PAMPA — Pampa's Economic Development Corporation's Board of Directors will meet in its regular monthly meeting beginning at 4 p.m. Thursday at 301 N. Ballard.

Items scheduled to be discussed include a budget amendment request of the City Commission, computer equipment for use at the PEDC's offices, the recognition of a gift of furniture to be used in the PEDC's offices, a corporate membership in the Pampa County Club and a prospect request by an existing company in the Pampa area.

The PEDC is a non-profit organization created to promote business and industry in Pampa and funded by sales taxes collected in Pampa.

GROOM — Parents of Groom High School seniors are seeking financial support for a drug and alcohol free all-night party for the students following their graduation May 27.

Organizers are asking for donations or merchandise to supply gifts and prizes during the parent supervised event.

For more information, write to P.O. Box 285, Groom, Texas, 79039, or call Mary Sue Lyles at (806) 248-7341.

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Palestinian self-rule came into full force in Gaza in an eruption of celebratory gunfire today as the last Israeli troops pulled out under cover of darkness, ending 27 years of occupation.

After a fitful start 12 days earlier, the Palestinian takeover of most of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank region of Jericho was completed shortly before dawn as Israeli troops handed over a half-dozen army and police facilities under a moonless sky.

Outside the last army base here, dozens of Palestinian youths hurled a last flurry of rocks as Israelis jeeps tried to leave the back gate. Israelis answered with a burst of tear gas.

It was the sort of incident that had become part of daily life in Gaza since the uprising against Israeli occupation started in 1987.

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A group of U.S. veterans today handed over battlefield souvenirs to help Vietnamese families locate their own loved ones lost in the Vietnam War. But the ceremony turned tense for a few moments when a senior Vietnamese official accused the United States of war atrocities.

"Please provide us the information concerning all the Vietnamese soldiers captured, tortured until death," Col. Nguyen Manh Dau, head of the Policy Department in the Ministry of Defense, implored the delegation of 14 members of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

"They were captured, they were tortured in American prisons until they got killed," Dau went on through an interpreter. "And, of course, there were a number of them that were dropped down into the sea or into the river during the war."

"Colonel," replied VVA President James L. Brazee, "you mentioned in your statement all the unpleasanties of war, of the atrocities that were committed, of torture, of death, of killing. Those atrocities were committed on both sides. As unpleasant as it is, that is the nature of war."

BAY CITY (AP) — Federal regulators have given operators of the South Texas Project nuclear plant approval to re-start a second reactor unit.

The Nuclear Regulator Commission on Tuesday granted Houston Lighting & Power's request to re-engage Unit 2, said Glen Walker, a HL&P spokesman. Unit 2 was taken off-line in February 1993 to address some equipment problems, Walker said. Meanwhile, Unit 1 has been operating for 56 days, generating 1,250 (hourly average) megawatts of power at any given time.

"Unit 2 is ready for resumption of power, but the restart is only the first step in this process," Bill Cottle, the Houston Lighting & Power Co. executive in charge of the plant, said. "We worked hard to get to this point. We feel we have the right tools in place and the right process in place."

DALLAS (AP) — An AIDS-fighting, gay-rights foundation could lose to legal fees much of the bequest of an activist who died of the disease, officials said.

Randy Brown, 34, who died Jan. 30, bequeathed much of his $146,000 estate to the Foundation for Human Understanding.

But his parents, Robert and Joan Brown, are challenging the will. They contend their son lacked the mental capacity to draw up the document and that he was unduly influenced.

New interest rate hikes bring concern

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve's latest inflation-fighting moves to make borrowing more costly is prompting a burst of elation on Wall Street and a round of hand-wringing in Congress over concern the economic recovery may evaporate.

Some analysts predicted the central bank now will be content to sit back and watch to see whether the higher interest rates will have the desired effect.

"They will hold here for at least two or three months. The Fed is finished for now," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York City government securities dealer.

The Fed on Tuesday sent a dramatic signal of its determination to hold inflation in check by increasing the discount rate it charges banks by a half percentage point, to 3.5 percent. It also boosted from 3.75 percent to 4.25 percent the federal funds rate that banks charge each other on overnight loans.

The discount rate increase was the first in five years. The Fed this year has pushed the funds rate up three previous times, in smaller increments of a quarter percentage point each time.

Major banks moved immediately to raise prime interest rates, guaranteeing the cost of borrowing for millions of consumers and businesses will climb.

The increase in banks' prime lending rate was led by Citicorp, the nation's largest bank, which boosted its prime by one-half percentage point to 7.25 percent. The increase, which was quickly copied by other major banks, marked the third raise this year in the prime lending rate, a benchmark for many business and consumer loans.

"We hope that Main Street is not being sacrificed for Wall Street," said Martin Regalia, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The stock and bond markets welcomed the Federal Reserve moves, as the Dow Jones industrial average soared 49 points and bond prices also posted an impressive gain. It was a sharp contrast to the three smaller Fed hikes earlier this year, when prices tumbled.

Analysts said while the cost of short-term borrowing will go up — home equity and car loans are examples — mortgage rates could come down because they are pegged to 30-year bonds.

Economists predicted rates on 30-year mortgages, which hit a two-year high of 8.77 percent last week, could retreat to around 8.25 percent. That could mean a monthly savings of about $50 to someone with a $100,000 mortgage.

"Most of the time the Fed waits too long to do anything," said Joe Prakkon of Laurence H. Meyer & Associates, a St. Louis economic forecasting firm.

"This time they really did seem to go to great lengths to preempt inflation."

PISD board OKs Grandview-Hopkins school fund proposal

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

During Tuesday night's meeting of the Pampa Independent School District's Board of Education, board members tentatively approved a plan that could mean a windfall of about $120,000 to the school district.

The money would come from the Grandview-Hopkins Consolidated School District and would be made possible thanks to a provision in Senate Bill 7, the piece of legislation that some attribute with causing the current school finance problems.

PISD Superintendent Dawson Orr favors the plan which he said would benefit both school districts.

"It's a win-win situation and the best you can get from Senate Bill 7," he said.

In addition to Norman Baxter, superintendent of G-HISD, the district's board of education members addressed the PISD board on the funding matter. Last week, they decided to support the matter and call a special election to let the voters of the district decide if they were to support it or not.

"We're neighbors, so we should help each other," said Charles Bowers, a G-HISD board member. "We're not going to get any help from Austin in that respect."

Specifically, Senate Bill 7 provides for a number of payment options of which the property-wealthy school districts like G-HISD can choose.

Under Option 4 of the school financing legislation, a school district has the option of "contracting for the education of non-resident students," thereby avoiding the state and sending money directly to another school district.

G-HISD benefits because the charge, as determined by the PISD, is less than it would be under other wealth equalization options.

Prior to the plan being implemented, it first has to be approved by G-HISD voters in an election which has been scheduled for June 25. Following that, it has to get the approval of the commissioner of the Texas Education Association.

In the past, the commission has approved of plans like this although there are plans to close the loophole at the state level.

If resistance is encountered, both Orr and Baxter said at the meeting they are prepared to fight it in Austin.

In other business, the PISD school board formally approved of the Family and Medical Leave Act which has been in existence in the school district since February when it went into effect.

The school district has had a handful of its employees take advantage of the law which addresses leaves of absence for family members and spouses due to illness for up to 12 weeks.

Contracts with Region XVI for the 1994-1995 school year were also approved by the school board.

Specifically, the contracts between the PISD and Region XVI, which is based in Amarillo and covers the Panhandle, deals with technical assistance under Chapter 1, staff development, training cooperatives, media services, special education services, gifted and talented programs, state compensatory assistance and the Head Start program in the school district.

Finally, the school board approved of administrative changes, resignations and the employment of four people within the school district.

Jerome Stewart, principal of Pampa Middle School, will be moving to the Carver Center to assume administrative duties.

Tim Powers, currently the principal of Lamar Elementary School, will replace Stewart as principal of the middle school while Lee Carter will take over for Powers at the elementary school.

In addition to his duties as principal of Lamar, Carter will continue to work as the PISD's coordinator for technology.

In other business, the school board accepted the resignations of Daniel Coward, principal of Pampa High School; and Gerald Anderson, Amy Goldsmith and Jolene Lewis, all teachers at Pampa High School. In addition, Barbara Rogers and Billy Bradsher, teachers at Horace Mann Elementary School and Pampa Middle School, respectively, are retiring.

Three teachers, Sandra Sage, Jay Lamb and Hope Hickman, were hired to replace three high school teachers, while Jill Morgan was hired to teach at the middle school.

Mental health funds used to care for county residents

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

Funds spent on the mental health of Gray County residents account for 4.07 percent of the $7.2 million yearly budget of the Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority.

County commissioners were given an agency update by executive director Sanford Skelton in Monday's regular court meeting.

About $292,752 is spent on county residents through the operation of two outpatient mental health centers, inpatient psychiatrist treatment, residential programs and medication, Skelton said.

Gray County contributes $12,000 per year toward operation of the authority. Wheeler County and Roberts County contribute $5,000 and $1,000 respectively. United Way of Pampa raises about $7,000 toward expenses and another $18,000 comes from contracts with local businesses, Pampa Independent School District and the city of Pampa, which have employee assistance programs for personnel.

At Pampa Family Service Center, 1224 N. Hobart, four employees served 260 people, most of whom are regular clients because they suffer chronic mental illness. Of the $170,574 center budget, about 40 percent goes for salaries.

At Sunshine House, 1425 Alcock, mentally ill people needing structure and supervision are provided outpatient psychosocial services, Skelton said. Two staff members served 33 clients in the last fiscal year with a budget of $47,764. The 33 clients, 90 percent of whom take psychiatric medication, are among the 260 counted by Pampa Family Service Center.

The authority served 3100 of the 347,000 people in the 21-county area covered under its auspices, Skelton said.

Gray counties using regional programs of the mental health authority include 19 clients confined to psychiatric units at a cost of $25,542. They accounted for three percent of the 600 admissions requiring critical care.

The authority operates 18 apartments in the Canyon and Amarillo area, of which two were occupied by county residents in need of housing. The cost of providing the two apartments was $29,739, according to Skelton.

Medication for 64 Gray County clients cost the authority $19,133, he said.

Mental health treatment emphasis is on community-based services as opposed to hospital treatment, he said. About 32 Panhandle patients are hospitalized at Wichita Falls State Hospital, as opposed to 500 mentally ill Panhandle people hospitalized there five years ago, Skelton explained.

In August 1995, the authority will be limited to 40 Panhandle residents who are patients at Wichita Falls hospital, he said. With the present number at 32, Skelton said, he foresees no problem meeting that quota.

Japanese empress gives her first public speech since breakdown

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Empress Michiko made her first public speech today since she collapsed last fall in an apparent nervous breakdown.

Appearing at a meeting of Japan Red Cross representatives, Michiko read a brief address supporting Red Cross efforts around the world.

It was the first time she had spoken in public since collapsing last Oct. 20, said an Imperial Household Agency official, adding that she had been able to speak privately since the beginning of May.

The frail empress collapsed while preparing for her 59th birthday celebrations because of mental distress, officials said last year. The previous day she had issued a statement saying she was saddened by unflattering stories about her in gossip-oriented magazines.

She began appearing in public again eight days later but did not speak.

Antihistamines may stimulate tumor growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health officials say the appropriate use of three common allergy drugs should not be halted, despite Canadian research that found the antihistamine medications stimulated tumor growth in laboratory mice.

Food and Drug Administration officials said a Canadian study published today is being analyzed and that the agency would conduct research of its own.

But for now, said FDA scientist Dr. Joseph DeGeorge, the relevance to human health of the antihistamine study in mice "is yet to be proven."

Dr. Douglas L. Weed of the prevention division of the National Cancer Institute said that despite the Canadian conclusion, "we find no cause for alarm."

In the study, appearing in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, researchers at the Manitoba Institute of Cell Biology in Winnipeg reported that cancer tumors grew faster and larger in mice injected with loratadine, astemizole and hydroxyzine, three antihistamines.

Two other tested antihistamines, doxylamine and cetirizine, were not found to stimulate cancer tumor growth, said Dr. Lorne J. Brandes, principal author of the study.

"I am very concerned about these findings," said Brandes, "and so is the FDA."

DeGeorge acknowledged that the FDA is seriously considering the Canadian study.

Brandes said he would not encourage people to stop using antihistamines, because benefits to patients with severe allergy symptoms far outweigh the risks. But he said patients "should use them for as short a period as possible and only when really needed."

The antihistamines involved are sold worldwide, over the counter in some countries, and used by millions of patients suffering from allergies and hay fever. All are prescription drugs in the United States.

PISD board approves teacher pay raise

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

Teachers employed by the Pampa Independent School District will be making more money following approval by the school board of a new salary schedule at its meeting Tuesday night.

Increases range from $500 to $1,000. They represent the PISD's attempt at staying even with other school districts in the area including Amarillo, Canyon, Borger and Dumas, according to Dr. Dawson Orr, superintendent.

The change in the salary scale is done annually and follows a review by the school district's Salary and Benefits Committee, which is composed of teachers, staff and administrators, according to Orr.

Made up of 19 steps, PISD's 1993-1994 salary schedule had teachers new to the profession making $20,000 while their counterparts at Step 18, the top of the salary range, made $36,200.

The new salary schedule will have new teachers making $20,500 while the teachers that qualify for Step 18 will be making $36,700 in the 1994-1995 school year.

The majority of the 290 teachers employed by the school district are at levels 3-9 and will see an increase of $1,000, according to figures released by the school district.

As a district, the PISD spent $7,631,550 in fiscal year 1993-

1994. That will increase by an estimated $494,800 for next year.

Despite the increase, Orr said the additional money needed to fund the estimated costs of salaries and benefits is well within the district's no growth budget.

"This is a do-able item," he said. "We still believe that it allows us to stay within the no-growth budget."

In Pampa, teacher salaries are high above the state requirements, ranging from $1,300 to $8,300 more than what is required by law.

The state average for a beginning teacher is $17,000 and increases to $28,400 for teachers at Step 18.

Perry says U.S. could be weeks away from crisis with North Korea

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States could be only weeks away from a major confrontation with North Korea over the communist nation's nuclear program, Defense Secretary William Perry says.

Perry, completing a two-day trip to Canada for talks on military issues, said Tuesday the United States faces "a very substantial near-term crisis" with North Korea.

North Korean officials now estimate they will be refueling an experimental nuclear reactor for about two more months.

Pentagon defense analysts suspect that the fuel being extracted from the plant could be used to produce weapon-grade plutonium for four to five atomic weapons.

"If we don't have it resolved at the end of this time then they may have processed this spent fuel into weapons-grade plutonium and we would have lost that opportunity to stop that event from happening," Perry said.

If North Korea continues to refuse to allow international inspectors to watch the process of withdrawing the fuel, the Clinton administration has said it would ask the United Nations to impose sanctions. North Korea has said that such a move would be tantamount to a declaration of war.

"I do believe that this is rhetoric on the part of the North Koreans," Perry said.

But he added that the United States, which has some 35,000 troops stationed in South Korea, must be prepared for the possibility that the threat is real.

"The objective of the United States has been to curtail this (nuclear weapons) program before it gets started," Perry said.

Perry said the situation represents a crisis, not only because time is running out, but "because of the potential that there will be in time the involvement of nuclear weapons."

At the White House, spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers' comments were more tempered.

Saying she had not read Perry's remarks, Myers reiterated that the United States would seek sanctions if North Korea doesn't comply, but she added: "At the same time, we are working toward compliance."

North Korea has offered varying degrees of cooperation to international inspectors charged with monitoring the refueling process.

'Mental health' — continued from page 1

Skelton told the court he expects to assign a full-time master's level psychologist to Gray County to work specifically with juveniles. It costs $40,000 provide a full time counselor in an office, he said.

Every county in the state is covered by one of 35 mental health centers positioned so that no client must drive more than one hour to mental health services. The Panhandle authority operates six outreach centers in the 21-county region. In some smaller communities, professional staff may visit twice monthly.

"Our challenge is to provide good quality mental health services to all our clients," Skelton said.

Eighty percent of the $7.2 million is funded by the state of Texas. The Panhandle authority contracts with Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to deliver services. The Panhandle agency is governed by a board of trustees, but fund expenditures are spent as dictated by the state, Skelton said.

Dean Copeland, Gray County's representative to the board of trustees, praised agency management for their tight ship approach to finances and dedicated staff. In his five years as a board member, he has seen the budget go from $2 million to $7.2 million.

He told the court that it is an agency goal to bring a psychiatrist to the Pampa Center office more frequently because the doctor who comes may see 30 to 40 patients in a single day. A patient is required to see a psychiatrist to receive or renew medication prescriptions.

For those in crisis situations, an emergency warrant issued by the county judge will allow law enforcement officers take a mentally ill person to Northwest Texas Hospital for medical evaluation and possible commitment to a crisis unit.

It is an agency frustration to deal with the Nwth bottle neck which keeps the mentally ill waiting four to five hours for assessment. Skelton said he expects that with the opening of a new emergency room at Nwth the problem will be alleviated.

The hospital, as part of the Amarillo Hospital District, has an obligation to the mentally ill and the indigent which is carried out through their contractual relation with TPMHA, he said.

Other agency representatives attending Monday's meeting were Dr. Robert Smith, director; Peggy Nunn, Becky Dinsmore and Ann Johnson of Pampa Family Service Center; Stephanie Courtney and Jamilou Garren of Sunshine House; and Jim Howard, Amarillo, regional director of outpatient clinics.

Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority Gray County — FY 1993

• Patients who make less than $8,000 annually account for more than 50 percent of the TPMHA case load in Gray County.

• The TPMHA saw the most patients from the 22-44 age group, 136, during the 1993 fiscal year in Gray County.

U.N. seeks full control of Kigali airport

By TERRY LEONARD
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rwanda's warring sides met in delicate negotiations today to give U.N. troops full control of the capital's airport, the lifeline for the embattled city and the staging point for 5,500 new peacekeepers.

U.N. officials want rebel and government troops to withdraw all weapons at least 1 1/4 miles from Kigali airport. That would force the army to abandon its heavily defended Kanombe camp, which rebels had been attacking, and force the rebels to give up strategic positions.

A lull in fighting around the capital allowed aid workers to rush relief supplies today and Tuesday to about 15,000 people living under U.N. protection in the capital.

But U.N. spokesman Abdul Kabia said the situation is growing steadily worse in areas where refugees have sought protection. He said many are sick with malaria and dysentery, and the United Nations and relief groups cannot provide adequate care.

He said many sick people needed to be transferred from one hospital to another, "but it is full and does not have enough resources."

Kabia, in Kigali, said both sides had agreed to give the U.N. full control of the airport and were negotiating possible ways to withdraw weapons outside the perimeter.

Cooperation from both sides is a key element in U.N. plans to reinforce its peacekeeping force with 5,500 new troops and to set up safe areas for civilians in the city and in the countryside.

The U.N. Security Council authorized the new, all-African force for Rwanda on Tuesday, but Kabia said it was not yet known when the first troops would arrive.

Rwanda refugees laden with their earthly belongings arrive at the Benaco Refugee Camp in Tanzania. 250,000 refugees are already at the camp and they face possible epidemics. (AP photo)

Despite original estimates the first contingent would arrive by a week from the passing of the resolution, "as of now, we do not have assurances that will take place," Kabia said.

The Security Council authorized the force from Congo, Ghana, Nigeria, Tanzania and Zimbabwe to use force to protect civilians and relief workers in areas where humanitarian aid is provided.

But the soldiers will not be allowed to use force to stop the fighting or to prevent massacres in areas outside their control.

Control of the airport and the surrounding territory is considered vital to the airlift of troops and equipment into the capital and for the delivery of humanitarian aid.

Kabia said the murder of a Rwandan U.N. worker and 10 small children two days ago by men armed with machetes showed Rwanda's ethnic savagery was continuing in the capital and that many more people would seek U.N. protection when the new peacekeepers arrived.

Instead of declaring certain areas of the city safe havens, the new U.N. troops will be used to beef up security at places where refugees already have sought shelter.

The United Nations aid groups estimate that 200,000 people, mostly minority Tutsis, have been killed in more than a month of ethnic slaughter and fighting between Tutsi rebels and troops of the Hutu-led government. About 2 million Rwandans have fled their homes.

Kennedy committee takes up health reform proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is hoping to win bipartisan support in the Labor and Human Resources Committee for his Clinton-like health proposal, but Republicans are balking.

Four of the committee's seven Republicans plan to introduce a total of 91 amendments to the first section of the proposal when the committee begins debating it today.

The amendments range from removing requirements that individuals and employers purchase health insurance to excluding abortion from the basic benefits package.

Kennedy found what could be important support Tuesday when Sen. John Breaux, D-La., the co-sponsor of a major alternative to President Clinton's health plan, indicated for the first time that he could support a requirement that employers pay most of the cost of insurance for their employees if they have 10 or more workers.

Breaux, co-sponsor of the Managed Competition Act, floated the idea at a meeting of Democratic senators. His bill does not impose requirements on anyone.

In the House, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's Ways and Means Committee also is beginning work on a health bill drafted by its health subcommittee in March.

In the Senate, Republicans have been quick to dismiss the significance of any bill that emerges from Kennedy's committee.

"If there's going to be a health care bill, it's going to have to go through the Finance Committee," which is more conservative than Kennedy's committee, said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who serves on both committees. He spoke after a closed meeting Tuesday between Republican members of both Finance and Labor and Human Resources.

Kennedy's bill builds on Clinton's, but it expands choices available for buying health care, drops the mandatory alliances and includes greater benefits in areas such as women's health and mental illness and substance abuse. It also exempts the smallest of businesses — with under six employees — from paying workers' health insurance.

Sen. Harris Wofford, D-Pa., a committee member, said the bill that emerges from Kennedy's committee could "reshape the debate" even if it only draws one Republican vote.

There already is broad Republican support for the idea of making insurance-purchasing cooperatives voluntary, he said.

Kennedy's bill was crafted in consultation with the White House and with Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell. Kennedy aims to get it out of the committee by the president's deadline, Memorial Day.

But the other key Senate committee on health care — Finance — which has jurisdiction over tax and financing issues, is still far from putting together a bill. Eventually, Mitchell will take parts from both bills and create a final bill.

Can President be sued? — White House seeks opinion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has asked the Justice Department to determine whether President Clinton can be sued for allegations that occurred before he took office.

The question could be the crux of Clinton's defense of a sexual harassment suit filed by a former Arkansas employee.

The president's private attorney, Robert Bennett, has indicated he will try to block Paula Jones' lawsuit by arguing that a president should not be distracted while in office by private legal action.

Administration officials insisted the request was not a conflict of interest, even though Justice may be — in effect — doing legal legwork for Clinton's private attorney. They said the question is important to the institution of the presidency, not just to the current president.

"This is done in connection with the institutional role of the president and the needs and the history of the office," Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said today.

He said White House counsel Lloyd Cutler made the request.

"The White House did not ask the Justice Department to do personal lawyering for Bill Clinton," Stern said.

He said he was not sure if the Justice opinion would be made public or shared with Bennett. "That's up to the client," he said, referring to the White House. "I assume that everyone has an interest in knowing the answer to that question."

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the information would be made available to Bennett. "Why would they keep it secret?" she said.

Myers said the question is important because Clinton is being sued as president, even though the alleged harassment occurred while he was governor of Arkansas.

"He is the president of the United States. Everything that happens to him effects his capacity as president of United States, regardless," she said.

Myers also said Clinton's decision to hire private attorneys to defend him in private legal problems was a political decision, and not legally required. He has a second attorney working on the White-water real estate investigation.

"I know of no instance where this White House has conceded that there are legal reasons why this is being handled by outside counsel," she said. "We may make political judgments that that is the appropriate way to handle it, but I don't think we've ever conceded that it's legally required."

The Supreme Court ruled in 1982 that presidents cannot be sued in office or after leaving office for official acts as president.

Stern said the question now is not whether Clinton can be sued; the question is when can he be sued: Is Jones required to wait until he is no longer in office?

UT, A&M faculty members criticize TEA handling of federal grant money

Official says program could be lost

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The Texas Education Agency has so severely mismanaged a $10 million award from the National Science Foundation that the program has been suspended and faces possible termination, college faculty members say.

The criticism came Tuesday from faculty members at Texas A&M and the University of Texas.

John Fackler, an A&M distinguished chemistry professor, said the "Statewide Systematic Initiative in Science and Math Education" program funded by the National Science Foundation has failed so far in Texas because of "ineptness on the part of our state agencies and our governor to address the issues that needed to be addressed."

"It took almost a year and a half to get a director lined up and then the person backed out when put into the position," Fackler said.

University of Texas chemistry faculty member Mary Anne Fox, a member of NSF's governing board, said she told Gov. Ann Richards in a May 9 letter that she was concerned about saving the program.

The faculty member said she first tried to bring the program's troubles to the attention of the governor last summer, but three meetings with the governor's office were "cancelled at the last minute."

She also said in her letter to Gov. Richards that she was informed on May 6 that the "National Science Board approved withdrawal of continuing support" for the Texas program "because of serious problems with management."

Roxanne Evans, deputy press secretary for Gov. Richards' office, said the program hasn't been cancelled yet.

"Our discussion with (NSF official) Luther Williams is that we still have reason to be optimistic about next week's meeting," Evans said. "Our feeling is we'll try to work things out and we're reasonably optimistic we can do so."

Delia Moore, a TEA spokeswoman, said the state agency has had problems administering the program and finding a director, but the TEA now has a director in place and is submitting a redesign of the program next week with the National Science Foundation.

"We are moving forward with the high expectations that we will meet all their (the NSF's) concerns and far exceed all the expectations for a successful program," Ms. Moore said.

But it might be too late, an NSF official says.

Luther Williams, assistant director for education and human resources for the National Science Foundation in Washington D.C., told the Bryan-College Station

Eagle that next week's meeting with the TEA will be the final effort to save the program.

The NSF recognized about a year ago the Texas program needed to be revised "substantially" and it was then that the program was suspended and changes ordered, Williams said.

"They have responded to us and we found those responses not fully adequate and we have so informed them," Williams said. "The assumption is that unless there is dramatic change, the program will move from suspension to termination."

The National Science Foundation entered into an agreement with Texas to put in place a "challenging, demanding and appropriate math and science education program" for students in grades K-12, Williams said.

Texas has not lived up to its end of the bargain since the state first received funding in 1992, he said.

So far, 25 states and Puerto Rico have been awarded money under the five-year program. Recently, Rhode Island became the first state to have the program terminated, Williams said.

"We don't give money to states to try and we don't give them money to maintain status quo," Williams said.

Williams said that if the program in Texas can be saved next week, annual funding of $2 million will resume and about $1 million frozen from 1993 also will be turned over to the state.

"The program would be under way again, but it also would be under close scrutiny because of Texas having created the difficulty in the first instance," Williams said.

Lawyers pass new ad rules; attorney group plans fight

DALLAS (AP) — Lawyers have passed a State Bar of Texas referendum on new advertising rules aimed at giving consumers better information when choosing an attorney, with less puffery and scare tactics.

But a group of attorneys opposed to the regulations says they'll see the Bar in court.

The new rules, approved Tuesday, ban lawyer advertising that appeals primarily to emotions or contains unsubstantiated claims.

"This is to reform a practice that's gotten to be totally out of line," said Lonny Morrison, State Bar of Texas president and Wichita Falls attorney.

"Its going to make a lot of difference because the information the consumer receives is going to be of a higher quality in terms of ... reliability for decision-making," he said.

Barely enough attorneys returned ballots to pass the measure — a shortcoming that sank the proposal in December. Under state law, 51 percent of the 58,178 ballots mailed to lawyers licensed in Texas had to be returned by the Monday deadline. Some 52.7 percent, or 30,705, of the lawyers voted on the advertising issue.

Those who voted overwhelmingly approved the restrictions, with 88 percent in favor and 12 percent against them.

The number of ballots may have been held down by lawyers who opposed what they deemed censorship. Some of them, including the attorney group Texans Against Censorship, may have tried to discourage colleagues from voting.

Morrison said he expected the new rules to take effect Sept. 1, after validation by the Texas Supreme Court.

However, Texans Against Censorship will ask the Supreme Court either to not approve the rules or to modify them, said Chip Babcock, a Dallas and Houston lawyer representing the attorney group.

The organization doesn't object to the rules on misleading statements, Babcock said. But the group thinks the prohibition on advertising appealing primarily to the emotions would be an unconstitutional restriction on free speech, he said.

"I expect the court will take a very careful look at whether these rules are constitutional," Babcock said.

Under one of the rules, lawyers must file copies of their advertisements with the State Bar when they are disseminated. A committee will review ads and file grievances if they don't meet guidelines, Morrison said.

The grievance system carries ultimate penalties of disbarment, suspension, or public or private reprimands, he said.

Clinton, Jones - only they know for sure

The civil lawsuit filed by former Arkansas state employee Paula Jones against President Bill Clinton will provide more than its fair share of titillation, as well as political hypocrisy.

Nobody but the two people involved knows for sure what, if anything, happened in a private room in the Excelsior Hotel in Little Rock on May 8, 1991. Jones claims a state trooper invited her to visit Clinton (who was then governor of Arkansas).

Clinton says it never happened, and his lawyer, high-powered capital attorney Robert Bennett, calls the suit "tabloid trash with a legal caption."

Anybody accused of a heinous action, even the president, should have the benefit of the presumption of innocence. And many laws regarding sexual harassment are dubious at best, leaving the definition of what constitutes harassment to the accuser.

But Jones's charges will leave some fashionable political gurus squirming and others exposed as hypocrites. As many, such as Harvard Law Professor Alan Dershowitz, have pointed out, Jones's charges against Clinton are more serious and come with more apparent corroboration than the charges against Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas that made Anita Hill a feminist icon and a sought-after speaker at conferences with the theme, "Women Tell the Truth."

The truth is, some women do and some don't. Some misinterpret innocent words or gestures. Perhaps Jones is lying - or confused - about her encounter. Perhaps she isn't.

Whereas character does count, there's a danger in concentrating on such fascinating, but ultimately marginal scandals, however. Many who oppose the president's agenda on health care, national service, gun control, welfare reform and the like, obviously hope the administration will find itself paralyzed by scandal and so discredited that it can't push its agenda through Congress.

That hope could be empty, however. The Democratic majority in Congress might just look at the situation and decide it has to pass something resembling healthcare and welfare reform so its members have something to talk about on the campaign trail this fall besides the president's alleged sexual prowess.

Scandals can be both amusing and revealing. As Newsweek writer Joe Klein powerfully argues, a president's personal promiscuity can carry over into a broadly promiscuous disregard for truthfulness in public policy. Still, the real stakes for taxpayers and citizens lie in just those policy decisions.

Those who depend on scandals rather than ideas to save us from Clintonism could be sorely disappointed.

Putting civil rights in jazz

Recently, Verve Records presented a Carnegie Hall concert celebrating the 50th anniversary of Norman Granz's career in music. Granz created the Jazz at the Philharmonic tours; a series of record companies that never abandoned jazz, no matter what the trends were; and, starting long ago, he absolutely refused to play to segregated audiences.

Black musicians used to have a store of war stories about the risks to body and spirit when they were booked in the South and, for that matter, other parts of the country, including New England. Managers, booking agents and promoters had no interest in changing local mores so long as the money came in.

In many places on tour, black musicians, after working segregated clubs and dances, were barred from white hotels. And often, to get something to eat, they had to commission a white man to buy sandwiches for the band.

Richard Boyer, in a 1944 New Yorker profile of Duke Ellington, told of a policeman in Jim Crow St. Louis greeting Ellington enthusiastically, and saying: "If you'd been a white man, Duke, you'd have been a great musician." With his customary regal manner, Duke, smiling, coolly answered, "I guess things would have been different if I'd been a white man."

Norman Granz, the most stubborn and brusque man I have ever known, went into jazz to attack racial discrimination head on. He loved the music, but as he said in Dizzy Gillespie's book, To Be or Not to Bop, "the whole reason for Jazz at the Philharmonic was to take it to places where I could break down segregation and discrimination. ... I insisted that my musicians were to be treated with the same respect as Leonard Bernstein or Heifetz because they were just as good, both as men and musicians."

"With Norman," trumpet player Clark Terry once told me, "everything was first class. The travel, the hotels, everything. He had deep pockets. The other promoters had short pockets."

And everything out front had to be exactly the way Granz wanted it to be. He once described his strategy for bringing Jazz at the Philharmonic to racist Houston in the 1950s. After renting the auditorium, "I'd hire the ticket seller and tell him there was to be no segregation whatsoever. Well, that was new for Houston."

"I removed the signs that said 'White toilets' and 'Negro toilets.' That was new. The ticket seller was a Texan and I knew he didn't have eyes to do what I'd asked him to do, but he was getting paid, so he had to."

When Granz and the players came - among them Dizzy Gillespie, Ella Fitzgerald, Buddy Rich and Lester Young - there were white purchasers of tickets who suddenly realized they might have to sit alongside black Texans. Granz told them, "You sit where I sit you. You don't want to sit next to a black, here's your money back." Granz's shows included a lot of jousting among the players - what used to be called "cutting contests." Because of the anticipated excitement, JATP attracted large audiences. When you have a strong show, Granz would say, you can lay down some conditions, including in Houston.

An intellectual, Granz can be a very provocative conversationalist, from jazz and race relations to the whited sepulchers in political office. Another of his passions is art. He was a friend of Picasso, Switzerland, where he now lives, at 75, in semi-retirement. Characteristically, he did not attend the Carnegie Hall concert in his honor. He never liked ceremony. At his own concerts, he would stride onstage, quickly give the names of the players, though not his own, and rush off.

Years ago when Granz was in the USSR, an Izvestia reporter asked him which musician most typifies jazz. Without hesitating, he named the trumpet player Roy Eldridge. "He's a musician for whom it's far more important to dare, to try to achieve a particular peak - even if he falls on his ass in the attempt - than it is to play safe. That's what jazz is all about."

These years, Granz may be somewhat of an anachronism, as a dedicated integrationist and as a man who doesn't hesitate to dare to keep his principles alive. The present NAACP probably would not take any note of him now. Nor would he of it. Granz never had any patience with retreats into separatism. He was not a sentimentalist. He just knew what would work and what wouldn't if the nation wasn't to slide back - because separate was never equal.

Today in history

By The Associated Press Today is Wednesday, May 18, the 138th day of 1994. There are 227 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On May 18, 1980, the Mount St. Helens volcano in Washington state exploded. The blast took 1,300 feet off the top of the mountain, leaving 57 people dead or missing.

On this date: In 1642, the Canadian city of Montreal was founded.

In 1860, the Republican Party convention in Chicago nominated Abraham Lincoln for president.

In 1910, Halley's Comet, as seen from Earth, moved across the sun.

In 1911, composer Gustav Mahler died in Vienna, Austria.

In 1933, the Tennessee Valley Authority was created.

In 1934, Congress approved the Lindbergh Act, which called for the death penalty in cases of interstate kidnapping.

FAA pilot criteria is outdated

When our country was young, 35 was "old." A man that age had raised a family, buried a wife and had a life expectancy of just three more years.

They had no fancy names for sickness in the mountain, bush or brush country. You died of "fever," or you died of "colic," and generally, you died young.

Today, in 1994, a new baby boy can expect to live 75.7 years; a girl 78.5 years.

And once today's baby has lived past the precarious first year of life, much longer.

The typical 65-year-old American man can now expect to live 81 years; the typical woman 85 years.

Medical, nutritional and sanitation sciences are adding to the human life span an additional week every two months!

Recognizing that Americans are living longer, healthier, more vigorous lives, "retirement at 65" is no longer either sensible or mandatory.

But one agency of government is so behind the times in its criteria that it continues to turn commercial airplane pilots out to pasture when they are at peak proficiency!

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), which tends to rubber-stamp FAA decisions, have intimidated Congress with their profession of "safety first."

But that objective has been carried far too far.

All this has been brought into sharp focus by the

Paul Harvey

FAA grounding of one of the most gifted pilots who ever flew.

I have socialized with Bob Hoover. He is the ultimate gentleman, kind and gracious.

I have flown with Bob Hoover. At 71, his gifted hands work the controls of a Mustang, a Sabreliner or a Shrike with the deftness and artistry of a concert pianist.

I have trusted my life to those hands rolling a twin at low level with one engine feathered AND when he shuts down both engines, lands out of the bottom of a loop, rolling to a stop in front of the crowd with both props feathered.

Nobody flies with more perfect precision than Bob Hoover.

He's been grounded. Failed to pass his physical? No.

Heart murmur? Blood pressure? Rules infraction?

None of those things. Hoover was grounded because a couple of FAA inspectors, attending an Oklahoma City show, filed a report stating that in their view "his flying did not look sharp."

And when a court ruled in Hoover's favor, finding no evidence that he was in any way impaired, the NTSB overruled the court.

Have pilots no civil rights? MacMcClellan says, "Pilots have less civil rights than a purse snatcher. If the FAA wants to get you, it will!"

Civil aviation is aghast. If bureaucrats can ground Bob Hoover, they can ground anybody!

The FAA's chief psychiatrist, who approved Hoover's grounding, concluding that Hoover was "impaired to the point where he should not fly" - that psychiatrist neither examined nor tested Hoover.

Yet all psychiatrists and other doctors and pilots who have testified that Hoover is entirely well and an incomparably smooth pilot are ignored in favor of the bureaucrats and their for-hire physician witnesses.

I have studied available transcripts of the several hearings and court proceedings and have concluded that the FAA, stubbornly jealous of its prerogatives, trashed every rule of judicial review in persecuting this man.

The composition of the FAA and the power it has grabbed for itself over the years demand prompt congressional scrutiny.

Ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the Curmudgeon's Improvisational Slam and Jam Club. You toss up the ideas, I'll toss out the insults. Spontaneous and unrehearsed.

Who wants to start us off? Senate. Somebody said Senate. As in the United States Senate? Hey, I'm a patriot. It is therefore very difficult for me to disparage our elected leaders, but I'll give it a try.

Let's see ... I'm sure you've heard that Oklahoma Democrat David Boren is retiring from politics to become the president of the University of Oklahoma. Grieve not, friends, bidding bye-bye to Borin' Boren is no great loss and may even be a gain. To his credit, Boren has pushed for congressional and campaign finance reform but has firmly resisted all attempts to tax and regulate energy. Last year, he got in a snit and threatened to annul the entire budget if he didn't get his way on Medicare cuts. He's an obstructionist and a pain and O.U. is welcome to him.

Nine senators have said they will retire this year, but only two - Democrat George Mitchell of Maine and Republican John Danforth of Missouri - are worth lamenting. You should send thank you cards to Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; Donald Riegle, D-Mich.; and Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo. - not for serving, but for leaving.

France? You want me to knock France? That would not be a PC thing to do, you know. I could get in real trouble.

I am reminded of Idi Amin, the erstwhile Ugandan dictator, who once sent a telegram to the White

Joseph Spear

House to suggest that the United Nations be moved to his capital city of Kampala because, after all, Uganda was the center of the universe.

He got that wrong. France is the center of the universe, and you needn't take my word for it. Ask 60 million Frenchmen. They are in the process, once again, of trying to outlaw English words. Gone would be "le disque jockey" and "le cash flow" and "le stress." An airbag would become a "coussin gonflable de protection." Prime time would be "heures de grand ecoute."

The French also want to curtail American movies, and the government recently caved in to French fishermen who were complaining about imports. The bureaucrats let tons of American fish rot while they leisurely conducted "quality inspections."

Yes, the word "chauvinism" does have French roots.

I heard someone say baseball. Somebody wants me to slam le baseball. All right, get a load of this: I AM SICK OF THIS JUICED-BALL BULL. Baseballs are flying out of parks and sports reporters are babbling on ad nauseam about the possibility that the balls are being wound and sewn tighter. But that's all they're doing - babbling. Why doesn't someone get off his butt and go to Costa Rica, where the Rawlings company manufactures the balls, and investigate? How difficult could it be to find the Costa Rican who sets the tension on the winding and sewing gizmos and settle this stupid question for once and for all!

Better yet, someone could send Steve "The Elders of Zion rule the world" Carlton to take a look. They'll save on travel expenses because he can get one of his buddies to beam him down.

Boxers or briefs? I can't believe you asked that question, fella. Seriously, Curmudgeons wear cups, because somebody's always trying to kick us where it counts.

Food? Thanks for asking. You read the column, don't you? Food is one of my favorite subjects.

Let's start with chicken, as in "free-range chicken." The politically correct prefer these birds because they are not caged. They wander around eating bugs, grit, grass and grain. Shortly after the new White House chef was hired, he said he would serve such "alternatively produced birds" to the Clintons and their guests. "We're going to be adamant on free-range chickens," he said. That was the only time he mentioned free-range chickens. Tyson Foods of Arkansas sells the caged kind.

Children plot revenge against teacher with sex-abuse claims

By DEBRA HALE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — When 11 fourth-graders accused their substitute teacher of molesting them, authorities were ready to believe them. Even the teacher agreed that children so young rarely lie about such things.

This time, they did lie — prodded, police say, by a classmate who had offered them $1 apiece to accuse the teacher falsely.

"What's so scary — and so sad — is that you've got 9-year-old kids sophisticated enough to know they can get a teacher by saying he fondled them," Chicago Teachers Union spokeswoman Jackie Gallagher said.

"You just don't want to think that our little kids who you're still reading nursery rhymes to are figuring they're going to stick it to their teacher."

Albert Thompson told police his class at Fuller Elementary School on Chicago's South Side became unruly during his May 9 assignment. He said some children ran out of the classroom, and he had to stand by the door to keep others inside.

When Thompson threatened to report their misbehavior, a 9-year-old girl offered to pay 10 classmates — nine girls and a boy — $1 each if they joined her in claiming that Thompson fondled them, police said.

Thompson, 43, never was charged. Police cleared him after some of the children made inconsistent statements and one admitted they had made up the story to get him in trouble. The 9-year-old also recanted, police said.

But he hasn't gotten another teaching assignment. "We're in a society where you're guilty until proven innocent," Thompson said Tuesday. Political correctness and children's rights "overrode my rights," he said.

At the same time, even Thompson said the case was unusual. "For every case like mine, there are nine cases" where a child really was abused, he said.

"This is really the exception," said Bette L. Bottoms, an assistant psychology professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago who has researched the use of child witnesses in sexual abuse cases. "Let's not use this as an example to discredit children in general."

Lt. Robert Hargesheimer said the children probably had not thought through their actions and how the allegations "could damage this guy personally and professionally."

The district still must review the police report before giving Thompson more teaching assignments, said schools spokesman Dawne Simmons.

School officials are also trying to decide how to punish the youngsters.

"What these kids have done is as evil in many ways as the kid who poisoned a teacher's coffee cup or as the kid who points a knife at the teacher," Gallagher said.

But she added that she thinks the children will benefit more from counseling than severe punishment. Erin Sorenson, executive director of the Children's Advocacy Center of Northwest Cook County in suburban Hoffman Estates, said the children need to be made aware that their actions have consequences.

She suggested community service, letters of apology to Thompson or deductions from the children's allowances to show that police investigations cost money.

Thompson said he hopes to turn his ordeal into something positive by becoming an advocate for abused and molested children.

He wasn't sure if he wanted to return to substitute teaching. He said he thought he'd be better off teaching Bible studies at his church.

Woman Guard officer files sex harassment case against pilots

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A woman Air National Guard officer has filed a sexual harassment complaint against several male pilots, alleging they ridiculed her in a secret scrapbook full of sexual comments and pornographic pictures.

The book, disguised as a military log and known as the "Hog Log," was maintained by a San Antonio squadron and later obtained by the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Capt. Margaret Maestas, who is in charge of equal-opportunity grievances for the 149th Fighter Group, filed the complaint against the pilots about three weeks ago.

"It was shocking to me," Ms. Maestas said. "I was very angry, very upset and just wondering why they would have those perceptions of me."

The comments about Maestas were written on a document that defines the Air National Guard's policy against sexual harassment.

Col. Rodney McNeley, the Texas Guard's chief of staff, said Maj. Gen. Sam Turk, adjutant general of Texas, has ordered an investigation.

"I can't say anything until we find out if it's true or not," McNeley said. "First you have to have an investigation. I don't know who all is involved in it."

The pilots belong to the 20-member 182nd Air National Guard squadron in the 149th Fighter Group at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio. Its members fly $26 million-dollar F-16s.

Logbooks are supposed to be used for government business, but in the Hog Log pilots in the 182nd used it to catalog various events and sexual comments about co-workers and public figures.

The logbook includes photos of nude men and women, and belittles former U.S. presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter and former Defense Secretary Les Aspin.

One entry in the book shows a photo of an obese nude woman who is advertising sexual services.

The pilots also make fun of Hispanic Lt. Col. Ramiro Rodriguez, commander of the 149th Resource Management Squadron at Kelly.

A "Far Side" cartoon shows dinosaurs, including one with a sombrero, and the altered caption referring to "Tyrannosaurus Mex." Next to dinosaur is "LTC Rod" with an arrow pointing to it.

Rodriguez was among those who filed discrimination complaints that prompted a yearlong state and federal equal-opportunity investigation of the Texas Guard in 1992.

Investigators from the National Guard and the Governor's Office found that Rodriguez was discriminated against when he was repeatedly denied promotion to colonel.

"I've never seen anything like that," said retired Maj. Gen. Belisario Flores, who had been assistant adjutant general of the Texas Air National Guard for 15 years.

NATO offers 'special partnership' to Russia

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO agreed today to offer a "special partnership" to Russia as a way of overcoming its objections to joining the alliance's new military cooperation program for former Warsaw Pact foes.

Details were sketchy on what the special arrangement would entail, although it was clear it would enable Moscow to have close consultations with the allies on security matters and other issues.

But a NATO official stressed it would not give Russia a seat in private decision-making councils or allow it to veto alliance decisions.

The special relationship would be separate from the Partnership for Peace program, which was approved at a January summit of President Clinton and other alliance leaders as a way mainly to draw former Warsaw Pact adversaries closer.

The NATO official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the ambassadors of the 16 allied nations agreed "NATO should offer Russia a special partnership which would take into account that Russia is an important country."

Moscow has delayed enrolling as a partner, making clear it wants to be dealt with as a world military power and demanding special standing in the partnership program. NATO refused to give Russia a special rank within the program that would set it above other participants.

The decision on a separate special status came a week before Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev is scheduled to visit the Western military alliance's headquarters.

Grachev is to meet with U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry and other alliance defense chiefs.

Eighteen nations, mostly in eastern Europe, have joined the partnership program, which allows them to take part for the first time in military exercises, peacekeeping and other NATO activities.

Most partnership nations see the plan as a first step toward full membership in NATO and the security guarantees that would go with it.

Fearful of isolating Russia, NATO so far has rebuffed requests from Poland, Hungary and others for full membership. Russian President Boris Yeltsin has warned NATO against moving its border eastward.

Nations in the program are Albania, Azerbaijan, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia, Sweden, Turkmenistan and Ukraine.

Weight gain at age 30 linked with breast cancer risk

DALLAS (AP) — Women who put on weight around age 30 — even just an extra 10 or 20 pounds — may substantially increase their risk of breast cancer later in life, researchers say.

Researchers have long noticed that obesity is linked with breast cancer. So they set out to see if there is any particular time of life when gaining weight is especially hazardous.

"We found that the most important decade in a woman's life was the third decade," said Dr. Norcen Aziz. "Of all the decades in which you should lose that extra weight, it's the third."

After lung cancer, breast cancer is the leading cancer killer of U.S. women. An estimated 46,000 people will die from it this year.

Many factors are thought to influence a woman's risk, but most of them, such as a family history of the disease, are beyond an individual's control.

This is why experts are especially eager to find risk factors such as weight that can be changed.

The latest study was conducted by Aziz and colleagues at the H. Lee Moffitt Cancer Center and Research Institute in Tampa, Fla. It was presented Tuesday at a meeting of the American Society for Clinical Oncology.

The researchers studied 218 women with newly diagnosed breast cancer and compared them with 436 healthy women of the same age.

They found that half the cancer patients and one-third of the healthy women had gained more than 15 pounds between ages 16 to 30.

Two-thirds of the cancer patients and half of the comparison group had gained this much between age 30 and their current age.

At age 30, the women who went on to get breast cancer weighed an average of 131 pounds, while the comparison group weighed 120. By age 40, the women who got breast cancer weighed 139 pounds, compared with 128 for the healthy women.

They calculated that women who carry 10 pounds more than normal at age 30 increase their risk of breast cancer by 23 percent. With an extra 15 pounds, their risk increases 37 percent, and with 20 pounds, it goes up 52 percent.

"It means a 10-pound difference may be significant," Aziz said.

U.N. to resume flights to Tuzla airport

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — NATO warplanes were close to attacking Bosnian Serb artillery but held off after the Serbs promised to stop shelling Tuzla airport, the United Nations said today.

U.N. flights, interrupted when Serb shells landed Tuesday at the airport in northeastern Bosnia shortly after a plane landed, were scheduled to resume today following the Serb guarantees, U.N. officials said.

Ten tank shells exploded just off the landing strip, damaging a building but causing no casualties, said Maj. Rob Annink, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo. NATO planes were ready to attack Serb positions within minutes, but senior U.N. officials decided not to order a strike after receiving Serb guarantees, he said.

NATO warplanes have struck twice at Serb ground troops, both times near the embattled eastern Muslim enclave of Gorazde. A threat of NATO attack forced Serbs to pull back most heavy weapons from near the capital, Sarajevo.

The U.N. plane was delivering mortar-tracking radar intended to identify sources of mortar fire. Serbs, who have shelled Tuzla periodically for months, say they fear the airport will be used to smuggle arms to forces of Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

In an incident today, a mortar shell hit near the Sarajevo airport but caused no serious damage and U.N. aid flights continued, a U.N. spokesman, Sgt. Christophe Lethiers, said. The mortar shot was a violation of a nearly 3-month truce and a NATO-imposed ban on artillery around Sarajevo.

One man catering business proves to be a success

By RANDAL K. MCGAVOCK
Staff Writer

For one Pampa businessman, work is a party waiting to happen.

Kevin Wade, owner of Kevin's Custom Catering, started his business five years ago in an attempt to do something he enjoyed and is now Pampa's only non-restaurant affiliated catering business.

"One of the reason I call it custom catering is because I have about forty-five entry items that people choose from," Wade said. "The menu varies as far as the vegetables or dessert or what have you. It's sort of a pick and choose thing as far as it goes."

In the food business for almost 15 years, Wade only came to Pampa five years ago.

In that time he has made a go of a business that is at best challenging and time consuming.

"The biggest problem with a lot of the parties is finding a location to hold their party in Pampa," he said.

Search for the right spot is just one of the services Wade offers as a caterer.

He also formulates the menu, advises customers in ordering, shops and cooks. With other duties he's often helped by his wife or a handful of others who help him with the serving.

Other than catering for a party, including some of up to a hundred people sometimes, Wade also cooks on a weekly basis for people and delivers the food to their home. Besides main courses, he also specializes in cheesecakes.

"I sell a lot of just cheese cakes," he said. "I have . . . (about) 14 different varieties of cheesecakes."

One of his customers favorite desserts is a rich chocolate chip cheesecake made with a brownie crust.

While catering is enough to satisfy Wade at the present time, he said he has considered opening a combination catering business/restaurant.

"Right now, this is going good and I'd like to stay with it," he said. "In the future, I'd like to maybe look into going into restaurant work, but that's so unpredictable. I'd like to go into it small and expand from that."

Two of the Wade's more popular recipes he often gets request for from his customers follow. In addition, a recipe for a cheesecake is included.

Zucchini Mostaccioli
4 small zucchinis, cubed
1 lg. yellow pepper, diced
1 green pepper, diced
1 small onion, diced
3 cloves of garlic, minced
1 tbs. Italian seasoning
2 tbs. canola oil
2 tbs. light margarine
1 lg. package of mostaccioli pasta
1/2 cup of grated parmesan cheese
Cook pasta according to package directions. Meanwhile in a large skillet sauté oil, margarine, vegetable and garlic until tender. Add Italian seasoning and stir to blend. When pasta is soft, drain. In a large mixing bowl, combine pasta, sautéed mixture and cheese. Stir gently to mix. Salt and pepper to taste. Serve warm.

Makes eight to 10 servings.
Variation: Add three cups of boiled boneless chicken or turkey breasts and top with two cups of mozzarella cheese. Heat and serve.

Stuffed Chicken Italiano
1 lbs. frozen broccoli
1 tsp. canola oil
1 small onion, chopped
3/4 cup grated mozzarella cheese
6 skinless chicken breasts
Cook broccoli until tender crisp (boiled or steamed). Set aside. Heat oil in skillet and sauté until soft, about 5 minutes. Add broccoli and 1/2 cup of cheese. Mix well an cool. Pound chicken breasts until about 1/4-inch thick. Divide broccoli mixture until evenly divided. Roll chicken around filling and secure with a toothpick if necessary. Place seam side down in a baking dish coated with cooking spray. Pour sauce over chicken and sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake at 350° for 30 minutes or until chicken is done.

Serves six.
Sauce:
1 16 oz. can of tomato sauce
1 tbs. parmesan cheese
2 tbs. dried basil
1/2 tsp. dried oregano
1/4 tsp dried thyme
Bring to a boil in a medium saucepan. Reduce heat, simmer 20 minutes. Stir occasionally.

Cheesecake
1 cup of graham cracker crumbs
3 tbs. sugar
3 tbs. melted butter
4 to 8 oz. package of cream cheese
1 1/4 cup of sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
3 lg. eggs
1 pint of sour cream

1 cup of sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
Combine crumbs, 3 tbs. of sugar and margarine and press into the bottom of a 9-inch springform pan.

Mix the next four ingredients until smooth (about 10 min.) and pour over crumb crust. Bake at 250° for 35 minutes.

Mix sour cream, remaining sugar and vanilla. Spread easily over cake. Cook ten more minutes. Turn the oven off, but don't remove until oven is at room temperature.

When cooking cheesecake, stir filling gently after adding the eggs and any remaining ingredients. Vigorous beating will incorporate too much air, which causes to cheesecake to puff up, then fall and crack.

To check for doneness, gently shake the pan rather. Don't insert a knife. The hole caused by the knife may grow in a large crack. Overbaking can result in a dry texture and, in many cases, causes the middle of the cake to fall.

Great food awaits a second wave of invaders

By SUZY PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Forget cholesterol, forgo guilt and sample mouth-watering Norman specialties based on cream, butter, cheese, pork, lamb and beef. Less fatty classics are apple concoctions, seafood and chicken.

The civilian invasion to commemorate the 50th anniversary of D-Day will bring out the best in Norman cuisine for veterans, tourists and just plain gourmets.

Yanks, Britons and Canadians coming ashore 50 years ago probably weren't offered Caen-style tripe cooked in apple cider, and may not have liked it anyway.

"Oh yes, we'll show off dishes like Norman tripe and Vire andouillette, or tripe sausage," said chef Michel Bruneau of the restaurant La Bourdrie in Caen, capital of the Calvados region. "But we're also offering seafood, duck and fabulous beef."

Bruneau, whose establishment is known for two stars in the Michelin Guide and a decor typical of old Normandy, is a fanatical booster of his native cuisine.

"I truly think we have the best produce in France right now," he said. "Except for wine."

Normans make delicious hard cider and Calvados, an even harder apple brandy, but no wine.

Normans are so famed as trenchermen that the "trou Normand," a pause for a digestive swig of Calvados between courses, became known around the world.

But sometimes it is taken too far: A trou Normand between salad and pasta in a Californian restaurant is downright pretentious.

Using the fish and shellfish so abundant along the coast, Norman chefs make Marmite Dieppoise, a rich fish stew, and moules mariniere, mussels cooked in broth and white wine with a dollop of cream.

"I bet the Canadians and Americans will like my hot oysters from the channel with the fondou or leek puree," said Pierre Pimmel, whose Auberge du Vieux Clocher in seaside Honfleur has a set menu starting at about $20.

Pimmel's Norman tart is a hit, made with tangy apples and drops of fiery Calvados.

Another restaurateur, Daniel Tuboeuf, says recent visitors from Canada loved his tripe "gateau"

NORMAN-STYLE GUINEA HEN

(Four servings)
1 guinea hen, about 2 1/2 lbs.
2 lbs. reinette apples (medium tart)
1/2 cup Calvados
1 1/2 sticks butter (6 oz.)
Salt, milled pepper
Generously butter guinea hen with about 8 tablespoons (one stick) butter, salt and pepper to taste. Cook in oven preheated to 370 F for 35-40 minutes, until bird is golden, cooked through.

Peel, core and slice apples fairly thinly and saute gently in 4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) butter until they start to brown. When bird has cooked 30 minutes, remove from oven, pour on Calvados and flame. Add sliced apples, return to oven 5-10 minutes. Carve bird and serve, with Calvados and juices as sauce. Stir in butter and a little stock if necessary for the sauce.

Suggested side dishes: fresh green beans and crisply sauteed potatoes.

OYSTERS IN LEEK-CURRY SAUCE

(Four servings)
24 medium-large live oysters on half-shell, opened at last minute and drained
4 whites of leeks, cleaned, cut into julienne strips
2 tablespoons butter, 2 more for gratin
1 tablespoon curry powder
2 cups heavy cream
Two-thirds cup bread crumbs
Three-fourths cup grated Gruyere or emmenthal cheese
Melt 2 tablespoons butter in heavy-bottomed pan, cook leeks slowly until they start to soften (2-3 minutes). Add curry and heavy cream; continue cooking very slowly, stirring, until mixture pureed.

Preheat oven to 475 F. Cover oysters with cream-leek sauce. Sprinkle with cheese and bread crumbs (about 1 teaspoon per oyster), dot with butter. Arrange oysters in heavy shallow baking tin and cook 8-10 minutes, until oysters are bubbling and golden.

Serve with chilled Chablis or similar white wine.

cold or hot.

For Rouennais duck, a famous Normandy dish, a specially raised half-wild bird is killed by smothering, carefully pressed and cooked rapidly. The filets are served rare, in juices obtained during pressing.

Normandy is noted for cheeses, foremost among them Camembert, Pont l'Eveque and the smelly Livarot. According to cheese experts, such as author Pierre Androuet, "Camembert is not always as good as could be, since it should be artisan-made, supple, neither dry nor overripe, and ammoniac-scented. It is best from late spring to winter."

The "invention" of Camembert is attributed to Marie Harel, in 1790. At least as important, according to Androuet, was a Monsieur Ridet, who devised the characteristic round wooden box in 1890, making it possible to store and ship the cheese.

Like Champagne and much other French produce, the name Camembert de Normandie is protected by "appellation" law. "Camembert" may come from anywhere, but Camembert de Normandie must be from the Pays d'Auge in Normandy, and be made from unpasteurized milk.

with two kinds of apples and fish "sausage."

Tuboeuf returned to Normandy after success in Paris, he said, "because life is more tranquil here and the produce is better than ever."

According to Bruneau, "We have top quality in everything these days, even vegetables." He is so fussy about seafood that he closes when the fishermen take a day off.

"After the war, produce was fine," he said. "Then, during the '60s and '70s, it went down. Nobody cared much, and tourists swallowed anything. Now standards are up again, and restaurateurs want to cater to it."

Bruneau especially admires the well-marbled beef, which he says is labeled "premier cru," like a fine wine.

Besides char-grilled beef, his specialties include medallions of sole in Calvados-cream sauce with a hint of fish broth; guinea-hen flamed with Calvados; potatoes with snail-Camembert-cream stuffing, and a symphony of apple-based desserts, from sorbets of green or red apples to stuffed apple crepes.

The region also produces goose and duck foie gras: "Excellent quality," Bruneau said of the fatted goose liver, which can be served

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Black Sheep" whose family was upset because she fell in love with her brother-in-law after his wife had died.

Well, this is what happened in my family: My mother had three brothers — Al, Carl and Ed.

Al married a girl named Bev, Carl married Diane, and Ed married Faye.

Within six months of each other (22 years ago), Al and Diane died, leaving Bev and Carl alone; two years later, Bev and Carl were married and lived happily together for 15 years.

When Carl died (Faye had died a few years before that), Bev and Eddie eventually got married. So, my Aunt Bev was married to all three brothers!

All of this was done with the complete support of everyone in the family. It seemed only natural to us that Bev would marry these men she had known so well as family members for most of her life, and I think "Black Sheep" should do the same.

DOUG IN OREGON

DEAR DOUG: I confess I had a little trouble following all those convoluted relationships. (Does that make Bev her own grandma?)

DEAR ABBY: My 7-year-old daughter and I just returned from seeing an animated film at the movie theater. We were enjoying the show until we heard a telephone ringing in the theater! A woman sitting two rows ahead of us answered her cellular phone, and then proceeded to carry on a loud, long conversation. It was very annoying to everyone around her.

Abby, please tell your readers to leave their cellular phones at home while they are at the theater. Or if they are expecting an important call, to just stay home.

MRS. VICKY PARKEY
IN DALLAS

DEAR MRS. PARKEY: Cellular telephones are very handy in emergency situations, but it is extremely rude to carry on a long, loud conversation in a theater.

I fear that the intrusion of cellular phones may get worse before it gets better.

DEAR ABBY: Your publication last fall of my odd name, Helen Church, has had some happy results. I found two very special persons whom I thought I had lost: a dear college friend, and a cousin whom I had tried unsuccessfully to locate. But there's more!

One day recently, my phone rang and a man's voice announced, "This is Leon Church in Nashville, Tenn." Abby, my husband, Leon Church, died 10 years ago, and I had never heard of another man with that name. After a few speechless seconds he continued, "And my wife's name is Helen Church!"

I said, "Are you serious?" He assured me he was, then went on to tell me about himself and his wife of 14 years — during which time no one had apparently noticed that her name might be considered odd.

So my fun-loving Dad could no longer claim to be the only man who had raised Helen Church.

Thank you, Dear Abby, for helping to keep my 83-year-long life interesting.

Mentally retarded have understanding of God

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

Like a lot of his peers, the Rev. Roger Peters equated the ability to receive communion with the capacity to understand the elements of faith involved.

So when it first came time for him to distribute communion to severely mentally retarded individuals, Peters had the feeling going in that this was absurd.

What he discovered, instead, were unforgettable acts of faith in the faces of those who came before him.

"In those moments, I experienced the clearest and deepest experience of the holy I have ever had in my life," said the United Methodist minister and former head of the religion division of the American Association on Mental Retardation.

"The absurdity wasn't my communing persons with profound mental retardation. The absurdity was my thinking I could understand the mystery of God's presence reaching out to us."

Now, the understanding long felt by those who care for and work with retarded people that they experience God in their own way is being backed up by new research.

In a recent issue of the Journal of Psychology and Theology, researchers at Roberts Wesleyan College in Rochester, N.Y., reported that severe and profoundly disabled people seem to have meaningful perceptions of God.

Thirty-three people of varying degrees of retardation were shown 15 images of God, ranging from a picture of a bearded man to symbols such as crosses on a hill.

Only three people selected all or none of the pictures, while the rest indicated in their selections clear images of God.

Severely and profoundly retarded individuals most often selected personal images such as a king on a throne and a bearded man, while mildly retarded individuals chose a mixture of personal images and symbols such as crosses on a hill.

Rodney L. Bassett, a psychology professor at Roberts Wesleyan, said the research shattered his old concept of God relating to individuals solely in an intellectual way.

"Before this research, if people told me they were religious, my first question would be: 'What do you believe?' After this research, I can't keep it that simple."

Referring back to the passage in the 19th chapter of the Gospel of Matthew in which Jesus asked that little children be allowed to come to him, for to such belongs the kingdom of heaven, Bassett said he thinks the biblical text is saying that God relates to people in more than just rational, abstract, intellectual ways.

"God is really quite big, and chances are he is bigger than I can ever imagine," he said.

The halting, broken language of a retarded individual simply inquiring "Holy communion?" before a service had convinced Peters long ago that a profound faith and mental retardation can go together.

Without glorifying mental limitations, Peters said, he thinks retarded individuals can be seen as a spiritual treasure for showing people the possibility of "that kind of poignant experience of the holy ... that touches us at the center of our being."

The example in Matthew and other instances in the Gospels where Jesus gathers the lame and the disabled into the faith can have beneficial lessons for others, said Peters, director of the Selingsgrove Center in Pennsylvania.

"Except you become simply who you are as a vulnerable human being, you cannot enter the kingdom of God," he said.

"People with profound limitations don't have any pretenses, and they teach us something when they do that."

Dave vs. Jay: A war of symbols and laughs

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At some point during King Johnny's reign, late-night talk television ceased to be simply a matter of entertainment. It took on the trappings of myth.

Sure, people watched "The Tonight Show" for the jokes and chatter. But they saw more than that. They saw themselves. As their cultural arbiter, Johnny truly was The Great Carnac.

With Carson's abdication in May 1992, the mythical component of late-night TV grew even stronger, reaching far beyond what viewers saw on the screen.

Ever since, the "Late-Night War" (a term befitting the heroes and clashes so common in mythology) has brought a sense of heightened import to everything that happens, on or off the air, to its principal combatants, David Letterman and Jay Leno.

This is a very good thing for Letterman. Not only is his CBS "Late Show" more entertaining than the Leno-hosted "Tonight," maybe just as importantly, his mythical underpinnings far exceed Leno's.

Even Leno knows it. He sums up the Saga of Dave this way: "You work for a place, you're underappreciated there, you leave, your boss tries to get you back, you tell him to stick it, you go across the street and build a bigger business. It's a WONDERFUL story!"

But Letterman's triumph has been more than a matter of getting a better job and building a bigger business. He prevailed in one of humankind's most primal struggles: the search for a father. He found one in the warm embrace of CBS.

Leno's story is quite different. Instead of telling his underappreciative employer (NBC, just as with Letterman) to stick it, Leno took it. With undying devotion, he presses on in his quest to win approval not only from viewers, but from a soulless guardian that almost fired him in an effort to retain the other son's services.

This is the mythic baggage that Leno has carried with him night after night for the past two years. It is a story of betrayal that has never stopped detracting from the show he works so hard at.

Now, each warrior has invaded the terrain of the other. The New York-based Letterman took "Late Show" to Los Angeles last week. Leno's "Tonight," which calls Burbank home, is midway through its five-night New York stay.

Monday, Leno and bandleader Branford Marsalis made a comic romp through Manhattan. They swiped Donald Trump's wallet outside Trump Tower, and in Central Park played Frisbee with a manhole cover.

The segment wasn't nearly as funny — or symbolically potent — as a similarly prepped piece on "Late Show" a week earlier, with Letterman and his bandleader, Paul Shaffer, frolicking in Hollywood. In one telling gag, they made a few modifications to that legendary sign up on the hill. When they were done, it read: "DAVEWOOD." Indeed.

Monday night, Leno reached back into time with his surprise guest, Jack Paar, who preceded Carson as "Tonight" host during a legendary five-year stretch a generation ago.

But Paar was little more than an historical curiosity after Friday's bombshell appearance by Carson on Letterman's show.

This, at last, was a clear sign from the reclusive god on high. As a result of the 76 ovation-filled seconds Carson spent on stage, 43 of them enthroned behind Letterman's desk, he sanctified Letterman. And in the bargain, damned Leno.

Ever the good sport, Leno portrayed the episode as a gesture of friendship, nothing more.

"Everybody has their favorite," the preternaturally chipper Leno said at a press conference Monday morning. "I think Carson genuinely likes David and probably prefers David. That's fine."

David Letterman outside his New York studios.

Carson, according to Leno, "was able to go on and have fun and look good, without making it look like, 'Oh, it's a slap in the face to the other guy.'"

Most viewers saw different. Clearly, so did Letterman. No wonder he wore a grimace of almost orgasmic delight sitting in the guest chair, at Carson's right hand.

"Man! That was great!" said Dave when it was all over. "That was GREAT!"

Three days later, Leno was in New York City, otherwise known as Lettermanhattan.

"I don't think there's any sort of turf war," Leno told reporters. "I haven't seen any turf since I've been here. It's all pretty much pavement, actually."

A cute quip, but one that demonstrated Leno's painfully literal view of the late-night landscape.

Despite what Leno thinks, the Late-Night War is a war of symbols as well as laughs. Without the acceptance of his symbolic father or his patron saint, he is fighting a war for which he's poorly armed.

TENNIS
MIAMI (AP) — Jennifer Capriati's former coaches are divided on whether she'll resume her tennis career.

The troubled teen's slide from stardom continued with her arrest Monday for possession of marijuana at a motel in Coral Gables, Fla.

Capriati left the WTA Tour last fall and has given no indication when she might rejoin the circuit.

"There's no doubt she's going to play again. There's no doubt she can be at the top of the mountain," said Rick Macci, who coached Capriati from the time she was 10 until she turned pro just before her 14th birthday.

"She has grown up in front of the whole world — what you eat, who you date, what you drive. Sometimes it's easier to turn that button off. Obviously this doesn't help it. But when it's all said and done, we'll look at this as just part of her growing up," Macci said Tuesday.

Coincidentally, the June issue of Tennis magazine includes a story about Capriati's absence from the tour. Among those quoted is Tom Gullikson, who was Capriati's coach when she first turned pro.

"I think she's got a lot of work to do if she's ever to come back," Gullikson told Tennis. "And she has to want to do it for herself; she can't be coming back because of others' expectations."

"The thing is, I honestly never got the sense that she really loved the game, the way you sense that a Pete Sampras or a Jimmy Connors really loves it. To be great for a long, long time, you've got to love it."

Capriati, 18, was secluded with her parents Tuesday in Boca Raton, Fla. She couldn't be reached for comment, but her agent issued a statement on behalf of the family thanking the public for its "good wishes during this difficult time."

Her arrest came five months after she was cited by Tampa police for allegedly shoplifting a $15 ring from a mall.

Rockets soar to easy victory

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
 AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The team from "Choke City" didn't gag this time.

The Houston Rockets, dominating from the opening tip, opened a 21-point halftime lead and poured it on in the second half Tuesday for an easy 109-86 victory over the Phoenix Suns on that gave Houston a 3-2 lead in the series.

It was the first victory for a home team in the series, and it was nothing like the last game in the Summit — the Rockets' Game 2 loss in which they blew a 20-point fourth-quarter lead.

That dreadful performance inspired Houston headline writers to plaster "Choke

City" across the front pages of the local papers.

"It may have been a blessing in disguise when we lost the first two games," Hakeem Olajuwon said. "We forced ourselves to come back together as a team."

Olajuwon and Otis Thorpe each scored 20 points and Kenny Smith had 16 for Houston, which finally shut down Kevin Johnson and won its third straight game.

"We dug that big hole for ourselves and it could have been over and it would have been a horrible summer," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "We took it from the opening tip and they just kept going at it and going at it."

The Rockets had a pair of early 9-0 spurts, the second of which gave them a 27-13 lead in the first quarter. They didn't let up in the second period, opening the quarter with a 10-1 run en route to a 58-37 halftime lead.

"That wasn't our team out there tonight," Phoenix coach Paul Westphal said. "That's one of the worst games we've played all season and we know we have to play better and we're going to do it."

The Rockets were running and hitting from inside and outside, and the Suns just couldn't keep pace.

Charles Barkley, stretching his aching back during timeouts, scored 20 first-half points. He finished with 30 and sat out much of the fourth quarter.

"They played with a lot of emotion and energy," Barkley said. "They jumped on us and we were never able to recover. I don't ever worry about a basketball game. That's my job, not my life."

Johnson, who scored 38 points in each of the two previous games, cooled off with 10 points. Oliver Miller added 13 for the Suns.

"We have to applaud the Rockets," Johnson said. "They put forth a great effort. I'm very embarrassed but we're fortunate that we still have a chance to win."

Olajuwon and Thorpe each scored 11 points in the third period and the Rockets took an 87-61 lead into the fourth. Houston opened a 32-point lead with 9:09 to go at 95-63 and Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich pulled Thorpe and Olajuwon, allowing the Suns to close the gap with reserves late in the game.

"I wouldn't say this was the most emotional game tonight," Thorpe said. "The third game win was the sweetest. But we had to do something to establish the home court again."

All the news wasn't positive for Houston, however. Vernon Maxwell had to sit out briefly with a hand injury and Carl Herrera was lost for the game with a dislocated shoulder in the second quarter.

If the Rockets wrap up the series on Thursday, they would be only the second team in NBA playoff history to lose the first two home games of a seven-game playoff series and come back to win the series. The Los Angeles Lakers did it to the San Francisco Warriors in 1969.

 Fototime defeated VFW, 4-2, in the season opener for both teams Tuesday night in the Babe Ruth 13-15 year-old League.

Fototime scored first when Jerren Miller walked, stole second, then scored on a throwing error at third for a 1-0 lead at the end of the first inning.

In the bottom of the second, Clint Smith walked and scored when Miller laced a double to center field to make the score, 2-0.

Neither team scored the next two innings as Fototime pitcher Augie Larsen allowed only one runner to reach the base the first five innings.

In the bottom of the fifth, Jerren

Miller and Aaron Davis walked and both scored on a throwing error. That made the score, 4-0.

In the top of the sixth, Jeremy Knutson got the first VFW hit when he lined a double to left centerfield. He stole third, but was left stranded at third as Larsen struck out the next VFW batter.

In the top of the seventh, Clint Curtis led off the inning when he lined a single down the thirdbase line. He then stole second and third, and scored when Jason Lee laced a triple to left centerfield. He later scored on a balk against Larson.

Larson then struck out the next two batters to end the game. Larson went the distance to pick up the win. Lee wnet the distance for VFW and suffered the loss.

Larson faced 27 batters, striking out 17, walking three, allowing three hits and one earned run. Leafaced 28 batters, striking out 13, walking eight, allowing two hits and one earned run.

Unser's retirement marks end of an era

By STEVE HERMAN
 AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The end of an era just inched a bit closer.

With Al Unser's retirement on Tuesday, Mario Andretti became the only driver still active among a group that dominated Indy racing for more than three decades.

"I think you just want to be respected as a race car driver. That's my life," said Unser, a four-time Indianapolis 500 winner and father of Al Unser Jr., the pole-position starter for the May 29 race.

"You go up through life and you hope you've made the right decisions and you hope that when you get through, or when it comes to an end, that people will remember you as what you are at the time, that you were competitive and that you could win. I don't know what else to say."

Few drivers have won more than Unser, or have lasted as long.

A.J. Foyt, the first four-time Indy winner, retired at age 58 one year ago, tearfully deciding not to try for his 36th consecutive Indy 500 start in order to devote full time to his team as an owner. Andretti, 54, who plans to retire at the end of the season, is in the lineup for the 29th and final time.

Rick Mears, the youngest of the bunch at 42, retired 17 months ago after four victories at Indianapolis. Bobby Unser, Al's older brother, retired at age 47 after his third Indy victory in 1981.

Johnny Rutherford, 56, a three-time winner, and Gordon Johncock, 57, a two-time champion, have driven in 24 Indy races apiece. They haven't officially retired, but nobody's beating down their doors with offers for rides.

"I'm very proud of my dad's decision," Little Al said. "I know it was very hard for him to make it. We talked about it, and the Indianapolis 500 means a lot to my father. That's why it was especially hard for him to decide this now. We both know ... he still could be a winner at this race track."

Including Andretti's appearance this year, Indy's Magnificent Seven will bow out with a combined 175 starts. They have finished among the top three 44 times and have won the world's most famous race 21 of the past 33 years. Their careers spanned a technological revolution that made race cars safer and surgical breakthroughs that kept them going longer than previous generations.

"The way I came up was through the hard ranks of dirt track racing through jalopies and sprint cars and midgets and all that, which doesn't usually happen today," said Unser, who will turn 55 on race day.

"Like I've said many times, 20 years ago or 30 years ago if you had asked me if I'd still be racing, I'd say no. And here I am. Through the ranks of all the racing, it's been good to me," Big Al said. "To quit makes it hard."

While Mears never looked back, never regretted his decision, some of the other old guard drivers found it more difficult to unbuckle their helmets for the final time.

New league will split into two divisions

By DOUG TUCKER
 AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — There's going to be a lot of yearning for the good old days before sports fans get the Big 12 sorted out.

As proposed Tuesday by football coaches and athletic directors, the new league will split into North and South Divisions — but only for football and basketball. And maybe baseball. All other sports will compete as one big conference.

Football will have two champions, basketball one. In basketball, each school will meet the others at least once a year. But some Big 12 football teams could go two full seasons without slapping leather.

Oklahoma and Nebraska, one of college football's premier rivalries, may no longer play every year. Then again they may — but not always as a conference game.

Squeezing 12 teams into one season is not like fitting eight.

"We've elevated this whole group of schools to a new level," Colorado athletic director Bill Marolt said on Tuesday, a truly historic day for the 12 institutions. "I think in order to tell our story and to promote and market, we have to have a certain level of consistency."

Everything announced Tuesday is nothing more than recommendations from coaches and athletic directors who were concluding three days of meetings, and must be approved by school presidents.

But it seems nearly certain that Oklahoma and Oklahoma State will join Southwest Conference refugees Texas, Baylor, Texas Tech and Texas A&M in the South Division.

This would leave a North Division composed of the other six members of what will soon be known as the former Big Eight — Nebraska, Iowa State, Missouri, Colorado, Kansas and Kansas State.

As proposed, there will be two more football and basketball seasons before the Big 12 gets going in all sports in the 1996-97 academic year.

Then, in every football season, schools would play every team in their division plus three schools in the other division, a 5-3 ratio that will add one conference game to what Big Eight and SWC schools have been used to. Schools would play the other division teams twice every four years, but not necessarily in successive seasons.

Basketball would have a double round-robin format within divisions and single games each year between non-division foes — 16 conference games, all of which would count toward the championship.

All other sports except possibly baseball would play straight conference schedules. Baseball will be dealt with later.

The 5-3 football format presents a problem because it leaves less room for non-conference schedule maneuvers. Many had expected a 5-2 arrangement.

"The feeling was it would be important for a competition rotation to take place in the briefest period of time," said Bob Bockrath, Texas Tech athletic director.

"It doesn't mean we're going to play home-and-home in consecutive years," Marolt said. "We're looking at a mix where you might play home one year, but return that game in two years. That way we can offer the greatest exposure and address the question of the big rivalries, and maximize opportunities for television."

Before deciding on a conference playoff, the Big 12 wants to see what develops in the coming months with the bowl coalition and the NCAA's possible vote on a national playoff.

Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones said most coaches would prefer not to have a playoff if they could be assured of keeping two New Year's Day bowls. The Big Eight has had the Orange and the SWC the Cotton.

"There seems to be ... signals being sent that there's a possibility that we could secure six bowls," Jones said. "A lot of that depends on whether ultimately there's a (NCAA) playoff, a well as coalition issues. But it seems that it could happen."

Also tabled for further discussion were such issues as revenue sharing, governance and the site and structure of the men's and women's basketball tournaments.

Clark's hit gives Rangers 10th-inning win over A's

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Situational hitting won out over situational pitching, and as a result, the Texas Rangers again frustrated the Oakland Athletics.

Will Clark singled home the winning run in the 10th inning for an 8-7 victory, the second straight night Texas beat the A's in extra innings, foiling Oakland rallies both times.

Will Clark

"These two ballgames were like all one team and then all another team," Clark said. "It goes from being hopefully a quick ballgame to, 'Oh no, here we go again.'"

The A's overcame an early 5-0 deficit, took a 7-5 lead and then saw Dennis Eckersley give up a two-out, two-run single to Junior Ortiz that tied it in the ninth.

"It's one of the toughest, if not the toughest, to lose a game with your closer out there and you're within one strike of winning," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "Eck wasn't as sharp as he could be and paid and we paid."

On Monday night, the Athletics staged their biggest rally of the season, coming back from a seven-run deficit before losing 11-7 in 10 innings to the Rangers. They have now lost 23 of their last 27 games.

Texas won this time after Manuel Lee singled off Steve Ontiveros (1-2) to start the 10th. He was sacrificed to second, Jeff Frye walked and Jose Canseco flied out before Clark singled to left field.

"That's a situation you love to be in — game on the line, two outs in the 10th," Clark said. "I was able to throw one out there in left and plate the run.

"It goes back to what we've been talking about — situational hitting, sort of taking what they're giving," Clark said. "Junior takes a slider and manages to hit it to right center off Eckersley. Then Manny hits a breaking ball down the middle to get that next inning going. Those little things just keep it going for you."

Cris Carpenter (2-0) pitched one inning for the victory and former Oakland reliever Rick Honeycutt got three outs for his first save.

Eckersley retired Canseco and Clark in the ninth before giving up three straight hits that tied it at 7. It was Eckersley's fourth blown save in seven chances.

Eckersley, who has more saves than any other reliever since 1988, twice was a strike away from ending the game but couldn't get the last one.

"Nobody feels as bad as I do," Eckersley said. "But I'm not beat. I won't cower."

The Rangers stung Miguel Jimenez five runs in the first two innings. Canseco drove in four of them, including three with his first homer against the team that traded him to Texas in August 1992.

Jimenez gathered himself and blanked Texas for the next five innings, while the A's took a 6-5 lead in the fifth. Neel hit an RBI single and Brent Gates had his second sacrifice fly of the game. Earlier, Neel hit a three-run homer.

Bruce Hurst, making his second start after missing most of the past two seasons with shoulder problems, gave up seven runs on eight hits in four-plus innings.

Neel's homer capped a four-run third that pulled Oakland into a tie at 5. Neel hit his sixth homer, and Berroa led off the third with his seventh homer.

David Hulse walked and Jeff Frye singled ahead of Canseco's homer, his ninth, in the first inning.

Canseco had an RBI single in the second. Rusty Greer, who had three hits, including a homer in his major league debut Monday night, added a run-scoring single for a 5-0 lead.

Notes: The starting catchers for both teams had to leave the game early. Ivan Rodriguez of Texas had muscle spasms in his neck in the bottom of the third and was replaced by Junior Ortiz. Oakland's Terry Steinbach left in the third with a bruised left ankle after fouling off a pitch prior to singling. He was replaced by Hemond, who threw out Hulse attempting to steal in the sixth. That ended Hulse's consecutive-steal streak at 20.

Twins end Yankees' win streak

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Shane Mack and Chuck Knoblauch didn't stop running until the New York Yankees' 10-game winning streak had ended.

Mack, who earlier hit an inside-the-park homer and a double, capped a three-run eighth inning with an RBI double as the Minnesota Twins beat the Yankees 5-4 Tuesday night.

Knoblauch kept the rally alive by fouling off six pitches before looping a single to right field and then tagging up and hustling to second on pinch-hitter Chip Hale's fly ball.

"We're not supposed to beat the Yankees, a powerhouse club," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "We talked about playing aggressively."

Said Knoblauch, who had three singles: "When you're aggressive on the basepaths, good things are going to happen more times than not. When you've got a team coming into your home park that has won 10 games in a row, you take out all the stops."

The win was Minnesota's eighth in nine games. The Twins (19-19) are at .500 for the first time since April 24, 1993.

The Yankees had been 24-0 when leading after seven innings. The Twins were 1-18 when trailing after seven.

Jimmy Key held the Twins to five hits and led 4-2 before Minnesota took advantage of New York's bullpen.

"Jimmy had a blister" on his index finger, Yankees manager Buck Showalter said. "We had to get him out of there. We didn't want to take any chances."

Bob Wickman relieved to start the eighth, gave up Matt Walbeck's double and was replaced by Sterling Hitchcock, who gave up Knoblauch's one-out RBI single.

Xavier Hernandez (2-1) came in and retired Hale on a fly to center fielder Bernie Williams, with Knoblauch tagging up and hustling into second.

"I thought Williams was fairly deep so I went for it," Knoblauch said. "I put my head down. I wasn't even looking."

After Knoblauch scored the tying run on Kirby Puckett's single, Mack sent a 2-2 pitch just over Williams' head for his second double of the game.

Mack is batting .422 and has hit in 11 of 12 games since coming off the disabled list. He has at least two hits in seven of the games.

"It was no fun sitting and watching," said Mack, who still experiences pain in his throwing shoulder. "I had the best spring of my career and felt great at the plate, but I couldn't throw and had to go on the DL. It's nice to be back."

Mark Guthrie (2-1) worked a scoreless eighth inning in relief of Jim Deshaies. Rick Aguilera — pitching for the first time since May 7, when he injured his right biceps — got the last three outs to earn his seventh save. Aguilera gave up a one-out double to Paul O'Neill, but struck out Wade Boggs and Daryl Boston.

The Yankees last won 10 in a row in 1987. They had not won 11 straight since 1985.

"We'll just come out in the morning and try to start another situation that we can be proud of," said Showalter, whose team meets the Twins again Wednesday afternoon.

Mike Gallego homered, singled and drove in three runs as the Yankees took their two-run lead. O'Neill also singled in a run and went 2-for-4, raising his average to .468, by far the best in baseball.

Minnesota took a 2-0 lead on Mack's inside-the-park homer, the 41st in club history and first since Mike Pagliarulo's in 1991.

Mack's high fly hit the wall between Williams in center and O'Neill in right. The ball then rolled about 50 feet away from the pair. After retrieving the ball in medium-deep center field, O'Neill took several steps before throwing to first baseman Don Mattingly, whose relay home was late.

"He hit the ball hard in the gap," Williams said. "We both went at it aggressively."

Said Mack: "When I saw it hit the wall and I was already at second base, I knew I had a chance."

<B>Notes: <P> Deshaies picked Williams off first base in the opening inning and did the same to Pat Kelly in the third. Deshaies leads the Twins with five pickoffs. ... The Twins have a six-game home winning streak. New York had won 10 of its previous 14 road games. ... Twice in the eighth inning, Tom Kelly used pinch-hitters for pinch-hitters to counter pitching changes by Showalter. ... The Yankees are 19-1 when they score first, 7-10 when opponents do. ... Left-handers are batting only .146 against Key. ... The Twins have allowed only three home runs in May after giving up 49 in April. Gallego's homer was the first against Minnesota in the last eight games.

Motta returns to coach Mavericks; insists NBA game hasn't passed him by

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Dick Motta, once again the head coach of the Dallas Mavericks, insists that, at 62, the NBA game hasn't passed him by.

"I wouldn't attempt something like this if I weren't fully confident I could do it with every fiber of my being," Motta said Tuesday after owner Don Carter introduced him at a news conference as the new coach.

"I work out every day. I see with young eyes. I know that I have the energy. That's not a problem. I think the building blocks are definitely in place and it can't go much lower. Three of the four teams that I've had have been at the bottom, and it's fun to watch them develop."

Motta succeeds Quinn Buckner, who was fired on May 3 after a 13-69 record in his only season.

In a record 22 seasons as an NBA head coach, Motta won 856 regular-season games, losing 863. He has lost more games than any NBA coach and is fourth on the career victory list. He led the Washington

Bullets to the NBA title in 1978.

His record in seven seasons with the Mavericks was 267-307.

Carter also elevated scouting director Keith Grant to director of player personnel. Grant will assume duties previously held by Rick Sund, whom Carter fired last month as vice president and director of basketball operations.

Motta mended his relationship with Carter after abruptly leaving the team in 1987. Carter brought him aboard as an unpaid consultant last season, and after firing Buckner, Carter asked Motta and Grant to compile a list of possible successors.

As he worked on the list, aware that Carter had given him the OK to put his own name on the list, his competitive juices began flowing again, Motta said.

"I looked at the team and got excited about some of the talent, disappointed at some of the development, and it had to play in my mind, 'What if... what if?'"

"I wanted to coach again. I felt revitalized. My interest came back. I've been doing this for 40 years, and the instincts are still there," Motta said.

In Motta's first season, he took a ragtag assortment of castoffs from other NBA teams and coached them to a 15-67 record.

The Mavericks then improved their record each season for the next four years, going from 28-54 to 43-39 in 1983-84.

The Mavericks were 55-27 in Motta's last season, 1986-87, winning the Midwest Division for the first time.

Motta walked away without an explanation in '87, but now says he wishes he hadn't left.

"If I had a crystal ball, if I'd known things would happen like they did, I'd never have left."

Motta said he took the job with no illusions.

"I know what needs to be done and I'm confident this is the right decision," he said. "I looked at this team, and I wanted to coach. There aren't many people who get a second chance to do something they probably should have done better the first time."

Administration unveils $1.7 billion homeless proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials estimate that 7 million Americans were homeless sometime during the second half of the 1980s, far more than 1990 Census calculations of 600,000 people and far too many for current federal programs to adequately help.

The higher figure was part of a new strategy unveiled Tuesday that would devote $1.7 billion to homeless programs in fiscal 1995, to put overall federal homeless aid at $2.1 billion.

The 100-page report, if approved by President Clinton and submitted to Congress, would represent the first time the government has labeled homelessness as a major problem demanding large-scale federal action.

The $1.7 billion would be three times more than the $555 million spent on homeless aid in the last year of the Bush administration. But Clinton administration officials said that even with the extra money, only one-third of homeless people are likely to be helped off the streets for good.

"That would be a very substantial cut at the problem of homelessness," said Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros. "We are doing everything we know how to do. The president is very serious about this."

Clinton called the plan "a thorough and honest examination" of homelessness that would work hand-in-hand with welfare and health care reform to "give every American the opportunity to break the cycle of dependence."

Prison officials pull the plug on celebrity 'slave' auction

AUSTIN (AP) — State prison officials are canceling a "Live Celebrity 'Slave' Auction" that was scheduled for a social function after prison employees and a state lawmaker complained.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said Tuesday that the "slave" auction planned for a get-together of employees of the Jester prison units in Sugar Land was unacceptable.

"I would encourage those at TDCJ (Texas Department of Criminal Justice) to come into the 20th century as the rest of us rush into the 21st," Wilson said in a letter to Andy Collins, TDCJ executive director.

"I challenge them to free their own minds of a 'slavery' mentality that accompanies prejudice and discrimination," he said.

Charles Brown, a spokesman for TDCJ, said Jester Warden Lephel Jenkins has apologized to employees who were offended by the event.

"It was a non-malicious thing, and he is very apologetic about it," Brown said.

He said TDCJ Deputy Director Wayne Scott was writing a letter to all state prison wardens to warn them against using such events.

The task force report estimated the nation's homeless population as totaling 7 million during the 1985-90 period, with 600,000 on the street on any given night. The most recent draft of Tuesday's report gave a range between 4.95 million and 9.52 million.

Previous administrations put the figure at 600,000, mainly because the population was counted in one-night "snapshot" tallies that didn't consider those who fall in and out of homelessness over an extended period of time.

Not included in the report's tally were 1.2 million families who are on waiting lists for public housing, 1 million seeking federal rent assistance, and untold numbers who move in with families or friends or pay more than half their monthly income in rent.

The report did count up to 1.5 million homeless children, as many as one-third of whom were not attending school regularly as recently as 1992. Those who did attend often drifted from school to school, without adequate supplies or a place to study.

The plan, compiled by the Interagency Task Force on the Homeless, suggested a "continuum of care," which takes homeless people in through short-term emergency shelters, give them transitional housing while they undergo counseling or job training, then place them in affordable, permanent homes.

Fred Kamas, executive director of the National Coalition for the Homeless, said the system is a good idea, but should not be the only option.

The Employee Play Day will have a charitable function, but it will not be a "slave" auction, he said.

Wilson said he was glad the event will be abandoned. "I just appreciated that they recognize it's not really appropriate," he said.

The notice of the Employee Play Day for June 11 had included this event description: "Celebrity supervisors and others will go on the auction block — the highest bidder gets the 'slave' to wait on that person during the party and gets possession of the 'slave's' parking space for one week."

Poll: High school students report regrets about starting sex at too young an age

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of sexually active teenagers wish they had waited until they were older, according to a national poll.

Although very few high school students said they felt pressure to have sex from their peers, partners or the media, 54 percent of those who have had sex said they should have waited, the Roper poll found.

The teenagers gave, on average, 17 as the "best age" to begin sexual intercourse, two years older than those polled reported that they began.

Results were to be broadcast today on Rolanda, a nationally syndicated talk show that commissioned the poll in association with the Sexuality Information and Education Council of the United States, a New York-based interest group.

Telephone interviews with 503 students in grades nine-12 were conducted last month by Roper Starch Worldwide, which said results have a margin of sampling error of less than 5 percentage points.

Teenagers' sexual attitudes and experiences are of intense interest to AIDS prevention specialists, who often complain that their efforts to get government studies are blocked by religious conservatives.

The Roper questionnaire includes the sort of frank questions that have caused uproars in school-based surveys.

AIDS and teenage pregnancy rated as very high concerns in the survey, and 75 percent of those having sex said they were using birth control always or most of the time. Fourteen percent said they did not use a condom all or most of the time to prevent AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

The number who said they had intercourse, 36 percent, was much lower than the 54 percent in a 1990 survey by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control. But it was not clear whether that was a real drop. Fewer teen-agers may be willing to report sex when called at home, compared to the federal survey's use of a written questionnaire in a sealed envelope at school.

But when the poll asked about deep kissing, petting and other sexual behavior, only 8 percent of the young people reported no sexual involvement.

Fully 72 percent of those who reported sexual intercourse, oral or anal sex said they did it in the homes of their parents or their partner's parents. Six in 10 believe their parents know about their sexual behavior, the poll found.

Debra Haffner, executive director of SIECUS, said the sexuality information clearinghouse planned to distribute results to promote more sex education in schools and in the home.

"One of the things this poll suggests is how confused young people are in America about sexuality," she said.

"I think there's a lot of contradiction between their attitudes and what they're doing, which I think is not something we as adults should feel good about," Haffner said.

There was no difference in the average ages the high school students thought best for boys and girls to have their first sexual intercourse, and on average, both sexes started at the same age.

But while 71 percent of the girls said they were in love with their last sexual partner, 45 percent of the boys said the same. The percentages of sexually active teenagers who said "sex is a pleasurable experience" differed from 81 percent of boys to 59 percent of girls.

"Young women are engaged in relationships that have very different meaning for them than the boys they're involved with," Haffner said.

"One of the hallmarks of a moral sexual relationship is that it's honest, that both partners have very similar expectations for the meaning of their relationship," she said. "This data would suggest that for many young people that's not true."
