.'s top civilian official, Yasushi Akashi.

But the convoy remained blocked this afternoon while Serbs demanded the peacekeepers turn over cameras and 26,000 rounds of ammunition supposedly not listed on the convoy's manifesto.

"We are not handing over anything," said U.N. spokesman Maj. Darce Holloway.

The United Nations tried to send four vehicles today to pick up the ammunition and cameras but Serbs refused to let them leave Sarajevo, he added.

Gorazde, one of six U.N.-declared safe areas, stands in the way of Bosnian Serb goals to unite their lands in eastern and southern Bosnia. Though the shelling has stopped, the Serb press to control the region has not.

Feds seek nearly $12,000 from man in botched house sale

HOUSTON (AP) — A lawsuit has been filed against a Houston man who moved into the wrong house as the result of a series of errors in a botched house sale.

In a lawsuit filed in federal court Tuesday, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs is seeking $11,893 from Keith I. Brown.

In the lawsuit, the government says that the errors began Feb. 21, 1989 when Brown bought the house at 13206 Pebblewalk Circle South.

Brown thought he had purchased the residence at 13206 Pebblewalk Circle North and moved into that home. The VA had ownership interests in the Pebblewalk Circle South residence, not the Pebblewalk Circle North home.

"I'm a victim," Brown told the Houston Chronicle Tuesday. "The federal government is trying to hurt a poor of working guy out here."

Representatives of the U.S. attorney's office, which filed the lawsuit in federal court, declined to comment, the newspaper reported.

Brown said he got access to the wrong home because of errors made by a real estate agent and the VA.

After living in the wrong house for approximately six months, Brown said a real estate agent told him about the mistake.

After the discovery Brown informed the VA he did not want the Pebblewalk Circle South home. Brown said he preferred the Pebblewalk Circle North home because it has a two-car garage, which he originally told the agent he wanted.

Brown, 37, said a savings and loan company that owned the home on Pebblewalk Circle North tried to evict him, but a judge halted the eviction until the dispute was resolved.

He eventually purchased the home on Pebblewalk Circle North for $32,500.

The VA agreed to settle with Brown and buy the home on Pebblewalk South from Brown. The government issued Brown a check for $11,893 in December 1989. Because of a clerical error at the VA, a duplicate payment of $11,893 was made to Brown in January 1990.

Brown, an electrician who is single, continues to refuse to return the full amount of money to the VA.

He said he has not paid back the money because he made several months of payments to the VA for the Pebblewalk Circle South home even though he was not living in it. He also spent money on a lawyer and said he lost interest money from the $11,893 used for a down payment and other costs to purchase the wrong house.

Prison inmates, parolees indicted in mail fraud scam

GATESVILLE (AP) — A Coryell County grand jury returned 41 indictments Tuesday in connection with a mail fraud scam run by Texas prison inmates or parolees that netted at least $500,000, officials said.

Thirty-six women inmates or parolees and three other citizens were charged with engaging in organized criminal activity; two prison guards were charged with bribery. Each offense is a second-degree felony, punishable by two to 20 years in prison plus a fine of up to $10,000, District Attorney Sandy Gately said.

The scheme involved inmates at the women's units in Gatesville. They gathered men's addresses from singles magazines, then mailed out requests for money, Assistant District Attorney Gina DeBottis said.

"The women would send out letters asking for money to pay old fines, court costs or attorney's fees, and restitution, none of which were true. Some women even solicited air fares and promised their victims love and marriage upon release," Ms. DeBottis said.

The inmates deposited money in banks throughout Central Texas, she said.

The victims are located throughout Texas, the United States and Canada, and from as far away as Japan, England, France, the Philippines and New Zealand, Ms. DeBottis said.

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice assembled a task force of 11 investigators, including Texas Rangers, U.S. Postal Service investigators and internal affairs officials, and worked on the case for six months.

School board, city candidates discuss their views in election campaigns

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

Voters got a chance to see and hear from candidates running for Pampa Independent School District's Board of Education and Pampa's City Commission elections Tuesday night at a dinner and meeting sponsored by the Gray County Democratic Club.

The meeting, which was held in the Gray County Annex, featured all five candidates running for two places on the school board: incumbents Phil Vanderpool and James Frugé, and challengers Douglas Locke, Albert Nichols and Greg Sims.

In addition, the 30 or so people gathered heard from the unopposed candidate running to represent Ward 2 on the City Commission, Jeff Andrews, and were read a letter from Faustina Curry, who is running in Ward 4 and who was unable to attend the meeting.

Curry's opponent in the election, Gene Winegeart, didn't appear at the forum to speak.

The candidates in the school board race addressed issues ranging from discipline to school finance to leadership to the future of vocational programs in the district.

Vanderpool, who is currently the school board president, was the first of the school board candidates to speak at the meeting.

In his remarks, he said children are the focus of the school board and should remain that way.

"Board members must keep one thing in mind above all else," Vanderpool said. "What will help our children learn? What will help our children be the best they could be?"

Vanderpool

Frugé

Locke

Nichols

Sims

Andrews

He added that in the past few years one of the biggest problems faced by school boards across the state had been financing and that schools have become more diverse and complicated as new regulations are approved.

Vanderpool said that to help solve some of these problems, experience is needed, saying that the time he has spent building contacts across the state is invaluable.

"It's my belief, and it always has been, that education is of paramount importance in meeting the challenges and opportunities that all of us have before us," he said.

Locke, a challenger vying for Vanderpool's seat on the board, said that a change is needed in the school board.

With a background in engineering, business management and accounting, Locke said he believes the change comes down to a change in style and approach to problem-solving by the board, vision and general leadership.

Locke cited the board's policy of giving people only 15 minutes to speak as an example of how they unintentionally stifle people. He added, however, that he believed the board's currently policies are not designed to limit people intentionally but rather are perceived that way.

"The school board must set an example of fairness and openness and leadership for the rest of the school administration and everyone in the school system," he said.

In the race for Place 5 on the school board, Sims was the first candidate to address the crowd that had gathered.

He addressed a number of issues that have faced the school board in the past, among them vocational programs and discipline.

Sims, an employee of the Ruff Jordan Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice who runs the prison's education program, said he has seen firsthand what little, if no, quality education can produce.

"We're not getting the job done in most of Texas," he said about education. "You'll find very few people in a TDCJ unit with a quality education. We have people, grown men, who can't read or write."

Sims added that while a quality academic education was needed, it's also important to provide quality vocational programs for students not bound for college.

As for discipline, Sims said he favors getting tough with kids who break the rules and keep breaking the rules.

"Educators today have to realize that they are the most stable thing in a lot of their kids lives," he said. "They aren't being corrected at home."

Albert Nichols, another candidate running for Place 5 on the school board and a former teacher and coach, said he too was in favor of a strong stand in disciplinary problems.

In addition, Nichols said it was important to let teachers and students do their jobs.

"I think we're going to have to get back control of our schools," he said. "Support those teachers that are good teachers ... and those students that want to learn, we should give them the opportunity to do that."

Nichols is currently the juvenile probation officer for Gray County and deals with area youth with disciplinary problems on a daily basis.

Like Sims, Nichols said he also thought a strong vocational program was needed in the schools as an alternative for those students not bound for college.

Frugé, who is running for re-election to Place 5 seat on the school board, focused on some of the things the school board and administration has accomplished in his time on the board.

At the elementary school level, he referred to a pilot program used in Lamar Elementary School in which students aren't graded by normal methods but rather by their mastery of the subject.

In the middle school, Frugé hailed the accomplishments of the "middle school concept" which helps teachers coordinate their efforts to assist students.

Finally, he spoke about the accelerated block schedule that will be implemented next school year at the high school and how he believes it will improve students' educational potential.

Frugé added that despite additional, more complex regulations, he believes the administration and teachers in the school district are doing a good job in preparing students.

"We want people who realize that the problems of this world are enormous and we want people who are willing to study the problem, look for solutions and work together to achieve those," he said.

Frugé has four children and has lived in Pampa for 16 years.

Andrews, a candidate for the City Commission seat currently held by Jerry Wilson and who is running unopposed, said that he plans to be conservative in his approach to fiscal matters and that he encourages people to be more active in municipal government.

He added that he believes in helping promote business and fighting unneeded government regulations.

"As a person who has been in business and actively involved with a business now, there are enough regulations from the federal government and state governments that the last thing that business needs is more regulations," he said.

The elections for both school board members and city commissioners will be held Saturday.

Registered voters wishing to cast their ballots in the school district's election can do so in the Music Building at Pampa High School.

Voters wishing to vote in the City Commission election can do so at one of the four polling places in Pampa: Ward 1, Travis Elementary School; Ward 2, Austin Elementary School; Ward 3, the Lovett Library; or Ward 4, Horace Mann Elementary School.

Polls in both elections will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Ruling could change block against home equity loans

AUSTIN (AP) — A longstanding state constitutional ban against home equity loans may become a thing of the past under a recent federal appeals court ruling.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that savings associations and consumer finance companies can lend money secured by the borrower's home equity.

The Texas Constitution effectively prevents loans secured by home equity by denying lenders the right to secure the loan with a lien against the home. The only exceptions are loans to buy the home, pay taxes and make home improvements.

But the ruling handed down in New Orleans by a three-member panel of the court says federal regulations allowing such liens for savings associations override the state constitution.

The federal regulations were approved by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its successor, the Office of Thrift Supervision. A federal law enacted in 1992, the Parity Act, extended the reach of those regulations to finance companies and state savings associations, the court ruled.

Under the ruling, homeowners would be able to draw on their equity to get loans to pay other debts, such as a college education, medical bills or business investments.

"This decision by the court creates potential havoc in the system of consumer and debtor protection that we have had in Texas for more than 100 years," said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Dan Morales.

The state will appeal the decision, he said.

But state Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Houston, who supports home equity lending, welcomed the ruling.

"I think it's good news. I resent being told by the state constitution that I'm too stupid to handle my own personal business affairs," he said.

Banks and business development groups generally support home equity lending, while farmers, builders, labor and consumer advocates line up against it.

Singapore reduces lashing sentence of American teen

SINGAPORE (AP) — The American teenager convicted of vandalism will be lashed four times instead of six, but his father decried Singapore's refusal to spare him the "barbaric punishment."

Citing close relations with the United States, the government today reduced Michael Fay's sentence, noting that President Clinton had publicly commented on the case three times.

"To reject his appeal totally would show an unhelpful disregard for the president and the domestic pressures on him on this issue," a statement said.

It said the Cabinet had advised President Ong Teng Cheong to reduce the sentence, advice the president must act on according to law. The statement did not say when the painful strokes with a 4-foot rattan rod would be meted out.

Fay, 18, of Kettering, Ohio, is serving a four-month jail term for spray-painting cars and other acts of vandalism last October. Several other youthful expatriates were arrested and some face similar charges.

Fay's slim last hope to escape the lashing is to be declared medically unfit. A doctor will be present when the beating is administered.

In Ohio, Fay's father, George, said the reduced sentence "changes nothing, as far as I'm concerned. It is barbaric punishment for a crime not committed."

George Fay, an automotive supply company chief executive, said he would consider suing the Singaporean government then giving any money he wins to charity.

"Obviously, four strokes are better than six," the elder Fay said. "But it infuriates me that they are trying to defuse this issue by such a lame effort as to reduce this barbaric punishment by six strokes to four strokes."

Fay's American attorney, Theodore Simon of Philadelphia, described the four strokes as "torture, torture and torture," and the case "a gross miscarriage of justice." Fay and Simon say the teenager's confession was coerced.

Fay has lived in Singapore since 1992 with his mother, Mrs. Randy Chan, and stepfather, Marco Chan.

The sentence reduction came as a surprise. Senior government officials have repeatedly said giving in to U.S. pressure on this case would undercut their authority.

Fay, a high school senior, pleaded guilty last month to two charges of vandalism, two of mischief and one of possessing stolen property. Fay was also sentenced to four months in jail and paid a fine of $2,244.

PAMPA ISD ELECTION
MAY 7, 1994
IF YOU ARE CONCERNED ABOUT THE FUTURE OF OUR SCHOOLS AND THE FUTURE OF OUR CHILDREN, PLEASE VOTE IN THIS ELECTION.
My name is Douglas Locke and I want the Pampa Independent School District to be the best in the nation while controlling costs.
This election is a matter of putting a leader with vision on your team; or continuing with a solid team member, the future looking the same as the past.
Last September 16th there was a school board meeting to set the new tax rate. The vote was 4 to 3 to raise taxes. My opponent was the major voice in favor of that increase.
My problem is not with the tax increase per se, but with the lack of creative leadership and the cavalier attitude about spending public money exhibited by this statement.
"WE MUST TRUST THE ADMINISTRATION" ... "THE INCREASE IS ONLY $22 ON A TYPICAL HOUSE."
If you are happy with this type of leadership, I strongly encourage you to vote for my opponent. If you feel that it is time for a new future, I will accept your trust.
Thank You,

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Bosnia objectives still seem cloudy

Even as he has struggled to clarify American interests and objectives in the current conflict in Bosnia and other parts of the former Yugoslavia, President Clinton seemed to make the situation all the more clouded and uncertain. The United States has an interest in stopping the slaughter of innocents, preventing a wider war in Europe and preserving NATO as a viable organization.

But if every innocent human being slaughtered is a tragedy sufficient to provoke airstrikes, the United States would be at least as justified in intervening in Rwanda, where the toll of innocents felled by political violence is at least as high.

Increased U.S. involvement, especially through a complex mechanism under which NATO, U.N., Russian and other diplomats must be consulted and placated at every step of the way, increasing the number of parties with a perceived stake in the conflict, could lead to wider war more quickly than something like a quarantine. And it's just possible that NATO, formed during the Cold War to deal with Cold War problems, really isn't a viable institution any more. Its record in Bosnia, while perhaps not conclusive, is consistent with such an interpretation. American leaders should at least be sensitive to the possibility.

One can understand Clinton's preference for a news conference at which Whitewater isn't raised, where he can speak in vague terms about telephone conversations on matters of grave import with other world leaders, where he can appear concerned, discuss the complexities of the situation, and look thoroughly presidential. But civil wars aren't a floating seminar that will eventually succumb to reason and the "peace process" if only a critical mass of chin-stroking diplomats assemble and discuss the issues gravely.

Centuries ago, the courtier and political realist Niccolo Machiavelli offered princes of the day advice many current leaders seem to embrace almost instinctively: If you've got problems, especially intractable problems, at home, look across the border. Find a defensible, manageable, foreign conflict in which to participate. You can unite your people against a common foe, declare malcontents traitors, and divert attention from domestic problems.

Clinton, however, should ponder the more recent history of the Vietnam War, in which gradual escalation on behalf of vague objectives led to quagmire rather than to unity and victory. Gen. Colin Powell, former Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, has argued that the military should be used only when there is a clear objective, a defined "exit strategy" and strong public support — and that military force should be applied decisively rather than incrementally.

The Gorazde bombing met none of these criteria. The president's new policy is, if anything, more vague and open-ended. And while the U.S. has indicated it has no plans for sending U.S. troops to intervene in Rwanda, Clinton is suggesting that perhaps other nations could do so. And that contains the possibility that someday, somewhere, American forces might still be involved. Of course, what Clinton will be saying next week is another matter.

The American people weren't invited to debate these issues before the president announced the latest escalation. But we should do so before further commitments are made.

Due process in the schools?

A few weeks before Ramon Cortines became chancellor of New York City's huge and largely failing school system, he was having lunch near Harvard with two other former city superintendents. (Cortines had retired as head of the San Francisco schools.)

All three agreed it would be suicidal to take the open New York appointment because that city, as one of them put it, is "a political sinkhole."

During his fifth month as chancellor I asked Cortines why he had changed his mind. He laughed. "It was a challenge. I will say, though, that my biggest surprise in New York has been the politicization of every aspect of education. I understand politics, but I don't believe every issue has to be politicized."

"What I have to do is not get wholly caught up in the politics of the continuous crises — asbestos in the schools, weapons in the schools, budget cuts, and local community boards fighting with superintendents."

Cortines' way of not being caught up in the quicksand of politics has been to meet parents and students all over the city. So far he has visited some 80 schools and held many evening meetings with parents. "I believe in parent involvement," Cortines told me, "but there's more to that than saying it."

Cortines starts work at around 6 in the morning and often does not get home until 10 at night. On April 7, he was on his way home from an evening session with parents in Bedford-Stuyvesant, Brooklyn, when on his car phone, he was commanded to see — immediately — Mayor Rudolph Giuliani at Gracie Mansion.

The two had been at odds on whether Cortines was cutting enough personnel at headquarters to fit in with the mayor's plan to reduce the city's deficit. (Cortines' boss, it should be noted, is the Board of Education, not the mayor, but Giuliani has a long reach.)

After their meeting the night, Cortines thought they had reached an accommodation — even though the mayor had publicly insulted and bullied the chancellor during the previously week.

The next day, however, Cortines was told he had to fire — by noon — two of his senior aides who had incurred the mayor's displeasure. If the chancellor refused, the mayor would appoint a fiscal monitor over all expenditures by Cortines.

Refusing to fire the two aides, Cortines called the demand "blackmail," adding that "my integrity is not for sale." As for giving the mayor's operator control over expenditures, Cortines said that "such a position undermines the independence of the educational process, making it subject to political issues from which it should be insulated."

The mayor responded by appointing a fiscal monitor — without a hearing for Cortines to assert his rights in the matter. The chancellor resigned.

Not long before, we had been talking about the need for students to so learn their constitutional rights that they understand these guarantees belong to everybody. We did not get into how authoritarian mayoral politics can greatly diminish children's prospects for a useful public education — without the students or their chancellor having any due process rights.

Before coming to New York, Cortines worked for a time in Washington at the Department of Education, where he heard several colleagues say that it's necessary to just give up on big-city schools because they are hopeless. Cortines told them that "in San Francisco, we worked our tails off and we reduced the dropout rate 35 percent to 17 percent; attendance went up; parent involvement tripled; and we got more minorities into college courses. Then we got them into college. We can't give up."

That's why he decided to come to New York. What Cortines failed to take into account was a new mayor using the strong-arm tactics that had made his reputation as a United States attorney there but had also resulted in a number of his more important cases having been reversed by appellate courts.

After Cortines resigned, there was a remarkable outpouring of angry, wide-ranging support for him — parents, teachers, students, supervisors, black and Latino legislators and Board of Education members who had initially opposed his coming. The city hadn't seen such unity in years.

But two days later, Cortines caved in, rescinding his resignation and accepting "a special counsel to the mayor for fiscal oversight of education" — another name for a fiscal monitor.

What the children learned was that bullying works. But they already knew that — from some of their peers.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, May 4, the 124th day of 1994. There are 241 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 4, 1970, Ohio National Guardsmen opened fire on a crowd of anti-war protesters at Kent State University, killing four students and wounding nine others.

On this date:

In 1626, Dutch explorer Peter Minuit landed on present-day Manhattan Island.

In 1776, Rhode Island declared its freedom from England, two months before the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

In 1886, at Haymarket Square in Chicago, a labor demonstration for an eight-hour work day turned into a riot when a bomb exploded.

In 1927, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was founded.

In 1932, mobster Al Capone, convicted of income-tax evasion, entered the federal penitentiary in Atlanta.

REA: Not just electricity anymore

Abraham Lincoln said it: "Government should do for people that which they cannot possibly do for themselves — and leave otherwise alone!"

There may be no better peacetime example of a proper federally initiated project than the REA, the Rural Electrification Administration.

In our once sleepy Southland, despite great distances between homesteads, the REA delivered "power to the people."

In the generations since, rural electrification, the industries it begat and the comforts it provided — light, refrigeration and air conditioning — have made the "New South" the place to be!

Now the Southland has it all: moderate climate for agriculture, plentiful water for industry and recreation, and a vast expanse of growing room.

What happened to the REA? Has it outlived its usefulness? No, indeed! Electric co-ops have taken on a new and larger mission under reorganization of the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Now, the management and technical expertise that helped electrify all of America are being directed into other critical areas of rural life — into telephone, water and sewer services and also into community and business development.

It's still a "fur piece" between people in much of

of the South. Providing reliable, adequate electric service over sparsely populated distances still requires rural electric "cooperation."

This self-help co-op bank has grown over the years into one of the nation's largest but least-known financial institutions. "The biggest unknown bank in the world."

In 1975 in rural Bullock County, one of the poorest of Alabama's "Black Belt" counties, people were getting sick, some dying, from a mysterious illness eventually traced to their drinking water.

This county, without the resources or expertise to provide a safe, reliable water supply, relied on wells and streams.

When tested, eight of 10 water sources contained dangerous levels of bacteria.

Home folks got together, formed a water authority with a board of directors and two part-time employees. They met in the back room of a small country store, soon to realize that they lacked the know-how to operate a public utility.

They turned to the Dixie Electric Cooperative for help. For water, they turned to an electric co-op? Oh, the REA is not just electricity anymore.

Many investor-owned and municipal utilities, as well as rural electric cooperatives have participated in similar water system projects.

In this one, for instance, Dixie Electric Cooperative agreed to manage Bullock County's water authority. By August of 1976, it served 508 rural customers.

Today, 17 years and nine expansions later, Dixie Electric Co-op manages a county-wide system serving more than 2,300 rural customers with safe, clean water.

While Congress is contemplating cost cutting as it should — let Congress be reminded of Bullock County — of how ELECTRIC co-operatives in this and many instances are accomplishing with a hand-ful and on a shoestring that which would require a legion of bureaucrats. That's real cost cutting.

You didn't invent the pain, Generation X

I suppose every older generation says the same thing about every younger one, but the thing that bothers me most about them is they think they invented anguish.

Nobody ever suffered feelings of alienation before they happened upon the planet. Nobody ever had to endure the ache of broken homes. Nobody ever had to deal with a rotten job market.

Those are the major gripes of today's twentysomethings. "Generation X," they call themselves after a cult novel by Douglas Coupland. They were shuffled between divorced parents, they never got religion and the generation before them — the baby boomers — sucked the economy dry, took all the good professional positions, stuck them with service industry "McJobs" and saddled them with a monstrous national debt.

I tell you, life is hell.

What got me thinking about this was the recent suicide of a Generation X hero, rock musician Kurt Cobain. A 27-year-old, Seattle-based pioneer of "grunge" rock, he disdained fame, sought refuge in drugs, spoke often of killing himself and finally blew his head off with a shotgun.

The media coverage was monophonic. "The Suicide That Spoke For a Generation," read a Washington Post headline. Cobain's songs "defined a generation," said Newsweek.

The Post sent a reporter to a rock concert in suburban Virginia to gather quotes from Cobain's distraught fans. "He killed himself for the same reason I'd kill myself," said a young woman. "We lack something. We have no core." A man who is working two jobs said, "I feel like I'm living under the heel of a giant boot. Every morning, I wake up angry." And an 18-year-old woman: "They're driving us all to commit suicide. No one understood me. Nirvana (Cobain's band) understood."

I pause here to say that I have deep affection for Genex kids. I teach them, and I couldn't do that if I didn't like them. I fuss with them, laugh with them, grieve with them.

But often, what I really want to do is take them by the shoulders and shake them and say something like this:

Dammit, turn off that television set and read some books, because what you need is some perspective.

You're worried about getting a high-paying job right out of college? My Depression-era parents were worried about getting a job, period. They were embarrassed at the prospect of standing in soup lines and cashed in their insurance policies just to buy food. I myself went to work after military service for $5,000 a year — and that was not so long ago. I pounded the pavements as a 28-year-old with a graduate degree and had to take a job editing current-events tabloids for high-school students.

You're worried about broken families? My father was snatched away from his wife and children to fight a war. His brother died in that war, in a steamy, fetid jungle a long way from home and the fiancée and family he loved. I myself was wearing a uniform when Lyndon Johnson decided we should get involved in a civil war in Vietnam and I spent many sleepless nights mourning for my friends who died in the muck of that Asia peninsula and worrying whether I'd be sent there.

You're feeling alone? Read Henry David Thoreau. "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation," he wrote, 140 years ago. Ever hear of existentialism? It's a 50-year-old school of philosophy which holds that we will never know why we exist and we should just learn to accept the absurdity of it. Read some J.D. Salinger. "A Perfect Day for Bananafish" will give you an idea of how desperate some members of my generation were.

Your favorite creative artist, a person who defined your generation, suffered a sudden death? Permit me to rattle off some names: Ernest Hemingway, James Dean, Patsy Cline, Jim Morrison, Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin and the saddest loss to me personally, the incomparable Buddy Holly.

You didn't invent generational pain, Genex. You're just the latest sufferers of it.

Clinton attacks criticisms that his foreign policy is indecisive

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — President Clinton says the United States cannot solve the world's problems, but "we will not hesitate to act alone" when vital interests are at stake. He defended his foreign policy against suggestions that he has been indecisive, particularly on Bosnia.

But he conceded in a 90-minute internationally televised appearance that "the problems are more difficult than I thought."

Clinton issued tough new warnings to Haiti's military rulers and North Korea's Communist government.

He said wielding U.S. military force to restore democracy in Haiti remains an option and "we cannot rule it out anymore."

But he seemed less assertive on how to resolve the bloodshed in Bosnia, saying on CNN's Global Forum Tuesday night that he had underestimated how long it would take to get NATO to adopt a common policy.

Clinton ranged the global waterfront during the forum, answering questions from international journalists at the Carter Center auditorium in Atlanta and in four other cities.

"This is a pivotal moment in the affairs of our world," Clinton said. He said leadership of United States was "indispensable" in resolving major conflicts and threats to security — and that he planned to exercise this leadership.

While saying the United States wanted to be "a partner, not a dictator" in the internal events of countries and would act in conjunction with the United Nations when possible, Clinton declared: "When our most important interests are at stake, we will not hesitate to act alone if necessary."

Still, he said, "America cannot solve every problem and must not become the world's policeman."

"Not every issue is one that you can put the entire wealth, the entire military might, the entire prestige of the United States on the line for," he said. "But many issues are things that are worthy of our best efforts within the limits of our ability to proceed."

Clinton advisers hope the president's performance will help bolster his image in the foreign policy arena — not usually identified as one of his strongest suits.

He borrowed a technique that served him well in town-hall meetings on domestic issues, walking about the stage with a microphone taking questions from the audience.

Clinton also took questions via satellite from reporters in Jerusalem; Johannesburg, South Africa; Sarajevo; Bosnia; and Seoul, South Korea.

CNN said the show had a potential audience of 140 million households in more than 200 countries and territories around the world.

"We are front-row history witnesses," the president said, commenting on the age of instant global live television.

From Sarajevo, CNN correspondent Christiane Amanpour asked him a question that implied his policy on Bosnia was one of "constant flip-flops."

Clearly irritated, Clinton snapped: "There have been no constant flip-flops, madam."

He said a negotiated settlement remains the only way to end the strife in the former Yugoslavia.

But he did concede that during his 1992 presidential campaign, when he demanded tougher U.S. action to curb the killing in Bosnia, he underestimated the difficulty of getting European allies to agree on a policy.

"I wish it had happened overnight," he said. "I don't think you can say that the world community could have intervened and changed the course of this war or should have intervened on one side or the other."

Overall, he said: "I don't mind being criticized, but I do think it's not fair to say that we have been unprincipled or vacillating. That's just not true."

As the U.N. Security Council prepares to tighten its economic embargo on Haiti, Clinton said the United States "cannot afford to discount the prospect of a military option" to restore democracy.

"We have not decided to use force," Clinton said. "All I've said is that we cannot rule it out anymore."

He said Haiti's military rulers have thwarted democracy and have visited "abject misery" on the impoverished Caribbean nation. "Innocent civilians are being killed and mutilated."

"It is wrong. We have got to do what we can to stop it," Clinton said.

Clinton also warned North Korean leaders that they risked being further isolated from the global community and risked "having more difficult things happen" if they continue to try to shield their nuclear program from international inspections.

Clinton hinted that he wanted to renew most-favored-trade status to China on the June 3 deadline, although he signaled it would not be without some misgivings.

"I believe that if we were to withdraw most-favored-nation status from China, it would undermine what I hope to see from our relationship. I do not wish that to happen."

High priestess, followers sentenced in ritual slayings

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — The high priestess of a drug-smuggling cult that believed human sacrifice would protect it from police and rivals drew 62 years in prison in the ritual slaying of a Texas college student and 12 other people.

Four followers of Sara Maria Aldrete Villarreal each received 67-year prison terms Monday.

Law officers said the cult practiced a variation of the Afro-Caribbean religion Palo Mayombe. Some of its victims had been involved in the drug trade.

Others, like Mark Kilroy, a 21-year-old pre-med student at the University of Texas, were snatched off the streets of Matamoros, police said.

Kilroy's mutilated body was unearthed in 1989, a month after he vanished during a night of bar hopping while on spring break. Fourteen other bodies were dug up, some missing the heart, genitals, brain or other organs.

In a shack investigators called the "satanic chapel" were found cauldrons containing boiled blood, goat heads, chicken feet and a charred turtle.

"It's a sense of relief to us that it is done, but I can see where the people of Mexico can feel safer, too," Kilroy's mother, Helen Kilroy, said upon learning of the sentences.

Police said Aldrete, a well-groomed college honor student in Brownsville, Texas, led a secret life as the "high priestess" who lured victims into the cult's rituals. She has maintained her innocence, saying police tortured her confession out of her.

The four other cult members sentenced were: Elio Hernandez Rivera, David Serna Valdez, Serafin Hernandez Garcia and Sergio Martinez Salinas.

A Cuban-American from Florida, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo headed the drug ring, police said. He and an associate died in an apparent suicide pact as police closed in on their Mexico City hideout in 1989.

A sixth defendant jailed in Mexico City, Alvaro Dario de Leon Valdez, awaits sentencing.

Investigators found the satanic chapel and some of the bodies buried on a ranch near Matamoros, just across the Texas border. Most of the bodies were recovered from a field about 20 miles from the ranch.

Elio Hernandez inadvertently led investigators to the ranch when he sped through a drug checkpoint near the border, apparently believing the cult's rituals had made him invisible.

A real delight for Mom on her day

By The Associated Press

Strawberry Puffs are light and airy, perfect for a Mother's Day tea. They're cream puffs filled with whipped cream and sliced strawberries, drizzled with chocolate. They can also be served at a bridal or baby shower, or at a graduation party.

For a spectacular presentation, ring a plate with puffs and fill the center with more strawberries drizzled with chocolate.

The puffs can be baked ahead and kept for up to three days in an airtight container. If fat is a concern, fill the puffs with reduced fat whipped topping or pudding prepared with skim milk.

Strawberry Puffs

- 2 pint baskets strawberries, stemmed and sliced
  - Sugar
  - 1/2 cup water
  - 1/4 cup butter
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 cup all-purpose flour
  - 2 eggs
  - 1 cup whipping cream, or one 3.4-ounce instant pudding mix made with 2 cups nonfat milk, as package directs
  - Sugar, to taste
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 1/3 cup prepared fudge sauce, or 1/3 cup prepared light fudge sauce
  - Powdered sugar
- In a bowl, toss strawberries with sugar, to taste; cover and chill. Preheat oven to 400 degrees F.

In 1-quart saucepan, bring water, butter and salt to boil. Remove from heat; stir in flour all at once to blend thoroughly. Set over medium heat. Cook and stir until mixture pulls away from side of pan and forms a ball. Remove from heat and cool slightly.

Thoroughly beat in eggs one at a time. Spoon batter in six equal mounds, spaced apart, onto lightly greased baking sheets. Bake in the center of a 400-degree F oven for 20 to 25 minutes until puffs are evenly browned. Turn off oven. Remove from oven; with thin knife, cut a slit in each puff. Return to oven for 10 minutes, then cool completely on rack.

In bowl whip cream to form soft peaks; sweeten with sugar to taste and flavor with vanilla. To assemble, halve puffs horizontally with serrated knife. Fill puffs with whipped cream and some of the strawberries. Drizzle with fudge sauce, thinning with a little water, if needed. Cover and dust lightly with powdered sugar. Serve with remaining strawberries, and accompany with additional fudge sauce, if desired.

Makes 6 servings.

Brunch light and easy

By The Associated Press

Think of a cottage cheese salad and you're likely to conjure up images of an old-fashioned diet plate. Not so with this salad, a zesty combination of fresh greens, creamy cottage cheese and crumbled feta cheese. A salsa-style topping made with diced tomatoes, red onion, mint and rosemary gives the salad a distinct Mediterranean flavor. Serve with pita bread for a Mother's Day brunch.

Quick Mediterranean Salad

- 4 pita bread pockets
- Olive oil
- Spinach leaves or other salad greens
- 16-ounce carton cottage cheese
- 1 cup finely diced, seeded tomato
- 2/3 cup finely diced cucumber
- 1/4 cup finely diced red onion or chopped green onion

1 to 2 tablespoons white-wine vinegar or apple cider vinegar

1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint or 1 teaspoon dried mint

1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh rosemary or, 1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary

Salt, pepper and pinch of sugar

1/4 cup crumbled feta cheese
Heat oven to 450 degrees F. Cut pita pockets into wedges; brush with oil. Bake 7 to 10 minutes until crisp; set aside.

Line four individual serving plates with spinach leaves. Scoop 1/2 cup cottage cheese into the center of each plate. In a bowl, stir together remaining ingredients except feta cheese. Season to taste with salt, pepper and a pinch of sugar. Spoon mixture over cottage cheese. Top with feta cheese. Surround salsa with pita chips. Makes 4 servings.

Whatever the occasion — a Mother's Day tea, bridal shower, graduation or long-overdue gathering of friends — this special cake will earn the most accolades. Sherry laces the delicate spongecake and luscious cream frosting. For a garnish that really says spring, seek out edible flowers at your local greenhouse, supermarket or farmers' market.

Sherry-Almond Spongecake

- 4 egg yolks
- 1/3 cup dry or cream sherry
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 2/3 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/4 cup ground toasted almonds
- 4 egg whites
- 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1-3rd cup sugar

- 1 cup whipping cream
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon dry or cream sherry
- 1/2 cup strawberry or raspberry preserves

2 tablespoons coarsely chopped toasted almonds
Edible flowers, such as violas (optional)

In a small mixer bowl beat egg yolks with an electric mixer on high speed about 5 minutes or until thick and lemon colored. Add the 1-3rd cup sherry. Beat on low speed until combined. Gradually beat in the 2-3rds cup sugar. Increase speed to medium; beat until mixture thickens slightly and doubles in volume (about 5 minutes total).

Sprinkle 1-3rd cup of the flour over yolk mixture; gently fold in until combined. Repeat with remaining flour. Gently fold in ground almonds.

Set aside.
Thoroughly wash beaters. In a large mixer bowl beat egg whites and cream of tartar on medium speed until soft peaks form (tips curl). Gradually add the 1-3rd cup sugar, beating on high speed until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight). Fold about 1 cup of the egg white mixture into the yolk mixture. Gently fold the yolk mixture into the remaining white mixture.

Pour batter into two ungreased 8-inch round cake pans. Bake in a 325-degree F oven about 25 minutes or until cake springs back when touched near center. Invert pans onto wire racks to cool.

In a chilled medium mixing bowl combine the whipping cream, the 1 tablespoon sugar and the 1 tablespoon sherry; beat until soft peaks form.

Remove cooled cake from pans.

Spread strawberry or raspberry preserves-between cake layers. Spread whipped cream on top and sides of cake. Pat almonds onto sides. Cover and chill until serving time, up to 4 hours. Just before serving, top with edible flowers, if desired. Makes 12 servings.

Make-ahead directions: Bake the cake as directed. Cool the layers thoroughly and wrap each in freezer wrap or foil. Store overnight in the refrigerator or freeze for up to 6 months.

To serve, thaw, covered, overnight in the refrigerator. Assemble as directed.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Why on earth would anybody want to embarrass a guest for daring to open the medicine cabinet? Did it ever occur to hosts that a guest may have a legitimate reason to open the cabinet?

Sure, there are snoops who may be curious about your private life, and drug abusers who are looking for prescription drugs. But what about guests who are looking for mouthwash because there was too much garlic in the dip? Or someone needing hand lotion, aspirin or dental floss?

If there are personal items such as medications, cosmetics or contraceptives, they shouldn't be in medicine cabinets when guests are expected.

To booby-trap a medicine cabinet with marbles that will come tumbling out and make a racket to deliberately embarrass someone is unbelievably childish and rude.

If somebody did that to me, I would also walk out of the house — never to return.

DENNY IN BOULDER

DEAR ABBY: Will you please help me inform people that they should never talk to, pet or try to feed a Seeing Eye dog?

Abigail Van Buren

These dogs are working, and when they are distracted, they can't help the person they were trained to assist. This is a constant problem for people who have Seeing Eye dogs.

Some people say if you ask the owner if it is OK to pet their dog, it puts them in an awkward position because they hate to say no. Is it OK to talk directly to the sightless person about his or her dog?

KAREN FLYNN, 13, AZLE, TEXAS

DEAR KAREN: You are right. When people see a person with a Seeing Eye dog, they should understand it is not just another person with his or her pet; the dog is working. They should not try to pet the dog.

A comment such as, "My, what a beautiful (or well-trained) dog" is permissible, but beyond that, no questions, please.

DEAR ABBY: I have read that you are something of an expert on the American presidents, so perhaps you can come up with the anti-war remarks made in a speech delivered by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. He was severely criticized for it because he was a West Point graduate.

CURIOUS IN ABILENE, TEXAS

DEAR CURIOUS: I am far from an expert, but I have enjoyed learning about the American presidents, and the quotation to which you refer was made by President Eisenhower when he spoke before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in 1953:

"Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed. This world if arms is not spending money alone. It is spending the sweat of its laborers, the genius of its scientists, the hopes of its children. This is not a way of life at all in any true sense. Under the cloud of war, it is humanity hanging on a cross of iron."

Sunday golfers seem torn between church, fairways

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

"I never pray on a golf course. Actually, the Lord answers my prayers everywhere except on the course."

— Billy Graham in "The Funny Side of Golf."

Even in the golden age of church attendance in the 1950s, pastors found stiff competition on a nice summer Sunday from the call of the fairways.

In American humor, the Sunday golfer has occupied a place alongside the Sunday driver as a source of laughter, with a number of variations on the old jokes of duffers experiencing moments of regret even as they miss obligations such as their own weddings.

So it is no surprise that United Methodist layman Jim Reed's new book, "The Funny Side of Golf," is filled with religious-based humor about people who choose to keep their heads down on the golf course more often than in church.

(Father Muckerman: "When you were abroad, did you visit the Holy Land?")

Mrs. Woroniecki: "We sure did. My husband wouldn't leave until he played St. Andrews.")

The biblical command is to keep holy the Lord's Day, but as Reed puts it in his book, the Sunday golfer is "a person more interested in a hole-in-one than the Holy One."

The 79-year-old former sportswriter and later editor of the Topeka (Kan.) Daily Capital has spent a lot of time around golf courses both as a player and covering tournaments. Reed, who retired to Cotter, Ark., also has written humor columns for half a century.

For people with little free time, the problem of going to church and finding time for a round each week is an age-old conflict.

But Reed said he remembers one preacher in Topeka who worked out a compromise by telling golfing members they could come to church with their golf clothes on.

(A golfer, having a bad day, went into a tantrum on the last hole. He swore, broke his putter and said, "I've got to give it up."

"Give up golf?" asked the caddie.

"No," he said, "give up the ministry.")

After doctors and lawyers, clergy may be the group most vulnerable to golf humor, particularly given the frustrations inherent in the game and the placid demeanor expected of them.

A joke sent to Reed after his book was published told of a pastor missing a short putt on the first hole and saying, "Aw shucks."

His caddie walked over to him and said, "Reverend, you'll never break par swearing like that."

In his book, Reed tells the story of a preacher who felt bad because a parishioner who was 30 years his senior beat him soundly on the golf course.

"Cheer up, reverend," said his opponent. "You'll win in the end. You'll be burying me some day."

"Even then," said the inconsolable preacher, "it will be your hole."

What about Reed. Does he ever skip church on a nice Sunday for a round or two? No, he says, he's given up golf and taken up painting.

"Because there's a lot less strokes."

The American Association of Retired Persons met April 11 in the Senior Citizens Center.

Betty Epperson introduced the speakers, Terese Meyer of the Texas Medical Foundation in Austin, and Al Albreksi, of the social security office in Pampa. Meyer explained how the Texas Medical Foundation worked and how they were there to help anyone who felt they had problems with their medical or hospital bills. She told them the foundation has personnel who review all charges and tries to make sure everyone is not charged more than is set up by Medicare. She stressed the fact that if anyone feels they have a problem and if they need to get in touch with the foundation, they should call toll free 1-800-725-8315.

Albreksi explained some facts about social security and how the Medicare insurance works. He also told them how the supplement insurance works to cover unpaid bills from Medicare. If anyone needed help, he said they could call the local office number at 669-1010 or the state office at 1-800-772-1213.

State meet looms closer for Pampa girls

By L.D. STRATE
 Sports Writer

During the previous three seasons, the Pampa Lady Harvesters seemed to have set up permanent occupancy in the third-place spot at the Class 1-4A regional track meet.

The Lady Harvesters couldn't quite pull everything together as a team and finished third three consecutive times at San Angelo. Those third-place woes came to an end in 1994 as Pampa soared to the top, scoring 72 points to win the regional title by 10 points over second-place finisher Wichita Falls Hirshi.

The Lady Harvesters finished first despite winning only one event, but they had enough talented depth to finish third or better in six of nine events. The top two finishers in each event advance to the state meet. "We pressured up a little bit, but that's okay. We'll learn from it," said Pampa head coach Mike Lopez. "There's only four regional champions in the state and we're one of them. That's great for our program."

The Lady Harvesters take a perfect 8-0 meet record into the state meet Friday and Saturday in Memorial Stadium on the University of Texas campus.

Junior hurdler Mechelle Abbott led the way for the Lady Harvesters, winning the 300-meter hurdles and taking second in the 199-meter hurdles. Strong second-place performances by the 1600 and 800-meter relay teams also helped lift Pampa into first. Abbott is a member of the 1600-meter relay team which also includes Renee Johnson, Candi Atwood and Elisha Calloway. The 800-meter group consists of Tammy Chesher, Jamie Hutcherson, Alisha Tollerson and Shelly Young.

Fort Stockton won the 800-meter relay with a 1:45.81. Pampa wasn't far behind with a 1:45.89. The 1600-meter relay title went to Wichita Falls Hirshi with a 4:03.47. Pampa's time was 4:03.96.

"If we had the times Saturday that we had Friday we would have qualified everybody. We just seemed to be out of sync all day Saturday," Lopez said.

Pampa's 400-meter relay team (Tammy Chesher, Alisha Tollerson, Kendra Rainey and Shelly Young) came close to qualifying, finishing third with a 50.23 behind Mineral Wells at 49.84. Renee Johnson was third in the 400 with a 1:00.62. She finished behind Consuela Watkins of Fort Worth Polytechnic, who had a 59.18.

"This was Renee's first trip to regionals and she just tightened up a little bit. She had a good year," Lopez said. "It was good competition for everybody and it gave some of our younger people some good experience for next year." The Lady Harvesters will be competing Friday at 6:15 p.m.

Holy Bull races into favorite's role for Kentucky Derby

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
 AP Racing Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Trainer Charlie Whittingham thinks the colt might be a freak. Trainer Jimmy Croll thinks he is.

Bull, trainer Randy Winick says. Holy Bull has raced his way into the Kentucky Derby favorite's role, and the big gray colt trampled all over his pedigree doing it.

"I thought he'd be a good sprinter and maybe a good grass horse," said the 74-year-old Croll, who was bequeathed the colt by Rachel Carpenter, a longtime patron.

Holy Bull's sire was the good sprinter Great Above, and his paternal granddam, Ta Wee, was a champion sprinter in 1969-70.

Both Ta Wee and Croll were selected Wednesday to the Racing Hall of Fame.

Croll knows something about sprinters, having trained Mr. Prospector and Housebuster, champion in 1990-91.

Croll said Holy Bull's dam, Sharon Brown, foaled a couple of good grass horses.

Holy Bull has carried his speed over 1 1/8 miles twice in winning the Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park and the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

"I think Holy Bull will get a mile and a quarter," said D. Wayne Lukas, trainer of Tabasco Cat, Santa Anita Derby runner-up. "He's got a lot of efficiency of motion. That takes a horse over a route of ground."

"He might be a freak," said Charlie Whittingham, trainer of Strodes Creek, third in the Santa Anita Derby. The 81-year-old Whittingham has trained winners of more than 600 stakes.

"Oh, he is a freak," Croll said. "Yes, he is."

"Mr. Bull is a nice horse, but if anybody thinks we're going to let him run on his own, they're wrong," said Randy Winick, trainer of Brocco, the Santa Anita Derby winner and the second early favorite.

"I don't think there are any freaks in this race. Period!" The questions are: Who will go with Holy Bull and how will the colt react to pressure? Croll maintains that Holy Bull doesn't need to be on the lead.

Ron McAnally, trainer of Valiant Nature, second to Holy Bull in the Blue Grass, agrees. "I keep saying that I don't think he needs the lead because he rates so kindly," McAnally said.

A dissenting vote was cast by Nick Zito, trainer of Go For Gin, the Wood Memorial runner-up. "Anybody who stays close to Holy Bull can win the Kentucky Derby," Zito said. "I don't think Holy Bull can be rated. He's a free-running horse."

Holy Bull has led all the way in five of his seven victories in eight career starts. His loss was a sixth-place finish in the Fountain of Youth Feb. 19 at Gulfstream Park.

Critics have suggested that Holy Bull folded when he was hooked by Halo's Image.

Croll said Holy Bull suffered a flipped palate, which blocked the colt's air flow, but he admitted the condition might have been caused by excitement.

The trainer said he knew that Holy Bull would win his first start in the Pelican Stable silks of Carpenter, the colt's breeder. Holy Bull won his debut, a 5 1/2-furlong maiden race at Monmouth Park Aug. 14, the day Carpenter died.

Croll said he was told by her secretary to run the colt because that's what she would have wanted.

Two days later, Croll was bequeathed several horses by Carpenter, for whom he had trained for 37 years. He also owned and bred some horses with her.

"The only two that amounted to anything were a filly, Winnie D., and Holy Bull," Croll said. Croll has bred the filly, a half sister to Holy Bull, to Housebuster.

Croll said Carpenter, who never interfered with his training, loved grays. She would not, however, have seen Holy Bull run in the Derby because she was superstitious and would not watch in person when one of her horses was in a stakes.

Fifteen 3-year-olds are expected to be entered Thursday for the 120th Derby.

Others include Blumin Affair, Kandaly, Mahogany Hall, Meadow Flight, Pouis Castle, Smilin Singin Sam, Soul Of The Matter, Southern Rhythm and Ulises.

Dumas outlasts Harvesters in season baseball finale

By SUSAN ADELETTI
 Sports Writer

PAMPA — The Pampa Nine concluded its nine-game losing streak by virtue of the season's end Tuesday, but not without its hitters having fun. The 1-9 Harvesters racked up two home runs, a triple and four doubles to outhit Dumas 14-12 en route to an 18-16 loss, which ended after six innings due to darkness.

After rallying consistently to keep the game within reach, the Harvesters found themselves six runs down at the bottom of the final inning. Another rally well in hand, Pampa scored four runs with two out, but a fluke strike-out ended the game and the season in dramatic fashion. With a baserunner on, two consecutive walks loaded the bases for catcher Matt Garvin. Garvin unloaded a triple and the bases, putting Pampa within three. Center fielder Gregg Moore, who went 3-for-5, chopped an infield single, which saw Garvin actually step over the ball on his way to the plate. That was to be the final flicker of Pampa's last rally, however, as Tony Cavalier folded at the plate for the third out.

"It would have been great to win the game," Pampa coach Dennis Doughty said. "But I felt like our kids never gave up, and that's a good sign." The Harvesters scored multiple runs every inning but the fifth, which went one-two-three. Third baseman Tracy Peet reached base all four at-bats on a game-tying RBI single, a two-run double and two walks, one of which loaded the bases in the sixth. Garvin registered six RBI via his sixth-inning triple and on a long three-run homer to straightaway center in the second inning.

"I thought we did a lot of coming behind," Doughty said. "It seemed like we kept getting home runs when we needed them. We just couldn't put it over the top."

The Harvesters, down 7-2 after 1-1/2 innings, pulled off a clean third inning to knot the score. Pampa starter Hank Gindorf allowed no Dumas runs and notched a ground-rule double to spark a third-inning rally. Justin Smith bolted a hard single into shallow left and Jeff McCormick singled Gindorf home. Peet looped one into center and Smith scored from second to tie the game.

The Harvester luck wasn't to last long, however, as Pampa suffered a Dumas eight-run fourth inning which saw three walks and three pitchers. Left fielder Cavalier made a great running catch for the inning's first out, the inning's sole bright spot.

"We were just giving up too many runs," Doughty said. "We just walked too many people."

Pampa forged a rally in the bottom half of the inning. The attempt gave the Harvesters a five-run jump which began when Moore doubled off the left-field fence. Cavalier singled him before crossing the plate on a passed ball.

Todd Finney next reached on an error, Ferland rapped a double and Smith walked to load the bases. A McCormick ground-out squeezed home a run before Peet's double knocked home two.

Following Gindorf and Danny Frye, Tony Cavalier was left on the mound to finish the game for the fourth inning. After finally getting the inning's final two outs, Cavalier allowed relatively few - three - Dumas runs in the final two stanzas.

"He came in there and gave us a chance to win the ballgame," Doughty said of Cavalier, normally on the other end of the battery.

Ferland uncorked Pampa's other dinger, which came in the second inning to tie the game at two. Both home runs scored baserunners who'd walked on.

"We get frustrated when things begin to go bad and when you get frustrated, you begin to press," Doughty said, explaining Pampa's string of bad luck. "And the more you press the more difficult it becomes."

"It would have been nice to have one more inning," he added. "You never know."

Bulls sweep past Cavaliers

By The Associated Press

The Chicago Bulls did again what they have done on the way to three straight NBA championships — sweep their first-round playoff series — while the Miami Heat are close to winning a series for the first time.

Scottie Pippen sank the go-ahead basket on a driving left-handed layup with 1:25 left in overtime Tuesday night, and the Bulls beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 95-92 for a three-game sweep.

It's the fifth time in seven years the Bulls have eliminated the Cavs, and in two of those, Michael Jordan did it with last-second shots.

Elsewhere, Miami pulled within one victory, not only of its first playoff victory, but also a unique postseason upset. A No. 8 seed has never defeated a No. 1 seed in the first round, but Miami's 90-86 victory gave the Heat a 2-1 lead in the series against Atlanta, which had the best regular-season record in the Eastern Conference.

"We haven't won anything, but we're happy to go up 2-1," said Steve Smith, who scored 25 points to lead Miami for the third straight game.

"Our backs are to the wall," said Atlanta's Kevin Willis, who combined with teammate Mookie Blaylock to score just 11 points.

The first game between the two teams since a brawl during Atlanta's 104-86 victory Saturday was cleanly played. Three players, including Heat starting forward Grant Long, missed the game while serving suspensions that resulted from the fight.

In the final 76 seconds, Blaylock hit a trio of 3-pointers — his only points. The scores cut Miami's 85-77 lead to 87-86 with 19 seconds left.

"Those baskets nearly broke our back," Miami's Rony Seikaly said.

Smith then hit two free throws with 18 seconds to go for an 89-86 lead. Blaylock missed a 3-point try, Miami got the rebound and Smith clinched the win by hitting the second of two free throws with 6.7 seconds remaining.

"So many things went through my mind," Smith said. "My muscles got tight, but I tried to concentrate and follow through."

In other games Tuesday night, Utah and San Antonio were tied 1-1 going into their meeting at Salt Lake City, and Houston took a 2-0 margin to Portland.

On Wednesday, New York is at New Jersey and Phoenix at Golden State in series in which the visitors had 2-0 leads.

Pippen committed eight turnovers against the smothering defense of Cleveland rookie Chris Mills, but still led the Bulls with 23 points and 11 rebounds. Toni Kukoc scored 18 points for the Bulls, who meet the winner of the New Jersey-New York series in the next round.

Mills played the game of his life, scoring a career-high 25 points and grabbing 10 rebounds.

Mark Price scored 22 points and Tyrone Hill had 15 points and 13 rebounds before fouling out with two minutes left in overtime of what turned out to be the last game at Richfield Coliseum. The Cavs are moving to an arena adjacent to the Cleveland Indians' Jacobs Field next season.

The Bulls appeared to take control with a 12-0 run that put them up 83-75 with seven minutes left in the fourth quarter, but they went scoreless for the final four minutes, letting Cleveland tie it on Mills' two free throws with 1:43 left.

The game was tied for the last time at 92 when Cleveland's Bobby Phills sank a layup with 1:49 left in overtime. Pippen answered with the basket that put Chicago ahead for good.

Bruins slip by Devils

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Given a second chance in overtime, Don Sweeney didn't miss ending the game he almost never started.

Sweeney, denied in the opening minutes of overtime, scored on a great setup by Adam Oates 9:08 into the extra period Tuesday night to give the Boston Bruins a 6-5 victory over the New Jersey Devils and a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The goal came just seconds after Boston goalie Jon Casey stopped Bill Guerin on a 2-on-1 with the teams skating 4-on-4.

"What can you say about Case," Oates said. "He absolutely came through big-time for us."

Sweeney also came up big. He really didn't know he was going to play until after the pre-game skate because of a broken left index finger.

"The doctors said I couldn't hurt it any more," said Sweeney, who nearly ended the game from in close in the opening seconds of overtime, only to be stopped by Martin Brodeur's blocker.

After the play by Guerin, Stephen Heinze sent the puck to Sweeney in center ice. He passed it to Oates entering the Devils zone and Sweeney kept the pressure on and lafrate eventually batted the puck with his glove from in front of his net with about seven seconds to play.

Driver gloved it, dropped it to his feet and then shot the puck as it was about to bounce a second time. The puck floated into the net as Casey protected the lower part of the cage.

Oates, who outscored Sweeney 32-6 in the regular season, said he passed up the shot because Sweeney had a better one.

"It was a nice give-and-go," Oates said. "I didn't know he was there until the last second because I was concentrating on the move. I got by the guy and went to my backhand and I saw Donny creeping up the edge. I figured the goalie had to be facing me, so I gave him the quick pass and actually, I was surprised where he shot it, five-hole. That's usually a top-shelf shot."

Brodeur, who had only given up 15 goals in the first eight games of the playoffs, was just as surprised.

"I never saw Sweeney," he said. "But on a breakaway in overtime, you just don't pass the puck." The Bruins had come within 3.5 seconds of winning in regulation, but New Jersey forced the overtime on a goal by defenseman Bruce Driver after a mistake by Bruins' defenseman Al lafrate.

lafrate tried to carry the puck out of his zone with about 18 seconds to play and lost it while trying to make a deke near his blue line. New Jersey kept the pressure on and lafrate eventually batted the puck with his glove from in front of his net with about seven seconds to play.

Garth scores big on Country Music Awards night

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — It was a big night for Garth Brooks at the Academy of Country Music Awards. But it was an even bigger night for him at a Nashville hospital.

Moments before he was named entertainer of the year for the fourth straight time and his "We Shall Be Free" video was picked as best of the year Tuesday night, Brooks' wife, Sandy, gave birth to a 9-pound, 3-ounce girl, August Anna.

"If Garth Brooks thinks being with his wife when she's having a baby is more important than a piece of plastic and metal, I don't know where his values are," Jay Leno joked as he held the trophy for the absent winner.

Leno, in a blue-rhinestone suit and cowboy hat, strode on stage near the end of the 29th annual ceremony to announce the top entertainer just after producer Dick Clark told the audience about the couple's second child.

Alan Jackson did double duty as one of the show's hosts and as a winner of two trophies, for best single and best album.

"Well, it sure takes the edge off that hosting job, I'll tell you that," he told a cheering audience after collecting the award for best single, for his foot-stomping, summer-fun tune "Chattahoochee." He got the top album award for A Lot About Livin' (And a Little 'Bout Love).

Jackson and co-host Reba McEntire were the night's most-nominated performers, with seven nods each from the 4,400-member academy. McEntire went home empty-handed.

Naomi Judd accepted the female vocalist trophy for her daughter Wynonna, who was bedridden with back trouble.

"I'm so proud of you, baby," the beaming mother said. "Right now I'm just like any other mom. I'm so proud of the woman that you've become."

Kentucky newcomer John Michael Montgomery pulled in two trophies, for new male vocalist and top song for "I Love the Way You Love Me." "It feels heavy and nice. I like it," Montgomery said, clutching a trophy backstage.

Vince Gill won his second consecutive male vocalist award. Merle Haggard, who has won 15 ACM awards — more than anyone else — presented it.

"To be presented this award by Merle Haggard is one of the greatest thrills of my life," Gill said.

The six-member band Little Texas, named after a road south of Nashville that was known decades ago as an outlaws' hideaway, was picked best vocal group. The group is best known for its hit single "My Love."

Kix Brooks and Ronnie Dunn, riding the popularity of their album Hard Workin' Man, won their second consecutive duet award.

Mississippi's Faith Hill was picked best new female vocalist. She has the hit single "Piece of My Heart."

The five-member Gibson Miller Band picked up the trophy for best new vocal group or duet.

Singer Charley Pride won the non-competitive Pioneer Award and singer John Anderson was given the non-competitive Career Achievement Award.

Christian Academy Honor Roll

Pampa's Academy of Christian Education recently released its honor roll inductees for the third nine-weeks grading period.

The classes are broken into paces or work units with students qualifying for the Principal's A and B honor rolls by completing 15 or more of the work units.

Those students qualifying for the B honor roll have completed 10 to 14 paces.

Students with a 95 to 100 percent average and qualifying for the Principal's A Honor Roll include Miah

Ebel, Andy Edmondson, Jessica Mattox, Samson Mattox, Chris McKean, Kazia Parker, Sharise Sperry, Micah West and Rolan White.

Academy students qualifying for the Principal's B Honor Roll with a 90 to 94 percent average include J.P. Conner, Mayla Conner, Rainy Hopson, Brian Kimbrell, Kristal Lee, Nick McKean, Bryce Taylor and Steve Terry.

Students named to the B Honor Roll include Coy Devoll, Angie Edmondson, Caryn Hendrick, A.J. Taylor and Brienna Taylor.

Rolling Stones announce tour

NEW YORK (AP) — The Stones start rolling this summer on their first world tour in five years — minus one member.

Mick Jagger, Keith Richards, Charlie Watts and Ron Wood said Tuesday that they'll launch the tour to promote their next album, Voodoo Lounge.

The tour and album won't include bassist Bill Wyman. "He said he'd done enough, after 30 years," Jagger said. "We were very disappointed."

Darryl Jones, who has played with Sting, Madonna and Miles Davis, will replace Wyman on the tour but is not a permanent member of the band.

"This is not the last tour," he added. "I hate that sympathy thing that says, 'If you don't come, you're never going to see them again."

The Stones' last tour was in 1989. Though the band members are in their late 40s and early 50s, they can still bring the house down.

"You have to," Jagger said. "I have to do more preparation than I used to. The shows are longer. When I was 19, we did 10 minutes. Now we have to do over two hours. It is much harder."

And why is there still so much interest in a band that got its start three decades ago?

"Just look at us, darling," said the leather-faced Richards. "You can tell."

The first concert will be in Washington on Aug. 1, a few weeks after the album is released. The tour will pass through 21 other U.S. cities.

North Korea rules out U.N. inspection of spent nuclear fuel rods

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea again rebuffed U.N. efforts to determine whether the nation is making nuclear weapons and said today that inspection of its spent nuclear fuel rods can "never be allowed."

A U.N. nuclear watchdog agency wants to inspect the fuel rods to determine if plutonium might have been diverted, perhaps to make nuclear weapons.

North Korea says it has no plans to build nuclear weapons, but it has barred U.N. inspectors from fully inspecting its suspect nuclear sites.

The International Atomic Energy Agency said Saturday it was planning not to send inspectors this week to North Korea because it had refused to allow sampling of the rods.

South Korean officials said the United States made an offer to reopen talks on improving relations with North Korea if it allowed full nuclear inspections.

Despite the offer, North Korea announced today that it won't allow sampling and plans to go ahead with its schedule to change the rods at a reactor at the Yongbyon nuclear center north of Pyongyang.

"The selective measurement of the fuel rod can never be allowed," a Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

In a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, the spokesman said North Korea is willing to place the spent fuel under agency supervision in the future — if the United States and North Korea work out a "package deal" settling the nuclear issue and improving relations.
