AUSTIN (AP) — Although the 106-year-old Texas Capitol will look older after it is restored to the 1888 architecture, it will be safer.

"It was time for it to have a facelift, and it needed a major facelift," Dealey Herndon, executive director of the State Preservation Board, said Thursday. "From a safety standpoint ... we're going to have a fabulous building when it's finished."

David Stauch, project manager, said that the building was in good structural shape, "but it had been jeopardized over the years far more than anybody knew."

"We found more damage by ongoing, half-baked repair work and all kinds of remodeling work. That was the biggest surprise to me."

FORT WORTH (AP) — A new interpretation of a disorderly conduct law could spell trouble for gang members.

Hand signals that police say are used by gang members to challenge or insult rival gangs or identify themselves now may result in a ticket. Police have been authorized to cite — under narrowly defined circumstances — anyone who uses hand signals to incite violence.

A police memo sent to officers states that they may ticket people for flashing signs only if the officers can describe the hand signs, understand what they mean and show "how the resulting disturbance was directly related to the throwing of the sign."

Hand signals precipitated a Wednesday gang shooting at an east Fort Worth basketball court, police said. No one at the court was hit, but a bystander suffered minor wounds when he came under fire while pursuing the suspected gunman, police said.

DALLAS (AP) — More than a dozen Texans have contributed thousands of dollars to state candidates, digging deep in their pockets for the democratic process, according to an analysis by The Dallas Morning News.

Using a computer-assisted analysis, The News reviewed campaign donations of $500 or more from the last statewide election in 1990 through the Feb. 28, 1994, reports, filed with the Texas Ethics Commission. Federal and legislative races were not included.

The review, reported in today's editions, found: More than a third of the 25 biggest individual contributors in Texas have been appointed by Gov. Ann Richards or her predecessors to major boards and commissions. Spokesmen for Richards and former governors have said appointments are not related to financial contributions.

Candidates for governor have collected the most money, $50.9 million, in major contributions since 1990. The next most popular race for contributors is Texas Supreme Court, which has attracted $11.2 million, followed by candidates for lieutenant governor, $10.7 million, and Railroad Commission, $7.4 million.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Stanford University is reinstating the failing grade it eliminated in 1970 during the do-your-own-thing period on many American campuses.

The faculty didn't exactly bring back the F, but voted overwhelmingly Thursday to award an NP, or No Pass, and put the mark on students' records.

Ever since it dropped the F 24 years ago, Stanford has awarded an NC, or No Credit, for failure but did not record it on transcripts sent to other schools.

Professors also passed several other measures to tighten Stanford's grading and academic deadline policies, which are among the most liberal in effect at the nation's most prestigious universities. The vote on the package was 37-3.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Women have gathered at Yale University to learn what men for generations have imparted to one another on the golf course, in smoke-filled rooms and over steak-and-martini lunches: how to get elected.

Many of the women enrolled in the Women's Campaign School said they want to learn how to level the political playing field between men and women.

"I do play golf, but not to the extent that men do," said Democrat Linda Calandra, 42, a city councilwoman from Fresno, Calif. "Women raise money differently. We're not tied into those kinds of business contacts. We're used to reining in a household budget, not asking people for $1,000 checks."

Forty women of different party affiliations and political viewpoints attended the inaugural class Thursday. Most are political novices hoping to win that first election. One is in the midst of a campaign. Some have run for office and lost. A few are already in office and aiming for higher office.

School officials, parents discuss block schedule

By RANDAL K. McGAVOCK
Staff Writer

Pampa High School's proposed Accelerated Block class schedule was the topic of discussion at a meeting Thursday night between parents, teachers and school administrators.

Many of the parents gathered in the library of the high school were concerned about the effect of the new class scheduling scheme and the apparent lack of input by parents.

"Our main concern here tonight is the speed at which the implication of this program has occurred and the lack of parental involvement throughout," said Kay Newman, a parent and one of the organizers of the meeting.

PISD Superintendent Dr. Dawson Orr said that there had been a breakdown in the communications between the school district and parents and that he plans to correct the problems. He added that if parents had a problem with any aspect of the school district, they should contact the school or his office and the matter will be addressed.

As for problems with the Accelerated Block schedule the high school has begun implementing for the next school year, parents voiced concerns ranging from teacher preparedness to absences to the short attention span of the students.

In brief, the Accelerated Block program calls for a rearranging of the seven-class day into a four-class day with one class lasting a hundred minutes and the three other classes lasting 90 minutes each.

One of the benefits would be that students are given more choices as to the number of classes they can take during the four years of high school and will be able to earn 32 credits instead of the 28 currently offered, according to Orr.

He added, however, that with more choices, students and parents would have to make more decisions about what classes to take and not to take.

As for teachers, they will have class three out of four periods with time for conferences and preparation during the time they don't have a class.

Orr said that to compensate for the longer time teachers will have to spend with an individual class, different teaching methods will have to be introduced and implemented.

A teacher who spoke at Thursday night's meeting said that he was in favor of the new schedule because it would facilitate learning, especially in math and science classes, because students could get more hands-on experience.

"It's going to be a more topical situation," said Mark Elms about teaching under the new system. "What we want to do is use our books as a reference or a guideline."

Currently, one of the problems Elms said he faces in the classroom is that by the time students begin to grasp the subject and then go to the next step, it's time to change class.

Perhaps the biggest concern some parents had at the meeting was scheduling conflicts between classes students need to take and co- and extra-curricular classes.

Principal John Kendall said that with pre-registration for next school year already out of the way, no additional scheduling problems have presented themselves.

"You will always have scheduling problems," said Orr. "We'll never find an optimum schedule that will satisfy and meet the need of all children in every instance. What you strive for is the optimum thing, and then you try to learn from the blocks that are there and eliminate the barriers."

As for unforeseen absences, a time when students can fall behind easily, Kendall said that measures will be taken to bring the student up to speed.

Other questions parents had for the school teachers, counselors and administrators dealt with preparing teachers for the upcoming change.

Orr said that many of the teachers at the high school are currently attending classes on teaching techniques to be used next school year. He added that at least nine days of staff development have already been scheduled into next year's calendar.

Israel masses tanks on border with Lebanon

By NATI HARNICK
Associated Press Writer

METULLAH, Israel (AP) — Israeli tanks and artillery massed at the northern border today, poised to enter Lebanon after new rocket attacks by Islamic militants. Thousands of Lebanese fled the border region.

The escalating tension, ignited by an Israeli air raid Thursday on a base for Iranian-backed Hezbollah guerrillas, could break a 10-month cease-fire and hinder Middle East peace talks. The raid, which killed as many as 50 guerrillas and civilians, was Israel's deadliest blow in nearly a year.

Tens of thousands of civilians on both sides of the border spent the night in shelters as Shiite Muslim guerrillas fired Katyusha rockets at northern Israel and Israeli troops shot back with howitzers. Israeli jets swooped low over southern Lebanon today, shaking villages with thunderous sonic booms.

Lebanese army units fired anti-aircraft guns at Israeli aircraft but no hits were reported.

U.N. spokesman Timur Goksel reported that Lebanese civilians were streaming northward from a half-dozen villages in fear of a major flare-up in combat.

Goksel also said one Hezbollah guerrilla was killed and two Fijian peacekeepers were wounded in three firefights in southern Lebanon. The United Nations has a 5,250-soldier peacekeeping force in the region.

Dozens of Katyusha rockets hit across northern Israel but caused no casualties or serious damage. One missile started a brush fire in eastern Galilee but the blaze was quickly put out, Israel's army radio said.

Lebanese police said up to 50 people were killed and 200 wounded by the air raid Thursday on a Hezbollah training camp near the Syrian border in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. Hezbollah said 26 guerrillas died and 40 were wounded in the attack by six Israeli fighter-bombers and four helicopter gunships.

In the West Bank town of Hebron, about 100 Islamic activists protesting the air raid threw rocks at about 30 Israeli soldiers, who responded with tear gas and rubber-coated metal bullets. A leaflet from the militant Islamic movement Hamas vowed to avenge the Lebanese guerrillas.

Lebanese President Elias Hrawi denounced the air raid as a massacre. He called for an emergency session of the U.N. Security Council.

Uri Lubrani, Israel's top defense official for Lebanon, said the air raid was a "signal that Hezbollah has no immunity when they place their bases in a Syrian-controlled area." Syria, which has 40,000 soldiers in Lebanon, is the main power broker in the country.

Israel's chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak, characterized the attack as a preemptive strike against guerrillas often hard to track down when they are on the move.

Barak said Israel reinforced its air, artillery and ground forces overnight. "We are prepared for any possibility of an escalation," he said.

A long line of artillery, armor and troops moved to the northern border. Some units crossed into the strip of southern Lebanon occupied by Israeli troops since 1985.

Tanks and artillery pieces lined up next to the road near one crossing point. After loading ammunition and other battle gear, soldiers jumped on top of their tanks, smoking in the spring sunshine.

Clinton commemorates WWII Italian campaign

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

NETTUNO, Italy (AP) — President Clinton today honored the thousands of Americans killed in the Allied campaign to liberate Italy a half century ago, taking a solitary walk among bone-white headstones.

"We stand today in fields forever scarred by sacrifice," he said. Clinton evoked the memory of his own father, who fought in Italy about 100 miles from here, in solemnly declaring: "We are the sons and daughters of the world they saved."

"Now our moment for common cause has come. It is up to us to insure a world of peace and prosperity for yet another generation," he told some 1,000 veterans and guests at the ceremony on a hot, hazy day.

In the first major commemorative event of his European trip to mark D-Day, Clinton flew by helicopter to the Sicily-Rome American Cemetery, 40 miles south of Rome. The cemetery is the final resting place for 7,862 Americans who died in 1943 and 1944 during fierce fighting in the mud and mountains and freezing weather of the Italian campaign.

Among those attending the ceremony were four members of Congress who served in Italy: Sens. Bob Dole, R-Kan.; Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii; Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.; and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

Clinton saluted the senators, saying: "We honor what they did for us here."

Both Dole and Inouye were wounded in Italy. Dole's right shoulder was shattered by German machine-gun fire, and Inouye lost his right arm to a grenade.

Earlier, the president walked by himself among rows and rows of simple white crosses and Stars of David. At one cross, he reached down and righted a small American flag that had toppled.

In somber remarks, Clinton noted how the cemetery was "lush with pines and cypresses," a contrast to trees scorched and stripped of their leaves during the fierce fighting.

He recalled that his own father, William Jefferson Blythe II, had been asked by a niece to send a leaf back from a tree in "the beautiful Italian countryside" for her to take to school. "My father had only sad news to send back," Clinton said. "There were no leaves. Every one had been stripped by the fury of the battle."

Army Technician Fourth Grade Blythe spent most of his time stationed in Caserta, Italy, close to Naples. He returned from the war but died in an automobile accident in Missouri three months before Clinton was born in 1946.

The president spoke before a large statue, "Brothers in Arms," by New York sculptor Paulanship. It depicts an American soldier and sailor standing with an arm around each other's shoulder.

"Our duty is to preserve the memory of that spirit," Clinton said, calling attention to the statue.

Italian President Oscar Luigi Scalfaro offered a silent prayer for victims of "this terrible war." "History cannot be rewritten," Scalfaro said, recollecting Italy's ill-fated alignment with Germany in the war. But he saluted the "fertile alliances" that have flourished in postwar Europe among former combatants.

Back in Rome later, Clinton delivered an upbeat assessment on the economic situation back home to American Embassy staff members. He promised not to let America repeat mistakes of the past and "withdraw from the world" now that the Cold War is over.

At Nettuno, Clinton and Scalfaro laid a wreath at the steps of a white stone chapel with Roman columns. U.S. and Italian fighter jets roared overhead streaming green, red and white smoke trails — the colors of the Italian flag.

During his walk through the cemetery, Clinton stopped at the marker of the grave of Ophelia Tiley, an American Red cross worker killed on March 25, 1944. He was greeted by a 73-year old nurse who served in World War II, June Wandry of Portage, Mich.

Texas Democrats gather for state convention

FORT WORTH (AP) - Texas Democrats open their state convention today with party leaders hoping to rally the rank-and-file for the November campaigns. For the man atop the party's ticket, U.S. Senate nominee Richard Fisher, it's also a chance to erase any lingering doubts Democrats may have about his credentials.

Johnson said Fisher has found the party very receptive to his candidacy. "The fact that he was selected as the nominee is a signal that the party is open to new ideas," Johnson said. Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle agreed. "I don't get from any of our Democrats that they're not willing to go ahead and make a maximum effort to elect Richard Fisher, along with re-electing Gov. (Ann) Richards and the rest of the Democratic ticket," Slagle said.

Jimmy Carter and, during the 1980s, helped organize the moderate Democratic Leadership Council. As the first of the nearly 10,000 Democratic delegates and alternates began arriving on Thursday, Republicans poked fun at the party and its Senate candidate. "The Democratic Party is dead in this state," said the billboard, displaying a quote from a newspaper interview Fisher gave in 1993.

Unemployment shows sizable decline in May, new hires smaller than expected

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR.
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate fell four-tenths of a percent in May, the government said today, but the report still signaled the economy may be cooling off.

The decline to 6 percent, from 6.4 percent in April, was almost certain to alarm Wall Street, which has been concerned that increased employment will fuel inflation and harm the value of investments.

But the lower unemployment rate was tempered by a smaller-than-expected increase in the number of workers added to the nation's non-farm payrolls. The Labor Department said its survey showed new hires up by 191,000, considerably less than most analysts had expected.

Analysts said the report sent mixed signals — the drop in the unemployment rate to the lowest level this year while the number of new hires was considerably smaller than expected.

The report "points to a moderation of economic activity from the strong gains of late last year and early this year," said Stephen Roach, senior economist with Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York.

"The basic message underneath is that this economy is growing more slowly than before," said Robert G. Dederick, chief economist with the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "It is not an economy that has suddenly turned sluggish, but it has lost that vigorous course that it had earlier."

The actual increase in the non-farm payrolls could be considered even smaller when taking into account the 70,000 striking Teamsters union members who returned to work after a nationwide trucking strike.

Katharine G. Abraham, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the unemployment rate has declined seven-tenths of a percent since January. But the increase in the number of new jobs was lower than 260,000 average increase for the previous four months.

The rate has declined this year for whites, blacks and Hispanics and for adult women and men, but there has been no clear trend on teen-age employment, Abraham said.

She said when large movements occur in a single month, such as the sizable decline in the unemployment rate, "the magnitude of those changes often turns out to have been overstated once additional data become available."

She said it was "nonetheless clear that unemployment continues to trend downwards."

As expected, most of the new jobs were in service-related industries, although growth in that sector was slower than in prior months. Abraham said employment in finance, insurance and real estate declined, which she said reflected in part "the impact of rising interest rates on refinancing and home purchases."

Economists say mortgage refinancing has come nearly to a standstill.

The number of retail jobs increased a modest 31,000. Construction employment was up 12,000 after larger gains in March and April. The size of government payrolls declined about 3,000.

The number of factory jobs was down by about 2,000. Abraham said there were "no noteworthy changes" among individual industries.

The report said Americans worked an average 34.9 hours a week during May, up slightly from 34.7 in April. However, the number of factory hours, which had been at a post World War II high, were down slightly to 42.1 hours from 42.2 hours. Overtime also showed a modest decline. Average hourly earnings were up slightly to $11.11 from $11.05.

Final assault begins: Tears and festive nostalgia

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — Gray but standing proud, D-Day veterans are pouring into Normandy for a final bittersweet assault, laying wreaths for comrades and engaging in some festive nostalgia.

Their tears mixing with the rain, Lloyd Bailey and other vets set the ring of yellow and orange flowers Thursday at the tomb of the unknown soldier at the American cemetery overlooking Omaha Beach, D-Day's bloodiest battle site.

"There's a number of them who say that this is the last time they'll be back," said Bailey, 71, a retired diesel parts distributor from Jeffersonville, Ind. "Of course, anyone who is here will try to come back, but a lot of people have health problems."

Solemn ceremonies are planned throughout Normandy this week and in the days after the 50th anniversary of the Allied invasion on June 6, 1944, that breached Hitler's Atlantic wall.

But the atmosphere is festive as well. Thousands of vets and war buffs, dressed in military fatigues along with the rest of the family, are driving around the towns and beaches in World War II-vintage jeeps and trucks.

They roll down streets lined with Allied flags fluttering in the wind, while shop windows, cars and city buses have stickers with multiple flags saying: "We welcome our liberators."

At night, light arrangements in the shape of parachutes glow from lightposts like tree-lamps at Christmas. Some shops are taking the occasion for shameless self-promotion, like the beauty parlor that hung a dummy paratrooper from the second-floor window, made up as a woman but with a mustache painted on.

Veterans didn't seem to mind, taking it all in as a huge celebration.

"I'm just very happy," beamed Henry Bourgeois, 76, of New Brunswick, Canada, carrying a chest full of medals as he strolled.

Traffic jams developed Thursday as vets, tourists, farmers and truckers competed for space on winding two-lane roads along a coast of rolling farmland.

"The big party has already begun," said Christian Lyon, a French Interior Ministry official in charge of the region's security during the ceremonies.

In Paris, 38 American veterans of World War II who plan to parachute once again over Sainte-Mere-Eglise, the first village liberated in France, arrived on a flight from Houston, Texas.

The vets wore their jump gear and were given red-carpet treatment to the sounds of a 40s-style jazz band before being received at Paris City Hall.

More than 100,000 people, including President Clinton and other heads of state, are expected Monday in Normandy to fill the 50-mile chunk of coastline the Allies stormed.

Busloads of veterans and their wives have arrived at hotels where big band music wafted through the halls and glass display cases showed off T-shirts and other commemorative souvenirs.

Tourist pamphlets list at least a dozen and sometimes scores of events a day, including ceremonies, expositions, debates, concerts, ballroom dancing, parachute jumps and displays of war mementos.

WTAMU to conduct dryland ag workshop

CANYON — The Dryland Agriculture Institute at West Texas A&M University, directed by Dr. B.A. Stewart, will offer a four-week training workshop on dryland agriculture beginning June 6.

"The program is designed to expose international people to practices we've adopted here in this country," Stewart said. "Hopefully, the participants will go back to their countries as good stewards of the land."

Approximately 25 people, primarily researchers and administrators, from Argentina, China, Egypt, Ethiopia, Qatar, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Senegal and Thailand have registered for the workshop.

"I would have been thrilled with 15, so I'm very excited about the number of participants," Stewart said.

Workshop participants will spend the first week at West Texas A&M University in Canyon with afternoon trips to the USDA Conservation and Production Research Laboratory, Agriculture Research Service and Texas Agriculture Experiment Station facilities in Bushland.

"We'll spend that first week discussing universal principles associated with crop residue management, soil and water conservation, range management, integrated pest management and irrigation with limited amounts of water," Stewart said. "This will help prepare participants for the remainder of the workshop."

Weeks two and three will be spent on the road. Stops include Temple, San Angelo, Brady, Big Spring and Lamesa as well as out-of-state visits to Woodward, Okla., Garden City and Tribune, Kan., and Akron, Sterling and Colorado Springs, Colo.

"These locations have been selected for specific reasons," Stewart said. "They are sites of feedlots, wind erosion research centers, demonstration farms, textile centers, dryland experiment stations, etc. We want the participants to see the principles being practiced."

"We'll show them the successes, but we won't exclude the failures. We'll discuss the Dust Bowl — how we plowed up the grass and left the land unprotected from ravishing winds. The Dust Bowl is among the worst ecological disasters ever recorded, and we must never make those mistakes again, here or elsewhere."

Participants will spend the final week of the workshop on the WTAMU campus, discussing varying kinds of technologies in terms of the impact on soil and water conservation, crop production, soil quality and the environment.

"We'll talk about a lot of different things, but we won't necessarily encourage them to adopt our technologies. That's one of the mistakes Americans have made; many of our technologies simply will not work abroad. It's not the technology, rather the principles behind the technology, that's important," Stewart said.

"But this isn't a one-way street. We can learn a lot from other countries and some are more advanced in certain areas than we are. Just look at the intricate terracing systems in China."

The workshop will conclude July 1.

Funding to attend the training workshop is provided by participants' home countries or by international development organizations.

Stewart, director of the institute since its establishment in 1993 and distinguished professor of soil science at WTAMU, was formerly director of the USDA Conservation and Production Research Laboratory, Bushland; chair of the Organizing Committee of the 1988 International Conference on Dryland Farming, Amarillo/Bushland; past president of the Soil Science Society of America; and a member of the 1990-93 Committee on Long Range Soil and Water Policy, National Research Council, National Academy of Sciences.

Man given 75 year sentence in shotgun slaying of wife

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Tarrant County jury has set 75 years as punishment for a man convicted of shooting his wife to death during a fight over the length of her skirt.

The sentence was set Thursday for Wendell Marshall, 40, who was convicted in the death of his wife, Teresa Marshall, 34, who was shot in the back with the head with a 20-gauge shotgun in March 1992.

"It's a sad situation all around," said Arnold Wood, a brother of the victim. "We have feelings for their family, but Wendell was abusive to Teresa. A lot of stuff came out here that we heard as rumors."

Marshall, who shot himself in the face in an unsuccessful suicide attempt moments after his wife's death, sobbed after the verdict.

"Frankly, I don't have any explanation for that sentence," said defense lawyer Tom Zachry.

"I think what happened was people are fed up with crime; they don't care what the circumstances are," he said. "I know crime is an extremely big problem, but sending that man to prison is not going to solve the problem."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The Dallas Morning News on immigration costs:

In promising to bring suit against the federal government for reimbursement of costs pertaining to illegal immigration, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has acted in the best interests of the state. Yet even though both he and Gov. Ann Richards deserve congratulations, it is legitimate to ask what took them so long.

Mr. Morales now says that the federal government's failure to enforce laws against illegal immigration is "placing an enormous strain upon state government, municipalities, counties and our citizens." He maintains that the tab may actually be more than $1 billion. ...

It cannot be repeated too often that illegal immigration is illegal. As Ms. Richards correctly pointed out, America "is a place that indeed opens its arms, but it does so under the law." When all is said and done, Congress and the executive branch simply must regain their bearings. The point is not to appear to be doing something about illegal immigration; the point is to do something about it.

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on Texas optimism:

Everything — well, almost everything — is coming up roses for Texas as the spring of 1994 moves toward its exit. West Texas farmers are particularly happy about the rains that came just in the nick of time. When farmers are expecting a prosperous year, people in other areas of business and industry feel happier and more optimistic about their prospects, as well.

The good news about the Texas economy doesn't stop at the caprock, however, but extends all across the state. Several factors indicate that this year may be the best Texans have experienced in a long, long time.

The Index of Leading Texas Economic Indicators, issued periodically by State Comptroller John Sharp, showed that for March, consumer optimism, a strong housing market and plentiful jobs benefited the Texas economy significantly. ...

Two rather dark clouds loom over the state, however. One is the perpetual struggle to find a way to fund public education that is constitutional, yet at the same time does not break the back of property owners with an excruciating tax load. The second cloud is the lack of progress in combating violence on the streets of cities all across Texas. Both problems will be addressed — again — when the Legislature convenes next year.

In the meantime, the improved economy leaves most Texans feeling optimistic, which is nice for a change.

San Antonio Express-News on D-Day:

The observances of the 50th anniversary of D-Day make this Memorial Day even more poignant. ...

In this time of declining military budgets and forces, Americans should be acutely aware of the sacrifices that made the promise of peace and freedom possible. ...

With an extended period of relative peace, the danger is that too many will forget — or possibly never learn — of the heroes who died at places like Little Brandywine, Shiloh, Belleau Wood, Normandy, Pork Chop Hill and Khe Sanh. Those men and women died to keep America free. They helped save this democracy and in some cases launched others in the places they died.

As you read stories of the 50th anniversary of D-Day and see the documentaries on that watershed battle, recall also all those who have given their lives for the nation. All of us should hope and pray that such sacrifices will not be necessary in the future.

Nixon and the Haldeman diaries

Concerning the diaries of H.R. Haldeman, which are supposed to inform us about the deep racial and ethnic prejudices of Richard Nixon, a few observations:

1. It is not likely that Haldeman fabricated or even improved the remarks he attributed to President Nixon. He was, to begin with, a meticulous man.

I had one experience with him that is on point. In 1977, a few weeks before he reported to the penitentiary where he would remain for 18 months to expiate the obstruction of justice and other Watergate-related crimes of which he had been convicted, we dined together. He wanted advice about literary aid for the Watergate book he intended to write (and did) while in prison. He told me that he had read every book relating to Watergate (already, more than a dozen).

"I underlined in blue every factual statement I knew to be true. In red, every factual statement I knew to be false. In green, every factual statement I didn't know to be true or to be false." Precisionists of that kind don't make up slurs uttered by presidents about Jews or about blacks.

2. Specifically, Haldeman quotes Nixon as having bemoaned the "total Jewish domination of the media." Haldeman wrote that it was agreed that "this is something that would have to be dealt with." Moreover, the exchange in question took place in the presence of Henry Kissinger.

What is the appropriate reaction? It is best probed, in the judgment of this analyst, by focusing on the statement that "the problem" would have to be "dealt with."

How? The ruling families of The Washington Post and of The New York Times were Jewish at the time Nixon spoke these words (1970), as was the top management of a couple of the networks. So if Nixon, banging his fist on the desk, said to Haldeman that something had to be done to deal with this problem, what exactly did he have in mind?

Exactly. He had nothing in mind, and the severest reason for it is that there is nothing an American president can do, or for that matter an American Congress, executive and judiciary acting jointly, to dispossess the owners of The New York Times and The Washington Post. The networks do not depend on regulatory sanction, though the network-owned stations do.

So: Did Nixon intend to communicate to Haldeman that the next time CBS stations came up for renewal, the Federal Communications Commission would be instructed to deny such renewals, pending a change in the ethnic and religious affiliations of the applicants?

To ask that question is to reveal the emptiness of the gesture. If, slamming on the brakes to avoid hitting a little boy, you are heard to mutter that all boys of that age should be confined to their school yards, you are not really menacing the freedom of little boys, you are letting off steam. If the anti-Nixon brigades wish to choler up for the purpose of interpreting such remarks as betraying true, lethal anti-Semitism, they are free to do so, and others are free not to take them seriously. These would include Henry Kissinger, who would not have been appointed secretary of state by a functioning anti-Semite.

If the prosecution will rest with the simple cultural point that many Americans who were contemporaries of Nixon were capable of blaming "the Jewish media" for every blot on the political landscape, let us stipulate that this is so; even as blacks in parts of New York blame Koreans, or Jews, or Hispanics, and vice versa, for all the problems in sight. People tend to look for generic hobgoblins, as every honky knows.

3. Concerning blacks, Haldeman recorded Nixon as saying that the blacks are unique in never having presided over a free, democratic society. Paraphrasing the president, Haldeman wrote: "Says Africa is hopeless. The worst there is Liberia, which we built."

What Nixon's sweeping statement of rhetorical despair will be subjected to is historical analysis, and then relative analysis. Nobody can defend the record of black Africa, measured against criteria of freedom and democracy and constitutional restraint. As much is true of Latin America.

At about the time Nixon was letting off steam, there were approximately four genuinely democratic republics in Latin America, after 150 years of trying. But since then the tide has dramatically changed, though it is too early for strategic optimism.

What we do learn is that there are perils in transcribing the purple thoughts of any public figure. Come to think of it, of anybody at all: There are moments when we blame the stars themselves that we are underlings.

How much wiser to focus on such a comment as was made by John Taylor, the director of the Nixon Library. He said that Nixon's statements about blacks and Jews "should be viewed strictly in a political context" — i.e., who has got under the presidential skin that day. And then:

"I had the privilege of serving him for 15 years and never heard him make an anti-Semitic statement."

That doesn't mean he never made one, but it does suggest that there is a difference between the kind of racism we properly worry about and the kind we associate with a generation nurtured on its own hobgoblins.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, June 3, the 154th day of 1994. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 3, 1963, Pope John XXIII died at the age of 81, ending a papacy marked by innovative reforms within the Roman Catholic Church. He was succeeded by Pope Paul VI.

On this date:

In 1621, the Dutch West India Company received a charter for New Netherlands — now known as New York.

In 1808, Jefferson Davis — the first and only president of the Confederacy — was born in Christian County, Ky.

In 1937, the Duke of Windsor, who had abdicated the British throne, married Wallis Warfield Simpson in a civil ceremony in Monts, France. ...

In 1948, the 200-inch reflecting telescope at the Palomar Mountain Observatory in California was dedicated.

AND THE HEALTH-CARE BATTLE LINES ARE DRAWN,...

Health care: Unwinnable fight

Can our nation — or any nation — realistically afford to provide governmentally funded health care for all? It's nice to think so.

Let's see what history says. What nations have attempted socialized medicine? Sweden, Germany, Canada. These countries have the programs we hear heralded. But are their plans really working?

Sweden is undergoing health-care re-reform. While the United States is going from individualized care, Sweden is going the other way from socialized care to independent.

The reason? Money. Dr. Kaj Mollerfors, a surgeon and top administrator in Sweden's national health system, admitted to the Christian Science Monitor, "We (the governmental program) are used to being able to afford everything, but we can't any longer."

Sweden has discovered that when costs escalate in a socialized system, long waiting lists and low productivity become the norm.

Germany? It's the German program after which President Clinton modeled his plan. A bad example to follow.

Dr. Hans Weitzel, an ob/gyn from Berlin, is quoted as saying: "The great privilege of our system is that every man and woman can have insurance. But it has come to the point that it doesn't work. It is too expensive."

When Germany was overwhelmed by the cost of socialized medicine, Germany followed Sweden and rationed care.

"When my father had cancer of the pancreas," said Uwe Reinhardt, professor at Princeton University, "they did nothing but make him comfortable. No surgery, no chemo. Just pain medication and food. They said, 'We'll let nature take its course.'"

Canada?

In Canada this past winter, 23,000 doctors got a no-salary vacation from work because the government couldn't afford to pay them.

Four thousand hospital beds in Toronto were closed because of lack of money. Administrators sealed wings, because of inability to pay staff.

Funding for cosmetic surgery, circumcision and sterilization reverses may be eliminated.

Canadian doctors — 650 of them — fled the country for the United States ... just this last year.

Those Canadian patients waiting more than three months for surgery number 177,000.

And Dr. Walter Bobecko, chairman of the orthopedic surgery department at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, quit because, as The Wall Street Journal reported, "he felt the government restricted patient care to the point of 'negligence.'"

The crux of the matter, Americans, is this: Our country can't afford government-controlled health care. No country can. Universal coverage is ideal but just not feasible.

Government-administrated health care inevitably requires another gigantic government bureaucracy and another army of inefficient bureaucrats who cost more than any nation can afford.

The communist world discovered it, Sweden, Germany and Canada are discovering it, and the United States has a wonderful opportunity to benefit from the experience of others.

Clinton's struggles with the Vatican

ROME — President Clinton is encountering the Vatican version of controversy over abortion rights, a subject that's a headache at home and likely to get worse in his quest for health care reform.

Clinton's audience Thursday with Pope John Paul II dramatizes their differences. The president supports a woman's right to abortion; the Roman Catholic Church is sternly, vehemently opposed.

The president's own ambassador to the Vatican said in advance that the pope was angry about administration support for abortion rights as part of a United Nations plan seeking to restrain world population growth.

Perhaps because of the strained circumstances, there were no plans for the joint remarks that have been customary when presidents visit popes. At the White House, that was said to be due to concern about the pope's health; he has been recovering from hip surgery after breaking a thigh bone in a fall five weeks ago.

It is Clinton's second meeting with John Paul II. In Denver on Aug. 12, the pope delivered a right to life lecture widely interpreted as a rebuke to the president's position on abortion. Later, with Vice President Al Gore on hand, the pope denounced what he called "the culture of death."

The White House obviously wants no re-enactment in Rome, on the first day of a European trip centered on Clinton's observance of the 50th anniversary of D-Day.

But there's no avoiding the strains over abortion. Raymond L. Flynn, the envoy to the Vatican, said he was concerned about keeping the relationship between the president and the pope "on a positive level."

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

Flynn said in a recent interview that he'd been told the pope never had expressed "more anger about a position and an issue" than on the U.N. plan, being drafted for a Cairo conference on population growth and problems. The U.S. language isn't final, but the policy is set.

As Clinton flew to Rome, a senior adviser, speaking on condition of anonymity, summed it up:

"The policy of the administration is that abortion ought to be safe, it ought to be legal, and it ought to be rare."

The president believes abortion should be available to women in developing countries, although he does not favor it as a form of birth control. He is pledged to reverse the policies of his Republican predecessors, who denied U.S. funds to international organizations that support or counsel on abortion.

Domestically, Clinton ended the ban on abortions in military hospitals and overturned a policy forbidding abortion counseling in clinics that receive federal help. He signed legislation last Thursday to imprison and fine abortion protesters convicted of illegally blocking access to clinics.

Abortion is one of the questions that will be raised as the Senate considers Stephen Breyer for virtually certain confirmation to the Supreme Court. Clinton had said he'd choose justices who support the basic right to abortion; Breyer is his second.

And the most difficult aspect of the issue is just ahead, on health care. For more than 17 years, Congress has barred federal financing of abortions for most poor women under Medicaid. Clinton tried to undo the ban in 1993, but both House and Senate voted to continue it.

That would end under the Clinton design for health care reform.

Abortion is not a central point in health care legislation, and it hasn't been a focus of the debate so far. But it could become a central obstacle to the compromise Congress is trying to shape.

The original Clinton health reform bill would have made abortion part of the benefits package required of all insurers, although it was under the heading "pregnancy related services," as though the euphemism would ease the controversy. The poor would have had the same coverage, with premiums financed through Medicaid.

A House subcommittee voted May 12 to include abortion from the benefits package. The issue hasn't yet been joined in other panels drafting health care legislation. There's pressure from both sides, and it will intensify.

Clinton said months ago that abortion coverage in health care reform probably would become a political football. It will.

This is a point that won't bend to compromise; it will be in or out when Congress deals with health care. Either way, there will be votes at risk, first in Congress, later at the polls.

Third time's a charm for National Spelling Bee champion

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spell it p-e-r-s-i-s-t-e-n-c-e.

It took Ned Andrews, a seventh grader from Tennessee, three years and three national spelling bees. But today the youngster is America's spelling champion.

Andrews, 13, who says his prowess for spelling gives him an edge with teachers back home in Knoxville, captured the 67th National Spelling Bee on Thursday after two days of grueling competition among 238 of the country's best young spellers.

Twice before he made it to the national competition and finished no better than 14th. But this time he went all the way conquering such words as "dyskinesia," (characterized by involuntary motions), "proboscis" (snout) and "naiad" (nymph).

After winning the title by correctly spelling "antediluvian" (or ancient), in the 15th round, Andrews was asked why he came back a third time after two years of disappointment.

"That's a good question," he replied. "I guess it's just like me to keep trying on something like this."

The championship was his for the taking after runner-up Brian Kane Lee, 12, of Minot, N.D., tripped on the word, "parvenuism" in the 14th round.

The word means to behave above one's station in life and, ironically, Lee said he never thought he would get as far as he did in the competition. "I thought I'd get in the top 50," he said.

After the pressure faceoff, the two youngsters exchanged addresses and said they hoped to remain pen pals. It had been Lee's third appearance at the national bee as well.

Ned, who also likes geography and won the state championship in this year's National Geography Bee, credits his mother, Carolyn, for much of his success in spelling.

"I don't have a professional coach but my mom coaches me," he told reporters when asked the name of his coach. "And she ought to be paid," he added.

"I'm feeling pretty excited," he continued at a news conference minutes after winning the championship, eager to talk about almost anything.

What about advice to people who have trouble spelling?

"Read everything," he said. Then with a smile added, "And for extremely, awfully bad spellers, give it up."

Ned said being a good speller can have its rewards: "It helps getting the teachers to be nice to me."

But then even a spelling champion wants to keep a few things to himself.

Does he have a girlfriend? "Yes," he acknowledged. "The name is withheld for personal reasons."

As for any heroes or role models? "My parents," he responded.

His father, Andy, is an electrical engineer and his mother is an editor of technical papers. He also has two brothers.

Ned and the other 237 young spellers, aged 10 through 14, spelled and misspelled 1,068 words during the two days of competition.

Third place went to Anthony Chuang, 14, of Fort Worth, Texas. He was derailed by his 13th word, "psalmodist," a composer of sacred songs.

Ned won $5,000; Brian, $4,000, and Anthony, $2,500.

The second day of the 67th annual National Spelling Bee began with 152 spellers still in contention. Nine hours later the number had dwindled to only 20. On Wednesday, 86 out of the original 238 youngsters misspelled words and dropped by the wayside.

The contestants are all local or regional spelling bee champions and represent 48 states — all except Delaware and Vermont — along with the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The National Spelling Bee is sponsored by Scripps Howard Inc. and 228 newspapers that host local spelling contests. Each contestant is sponsored by a local newspaper after winning preliminary school, county or regional contests.

U.S. plotting sanctions strategy with Japan, South Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is conferring with South Korea and Japan to prepare U.N. economic sanctions against North Korea after inspectors found the country erased vital evidence about its nuclear weapons capability.

"We are focused on sanctions as the logical next step," Assistant Secretary of State Robert L. Gallucci said Thursday. "There are a lot of different kinds of sanctions that could stop a lot of activities."

South Korea and Japan, as neighbors of communist North Korea, are uneasy about cracking down on the Pyongyang government, which already has declared that sanctions would be considered an act of war.

In addition, the United States needs the support of China, a long-time ally of North Korea, to get a sanctions resolution through the U.N. Security Council.

Gallucci said talks will be held with China, Russia, Britain and France after the meetings today and Saturday with South Korea and Japan.

"We need to find out what they think," he said.

Hans Blix, the director of the International Atomic Energy Agency, a U.N. watchdog organization, announced Thursday that North Korea had failed to segregate fuel rods removed from a nuclear reactor that could help determine whether plutonium was diverted for nuclear weapons before 1989, the last time rods were removed.

"Now it is time for us to do something in response," Gallucci said.

Among the options are a total trade cutoff or interim measures, such as bans on technical exchanges and energy deliveries. Applying gradual sanctions could help build a consensus against North Korea for tougher actions later, said Gallucci, the administration's top coordinator on the North Korea problem.

He acknowledged that forging a consensus will not be easy. For instance, he said, "there is no question the Chinese have been substantially more reluctant to embrace the concept of sanctions than others."

For its part, Gallucci said, the United States is withdrawing an offer to hold high-level talks with North Korea. Two such meetings were held last year, holding out the prospect of U.S. recognition and better relations with Washington.

But by denying the IAEA inspectors access to fuel rods, "an opportunity has been irretrievably lost and because of that we do not look to a holding of a third round," Gallucci said.

Before today's talks could begin, North Korea fired a second Silk-worm surface-to-surface missile, sending it into the ocean, according to a senior Pentagon official. A similar launching took place earlier this week.

The missile, which is in its developmental stages and is not a deployed weapon, offered no cause for alarm, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "They appeared to be aiming it at a barge and missed," the official said.

Study: Many lottery retailers violating Americans with Disabilities Act rules

AUSTIN (AP) — Disability rights advocates are upset that nearly two-thirds of Texas lottery retailers surveyed by the state are violating a federal requirement to be accessible to people with disabilities.

The advocates, who have announced a fresh campaign of lawsuits to force businesses to remove barriers to the disabled, call the compliance rate inexcusable and shameful.

But lottery spokesman Steve Levine said Wednesday the state is "fairly pleased with the amount of people who have been in compliance or who indicated to us they would comply."

Mickey Moore, president of the Texas Retailers Association, said retailers, especially small ones, still might be poorly informed about requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

State law requires all businesses selling lottery tickets to comply with the federal civil rights law, but 65 percent of the retailers surveyed by the state this year do not, the Austin American-

Statesman reported.

There are more than 14,500 lottery outlets in Texas, and 2,851 of them have been investigated since January as part of a random survey that eventually will evaluate each outlet.

The state inspections are educating retailers, who usually do not argue with the state's findings, Levine said. Only one retailer has filed a formal complaint opposing a finding of noncompliance, he said.

Since last fall, the lottery commission has been withholding a retailer's share of lotto jackpot winnings if the outlet is in violation of the federal law. Often when that happens, the retailer quickly removes any architectural barriers that inhibit services for customers with disabilities, Levine said.

"Lot of times, overnight or within hours, they will call us back and say, 'We're ready,'" he said.

Lottery rules allow up to 90 days for retail outlets to become accessible if they are found out of compliance with the federal law, which was passed in 1990.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THERE WERE GIANTS IN THE LAND
 THROUGHOUT THE OLD TESTAMENT THERE ARE SEVERAL REFERENCES TO GIANTS AS INDIVIDUALS AND AS A RACE. ONE RACE WERE THE ANAKIMS WHO HAD CITIES IN CANAAN. WHEN HEBRON WAS CAPTURED BY THE HEBREWS THE ANAKIMS ESCAPED DESTRUCTION BY FLEEING TO THE CITIES OF THE PHILISTINES. BUT UNTIL THAT TIME THEY RULED THE LAND, TAXING THE OTHER INHABITANTS AND, IN GENERAL, CONTROLLING THEIR LIVES. THE NOTORIOUS GOLIATH OF GATH, WHO WAS KILLED BY DAVID, WAS ONE OF THE ANAKIMS. AFTER THIS INCIDENT WE HAVE NO FURTHER RECORD OF THE GIANTS.

Chaplain representative to speak at First Assembly

Ricky O. Davis

Assemblies of God Division of Home Missions Industrial and Institutional Chaplaincy Department field representative Ricky O. Davis is scheduled to speak at First Assembly of God at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

"My goal is to place chaplains among people who do not have the usual opportunities to attend church because of incarceration, employment or physical restriction," Davis said.

Fortifying existing ministries and creating new outreaches are the two thrusts of Davis' ministry. In addition to prisons and hospitals, chaplains also serve in rodeos, truck stops, factories, racetracks, police departments and airports.

"With more than a million imprisoned persons, 7,000 hospitals that average 970,000 patients per day, 250,000 living on the backside of racetracks and two million truckers, there is ample opportunity for service," said Davis.

Ninety-three chaplains serve under Davis' supervision.

Prior to accepting his current position, Davis served as Protestant chaplain at the 2,300-man Wynne Unit at the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Unit in Huntsville.

Born in Fairbanks, Alaska, and raised in Alabama, Davis earned a bachelor of arts from Southeastern College of the Assemblies of God in Lakeland, Fla., a master of divinity from Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Kansas City, Mo., and a master of science from Troy State University in Montgomery, Ala. He is an ordained Assemblies of God minister with the Alabama District. He and his wife Brenda have two children.

Hawaii grapples with growing movement for independence from the United States

By RON STATON
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii's state flag flies upside down — a symbol of distress — over an entrance to a popular public beach park on Oahu's scenic east coast.

Makapu Beach Park is occupied by about 150 Hawaiians who claim they hold native rights to live on the land and have proclaimed themselves an independent nation state. Some have been there for more than a year.

The encampment is among the latest moves by a small but growing movement to gain some form of sovereignty for 140,000 native and part-Hawaiians, who make up 12.7 percent of Hawaii's population.

Some have put "Kingdom of Hawaii" license plates on their cars, getting tickets from police.

And a woman who refers to herself Her Royal Majesty of The Re-established Kingdom of Hawaii was apprehended recently, along with 10 supporters, for trying to "arrest" Mayor Frank Fasi for operating illegally under royal law.

"The occupation of Makapu is an instance of Hawaiians coming forward," said Kaleikoa Ka'eo, a University of Hawaii Hawaiian language instructor.

"We're past the point of just sitting down and begging government agencies for rights to the land. Now, Hawaiians are trying to assert themselves physically."

The fractious sovereignty movement got encouragement with the Jan. 23, 1993, commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the overthrow of the Hawaiian monarchy by a group led by American businessmen with support from U.S. troops.

Richard Kinni waves to motorists along Kalaanaloa Highway at Makapu'u Beach on the island of Oahu, Hawaii recently, holding an upside-down Hawaiian flag, symbolizing distress. The beach park is occupied by approximately 150 Hawaiians who have proclaimed themselves an independent state. (AP photo)

In November 1993, President Clinton signed a formal apology issued by Congress to the Hawaiian people for the invasion.

Last month, the Navy returned to the state the bombing target island of Kahoolawe, which had been designated by the Legislature as a cultural and educational preserve for Hawaiians.

This week, the state scheduled a referendum on the sovereignty question for descendants of the original Hawaiians. The vote, scheduled to run from Sept. 25, 1995, to Nov. 5, 1995, will ask whether to call a constitutional convention to decide what form sovereignty should take.

Sovereignty proponents back three general ideas:

— Complete separation from the United States and formation of an independent Hawaiian nation.

— Nation-within-a-nation status with federal recognition of a new native American nation. The idea is supported by Ka Lahui Hawaii, one of the largest sovereignty groups in the state with 20,000 members.

— Political status quo while pressing for redress, reparations and control of Hawaiian trust assets, including homestead land.

While there is disagreement on what form sovereignty should take, Hawaiians are generally united about the right to control their own destiny.

"There are few today who doubt that sovereignty will happen," Gov. John Waihee, Hawaii's first governor of native ancestry, said in his state-of-the-state address in January. "It is a matter of how, when, and in what form."

Leaders of many Hawaiian groups disagree with the beach occupation and prefer a more formal process of gaining some form of sovereignty that would be recognized by the U.S. government.

"They're only making it harder on us as Hawaiians," said Annie Auhoon, president of Kewalo Community Association, which represents about 60 Hawaiian families in an area of Honolulu.

Auhoon said the Makapu Hawaiians, many of them homeless and unemployed, should follow the same process that other Hawaiians have done to obtain residential or agriculture lots under the 1921 Hawaiian Homestead Act.

"They go out there and feel like they have rights to the land, while the rest of us follow a protocol and wait our turn," she said.

Bonnie Silva, who has camped at Makapu for a year with her husband and three children, said she is offended by charges that those living on the beach have nowhere else to go.

"I choose to be here, the spirit has called me here to heal this place, to ... protect the bones of our kupuna (ancestors)," she said. "I can afford to go somewhere. I have places I could live."

The land at Makapu Beach, noted for good surfing, is part of the land set aside in 1921 for Hawaiian homesteads, but it is used for the city-managed park.

Keith Ahue, chairman of the state Department of Land and Natural Resources, had given the campers until May 26 to remove their illegal tents and other structures, but no action was taken to enforce his order.

Three days before the deadline, the mayor ordered city water to the park shut off because the state had not paid a $5,000 water bill run up over the past three months as the Hawaiians tapped the park showers to water their taro fields.

The squatters' leaders have promised nonviolence, but insist the group is at the park to stay.

"We have no guns. We are not using swords and clubs and we are not going to start punching guys out," said Rolf Nordahl, a spokesman for the campers. "If the state is going to resort to force or arms, then we will bow to that force."

Two bankers convicted of laundering $30 million in money for drug dealers

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Antonio Giraldi, whose Beverly Hills office looked more like a boutique than an international bank, thrived in a world far removed from that of drug dealers and their bags stuffed with cash.

But a federal jury Thursday connected those two worlds, finding him guilty of laundering $30 million for a drug organization headed by Juan Garcia Abrego of Mexico.

"This case is a good example of how a bank officer legitimized a drug dealer," Assistant U.S. Attorney David Novak said.

Giraldi, a boyish-looking senior officer for American Express Bank International, lowered his head as U.S. marshals escorted him in handcuffs out of the courtroom.

Jurors found him guilty on all charges: conspiracy, 10 counts of money laundering, two counts of bank fraud and four counts of misapplication of funds.

Giraldi's former assistant, Lourdes Reategui, 46, was found guilty of conspiracy, one count of bank fraud and four counts of misapplication of funds. She was acquitted of the 10 money laundering counts and a second bank fraud count.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela ordered Giraldi held on a $1 million cash bond until sentencing, which was scheduled for Aug. 12. Bond Ms. Reategui was sety at $500,000.

As the jury deliberated for over three days, Giraldi, 37, had paced the hallways, often patting reporters on the back and making small talk about his hopes to return to work and take a mountain biking vacation.

Instead, Giraldi likely faces at least a decade in a federal prison, perhaps more, depending on federal sentencing guidelines and Vela.

"I cannot fathom how we arrived here," said Giraldi's attorney, Christopher Milner. "I think the basis for an appeal is clearly in the record based on the death of the evidence (against Giraldi)."

Ms. Reategui's attorney, Robert Turner, called the verdict inconsistent.

"The jury has decided that my client is guilty of conspiracy and not guilty of the money laundering. You figure it out," he said.

Simon Barker-Benfield, a spokesman for American Express in New York, said: "We're greatly disappointed by the verdict. But we do emphasize that the bank does have a strict policy against doing business with clients engaged in criminal activities."

The three-week trial, watched closely by international banks, focused on the relationship between bank officers and their wealthy, often secretive clients.

Giraldi currently is a senior vice president in the bank's Miami office. He worked in the bank's posh branch in Beverly Hills when many of the transactions occurred. Ms. Reategui, Giraldi's assistant in Beverly Hills, now works for a Los Angeles real estate company.

Defense attorneys, whose fees were paid by American Express, contended their clients had no reason to suspect they were handling tainted money.

But prosecutors charged that Giraldi and Ms. Reategui intentionally schemed and lied in bank records to make their biggest client, Ricardo Aguirre Villagomez, appear to be a legitimate businessman.

The government alleges Aguirre, a gas station manager in Matamoros, Mexico, was handling millions of dollars for Abrego.

Abrego is the reputed head of a drug empire in northeastern Mexico that, according to federal agents, imports hundreds of tons of Colombian cocaine into the United States each year and generates more than $20 billion in sales.

U.S. Customs Special Agent Vincent Iglieo began the complex investigation in 1989 when he and other agents noticed couriers hauling duffel bags stuffed with cash from a Mexican exchange house to a bank in McAllen, Texas.

A Customs-led task force followed the money to accounts for Aguirre in Switzerland, then to Aguirre-controlled holding companies in the Cayman Islands.

The investigators then found the money reinvested in apparently legitimate businesses in the United States and Mexico, prosecutors said.

Seinfeld returns to his alma mater

NEW YORK (AP) — Hey Kramer. Make that Dr. Seinfeld.

As his mother looked on Thursday, comedian Jerry Seinfeld accepted an honorary doctorate from his alma mater, Queens College.

"When my parents were pushing me to become a doctor, I could have at least said to them, 'Alright, alright. Just let me tell jokes to strangers in nightclubs for 18 years, and I'm sure after that they'll make me a doctor,'" Seinfeld said.

The star of the hit series Seinfeld struggled to get his hood pulled over his mortar board while accepting the doctor of humane letters degree. The graduating class cheered his every move.

"I've always been proud to be an alumnus of Queens College, and it's truly a wonderful feeling to know you are all so proud of me," Seinfeld said. "Good luck, Class of '94!"

Seinfeld, a 1976 theater and communications graduate, has worn a Queens College T-shirt on his show. Hawkers at the ceremony peddled shirts that boasted, "Jerry Seinfeld spoke at my graduation and all I got was this T-shirt."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was recently followed on the freeway by a male driver who stayed directly behind my car through a series of lane changes and speed changes. I went from suspicious, to nervous, to really scared as I realized that he was, indeed, following me.

He then followed me off the freeway and through a series of turns while I searched in vain for a police station. I could find absolutely no signs indicating the location of the police station, sheriff or highway patrol.

Finally, I pulled into a business where there were a number of men standing outside. After slowing to survey the situation, the pursuer drove on.

Abby, why don't police stations have more signs indicating their location (also the sheriff and highway patrol)? Without a car phone, it could be dangerous to stop to call 911.

Your readers would benefit from some advice on the best course of action if they are pursued on the road.

DESPERATELY SEEKING THE POLICE STATION

DEAR DESPERATELY: I hope that law enforcement and transportation departments everywhere will take note of your suggestion for better police "locator signs." It's a good idea.

Incidentally, the California Highway Patrol said that you acted appropriately when you were being pursued on the road. You headed for a lighted, populated area; kept your car doors locked and the windows rolled up; left a "space cushion" around your car for easier maneuverability; and were alert to strangers.

Most important, if you are faced with weapons, surrender your vehicle calmly, without a fight. Vehicles can be replaced. Lives cannot.

DEAR ABBY: I am asking you a question I am sure many people would also like answered. Why do doctors prescribe medicines to patients that cost a fortune, then after a few doses, change the medication to something else that also costs a fortune?

I have a full bottle of medicine that cost me $26. I took it twice, then the doctor gave me another prescription to fill. When I asked him, "What should I do with the bottle I have?" he said, "Just throw it out!"

My son-in-law had two full bottles of insulin - never opened. His doctor changed his prescription to another type.

I am close to 80 and cannot afford to throw money away.

Please put this in your column because the next time a doctor prescribes 100 pills to be taken one a day, I'm going to say, "Why don't you prescribe only 20 pills, and if you want me to take more, I'll order more?"

Please don't use my name.
NOT MADE OF MONEY

DEAR NOT MADE OF MONEY: When the doctor gives you a prescription, if you are concerned that it may not agree with you or that it may be changed, ask the pharmacist to give you only part of it.

If it works out OK, then you can return to the pharmacist for the remainder of the medication. The cost may be a little higher in smaller quantities, but if the medication is changed, at least you won't be stuck with medication you can't use.

NOT CONFIDENTIAL TO HELEN BRODKEY IN OMAHA: Happy birthday, dear sister. Who's counting?

Pampa will experience "Hollywood Nights"

PURGATORY HAS NEW PLACE IN CATHOLICISM

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

For centuries, theologians have debated the parameters and even the existence of purgatory, a place where, the Catholic Church teaches, human beings who died in God's grace are sent to be purified before entering heaven.

Since the Second Vatican Council in the 1960s, with its emphasis on the expanded role of the laity and professions of religious and civil liberties, purgatory has been largely ignored even in Catholic theological circles.

But enter a mission church in the Southwest or a neighborhood parish in Boston and one would quickly find that the practice of praying for the dead is alive and well among the people in the pew.

Such popular devotions as having a daily Mass said for the repose of the soul of a loved one or lighting a candle for someone who has died are part of the living tradition of the church.

If some would shove such teachings aside as outdated, the Vatican has made it clear it has no such plans. The new Catechism of the Catholic Church, scheduled to be published in English around Memorial Day, reaffirms the traditional teachings about heaven and purgatory.

In special sections on purgatory, the communion of the church on heaven and Earth and the communion of saints, the catechism makes clear that "a perennial link of charity exists between the faithful who have already reached their heavenly home, those who are expiating their sins in purgatory and those who are still pilgrims on Earth. Between them there is, too, an abundant exchange of all good things."

Hell is still an option for the unrepentant who sin gravely against God, the catechism says, but purgatory is a place where individuals who are forgiven of their sins but die "imperfectly purified" may "achieve the holiness necessary to enter the joy of heaven."

Since all Christians are linked together in what the catechism calls "the Mystical Body of Christ," Masses, prayers and acts of charity offered up by the living for the dead are viewed as helping purify individuals in purgatory of their sins so "they may attain the beatific vision of God."

The reference in the Catholic Bible for such prayers is found in the Second Book of the Maccabees when Judas Maccabeus makes a sin offering for the dead.

"If he had not believed that the dead would be raised, it would have been foolish and useless to pray for them. In his firm and devout conviction that all of God's faithful people would receive a wonderful reward, Judas made provision for a sin offering to set free from their sin those who had died," says 2 Maccabees 12:45.

The Rev. Robert Hater, a professor of religious studies at the University of Dayton in Ohio, said there is a certain amount of common sense in the concept of purgatory, an option other than heaven or hell for sinful but faithful individuals to be prepared, or purified, to enter eternal life with God.

The Rev. Gus DiNoia, head of the U.S. bishops' Office for Doctrinal and Pastoral Practices approaches purgatory as a kind of deferred enjoyment: "a knowledge that you will share in the bliss of heaven, but at this moment you need a further purification."

PHOENIX (AP)—Phoenix Suns guard Kevin Johnson said he'll play three more seasons after agreeing to a one-year contract extension through 1996-97.

Suns president Jerry Colangelo told The Phoenix Gazette that Johnson, who signed a seven-year deal in 1989 for $15 million, is the NBA's highest paid point guard but not the team's highest paid player. That places Johnson's salary above the $3.34 million Tim Hardaway is paid by Golden State and less than the $3.5 million paid to teammates Charles Barkley and Dan Majerle.

MIAMI (AP)—The Miami Heat said coach Kevin Loughery agreed to a multiyear contract extension Sunday. Miami was 42-40 this season and 116-130 in three seasons under Loughery, 625-717 in 19 seasons in the ABA and NBA with the New York-New Jersey Nets, Chicago, Washington and Miami.

Stanford led Arkansas by two strokes in the team competition with a 565 total.

POTOMAC, Md. (AP)—Mark Brooks shot a 6-under-par 65 to take a three-stroke lead over Ed Dougherty, Bobby Wadkins and Wayne Levi after the first round of the Kemper Open. Craig Parry, Brian Kamm, Scott Hoch, Mark O'Meara and Andrew Magee opened with 69s on the Tournament Players Club at Avenel.

Florida State hurler is top baseball draft pick

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Four years ago, when baseball's amateur draft reached the 57th round, the Pittsburgh Pirates chose pitcher Paul Wilson out of Boone High School in Orlando, Fla.

Thanks, but no thanks, Wilson told them, choosing Florida State instead. "It wasn't the right time," Wilson said. "If they drafted me sooner, I might have gone. I wanted to play ball."

The wait paid off on Thursday when Wilson went No. 1, picked by the New York Mets in what club officials have termed the most important draft in club history. The Mets are in the middle of a major reconstruction and they hope Wilson can play a prominent role in the project. For his part, Wilson is anxious for the chance.

Waiting for Friday's College World Series opener against LSU in Omaha, Neb., Wilson learned the Mets had selected him. "I'm going to the Big Apple," he said, clapping his hands. "Being No. 1 makes it a little bit sweeter."

Signing him may not be a major problem for New York. "There will be some negotiations, but I don't think it'll last that long," the 21-year-old said. "I don't plan on holding out. I want to play ball."

Wilson is 12-5 with a 2.08 earned run average. Equipped with a 95-mph fastball, he has 154 strikeouts in 134 innings this season that left little doubt about his status as the No. 1 prospect.

"There were hints beginning about 1 1/2 months ago, but nothing concrete," Wilson said. "They kept me at a safe distance. That's why it feels so good."

Wilson got the call early Thursday. "They woke me up," he said. "It was a good wakeup call. I didn't do much sleeping."

After the Mets chose Wilson, Oakland selected high school outfielder Ben Grieve from Martin High School in Arlington, Texas. Grieve, the son of Texas Rangers general manager Tom Grieve, batted .485 with three home runs and 11 RBIs in this season and was rated the high school prospect closest to the majors by Baseball America.

When the A's picked Grieve, that left Kent University right-hander Dustin Hermanson available for San Diego. Hermanson, also 21, was 5-4 with a 2.69 ERA this season and had a higher rating than Wilson with the Major League Scouting Bureau.

Arizona State third baseman Antone Williamson went next, drafted by Milwaukee after batting .356 with 13 home runs and 67 RBIs. Then Florida picked high school shortstop Josh Booty from Shreveport, La. Booty hit .429 with 12 home runs and 36 RBIs.

California followed, selecting high school outfielder McKay Christensen from Fresno, Calif. Christensen a running back who scored 44 touchdowns last season, has signed to play football at Brigham Young and had advised all major league teams that he plans to begin a two-year Mormon mission either this summer or after the fall semester.

Left-handed pitcher Doug Million from Sarasota, Fla., High School went next to Colorado. Million was 12-2 with a 1.21 ERA this season. Minnesota then chose LSU second baseman Todd Walker, who hit .380 with 12 homers and 56 RBIs this season. Then Cincinnati took left-hander C.J. Nitkowski from St. John's, a program that has sent lefties Frank Viola and John Franco to the majors. Jaret Wright, a right-handed high school pitcher from Anaheim, Calif. whose father, Clyde, pitched for California, Milwaukee and Texas, went next to Cleveland, followed by third baseman-outfielder Mark Farris from Angleton, Texas, High School, who was picked by Pittsburgh.

Georgia Tech supplied two of the next three picks — shortstop Nomar Garciaparra, chosen by Boston, and catcher Jason Varitek, selected by Seattle. They were sandwiched by high school catcher Paul Konerko from Scottsdale, Ariz., who was chosen by Los Angeles.

The remainder of the first round went this way:

Montreal, shortstop Hiram Bocachica, Rexville HS, Bayamon, Puerto Rico; San Francisco (from Texas) outfielder Dante Powell, Cal State-Fullerton; Philadelphia, right-handed pitcher Carlton Loewer, Mississippi State University; New York Yankees, first baseman Brian Buchanan, University of Virginia; Houston (from San Francisco) right-handed pitcher-first baseman Scott Elarton, Lamar HS, Lamar, Colo.; Chicago White Sox, catcher Mark Johnson, Warner Robins HS, Warner Robins Ga.; Atlanta, right-handed pitcher Jacob Shumate, Hartsville HS, Hartsville, S.C.; Toronto, shortstop Kevin Witt, Bishop Kenny HS, Jacksonville, Fla.

Picture-perfect swing

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON (AP)—Texas Rangers general manager Tom Grieve has a picture of his son Ben swinging a bat when he was only 3. It was just a quickie snapshot, but the left-handed cut is picture perfect.

Over the last 15 years, Ben Grieve has improved on that swing. He's become so good at it, that the Oakland A's made him the second overall pick in baseball's amateur draft Thursday.

Grieve, a hard-hitting outfielder, was the first high school player chosen. He comes from Arlington Martin, the same school that produced Todd Van Poppel, Oakland's first-round pick in 1990.

"I'm glad. I mean, any player would be excited to be the No. 2 pick in the country," said Grieve, a shy 18-year-old who went 17-for-37 with three homers and 11 RBIs in his abbreviated senior season.

The fact that Tom and Ben are now the first father and son to both be taken in the first-round of the 30-year-old draft is generating even more excitement in the Grieve household. The Washington Senators made Tom the sixth pick in 1966.

As for the younger Grieve, Oakland assistant general manager Billy Beane said he sees Ben as a "cornerstone member of the A's future outfield."

"Grieve in many ways reminds our scouting staff of a young John Olerud," Beane said. "Along with his offensive tools, Grieve has an above-average throwing arm and great natural instincts."

Ben, who stands 6-foot-4 and weighs 205 pounds, led Martin to the state title as a junior but played only 15 games as a senior.

He missed 10 games while leading the basketball team through the state tournament, was suspended for five games because of an alcohol-related incident and sat out two more with mononucleosis.

In his first at-bat back from the suspension, Grieve homered to the delight of the many scouts in the stands. In addition to Olerud, scouts also raved that his left-handed swing is reminiscent of New York's Paul O'Neill.

Tom Grieve has been seeing that same swing for years, as far back as the 1979 snapshot.

"He had his legs just right and his hands just right in a left-handed swing," Tom recalled during Thursday's news conference at the Rangers' team offices.

"It's a little naive to think at that point in time we knew he was going to play in the big leagues. But let's just say you'll have to go a long way to see a 3-year-old with that same pose anywhere," he said.

Although Ben has signed a letter-of-intent to play at Texas Christian — where his brother Tim was an all-Southwest Conference pitcher this season — he made it pretty obvious he wants to sign with Oakland.

"I'm not really big on studying," said Ben, who nonetheless was an honor student.

Pampa soccer team wins Lubbock Invite Pampa Bad Company defeated the Clovis Spurs, 1-0, to win the Under 12 Lubbock Soccer Invitational held on Memorial Day.

Justin Trollinger scored the only goal of the game on a quick give and go from Jeremy Hall. Trollinger streaked past the defense for a hard shot from the opposite side of the goal for the win.

Bad Company and the Spurs, an old rival of Pampa, were locked in a defensive battle from beginning to end. Trey Rogers, Tommy Lozano, Kevin Osborn, Kaleb Snelgrooves and Kyle McCullough provided Pampa with stout defense.

Bad Company displayed its outstanding depth throughout the tournament as nine different players scored goals.

In the first game against the Odessa Flames, Pampa won by a 4-2 score as Jeremy Hall scored two goals and Greg Lindsey and Justin Barnes had one each.

In the second game, Jeremy Hall and Jesse Francis each had a goal in a 2-0 win over the Roswell Rapid Fire.

In the semifinals, Pampa beat Force United of Odessa, 4-0, with goals by Jeremy Goode, Tanner Hucks, Casey Owens and Russell Robben.

Out of the 12 teams entered in the tournament, Pampa had to play and beat all three of the other top finishers to claim first place. Clovis was second, Odessa, third and Roswell, fourth.

Earlier last month, Bad Company competed in the first Cinco de Mayo Invitational Friends Through Soccer Tournament held in Midland.

In the first game, Pampa beat Midland Blast, 4-2, with Greg Lindsey scoring two goals, Jesse Francis and Casey Owens, one each.

The second game with Juariz Mexico ended in a 0-0 tie with plenty of outstanding defense from goalie Justin Barnes, and defenders Russell Robben, Kyle McCullough and Trey Rogers.

The third game against the Midland Blaze resulted in a 2-0 win over Pampa as Greg Lindsey and Casey Owens scored one goal each.

Jeremy Hall scored the only goal as Pampa defeated Midland Magic, 1-0, in the fourth and final qualifying game. Outstanding midfield control was provided by Justin Trollinger, Kevin Osborn, Jeremy Goode, Kaleb Snelgrooves and Kyle Garnett.

Sunday's final saw Pampa facing Jaurez Mexico once again. Bad Company won the semifinal game, 4-3, as Lindsey and Hall scored two goals apiece. Tommy Lozano turned in outstanding midfield play.

In the finals, Pampa fell in two 10-minute overtimes to the Midland Blaze, 3-1. Pampa was leading, 1-0, when the Blaze tied the score in the last 30 seconds of regulation time.

Rockets' Horry escapes injury in auto accident

GALVESTON (AP)—Houston Rockets forward Robert Horry was unhurt after being involved in a minor accident en route to Thursday's practice at the Texas A&M-Galveston campus.

Teammate Kenny Smith was following behind Horry and saw the accident that occurred as both players left Houston to join their teammates.

"Some guys will do anything to miss a practice," Smith joked. "Everybody is fine but both cars are beat up. Actually it was scary. I didn't know it was Robert until I circled around to check that no one was hurt."

Horry's accident caused him to miss the team's first workout since clinching the Western Conference championship on Tuesday night, a 94-83 victory over Utah in Game 5.

It was one of Horry's best games. He hit eight of 13 of his field goals and was three of five from 3-point range and finished strong when the Jazz tried to rally at the end of the game.

Although Horry was absent, forward Carl Herrera returned to workouts for the first time since he suffered a dislocated shoulder May 17 playing against Phoenix in the Western Conference semifinals.

"I'm encouraged," coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "He's out there shooting and we'll need him whenever we play. They've got big guys on both teams (New York and Indianapolis)."

Former WT coach wants his job back

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO (AP)—Former West Texas A&M baseball coach Mike Marshall wants his job back.

Marshall went to the media Thursday with his request for a hearing with the WT officials who declined to renew his contract last month.

"I simply want to face my accusers and address their contentions," Marshall said at a news conference attended by his attorney and eight baseball players.

"I don't understand under any circumstances how they could not keep me," the former Cy Young winner said.

Marshall, 51, coached the Buffaloes last season to a 8-48 record in their first year of NCAA competition since 1971.

During his tenure, he said, players were recruited, a baseball field was built, and the team improved throughout a tough schedule.

Marshall said he doesn't know why his contract wasn't renewed. Furthermore, he said, he wasn't notified of that decision by March 1, as required.

WT Athletic Director Mike Chandler made the announcement May 9.

"Basically, we're looking for some new leadership," Chandler said at the time. "There were some problems that we had that we requested correction on and they weren't all corrected to my satisfaction. I'm not going to get any more specific than that."

Chandler was out of town Thursday and unavailable for comment.

A May 11 news release from WT President Barry Thompson listed problems with Marshall. They included insubordination, lack of commitment to the university and "lack of demonstrated knowledge of the fundamental skills of baseball based on the players' performance during the 1994 season."

Marshall said will send his request for a hearing to officials, including the Texas A&M Board of Regents.

"To not embarrass the university more, we preferred confidentiality, but the refusal of the athletic administration to respond has forced us to go public," he said.

Marshall said that although the $30,000 contract he signed was for one year, it was understood he would stay in Canyon longer to build a baseball program.

"They said, quote, 'We definitely want you for five years.' I said, 'Fine.'"

Graf upset in French Open

6 PARIS (AP) — Even Steffi Graf, dejected after her worst defeat in three years, admitted the rise of Mary Pierce is good for women's tennis.

Either Graf or Monica Seles had won each of the past 13 Grand Slam titles. At least one of them played in all but one Grand Slam final since mid-1987.

But on Saturday, thanks to Pierce's crushing semifinal defeat of Graf, the French Open championship will have a fresh look. Either Arantxa Sanchez Vicario will win a second Grand Slam title to go with her 1989 French Open crown or Pierce will confirm her arrival as the new star so desperately sought by those who run the women's tour.

"It definitely has been very healthy, it is definitely exciting for the spectators here, also for television," Graf said of Pierce's surge. "I think it is a good thing... It is difficult for me to say that right now."

Until Pierce's 6-2, 6-2 defeat of Graf on Thursday, the women's field had produced few compelling matches. Most attention focused on Pete Sampras' failed pursuit of a fourth consecutive Grand Slam title.

Suddenly, Pierce is attracting as much attention as the men, who headed into their semifinals today. Defending champion and No. 6 seed Sergi Bruguera faced No. 7 seed Jim Courier, the 1991 and 1992 champion, and Bruguera's fellow Spaniard, Alberto Berasategui, faced Magnus Larsson.

Graf, thwarted in a bid for a fifth straight Grand Slam, said it was too early to proclaim that Pierce would replace Seles, out of tennis for over a year after being stabbed by a fan, as a new archrival.

"You have to take the results of all the year, and they haven't been all the way up there," Graf said. "You just have to give her some more time."

But Pierce, 19, said she would enjoy a long-term rivalry. "That would be something fun to me," she said. "It would be something very hard for me also. I would have to stay concentrated and play at the same level I am playing now."

She has lost only 10 games in six matches — a French Open record. So high was her level of play Thursday that she sensed Graf was looking forward to the rain shower that interrupted the second set.

"I think she was waiting for that," Pierce said. "I felt there wasn't much she could do because I was just playing so well."

Graf was asked if she pondered new tactics during the rain break.

"What tactics can you have?" she asked. "My level of game wasn't high enough to push her that far to make errors."

Rangers pull even with Canucks in Stanley Cup

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Glenn Anderson knew Mark Messier would make something happen. Mark Messier knew Glenn Anderson would be there to finish the play.

They were both right.

One of the most dynamic clutch duos in hockey history did it again, combining for a goal when the New York Rangers needed it most.

"We've got a great business relationship," Anderson said Thursday night after his shorthanded goal at 11:42 of the second period keyed the Rangers' 3-1 victory over the Vancouver Canucks and helped New York pull even after two games in the Stanley Cup finals.

Messier stole the puck, got goalie Kirk McLean out of position and fed Anderson to snap a 1-1 tie.

"We've played long enough together to know that he would be right on my tail," said Messier, who teamed with Anderson to win five Stanley Cups with the Edmonton Oilers from 1984-90. "I knew once the puck went by the net, if it somehow got in front, he'd find a way."

Said Anderson: "We both play at a very intense level and we demand a lot of each other. Playing with a great player such as Messier, he definitely tends to bring your game up another level. He's like a Wayne Gretzky or a Doug Gilmour or a Mario Lemieux."

With 253 points and 156 assists, Messier trails only Gretzky on the career postseason lists in both categories.

Anderson, who has just two playoff goals this season, became only the fourth player ever to reach the 90-goal mark. He has 205 career playoff points, also fourth all-time.

"He finds a way to score big goals," Messier said. "He's been doing it his whole career."

It was another in a long line of clutch performances by Messier. Most recently, in the Rangers' previous series, he guaranteed victory in Game 6 at New Jersey and delivered by scoring three third-period goals. The Rangers won that game and the next to continue their quest for their first title since 1940.

Games 3 and 4 are at Vancouver on Saturday and Tuesday before the best-of-7 series returns to Madison Square Garden for Game 5.

The Rangers were in a desperate situation because only three teams ever have rallied from a 2-0 series deficit since the finals went to a seven-game format. Such a deficit probably would have been fatal against Vancouver, which had won five straight games and 12 of 14 going into Thursday.

"I don't know if there was a sense of urgency. I guess there was a little," Rangers coach Mike Keenan said. "It was more a sense of commitment and effort."

That's an apt description of the careers of Messier and Anderson, and it was commitment and effort that led to the winning goal.

Messier intercepted Trevor Linden's pass at New York's blue line and beat defenseman Jeff Brown into Vancouver's zone. But Messier pushed the puck too far ahead of himself and McLean lunged to poke the puck away.

The puck hit Messier and went behind the goal line, where Messier chased it down as McLean's momentum carried him out of the net. Messier fed in front to Anderson, who got behind defenseman Jyrki Lumme and steered the puck into the open net.

"I passed it to Messier. That is a mistake," Linden said. "He raced down the ice and I didn't give my guys much of a chance back there."

The Rangers protected the one-goal lead until Brian Leetch scored into an empty net with 4.8 seconds left. New York had blown one-goal last-minute leads in its previous two games.

In Thursday's final minute, Keenan had the same players on the ice who failed to hold the lead Tuesday.

"You have to show confidence in your players," he said. "Ultimately, they got the job done. Mistakes are made from time to time but you have to give them the chance to respond and that's what they did."

McLean, who made 52 saves in Vancouver's 3-2 overtime victory in Game 1, played well again Thursday and finished with 37 saves.

Rangers goalie Mike Richter, who blamed himself for Tuesday's defeat, stopped 28 shots this time, including the last 22 after Sergio Momesso's first-period goal.

Richter got some breaks, too, as shots by Pavel Bure, Cliff Ronning and Greg Adams clanged off the crossbar behind him. A shot off the crossbar by Leetch led to Adams' winning goal in Game 1.

"That's the way hockey is," Ronning said. "Leetch hits the crossbar and we win and then we hit the crossbar several times and they win."

Moose Lodge wins 9-10 contest

Moose Lodge defeated AMT, 8-5, in a 9-10 year-old game Thursday at Optimist Lark.

Moose improved its record to 2-1. Winning pitcher was Ryan Zemanek, who struck out five, walked four and allowed just one hit.

Top hitters for Moose were Chance Crain, Jered Snelgroves, Ryan Zemanek and Aaron Robinson.

Keenan Davis was AMT's top hitter.

White House sets energy summit with oil states

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will meet later this month with members of Congress concerned about the future of the domestic oil and natural gas industry, which has been battered by low oil prices and lost jobs.

The White House meeting, scheduled for June 16, comes more than three months after 107 lawmakers from 29 states wrote Clinton requesting a meeting to discuss tax breaks and regulatory relief to boost the domestic industry's sagging fortunes.

At the time the letter was written in March, oil prices had been hovering around $14 a barrel and some 13,500 jobs were lost over a five-month period.

Since then, oil prices have climbed back up to $18 a barrel or more.

But the need to help an industry that has lost more than half a million jobs in the last decade remains, lawmakers and industry officials said Thursday.

"We have not witnessed any increase in (domestic) production," said Rep. Bill Archer, ranking Republican on the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. "In fact, just the opposite has occurred."

The Houston lawmaker said the need for reform of the nation's energy policies will remain pressing so long as the United States continues to increase its reliance on imported energy supplies.

Last year, the nation posted its lowest domestic oil production since 1958, averaging 6.8 million barrels a day. The country's oil imports rose to 6.7 million barrels per day — accounting for 49.5 percent of U.S. oil consumption.

Archer, who will attend the White House meeting, said he hopes to enlist Clinton's support for a package of legislative and regulatory proposals drafted by lawmakers from oil-producing states.

Among the proposals are tax credits to preserve marginal production and encourage new drilling; allowing producers to deduct some geological and geophysical costs; permitting the export of Alaskan crude oil; and regulatory relief.

"We feel we will not be able to achieve a desired result through the Congress without (Clinton's) active efforts," Archer said.

Sen. David Boren, the Oklahoma Democrat who coordinated several planning sessions on Capitol Hill, hailed announcement of the White House meeting and called the proposals "a good first step."

"The viability of this vital industry is at stake," Boren said. "If we fail to act, we may never be able to bring the oil and gas industry back to health."

Archer said the White House meeting offers a chance to gauge Clinton's commitment to the domestic industry.

"The White House has virtually ignored the energy industry since taking office and we need to find out whether that is going to continue to be their position or whether they will recognize the problem and be willing to help solve it," he said.

Astronomers discover water in galactic cloud

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Astronomers have detected water at the most distant point from Earth so far, a discovery that adds to the growing belief this essential ingredient of life may be present throughout the universe.

The water was found 200 million light years away by radio telescope in Markarian 1, a galaxy emitting so much energy from its center that it is believed to contain a black hole, said James A. Braatz, an astronomer at the University of Maryland, College Park.

Appropriately, Markarian 1 is located in the constellation Pisces — or fish.

The discovery was announced Thursday at the American Astronomical Society's national meeting.

Jack Welch, director of the radio astronomy laboratory at the University of California, Berkeley, called it "very exciting" and said it adds to the idea that water may be found everywhere, possibly nurturing life.

"If this stuff is out, then there is a good chance that there are living beings elsewhere," Welch said. "The presence of water makes for the likelihood of life emerging in a number of places."

Welch was a member of the team that first found interstellar water in the Milky Way in 1969.

Braatz said the water in Markarian 1 was found near the highly energetic galactic center by a radio telescope tuned to detect the unique electromagnetic signature for water.

Normally, the signature for the water molecule is too weak to detect by radio telescopes on Earth. But so much energy spews from Markarian 1's center that it is creating an extremely powerful beam of concentrated radio signals, Braatz said.

Before the new study, only five such beams showing the presence of water had been found, all closer to Earth than Markarian 1.

Braatz said his team of astronomers had searched more than 150 active galaxies before finding the evidence for water in Markarian 1.

"The fact that we didn't find it elsewhere doesn't mean it's not there," he said.

Water usually can be detected only if the Earth intersects the narrow beam of concentrated radio signals called MASERS, Braatz said.

If a natural MASER in a galaxy is beamed away from the Earth, the radio signature of water cannot be found, he said.

The water in Markarian 1 is contained in clouds that are rotating at thousands of miles an hour around the galaxy center, where it's believed a black hole could exist.

Eventually, Braatz said, the water molecules will be shattered into hydrogen and oxygen, then sucked into the middle of the galaxy.

Only on Earth has an abundance of water been found, but Welch said: "It may be everywhere."

North Yemen accepts call for cease-fire

By ERIC WATKINS
Associated Press Writer

ADEN, Yemen (AP) — The government in northern Yemen reversed its position Thursday and announced it was ready to accept a U.N. call for a truce in the month-old war against southern secessionists.

It was not clear what caused the turnaround in the government's position toward the U.N. resolution adopted Wednesday. Officials in the north had warned that the call would only lead to more fighting.

The announcement coincided with reports that northern troops had come within 10 miles of Aden, the stronghold of the southern secessionists.

Capitalist North Yemen and socialist South Yemen merged into a single state in May 1990. The union was popular but beset by cultural and ideological differences and a power struggle between President Ali Abdullah Saleh, a northerner, and Vice President Ali Salem al-Beidh, a southerner.

"The government is ready to respond to the resolution in a positive spirit. This will lead to full implementation of the resolution by all concerned," the government in the northern capital, San'a, said in a statement read on San'a Television.

The resolution called for an immediate cease-fire, an arms embargo of the warring parties and the dispatch of a U.N. fact-finding mission to Yemen.

The statement said the government was satisfied that the resolution was based on the principle of Yemeni "national sovereignty and non-intervention in internal affairs."

It said the resolution will make it possible for "internal differences to be resolved by peaceful means and restore peace and stability to our country."

Earlier Thursday, northern forces fired a missile on Aden in their drive to capture the city and crush the southern secession. The missile exploded over Aden after southern forces shot at it, and there were no casualties.

The attack by northern forces came barely five hours after the Security Council called for a cease-fire.

Beidh, the southern leader, announced the south's independence May 20, breaking up the impoverished nation's 4-year-old union. South Yemen has not been recognized internationally.

Saleh, the president, had rejected any suggestion of outside mediation. Beidh has called for the Arab League to oversee negotiations, but has not suggested a willingness to reunify.

The U.N. cease-fire resolution was pushed by Gulf Arab states, considered for the most part sympathetic to the southern side.

On Thursday, the man named prime minister of the southern region, Haidar Abu Bakr al-Attas, announced the formation of a 16-member Cabinet, cementing the secession.

Yemen, which sits on the Arabian peninsula's southern cape, is an impoverished nation of 14 million that derives its main income from oil exports.

Eight children were reported injured Wednesday when two northern jets bombed a residential area of Little Aden, 20 miles southwest of the city.

The south said the attack was aimed at an oil pipeline on Little Aden's edge but that the two jets released their bombs prematurely, badly damaging one house. Oil refining facilities were not damaged.

The north, however, denied the southern claim and said the air strikes targeted a southern Yemeni military camp. In a broadcast on northern San'a radio, an unidentified military source claimed the north would not target civilian areas and economic installations.
