PAMPA — The Top O' Texas Rodeo Association again is sponsoring the "Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt" in conjunction with the Top O' Texas Rodeo, July 14-16. A "Golden Horseshoe" has been hidden in the area, and clues will be available each day that will help locate the horseshoe.

The lucky person who finds the horseshoe will receive a box seat, valued at $144, to all three rodeo performances and also will be able to ride in the rodeo parade on Saturday morning, July 16.

This year, the way to find the clues has changed. The clues will be placed in selected stores in Pampa. Persons seeking the horseshoe can only get the clues by going into that store. The kind of store will be listed each day in The Pampa News and on KGRO/KOMX Radio. No clues will be given in the newspaper or on the radio. Merchants have been asked not to give any information out over the telephone.

Questions concerning the horseshoe hunt, which begins Wednesday, may be addressed to rodeo office manager Jane Jacobs at the rodeo office in the Pampa Community Building, 200 N. Ballard, or by calling 669-3241.

PAMPA — John L. Triplehorn, chairman of the Panhandle Veterans Hall of Fame, is reminding area residents that the deadline for nominating deserving veterans for induction into the hall is July 26.

"The cut-off date for submitting your nomination is fast approaching, and I want to encourage everyone to get their information to me as soon as possible," Triplehorn said. "It would be very sad to let a deserving veteran go unrecognized for the lack of a little effort on our part."

Nominations should include information on the veterans military service — armed forces branch, years of service, awards or medals received, any combat experience — as well as information on subsequent career, community service, organizations and similar matters. Nominations should be mailed to: Panhandle Veterans Hall of Fame, P.O. Box 657, Pampa, Texas 79066.

PAMPA — The City of Pampa will be having its Fourth of July fireworks show at 9:15 p.m. today at Recreation Park east of the city. Those attending the show are reminded that under city ordinance, no fireworks will be permitted in the park except for those provided in the show.

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — The Fourth of July is the busiest time of year for prisoner-seamstress Julia Miller, who never stops working her sewing machine as she talks about her job.

Miller, a 40-year-old former social worker serving 18 to 20 years for manslaughter, makes American flags. They are a symbol to her of freedom, and of the criminal justice system that took hers away.

"Sewing gives meaning to my life," says Miller, humming gospel songs as she stitched red and white stripes together. "It frees your mind. It's a way of being free inside the prison."

Miller is one of 24 flag makers at the women's prison in Framingham. Started in 1896, it's the oldest program of its kind in the country.

OTTAWA (AP) — An overhaul of Canada's national transportation system could affect more than 14,000 jobs, officials documents said.

Transport Minister Doug Young outlined spending cuts of Transport Canada that may include the privatization of operations such as air traffic control and airports, according to the documents obtained by the Ottawa Citizen.

The ministry has a staff of 19,041 full-time and term employees, which could be cut to 4,682 within five years, the documents said.

The cuts are suggested in a review by management consultants Deloitte & Touche of the department's operations. Transport officials refused to comment.

Young said he might eliminate or reduce $1.6 billion in direct transportation subsidies and commercialize 75 percent of department operations.

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Alberta health professionals from acupuncturists to nurses and psychologists should be allowed to admit and treat patients in hospital, a government report said.

The report, obtained by the Calgary Herald, recommended doctors share hospital privileges for the first time with 27 self-regulated health professions.

Doctors are now the only professionals who are allowed to admit and treat patients in Alberta hospitals. But new rules could mean non-doctors would be able to order tests, drugs and treatment, admit and treat patients and refer them to other practitioners.

Zionist youth re-enact 1947 'Exodus' incident

By DAN PERRY
Associated Press Writer

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — As the "Exodus" cut through stormy waters off Israel's northern shores, a low-flying plane with British markings dropped pamphlets warning the hundreds of young American Jews on board they would be arrested if they disembarked.

Two uniformed men who identified themselves as British officers approached on a tugboat.

"You know our strength is greater than yours. Stop immediately!" shouted 23-year-old

Sharon Pardo through a megaphone, struggling to mask his Israeli accent.

The 600-odd passengers Sunday were reenacting the 1947 odyssey of the Exodus, a failed but celebrated chapter in the pre-state Zionists' effort to smuggle Jews into British-ruled Palestine.

The organizers — U.S. Zionist groups and Israel's quasi-governmental Jewish Agency — tried to give the youth an inkling of the illegal immigrants' hardship.

"I've been living for three days on nothing but bread and water," said Allison Jacobs, a 16-year-old from Livingston,

N.J. "But it's been an unforgettable experience."

The project reflected efforts to reshape relations with Jews outside Israel and strengthen the U.S. Jewish community — at almost six million, the world's largest — at a time of increasing concern about assimilation with non-Jews.

Organizers said that by reenacting history the teenagers will understand and identify with Israel in a more personal way.

"We want to show these kids that there was an incredible history that happened to Jews and they are a part of it," said Ina Strauss, an organizer from New York City.

As the "British" warned of impending arrest, some of the teenagers waved joyfully from the sun deck. Others played along by making rude gestures, chanting Zionist slogans and waving Israeli flags.

When they disembarked at Haifa port they were taken to the nearby site of a former British detention camp on elegant buses labeled "British Forces." The last few sandy smiles were to be crossed on foot before starting a five-week tour of the country.

Jewish Agency chairman Mendel Kaplan told the group he hoped the experience would lead some of them to immigrate. Rich Kaplan, a 16-year-old from Randolph, N.J., said he was looking forward to meeting his Jerusalem cousins. "After World War II my grandfather went to America and his brother went to Israel," he said. "It could have been the other way around."

The British ruled Palestine from World War I until 1948. Although they originally supported the Zionist idea of establishing a Jewish national home there, Arab opposition led them to harshly restrict immigration in the last decade of their mandate.

Fireworks

Benny Williams, left, sacks up some fireworks for Ryan Nash, 10, while Ryan's dad, David Stidham of Pampa, watches the purchase Sunday at the Calvary Baptist Church youth fireworks stand on South Barnes. Others will be making fireworks purchases today in preparation for Independence Day celebrations. (Pampa News by Darlene Holmes)

Clinton's health care plan falling to pieces

CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is still fighting for health coverage for every American, but his plan for reaching that goal is in tatters now that four congressional committees have finished reworking it and a fifth gave up in frustration.

Remnants of the original, 1,342-page Clinton Health Security Act can be found in the bills that Democrats pushed through the Senate and House Labor panels and the Ways and Means Committee in the past three weeks.

But the Senate Finance Committee, in a version it approved Saturday on a 12-8 vote, tacked sharply away from the president's plan and his promise that all Americans would have private insurance by 1998.

The other committees kept the foundation of the Clinton blueprint: compulsory coverage for every worker on the job, with employers footing most of the costs. Finance rejected it.

Clinton's other bedrock promise, cost containment, also stands in jeopardy, as key committees fudged or abandoned the president's plan to impose strict limits on private insurance premiums as a backdrop.

Clinton's idea of forcing most Americans to buy health insurance through exclusive, government-organized cooperatives died long ago. A myriad of other details in the plan written by Hillary Rodham Clinton and legions of White House advisers wound up in the congressional dustbin.

"Some of the grand schemes have just gone by the wayside," said Marilyn Moon of the Urban Institute, a think tank.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas was more blunt.

"Employer mandates are dead, price controls are dead, these big mandatory alliances are dead,"

Dole said Sunday on ABC's This Week With David Brinkley.

He said the Clinton plan was "too much of a program and too complicated and the American people aren't ready for a totally government-run system."

The biggest blow to Clinton was the Finance Committee's decision to scrap even a standby requirement forcing all employers to buy insurance. The fifth panel, House Energy and Commerce, deadlocked over that issue.

Finance also killed a 1 percent payroll tax on large employers that Clinton wanted; it survived in the bill produced by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Congress has made Clinton's plan "less regulatory and less bureaucratic and more flexible," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. "The bottom line is still intact: national health reform that gets all Americans under the tent."

But he said the White House would have been better off sending Congress a vastly shorter bill and letting lawmakers hash out the details.

"The notion of a standard and comprehensive benefit package has survived," said Diane Rowland, senior vice president of the Kaiser Family Foundation, a non-profit group promoting health care for all Americans. "That's what (Clinton) put on the table."

All the committee bills, like Clinton's plan, rely on major savings in Medicare and Medicaid to help cover the 39 million uninsured. They generally seek to shift the poor from Medicaid into private plans.

Clinton also promised new drug benefits for the elderly and a new long-term care program for the disabled. He wanted taxpayers to pick up 80 percent of the health premiums for early retirees.

Senate Finance and Ways and Means delayed the long-term care program and discarded the subsidies for early retirees.

Tobacco industry says biased scientists have skewed data

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tobacco industry says it's being victimized by biased scientists who skew data to make it falsely appear that smoke — yours or somebody else's — is bad for you.

And it's spending millions of dollars in advertising to take that message to vulnerable Americans already reeling from scandals involving cancer and radiation research.

"The general public has a skepticism about the results of scientific inquiry and they're playing on that," said Dr. Morton Lippman of New York University Medical Center.

The tobacco industry is facing increasing hostility: The Justice Department is investigating it for fraud and perjury, indoor smoking bans are on the rise and the government wants to regulate nicotine.

So it's fighting back through full-page newspaper ads. Once a week, R.J. Reynolds says smoking's no worse than caffeine or fatty hamburgers and spreads dire warnings that the government wants to ban all cigarettes — even in private homes.

Philip Morris capped off a weeklong attack with a three-page ad in 40 Sunday newspapers that charged the Environmental Protection Agency with using seriously flawed science to label secondhand smoke a carcinogen.

Scientists say the ads aren't truthful but they don't have big enough wallets to counterattack. The companies won't say how much they're spending, but a single full-page ad in the Sunday Washington Post costs $64,000.

"Unfortunately, it's not uncommon for an industry to be able to outspend the public interest," said Jeff Cohen of the media watchdog group Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting.

So what's real and what's smoke?

— Reynolds says the government will ban all smoking. Congress and Food and Drug Commissioner David Kessler insist that's not true. Instead, they may regulate the amount of nicotine in cigarettes.

— Reynolds says smoking is a habit no worse than caffeine. But Kessler says nicotine hooks people, enough that smoking kills 400,000 Americans a year.

— Philip Morris is reprinting an article by a media critic that claims the EPA, in labeling secondhand smoke a carcinogen, used invalid studies and skewed statistics, calling a study significant when it had only a 90 percent chance of accuracy instead of the usual 95 percent chance.

These are old arguments, ones that a panel of nine independent scientists, headed by Lippman, found without basis more than a year ago.

Still, the EPA issued an unprecedented defense last week. It insisted that 24 of the 30 studies it used linked secondhand smoke to cancer and nine were statistically significant.

The statistics are tricky, but using a 90 percent "confidence interval" is OK when scientists are sure a substance won't have a particular effect, said Dr. Ron Davis, editor of the international journal Tobacco Control. In other words, no one says secondhand smoke is good. So 90 percent was enough to detect either no effect or a bad one, and was the same level EPA used to label radon and dioxin dangerous.

Asians, Africans surprised by air conditioners in Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Some Africans and Asians, no strangers to heat and humidity, say they don't quite understand Texans' tendency to pump up their air conditioners during the sweltering summers.

"It's amazing how the native people have developed traditional technology to deal with the heat," said Bobo Brown, a Nigerian visiting Dallas for the World Cup soccer tournament.

Statistics show that air conditioners are in 97 percent of the homes in Dallas, where Sweden beat Saudi Arabia 3-1 in the World Cup Sunday while temperatures were in the 90s.

Brown said Nigerians cover their homes, even those made of brick, with a layer of heat-absorbing mud rather than air conditioning. Roofs are topped with thatch that allows air to circulate and water is cooled by storing it in earthenware jars wrapped in wet cloth.

"The water comes to you cooler than the fridge," Brown said. "A great percentage of the population survives without air conditioning. But they don't miss it."

Charles Ku, a Taiwan-born dentist living in Dallas, has seen plenty of hot days with and without artificially cooled air.

Ku said people in his homeland depend on fans made of paper or leaves, and every adult carries one. They don't rely on, afternoons breaks common in many other hot-weather countries, he said.

"The Chinese are the most hard-working people in the world," he said. "No matter how hot it gets, nobody stops."

People who live without air conditioning really are better able to handle the heat, said Dr. Paul Bell, an environmental psychologist at Colorado State University. People sweat "more efficiently" and adapt in other ways, he said.

Temperatures heading into the 90s are always connected to increased violence. Once temperatures soar past 100, the violence drops because people are too uncomfortable even for that, Bell said.

Bell, born in Dallas, is all too familiar with the city's sweltering summers.

"That's why I left," he said.

Business leases ignition interlock devices to DWI offenders

DALLAS (AP) — It's a deadly combination found all too often on long, hot holiday weekends: drinking and driving.

A recent Texas law, however, aims to hobble drunken drivers on the verge of repeating their crime, and a young business is one of those that provides the high-tech fetters.

Under a state law that took effect last September, people with three or more DWI convictions — a felony — can only drive vehicles equipped with a device to measure the alcohol on their breath while they are on probation. The law also says Texas courts can require the devices on a car driven by someone with their first or second DWI, a misdemeanor.

The hand-held instrument, called an ignition interlock device, is a deep lung breath analyzer designed to prevent people from driving when their breath alcohol concentration is above a set limit.

Irving-based Smart Start Inc. distributes the ignition interlock devices and is the state's exclusive distributor for LifeSafer Interlock Inc., based in Cincinnati, Ohio. Eighteen-month-old Smart Start also has offices around the state, president Bettye Rodgers said.

Ms. Rodgers calls the device "a behavior modifier for the person who can't control his own discipline."

"We can't control whether a person drinks or not, but we can control whether or not he gets in his car, if we put it on his car early enough," she said.

After a device is installed, the driver must blow into it and get an acceptable reading before the car will start. In addition, the unit can be programmed to call for random tests while the car is in use or set so the car can only be driven at certain times.

The contraptions have been available for several years, but now have built-in computer memory chips and can provide computer printouts.

If a driver racks up three violations, after 24 hours, he can't start the car unless he goes in to have the data downloaded and the device reset. That data is immediately passed along to his probation officer, and all testing data is downloaded and passed along to the county monthly.

The offender must pay $75 to have the approximately $700 unit installed and $55 per month to lease it from Smart Start.

Ms. Rodgers won't say exactly how many units her company has leased, but she estimated that all competitors combined have fewer than 1,500 machines leased in Texas now.

LifeSafer president Richard Freund said his company is one of four that make the devices. LifeSafer has about 3,500 units nationwide, or up to one-third of an estimated 12,000-15,000 total, Freund said.

Rebels take military HQ in Kigali

GISENYI, Rwanda (AP) — Rebels besieging Rwanda's capital of Kigali pushed into the city's center today and captured army headquarters, U.N. military observers said.

Meanwhile, rebel forces on the move in southwestern Rwanda anticipate a military showdown if French troops insist on establishing a no-flight zone in the region.

"If the French create that zone, they are only protecting the Hutu army and its killer militias," said James Rwego, Brussels representative for the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front.

After a weekend of furious mortar and small-arms battle, rebel troops in Kigali captured the Ministry of Defense and army headquarters as well as at least two Roman Catholic church compounds that were in government territory, said U.N. military spokesman Jean-Guy Plante.

In recent weeks, many people who had been sheltering in the church properties were killed by civilian militiamen armed and trained by the army.

With the capital in its hands, the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front would be able to turn its forces toward the western swath where the self-proclaimed Rwandan government has taken refuge.

Gen. Jean-Claude Lafourcade, commander of a French rescue operation in Rwanda, urged other nations Sunday to intervene in the bitter ethnic battles. The rebels are mostly members of the Tutsi ethnic group; the government is led by rival Hutus.

"If there is not help soon, we will face very grave humanitarian problems," he said. "If Kigali falls, there will be massacres and a flight of refugees to the west."

The rebels also are close to over-running the southwestern town of Butare, where French forces and rebels had their first skirmish Sunday, Lafourcade said.

The rebels warned of more fighting if the French go ahead with plans to set up a "safe zone" for refugees near Butare.

"If the French create that zone, they are only protecting the Hutu army and its killer militias," said James Rwego, a rebel spokesman in Brussels.

"We want to avoid any confrontation, but if the French get between us and the killers, we anticipate trouble," he said.

Poll: Most feel Americans are less patriotic than in previous decades

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Most Americans think they're very patriotic, but their neighbors aren't, according to a Gallup poll.

Two-thirds of those polled described themselves as extremely patriotic (21 percent) or very patriotic (43 percent). Just 28 percent said they are only somewhat patriotic and 7 percent said they are not especially patriotic.

But nearly three-quarters of respondents said Americans are less patriotic today than in previous decades.

Feelings of patriotism varied by age, with younger adults least likely to feel very patriotic.

The poll was commissioned by America's Talking, NBC's all-talk cable network, to use on its July 4 launch date. Results were released Sunday.

Almost half of those polled said the next generation of Americans will enjoy less personal freedom than the current generation.

Older, wealthier people were more likely to see government regulations as a serious threat to freedom. Younger people and non-whites were more likely to see lack of economic opportunity as a serious threat.

The Gallup Organization interviewed 1,013 adults by phone June 17-19. Results have a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

No Lotto winner; $25 million prize

By The Associated Press

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $17 million.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 29, 31, 33, 35, 47, 48.

There were 144 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $2,002. There were 7,929 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $131. And there were 155,158 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $25 million.

Nudists seek exposure

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas nudists are donating their clothes to charity as part of this week's national Nude Recreation Week.

The donation to Faith Mission and Help Center and Shelter in Brenham is part of nudists' annual retreat at the Live Oak Ranch in the southeast Texas town of Washington.

Attendees hope the retreat will bring some exposure to their lifestyle.

"We do throw our doors open, and we do welcome the public to come experience what this is," said Linda Krabill, general manager of the Live Oak Ranch.

Krabill said people may keep their clothes on while checking out the nudist lifestyle at a July 9-10 open house.

Nude Recreation Week is promoted by the American Sunbathers Association, a collection of 200 U.S. nude clubs and resorts. The organization has about 45,000 members, not counting skinnydippers or other so-called "casual" nudists.

Organizers say they want to clean up nudism's image and discourage judging people by what they wear — or don't wear.

Chris Mortont of the Austin-area Hill Country Nudists, who often gather at Hippie Hollow on Lake Travis, insists nudism isn't immoral.

"It just means that you enjoy going without clothing," Mortont said.

Clinton reassures Russia's anxious neighbors on security

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton, preparing for a four-nation trip to Europe, says "a responsible, strong Russia" is not a threat to Central and Eastern Europe.

In a series of interviews with foreign journalists and reporters from ethnic newspapers in the United States, Clinton said he could sympathize with anxieties within Poland and elsewhere about what one questioner called "renewed pressure and imperialistic tendencies" by Russia.

But he added: "I think it's important not to overreact to that. We watch this with great interest. And our concern and commitment to Poland is great."

In an interview transcript released Sunday, Clinton said, "There will be tensions and disagreements from time to time, but I believe we can have a united Europe with a responsible, strong Russia, and we are going to work for that."

Russia enrolled last month in NATO's Partnership for Peace, which offers former Warsaw Pact nations broad political and military cooperation and holds out the possibility of eventual NATO membership. In addition, Russia and NATO adopted a joint declaration that said both have "important contributions to make to European stability and security."

Russia's potential influence is a sensitive matter in other East European capitals, which worry that Moscow could have too strong a say in the alliance's dealings with them.

Clinton cited Russia's efforts to help promote peace in Bosnia and Georgia and progress on withdrawing its troops from the Baltic states as examples where Russia, "while more active in its area, in its neighborhood, if you will, has been largely constructive."

"I believe that we have a chance to work out a constructive relationship where the Russians say, 'We want an active foreign policy, but we will recognize the freedom and the independence of all our neighbors,'" Clinton said.

Asked if he could envision potential reunification of Russia with Ukraine, Belarus or other former Soviet republics, Clinton said, "it depends upon whether such movements would develop out of a genuine democratic movement and a free will of the people involved."

"I think the people of Central and Eastern Europe will know ... in their hearts and minds whether it was a grassroots, honest, democratic impulse," he added. "And that will be the test."

Asked when NATO would be ready to offer former Warsaw Pact members full membership, Clinton said that he had no doubt NATO would be expanded but that some members weren't yet ready for that step.

"I can't do that alone," he said. "That probably won't be done until sometime next year because of the feeling of all the NATO members about it."

He stressed that Russia, where there is resistance to early NATO membership for Poland, would not have veto power over what countries can join, nor was it true "that something bad has to happen in Russia before we expand NATO."

Clinton said that in the interim, it was important not to underestimate the Partnership for Peace, which he said demonstrates "a real desire to try to prove that we can unify Europe from a security point of view."

Clinton leaves Tuesday on a week-long European trip, stopping first in Latvia to become the first American president to visit a Baltic state.

Next, he travels to Warsaw, Poland, to meet with President Lech Walesa and address the Polish parlia-

One of deadliest days on Texas roads

By STEFANI G. KOPENEC
Assistant Press Writer

WEATHERFORD (AP) — In one of the bloodiest days ever on Texas highways, 40 people died in separate crashes Sunday, including 14 people killed here when a tractor-trailer rear-ended a family's van.

Eleven people died in another collision also involving a tractor-trailer near the West Texas town of Snyder; another six died in a crash near Ballinger, also in West Texas.

The others died in separate accidents around the state, said Mike Cox, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"It's not quite the deadliest day, but it's rapidly approaching that," Cox said.

The deadliest day on Texas roads was Christmas Eve 1975, when 42 people were killed. On Dec. 19, 1981, 41 people died on the state's highways.

In the Weatherford crash, the 18-wheeler hit the van with such force that its front bumper reached the van's front seat, said Weatherford Fire Chief George Teague.

The impact launched the wreckage 600 feet down Interstate 20, throwing a child from the van and leaving a trail of clothing and twisted metal. Eleven other children and two adults were killed inside the van.

The van driver, a 21-year-old woman, two children and the trucker were injured.

The family was on its way from Los Angeles to Vicksburg, Miss., for a family reunion.

The driver, Claudia Funches of Los Angeles, told police she'd pulled to the side of the highway when the 1977 Dodge van stalled. She got it started, pulled back into the travel lane and was hit from behind about 9:30 a.m.

"The impact was so great that the van was knocked 600 feet from the point where it was struck and then exploded into flames," Cox said.

Traffic was diverted as firefighters, state troopers and others worked to clear the scene, about 30 miles west of Fort Worth.

It took authorities nearly three hours to extract the badly burned bodies from the van. The dead were taken to the Tarrant County medical examiner's office, Cox said.

Funches, 47, was in critical condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas. The truck driver, Richie Darrell Ware, 37, of Arlington, was in good condition at Campbell Hospital in Weatherford.

Two 4-year-old boys and Nichole Funches, 21, were taken to other hospitals. One child was in good condition, while the other's condition was unknown. The woman was in stable condition.

Authorities were shocked by the carnage.

"It's definitely horrifying," said Jeff Moss, chief of the Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department. "It looked like pretty much the impact had killed most of them. That's where it really gets you, hits close to home."

Shortly after 4:15 a.m., 11 people were killed and six injured when a tractor-trailer rig collided broadside into a pickup truck with three adults in the cab and 12 children crowded into its open bed, Cox said. The accident about 10 miles southeast of Snyder on U.S. 84 at FM 644, 90 miles southeast of Lubbock.

Three children, ages 5 to 12, were flown to University Medical Center in Lubbock, where they were in critical condition Sunday afternoon, a nursing supervisor said.

All of the dead and most of the injured were related, Cox said. The family was traveling from Snyder to Lorraine when the accident occurred, he said.

One person was in serious condition at Cogdell Memorial Hospital in Snyder with bruises, lacerations and a possible head injury, a hospital spokeswoman said. The two drivers suffered minor injuries, Cox said.

The Ballinger crash occurred about 2:30 a.m., when a 1981 Lincoln Town Car loaded with eight people slammed into the underside of a tractor-trailer cab overturned on Texas 158, about 50 miles south of Abilene.

Six passengers died, and the driver and his wife were injured, said Tom Barkley, a DPS trooper in Ballinger. Shortly after the accident, the wife, who was 7 1/2 months pregnant, delivered twins. The twins died after delivery.

The trucker, who was standing alongside the road when the accident occurred, was admitted to a hospital for observation.

The Weatherford collision ranks as the sixth-worst traffic accident in Texas history, Cox said.

The deadliest single accident occurred on March 14, 1940, when a train struck a truck at a Hidalgo County railroad crossing, killing 29 people.

Cox said Sunday was the first time in which more than one highway accident killed six or more people in one day.

All of the accidents were under investigation, he said. Whether alcohol was a factor was not immediately clear.

"There's never been a day like this in Texas history," Cox said. "This looks like an extraordinarily bloody weekend in Texas."

First Lady rallies teachers behind health reform

By CAROLE FELDMAN
AP Education Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton rallied the nation's teachers behind the administration's health care plan, saying that for millions of Americans universal coverage is "literally a matter of life and death."

Delegates to the National Education Association's annual convention are filling out pre-printed postcards and writing their own letters to members of Congress urging approval of health care for all and employer-funded health insurance.

Speaking Sunday against a backdrop depicting children's faces, Mrs. Clinton appealed to the nearly 10,000 delegates to "take home to every corner of this great country why you personally and why the NEA and why a majority of Americans favor universal coverage."

"Health care is not a political issue," she told the unabashedly supportive audience of teachers and other school employees. "When you look in the eyes of a sick child, you are not looking at a Republican or a Democrat — you are looking at an American who deserves to be taken care of."

The first lady made no mention of the political setback Saturday in the Senate Finance Committee, which reported a bill that falls short of the Clinton administration's goal of universal health care coverage.

She spoke instead in general terms.

"This debate will come down to whether or not the Congress of the United States is able to hear and see the problems in front of their eyes and extend health insurance coverage to every American, or whether they will hear the well-organized voices of opposition," she said.

"You must join with the president, me, all of us in Washington who are trying to give voice to the literally millions and millions of Americans for whom this debate over health care reform is not a political issue, not an abstract academic discussion, but literally a matter of life or death."

The 2.2 million-member NEA has been solidly behind the administration's plan from the start, and Mrs. Clinton's appearance had the trappings of a political convention. She was introduced by a videotape trumpeting the administration's achievements and showing her listening to the stories of children whose families suffered because they lacked health insurance.

NEA President Keith Geiger praised her "brilliant spirit" and said the union's members are proud to share her dream of a health care system that "puts people ahead of profit."

Phil Peterson, a high school science teacher from Evanston, Wyo., pledged to write to Congress to express his support for the Clinton plan and to make it part of his camaign for the state legislature.

"She hit a nerve with a lot of people in this convention," he said. "We see some kids come to school sick with no health care and we have to deal with them in school. They don't learn well when they are sick."

Melvin Graham, a kindergarten teacher in Brucetown, W.Va., said he would go home and do whatever he could to make universal health care a reality. So did Jimmie Witherspoon, a school mechanic in Pensacola, Fla., and Robert and Wanda Gehlbach, junior high school English teachers from Linglestown, Pa.

"Educators should be leaders," said Arne Pearson, who teaches a combined second- and third-grade class in Burbank, Calif.

Despite the enthusiastic welcome given Mrs. Clinton, some delegates did have reservations about the administration's health care proposals.

"I can't disagree with everyone having available health care; it's how we get there" that is the problem, said Sue Coons, a high school Spanish and French teacher in Minonk, Ill.

The delegates on Sunday approved by voice vote a resolution putting the NEA on record in favor of a single-payer health care plan under which the government would pay most medical bills. The Clinton plan envisioned a system under which people would buy insurance through government-organized alliances, but that proposal died in Congress.

Something fishy planned for next flight of Columbia

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — It's NASA's fishiest flight yet.

When Columbia lifts off Friday on a two-week laboratory mission, the space shuttle will be brimming with goldfish, killifish, jellyfish, fish eggs, toad eggs, newt eggs, newts and baby sea urchins, not to mention flies, slime mold — and sushi.

Japan's first female astronaut, Chiaki Mukai, is taking enough sushi to feed the entire seven-person crew, but it's the vegetarian variety because raw tuna and eel might present a health risk.

Rest assured: the rest of the cargo is strictly for scientific purposes.

The countdown begins Tuesday. Scientists want to know how the fish and other creatures develop, behave and, in some cases, mate in weightlessness. Their findings should provide clues as to how human embryos might develop in space, essential information if astronauts are to ever colonize the moon and other planets.

"We're all made of cells and we have structures which are similar," said Dorothy Spangenberg, a developmental biologist at the Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk, Va., who is sending up 126 jellyfish.

The newt embryo resembles a human embryo in the early stages of development, said Michael Wiederhold, a researcher at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio. He and Japanese scientists are sending four female Japanese red-bellied newts and 144 newt eggs up with Columbia.

"The sequences that a newt egg goes through are very similar to those in the human," Wiederhold said. "You'd have a hard time telling a newt's inner ear, the part that I'm most familiar with, from a human inner ear. Might be a little bit smaller, but it has the same elements."

Groups sweep churches for voters

DALLAS (AP) — Several conservative political groups aimed to register 25,000 new voters at Dallas-area churches Sunday with hopes of adding to their growing political clout.

Four organizations that wield increasing political importance, particularly in the Republican Party, sponsored the voter-registration drive, which they called "Patriotic Sunday."

The groups said a successful drive would cement the marriage of religion and politics by adding another wave of Christian "pro-family" voters to the rolls.

"This, in my opinion, is not just a voter registration drive. This has the potential for being Christian history in the making," said project coordinator Craig Claybrook, who said he hopes the event can be duplicated elsewhere across the nation.

Claybrook said at least 150 churches in five counties agreed to participate. They run the gamut of denominations, he said.

"We've got Catholics working with Baptists, charismatics working with mainliners, blacks working with whites, fundamentalists with so-called moderates," he said.

"As I see it, Christians are reporting back for duty and the sleeping giant is rubbing its eyes, starting to wake up."

Joe Cutbirth, a spokesman for the Texas Democratic Party, said people should remember that "Patriotic Sunday" was organized by political groups, not churches.

Sponsors of the voter registration drive are the Texas Eagle Forum, the Dallas County Christian Coalition, the Free Market Foundation and the American Family Association of Texas.

"This has nothing to do with religion and everything to do with taking over political institutions," Cutbirth said. "It's these extreme political people trying to use deeply held religious beliefs to further their own agenda. This is the most overt example we've seen."

Event organizers said they want to involve more people in the voting process, but that it doesn't matter to them whether they register Democrats or Republicans.

Police, FBI find girl kidnapped from her home

LODI, Calif. (AP) — A naked 12-year-old girl was found safe Sunday a day after she was abducted at knife point from her home in a case similar to Polly Klaas' kidnapping.

Katie Romanek was found in a rural area east of San Francisco Bay after a search by more than 100 police officers and some volunteers. The suspect was found with her.

Police arrested Steve Reece Cochran, 25, a transient with a mustache, scruffy beard, shoulder-length hair, and tattoos on his arms and back. He was booked on investigation of kidnapping.

The girl was wearing only socks when she was found, but police declined to say if there was any evidence of a sexual assault. Katie was being examined at the San Joaquin County hospital.

"She has not been seriously hurt. She is in good spirits," police Chief Larry Hansen said.

The girl disappeared Saturday with a man who stopped at the house earlier in the day posing as a home buyer. He fled with her in her sister's car and the search focused on a 5-mile area near where the car was abandoned east of San Francisco.

Officers and FBI agents looked on foot and in planes and helicopters. Authorities issued 20,000 flyers with a picture of Katie and a composite drawing of the suspect, said police Capt. James Schick.

Police also contacted the Polly Klaas Foundation, set up by the girl's family and supporters after her abduction and murder last year. The group helped organize volunteers to search for Katie.

A man, who called himself Steve, came to the door of the upscale home where Katie lived 67 miles east of San Francisco and pretended he was interested in buying the house, which had a "For Sale" sign posted outside.

The girls' parents were out of town on vacation at the time. They returned home Sunday after learning of the abduction.

The man left after talking to Katie's 16-year-old sister, Schick said. But when the older girl left to get pizza for Katie and a visiting friend, he returned. Schick said it wasn't clear how he got into the house.

The man was still in the house when the older sister returned, Schick said.

"She was assaulted by the suspect, who had a knife and held it to her throat, and threatened her with bodily harm," Schick said of the 16-year-old.

The assailant took the 16-year-old upstairs, where Katie and her friend, also 12, were already tied up. After tying up the teen-ager, he left with Katie in the 16-year-old's car.

The 16-year-old and the friend were not harmed.

"There was a comment heard as she was taken out of the house to the effect, 'At least could I have a blanket,'" FBI agent Tom Griffin said of Katie.

The car was found abandoned near a small brush fire, which it apparently sparked. The fire was noticed by a farmer who told authorities he saw one or two people fleeing the car about 25 miles from Lodi.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenant commandment.

Opinion

Feds meddling too much in free speech

One person's creed can be another's annoyance - which is precisely why the federal government should keep out of the nettlesome debate over so-called religious harassment in the workplace.

After all, the very possibility that just about any expression of belief in any philosophy could conceivably offend someone suggests the government is the last entity that should weigh in on such matters. Otherwise, the sky would be the limit in decreeing how we may express ourselves among our co-workers. It is neither within the government's rightful duties nor within its limited competence to draw that line; such micromanagement should be left to employers.

Yet the unnerving prospect of Uncle Sam as society's supreme sensitivity arbiter looms over proposed new workplace-harassment guidelines under review by the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. And that's why a resolution was introduced in Congress last month urging the EEOC at least not to define religious harassment in its proposed guidelines.

Notwithstanding the First Amendment's bar against government intrusion into our respective religious affinities, aren't those in charge of any given workplace the ones best suited to decide what kinds of expression, religious or otherwise, are inappropriate under their particular circumstances? There are so many different work settings in which differing levels of religious expression may be reasonable. And there are so many different ways in which people may express themselves that any attempt to codify them by law would be elusive.

The proposed regulations deem any conduct to be harassment if it "denigrates or shows hostility or aversion" to someone based on their religion as well as their race, gender, age, etc. The law, to be imposed unilaterally by the commission without Congress' approval, essentially would authorize lawsuits by employees who feel intimidated or offended by their work environment.

That obviously opens the door to a lot, perhaps including even consequences that the measure's backers don't intend. While the proposal is being touted (by liberal groups like People for the American Way) in part as a means of checking overzealous proselytizing on the job, there would be little to stop religious people, in turn, from claiming under federal law that some remark or symbol or other form of expression by a co-worker or a superior offended their faith.

Never mind the tidal wave of lawsuits that would follow; think what havoc this could wreak with employee relations.

Our society is litigious enough, to say the least. And given the ever-more-intrusive "activism" toward business by the EPA, OSHA and a host of other federal, state and local bureaucracies, the government has long since overstepped the bounds of its rightful authority over private employers. Things have gotten bad enough with sexual harassment claims, some made merely because of offense taken by posters on display, magazines read in the workplace, statements made in releasing tension or anger, or other similar situations which are stretching the definition for "sexual harassment" beyond its obvious meaning.

Let's not make matters still worse by letting government dictate etiquette among employees in religious matters.

"Your name, age, occupation."
"Jean-Jacques Delors, 24, unemployed."
"Now, Mr. Delors, you understand that under United States laws and regulations, we need to establish whether in fleeing Haiti, you are doing so in order to avoid political persecution, or whether you are simply looking for a better standard of living and better employment opportunities. Which of the two is it, in your case?"
"Yes."
"No, no, Mr. Delors. You have to tell me why you left Haiti."
"If I stay Haiti, they kill me."
"Ah. That's the kind of thing we need to get into. Now: Why would they kill you?"
"I am unemployed."
"No. They would not kill you because you were unemployed - no, if they did that, they'd kill 45 percent of all Haitians."
"Yes."
"What do you mean, 'Yes'? I am asking: Why would the government of Haiti want to kill Jean-Jacques Delors?"
"They do not like me."
"Why don't they like you?"
"Because I vote for Father Aristide."
"Are you saying that the government is prepared to kill everybody who voted for Father Aristide? That would mean 67 percent of all Haitians."
"Yes."
"Please stop saying 'Yes,' every time I ask you a question. We need PROOF that you would be persecuted or killed."
"You want proof?"
"Yes."
"I give you proof."
"Well ... what is your proof?"
"I voted for Aristide."
"Mr. Delors, we are not getting anywhere. I KNOW you voted for Aristide, but we also know that the government is not rounding up everybody who voted for Aristide. What did you do before you were unemployed?"

"I never not unemployed."
"You mean, you are equipped to do only ... manual labor?"
"If you like, I do manual labor."
"No! I'm not asking that question. I'm asking you to tell me what government official in Haiti threatened you, causing you to leave the country. What did he say he was going to do to you if you stayed?"
"He will not give me work."
"But that is not a political problem, Mr. Delors. That is an economic problem, and under our laws, we can't let you into the United States simply because you are looking for a better economic opportunity."
"If I go back to Haiti, they find me, they tie me up, they put me in iron chains, they put coal fire under me, they turn me slowly until I completely burn."
"Mr. Delors, I know all the brutal practices of many of your leaders. But I need to know why they are directed PERSONALLY against you. Were you ever arrested?"
"Oh yes, 15 times."
"What were you charged with when you were arrested?"
"For voting for Father Aristide."
"But you didn't vote for Father Aristide 15 times. He only ran once. What were the other 14 offenses?"
"They do not like my politics."

"Ah! That's more like it. So they harass you, arrest you 15 times. What do they do after they bring you to court? What do the prosecutors say about you?"
"That I voted for Father Aristide."
"Why did they let you out of court, out of prison, if they wanted to execute you?"
"I escaped."
"Ah! How did you escape? Did the resistance get you out of jail?"
"The resistance? Yes. There is much resistance, but they also unemployed."
"Mr. Delors, my responsibility is to classify your application to enter the United States. If you have reason to fear for your life or liberty on returning, then I can file to admit you, but if you are here primarily to benefit from our welfare legislation and other social protections, then you must wait in line like everybody else."
"Thank you very much."
"Thank me for what? You haven't given me evidence on the basis of which I can claim that you are a political prisoner."
"Then maybe while they are roasting me, they let in the wild pigs to eat me bit by bit."
"PLEASE, Mr. Delors. I do not need descriptions of voodoo torture."
"You have voodoo in America?"
"We ... we use 'voodoo' in other ways, give it other meanings; we use voodoo to mean, well, not true politics, not true economics. But Mr. Delors, the threatened persecution of you by the government of Haiti, that is NOT voodoo. Is it?"
"Absolutely not voodoo, the irons and the fires and the wild pigs."
"Mr. Delors, I am going to stamp your application as 'Further investigation indicated.' You will need to furnish us with greater documentation within 90 days."
"Voodoo documentation?"
"Yes. Voodoo documentation."

LOS ANGELES, 1989 - THE DOMESTIC VIOLENCE CASE OF O.J. SIMPSON

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, July 4, the 185th day of 1994. There are 180 days left in the year. This is Independence Day.

Today's Highlight in History:
On July 4, 1776, the Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence.

On this date:
In 1802, the United States Military Academy officially opened at West Point, N.Y.

In 1826, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson - the second and third presidents of the United States - both died, 50 years to the day after the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

In 1831, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, died in New York City.

In 1872, the 30th president of the United States, Calvin Coolidge, was born in Plymouth, Vt.

In 1946, the Philippines became independent of U.S. sovereignty.

In 1976, Israeli commandos raided Entebbe airport in Uganda, rescuing almost all of the passengers and crew of an Air France jetliner seized by pro-Palestinian hijackers.

Public housing is not working

Whoever plans your public appearances thought it would be nice if you'd speak in Chicago against the backdrop of Robert Taylor Homes.

This is one of the city's infamous public housing projects, but for your appearance, things were tidied up.

You saw it with the graffiti whitewashed, with the elevators cleaned of urine and excrement, with flowers planted in the normally barren courtyard.

Naked basketball rims got new nets. There was fresh paint on places that have not seen fresh paint in 30 years. The pool that's been filled with trash was cleaned and filled with water for your visit. Anything needing fixing got a quick fix - from holes in walls to missing doors and broken windows. Grounds were cleared, and grass was cut.

Public housing in Chicago, undertaken with the best of intentions, has become a no man's land of danger, dirt, drug-dealing and depravity.

We took the people out of the slums without first having taken the slums out of the people. It didn't work.

Paul Harvey

Indeed, Vincent Lane, chairman of the Chicago Housing Authority, concedes that "public housing does not work."

He is proposing a 10-year plan for putting public housing in private hands.

"Get the government out of the housing business," he says. "All government knows is how to screw it up."

Lane has already demonstrated his premise. Five thousand of the city's 41,000 public housing units are already in private hands. Ten thousand will be by the end of this year.

So far, success has convinced Lane that eventually he can get rid of 4,500 government housing employees, saving taxpayers millions.

Lane's "big dream" has the support of Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, and it has received favorable comment from the president, but tearing down and replacing these stone slums will require a considerable investment.

A presently cost-conscious Congress, wanting to go to voters with a promise that "we reduced federal spending," is reticent. It can be argued that our own poor people should get priority over the world's poor, but that is not the prevalent Beltway perspective.

Lane is convinced his plan would bring working people back into the city and provide class integration to the benefit of all concerned.

The bottom line, says Lane, is that "government-managed housing does not work."

P.S. Are you sure this is the government you want managing your health care?

Watch out! Here come the food fascists!

Though they don't wear black boots and brown shirts - or in these times of total sex equality, black pumps and brown blouses - the "food fascists" are running amok. If they aren't stopped soon, our days of eating bacon cheeseburgers, sausage and pepperoni pizzas, and double chocolate fudge ice cream may be numbered.

Led by Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Commissioner David Kessler, a Bush administration holdover, the goal of the food fascists seems pretty clear: Take all the pleasure out of eating.

This would be a real blow to those of us who don't consider rabbit food - celery and carrot sticks and junk like that - the ideal snack while watching Late Show with David Letterman.

But that's our tough luck. Since we'll choose Hagen Dazs macadamia brittle over plain non-fat yogurt every time, Kessler has decided the government needs to protect us from ourselves.

Dubbed "Lord of the Label" by The Washington Post, Kessler is responsible for the daring 1991 FDA raid that captured 24,000 half-gallons of Citrus Hill "fresh choice" orange juice - all because the FDA control freaks didn't like the way the o.j. was labeled.

Now they've decided to do us a favor by requiring food manufacturers to plaster government-approved content labels on all their products. Of course, this means all the good stuff, like Ho-Hos and Cheez-Its and Twinkies, probably will end up with warning labels: "This tastes good, so your government has determined it's bad for you."

All the tasteless stuff, like rice cakes or "tofu" or bean sprouts (like taking a bite of your lawn), will carry the Big Brother Seal of Approval.

Kessler and company even have come up with the bureaucrats' definition of what's healthy and what's not. Of course, it takes a Ph.D. economist with a law degree to understand the fine print. Or, as The Washington Post put it: "Webster's New World Dictionary defines 'healthy' in fewer than 20 words. The government definition will fill a page in the Federal Register," the official guide to Washington's rules and regulations.

Apparently it's never occurred to Kessler that happy and healthy are related concepts, so he and his fellow food fascists have decided healthy means "low in fat, low in saturated fat and low in sodium." In other words, if something tastes so bad it kills your appetite and makes you want to turn in for the night before dinner, it's healthy. If it's rich and creamy, flavorful and delicious, and makes you happy all over when you eat it, it's a prime candidate for the government's killer-food list.

Now don't get me wrong. I believe in healthy eating. I think that if other people want to torture themselves by eating like rabbits, they should be free to do so. As for me, I believe food should give us pleasure. It's all part of God's grand design.

The problem with the government's food-labeling fanaticism is that it's going to cost us lots of money to tell us things we either already know, or don't want to know. We already know carrot sticks are a healthier choice than Wing-Dings. Why do we need the government to tell us all over again? And if we don't want to know - because we want to enjoy our food in peace - all the labels in the world aren't going to change our eating habits.

This is just another example of the government sticking its busy-body nose where it doesn't belong. Somebody needs to tell Kessler to get a life. Meanwhile, my advice to you is: Eat and enjoy. You'll be happier.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Have you noticed that in recent years there seems to be fewer patriotic Americans flying "Old Glory" on Flag Day, Memorial Day and the Fourth of July?

Perhaps this moving piece will stir others to action as it did me.

YOUR FLAG

Hello. Remember me? Some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Star-Spangled Banner, but whatever they call me, I am your flag, the flag of the United States of America.

Something has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you—because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago, people would line up on both sides of the street to watch the parade, and naturally I was leading every one, proudly waving in the breeze.

When your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that his hand was directly over his heart—remember?

And you, I remember, were standing there, straight as a soldier. You didn't have a hat, but you were giving the right salute. Remember your little sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you with her right hand over her heart—remember?

What happened? I'm still the same old flag. Oh, I've added a few more stars since you were a boy, and a lot more blood has been shed since those parades of long ago.

But now, somehow I don't feel as proud as I used to feel. When I come down your street, you just stand there with your hands in your pockets. You give me a small glance, and then you look away. I see children running around you shouting; they don't seem to know who I am.

I saw one man take his hat off, then he looked around, and when he didn't see anybody else take off his hat, he quickly put his on again.

Is it a sin to be patriotic today? Have you forgotten what I stand for, and where I have been? Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea and Vietnam!

Take a look at the memorial honor rolls, and see the names of those patriotic Americans who gave their lives to keep this republic free. When you salute me, you are actually saluting them.

Well, it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So when you see me, please stand straight and place your hand over your heart, and I'll know that you remembered. I'll salute you by waving back!

DEAR ABBY: For your information: Retired officers are authorized to wear their uniforms on ceremonial occasions such as military funerals, memorial services, inaugurations, patriotic parades, national holidays, or other military parades or ceremonies in which any active Army or reserve unit is taking part.

Note: This applies to military retirees, and not those personnel on active or reserve duty.

I know that the above is not nearly as important as whether the North Koreans have nukes or not, but I thought you would like to know.

White is red hot for the summer months

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Features

Bored with black, fed up with florals and don't mind mounds of laundry? Make room for summer whites.

Call white the new black, a tan's best friend — and a color that best reflects the heat.

"The first of all simple colors," according to Leonardo da Vinci.

Shades range from bright whites to pearlized tones, alabaster to vanilla. Besides the ubiquitous white shirts with sweeping tails, tank tops and jeans, there are blazers, pleated tennis skirts and skinny slip dresses.

"It's really difficult for me to come up with an item that we did not sell in white," says Phillip Monaghan, executive vice president of marketing for Express stores in Columbus, Ohio. "Be it a cardigan, T-shirt, skirt or shorts, it's in white. And with mules and stacked-heel shoes, white socks are a must."

What makes white work? Well, summer clothes are a cornucopia of textural interest, such as sheers, meshes, pointelles and crochets.

"With all the natural fabrics such as linens and nubby silks," Monaghan says, "white is the perfect color to show them off."

Adrienne Vittadini likes to do the white thing head-to-toe.

"White is a color that illuminates and shows texture very well," the designer says, "especially on piques and cords. That's because it's the purest form of color, very fresh and clean."

Among Vittadini's white-hot items with surface interest for summer are a hand-knit sweater dress, rag-stitch tank top, linen skirts and trousers and a linen Mandarin collar jacket.

"The real look right now if you're going to wear white is top to bottom," designer Randy Kemper says. "Put on an easy shirt in white over white trousers. I live in white jeans all summer."

White works because it's the ideal clean slate. "White clothes," he says, "are just like an empty canvas."

He advocates brown accessories and a faux tan.

"It's the quintessential summer look," he says, "about as good as you can get."

Designer Tom Platt says he likes white linen for day and white crepe for evening with a touch of silver or other subtle accent.

"One of the biggest problems is the danger of winding up with clothes that look like a nurse's uniform," he says. "As a designer, my solution is to combine a white dress with some silver trim or with a silver chiffon coat or shawl. Or we'll line white chiffon with three or four layers of pink organza. ... It creates frothy, light and happy clothing. It's upbeat."

Benny Lin, fashion director for Macy's East, also endorses white for evening.

"White is a color whose time has come, whether it's a tuxedo-pantsuit or a crepe slip dress," Lin says. "It's a color story, a progression from naturals. Customers have bought a lot of naturals for spring, and now they're ready for white."

But don't wear it if you don't want to stand out.

"To the human eye, pure white comes forward and is perceived as a brilliant color," says Lee Eiseman, executive director of the Pantone Color Institute in Carlstadt, N.J. "It has a coolness associated with ice and snow and things that glisten like stars. It's not a non-presence as far as clothing is concerned."

"You will be noticed."

'Night Shade' is the book that will rattle your nerves

By GEORGE HACKETT
Associated Press Writer

The Central Intelligence Agency is playing deadly, dirty tricks on the American public in Frank Prete's first novel, "Night Shade."

Most of the covert projects — the contamination of major cities — are carried out under the direction of Emmet Prescott, operating without the knowledge of his superiors in the agency.

New York City is sprayed with genetically altered bacteria that causes asthmatic attacks and ear infections. The air in San Francisco is saturated with another form of bacteria responsible for urinary infections, heart trouble and pneumonia. Residents of Florida's Dade County encounter a spray that increases the number of whooping cough cases by 3,000 percent.

What's the reason for such madness? Prescott is testing the nation's vulnerability to these silent weapons, figuring that the response would be the same if used on an enemy in time of war.

He is working on "Operation Night Shade" — the flooding of subways with nerve gases — when two other agents expose the plan and Prescott is reprimanded.

He promises to destroy Harmon Keller and John Tennley, the agents who betrayed him. Prescott hires a hit man who murders Tennley; Keller, realizing he is next, goes into hiding.

A New York City police detective and a TV news reporter learn of Prescott's skulduggery and are determined to protect Keller. But Keller decides to track down Prescott himself. They confront each other one last time in a parking garage that soon echoes with gunfire.

Prete knows how to jangle readers' nerves: Some murder scenes are pretty shocking.

Artist uses a camera as a backup for paintings

By JOHN DINGMAN
For AP Special Features

Artist Allen Montague of Raleigh, N.C., is convinced his eye and his heart are his best photographic tools in turning out a painting.

But he concedes there are times when photography is a valuable tool for him to find the exact details and perspective he needs for the finished paintings.

For example, he cites a painting he has done of a building at Campbell University in North Carolina. The building was not yet complete, so he had to work from a photograph and architectural drawings to get the exact detail. And that's important to him if he's to sell the picture — which, after all, is the key to his business.

It's the sort of picture that will sell to an alumnus of the school, and he knows just how it should look.

The same is true of boat and automobile owners. They want the painting to look exactly like their treasured vehicle.

In such cases, the photos are critical. He has the boat fixed in his memory, but the owner knows just where every sail and line goes, and if the painting is off, the owner will spot the flaw immediately.

Another big factor in the amount of pictures Montague will shoot is the location.

If the scene is in his home area around Raleigh, his memory will serve him well. In addition, he may move a tree from one spot to another for better composition. And he has a strong reliance for his feeling for color. A good color shot can pinpoint what he is after, but usually the picture is in his mind before he picks up a brush.

Surprisingly, Montague has not had any formal training in painting, although his skills have brought him national recognition.

His interest in the outdoors has earned him the position of a lifetime artist for Ducks Unlimited, and principal landscape artist for Trout, Quail and Bass Unlimited, where his background and local interest help in turning out accurate wildlife art. His paintings bring a realistic approach that give nostalgia to the simplest works.

When a camera is most important to him is when he strays from his home base, and he needs a bit of help for his keen memory. Montague says he always has a camera with him when he goes into the field. He uses a 35mm camera and a standard color film.

His adventures began with a

Nikon, but it was stolen, and now he uses a Canon for much of his work. It's a basic model, and he is giving serious thought to a more modern camera, with autofocus and the like.

An introduction to a sophisticated point-and-shoot has him looking into the convenience and size advantages they offer.

He also has developed an interest in Polaroid cameras, because, as he says, he wants the results immediately. However, he finds the pictures do not measure up to a good 35mm shot in either sharpness or color.

He may take just one or two shots of a subject to pin down the details. But if it is something new, he may shoot from a number of angles to lock the image into his memory.

The more details in a painting, the more value he can get from a photo. But as he gets more and more into abstract work, the more he depends on that keen eye. It's all part of his developing life as an artist.

His first sketch of a house on a Carolina beach brought him $75, although he was willing to give it away.

That experience convinced him there might be something more to his talent. And now, some of his originals sell for as much as $15,000 — confirmation of his eye, with the help of some snapshots.

O.J. SIMPSON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Yet another knife turned up in the murder case against O.J. Simpson, this one a red-stained kitchen knife a curiosity seeker said she found near the former football star's home.

Police Sgt. Jeff Hanson said the woman turned in "potentially possible evidence" Saturday. Police sources told the Los Angeles Times they were skeptical it would turn out to be the murder weapon.

A cutlery store employee testified last week at a preliminary hearing that Simpson bought a 15-inch knife several weeks before the June 12 slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. And Newsweek said a mysterious envelope entered as evidence during the hearing also contains a knife.

Simpson, 46, has pleaded innocent to two counts of first-degree murder in the slayings. The preliminary hearing resumes Tuesday.

BASEBALL

HOUSTON (AP) — At Houston, Craig Biggio had four hits, including a homer and two doubles, and Greg Swindell broke a personal five-game losing streak as the Astros swatted the Cubs 12-6.

Ken Caminiti hit two homers — one an inside-the-park, three-run shot — and rookie James Mouton also homered for Houston.

Swindell (6-6) gave up five hits in seven innings to get his first win since May 26.

Mike Morgan (1-9) allowed nine hits and six runs in 3 2-3 innings.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Darryl Strawberry, who spent the last two weeks working out in Palm Springs under San Francisco conditioning consultant Mackie Shilstone, was scheduled to join Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League today.

Strawberry, 32, signed with the Giants on June 19, six weeks after he was released from a drug treatment center and four weeks after he was waived by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

GOLF

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — South Africa's Simon Hobday survived a 4-over-par 75 for a one-stroke victory in the U.S. Senior Open on Sunday.

Hobday, who earned $145,000, had a 10-under 274 total on the Pinehurst Resort and Country Club's No. 2 course. Australia's Graham Marsh (70) and Jim Albis (74) tied for second.

Tom Weiskopf (67), Dave Stockton (68) and Tom Wargo (70) tied for fourth at 277 and defending champion Jack Nicklaus (72), Bob Murphy (67) and Jay Sigel (70) followed at 279.

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Nick Price shot a 1-under-par 71 to defend his Western Open title with a one-stroke victory over Greg Kraft on Sunday.

Price, who earned $216,000 for his third victory of the season, had an 11-under 277 total on Cog Hill's Dubsread course. Kraft shot a 73.

Mark Calcavecchia (70), Scott Hoch (70) and Bill Glasson (71) tied for third at 279.

KILKENNY, Ireland (AP) — Bernhard Langer of Germany shot a 5-under-par 67 for a one-stroke victory over John Daly and Australia's Robert Allenby in the Irish Open on Sunday.

Langer, who earned $147,000 for his third victory in the event and 30th on the PGA European Tour, had a 13-under 275 total on the Mount Juliet course. Daly matched the course record with a 65 and Allenby shot a 72.

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — Tammie Green shot a 2-under-par 70 for a two-stroke victory over Colleen Walker in the Youngstown-Warren LPGA Classic on Sunday.

Green, who earned $82,500, had a 10-under 206 total on the Avon Lakes course. Walker shot a 71.

NILES, Ohio (AP) — LPGA tour player Kim Williams, shot in the neck while walking to a store Saturday night, was reported in fair condition Sunday while police pursued the possibility that the shooting was an accident. Williams, 31, of Boca Raton, Fla., was competing in the Youngstown-Warren LPGA Classic.

AUTO RACING

MAGNY COURS, France (AP) — Michael Schumacher of Germany won the French Grand Prix on Sunday for his sixth victory in seven races, while Nigel Mansell completed only 46 of 72 laps in his "guest appearance" on the Formula One circuit.

Schumacher, driving a Benetton-Ford, beat Mansell's Williams-Renault teammate Damon Hill by 12.642 seconds and averaged 115.75 mph on the 2.641-mile course.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy Spencer passed Ernie Irvan on the final lap and finished with a 0.08-second margin for his first Winston Cup victory in Saturday's Pepsi 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

Spencer averaged 155.558 mph in his Ford Thunderbird in the 160-lap race on the 2 1/2-mile oval.

CYCLING

ARMENTIERES, France (AP) — A finish-line accident sent two riders to the hospital as Diamolidine Abdoujapour of Uzbekistan won the first stage of the Tour de France on Sunday. Chris Boardman of Britain retained the overall lead.

Belgium's Wilfried Nelissen, who was hospitalized along with France's Laurent Jalabert, was battling for the lead with less than 50 meters left when he hit a policeman at the side of the course.

BOXING

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Orlin Norris stopped Arthur Williams at 1:08 of the third round to retain his WBA cruiserweight title Saturday night. Norris improved to 41-3 with his 23rd knockout. Williams dropped to 21-3-1.

Wilfredo Vazquez of Puerto Rico stopped Jaewon Choi of South Korea at 1:46 of the second round to defend his WBA junior featherweight title. Vazquez improved to 41-6-3 with his 33rd knockout.

OLYMPIC FESTIVAL

ST. LOUIS (AP) — U.S. boxing champions Fernando Vargas and Shane Swartz won semifinal bouts Sunday in the Olympic Festival. Vargas, 16, of Oxnard, Calif., beat Salvador Jasso of Los Angeles 49-19 at 132 pounds and Swartz, 18, of Fort Collins, Colo., defeated Robert Wallace of Tempe, Ariz., 71-29 at 165 pounds to advance to Tuesday's finals.

Brazil feels pressure in battle against U.S.

By FRED LIEF
AP Sports Writer

Let others hurl fireworks and wave the stars and stripes. Brazil cannot be bothered by such trifles.

Independence Day is one thing. World Cup soccer is quite another.

The three-time champion Brazilians were under immense pressure today when they faced the United States in the second round at Stanford, Calif.

Brazil, after all, is a country of ferocious soccer critics. No matter that Brazil appears the classier of the tournament. The citizenry has aesthetic standards that must be met.

The great Pele has been critical of coach Carlos Alberto Parreira. Even the coach's mother offers lineup suggestions.

"It's crazy," said Jorginho, a defender. "But Brazil can never enter a tournament to be runner-up."

As for the United States, there is everything to gain by this confrontation. Losing to Brazil is no shame; winning is a ticket to soccer nirvana.

"It's the greatest opportunity of our lives," U.S. defender Paul Caligiuri said.

Added teammate Eric Wynalda: "It's really scary for it to all come down to this day."

The Brazilians are carrying the banner for South America following Argentina's 3-2 loss to Romania on Sunday in Pasadena, Calif. Argentina, a champion in 1978 and 1986, now heads home.

Romania, a quarterfinalist for the first time, faces Sweden next Sunday. Sweden advanced Sunday with a 3-1 victory over Saudi Arabia in Dallas.

The Romanians were backed by two goals from Ilie Dumitrescu and another from Gheorghe Hagi.

"Maybe this is the greatest event celebrated by our people since the revolution," Romanian coach Anghel Iordanescu said. "It is something magnificent."

The victory touched off mayhem in the Romanian capital of Bucharest, with some 100,000 people streaming into the streets, ringing bells and banging pans. One jubilant patient jumped from an ambulance in his pajamas.

"I don't care what happens to me," he said. "I feel like nothing's wrong with me anymore."

Argentina star Diego Maradona, banned from the World Cup for his failed drug test, watched the game from the pressbox, supposedly working as a television commentator.

"This isn't the team I left ... the happy team, the knowing team," Maradona said.

Added Argentine goalie Luis Islas: "His mere presence scared our opponents. With Diego in there, the Romanians would have thought twice about attacking us so often."

Sweden withstood 87-degree heat and Saudi Arabia to advance to the quarterfinals for the first time since 1958. Martin Dahlin scored in the sixth minute and Kennet Andersson had two goals in the second half.

"When you have two strikers like Martin and Kennet, all defenses must be careful," Sweden coach Tommy Svensson said.

The loss ended an excellent run for the Saudis, the surprise team of the tournament in their first trip to the World Cup.

In today's other second-round game, Ireland played the Netherlands at Orlando, Fla. On Tuesday, it's Italy-Nigeria at Foxboro, Mass., and Bulgaria-Mexico at East Rutherford, N.J.

In Medellin, Colombia, thousands of mourners attended the funeral of slain soccer star Andres Escobar on Sunday. Colombia's president pleaded for an end to "absurd violence" and crowds chanted for justice.

Escobar was shot Saturday in a parking lot in apparent retaliation for his own-goal during Colombia's 2-1 loss to the United States.

Police have arrested two men — one has confessed to the shooting; the other allegedly bet heavily on the Colombian team. Police are searching for two other suspects.

The killing has sent a chill through the team. Some players say they no longer want to play for Colombia, and Hernan Dario Gomez, the assistant who had agreed to replace coach Francisco Maturana, says he no longer wants the job.

Ivan Valenciano, a forward on the team, said: "I don't want to return to the squad if it means an error on the field will cost me my life."

Sloppy Tigers give one to Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Usually it's the Texas Rangers who kick the ball around like a World Cup soccer team.

On Sunday, it was the normally smooth-fielding Detroit Tigers who played defense like the ball was kicking.

The Tigers made three errors, two leading to three unearned runs during a five-run third inning, and the Rangers took advantage for their fifth victory in seven games, 5-3.

Rangers fans have witnessed these fielding follies on numerous occasions. Texas has the worst fielding percentage in the American League and is tops in errors.

"We've been there before," Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy said. "We're last in the league in fielding, so there isn't anything we haven't seen."

Detroit entered the game with 46 errors, one fewer than league-leading Baltimore. The Tigers and Orioles were tied for the top fielding percentage in the AL.

The five-run third was enough support for Texas starter Hector Fajardo (4-4), who held Detroit in check until the Tigers rallied for three runs in the sixth.

"They gave us more than three outs and we made them pay for it," said Rangers first baseman Will Clark, who went 2-for-4 with an RBI. "When you give our offense more than three outs, we have the ability to hurt you."

Fajardo allowed six hits and one walk in six innings. Tom Henke retired the side in order in the ninth for his eighth save.

Sloppy glove work wasted another strong performance from Tigers starter Tim Lincecum (6-9).

Belcher pitched his second complete game of the season, allowing six hits with five walks and four strikeouts.

But errors by shortstop Alan Trammell and first baseman Cecil Fielder helped the Rangers in their decisive third inning.

"In his last 10 starts, I imagine there's only five starters in the league pitching better than him," Tigers manager Sparky Anderson said. "But we didn't help him very much."

Oddibe McDowell's homer leading off the third, his first home since Sept. 5, 1990 for Atlanta, gave Texas a 1-0 lead.

Belcher walked the next batter, Jeff Frye, who dashed to third when Fielder dropped a throw to first from Belcher on a grounder to the mound.

Belcher said he was hardly blameless in the messy inning.

"We basically screwed up in one inning and I was as guilty as anybody," Belcher said. "I gave Cecil a tough throw, then I got a couple of pitches up and they got some runs."

Detroit has dropped nine of 11 games.

NL manager picks five Astros for All-Star game

HOUSTON (AP) — After baseball fans didn't vote any Houston players to this year's All-Star game, Philadelphia manager Jim Fregosi selected a club-record five of them for next weekend's game.

Fregosi, the National League's coach for the July 12 All-Star game, on picked his reserves on Sunday. They included first baseman Jeff Bagwell, second baseman Craig Biggio, third baseman Ken Caminiti and pitchers Doug Drabek and John Hudek.

The Astros, who had four All-Stars in 1979 and 1986, will have more players at the game, which will be played in Pittsburgh, than any other team.

"It's about time we started getting some recognition," Astros manager Terry Collins said. "We are all elated and very excited. They are all very deserving."

All of them are first-time picks except Biggio, who went in 1991 at catcher and 1992 at second. He's the only player to achieve that All-Star double.

Bagwell's .352 batting average is second in the NL. He's first in runs (71), runs batted in (77), total bases (204), slugging percentage (.711) and extra-base hits (49).

"It's exciting, being the first time and everything," said Drabek, who had won Cy Young Award but never been an All-Star until Sunday. "I had a lot of help getting there, everybody playing behind me. I feel very fortunate."

Drabek, who won the Cy Young while playing for Pittsburgh in 1990, has rebounded from his 9-18 record last year, his first season with Houston.

Griffey Jr. gets record All-Star votes

Texas' Rodriguez named starting catcher

By ADAM NAZIMOWITZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At the age of 24, already in his fifth major league season, Ken Griffey Jr. is enjoying a level of popularity that has never been equaled.

Griffey, chasing Roger Maris' 1961 record of 61 home runs, received the most votes in All-Star history, surpassing the previous mark of Minnesota's Rod Carew in 1977 by almost two million.

Griffey recalled a road game earlier this year when the fans were more interested in watching him swing the bat than rooting for their own team.

"I got intentionally walked a couple of weeks ago in California, and they booed," the Seattle Mariners center fielder said Sunday after being chosen as an American League starter for the fifth consecutive year. "Then, when I got the home run record, they all stood up and cheered."

The record came when he hit his 31st homer on June 22 — breaking Babe Ruth's mark for the most before the end of June. He has 32 home runs at the midpoint of the season.

But the modest Griffey, whose 6,079,688 votes easily surpassed the record 4,292,740 that Minnesota's Rod Carew got in 1977, doesn't look at Maris' record from a personal perspective.

"This home-run thing is pretty good because it puts interest back in baseball," he said.

The selections for the 65th All-Star game, scheduled July 12 in Pittsburgh, were announced for the first time on television, by NBC, which will broadcast the game. In the past, major league baseball has issued a press release announcing the teams.

A record 14,040,122 votes were cast by fans across the nation.

The top vote-getter in the National League was Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals, back as a starter after a one-year absence. Barry Larkin was voted shortstop last year, breaking Smith's 10-year hold. Smith got 3,514,824 votes.

Smith, while glad to be returning to the All-Star team, was still a little bitter about being passed over for Atlanta's Jeff Blauser as a reserve last year.

"I'm very appreciative of it in view of last year," he said. "One of the things that was irritating about last year was when you finish 1-2 in the voting there's no reason for that person not to go because that's the person the fans have voted that they want to see."

The AL shortstop is again Baltimore's Cal Ripken Jr., who received 5,127,994 votes and will be starting for the 11th straight season. In 1988, top vote-getter Alan Trammell of Detroit was injured and Ripken moved into the starting spot.

"You always feel good when you find out you're going to the All-Star Game," said Ripken, who hit a grand slam Sunday. "Sure I'm happy to have a day like this. But baseball has a way of humbling you, so I try to stay under control."

Starting his eighth straight game for the AL, which trails 37-26-1 in the series but has won six straight, is third baseman Wade Boggs of the New York Yankees. Boggs, a sixth-time selection while playing for the Boston Red Sox, got 3,048,072 votes.

Outfielder Kirby Puckett of the Minnesota Twins, the MVP of the AL's 9-3 victory last year at Baltimore, was voted in a third straight year. Puckett with 2,722,255 votes, will be making his ninth All-Star appearance.

The other AL starters will be first baseman Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox (2,833,502 votes), second baseman Roberto Alomar (3,675,730) and outfielder Joe Carter (3,683,682) of the Toronto Blue Jays, and catcher Ivan Rodriguez of the Texas Rangers (2,350,031).

Outfielder Barry Bonds of the San Francisco Giants, a three-time NL MVP, will start his third straight All-Star Game. He got 3,120,268 votes, and was joined by teammate Matt Williams.

Williams, who unseated Florida's Gary Sheffield at third base, leads the NL with 30 home runs. He got 2,266,133 votes.

Catcher Mike Piazza, an All-Star reserve in his NL Rookie of the Year season last year for the Los Angeles Dodgers, was voted to start for the first time with 2,536,825 votes.

Also starting for the first time for the NL are first baseman Gregg Jefferies of the St. Louis Cardinals (2,246,987 votes) and second baseman Mariano Duncan of the Philadelphia Phillies (2,029,752).

Making their second starts will be outfielders Lenny Dykstra of Philadelphia (2,099,922) and David Justice of the Atlanta Braves (2,368,785).

"I gotta believe the fans view me favorably because it's the second year in a row they voted me in," Justice said. "It's an honor to make the team."

Power tennis might bore fans

By STEPHEN WILSON
Associated Press Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Pete Sampras wins tennis matches with such brute force that fans might find it boring to watch.

Sampras played the power game at its best — or at its worst, depending on your point of view — as he beat Goran Ivanisevic 7-6 (7-2), 7-6 (7-5), 6-0 Sunday for his second straight Wimbledon title and fifth Grand Slam championship.

There was little subtlety in this match. Both men fired serves at close to 130 mph, with Ivanisevic hitting 25 aces and Sampras 17. The Croatian served 16 aces in the first set, with at least two in each game.

There were no breaks of serve until the third set, when Ivanisevic wilted and Sampras broke three times. On more than half of the 206 points in the match, the serve was not returned in play. Few points had rallies of more than three shots and none more than six.

The match had little of the tension or emotion of Saturday's women's final in which Conchita Martinez beat Martina Navratilova in three sets to deny her a 10th title in her 22nd and final Wimbledon appearance.

The 22-year-old Sampras is a brilliant player, perhaps the best of his generation, but Sunday's bang-boom tennis generated little enthusiasm from a subdued Centre Court audience. It may not have been a coincidence that Princess Diana left the Royal Box after the second set and missed the third.

But Sampras was quick to defend the quality of play.

"I thought the tennis was very high class," he said. "Maybe you're not seeing a lot of long rallies, but it's tough to hit a serve that hard in a matter of three or four inches. It's very difficult to do."

"For so many years the British public were seeing (Bjorn) Borg playing from the baseline," he said. "But when you have two guys over 6 feet tall with huge serves, you're not going to see a lot of rallies."

"There's nothing really I can say or do. I go out and try to win. I just hope the fans come out to watch great tennis and like the way I play."

Some have suggested the power game can be neutralized by curbing racket technology, making balls slower or limiting players to one serve.

"I've used the same racket since I was 14," Sampras said. "I don't know what the answer is. I certainly don't want them to change the rules the way I've been doing."

Sampras, who lost only one set during the two-week tournament, said he did everything right against Ivanisevic.

"I really couldn't play any better," he said. "I returned as well as I could return. I served as well as I have all the past two weeks."

Sampras had lost five of eight previous matches against Ivanisevic and had a history of trouble against left-handers. But he stood further back Sunday and came up with good returns on crucial points. He never lost his own serve and faced only two break points.

"He was just too good," said Ivanisevic, who lost to Andre Agassi in the 1992 final. "When you lose to a guy like Pete, it hurts less than two years ago. Two years ago I knew that I had a good chance. But today he was too good. In the tiebreaker, he was always one step better than me."

Sampras, the first man to defend his Wimbledon crown since Boris

Becker in 1986, has won four of the last five Grand Slam events. His chances of a calendar-year Grand Slam were thwarted by a quarterfinal loss to Jim Courier at the French Open last month.

Sampras, whose idol is Australian great Rod Laver, was asked whether he felt to be part of tennis history.

"It feels that I'm getting closer," he said. "I'm getting there. The Grand Slam wins that I've had in the last couple of years is something that's proven to people and to myself that hopefully I can go down in the history books."

Winning the appreciation of the public is another challenge.

"I think I'm winning their hearts," Sampras said. "I just hope people can appreciate how I go about my tennis and how I play ... You know, you can write what you want, you can say what you want, but the fact is that I have got two in a row and that's something that's going to say with me for as long as we're all living."

Celanese, Rotary to break Bambino tie

Glo-Valve's bid to be a giant killer a second time fell short as Hoechst-Celanese Chemical Group scored five times in the second inning and hung on to win 5-2 and clinch the Optimist Major Bambino National League title Saturday night.

Hoechst Celanese improved its season record to 10-2-1 and will play off its tie against Rotary Club today. A win will give Hoechst Celanese the overall best record in the Major Bambino League.

Glo-Valve fell to 7-6 but maintained its hold on third place in the National League. Dunlap Industrial is second with a 9-4 record.

Travis Lancaster was the winning pitcher for Hoechst Celanese and was co-leader in hitting with Jeff Adkins. Lancaster allowed no runs and only one hit in two-plus innings. He struck out two and walked three.

Jonathan Waggoner pitched the first two innings for Hoechst Celanese. He gave up two runs on three hits. He struck out five and walked two. Russell Robben was credited with a save. He allowed no runs and no hits. He struck out five, walked one and hit one batter while pitching the last two innings.

Shawn Strate took the loss for Glo-Valve. He allowed only one earned run in four innings but yielded seven hits. He struck out nine and walked one. Josue Silva pitched the final two innings for Glo-Valve. He allowed no runs and two hits. He struck out two without walking a batter.

In the bottom of the first inning, Silva hit Waggoner's first pitch for a single. One out later, Cody Shepard cleared the scoreboard by 30 feet for his third home run of the season and a brief Glo-Valve 2-0 lead.

Glo-Valve threatened in every inning but was not able to score again. Silva singled in the second but was stranded. A single by Shepard and two walks loaded the bases with none out for Glo-Valve in the fifth inning. Robben, who had relieved Lancaster a batter earlier, got the next three batters to snuff out a potential rally.

Hoechst Celanese did all its damage in the second inning. Adkins led off with a single. Matt Rains beat out an infield hit. Adkins moved to third on a throwing error. Rains took second on a fielder's choice. Adam Wright was safe on an error as Adkins scored.

Rains held at second. Kerry Turner moved the runners along with a sacrifice. Jeremy Harper was safe on a fielder's choice as Rains scored. He took second on a passed ball. Robben singled to score Wright. Harper moved to third.

Hoechst Celanese then tried a double steal, but Harper was tagged out trying for home. Robben alertly moved to third on the run down and scored on an error.

But Hoechst Celanese was not through. Jimmy Story singled. Lancaster was safe on an error. Waggoner doubled to score Story with the fifth run of the inning.

Hoechst Celanese wasted a single by Lancaster in the first and third innings and a double by Harper in the sixth inning.

The defensive play of the game for Glo-Valve came in the fourth inning when Silva fielded Lancaster's single in the right field and threw a strike to Eric Lemons at third base to nail the runner trying to advance from first to third.

Shepard had three put-outs and two assists at second base and shortstop to top Glo-Valve with the most defensive opportunities. Robben snared a sharply hit ground ball at shortstop and made a perfect throw to first for the Hoechst Celanese defensive play of the game.

Hoechst Celanese avenged an earlier loss to Glo-Valve. A win today against Rotary Club will award the all-star coaching honors to the Hoechst Celanese coaching staff of Michael Lancaster, manager, and Gene Rains and Tracy Wright, coaches. A loss would allow Sammy Coffee and Art Lozano, the manager and coach of Duncan Insurance, to coach the all-star team.

The Major Bambino City Tournament begins Tuesday with games in both the 9-10 year old park as well as the 11-12 year old park. Hoechst Celanese and Duncan Insurance have drawn first round byes. Cabot Corporation takes on Dyer's Bar-B-Que at 6 p.m. The other games await the outcome of the Hoechst Celanese-Rotary Club game to determine pairings.

Duncan downs Dyer's

Duncan Insurance closed out league play by defeating Dyer's Bar-B-Que 7-2 in Optimist baseball action Saturday night.

Tommy Lozano went the distance for Duncan, pitching six innings, giving up two runs, one earned run, three hits, three walks and 12 strikeouts.

For Dyer's, Tim Ferris gave up five earned runs on four hits, four walks, one hit batter and two strikeouts. Gil Solano relieved Ferris in the second and finished the game, giving up two runs, one earned run, three hits, seven walks, one hit batter and nine strikeouts.

Leading Duncan's offense was Kevin Osborn, with a two-run homerun, two RBIs and one run scored. Ryan Sells had two hits and two RBIs.

Craig Stout aided Duncan's offense with a triple, one RBI, one walk and one run scored. Nick Dyer had a single, two walks and one run scored. Lozano had a single, a walk and one run scored.

Price takes no prisoners in PGA

Money leader looks to British Open after Western

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — He's won more PGA tournaments than any one in this decade; he's the only multiple winner on tour this season; and now Nick Price has become just the eighth player to surpass $6 million in earnings.

Maybe Price, who captured the Western Open for the second straight year Sunday, should relax a little and enjoy what he's earned over the years.

Well, he will for a day. He'll attend a World Cup soccer match in Florida today, and then it's back to the practice range to get ready for the British Open.

"You always compare everything to the best you've ever had," said Price, who was last year's player of the year with four victories, one more than he has this season. "Last year will be difficult to top. I haven't practiced as hard this year as last, and I'm trying like crazy to get back to that."

Price was able to catch and overtake shaky Greg Kraft in the final holes Sunday, winning despite his own bogey on the 18th when he missed a 4-foot putt.

Kraft, who missed the cut in 13 of 20 previous tournaments, had bogeys on four of the final six holes, including No. 18 when he needed a par to force a playoff.

Price said the biggest difference between his early days and the last four years, when he's won 11 tournaments, is his understanding of his own game, what makes it work, what makes it click.

That experience was beneficial Sunday. "I hit more poor shots than I would have liked. But I gutted it out," said Price, who calls the Cog Hill Golf and Country Club's Dubsread course one of his favorites.

"I feel a little sorry for Greg. But he's a young guy, and he has a good future ahead of him. I went through it, and a lot of young guys do. You have to use it as a stepping stone instead of a confidence breaker."

Price shot a final-round 71 and finished at 11-under-par 277, one stroke better than Kraft.

"I love to play under pressure. It's the ultimate when you get nervous and can control your emotions. I've learned to use the adrenalin flow in a positive way, not negative," Price said.

Kraft hit his first two shots on the par-4 finishing hole into bunkers, went way past the pin on his third shot out of the sand and finished with yet another bogey.

"I thought there was really a good chance there would be a playoff," Price admitted.

Bullet in golfer may be from target pistol

NILES, Ohio (AP) — A man told police that he may have accidentally shot LPGA golfer Kim Williams in the neck as he was target shooting.

A Howland, Ohio, man, whose name is being withheld, called authorities Sunday night and said he might have shot Williams as he and a friend were shooting old cars in a wooded area about a mile west from where the golfer was shot, Niles police capt. Bruce Simeone said.

Williams, 31, of Boca Raton, Fla., was shot in the parking lot of the Phar-Mor discount store at the Great East Plaza about 9 p.m. Saturday.

She was in the Niles area competing in the LPGA Youngstown-Warren Classic at the nearby Avalon Lakes Golf Course.

The man said that 75 rounds were shot from a semi-automatic weapon, Simeone said. The man said he was using 9-mm bullets.

"A 9 millimeter is what most police carry, and it has good velocity. It could carry a mile," Simeone said.

Simeone said detectives and prosecutors will decide whether to charge the man. Police originally believed they were investigating a drive-by shooting when a 911 call was made by Phar-Mor employees. Williams came into the store bleeding.

The bullet lodged into Williams' shoulder, just below the collarbone, Simeone said. Surgery to remove the bullet has been called off, he said.

Simeone said because the bullet is still in her shoulder, he doesn't know if police will be able to match the bullet to the ones used by the man.

Sue Kalas, a spokeswoman for Cleveland MetroHealth Medical Center, said Sunday that the golfer was alert and sitting up. Kalas said she expected Williams to be released from the hospital today.

USAir victims include couple on honeymoon

USAir Flight 1016 was the first leg of the couple's Caribbean honeymoon. The plane crashed in a thunderstorm at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport, Saturday evening, killing 37.

"It's hard to believe that something like that could happen on somebody's wedding day," Wanda Leis, Steve Mattox's sister, said Sunday from suburban Winnsboro, where relatives were still gathered from the previous day's celebration. The wedding announcement and news of the disaster both appeared in The (Columbia) State.

"Basically everything they did was together," Leis said. They worked on cars, went to NASCAR races and gardened at their home, she said. Rita, 28, was a computer programmer and Steve, 27, worked at a company that makes ribbons for typewriters.

"He was a real happy fellow that could always make you laugh, very tender, very affectionate," Leis said, her voice breaking.

Mattox is survived by a 5-year-old daughter.

James Fant survived the crash and figures it just wasn't his time to die.

"I always say a prayer before we take off, and this time was no exception," said the 34-year-old Fant, hospitalized with bruises and a fractured vertebra, hand and nose.

A doctor, he was on his way back to Dayton, Ohio, to complete his family's move to Columbia, where he is joining a private practice.

Passengers figured something was wrong when the plane suddenly dropped, and the pilot pulled its nose up and revved the engine, Fant said.

"I knew something bad was happening," Fant said. "As soon as we hit the ground, the fuselage just came in around me. That was it. I thought I was going to be killed right there."

Haiti adviser says no U.S. invasion is imminent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic sanctions against Haiti's military regime are beginning to hurt and there are no plans to invade the Caribbean nation anytime soon, President Clinton's senior adviser on Haiti says.

But William Gray also made clear in a CBS Face the Nation interview Sunday that the military option is still on the table. He said Clinton has a responsibility to protect the thousands of Americans living in Haiti.

"Our word to the coup leaders is you simply must step down, do it now and save your country and save the institutions that you represent, the military, because we are committed that we are not going to allow a group of thugs to take over," Gray said.

Is anyone home?

Lois and Don Minnick weren't expecting any visitors when they were away from their house south of Pampa one day last week, but some unexpected company showed up anyway. A friend of theirs dropping by to discover the Minnicks were not at home discovered these wild turkeys peering into the glass door, as though wondering where the Minnicks were. Perhaps the turkeys were just hoping to get some cool water for the sweltering heat last Thursday. (Pampa News photo by Darlene Holmes)

Wildfires burn thousands of acres in six states

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — A wildfire that scorched more than 14,000 acres in Southern California destroyed two homes Sunday and threatened 500 more, including one owned by Frank Sinatra.

Authorities ordered evacuations of at least four resort developments as ash rained on Palm Desert, about 100 miles east of Los Angeles. It was not immediately known if Sinatra was forced to flee.

Fires also burned in five other states in the drought-stricken West. Many were started by lightning and fueled by gusty winds and temperatures over 100 degrees.

The Palm Desert fire began Friday and jumped wildly out of control Saturday. About half the blackened acreage was in the San Bernardino National Forest.

Firefighters were hampered by steep terrain, erratic winds of 15-20 mph and temperatures of 110 degrees. Smoke made it difficult to fight the fire from the air, and mountains blocked radio and cellular phone transmissions.

"The resources are stretched thin and firefighters are tired," said Mary Bowman, a U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman.

Elsewhere in Southern California, a 1,000-acre fire burned out of control near the resorts of Lake Arrowhead and Big Bear. Camping areas and fishing and hiking grounds were evacuated, and a nearby highway was closed.

In other states:

— More than 2,000 firefighters fought several large fires throughout Arizona. Fires have burned more than 80,000 acres over the past week but most of the fires did not grow significantly over the weekend.

— Erratic winds and rugged terrain hampered firefighters battling a 30,000-acre wildfire in a remote area of southern Nevada. The blaze is believed to be the biggest of the season so far in the drought-stricken West.

The fire was centered in an uninhabited area 100 miles northeast of Las Vegas. Authorities said it posed an outside threat to the ghost town of Delamar and to Air Force communications sites.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic sanctions against Haiti's military regime are beginning to hurt and there are no plans to invade the Caribbean nation anytime soon, President Clinton's senior adviser on Haiti says.

But William Gray also made clear in a CBS Face the Nation interview Sunday that the military option is still on the table. He said Clinton has a responsibility to protect the thousands of Americans living in Haiti.

"Our word to the coup leaders is you simply must step down, do it now and save your country and save the institutions that you represent, the military, because we are committed that we are not going to allow a group of thugs to take over," Gray said.

Opponents of Clinton's Haiti policy have warned that the failure of sanctions to uproot the military leaders who overthrew Haiti's democratically elected president in 1991 and the recent surge in refugees are forcing the administration to consider the military route.

Senators worried that Clinton would order military action around the July Fourth holiday when Congress was in recess tried unsuccessfully last week to pass legislation forcing the president to get congressional authorization before committing any troops to Haiti.

"The situation has deteriorated to the point where we may be placing ourselves in a box where an invasion is the only way to go," Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said on the same program.

Gray said that the United States "is not contemplating an imminent invasion of Haiti." He added that there are signs that tough new multinational sanctions imposed five weeks ago are beginning to work.

He noted that right-wing members of the parliament who opposed ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide are urging the military who overthrew him to give up, as are some in the Haitian business community.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., said on CBS that "if we just surrender" and end the embargo as McCain and others in Congress advocate, "we'll be admitting that the United States is inept, is impotent in terms of its capacity to protect our vital interests."

Arafat seeks bond with public

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Fighting his image as an isolated, autocratic leader, Yasser Arafat sought to move closer to his people by talking of Palestinian unity and promising jobs would be created as they begin rebuilding decayed self-rule lands.

But behind all the pomp to reinforce Arafat's image as a statesman who delivers, concerns about rival Muslim factions, a nearly lifeless economy and hawkish Israelis unwilling to accept compromise kept popping to the surface.

As he toured the overcrowded towns of the southern Gaza Strip and received a stream of visitors Sunday, Arafat spoke in the tone of an engaging, proud father.

Unlike the lukewarm reception they gave him initially, when Arafat kept his distance from the public, thousands of cheering Palestinians came out Sunday to catch a glimpse of him as his motorcade made its way through Gaza's narrow, bumpy streets.

The Palestinian leader, apparently moved by the welcome, asked his guards not to push away stampeding crowds.

To rally the Palestinians behind the peace treaty, Arafat promised jobs were part of the rebuilding package.

"As it was in the uprising that required your blood, we need your arms now, all of you, all of you," Arafat told a cheering crowd at the border town of Rafah.

"All Palestinians are asked to participate in ... setting up the foundations of the Palestinian authority to put the pillars of the homeland."

Some visiting Israeli-Arab members of parliament repeatedly referred to the Palestinians inside Israel and those in the West Bank and Gaza as one people, sure to touch off alarms among Israelis who worry that Arafat will try to extend his influence over the 1 million Arabs with citizenship.

On Sunday, more than 100,000 right-wing Israelis rampaged through Arab east Jerusalem, vandalizing property and stoning a U.S. consulate building to denounce Arafat's trip.

They later clashed with police outside Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's office. Police on horseback pushed back demonstrators trying to storm the parliament.

In all, nine Israelis were injured and 54 arrested, police said.

Jerusalem is the most sensitive issue in the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations. Palestinians consider the Arab sector the capital of a future independent state. Israel says it will never divide the city.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin accused the right-wingers of teaming up with Palestinian militants in trying to bury the peace process, which he said was working and had lessened violence.

But he also asked members of his Labor Party to cancel a meeting with Arafat scheduled for Sunday. A Rabin spokesman said the prime minister "didn't think the timing was right."

On Sunday, Planning Minister Nabil Shaath said Arafat has postponed his departure for Jericho, the seat of the self-rule authority in the West Bank, until Tuesday.
