Nixon Announces Energy Saving Emergency Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today that the emergency measures he outlined Sunday to meet the energy crisis would cause inconvenience but not hardships to the American public.

Nixon carried his message for cutting the amount of gasoline available to motorists and heating oil for homes to the Seafarers Union convention.

He stressed that his measures were taken to meet the short-term problem and his goal was to make the United States self-sufficient in energy by 1980. He pledged avoiding World War II-type gasoline rationing.

"Our goal is not to go back," he said. "Our goal is to go forward. But we have a temporary problem, and therefore we have to deal with the problem."

"We want to be in a position so nobody can cut our lifeline," he said.

In his nationally televised speech Sunday, Nixon said he would order lower speed limits across America, close gasoline stations part of each weekend, limit aviation fuel and curtail Christmas and ornamental lighting in an effort to deal with the crisis.

He asked gas stations voluntarily to close from 9 p.m. each Saturday until midnight Sunday, starting next weekend. Nixon said he would use emergency powers to make this mandatory as soon as he gets an energy bill from Congress, perhaps by mid-December. The rationing program for heating oil is to take effect Jan. 1.

Other steps foreseen a cut in electric power during peak demand periods — reductions called brownouts.

In a broadcast address Sunday calling for "discipline, self-restraint and unity," Nixon outlined steps to overcome some more than half of the anticipated overall shortage of 17 per cent in petroleum this winter. He did not say what steps would be taken to meet the remaining shortage.

Nixon acknowledged economic dislocations were likely, and promised to try to see "that any disruptions to our economy which may occur are short-lived and that they do not cause lasting damage."

The country uses some 17 million barrels of petroleum a day. By mid-winter, a daily shortfall of 3.5 million barrels had been anticipated before Nixon acted to cut consumption. He took some immediate steps and announced others to be taken when armed with power by Congress.

These immediate steps were announced:

—A cutback in heating oil deliveries starting Jan. 1 under regulations to be published Tuesday. Deliveries to homes are to be cut 15 per cent, to commercial and business places by 25 per cent and to industrial users by 10 per cent. Anticipated saving: 530,000 barrels a day.

—Refineries will be told to cut deliveries of gasoline to gas stations and wholesalers by 10 per cent of last year's demand. Since demand grows steadily, this amounts to a 15 per cent cutback below present-day demand. Regulations will be published in December for this indirect form of rationing, which is to save 900,000 barrels a day.

—Jet fuel deliveries to domestic airlines will be cut 5 per cent Dec. 1 and 15 per cent Jan. 7, 1974. International airlines will be reduced to their 1972 levels Dec. 1 and by 15 per cent Jan. 7. A 220,000 barrel daily saving is anticipated after Jan. 7.

—Regulations to be published Tuesday and effective Dec. 7 will prevent power plants and industries from switching from coal to oil.

recreational vehicles. Nixon asked gas stations to voluntarily comply this weekend. A 50,000 barrel daily saving was anticipated.

—Prohibition of the use of outdoor lighted signs except when business places are open.

—A prohibition on the use of Christmas lights outside homes or businesses.

As he had in his first energy crisis address three weeks ago, Nixon asked householders to set the thermostat at 68 degrees.

Nixon said the White House would forego outside Christmas lighting this year.

AS HEARINGS RE-OPEN

Nixon To Turn Tapes Over To Judge Sirica

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon's Watergate tapes will be turned over to federal judge John J. Sirica this afternoon, White House lawyers said today.

The disclosure came as Sirica re-opened hearings into the tapes.

Sirica said he would "have custody" of the tapes "some time this afternoon."

No further details were immediately revealed.

After announcing that he would be given the tapes today, Sirica looked at White House lawyer Leonard Garment who rose from his chair and nodded his head.

The first witness called was Nixon's special assistant and personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods.

She was summoned to testify about how she apparently erased an 18-minute section of one of the tapes. A White House source said she "inadvertently" erased part of the tape while transcribing it.

The source said Miss Woods was prepared to tell Sirica she made a mistake while transcribing the tape of a June 20, 1972, conversation between Nixon and his aide H. R. Haldeman and accidentally erased the 18 minutes.

"It was done inadvertently," the source said.

The Haldeman-Nixon conversation was three days after the break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate.

The White House's announcement last week that the 18 minutes of tape contained nothing but a hum prompted Sirica to ask for the tapes for safekeeping. Before the judge and White House lawyers were in the process of negotiating a step-by-step turnover of the tapes.

Another administration source reported that Miss Woods has hired an attorney, Charles B. Rhyne, former president of the American Bar Association and a former Duke Law School classmate and old friend of President Nixon.

In other developments:

—Sen. Charles McC Mathias, R-Md., said Sunday that President Nixon probably will be impeached if he fails to respond to "the general outcry for full disclosure" on Watergate. He was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation."

—Some of the GOP governors whom Nixon told in Memphis, Tenn., last week that he had no more Watergate bombshells to disclose, expressed disappointment on learning of the 18-minute tape gap.

These steps were announced for after Congress completes action on the energy bill.

—A nationwide speed limit of 50 miles per hour for cars and 55 m.p.h. for trucks and buses, which run more efficiently at the higher speed. In the meantime, states were urged to adopt those limits and motorists to comply voluntarily. A 200,000 barrel daily saving was foreseen.

—A ban from 9 p.m. Saturdays to midnight Sunday on the sale of gasoline for automobiles, trucks, pleasure boats, private airplanes and

Skylab's Photos Canceled

HOUSTON (UPI) — Flight controllers canceled the first Skylab 3 Earth photography pass because of bad weather and said today all such data-collecting sweeps may be cut short to conserve needed energy.

Crewmen Gerald P. Carr and William R. Pogue were to train their array of earth cameras across the northern United States before a cloud cover interfered.

Scientist Edward G. Gibson worked today to have Skylab's solar observatory ready for operation by Tuesday.

Flight Director Donald R. Puddy said the length of the rest of the earth resources passes of the flight may be cut in half-down to 15-20 minutes—because it now takes longer to roll the orbiting lab into position.

One of three stabilizing gyroscopes that keep the 100-ton lab in the right position in space has failed, but the ship is still operating satisfactorily on the remaining two.

Puddy said, however, that there might be more separate passes made, meaning just as much data on agriculture, geology, forests, the weather, the oceans and urban areas would be obtained.

"There's nothing we've come across yet that would keep us from obtaining all of the Skylab 3 objectives," he said.

With the cloudy conditions in sight, controllers decided against taking a chance the positioning effort would be wasted. Meteorologists would have been happy with pictures of clouds but other scientists need a good shot of the ground.

The thousands of earth study pictures the first two Skylab crews have made already are producing practical benefits. What may be a giant ore deposit in Nevada and hints on controlling insect infestation in crops in forests are among facts derived from them thus far.

Israel, Egypt Bargaining Over Troop Withdrawal

By United Press International

While Arab leaders gathered in Algiers today for their first summit conference in four years to align strategy against Israel, Israel and Egypt bargained unsuccessfully for 90 minutes today over the withdrawal of their armies on the Suez front.

The Israeli National Radio quoted U.N. officials as saying the crucial talks went well and that the next session between Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv of Israel and Egyptian Maj. Gen. Mohammed Gammasy would be held Wednesday. But UPI correspondent Raymond Wilkinson reported from Kilometer 101 on the Cairo-Suez Road that today's talks ended with no sign of a break.

The Israeli military command reported an exchange of artillery and small arms fire south of Ismailia on the Egyptian front Sunday, the most serious incident of the month-old cease-fire. The National Radio said one Israeli soldier was killed in the fighting.

Officials in Jerusalem said Israeli troops had been placed on alert on both the Syrian and Egyptian fronts "because of the tension that has existed for the past few days." Egyptian officials have called the cease-fire talks near collapse and warned that Egypt may renew the war unless Israel withdraws to the Oct. 22 cease-fire lines.

Israeli press reports said the troop withdrawal deadlock resulted from Egypt's insistence on keeping a force of 400 tanks on the east bank of the Suez Canal instead of the small policing force demanded by Israel.

As the Egyptian-Israeli talks got underway, U.N. spokesman Rudolf Stajuhar said that in addition to troop withdrawals, Yariv and Gammasy planned to discuss the movement of supplies to Suez City and Cairo's 3rd Army, both encircled by Israeli troops, and arrangements for a battlefield search for missing soldiers.

Against the background of the Israeli-Egyptian talks, the Israeli government Sunday accepted a U.S. offer to attend the five-nation peace talks Dec. 18 that may be held in Geneva.

The pullback dispute is the only issue still to be settled in the six-point truce accord worked out by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during his whirlwind Middle East peace mission earlier this month.

The Israeli military command reported a series of artillery and infantry clashes today with Egyptian forces along the Suez Canal.

Fourteen Arab kings, presidents, princes and guerrilla leaders were taking part in the Algerian summit, but there were splits even before formal talks began.

Libya and Iraq stayed home to show disapproval of the Middle East cease-fire. King Hussein of Jordan sent an aide to the parley and Morocco's King Hassan will not arrive until Tuesday.

On the eve of the conference, Israel reluctantly accepted a U.S. offer to attend five-nation peace talks tentatively scheduled for Dec. 18 in Geneva.

"The voices we hear from our neighbors even now as we go to the peace conference are not very encouraging," Prime Minister Golda Meir said.

ENERGY CRISIS? — With the nation being threatened with various shortages of energy, a number of Pampa residents faced a different kind of energy crisis Sunday afternoon when a car driven by an 85-year-old Montagu ran into the guy wire on a power pole in the 700 block of Montagu. The "collision" tore off a section of the pole and created temporary power failure and disruption of cable television service for a couple of hours.

Crime Report Suggests Local Government Test

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal commission says official political corruption is "a serious impediment to the task of reducing criminality in America." It urges citizens to conduct their own "do-it-yourself" tests of local governments.

In the last of six reports, the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals said Sunday: "The existence of corruption breeds further crime by providing for the citizen a model of official lawlessness that undermines any acceptable rule of law."

The report—basically completed before the Watergate scandals came to light—also urged states to require officials to disclose their financial records and to crack down on other corrupt practices.

The study was made under a $1.7 million grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, a branch of the Justice Department.

It said another way to reduce urban crime would be to set up neighborhood type "little city halls" in the big cities. The neighborhoods, under the plan, would elect their own officials, have authority to tax and representation in the main city government.

The 364-page report also contained a do-it-yourself test to help citizens measure the potential for corruption in state and local government, and it recommended government financing of state and local elections.

The commission said the neighborhood governments would be one means of meeting "problems of citizen alienation, remote decision making and inadequate service" that tends to breed crime.

"That calls for a new form of government," commission Director Thomas J. Madden told reporters. He said cities that fail to meet the problem may be in for a "surge in crime and violence."

The commission's corruption test consisted of a list of 74 questions a resident usually can answer himself. A preponderance of "yes" answers would indicate the "presence" of official corruption or "an atmosphere that is conducive" to corruption, the commission said.

Some samples:

— "Is it customary for citizens to tip sanitation workers, letter carriers and other groups of government employees at Christmas time?"

— "Is double parking permitted in front of some restaurants or taverns but not in front of others?"

IN PERCY KILLING

Suspect Ready To Take Testing By Lie Detector

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., says he hopes lie detector tests would be used to determine if members of a burglary gang murdered his 21-year-old daughter, Valerie, during a break-in at Percy's suburban Kenilworth home seven years ago.

Percy, contacted Sunday in Hawaii by a Chicago radio station, said he first received word about new developments in the unsolved death of his daughter from reports published Saturday.

"We are very anxious as a family to have this cleared up," he said.

Percy said he understands the prime suspect in the case has said he is innocent and prepared to take a lie detector test.

Chicago Sun-Times reported in its Sunday edition that Harold Wayne Hohimer told its reporters and police that his brother, Francis, killed Miss Percy. The newspaper also reported crime syndicate figure Leo Rugendorf, who died last April, named Francis Hohimer as the killer.

However, the newspaper said Francis Hohimer, 46, now serving a burglary sentence at the Iowa State Penitentiary, told investigators he did not kill Miss Percy and volunteered to take a lie detector test.

Francis Hohimer told officials Miss Percy, who was bludgeoned and stabbed to death Sept. 18, 1966, was killed by Frederick Donald Malchow, who was killed following a 1967 escape from a Pennsylvania jail.

He said Malchow and two other members of a burglary gang came to his apartment in Chicago following the break-in and slaying at Percy's home, investigators said.

As the Egyptian-Israeli talks got underway, U.N. spokesman Rudolf Stajuhar said that in addition to troop withdrawals, Yariv and Gammasy planned to discuss the movement of supplies to Suez City and Cairo's 3rd Army, both encircled by Israeli troops, and arrangements for a battlefield search for missing soldiers.

ABOUT JUSTICE DOUGLAS

House Wants To Ask Ford More Questions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Gerald R. Ford is expected to win overwhelming Senate approval to be vice president this week, but his House colleagues want to ask him more questions about an effort to impeach Justice William O. Douglas.

Ford's confirmation was one of the immediate items before Congress, as lawmakers return from a Thanksgiving holiday facing a massive workload that could keep them busy until Christmas.

The Senate planned to debate Ford's nomination today and vote Tuesday. Majority approval in both House and Senate are needed to make him vice president to succeed Spiro T. Agnew.

Meanwhile, the 60-year-old House Republican leader was recalled to testify today before the House Judiciary Committee, where Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., has charged that Ford's unsuccessful 1970 effort to impeach Douglas from the Supreme Court may have been aided by President Nixon and his former attorney general, John N. Mitchell.

Waldie says his research has established that Ford was acting as the "handmaiden" of Nixon and Mitchell in the impeachment effort and that the Justice Department fed Ford information on Douglas in violation of its own rules.

"If he in fact was a participant in a concerted political effort by Nixon and Mitchell to impeach Douglas, then it's my view that his understanding of using the Department of Justice only for other than political purposes is lacking," Waldie said Friday.

Also before Congress, in a pre-Christmas legislative rush, are:

—Nixon's selection of Sen. William B. Saxbe, R-Ohio, to be attorney general, presently snagged on a constitutional provision preventing a member of Congress to take a job for which he, as a legislator, raised the pay.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT 'Dolphins' Is Fine, Finny Fare

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK — "This is a real scooperoo," Joseph E. Levine said — and I called the city desk and told them to tear Page One open but they said it was already torn open. "Something about Nixon having a tapeworm."
"I've collected or have guarantees from exhibitors for $8.5 million for 'Day of the Dolphins' — of which $2 million is from NBC for the picture to play on TV three years from Christmas — and not one of them has seen a frame of the film," he said.
"It's all sight unseen! They're taking my word for it, and Mike Nichols's word and because George C. Scott is the star."
"You rather like the picture," I suggested timidly to Levine.
"Mike Nichols says it's the best picture he's ever made. But," grinned the kewpie-like Avco — Embassy tycoon, "I'm not that pessimistic. It's the best picture ANYBODY ever made. It's clean and international. And when George C. Scott tells that dolphin to go out to the open sea, there won't be a dry eye."
"How did you get along with George C. Scott?" I asked though I shouldn't have.
"Joe clapped his hand over his mouth."
"He had the flu for a few days," Joe smiled. "But he made the picture. Mike Nichols wanted him badly. It meant another million dollars. They go on voting for him for Oscars. I may volunteer to accept one for him."
The 68-year-old Boston phenomenon, who has more fire than the shaggiest of boy filmmakers, said, "When it opens Dec. 19, I'll go on a 20-city tour. I don't want to be immodest but I think it might be one of the greatest grossers of all time. The picture business has a future! We ran 'The Graduate' on TV the other night. We got $2 million for it."

I concentrated on Peter Cook's girl Judy Huxtable who was wearing red hot pants of light blue and was willing to stand on a table showing her pretty legs. Zsa Zsa Gabor, who had a run-in with Peter Cook in London, wouldn't speak to him. But Dudley Moore said she said she liked him though she didn't want to.
They mentioned an editor who told a writer, "One trouble with your story is that it lacks everything. It is very short but it is extremely boring."

KOHOUTEK LOCATIONS — The Moody Planetarium of The Museum of Texas Tech University suggests that amateur astronomers may find these charts useful in locating the Comet Kohoutek during December and January. To the naked eye the comet looks like a star that is blurred as if it is viewed through a mist. The tail shows as a faint stream trailing behind the bright comet head. The planetarium, which will present a special show entitled "Kohoutek: Comet of the Century" at 1:30 p.m. Dec. 2, is interested in obtaining copies of any photographs taken of the comet. Astronomers suggest that photographers use a tripod, set the lens wide open, focus to infinity, and expose a very fast film for a few seconds.

Science Today

By BRUCE E. HICKS
UPI Science Writer
HOUSTON (UPI) — A Texas inventor says he has developed a long-life electrical power source generated by bacteria and rice hulls.

The organic battery, called a current cell by Lyle D. Atkins, produces one half a volt of direct current regardless of the size or shape of the battery. And it comes with a one-year guarantee, but Atkins says it can easily last five years.

By using more batteries or adding more pairs of electrodes to one battery, more power can be produced, enough to power lights, minor appliances or radios.

Atkins said bacteria react to organic material used in the cell to produce the electricity, but he still isn't sure why, even after 15 years of research.

The bacteria, which come from an ocean source, is the key factor and a well-guarded secret.

Atkins said rice hulls work best with the bacteria because they are high-cellulose and the bacteria don't break it down as fast. Almost any organic material will work, but the higher the cellulose, the longer the life of the cell.

The Biolec Corp. produces the battery now in the form of a science kit and on special orders, but it plans more mass production as the cell becomes more popular.

Atkins said the future of the cell should be secure, because people will eventually need a power source at the location it being used. He said individual batteries could be used to power lights in each room of homes or other buildings or to run radios or appliances. Now the battery is being produced for use in highway caution lights which must operate 24 hours a day.

"It may not answer all the power needs of the future, but every little bit helps," said Atkins.

Obviously, Atkins said, the cost of the cell is much higher than conventional batteries, but it compares more favorably when considered with replacement costs and time.

"If used in the warning lights or something, you can just put it in and forget it for at least a year," said Atkins. "With others, you have to replace much more often."

A 1.8 watt cell with a year guarantee costs about $40 now, he said, but that will decline with increased production.

TO GET CRITICISM

Every President Needs His White House 'Fool'

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Perhaps what every President needs is an official White House Fool.

Some recent Presidents have kept unofficial jesters around the White House, but that isn't what we mean. We're talking about a top-notch, professional Fool, like King Lear had.

George Reedy, who is nobody's fool, has been writing articles and books since he left the Johnson White House in the late 1960s telling us that a root problem of the presidency is its insulation from real-life conflict.

What he means is that the President really never has anyone to heckle him while he is making decisions. Afterward, yes, but few Presidents have had people in their inner circles who are willing to criticize the Man or his heavyweight advisers to their faces.

(And considering the egotism of almost every politician, it is not very surprising that Presidents usually mistake honest disagreement for personal disloyalty.)

That's where a good Fool might be helpful.

The Fool's job would be to hang around the White House and make fun of the President, his assistants and advisers, both in private and in public.

In fact, the Fool's most useful function might be to drop down to the press room for the daily briefing and make nasty cracks about the press secretary.

It might even be a good idea to have the Fool sitting on the floor in front of the President's desk while he is making a television speech or signing a bill, indicating by facial expressions what he thinks of it all.

The press would be allowed to quote the Fool, but only the President could ask him questions. If the Fool were any good at all, he wouldn't have to worry about that happening often.

The Fool would have absolutely no power. He or she would not get an office, a limousine or an airplane. The Fool would sleep on a couch in the Blue Room and be paid the minimum wage, minus board.

That doesn't make it sound like a very snazzy job, and it isn't supposed to be. The Fool should not enjoy his surroundings — the rewards of the work would have to be its performance.

Also, the job would have ironclad security. The Fool would not leave the White House payroll until the President did.

Selecting a White House Fool might be the hardest part. Government Fools went out of style about the same time as The Divine Rights of Kings, and it might be hard to find a qualified individual.

PICKLE CLAIMS

No One Wants To Study ITT Merger Involvement

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Rep. J. J. Pickle, D-Tex., says neither acting Attorney General Robert Bork nor Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski will take the responsibility of investigating possible White House involvement in the merger between International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) and the Hartford Insurance Co.

Pickle, a member of the House Commerce Investigating Subcommittee, said each man suggested the other as the investigator.

Bork attributed "exclusive authority" to Jaworski, and Jaworski said jurisdiction should lie in the Justice Department, the Internal Revenue Service or the Securities and Exchange Commission, Pickle said.

"Both IRS and the SEC failed to follow up apparent violations connected with the ITT merger," Pickle said. "Though there may be no illegality involved, facts presented thus far certainly call for a speedy resolution of the jurisdiction question and for a comprehensive investigation of the ITT case."

The Texas Democrat said he sent a second series of letters to Bork, Jaworski, the SEC, the IRS and the President. He is asking who is doing the investigation of possible White House involvement in the tax questions of the merger.

NEW YORK (UPI)—One big question about the long range energy crisis is whether the United States should put its money on imported liquefied natural gas (LNG) or methanol.
Although the dispute has been raging in the petroleum and gas utility worlds for some time, it was thrust into the limelight by a big firm of transportation experts, Robertson Distribution Systems of Houston.
This company asked whether it makes sense to spend billions of dollars to build special ships to haul LNG from Algeria, the Soviet Union and the Middle East (after the Arabs finally decide to lift the embargo) when methanol can be hauled in ordinary tankers costing only a third as much and which already exist in considerable numbers.
It's true that a ton of LNG contains about twice as much energy as a ton of methanol but LNG has only one major immediate use: it can be quickly gasified and fed into the natural gas system.
Methanol on the other hand, has many uses, a prominent Oklahoma gas expert pointed out to United Press International. "You can use liquid methanol as it comes off the tanker to run automobiles, as a feedstock to make pipeline grade gas and as a replacement for high sulfur oil and coal as a general fuel."
He said methanol can be used for everything except diesel fuel. He has been urging the domestic manufacture of methanol from coal—"it's an extremely clean fuel." Methanol also can be stored more cheaply than LNG. The Oklahoman, whose company insisted he remain anonymous, said ships costing only $180 million can haul an equivalent amount of energy in the form of methanol that would require ships costing $800 million to carry in LNG.
Studies published by the British and Dutch and by Harvard University favor methanol over LNG. So does Houston Natural Gas Corp., whose Don Freund said: "We see more exciting opportunities for investing capital than sinking our money in costly LNG ships that have no other use." Freund's company intends ultimately to buy methanol now being flared off as an unconsumed by-product by Saudi Arabia's Petromin organization.

Why, then, is so much of the gas and pipeline industry eager to invest huge sums in LNG? Contracts for billions of dollars worth of refrigerated LNG tankers have been awarded to major shipbuilders.
"The truth is we need both," the Oklahoma expert conceded. "The trick is to make sure we choose right for particular markets."
He said LNG makes sense despite the investment cost if you're in a big enough hurry to get the gas and if you don't have to haul it too far. The transportation break-off point, he said, is about 5,000 miles.
"From the Middle East, with the Suez Canal closed, the distance is 11,000 miles," he pointed out.
"I don't see how the cost of hauling LNG that far can be justified. The return on investment won't be enough."

The Woman's View

NEW YORK (UPI)—The government says we either conserve energy—or else. And it's largely up to us as individuals to do it.
Well, you might like to know how we're coping with the crisis at our house.
A couple of things we don't have to worry about are gasoline rationing or observing a 50 mile per hour speed limit. We don't have a car.
Most of us who live in Manhattan, except the very affluent, have gotten along without a gasoline bill for years, except when hiring a car for an occasional weekend trip.
Instead we use mash (people-packed) transportation, the buses and subways. Or we walk.
A missive from our cooperative apartment's management office the other day advised us to shut off radiators when not needed. We not only shut ours off years ago, but look out most of the old-fashioned and ugly heating units. Most apartment buildings are over-heated anyway.
I'm knitting a sweater and moccasins for our parakeet. This may trim his travel around the house, but at least we won't be turning an electric heater on for an hour or so a day to warm his corner.
We turn out lights behind us, and if necessary we can read by firelight. What's good enough for Abe Lincoln is good enough for our house. We light candles to dine by—saving fuel and face. Women just look better by candlelight.
The dishwasher is run only when it's really full and we try to keep it out of action by doing dishes the old fashioned way—by hand.
We've decided to use the basement laundry facilities less frequently. What's good enough for 10 days instead of having a twice-weekly change?
We stowed the waffle iron; my husband likes the Aunt Somebody's at the frozen food counter better than my own anyway. Freeze-dried coffee saves the electric percolator and after a while you can't tell the difference anyway. The electric can opener also is taboo.
Only one television set ever is allowed on at a time and it's no longer our "sleeping pill"—droning on with the late shows while we snooze. It goes off when lights do.
Oh, I know there are more ways we're saving power, but at the moment I don't have the energy to think them up.

1040 Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

- Q. I had an auto accident, but I don't want to report it to my insurance company because my policy might be cancelled. Can I deduct the damage to my car as a casualty loss?
A. No. Although a portion of your unreimbursed damage from an auto accident is generally deductible as a casualty loss, a deduction will be denied to the extent that you fail to claim available reimbursement.
- Q. I read that taxes "checked off" on last year's tax return to particular political parties will be transferred to a general fund to be divided among all parties. Is this true?
A. Yes. Recent legislation approved by Congress transfers taxes designated to particular parties on 1972 returns to a general Presidential Election Campaign Fund. The new legislation also provides that on 1973 returns taxpayers will have the option of designating tax only to a general fund which subsequently will be divided among all parties.
- Q. Isn't there some sort of tax credit for which retirees may qualify?
A. Yes. A retiree may qualify for the retirement income credit if he is a U.S. citizen or resident, had $600 of earned income in each of any 10 calendar years before the current year, and had retirement income during the tax year. For more details, see IRS Publication 524, "Retirement Income Credit." You can get a copy free by contacting your nearest Internal Revenue office.

AT THE GALLERY Fine Arts Assn. Plans Texas Artist Exhibition

A circuit exhibition of paintings selected from the 62nd Texas Fine Arts annual show will be on display in the Pampa Fine Arts Gallery from 1 to 6 p.m. Dec. 3 through Dec. 6.
The public is invited to come by the gallery to view the works by Texas artists.
A statement by the jurors, Byron Burford, director of graduate painting at the University of Iowa, and David Lax, chairman of the Art Department at Dutchess Community College and State University of New York, who selected the paintings for the circuit, said:
"In years of painting, exhibiting, teaching art and judging shows, we have seldom encountered such an exciting body of work."
"Original and universal, the paintings go a long way to displace the pre-eminence of the East and Europe in their domination of American art trends during the past two decades."
A reception will be held in the gallery from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 2, for members of the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Dealers Seeking Devices' Removal

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—The New Car Dealers Association of Fort Worth announced it unanimously passed a resolution urging Congress to pass legislation removing anti-pollution devices from automobiles to save gasoline during the energy shortage.
The organization, made up of 23 franchised dealers in the city, said copies of the resolution would be sent by telegram to the congressmen serving the city and Tarrant County and Texas' two senators.
The congressmen were Reps. Dale Milford, Olin E. Teague and Jim Wright, and Sens. John Tower and Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr.
The resolution said the organization "vigorously opposes Congress' over-reactions in bending to the whims of ecologists and environmentalists who are jeopardizing the very life of our nation by hamstringing its energy."

WORRY CLINIC

Peggy's advice is of great interest to parents and grandparents of school children! For the schools have failed to produce good readers. Yet reading is the "motor" of the entire educational machinery. Use the methods below to prevent school dropouts!
CASE Y-579: Peggy D., aged 34, is a college professor. "Dr. Crane," she began, "I am in hearty agreement with your remarks about the poor reading ability of teen-agers."
"Indeed, almost 20 percent of our college freshmen go on probation and soon drop out of school, chiefly because they can't read with even average speed and comprehension."
"But we dare not blame them altogether, or even their parents."
"For I taught for a few years in grammar school before shifting to college teaching."
"And I was appalled at the dull reading books for the early grades."
"Children relish suspense and dramatic plots, even when learning to read."
"But our reading books contained such inane matter as, 'See the dog. The dog can run. See the dog run, etc.'"
"And our Supervisor warned me specifically that I wasn't allowed to employ any stories that expressed a moral!"
"No wonder kiddies dislike reading!"
"For when a plot is lacking and no constructive moral lessons are implanted in the child's mind, I agree that taxpayers and parents have a legitimate reason to complain!"

STRESS READING

Most mothers are ambitious for their kiddies and hope to see them advance into high school, as well as college.
But that laudable goal demands an ability to read with speed and comprehension!
Reading is the real motor of the entire educational machinery!
—Since our schools have often been deluded into stupid methods of teaching, then you mothers should take over!
In fact, if you stimulate your youngsters to read easily, they can obtain a good education without ANY classroom attendance!
Abraham Lincoln is a classical example.

Rules On Refrigerating Foods

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother-in-law, now 83, taught my husband not to put leftover food in the refrigerator until it reached room temperature.

My husband thought this had something to do with the food, but I think it is a holdover from the days when refrigerators were ice boxes and people tried to conserve ice.

If I am correct, I shudder at the thought of how many undiagnosed cases of food poisoning must have occurred, and I think it's remarkable how many of us have survived.

Rapid cooling is not going to harm the food; your explanation about conserving ice is doubtless the correct one. In the old days, if you used all the ice in the ice box, you had to wait until the next time the ice man came.

However, the type and quantity of food involved has some bearing on how soon it should be refrigerated.

As a rule of thumb, a brochure from one of the university extension services says that food should not be left at room temperature for more than two hours.

The reason, of course, is that by that time bacteria begin to multiply rapidly—in other words, food spoilage begins. "Room temperature" also is a variable term. It can mean anywhere from about 70 degrees to 95 or so on a hot day. And waiting for a saucer of stewed tomatoes to cool down to room temperature can be quite a different matter from waiting for the remainder of a stuffed turkey to cool down. The tomatoes will cool quickly, but the turkey (or meats with broth or gravy) would take much longer, and spoilage could start before you popped it in the refrigerator.

Kept in this mind, too: if you wait for the surface of the turkey to reach "room temperature," and then refrigerated it, the center of the bird, and the stuffing, would still require some time in the refrigerator before it would be cooled to the point of safety. As long as it remained fairly warm, spoilage could progress.

In reverse order, don't stuff a turkey and then keep it in the refrigerator until you are ready to cook it. The problem is that, with the whole thing, and the stuffing, thoroughly cooled, the meat may be cooked on the surface before the stuffing gets enough heat to stop all bacterial growth. Rather, keep the turkey refrigerated, but don't stuff it until you're ready to cook it.

That two-hour rule of thumb probably will guide you on most things. Don't let food sit around longer than that before refrigerating. And if it is food containing egg or other material that spoils rapidly, get that into the refrigerator sooner rather than later.

If your husband still wonders whether rapid cooling hurts food, remind him of the quick-frozen foods we have now—which did not exist back in our ice-box days.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard that beer is good to build your blood. How much do you take and how often?

Beer doesn't build your blood. If your blood needs any "building," your doctor can advise you whether diet, medication or some other treatment is required.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a woman going through menopause and have a question which I'm sure many other women would like to have answered also. When can a woman no longer become pregnant?

I've lost track of how many times I've answered this, but I'll do it again. When menstrual periods have ceased for one year, you can count yourself safe from pregnancy.

For a comprehensive discussion of how to cope with the change of life, including scores of pertinent questions and their answers, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of Pampa Daily News, P.O. Box 2198, for his booklet, "Make Menopause Easier," enclosing 35 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed (use zip code) envelope to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Youngsters Immunization Campaign Brings Results

Increases in immunization of youngsters against childhood diseases ranging up to 32 per cent for one disease have been recorded in Texas as a result of a month-long campaign in October, it was reported by Howard D. McMahan of Dallas, regional director for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"But, although the campaign is over, we still must encourage parents of young children in our five-state area to see that their children are immunized against such diseases as rubella, measles, polio, diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (whooping cough)," McMahan warned.

There is somewhat of a problem because parents don't worry too much about these diseases as a result of the vaccines that have all but eliminated them from the list of common childhood problems," McMahan continued.

Congratulating Texas, McMahan said, "Preliminary reports indicate total doses administered during October hit 331,151, an increase over last October of 32 per cent in the five states of Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and New Mexico."

Conducted through state and local health departments, immunizations in Texas totaled 23,800 for rubella (up 20 per cent); 22,200 for measles (up 27 per cent); and 94,470 for polio (up 32 per cent).

Investment Chatter

By United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI) — Volume in the stock market should remain high, according to Zelmane-Interprets. "Christmas volume has grown in importance with a rising standard of living, in particular, and the gain in the affluent society," the firm says.

Mutual funds may be a big factor in reviving stock prices in the future, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The firm says conditions are such that the "funds may be right for another period of high popularity when the market comes around, perhaps comparable to their great success of the early 1960s."

The erratic performance of the market in the past few sessions is the first halting step toward establishing a major market bottom, according to the Dreyfus Fund. The firm noted the Dow Jones industrial average has dropped sharply during the past few sessions, but said it would reach a decline level and then progress forward.
