PAMPA — Due to recent rains, a crew from the city of Pampa will be spraying for mosquitoes beginning Sunday, July 17, and every evening for about a week from 4 p.m. until midnight.

The thermal fogger the city uses creates a fog of malathion and diesel that kills mosquitoes. Malathion is generally considered not to be a health problem for humans.

If anyone does not want their block to be sprayed, call the city's Parks Department at 669-5770. Those people requesting their blocks not be sprayed in the past should call again to confirm the request.

Some of the things individuals can do to help control mosquitoes include getting rid of old tires, containers, cans or anything that could provide a breeding ground for the insects.

In addition, residents should keep their yards mowed as short as possible and keep screens in good repair.

The city also warns that since mosquitoes are most active 30 minutes before sunset and 30 minutes after sunset, special care should be taken not to disturb them during that time.

PAMPA — Gray County commissioners plan to meet at 9 a.m. Friday in Gray County courthouse to consider a 19-item agenda.

Eddie Joe Roberts of the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department is to address the panel at 10 a.m. with a funding request for the department. County Attorney Todd Alyey is to present a change proposal for hot check services.

The court again will consider a challenge cost share agreement with the U.S. Forest Service and consider silt removal at Lake McClellan.

At 9 a.m., the court will hear from Precinct 4 Constable James Lewis concerning his mileage allowance. Tax Assessor/Collector Sammie Morris will report on progress with McLean Independent School District regarding tax collections for the district.

Election judges are to be considered for approval.

PAMPA — This year's 48 Annual Top O' Texas Rodeo will be the focus of Friday's noon meeting of the Downtown Kiwanis Club as Clem McSpadden, Benny Buetler and Ted Kimzey will speak to the group.

All three men represent three distinct aspects of the sport of rodeo. McSpadden has been an rodeo announcer for decades, while Buetler is a rodeo producer and stock contractor with the Buetler and Gaylord Rodeo Company. Kimzey is a veteran rodeo clown and the barrelman at this year's rodeo.

Anyone interested in attending the luncheon is welcome to attend. The Kiwanis club meets in the basement of the First United Methodist Church located at the intersection of Ballard Street and Foster Avenue, across from the Post Office.

WILMINGTON (AP) — A North Carolina man who recently published once-classified photographs of dead American servicemen says he did so to help prove that the United States left behind prisoners of war in Vietnam.

Ted Sampley of Kinston placed some of the photos in a national POW-MIA newsletter last month. He planned to show more of the photos today at a Washington conference of a national organization of POW-MIA families.

The graphic pictures in U.S. Veteran Dispatch drew criticism from another group that represents POW-MIA families. Pentagon officials have asked the Justice Department to determine whether any laws were violated by Sampley, or by Joe Jordan, a POW activist from Texas who supplied them to Sampley.

The photos were taken by North Vietnamese military photographers and are among thousands that a U.S. civilian brought from Hanoi in 1992 and 1993 and turned over to the Defense Intelligence Agency.

While no longer classified, access to the photographs had been restricted to families of the men pictured, The Morning Star of Wilmington reported.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages has filed a federal lawsuit against Great Western Directories, claiming one of its phone books copied material directly from the Yellow Pages.

In the lawsuit, filed Wednesday, Southwestern Bell claims copyright infringement and accuses Amarillo-based Great Western of copying 1993-94 Yellow Pages for its 1994-95 editions in Fort Worth.

"The copying has been so egregious that Great Western has even copied mistakes appearing in the SWBYP Yellow Pages," the suit said.

St. Louis-based Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages also has filed a motion seeking a restraining order to prohibit Great Western from distributing its directory in the Fort Worth area.

Laketon family garners Kid Pony Show wins

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

As the 1994 Kid Pony Show ended its third night, a Laketon family garnered wins for each of three sisters who saddled up to rodeo.

Sisters Taylen Gregory and Andrea and Kelley Whaley, daughters of Jana and Tommy Gregory, each took awards during show activities.

Kelley, 14, took first place in pole bending when she and her horse Wichita ran the six poles in a little over 22 seconds.

"It's a really quick-paced event," Kelley said of the contest she considers to be her best event.

A rider must race her steed down the rodeo arena and thread him twice through six poles set 21 feet apart. Thinking about what to do next with one's feet and hands is the key.

"If you practice at least three times a week, it should come naturally," Kelley said. "I've been doing it five or six years, maybe even more."

Kelley entered rodeo competition at age four. She and her sisters travel every summer weekend to North West Oklahoma Junior Rodeo Association events where she competes in poles, barrels and goat tying.

"It gives me something to do through the summer and gives me lots of nice friends," Kelley said.

"It's lots of miles," said dad Tommy Gregory. "Some people do it - it's like some people go to the lake. This is our deal," Gregory said.

Taylen Gregory, 7, took third in girls barrel race Monday and Andrea, 12, won first in girls flag race, third in girls pole bending and first in girls barrel race on Tuesday.

In last night's competition, winners were:

Bull riding, group 5 - first, Kurt Baggerman; second, Brooks Brown; third, Jason Caffee.

Pole bending, girls group 5 - first, Jamie Meers; second, Caryn Lowrey; third, April Melanson.

Pole bending, boys group 5 - first, Heath Carlisle; second, Brooks Brown; third, Casey Coleman.

Barrel race, boys group 6 - first, Stormy Nettles; second, Kyle Zybach; third, Mark Jennings.

Barrel race, girls group 5 - first, Caryn Lowrey; second, April Melanson; third, Nicole Bruton.

Barrel race, boys group 5 - first, Heath Carlisle; second, Brooks Brown; third, Tobee Bowman.

Barrel race, girls group 6 - first, Sequin Downey; second, Nickie Leggett; third, Lana Keathley.

Administration predicts low inflation

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration today raised its interest-rate forecast, slightly trimmed its estimate of future economic growth and predicted continued low inflation through the rest of the decade.

In its mid-session review of the budget, the administration said the gross domestic product — the sum of all goods and services produced in the United States — will grow at an inflation-adjusted 3 percent this year and 2.7 percent next year.

"By any standard, this economy is doing well," Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen told a White House briefing on the new forecasts. "And we're doing it with inflation under control."

That's the same as its previous forecast, released in February. But, the administration has shaved a tenth of a point off its growth estimate for 1996, 1997, 1998 and 1999. It is now projecting 2.6 percent growth in 1996 and 2.5 percent for each of the next three years.

The administration explained that the economy approached full operating capacity much faster than expected last year, turning in growth at a 3.1 percent rate instead of the predicted 2.3 percent.

Bentsen noted that U.S. growth still outpaces that of the nation's six major economic allies: Japan, Britain, Germany, France, Italy and Canada.

Laura D'Andrea Tyson, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said the main reason that interest rates have increased this year is stronger-than-expected "forward momentum in the economy."

The unemployment projections are more optimistic this year, but more pessimistic thereafter: 6.2 percent this year versus the old forecast of 6.4 percent. However, the administration now sees the rate sticking at 6.2 percent next year and at 6.1 percent through 1999. Previously, it had thought the rate would drift down to 5.5 percent by the end of the decade.

The most dramatic change in the forecast comes in interest rates, which already have shot up much faster than anticipated this year. The administration now forecasts the three-month Treasury bill rate at 4 percent this year and 4.7 percent next year, up from a prediction of 3.4 percent and 3.8 percent respectively.

The forecast for 10-year Treasury notes, which serve as a benchmark for many long-term mortgage rates, is 6.8 percent this year and 7 percent next year, up from 5.8 percent for both years in the February projection.

The inflation projection was left practically untouched. It should be 2.9 percent this year and then rise to 3.2 percent next year and to 3.4 percent by 1997.

CAER discusses future organization plans

McLEAN — Members of the Community Awareness and Emergency Response Committee meet Wednesday afternoon in the offices of the McLean Fire Department to discuss future plans for the organization.

Topping the agenda was a public awareness campaign aimed at educating the residents of Gray County on hazardous materials found in most homes and their proper disposal.

Later this year, the city's landfill will be offering a chance to properly dispose of some of those hazardous chemicals.

Prior to that, the CAER organization will implement the public awareness program, according to Ken Hall, emergency management coordinator for Gray County.

In other business, the committee named a five-member subcommittee to review emergency plans submitted to the emergency management office by local business and industry. Hall said that it was important to discuss and be aware of other organizations' emergency plans in case of an emergency situation.

"Preparation is really the key," he said. "When we respond to a situation, everyone will know what everyone else is doing."

In other business, Robert McDonald, a member of the Pampa Fire Department and the city emergency management coordinator for McLean, was appointed to oversee the hazard Mitigation Annex of the county's emergency plan, according to Hall.

McDonald's new duties include helping to identify hazardous materials and assess dangers, if any exist. In addition, he is responsible for tracking the location of any possibly dangerous material found within the county, Hall said.

On a different matter, Seleta Chance, manager of the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center, reviewed upcoming disaster training classes.

Hall said the classes would include material on support efforts, mass care and "disaster action teams." Anyone interested in participating in the training and taking part in the emergency classes is welcome to join. To do so, contact the Red Cross office at 669-7121, he said.

The classes last between 12 and 16 hours, Hall said.

Finally, the committee agreed to meet again on Aug. 10 at the Lefors Community Center. Prior to that meeting, committee members will tour GPM's Gray Plant which is located near Lefors and assists in the production of fuel products.

Hoover Fire Department gets tanker trailer

HOOVER — Firefighting operations in Gray County got a boost when the Hoover Switch Volunteer Fire Department recently obtained a 5,000-gallon tanker trailer free of charge through the Rural Community Fire Protection program, a federal-state cooperatively funded program administered by the Texas Forest Service.

County officials have provided a truck tractor to pull the trailer.

The tanker trailer had been acquired through the Federal Excess Personal Property program by the state forest resource and rural firefighting agency.

The agency, in turn, placed the truck with the department free of charge.

The tanker trailer is one of more than 2,200 trucks, slip-on pumping units and other fire apparatus placed with rural fire departments and firefighting associations by the Texas Forest Service.

The Hoover Switch Volunteer Fire Department received the trailer recently, but the official presentation was made Wednesday afternoon at Hoover by Richard Robinson, TFS contract trainer of Panhandle.

The department, which has already been active in putting out area grass fires and other fires, currently has 14 volunteers.

The transport tank trailer is pulled by the Unit No. 3 truck, which was donated by Gray County Precinct 2.

Qualified rural fire departments are also eligible for cost-sharing aid up to $5,000 toward trucks and slip-on pumping units through the Rural Community Fire Protection program.

Many counties also have taken advantage of cost-sharing aid toward the purchase of dry hydrants to be used to provide water resources for rural firefighting efforts, Robinson noted.

Rural firefighters have taken advantage of the state forestry agency's Fire Safe program. Fire departments have purchased more than $2 million worth of protective firefighter clothing, fire rakes and flaps, backfire torches and water handling accessories at discounts of 20-30 percent off retail prices through this program.

Rural communities can contact the Fire Control Department, Texas Forest Service, P.O. Box 310, Lufkin, Texas 75902-0310, or phone 1-409-639-8100 for information on forming volunteer fire departments and on cost-sharing and equipment aid available to rural fire departments.

The Texas Forestry Service is part of the Texas A&M University System.

Dallas driver shot to death following traffic mishap

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man was shot to death following a traffic altercation on R.L. Thornton Freeway near downtown Dallas, police say.

Kenneth Darnell Finney, 37, was shot in the chest early Wednesday, police said.

Isaías Salcedo, 21, was being held in the Lew Sterrett Justice Center in lieu of $25,000 bond after he was charged with murder.

Officers said late Wednesday they were searching for a young woman who had been riding with Salcedo and apparently knew Finney.

"She apparently left the scene after the incident, and we can't locate her," said Lt. Ron Waldrop of the homicide section. "It's unclear what caused the confrontation."

Salcedo told a security guard at The Dallas Morning News that Finney's truck struck his car and Finney got out of the truck loading a gun. Salcedo said he then pulled a pistol from beneath his car seat and shot Finney.

Lawmaker, prison officials clash over state jails

AUSTIN (AP) — A key state lawmaker and the Texas Board of Criminal Justice are clashing over plans for a new system of state jails.

State prison officials said Wednesday that proposed state jails could temporarily house convicts from across Texas, not just local offenders.

State Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, an architect of the state jails concept, criticized the decision, saying that the new system of jails was billed as places where home-grown criminals could be rehabilitated with community and family help.

"These state jails were supposed to be different. They were supposed to offer community justice, special programs," he said. "But it sounds like we're creating another little prison system here."

"You can put perfume and lipstick and earrings on a pig, and it's still a pig," Whitmire told the board.

The development came as the Texas Board of Criminal Justice discussed how to begin operating the state jails on Sept. 1.

"A judge isn't going to say, 'I want you go to the Travis County state jail.' He will say state jail, and we (prison system officials) will assign them to a facility," said Carl Reynolds, the board's general counsel. "The preference would be to put them in a local state jail... in or near their community. But that may not always be possible."

Andy Collins, executive director of the Department of Criminal Justice, told the board that bunks in the new state jails will be filled as the units are completed — with whatever state jail convicts are available.

"We can't bring 24,000 beds on line overnight," said board Chairman Carol Vance.

Administration officials say no decision made yet on Haiti invasion

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Marines rehearsed a military evacuation of Americans from Haiti on a nearby island today while the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee cautioned against invasion, saying Haiti is not a "vital" American interest.

Pentagon sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said several hundred Marines were practicing invasion techniques on Great Inagua Island in the Bahamas, about 80 miles northwest of Haiti. They are part of a force of some 2,860 Marines posted on Navy ships near Haiti.

The U.S. Atlantic Command, the joint military command that controls operations around Haiti, issued a brief statement saying, "Joint Task Force 120, operating in the Caribbean in the vicinity of Haiti, is prepared to evacuate American citizens in Haiti should this become necessary."

In Washington, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., urged the Clinton administration to think through any invasion "very carefully."

"When we think of Haiti, we should also think of other spots in world where we have potential problems,"

Nunn said on NBC. He said North Korea is "a vital interest that has to be our first top priority. ... Bosnia is also important, and Haiti is important, but neither Bosnia nor Haiti are vital."

Nunn said if American lives are threatened, "we have to be prepared to move very rapidly. But if our mission is to restore democracy, that's a different mission ... and we need to think through that one very carefully."

Nunn urged the administration to revise its sanctions policy. "We need to keep those sanctions that really penalize the military and police leadership and the elite that supports those leaders, but we need to begin removing those sanctions that are counterproductive and are causing tremendous suffering of the Haitian people. ..."

House and Senate leaders were briefed on Haiti and other world hot spots in separate meetings Wednesday at the Capitol by Defense Secretary William Perry, Secretary of State Warren Christopher, National Security Adviser Anthony Lake and Gen. John Shalikashvili, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said there was "no indication such a decision (on invasion) was imminent." And Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said, "I know of no decision that has been made."

But Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., emerged with a different impression, saying the administration is "determined to have an invasion of Haiti." Pressler said officials told them, "the troops are ready and that they are moving people around."

Clinton administration officials have said that an invasion of Haiti remains an option as it tries to cope with thousands of Haitians fleeing daily from repression at the hands of a military-controlled government.

William Gray III, President Clinton's special adviser on Haiti, said Wednesday night that any invasion "is not imminent if you measure imminence in terms of today, tomorrow, in hours and days."

"But we're going to look at our options," Gray said on PBS's MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour.

The administration is proceeding with its sanctions policy and has rounded up 15 countries who have committed about 5,000 troops to a peacekeeping force that will go to Haiti once the military leaders leave.

Two key concerns of the U.S. military in any action against Haiti would be to secure the U.S. Embassy in Port-au-Prince and to protect the roughly 3,500 U.S. citizens in the country. They include people of Haitian descent, reporters, business people and missionaries.

Protecting U.S. citizens was a key justification given by U.S. officials for the invasion of Granada in 1983 and the invasion of Panama in 1989.

In the latest exercise in the Bahamas, elements of the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit from the USS Incheon, an amphibious Navy assault ship designed to support an invasion, are practicing rescue operations with helicopters and light vehicles, the sources said.

Under current Pentagon plans, the Marines would be the vanguard of any invasion action in Haiti and would be responsible for securing key points and making way for the main military operation, which would be headed by the Army, the sources said.

The Navy has dispatched 16 ships carrying about 4,700 sailors and the Marine contingent to waters off Haiti. They are in addition to 15 Coast Guard cutters patrolling for refugees escaping on small boats.

The State Department asserted Wednesday that human rights abuses by Haiti's military rulers have risen dramatically, extending to politically motivated rapes and even murders of children.

"They're slowly turning Haiti into hell," said Nancy Ely-Raphel, a top human rights official.

Oil industry seeks to overturn ethanol mandate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ethanol proponents believe the government will prevail in a legal challenge over a requirement that would expand use of the corn-based fuel additive.

Two petroleum groups sued the Environmental Protection Agency on Wednesday seeking to overturn a new clean-burning gasoline requirement.

"The oil industry consistently uses the courts to pursue its own self-interest, putting profits ahead of national environmental and energy objectives," charged Eric Vaughn, president of the Renewable Fuels Association.

The oil groups also asked the EPA to block implementation of the ethanol mandate pending the outcome of the lawsuit in the U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

At issue is an EPA decision last month to require that part of the oxygen-boosting additive in the cleaner gasoline come from a renewable source — in effect, ethanol.

"They do not have the authority to take this action and furthermore, it is an irrational action," said Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, which joined the National Petroleum Refiners Association in filing the lawsuit.

In a statement, the EPA said its decision to allow renewable fuels in gasoline is "right, lawful and good for the environment, and we stand by that decision."

The new fuel, with higher concentrations of oxygen, is required beginning in January for Chicago and eight other cities with the worst air pollution.

Meantime, 11 Northeastern states, and Texas, Kentucky and the District of Columbia, have agreed to require the gasoline in areas of severe air pollution.

In 1995, 15 percent of the oxygenate in the cleaner fuel must come from renewable sources, the EPA said. The level rises to 30 percent after the first year. In the near term, ethanol is the only renewable fuel that can be produced in the volumes needed to meet the clean gasoline goals.

Opponents of the ethanol mandate contend the markets should determine which additive is used and that the more expensive ethanol will increase gasoline prices. Supporters say that without the rule, the petroleum-based MTBE, which is made from methanol, would dominate the multibillion-dollar oxygenate market.

"We want to be permitted to use the most efficient and appropriate oxygenate," DiBona said.

The National Corn Growers Association believes the rule will survive any legal challenge. And Rep. Dick Durbin, D-Ill. and co-chairman of the Congressional Alcohol Fuels Caucus, said the rule is "squarely based on EPA's statutory authority and congressional intent."

Shuttle Columbia's 'astronewt' studies suffer a setback today

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space shuttle Columbia's "astronewt" studies suffered a setback today when one of four adult female newts was found to have died, apparently from stress.

Astronaut Donald Thomas reported the finding while checking on three small aquarium tanks containing the Japanese red-bellied newts and more than 180 newt eggs, most handpicked by scientists before launch.

Thomas said the three other adult news, which are in other aquariums, appeared healthy.

Michael Wiederhold, a Texas researcher studying how the animals' inner ears develop in space, said the newt probably died from the stress of hormone injections to induce egg-laying. It had spawned at least 40 eggs in orbit.

The aquarium containing the dead newt, the eggs it had laid and some ground-laid eggs was disconnected from its life-support system.

Wiederhold said the contents will be preserved for study after Columbia's scheduled July 22 return to Earth.

Despite the setback, he said researchers expect to learn something from the development of the eggs through five days in space. Studies of the other three newts and scores of eggs continue.

Only two of more than 80 experiments aboard the shuttle are centered on newts. Japanese scientists are concentrating on how weightlessness affects egg development.

Columbia's swimming, crawling, buzzing cargo also includes jellyfish, sea urchins, Japanese Medaka fish and fruit flies. Other on-board experiments range from the viscosity of molten metals to the behavior of gas bubbles.

NASA gave each of the four primary lab workers — of seven astronauts aboard — a four-hour respite Wednesday and today. The crew is working in two shifts around the clock during the 14-day flight.

Indy Car replica

This gas-powered replica of the 1992 Indy Car will be given away at the final performance of the Top O' Texas Rodeo on Saturday night. Chances for the car will be sold at the rodeo performances as a fund-raiser for the Pampa/Gray County Citizens Activities Association, a new organization formed to promote indoor and outdoor festivals, including the planned Great Texas Tumbleweed Festival scheduled for June 1995. The car replica was donated by Vernon and Jo Bell. (Courtesy photo)

Trapped teen finally rescued after 4 days

MONTARA, Calif. (AP) — A teenager survived four days while trapped in a car that plunged 80 feet down a ravine off a treacherous part of coastal Highway 1.

Paul Julius Bondoc, 16, was operated on early today at Stanford Medical Center, said spokeswoman Lori Vaughan. He suffered broken bones and a collapsed lung in the crash.

It took rescuers an hour to get Bondoc out Wednesday after two men walking their dogs heard his faint cries.

Bondoc, of San Jose, was driving Saturday when his car ran off the road, said state trooper Marian Pohl.

His injuries prevented him from climbing out and his calls for help weren't heard over the sound of the ocean and passing traffic. So he lay inside the car for four days without food or water, Pohl said.

The scenic Highway 1 runs along 600-foot cliffs in some areas. Bondoc crashed near a stretch of road known as Devil's Slide, which has a reputation for deadly accidents.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Court ruling helps rights to property

The Supreme Court last month participated in what Chip Mellor, president of the Washington D.C.-based Institute for Justice, called "the renaissance of property rights." The institute, with the help of University of Chicago law professor Richard Epstein, authored a friend-of-the-court brief on behalf of the property owners in question. What the court did was nothing less than take a giant stride toward equal respect for all the individual rights outlined in the Bill of Rights.

At stake in Dolan v. City of Tigard was the question of whether government agencies can make the approval of building permits contingent on property owners ceding control of part of their property to the government without compensation. John and Frances Dolan wanted to expand their hardware store in the city of Tigard, a suburb of Portland, Ore. City agencies granted a permit, but only on the condition that the couple set aside 10 percent of their property for a storm-drainage channel and a pedestrian and bicycle path.

A state court of appeals and the Oregon Supreme Court ruled in favor of the city government. Frances Dolan, even after her husband's death, took the case all the way to the Supreme Court. In a 5-4 opinion written by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, the high court ruled that "the city must make some sort of individualized determination that the required dedication is related both in nature and extent to the impact of the proposed development."

If the government can prove that a proposed development or alteration will create a deleterious impact on other people or property owners in the city, it can require mitigation or even take part of the property. But it can't simply use the permit process to take property just because some bureaucrat thinks a bicycle path or a park would be nice.

The decision changes the previous stance of the court in two important ways: First, it places the burden of proof on a government agency, giving the property owner the presumption of correctness or benefit of the doubt. Second, it returns property rights to equal status with other protected rights rather than relegating them to second-class status, as federal courts have generally done since the U.S. Supreme Court responded to FDR's court-packing scheme by giving the then-president just about everything he wanted.

"We see no reason why the Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment, as much a part of the Bill of Rights as the First Amendment or Fourth Amendment, should be relegated to the status of a poor relation," wrote Rehnquist. Yet federal courts have approved a two-tiered system since the Carolene Products decision in 1938, which announced that government actions that violate economic rights would be subjected to less rigorous scrutiny than those affecting more "fundamental" rights such as speech or voting.

The Dolan decision seems to recognize not only that the framers never declared that some parts of the Bill of Rights were less important than the others, but that in real life, economic rights and other personal and political rights are so closely tied together that violating one kind of right almost always has a deleterious effect on other rights.

If this decision really means the court is eliminating the two-tiered system in which some rights were more equal than other rights, it is a genuine landmark — and a welcome one.

Escape from church-state mess

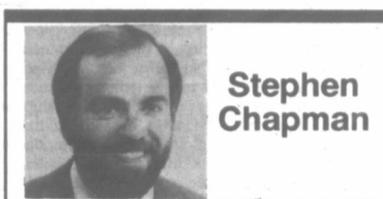

The Satmar Hasidim, members of a small, ultra-orthodox Jewish sect based largely in New York, don't have much use for the rest of us, and they have gone to great pains to minimize their exposure to the modern world and its corruptions. Their ill-fated encounter with the Supreme Court last month won't make them more eager to mingle, but it could end up doing their fellow Americans, and them, some real good.

Of all the issues involving the separation of church and state, few create more vehement disagreements than government involvement in religious schools. Hard-core separatists think not a nickel of tax funds should be allowed to find its way into the coffers of Pat Robertson or the pope. Parents straining to pay property taxes and parochial school tuition wonder why choosing a religious curriculum means forfeiting all government help in educating their kids.

The Supreme Court has had a devil of a time deciding which side to take — and has compromised by alternating between one and the other. It has permitted the government to provide religious schools with books but not maps. It has endorsed letting state-provided buses take kids to school but not on field trips. So far, the court has groped unsuccessfully to find a clear formula that respects both the freedom of believers to practice their faith and the liberty of others not to finance it.

The Hasidic Jews, who make up virtually the entire populace of Kiryas Joel, N.Y., send most of their kids to religious schools. But handicapped children need expensive services that those institutions can't afford to provide. So the local public school district used to dispatch teachers to the religious schools to lead special classes.

Alas, this sensible arrangement was doomed. In

Stephen Chapman

1985, the court ruled that such programs run afoul of the First Amendment because they produce "excessive entanglement of church and state."

The disabled kids were then sent to neighboring public schools. But parents, as the Supreme Court's majority opinion by David Souter noted, found them "highly unsatisfactory" (can you imagine?). They said their children suffered "panic, fear and trauma" from being inundated with obnoxious outside influences and ridiculed for their odd ways.

So nearly all the families decided their kids would be better off in Hasidic schools, even if it meant doing without special education. If the village elders wanted these children to be taught among their fellow Hasidim without forfeiting state help, they had to find another method.

Their solution was to get the legislature to carve out a new school district confined to Kiryas Joel, taking care to exclude any children who were not part of the sect. After its creation, the school district did only one thing: run a single public school for the disabled.

Recently, the Supreme Court put an end to that scheme, which it said delegated political authority to a group of people on the basis of their religion, in violation of the principle of state neutrality toward matters implicating the Almighty.

The majority was right on that score. More important and surprising, though, was that five justices who took opposite sides in this case arrived at a common thesis: The people of Kiryas Joel were led into this scheme not by their own folly but by that of the Supreme Court. The problem, the justices agreed, is the decision made in 1985 preventing the government from furnishing students with special services in religious schools.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who voted to dismantle the Kiryas Joel school district, summarized this view: "The religion clauses prohibit the government from favoring religion, but they provide no warrant for discriminating against religion ... If the government provides this (handicapped) education on-site at public schools and at non-sectarian private schools, it is only fair that it provide it on-site at sectarian schools as well."

The three dissenters — Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas — agreed that the 1985 verdict should be junked "at the earliest opportunity." And Anthony Kennedy, who sided with the majority, blamed the dispute on the court's own rulings, arguing that "a neutral aid scheme, available to religious and non-religious alike, is the preferable way."

Rather than single out a religious sect for favorable treatment, the court said in this instance, the state has to be neutral. Rather than deprive students of public benefits purely because they attend religious schools, the court apparently now believes, the state also has to be neutral.

The court was right on this dispute and right that it needn't have occurred. Enforcing neutrality, which may be the court's new approach, would be a principled improvement that protects the religious without favoring the religion.

NEWS ITEM: GAMBLING MORE POPULAR THAN BASEBALL

NASA must come down to earth

Charley Reese

The bedrock belief of elitists today is that the American people are too stupid to govern themselves, or to even engage in a discussion. Therefore, they must always be tricked or fooled or manipulated. I can cite an example from NASA.

Daniel Goldin, NASA administrator, said in a speech recently that NASA needs to set a new goal "that can integrate the space science into a simple statement that the American public can understand." He suggested as one possibility the search for a habitable planet.

In fairness to Goldin, he tossed out the idea of finding a habitable planet as an example of the kind of large goal he thinks NASA should adopt. Still, even as a suggestion, it's silly. It shows really that he's looking for a way to manipulate the public into supporting NASA because he thinks the public simply cannot understand its serious work. The idea of educating the public, rather than propagandizing them, doesn't seem to be even worthy of consideration.

One light year, the distance light travels in a year, is about 6 trillion miles. A planet 10 light years away — Goldin's suggested parameter — is then 60 trillion miles away. Since no vehicle man makes or likely can make even approach the speed of light, the distance renders the project nonsensical.

How fast does light travel? About 670 million miles per hour. With the moon project, I believe, we hit about 19,000 miles per hour and change.

Goldin, desperate to keep federal dollars going into NASA, seems to me to be suggesting that people's fantasies, fed by science fiction books and movies, should be played upon rather than educating them about the facts of space.

The vast distances of space are much less comforting than the fantasies of science fiction, which is just a modern form of the old fairy tale. In a cube of space containing 4,096 cubic light years, there are only 17 of the estimated one trillion stars in our own little galaxy. The nearest star to our planet, Alpha Centauri, is an unreachable distance, as far as we are concerned. Around each star there are about 400 cubic light years of — nothing. Even our little trip to the moon amounts to nothing but a flea jump.

The basic facts of space are the best arguments in the world for the environmental movement. That's because the basic facts of space are there is no hope — I repeat, no hope — of human beings escaping this planet. This is it, baby. We're trapped and we're alone. Screw this one up and it's death and doom time. Goodbye humans. Extinction. No second chance. Nothing in our solar system, besides Earth, can support human life; nothing outside our solar system is within reach — now or ever.

If Mr. Goldin wants a larger vision to justify NASA's billions, I suggest that NASA become the handmaiden of agriculture, that its goal be directed 100 percent toward preservation of life on this planet. Otherwise it should be dismantled, for it can serve no other purpose useful enough to justify the resources it consumes.

The air, water and soil have to be top priorities of all humans, because those are the only things standing between life and death. We can learn far more about conserving air, water and soil — and thus life — from American Indians than we can from your average physicist or specialist in rocket fuels.

NASA's satellites have provided useful information about the biosphere and the land masses. If Mr. Goldin needs a larger vision, then he should build on what NASA has already done and make preservation of the Earth the No. 1 goal. NASA has the capability of becoming a useful servant of the Earth, but not the capability of becoming a master of space.

If Goldin thinks ordinary Americans can't figure that out, then he vastly underestimates their intelligence. Most elitists do. Funny, though, how often elitists foul things up when they're in charge.

What the Simpson 911 tapes don't tell

No one but the person or persons involved in Nicole Brown Simpson's murder knows who killed her. However, the rest of the country has now experienced some of the terror she knew at the hands of her ex-husband, O.J. Simpson, in the macabre hindsight given us by recorded tapes of her calls to Los Angeles 911.

Tapes of her calls released by the LAPD allowed us to suffer what seemed like the interminable waits for police to arrive, the 911 operator trying to keep her on the line while O.J. yelled, cursed and beat at the door in the background.

Time dragged as we dreaded that any second O.J. would prevail over the kitchen door lock and do what Nicole told the operator she feared he would, "beat the s— out of me."

By the time we listened to the 911 tapes, we'd already heard or read 1989 police reports that O.J. had beaten his wife so badly she had required treatment at a hospital. Police reports listed a cut lip, a swollen and blackened left eye and cheek and a hand imprint on her neck.

At that time, police reported she had met them by running out of the bushes and yelling, "He's going to kill me. He's going to kill me."

The impact of those tapes may be the most important piece of information to come from the exhaustive effort to find who nearly decapitated Nicole Simpson. It was a chilling first for me, even though I've interviewed several women who have been stalked, tortured and beaten by former husbands and lovers. I'd never been so close to living through one of those terrifying moments as I was listening to Nicole Simpson's 911 calls.

It was mass education for hundreds of thousands of Americans, a glimpse of what really happens to female victims of domestic abuse, some 1,431 of whom, according to FBI statistics, were killed in 1992 by boyfriends or husbands. Yet we are so inured to the overabundance of statistics on so many subjects, thrown at us without any meaningful comparison, that how many women were killed by domestic abuse in a year has less effect than how many inches of rainfall we're down.

Listening to actual tapes of Nicole Simpson's 911 calls had a much different effect. People who have never met a domestic abuse victim told me of the riveting effect of listening to those tapes. For the first time, they understood the terror of the stalked.

It was also an education into how little happens to abusers. O.J. Simpson pleaded no contest to charges of spousal abuse stemming from the 1989 incident with his wife, and was sentenced by a municipal judge to 120 hours of community service and two years' probation. The New York Times reports that the prosecutor in that case had asked — because of the severity of the beating of his wife — that O.J. Simpson undergo an intensive year-long program for men who batter their spouses.

Instead, O.J. Simpson was allowed to receive counseling from a psychiatrist of his choice, a move experts in the treatment of domestic abusers characterized to The New York Times as "highly unusual and ineffective."

Simpson was also allowed to choose his own community service, a move the prosecutor in the case characterized as letting Simpson just do more of what was "part of his job."

Unfortunately, after some of Nicole Simpson's calls to 911, she still refused to press charges. This is a horrible on police and prosecutors, but reluctance to press charges often comes from the victims' confusion at the dual personality of the classical abuser. Abusers run between rage and remorse, so that victims are always dealing with two people: the monster who beats and threatens, and the penitent who promises to stop and will do anything to "make it up."

Tragically, that's the one piece of this horrifying puzzle that won't ever make it into the 911 tapes.

Rodeo clowns more than just entertainers

One of the most exciting aspects of rodeo competition is the bull riding competition. Helping to make the event not only exciting but safe is the rodeo clown, the befuddled hero of the rodeo arena.

At this year's Top O' Texas Rodeo, which begins tonight at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena in Recreation Park, spectators will have a chance to see the daring feats of two of the best rodeo clowns, Ted Kimzey and Ronny Sparks, rodeo veterans with years of experience under their belts.

Kimzey will be this year's barrelman, the ring leader of rodeo clowns.

"I like grease paint, baggy pants and making people laugh best of all," he said.

Kimzey was raised on a farm and ranch near Strong City, Okla., and competed in his first rodeo when he was 10-years-old. In high school and college, he competed in all three riding events.

A graduate of Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford, Okla., he received his bachelor of science degree in industrial education.

While he was still competing, Kimzey turned to clowning and bullfighting as a full-time profession in 1973. Since then, Kimzey — along with his trained animal acts and barrel — has been recognized as being one of the funniest talents in pro rodeo.

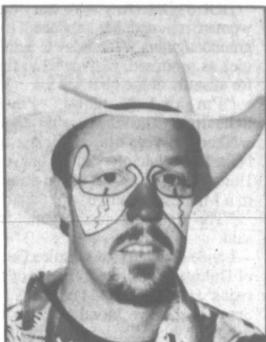

Kimzey has worked in all 50 states and has even taken his act to Germany. He said he is attracted to rodeos because of the traveling and especially the people.

In 1980 and again in 1987, he had the honor of being selected to clown the National Finals Rodeo and in 1986 he earned the title of "PRCA Clown of the Year."

Although the 5-foot-6, 145-pound cowboy considers himself a barrel-

Ted Kimzey

Ronny Sparks

man, many fans and bullriders say he is one of the finest bullfighters in the business.

During his career, Kimzey has participated in the last nine National Finals Wrangler Bullfight finals and many contests during the season.

When Kimzey is not in the arena, he and his wife Jennifer and daughter Dusta work on their 3,000-acre family ranch, raising old world bluestem grasses and caring for their commercial and show cattle.

Sharing the responsibility in keeping the area safe this year will be Sparks, another veteran of the rodeo arena and the 1992-1993 Wrangler World Champion Bullfighter.

For Sparks, 1993 was filled with plenty of highs and lows.

Trailing most of the year in point totals, Sparks claimed his second consecutive title in exciting, championship form while pocketing almost $22,000 from the National Finals Rodeo. He finished the year with a grand total of $37,519, nearly $4,000 ahead of his nearest competitor.

Considering he climbed from fifth place to finish first in a year riddled with injuries, Sparks seemed to have met the challenges dealt him.

"It was a tough year," the Texarkana-native said. "I started off the year in Phoenix and tore my right hamstring. I went on to Pocatello (Idaho) for the Dodge National Circuit Finals and the Dr. J. Pat Evans and the Justin Sportsmedicine Program tried to get me ready, but the hamstring wouldn't respond."

More bad luck was in Sparks' future, however.

"Then I broke my right ankle on Oct. 20 and was told by J. Pat to ride a bicycle to get ready for the finals," he said.

Apparently, cycling and Sparks made a good match. He went on to score 81 points to win the first round of the finals. He kept up his performance level and went on to victory winning the second, third and fourth rounds of the competition in convincing fashion.

Local sponsors for the Wrangler Bull Fight are Bowers Ranch and Wayne's Western Wear.

This year's rodeo competition kicks off tonight at 8 p.m. Prior to the opening ceremonies, a free barbecue begins at 5:30 p.m. and the Celebrity Pickup Race begins at 6 p.m.

Telescope ads for comet crash: Timely, or just plain misleading?

By ANNE THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The Nature Co. has tripled its national telescope sales with advertising linked to this weekend's cosmic crash between Jupiter and a comet.

The telescope ad reads: "All the world's telescopes will be watching. Will you?" Several sales people told inquirers that amateurs should be able to see the result of the impact with telescopes sold at The Nature Co. stores.

But astronomers say the retail chain's telescopes are too weak to pick up any activity on Jupiter caused by the comet crash. And there may not be any visible results at all.

So stargazers who expect to see pyrotechnics through The Nature Co.'s best-selling $499 telescope will probably be disappointed, said Daniel Green, an astronomer with the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics.

"I think they're kind of on the edge there of what's proper advertising and what isn't," Green said.

The Nature Co.'s director of public relations, George Cruys, said the ads do not promise that the telescopes are strong enough to pick up any explosions.

"We're not trying to mislead people, but we are using the event to sell telescopes and sell books and get people interested in astronomy," Cruys said.

The tactic has worked.

By the third week of May, the most recent period from which figures are available, telescope sales had already increased by 50 percent compared with the same period last year, Cruys said. Sales have tripled since The Nature Co. launched its ad campaign on June 1. The company does not release specific sales figures.

The comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 is a string of space rocks or ice speeding in line toward Jupiter at about 130,000 miles per hour. The largest fragment is almost two miles in diameter.

They are expected to start hitting Saturday — on the side of the planet away from Earth. The actual collision will be seen only by cameras from the Hubble Space Telescope. The images will be broadcast on television.

Astronomers and others with high-powered telescopes might be able to see the aftermath of the collision. But scientists differ over whether the comet will trigger fireballs more than 1,500 miles across or be absorbed without a trace into Jupiter's gaseous depths.

Regardless, only a high-powered telescope with an aperture of at least eight inches would pick up any activity, Green said.

"Even I, because I don't follow Jupiter closely, would have a hard time," Green said. "To say that the untrained observer is going to go out and see something is very misleading to say the least."

The best-selling telescope at The Nature Co. has an aperture of 90 millimeters, or 3 1/2 inches. The second best-seller has an aperture of 60 millimeters, or 2 and 1/3 inches, Cruys said.

When a reporter made anonymous telephone calls to Nature Co. stores in Boston and Chicago, salespeople recommended buying the telescope with the 90 millimeter aperture.

"The only thing you'll be able to see is the impact the comet will have. With the 90 millimeter it will be more clearly defined," said a Boston saleswoman.

In Chicago, a saleswoman said that with the 90 millimeter model "you'll be able to see something when it hits but exactly what we're not sure yet."

Cruys said the salespeople's comments were not what The Nature Co. wants them to tell customers.

Ron Forbes, executive vice president of marketing for The Nature Co., said he wrote a memo to the retail chain's 124 stores in the United States and Canada advising sales people to be more careful.

"No one in the world should buy a telescope this size with the idea they're going to watch comets impact Jupiter," Cruys said.

David Levy, co-discoverer of the comet, agreed.

Levy, whose book Skywatching is also being promoted with telescopes by The Nature Co., suggests that amateurs watch Jupiter with a telescope before the comet hits, then watch the collision on television.

Dallas teen given life sentence in slaying of actor

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas teenager has been given a life prison term after being convicted on a capital murder charge in the slaying of a young New York actor during an armed robbery.

The sentence means that Freddie Leon Rudd, 18, will have to serve 35 years before he can apply for parole.

Rudd was sentenced Wednesday for his part in the robbery-slaying of actor Robert McAdam Smith, 21, and the wounding of actor Pirie MacDonald Tutchings, 62, on Dec. 10, 1992.

The two actors had just parked their car in an apartment complex parking lot when several youths, including one armed with a pistol, surrounded them and demanded money.

Both men were shot in the head after they surrendered their wallets, police said.

Report: Texas leads nation in farm disaster aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas farmers claimed more in disaster payments for crop losses from 1985 through 1993 than their counterparts anywhere else in the United States, an environmental research group said Wednesday.

Taxpayers took a $1.9 billion hit on crop loss payments in Texas during the seven years surveyed by the Environmental Working Group, a non-profit organization that focuses on agricultural issues.

North Dakota was second, with $1.1 billion; and Minnesota third, with $1 billion. Nationwide, farmers collected $25.2 billion in crop insurance benefits and disaster loss money.

The group, which is urging overhaul of crop loss assistance programs for farmers, contends that its findings raise questions about whether some land should be cultivated at all.

"There are some geographic areas where we see such frequency of disaster that it's really become a situation where the staple crop is disaster assistance," the group's president, Kenneth Cook, said at a news conference.

In Texas, 7,382 producers received disaster payments from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in at least five of the seven years surveyed. Those farmers collected $237 million of the $1 billion in ASCS disaster payments paid out over the seven years.

"The public encourages policy holders to take risks with their property," Cook said. "Taxpayers shoulder the bulk of any claim."

But Texas Farm Bureau spokesman Gene Hall said crop insurance and disaster assistance programs are necessary to ensure a plentiful food supply.

"There's just a tremendous amount of risk involved," Hall said. "Some kind of protection is not only a benefit for agriculture, but for the public as well. These guys miss a couple of crops in a row and they are out of business."

Grandmother returns twins to Minnesota couple

HOUSTON (AP) — A teary-eyed woman returned her orphaned twin granddaughters Wednesday to authorities as promised, but vowed to fight for custody of the girls.

"I'm kind of numb," Phyllis Schaepler Durichek said as she walked 6-year-old Felicia and Natasha Schaepler to a lawyer's Houston office as part of the transfer to a Minnesota couple.

"The fight has just begun," she said.

Lance Rhicard and Candice Geary of Duluth, Minn., were friends of the twins' father, who died of AIDS last September. Five months before his death, Robert Schaepler stipulated in his will the couple be granted custody of the girls.

Rhicard and Ms. Geary have been in Houston waiting for Mrs. Durichek to turn the children over to them as ordered by a Houston judge last Friday.

After the girls were turned over to the couple, all four went to Hobby Airport and boarded a plane for the trip back to Minnesota.

"We've been waiting for this moment for 10 1/2 months," Rhicard said. "Just to be able to hold them in our arms is glorious."

The grandmother insisted she was with the twins on a "vacation" when the judge ruled last Friday the pair be turned over to the couple. Mrs. Durichek said she did not flee with the girls or try to circumvent the courts.

The three were in West Memphis, Ark., Tuesday night before making the 15-hour drive back to Houston Wednesday.

After a short reunion with family members, including playtime with the twins' three cousins, Mrs. Durichek and her husband, Peter, drove to the office of their lawyer, Stewart Gagnon, to begin the transfer.

"It's still hard for me to understand why they take the children away from blood," Mrs. Durichek said.

A Houston judge had granted custody to Mrs. Durichek on Sept. 15, days after a Minnesota court granted custody to Rhicard and Ms. Geary.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled June 22 that jurisdiction belonged to the Minnesota court and ordered the Houston judge to withdraw his ruling.

State District Judge Joe Peavy then ordered Mrs. Durichek to turn the children over to Rhicard and Ms. Geary by 4 p.m. Friday, but she didn't show up.

Carrying a stray kitten they found on their adventure, the twins later Wednesday were taken to a downtown court building. There, under the care of Harris County child welfare workers, the girls were taken to Rhicard and Ms. Geary.

Airplanes filling up in summer flights

NEW YORK (AP) — Cheap airline seats are hard to come by this summer for flights to popular vacation spots as more tourists pack into fewer airplanes.

With jets flown by the major airlines running about two-thirds full, the industry could break the summer ridership record set in 1992, when half-off ticket discounts boosted sales.

Airlines reserve only a portion of each plane for discount fliers who make reservations well in advance, meaning these seats can be sold out long before the purchase deadline.

"We're finding the discounted seats are running full," said Joan Young, owner of Stirling Road Travel in Hollywood, Fla. "People were waiting ... for the fares to come down and they haven't."

Earlier this year, airlines offered discounts for summer trips as high as 40 percent, and many of these cheap seats filled quickly.

But after five fare sales in the first six months of 1994, airlines have largely backed off, a sign they are content with summer ticket sales.

American Airlines spokesman Tim Smith says travelers shouldn't despair. If they are willing to be flexible on flight times and connections, the cheapest seats are still available.

"Those travelers accustomed to waiting until the last minute might find they can't get the lowest fare," said Bill Berry, Delta Air Lines spokesman. "But if they plan ahead and are a little bit flexible, they should still be able to get some of those bargains out there."

Many airline watchers expect another sale will be launched in August for fall travel, but that prices won't get much cheaper for the rest of the summer.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My daughter got picked up for shoplifting $30 worth of merchandise in a store where she had just spent $83. After she was caught, she offered to pay for the items she took, but they refused to accept her money. (It was the first time she had ever been picked up for shoplifting.) Instead, they put a restraining order on her, denying her the right to shop in any of their stores for the rest of her life! (They are part of a large national chain.)

My poor daughter is a wreck. She's manic-depressive, and has been under the care of a psychiatrist for the last four years.

Abby, I could understand them fining her maybe $100 and barring her from shopping in that store for six months or a year, but for them to bar her from shopping at any of their stores for life seems terribly harsh to me.

Also, there are video cameras all over the store so the customers can be observed while they shop. Don't you think there should be signs posted advising the customers that they are being videotaped?

I would appreciate knowing what you think of this.

UPSET IN INDIANA

DEAR UPSET: Shoplifters cost retail merchants millions of dollars annually, so I can't fault them for dealing firmly with those they catch.

However, for a first-time offender, especially one who has been under the care of a psychiatrist for the last four years, I would say that she received very harsh punishment. I, too, believe that there should be signs posted all over the store advising shoppers of the video cameras. This alone should discourage shoplifting.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I both retired last year. Because we're together more now, her habit of whistling annoys me to no end.

I suppose it's a sign of happiness, but it drives me up a wall! Somehow, singing or humming a tune would be much more acceptable. Not wanting to offend her, I say nothing while I silently endure it.

What are your thoughts on the subject?

GOING CRAZY IN NEBRASKA

DEAR GOING: How can you expect your wife to know that one of her habits gets on her nerves if you don't tell her?

Get the message to her gently. For example, say: "Sweetheart, I know that whistling is a sign of contentment and happiness, but isn't there some other way to express it? If you're doing it unconsciously — would you mind if I helped you by mentioning it? I love you."

DEAR ABBY: I have been intending to write this thank-you letter since 1985 — the year my siblings and I had a reception to honor our parents on their 50th wedding anniversary.

Neither we, nor our parents, wanted the guests to bring gifts. After 50 years of marriage, most couples have just about everything they need — and if they don't have it, they probably don't want it.

A very good friend told me of a suggestion she had read in the Dear Abby column, that guests contribute letters of remembrance to be placed in an album instead of gifts.

I am very happy to report that the response was great! With all the wonderful letters, we were able to compile a terrific album to present to our mom and dad.

Abby, we had the entire evening videotaped. After the dinner, we called on some of the guests to read their letters of remembrance. Since we have it on tape, we have been able to enjoy it repeatedly.

Please consider this a belated thank-you for making our parents' 50th wedding anniversary spectacular.

A young McLean man dedicated to emergency work is now a certified emergency medical technician

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

It's official.

As of July 8, Jeremy Thomas of McLean became a certified emergency medical technician, qualified to man a basic life support ambulance.

He's been riding fire trucks and ambulances since he was fourteen and carrying an emergency pager since he was seven. His work with the injured and ailing now carries the sanction of the Texas Department of Health.

Thomas, 18, is so dedicated to emergency work he was one of seven volunteers honored with KVII's Seven Who Care award in April. Not bad for a teenager with a brand new high school diploma.

Thomas parlayed his volunteer work into a paying job as a midnight dispatcher for Gray County sheriff's office. He expects to continue emergency service work this fall as a part time dispatcher at Canyon Fire Department.

Working with emergency service is a family affair.

"Dad and mom have been involved in ambulance and dad has been involved in the fire department. It's the thing to do to keep me out of trouble," he said.

"It's really an adrenaline high. I just enjoy it," he said.

Jeremy Thomas, 18, serves as a midnight dispatcher for the Gray County sheriff's office. He was recently honored with KVII's Seven Who Care award for volunteer work he has done in the community.

Thomas got hooked when Gray County Deputy Paul Sublett gave him a broken pager at age three. At age seven, he got his first real pager to wear on his belt.

"The biggest reason I had it was to hear if Dad was going and if Mom went and to hear what's going on," he said.

He plans to enter West Texas A&M University in the fall. He has no particular career goal, but he names off his top choices - law enforcement, medical school or fire administration.

Hobbies? Are you kidding? "I don't have time for anything else. I barely have time to sleep," he said.

Newsmakers

Sixteen Gray County residents recently participated in an electricity camp sponsored by Southwestern Public Service Company. More than 115 4-H'ers from throughout the Texas Panhandle attended the camp June 20-June 24 at Camp Scott Able, near Cloudford, N.M.

The Gray County participants were Bryan Bockmon, Nikki Bockmon, Angie Davenport, Shelly Davenport, Terra Hembree, Nonnie James, Amanda Kludt, David Kludt, Kim McDonald, Brent Story, Jared Story, Tracy Tucker, Dennis Williams, Jennifer Williams, along with adult leaders Eileen Kludt and Kirk McDonald.

Students had opportunities to build their own "hands-on" projects. They also participated in demonstrations and lectures on basic electricity, safety, wiring and electrical terminology.

County agents and SPS employees served as advisers and instructors. Southwestern Public Service Company is a regional electric utility that primarily provides electric service to a population of about one million people in a 52,000-square-mile area comprising eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the South Plains and Panhandle of Texas, the Oklahoma Panhandle and southwestern Kansas. Corporate headquarters is in Amarillo.

Club news

On Monday Altrusa International, Inc., of Pampa met in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn for the monthly noon business meeting. President Charlene Morriss welcomed two guests, Sandy Carr and Margaret Mumma. The accent on "Tips for Being a Good Sponsor" was given by Brenda Tucker.

Mary McDaniel and Nancy Hahn handed out tickets to club members to be sold to the public for the Altrusa Style Show. McDaniel asked for volunteers to work on the different committees in preparation for the style show.

A motion was made that Altrusa become a vendor for the Chronically Ill & Disabled Children Services Program of the Texas Department of Health. Kadda Schale explained that as a vendor, Altrusa would aid families with children in the CIDC program with travel expenses for needed health care, such expenses to be reimbursed to the club by the Texas Department of Health. The motion was approved.

Emeritus status was approved for members, Irene Smith and Rena Bell Anderson.

WRESTLING
BATTLECREEK, Mich. — Pampa's Corey Alfonsi won a silver medal Wednesday at the National AAU Wrestling Tournament.

Alfonsi, who will be a high school senior, placed second to teammate Michael Webb of Amarillo in the Somo 154-pound division. Alfonsi advanced to the finals with a 5-2 decision over Tony Cholly of Levytown, Penn. in the final 14 seconds of the match.

"Corey was real excited about winning the silver," said his mother, Peggiani Combs. "You can win by either points or submission in Somo and he lost by a submission hold."

Another Texas teammate, Michael Noser of Houston, placed fourth in the 132-pound division.

Alfonsi participates in the Greco-Roman division today and the Freestyle Division on Friday.

Alfonsi is a member of the Texas AAU Team. He qualified for Nationals by placing second in the Somo division and third in the Greco-Roman and Freestyle divisions at the Texas AAU meet in Amarillo.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Roberto Baggio scored twice in a five-minute span of the first half as Italy beat Bulgaria 2-1 to move within one victory of an unprecedented fourth World Cup title.

Italy will face Brazil, also a three-time winner, in Sunday's final at Pasadena, Calif. Romario scored on a header in the 81st minute as Brazil beat Sweden 2-1 at the Rose Bowl to advance to its first final since 1970.

Bulgaria and Sweden will play for third place Saturday.

BASKETBALL
NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA and the NBA Players Association filed written summaries in their federal court battle over the legality of the salary cap, draft and free agency system.

A temporary restraining order bars any player signings until U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy, who heard testimony Tuesday, rules on the case. NBA spokeswoman Teri Washington said no talks were scheduled.

WEST UNIVERSITY PLACE, Texas (AP) — Houston Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich was free on $500 bond after spending the night in jail on a drunken driving charge.

Tomjanovich, 45, was arrested just after 3 a.m. after an officer stopped the red Jeep he was driving for speeding and twice crossing a yellow line, West University Police Chief Steve Griffith said.

PHOENIX (AP) — LeVonn Wooten, a cousin of Phoenix Suns forward Jerrod Mustaf, pleaded innocent to first-degree murder in the death of a woman who lab tests show was carrying Mustaf's baby.

Wooten, 27, was indicted April 14 by a Maricopa County grand jury on charges of first-degree burglary and tampering with a witness in addition to the murder charge in the death of Althea Hayes, 28, of Glendale.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Jason Kidd's attorney, Henry Cruz, was granted a two-week postponement of a pretrial hearing in the former California guard's misdemeanor hit-and-run case.

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's coverage of the All-Star game Tuesday night earned the highest Nielsen rating in three years and was watched by an estimated 50 million people, the network said.

The game received an average national Nielsen rating of 15.7 with a 28 share, up one-tenth of a percent from last year's 15.6 on CBS. CBS had a 17.4 rating in 1991.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sam Jethroe, 72, of Erie, filed a notice of intent in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court to sue the NL and the Major League Players Association.

Jethroe, the NL rookie of the year in 1950 with the Boston Braves, claims baseball owes him a pension since he was denied a major league contract in 1945 because he is black.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Brian Hunter of Tucson doubled, stole third and scored on a wild pitch to break a 4-4 tie in the fifth inning as the National League beat the American League 8-5 in the Class AAA All-Star game.

FOOTBALL
OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn was chosen as interim head coach at Mississippi, filling the vacancy created with the firing of Billy Brewer.

Watson takes early lead at British Open

By BOB GREEN
 AP Golf Writer

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson took advantage of relatively benign morning conditions today for a share of the early first-round lead in the 123rd British Open Golf Championship.

Watson, 44, a five-time winner of this ancient title, compiled a 2-under-par 68 on the Turnberry Links where he engaged Jack Nicklaus in a memorable shootout in the 1977 version of this event.

Watson, in the third group off the tee, played in partly sunny weather with light winds most of his round and got his score on the board just as the weather began to change.

A freshening wind picked up and clouds began to roll in from the Irish Sea as he played the final few holes and the forecast called for deteriorating conditions later in the day. The forecasters listed the chances of afternoon rains at 95 percent.

Although Americans were listed as long shots by Britain's legal bookies — no U.S. players are among the top 10 favorites and none better than 33-1 on the eve of the championship — Watson and fellow American Loren Roberts shared the top spot in the very early going.

Those odds changed dramatically overnight. More than one-half million British pounds were wagered on Watson overnight and his odds went from 33-1 to 16-1 just before he teed off.

Roberts, 39, who scored his first career victory earlier this season in the Nestle Classic in Orlando, Fla., once had it 4-under par, but bogeyed two of the last three holes.

That sort of thing can be expected, Watson said.

"I think the leaders, at the end of the day, will shoot very good scores on the front nine, maybe 4 or 5 under," he said. "But it's going to be very difficult to stay even par on the back."

South African David Frost was another early example.

He was among the leaders for most of his round, then bogeyed three of his last four holes and finished at par 70.

Watson, who has won only once in the United States in the last 10 years, said he was "happy with the score, but I did it the wrong way." "I played the front, the downwind holes, in par, then got my score coming in, playing into the wind," he said.

It could have been even better. After a three-putt bogey on the sixth, he needed only a 6-iron second shot to the par-5 seventh and missed a 5-foot eagle putt. He also missed from about 12 feet on the next hole and was even par through 12.

He birdied the 13th from about 30 feet and went to 2-under with a 6-foot putt on the 17th, then missed again, from about 8 feet, on the final hole.

"I really played pretty well, both on the front and the back," he said.

"I got a little putting tip from Lee Trevino" during their golfing vacation in Ireland last week, Watson said, "and it seems to be working."

Three other Americans and Zimbabwe's Nick Price were working their way up the leaderboard.

David Edwards (through 12 holes), Peter Jacobsen (through 13) and Andrew Magee (through 15) all were at 2-under par. Price, the only three-time winner on the American tour this season, also was 2-under par through 11 holes.

Japanese veteran Jumbo Ozaki pitched in from the rough for an eagle-2 on the first hole, birdied the third, lipped out a 6-foot par putt on the sixth and was 2-under par at that point.

Pampa girls gain revenge on Fritch

PANHANDLE — Pampa's 11-12 year-old All-Stars went into last night's matchup with Fritch looking for revenge. Pampa was held to one hit in their first meeting and lost, 11-0, but they were not to deny this time around.

The Pampa girls were able to pound out eight hits, along with a number of timely walks, to defeat Fritch, 13-7.

With the win, Pampa advances to take on Dumas at 7 tonight in the District Softball Tournament. Pampa must defeat Dumas twice to advance to the championship game.

Tandi Morton pitched all but the final inning for Pampa to pick up the win. Morton scattered eight hits and allowed only three runs while walking four and striking out two as she forced Fritch to swing the bat. A good defensive effort by the Pampa girls helped hold Fritch in check.

The defensive play of the game was turned in by left fielder Destiny Engle. With one out in the second, she charged a smashed line drive to left center, making the catch and holding the runner on second. The third out was recorded when the next batter grounded to Morton, who threw to first for the out.

Kimberly Clark relieved Morton in the sixth with the bases loaded and no outs. She struck out the first batter she faced, then a batter reached on an error, scoring two runners. Clark then struck out the next batter for two away. With runners on second and third, Clark walked the next batter to reload the bases.

Fritch's rally came up short when Clark struck out the final batter on a 1-2 pitch to secure the win for Pampa.

At the plate, Morton helped her own cause with a triple and single. Others with hits for Pampa were Cassi Scott, two singles; Jessica Gonzales, a double; Alexis Amador, Heidi Searl, Jessica Conner and Clark, one single each.

Gillooly draws two-year sentence in Kerrigan attack

By BOB BAUM
 AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — If Jeff Gillooly deserved a better deal, he wasn't going to get it from Judge Donald Londer, who believes that Portland was one of the victims of the whole sordid affair.

Londer, the presiding circuit judge for Multnomah County, watched his courthouse become the stage for one of the most bizarre and highly publicized stories in the history of sports.

When Gillooly, Tonya Harding's ex-husband, came before him Wednesday to be sentenced for helping to plot the attack on figure skater Nancy Kerrigan, Londer was in no mood to be lenient.

Despite a prosecutor's recommendation that Gillooly be sentenced to a year in prison, Londer stuck to the original deal that was struck more than five months ago: two years in prison and a $100,000 fine.

This was the last stop for the Kerrigan criminal case, and the judge had the final say.

"Your outrageous and callous deed focused the attention of the world on this community and sullied it in the eye of international opinion," Londer told the 26-year-old former warehouse worker.

"It is a blot on the city of Portland's reputation that will linger long after the names of Gillooly, Harding, Eckardt, Stant and Smith have vanished from our collective memory," he said.

"All that will be recalled is a band of thugs from Portland, Ore., tried to rig the national Figure Skating Association championships and the Olympics by stealth and violence."

Londer called Gillooly "a prime example of how ruthless ambition and raw greed can disrupt, degrade and disfigure a sport of grace even to the height of the Olympics."

Gillooly, clean cut, clean shaven and wearing a tie, apologized to Kerrigan and to his family.

"Especially to my mom," he said. "I had an excellent upbringing. I knew better than this, but I did it anyway."

Gillooly's punishment was the harshest given to any of the five Kerrigan defendants. This wasn't the way it was supposed to be, Gillooly's attorney Ron Hoevet said.

Hoevet said prosecutors were to blame for not making sure that the promises were fulfilled.

When Gillooly's plea bargain was struck, prosecutors promised that his prison term would be no longer than that of the other defendants.

But as the other deals were worked out, it became obvious that wouldn't be the case. Shawn Eckardt, Shane Stant and Derrick Smith were sentenced to 18 months in prison each.

Harding, of course, avoided jail altogether. She was placed on three years' probation and ordered to pay $160,000.

A last-minute letter from District Attorney Michael Schrunck urged that the fine be boosted and Gillooly's prison term be reduced to one year because of his extraordinary cooperation with investigators.

"In a criminal case we very seldom see this kind of cooperation," Schrunck wrote.

Gillooly's testimony was crucial in obtaining a guilty plea from Harding for conspiracy to hinder prosecution, Schrunck wrote.

Gillooly has said all along that Harding was in on the plot. Although Harding denies the allegation, Gillooly passed a lie detector test.

Gillooly did his best to convince the judge that he was sincere.

"The only thing I could do to somehow rectify this terrible, awful situation was to stand up, take responsibility for my own actions, to cooperate, to tell the truth, do the right thing," he said.

Londer said he appreciated Gillooly's cooperation and the statement he made in court. But the judge was swayed by the seriousness of the offense.

"The only motivation was greed," he said, "and greed so great that the conspirators were willing to injure another athlete to achieve their purpose."

Baseball's owners have image problem

By RICHARD KEIL
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the last five years, baseball's owners have thrown out their commissioner and been found guilty by an arbitrator of conspiring to keep the lid on free agent salaries.

This might suggest they have an image problem, and maybe a credibility gap — particularly when they claim 19 teams are losing money. Even so, interim baseball commissioner Bud Selig says there's no need for team owners to open their books to back up that assertion.

"We have opened the books to the players," Selig, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers, said Wednesday after a speech at the National Press Club.

When asked about the possible public-relations benefits of proving to America that teams are losing money, Selig said: "You'd have to tell me what purpose that would serve."

And with a players strike looming, Selig insisted that the owners will stick to their revenue-sharing plan, even though it could prompt the eighth work stoppage in 22 years.

"There is no sense reviewing the history between the owners and the players," Selig said. "We are where we are today — 19 clubs are operating in the red. Together, we have to figure out a solution."

Under the owners' plan, players, whose earnings now consume 58 percent of the sports' revenue, would be limited to 50 percent of baseball's income. This, Selig said, would allow the sport to grow, ultimately pushing salaries still higher.

"If there's one thing (Players Association representative) Don Fehr and I can agree on, it's that there's a lot of potential (for growth) in a number of areas," Selig said.

Bishops attack abortion plans in health care reform efforts

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Catholic bishops told leaders of Congress that forcing all health plans to pay for abortions could sink health reform. They promised to mobilize followers to fight mandatory coverage.

But 72 members of the House threatened Wednesday to walk away from any health compromise that does not treat abortion the same as any other medically necessary procedure.

Separately, a new survey found both the public and physicians jittery about health reforms, down on the White House approach, but still eager to see Congress pass a major bill this year to cover all Americans.

The bishops, at a news conference, said they will fight for a bill that "includes real universal coverage and excludes abortion mandates." They said mandates would jeopardize the future of the 560 Catholic hospitals and other health care facilities.

"Abortion mandates are an unbearable burden for reform, turning millions of advocates into adversaries of reform legislation," three prelates — Cardinal Roger Mahony of Los Angeles, Bishop John H. Ricard of Baltimore and Archbishop William H. Keeler of Baltimore — said in a letter to congressional leaders.

But 72 members of the House — 68 Democrats and four Republicans — fired off their own letter to Speaker Thomas S. Foley, saying any move to strip abortion coverage from health reform would treat "women as second-class citizens." A compromise bill "must contain coverage for contraceptive and abortion services if it is to gain our support," they said.

At a news conference, Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said, "I don't try to impose my religion on my colleagues, and churches should not impose their particular religious beliefs on us."

Last month, 35 House Democrats said they would vote against any health bill that covers abortions.

Anti-abortion lobbyists failed in efforts to strike abortion coverage from any of the four health bills approved by House and Senate panels. But the Senate Finance Committee voted to let any employer or health plan refuse for religious or moral reasons to buy or provide abortion coverage.

"If Congress substitutes universal coverage for abortion mandates, we will fight," said Ricard, standing before boxes of registration cards that an estimated 5 million Catholics and others filled out in January after an earlier anti-abortion appeal from the bishops.

Pamela J. Maraldo, president of Planned Parenthood Federation of America, accused the bishops of threatening "to hold the promise of universal health coverage for all Americans hostage to their extremist position on abortion."

Meanwhile, Reps. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., and Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, met with backers of their managed competition bill and with sponsors of another centrist approach written by Reps. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., and Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla. They discussed the Finance bill with two backers, Sens. John Danforth, R-Mo., and John Breaux, D-La.

Neither of those three bills would require employers to buy insurance for the workers — one of the most divisive issues.

Cooper said the Finance bill is about as far as Congress can go. "Anything any wider is probably a waste of time," he said.

Danforth said the only way moderates can wield real power is by sticking to their guns and becoming a swing element in the debate.

On another front, Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said House leaders have agreed to use his plan — which expands Medicare to cover the poor and uninsured — as a starting point for a bill.

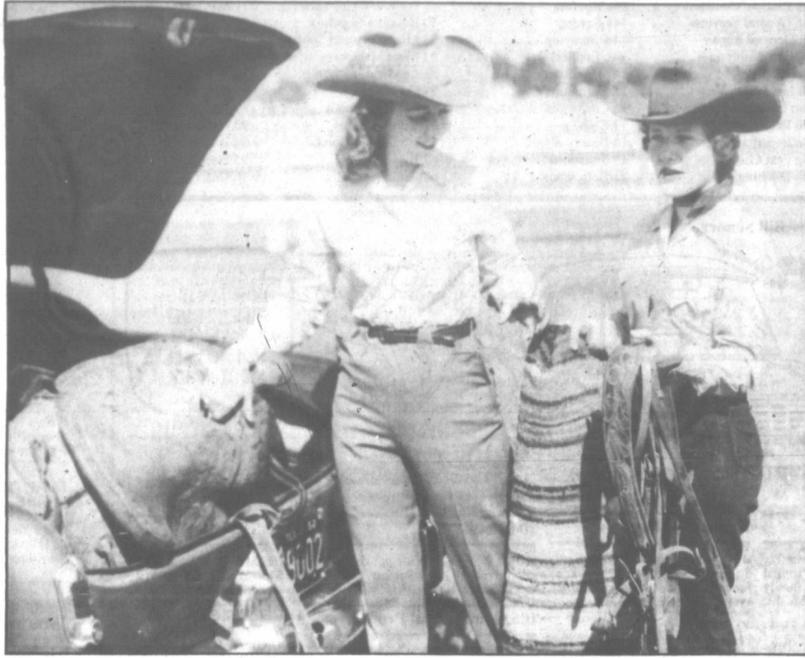

The bishops released a survey that found people opposed, by a 49-38 ratio, to a requirement that every insurance policy cover abortions. The Lawrence Group survey of 1,000 people, conducted June 25-28, had a three-point margin of error.

A separate poll by the Times Mirror Center found people against including abortions in a basic benefit package in a new national health plan, by a 68-26 margin.

That survey found that the public has turned against President Clinton's original health plan by a 49-32 margin — the exact opposite of a Times Mirror poll last December.

And only 39 percent supported making employers pay most of the cost of their workers' health insurance — the keystone to Clinton's approach. There was support from 76 percent for reforms to ensure that all Americans get medical care.

Greenbacks to receive first major makeover in 65 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Move over Ben Franklin, tell Andrew Jackson the news: The portraits on the nation's paper money likely will be enlarged and moved off-center as part of the first major makeover in 65 years.

"Our plan ... is a pre-emptive step to protect U.S. currency from high-tech counterfeiting," Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said in announcing the redesign Wednesday.

His department plans to have a final design ready sometime in 1995 and begin circulating new bills about a year later, starting with the most popular target for counterfeiters, $100 notes.

Nothing has been decided for certain, but Treasury officials gave the House Banking Committee a rundown Wednesday of what was likely.

The enlarged portraits — Franklin on the $100, Ulysses Grant on the $50, Andrew Jackson on the $20, Alexander Hamilton on the $10, Abraham Lincoln on the $5, Thomas Jefferson on the $2 and George Washington on the $1 — will allow for more detailed engraving of what is the most recognizable feature on a bill.

And, moving the portraits will make room for a watermark in the form of a smaller version of the portrait, visible only when a bill is held to the light.

Other likely changes include: — Color-shifting ink that may, for instance, appear green when viewed straight on and gold from an angle.

— Computer-designed "interactive" patterns that turn wavy when illicitly copied.

— Iridescent planchettes in bills' paper. These are colored discs only a few millimeters wide that reflect light.

— Micro-printing and machine-detectable threads or fibers in the paper.

The last major change in U.S. currency came in 1929, when bills were reduced in size and given a uniform look. Congress added the words "In God We Trust" in 1957.

In 1990, several small changes made it more difficult to counterfeit with modern color photocopyers. They included adding a microscopic line of type and a polyester thread visible only when a bill is held to a light. Most lawmakers applauded the latest modifications, saying they were long overdue.

"We must protect the dollar's standing as the world's foremost currency. Our financial future depends upon it," said the committee chairman, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas.
