

REBELS MEET VIOLENT SHELL CHARGE

Armistice Day in the Panhandle was ideal for the celebration which local veterans carried out so successfully yesterday.

Many stayed to attend the memorial services in City Hall auditorium. American Legion men and Veterans of Foreign Wars, who sponsored the observance, are to be commended for the splendid program they arranged.

A man you will find pondering over his mail at a postoffice desk each morning between 8 and 8:30 o'clock is A. D. Monteith, chef de gare of the Pampa Forty and Eight.

Charlie Maisel, the Legion chief, is one who is modest about his picture appearing in the papers, but who doesn't care what is said about him so long as his name is mentioned. We have his own word for it, and now we'll determine if he meant it.

Miss Emily Martin, the Texas Tech freshman who comes from Lubbock to be a guest in Pampa tomorrow, is a beautiful girl. Tech students think so much of her looks that they voted her the most "jooiful" of all Tech girls.

Next Saturday will be more than homecoming day for Frank (Bring 'Em Back Alive) Buck, Texan, when his Jungle Show opens at the livestock arena at the Texas Centennial exposition in Dallas.

The return to Dallas of Frank Buck will complete a cycle begun nearly 50 years ago when the eight-year-old boy who made a hobby of trapping animals and birds, entertained his neighborhood playmates with a circus staged in the hayloft of the family barn on Lake avenue.

The members of that little group of boys, who gathered in the Buck hayloft for the entertainment, each planting down five peach leaves for the privilege, included youngsters who have made themselves more or less famous also, in the intervening years. One was Try Slaughter, who as Vernon Dalhart, became later the king of the Edison records, returning to his home town to demonstrate the life-like quality of the first Mr. Edison's amazing inventions in a concert at City Temple.

Another was Guy Massey, who was to become nationally known for his "Prisoner's Song," and another was Smoot Schmidt, who now serves as sheriff of Dallas. But none of that little group dreamed at the time that Mr. and Mrs. Howard Buck's funny little boy, who would rather catch animals alive than kill them, was destined to become internationally celebrated as an explorer, animal trapper and writer.

Watch your step tomorrow—it's Friday the 13th. Many who are superstitious will not venture out tomorrow. Personally, we place no stock in the hoo-doo tradition surrounding the combination of Friday and "13."

While we're talking about Friday the 13th, we may as well give you some interesting facts about "13" which have been contributed by Helen Partridge. Getting into the meat of it:

There were 13 original states and the first American flag had 13 stars and 13 stripes. The first U. S. Navy had 13 ships and Admiral Perry (13 letters) won his battle of Lake Erie on the 13th of the month.

The Stars and Stripes were raised over Fort Sumpter on the 13th, and our national motto has 13 letters. The eagle on U. S. quarters has 13 feathers in its tail and 13 long feathers in each wing. It clutches 13 arrows with one claw and a branch with 13 leaves in the other. This eagle also carries a ribbon in its mouth with 13 letters on it.

To add to the "13" feature of the coin there are 13 stars on the shield over the eagle's head and 13 more on the other side.

Now, you Doubting Thomases—get out your quarters and count 'em for yourself.

FREEDOM: Hundreds of Pampa young folk will live to see the advent of the 21st century. Indeed, some of the heartier ones may live to see the day when Liberty Magazine stops printing articles about the Lindbergh kidnapping case.

ONEILL WINS NOBEL PRIZE FOR LETTERS

AMERICAN DRAMATIST AWARDED HIGHEST HONOR

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 12 (AP)—Eugene O'Neill, the American playwright, today was awarded the 1936 Nobel prize for letters.

The Nobel prizes, bequeathed in 1896 at the death of Alfred B. Nobel, Swedish inventor of dynamite, constitute the annual interest from $9,000,000. Each prize usually is worth about $40,000.

Three-time winner of the Pulitzer prize—the only American dramatist to hold that triple distinction—Eugene O'Neill, by today's award, became America's second Nobel prize-winner in letter. Sinclair Lewis was the first.

At 48, O'Neill joins the company of Anatole France, Thomas Mann, Tagore, Maeterlinck and Rudyard Kipling, one of his first literary idols.

A product of Baker's famous "47 Workshop" at Harvard and of the American little theater movement, O'Neill first won the Pulitzer prize with his play "Beyond the Horizon" in 1920. "Anna Christie" in 1922 and "Strange Interlude" in 1928 gained the award for him twice more.

He was last reported working on an encyclopedic saga of American life—a cycle of eight plays chronicling the 125-year drama of an American family through five generations.

In announcing the stupendous task, the Theater Guild called it "the most ambitious and most interesting ever undertaken by any modern playwright."

The saga, the announcement said, See No. 1, Page 4

Hole-in-One Is Made Here by 15-Year Old

Armistice Day was not without its fireworks at the Pampa Country club where the year's first hole-in-one was fired by Roy Ray, 15-year-old caddy. Ray made his unusual shot on hole No. 7, a 130-yard drive over a canyon.

The youngster was playing with Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Coombs yesterday afternoon when he made his hole-in-one. The youth took a No. 5 iron for his drive into the wind. The ball went dead for the pin all the way, landing about half way to the hole on the smooth sand green and rolling true into the cup.

The singleton was the first in two years on the local course. The last shot went to Haskell Maguire.

Violations of Anti-Trust Laws Are Claimed

GONZALES, Nov. 12 (AP)—Incensed turkey growers demanded a "price fixing" investigation in a telegram to Attorney General Homer Cummings today and kept one of the world's most prolific turkey centers tied up in protest to what they termed a "uniform market" and low prices.

More than 250,000 turkeys strutted the Gonzales county ranges today while owners steadfastly refused to send them to Thanksgiving market at current prices of 11 and 12 cents.

Seven leading raisers dispatched telegrams to Cummings and William McCraw, Texas attorney general, urging an investigation of alleged violations of anti-trust laws in regard to the turkey market.

T. W. Steiner, chairman of the state farm Grange executive commission, and one of the signers of the telegrams, said:

"I think general conditions justify a much higher price for turkeys. While there are more turkeys this year, the buying power of the public is greater and in fairness to the raisers and consumers it might be well for the government to do some investigating."

Buyers, meanwhile, stood by their top price of 12 cents and Frank J. Bolner, a leading buyer, said birds intended for eastern Thanksgiving tables must be on their way by next Monday. He added closer shipments could be made as late as Nov. 18.

Bolner would not comment upon what effect the strike may have, or what trend the market might take. County Agent J. L. Moore estimated the Gonzales county turkey crop in excess of 250,000.

Brady, Brownwood and Cuero, prolific centers, reported similar top prices of 12 cents. The noted Cuero turkey trot was saved yesterday only by farmers, who refused to sell at an 11 cent price, rented their birds at 30 cents per head for the annual parade of the downtown section.

WINDMILL IS STOLEN FROM DAVIS RANCH

Has Anybody Seen a Windmill Wheel Spinnin' From Somebody's Pocket?

There's nothing much left to steal. Thieves have gone the limit in Gray county—this time making away with a complete windmill pump and all its riggings, including lower pipe, pump, from the Mel Davis ranch, south of LeFors.

Sheriff's officers have an idea it will be easy to pick up the trail if they see someone going down the street with a windmill wheel spinning from his back pocket.

So far, however, they haven't a single clue except the imprint of tires where the thieves drove a truck into the ranch pasture and hauled the pump away.

Davis has offered a $100 reward for information which will lead to arrest and conviction of the culprits.

BUS SERVICE WILL BE RESUMED HERE FRIDAY

Bus service will be resumed in Pampa tomorrow morning, starting at 6 o'clock, according to L. G. Gomillion who reported to THE NEWS yesterday that he had purchased buses of the Pampa Transit company from F. S. Brown.

Mr. Gomillion plans to start operations with one bus, operating on a 45-minute schedule and covering the same route as the two buses used by the former company. Stopping points and exact time of stops along the route will be released soon, Mr. Gomillion said.

Plans are in the making to sell a ticket, probably for 50 cents, that would entitle the purchaser to ride as many times as he desired over a period of one week. The ticket would not be transferrable.

TEXAS: Generally fair, not much change in temperature tonight and Friday. Gentle, mostly northerly winds on the coast.

Here Is Pampa Woman Who Resembles Mrs. Simpson

that opinion was "a compliment to Mrs. Simpson." Many persons believe that "Queen Wallis" will become the queen of England some day. Mrs. Johnson's friends consider the resemblance between Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Simpson amazingly striking. To quote the photographer again, "regardless of whether the two women look alike—and they do, of course—they are both beautiful and their pictures are worth publishing for that reason alone." Mr. Johnson owns and operates, with his father, the Johnson Hardware company. He is a member of a prominent family which has lived here many years.

First Open Saloon Conviction In Criminal Appeals Court Set Aside

AUSTIN, Nov. 12 (AP)—The Texas court of criminal appeals today set aside the first "open saloon" convictions which had come before it.

The cases were those of J. Weinberger, Lola Stewart and Fred Barrow, all of Houston. The controlling opinion was written in the Weinberger case.

"The averment," the court said, "that Weinberger operated an open saloon and was directly or indirectly interested in the operation of an open saloon is but the legal conclusion of the pleader. No fact or facts are stated which would bring the place within the statutory definition of an open saloon."

"The averment," the court said, "that Weinberger operated an open saloon and was directly or indirectly interested in the operation of an open saloon is but the legal conclusion of the pleader. No fact or facts are stated which would bring the place within the statutory definition of an open saloon."

The Texas liquor control act adopted last year prohibits the open saloon.

Dan E. Curtis and L. Bowers, Tarrant county men charged with operating a dog race track, were ordered freed but the court did not rule on legality of dog race betting.

In the Bowers case there was nothing to show that Bowers was arrested or that he is in custody," the court said. It said in the Curtis case that the offense alleged, if there was such an offense, was not within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace court.

Rayburn Morris was ordered extradited to Choctaw county, Oklahoma, to face a charge of robbery with firearms. This was an affirmation of a decision by a trial court in Grayson county.

RED CROSS DRIVE IS IN FULL SWING HERE

Pampa's annual Red Cross roll call drive was in full swing today and the first report from workers was expected to be made late this afternoon. It was announced today by Allen Hodges, general chairman of the drive.

Shortly after 9 o'clock this forenoon upwards of 50 workers from Pampa civic clubs, patriotic groups and supply houses began the annual solicitation.

The workers were out to attain a goal of $2,000 and 1,000 members. Booths in the postoffice and at the two downtown street corners reported good response to the appeal, according to Mr. Hodges.

People You Know

ARMISTICE
The word itself spells PEACE!
God, can there be
The awful possibility
Of war again?
God, God, could men
Through avarice and greed, go mad with power
And in an hour
Tear wide the scars that have so slowly healed?
Men's torn flesh still gapes open,
town and field
Bear hideous marks from the last bitter war.
Fibrous flesh may build a scar,
But tear it open, and dear God,
Nor flesh, nor sod
May ever heal again.
Call out to me
A warning, stern and clear and high,
Let lightning flash from Sinai.
God, stay the forces that would maim and blind
And crucify mankind.

Coming Here

'MIRROPHONIC DAY' IN PAMPA IS PROCLAIMED

Texas Tech Freshman Is Named 'Miss Microphonic'

Mayor W. A. Bratton today issued a proclamation declaring tomorrow "Microphonic Day" in Pampa.

With the same stroke of his official pen, the mayor also appointed Miss Emily Martin, Texas Tech freshman student, as Miss Microphonic.

She will be an honor guest in the city tomorrow, will attend a luncheon in her honor at noon in Schneider Hotel and in the evening will greet patrons as they arrive at the LaNora theater to attend the premiere performance of the newly installed microphonic sound system.

The new sound system is a new departure in theater entertainment bringing to the ears of theatergoers a true reproduction of the original, according to Carl Benefiel, manager of the LaNora.

Tomorrow forenoon a special screening will be held at the LaNora at 9:30 o'clock to give the new Western Electric sound system its first official tryout. Special guests from Pampa and out-of-town will attend the private screening.

The picture to be shown at the premiere tomorrow night is "Charge of the Light Brigade," featuring Erol Flynn and Olivia De Havilland. All women patrons tomorrow night will be given a special favor by Miss Microphonic.

HENNER'S BRAIN TRUST

Picture of a rising sun was plainly visible on each of three eggs laid at different times recently by different hens owned by John Burson, poultry fancier, Texarkana, Tex. Burson says this predicts a Japanese war. It's a puzzle where those hens picked up their advance information. But there's a hint in the fact that persons who cause war are bad eggs, and of that, of course, the hens are the best judges.

M. E. Monson of LeFors believes that classified ads are "good eggs." He should know—Mr. Monson has run 6 classified ads in THE NEWS and sold 8 houses and one dairy farm directly from these 6 ads.

ARMIES FIGHT IN HEAVY RAIN AT 'EASY' GATE

SURPRISE ATTACK IS HALTED BY FASCISTS

By ALEXANDER H. UHL
MADRID, Nov. 12 (AP)—Insurgent armies struck viciously at Madrid's most vulnerable approach in a driving rain today. They attacked University City, on the northwest, apparently the key to their whole advance. This section, on the city's outskirts, is not defended by the Manzanares river, which has so far been a barrier to Madrid from the southwest.

Moving up through Casa Del Campo, the former game preserve across the river on the west, the insurgents met a violent artillery barrage.

Cannon roared throughout the night. Machine gun and rifle fire broke the sudden silence when the big guns ceased.

The bitter struggle for the easiest road into the capital was rapidly approaching a climax. The rain and the low ceiling kept warplanes out of action, but the rival guns kept pounding positions spotted by lighting flashes during the night.

Several fires, set off by the artillery bombardment in the city, were put out by the rain.

Fascist commanders halted a surprise attack in the northwest sector as the insurgent drive encountered strong resistance from an international legion blocking the entrance through northern University City.

The onslaught started shortly before midnight but died down a few hours later although fascist and socialist guns diminished fire there, the roar of insurgent cannon still sounded from the southwest.

As shells crashed into the front line trenches around the Manzanares river bridge on the Madrid-Toledo highway could see the death-dealing gun muzzles 200 or 300 yards in front of them.

Government gunners labored feverishly to return the vengeful fire. White hot shells from the socialist guns streaked across the dark sky while red glares from unceasing fires illuminated the Rosales district north of the northern railroad station.

New fires broke out in the area under heaviest insurgent shelling between the Puerta Del Rey (King's Bridge) and Puerta de Segovia (Segovia Bridge) on the west side of the city near the government buildings.

Smoke curled from the opera house and an unattended munition factory near the Segovia span. Fascist shrapnel hailed on the old royal stables, across the river from Casa Del Campo park.

Complete absence of fascist bombing planes caused conjecture in the socialist defense council.

Club Day Finds Varied Topics For Interesting Programs

Peace Is Armistice Day Subject for One Group

An Armistice day program with Peace as its subject was presented in Child Study club Tuesday afternoon, led by Mrs. John B. Hesse.

Suggestions for preserving peace were given in answer to roll call. Mrs. N. P. Maddux discussed The Status of the Cures for War, stressing that popular feeling against war, built up through education, is the surest way to peace, although a slow one.

Mrs. Hesse's topic was Youth Against the Frontiers. She said that to youth goes the task of protecting the world from future wars, that youth must look for a new type of security, a security which is dynamic, not static, which rests in intelligence rather than forts.

Music concluded the program, as Mrs. Harry Nelson played selections from an opera by Auerbach.

Refreshments were served to Mmes. Tom Darby, S. C. Evans, W. J. Foster, Lee Harrah, W. C. Hutchinson, Herman Jones, T. C. Lively, Frank McAfee, Horace McBe, Earle Schleg, H. C. Schmitt, T. C. Shaw, J. M. Smoot, Roy Tinsley, Sherman White, F. C. Nelson, W. A. Breining, and those on program.

CHAUCER COULDN'T SPELL KANSAS CITY (#) — There's support for what many poor spellers have felt all along — "Correct spelling is not a sign of intelligence." "Rather," said Dr. J. Dunson Spaeth, president of the University of Kansas City, "I sometimes believe incorrect spelling is a sign of intelligence. A child learns that the plural of house is houses. Why is it not reasonable for the child to suppose the plural of mouse is mouses?"

Pistol Deaths Are Labeled as Murder, Suicide

TEXARKANA, Nov. 12 (AP)—Justice H. L. Perry officially labeled today the pistol deaths yesterday of Mrs. Fannie Fomby, 20, and Harold Brady, 21, of Maud, Bowie county, as murder and suicide.

The two were found in a boarding house here. Four bullets killed the woman. Investigators found a pistol beside the man. He had been killed by a bullet through the head.

Sheriff Henry Brooks said Brady had made another attempt on the woman's life. Sheriff Brooks said Brady locked the doors of a tourist cabin here ten days ago and turned on the gas. The officer said the woman's screams brought the aid of camp attendants.

Brooks said Mrs. Fomby was separated from her husband, Hubert Fomby, also of Maud, several months ago and Brady opposed reconciliation. He said Mrs. Fomby's husband visited her Monday night and left a pistol so that she might protect herself.

This gun, the sheriff said, was found in a drawer of the room in which she died.

The sheriff said boarding house attendants told him Brady made several attempts to see Mrs. Fomby, but she refused. He said Brady's appearance in her room yesterday apparently came as a surprise.

Mrs. Fomby's funeral was arranged for this afternoon at Redwater, Bowie county, services for Brady were tentatively set for tomorrow at Maud.

would portray the family from 1829 to 1932, in New England, New York, the Pacific coast and the middle west.

One of the most prolific of modern playwrights, with nearly two score productions to his credit, O'Neill's art first budded in the little wharf theater in Provincetown, R. I., then moved to MacDougal street in New York's Greenwich Village, and finally to Broadway and "the road."

"The Emperor Jones" established him as a front-rank dramatist. Seldom has a playwright had more kaleidoscopic experience. O'Neill has roamed the world—South America, Africa, Europe, the Far East. He has been penniless in Buenos Aires; he has lived in a luxurious French chateau.

His present home, with his third wife, the former Carlotta Monterey, is on an island off the Georgia coast.

The prize O'Neill will receive will approximate $45,000. The amount of the 1935 prize, which was not awarded, has been added to the 1936 sum.

Interest from the $9,000,000 bequest of the late Alfred B. Nobel, dynamite inventor, is used for the prizes.

on Cuyler street south of the Santa Fe tracks and was disbanded at City Hall.

In the auditorium of City hall, beginning at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, an Armistice Day program honoring the heroes of all war, was conducted.

Atty. W. J. Smith, of Pampa, delivered the principal address. Invocation was given by the Rev. Burney Shell. The audience sang "America" and the meeting was closed by the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," by the Pampa High school band.

The afternoon program was left open to permit Pampans to attend the Pampa-Borger high school football game at Borger.

At 7 o'clock last night there was a reunion of all veterans at the Legion hut on West Foster street. It was largely attended.

Other events on the Armistice Day program which were largely attended were the old time dance at the high school gymnasium last night and the informal dance at the Southern Club.

Atty. Arthur M. Teed, of Pampa, will speak on "American Educational Week" at the regular noonday meeting of the Kiwanis club in the Hotel Schneider tomorrow noon. The educational week theme will be carried out in the entire program tomorrow, according to R. B. Weathered, program chairman for the day.

BAKED BLACKBIRDS IN PIE IS CALLED FINE

TULSA, Nov. 12 (AP)—Mother Goose's "four and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie" is a tasty reality in Tulsa.

Here where roast crow banquets had their inception a year or so ago the latest dish is blackbird fried or in pies.

Like the crow eaters, the blackbird enthusiasts say "it's fine—like duck or other game fowl."

It all started when swarms of blackbirds made life miserable down South Rockford avenue way in the southern part of town. Harried residents who first "shoo-ed" them away with roman candle barrages later fell to with shotgun and rifle fire.

Somebody thought they might be good eating and—"The birds are fine," said Mrs. J. F. Phillips, "we've tried them both in pies and fried. They taste like duck."

Atty. Arthur M. Teed, of Pampa, will speak on "American Educational Week" at the regular noonday meeting of the Kiwanis club in the Hotel Schneider tomorrow noon. The educational week theme will be carried out in the entire program tomorrow, according to R. B. Weathered, program chairman for the day.

FRISCO BRIDGE TO BE OPENED TO CARS TODAY

Costliest Structure in The World Is Completed

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12 (AP)—The $77,000,000 bay bridge, dreamed of and talked about for nearly a century and over three years in construction, opens to automobile traffic today amid all the fanfare two metropolitan centers can create.

At 12:30 p. m. (2:30 CST) while ship whistles blast and warships boom salutes, traffic will start over the 8 1/2 miles of water and tideland the structure crosses in linking San Francisco and Oakland.

Not even a prolonged maritime strike, paralyzing marine commerce in this major seaport, has dampened preparations for the celebration, which finds San Francisco and Oakland streets festooned and garlanded for the occasion.

The festivities start at 10:35 a. m., when Governor Frank F. Merriam presides at a golden chain on the Oakland side of the bridge. From there, the official party moves across the structure to the San Francisco side where the ceremony will be repeated.

At 5:30 p. m. President Roosevelt is to press a golden chain on the Oakland side of the bridge. From there, the official party moves across the structure to the San Francisco side where the ceremony will be repeated.

The bridge, of suspension, cantilever, and truss construction, is expected to handle 300,000 passengers today. Each car, if it contains not more than five persons, will pay 65-cent toll charges. Each additional passenger will be five cents extra.

Rated as the costliest bridge in the world, the chain of spans also Officers said the tools appeared to be "burglar tools." A brother of the prisoner came to Pampa this morning and said that the car and tools belonged to him.

"They may look like burglar tools to you," he said, "but I've never used them for that. I'm a mechanic."

WOULD-BE PARENTS FOR BABY COME IN FLOCKS

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12 (AP)—There were many would-be foster parents today for the blue-eyed, blond baby mysteriously brought out of the piney woods of St. Tammany parish by a dog.

Doctors at Charity Hospital said the infant was apparently about eight days old and in good health. It weighed six pounds and three ounces.

Most insistent of those seeking the child was Mrs. Louis E. Crawford, wife of a Works Progress Administration employe making $26.25 a month.

Mrs. Crawford said she ran from the porch of her one room cabin home near Pearl river late Tuesday to take the infant from "a great, big brindle dog." She said the animal was carrying it through the

Scanning New Books

Vilhjalmur Stefansson has gathered up a group of magazine articles and lectures, delivered over the past several years, and made a book of the lot. This he calls "Adventures In Error," and the title is perfect.

So is the delightfully skeptical tone of the whole, even though the book has been so carefully edited that in places the explorer refers to his having only one evening in which to make his point, speaking to an audience which existed for the lecture, but not necessarily for the book.

Stefansson addresses himself mainly to the impossible task of proving to the public that nothing it reads is necessarily true. The classic example of public misapprehension has to do with Columbus and America; we still revere Columbus as discoverer. But Stefansson gets much more detailed and specific. He disproves things he himself has "discovered." He shows how he has been credited, for example, with discovering the "blond" Eskimos, although these people were discovered in 1656 by Nicholas Tines, and at least four times before in 1911. To make the situation still more ridiculous, Stefansson had to discover them a second time (in 1912) before he got popular credit.

This same amazing process the explorer details in a large number of cases having to do with himself and other explorers. He examines the wolf pack superstition, the polar continent superstition, the furore over the North Pole discoverers, the new exploded theory that the Arctic is a region of excessive cold, the odd idea that Eskimos live in snow houses, the equally odd one that musk oxen live on mosses and lichens. These and dozens more of the "facts" we think we know.

It is something to discover an explorer who can really write amusingly. When this paragon proves further that he can "debunk" himself and still laugh he is pretty nearly unique. "Adventures In Error" is compulsory reading for all historians and text book writers. "Adventures In Error," by Vilhjalmur Stefansson (McBride).

BABY BROUGHT TO DOORSTEP OF WPA WORKER BY STRANGE DOG

PEARL RIVER, La., Nov. 12. (AP)—Mrs. Young E. Crawford, 24, wife of a WPA worker and the mother of two young sons, told today a story of legend fabric—a rosy-cheeked eight-pound baby boy brought to her doorstep in the dusk by a strange black dog.

The circumstances were as strange as the Bible account of the finding of the infant Moses in the bull-rushes.

"This big, black dog came trotting through the brush with something white in its mouth," she said. "When he saw me, he stopped, and I was so scared all I could do was stand there.

"I'd never seen the dog before. Most of the dogs around here are hounds and this one looked like a brindle bull.

"Then while I was looking the white thing moved and I heard a baby's cry. When I realized it was a baby I got a cold chill.

"I ran off the porch," she continued, "and shouted 'Put that down you! Put it down!' I clapped my hands and made like I was going to hit him and that scared him off. He put the baby down and ran into the woods."

The child was lying face downward, wrapped in a dirty square of cotton cloth, Mrs. Crawford said. The covering was bunched at the back, moist from the mouth of the dog. The child was whimpering.

The woman took the infant to her cabin and, wrapping it in a clean towel, she placed it between the covers of her bed. The she lit a fire in the make-shift stove, constructed from an oil drum, and prepared a bottle of condensed milk.

Crawford, her husband, who had been away from home, first didn't "know what to do about it." Then, deciding he wanted to adopt the child, he summoned a relative, Mrs. Lizzie Crawford, who is a trained nurse.

The nurse examined the baby and pronounced it in "perfect health," except for two tiny elfin ears, red from exposure.

Hundreds of friends of the Crawfords, many of them relatives, crowded in their crudely-built cabin today eager for a sight at the babe.

No one knew where the infant came from.

"We're going to call it Moses because it was found by a miracle," the Crawfords said.

Hitler?

Looks like Adolf Hitler incarnate, doesn't it? That's what officials at the zoo in Vienna thought, too, when this man wandered through the park for several hours. Cowlick, moustache, beetling brows and jutting jaw resembled the German chancellor so much none were sure whether to salute him. His identity never was learned, but it wasn't Hitler.

TRAILERS ALMOST STEAL AUTO SHOW AS NEW CARS ARE SHOWN

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP)—Dazzling, burnished until a lady could power her nose using the hood for mirrors, the 1937 motor car models were unveiled at the national automobile show yesterday with great ado about over-drives, hypoid gears, recessed buttons on the instrument panel and other things which tempt a man to part with his money.

There's more power in proportion to weight, more room in the interior, rubber cover for running boards tilted to match the body and, in one manufacturer's output, a system of "floating" the body on the chassis with rubber cushions.

But the part of the show where the customers stood three-deep was the fourth floor trailer exhibit. Home sweet home has been put on a ball bearing and rubber foundation. The more ambitious of the 24 manufacturers exhibiting free-wheeling cottages have produced parlor, bedroom, kitchen and bath for the motor nomads.

Here is a glimpse of the machines in the lowest price ranges: Plymouth—the front seat measures 48 inches. Five different kinds of insulation are used to reduce noise such as the familiar "drumming" of the steel body. Soft-roll upholstery is intended to prevent injury to rear seat passengers in sudden stops. An improvement in design has eliminated the metal-post between the vent shield and window proper when the front window is down. The body is mounted on rubber "outriggers" attached to the frame, an adaptation of the Chrysler "floating power" engine mounting.

Ford—Styled generally after the Lincoln Zephyr, the 1937 Ford offers motors of two horsepower, 60 and 85. The newcomer, of course, is the 60 h. p., and the car so powered will sell well under the regular 85 h. p. models. The two other new features characterize the 1937 Fords, the one-piece, all-steel top and a cable-and-conduit braking system.

Chevrolet—Good-looking bodies are longer and, with the use of a hypoid rear axle, lower. The manufacturer announces a completely new engine with the compression ratio boosted to 6.25 to 1. A box girder frame and diamond crown streamline styling are dear to the heart of the salesman with a prospective customer.

ESKIMO COWBOYS ROUND UP 30,000 REINDEER

BARROW, Alaska, Nov. 12 (AP)—Cowboys of the tundra—fur-clad Eskimos—rode herd today over thousands of reindeer in the great annual roundup on Point Barrow's frozen plains.

It marked the major gathering of the Arctic coast natives, one group coming by dog-team from Barter Island, 500 miles to the east, where famine threatened last summer. Three thousand of the estimated 30,000 reindeer were driven to a new corral 50 miles inland for marking and counting.

With the mercury well below zero, Eskimo herders drove the deer from the lonely ranges where they fattened on lichen during the summer. Arriving herders were greeted by friends they had not seen since last season when they left for their ranges.

The roundup was a family gathering. Wives and children pitched tents near the corral as almost the entire Eskimo population deserted the little settlement of Barrow to go to it.

Most of the animals were to be driven back to winter range after the yearlings and fawns were "branded"—marked by various-shaped knife slits and nicked in the ears.

BODY MAY BE THAT OF DENVER COURT STENO

CRAIG, Colo., Nov. 12 (AP)—Sheriff George Krieger led a party over a circuitous trail to a spot on the snowswept slope of Cold Mountain today, believing a body located there would prove that of L. O. M. "Max" Lucero. Denver court reporter lost on a deer hunting trip four weeks ago.

Arthur Sparks, a rancher, reported the find to Krieger last night but said, in accordance with the Sheriff's instructions, he did not go nearer than 20 feet to the body, for fear of destroying any clues connected with a foul play theory on which Krieger worked.

Sparks said the body lay among pines and cedar brakes in light snow and "looked as though the man had just fallen beside a tree, his strength exhausted."

Krieger, Undersheriff George Welch and Coroner I. J. Robacker planned their departure early this morning by automobile for the Sparks ranch, 100 miles away. From there, they had to ride horses more than 25 miles.

PIONEER DIES

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12. (AP)—Trading resumed on the cotton market today and in early dealings losses averaging 25 cents a bale were marked up against options.

The lower trend was attributed almost entirely to poor foreign markets. Liverpool came in lower than due and in late dealings on the English market was holding at net decline.

At New Orleans Dec. opened off 5 points at 11.65. Jan. was down a similar amount at 11.85, while March at 11.64 and May at 11.56 were 5 to 6 points off.

Over the holiday little developed to change the trend. Weather was favorable for the tail-end of the harvesting, aside from scattered rains in the north central belt.

The trade took most of the contracts offered at the opening and in early dealings at New Orleans, but were only interested at price concessions under Tuesday's close.

Rough diamonds found in river beds have a peculiar greasy appearance and are recognized only by experts.

GARNER CANOES WHILE FRIEND PULLS IN BASS

Fishing Trip to Tank Described by 'Herman'

EAGLE PASS, Nov. 12. (AP)—Rattling down the road in a wheezing eight year old automobile came the vice president of the United States.

ets hung on the sides. Fishing poles waved in the breeze. The car gasped and stopped. Out stepped John Nance Garner, beetle browsed, white haired. "Lo, Herman," he shouted. Thus "Cactus Jack" began the fishing trip which celebrated his reelection. "Herman"—Sheriff-elect Herman Lehman of Maverick county—told about it today. Lehmann, an old friend of the vice-president, traced a word picture of Garner that only his intimates get to see. With the vice-president in the car was Ben Franklin, Uvalde garage-man, famous angler of these parts. The party proceeded to a large "rattlesnake" tank thirty miles southeast of here, an oasis of clear, blue water in a waste of cactus and mesquite. "John had on an outfit he told me cost him $1.39 a year ago," Lehmann recalled. "He said it had probably depreciated some since then." "He padded the canoe for exercise while Franklin cast. In just a little while they had caught 19 bass. In the meantime I built a fire and barbecued a lamb John brought with him. "It must have been good for when the meal ended he spread out his 'slicker' and said 'Boys, I'm napping.' "When he woke up he said it was the best nap he'd had since the campaign began. Then we sat around the fire and he swapped us

CAPITOL JIGSAW

By HOWARD C. MARSHALL

AUSTIN, Nov. 11 (AP)—Vice President John N. Garner has a pair of "Republican" ducks.

They were presented to him the day before the general election by a neighbor who is a member of that party. His first act after lifting them from a burlap sack was to order their right wing feathers clipped. "Clip 'em right up close," he ordered a negro yardman named Will. "I don't want to have to run 'em down."

The vice president spent that day and election day much as he does all days when in Uvalde.

The fact that 40,000,000 voters were passing on his candidacy for reelection to the second highest office in the country failed to disturb his calm.

He looked after his animal pets, walked down town for a shave, chatted with cronies on the "square," read the newspapers, napped and listened to election returns. In only one way did he deviate from the regular program of living. He sat up until 10:20 o'clock election night awaiting a call from President Roosevelt. Usually retires about 9 p. m.

Mr. Garner derives much pleasure from his pets and Mrs. Garner encourages him to have them about. She thinks they divert his mind and keep him fit.

In addition to the ducks, he has some pheasants, bantam chickens, and eight turkeys from which he hopes to raise about 100 more next year.

Then there are a score or more of squirrels which play about the beautiful grove of pecan trees at the rear of the two-story brick home of the Garners.

"There won't be any pecans this year," Mr. Garner said. "The squirrels already have them. But next year there will be a fine crop."

The vice president likes to fish and hunt and frequently is absent from Uvalde for several days at a time on such sporting excursions.

On election night he picked up a book to read between reception of returns. He had marked a place with a pamphlet.

"A copy of the game and fish laws," he commented, holding up the pamphlet. "Makes a good book mark. Also is something I need to read."

He finally read the "bookmark" instead of the book.

Mr. Garner awoke the morning after Halloween to find several "for sale" signs tacked on trees and other places about his front yard. He didn't mind. He likes a joke as well as anyone and most of the time, friends say, is in good temper. "He's really a fine fellow," said one person who had reason to know, an employe of the Uvalde telegraph office.

"He never gets mad if there are small errors or delays in telegrams which is more than you can say for some folks."

German Sisters Rescued at Battle

Rescued on Nov. 8, 1914 from a band of Cheyenne Indians under Chief Gray Beard were Mrs. Adelaide German Andrews and her sister, Mrs. Sophia German Feldman, shown seated here. A monument marking the site of the rescue, the battleground on McClellan creek, was dedicated last Sunday before 500 people. The above picture was taken at the Hobart ranch near Canadian. Others in the picture are also at the battle.

STATE SCHOOL HEAD SHOULD BE APPOINTED, DECLARES TISINGER

AUSTIN, Nov. 12 (AP)—Ben F. Tisinger of Garland, chairman of the state board of education, told a special senate committee today he believed the state superintendent of schools should be appointed rather than elected to relieve him of political pressure. He expressed the opinion that L. A. Woods would be a "two or three times" better superintendent if he did not have to run for office every two years.

"It is difficult to get the really big men of Texas education to become state superintendents," Tisinger said, "when they have to run for office every two years. The superintendent's expressed views and activities are affected by his concern for re-election."

The witness suggested the governor appoint the superintendent from "three, five or ten" nominations made by the board. Woods had said yesterday he believed the people should continue to elect the superintendent.

Tisinger said he was of the opinion there was waste in the distribution of rural aid but the solution of the trouble was leaving the duty with the superintendent and making that office appointive to free him from possible political influence.

"The state now is providing enough money for the support of the schools," Tisinger said. "The problem is to make sure that it is spent to the best possible advantage."

Losses in the permanent school fund have been "relatively small,"

PAMPANS TO ATTEND CLARENDON ROAD MEET

A Pampa Board of City Development committee, headed by Jim Collins, went to Clarendon today to represent Gray county at a meeting of delegates from seven counties, members of the 88-18 North Highway-act.

The group will map plans for submitting a request for the new proposed highway to the state highway commission at Austin next Monday.

Purpose of the organization is to promote and sponsor a new highway from Sweetwater to Perryton and to provide immediately passable roads between Pampa and Perryton and Turkey and Clarendon.

Following the Clarendon session, the Pampa group will go to Austin to present their wish in connection with road plans to the state highway body.

12-YEAR-OLD IS TOP-NORTH HOMEMAKER

LLANO (AP)—Youngest homemaker among 29,000 Resettlement Administration families in Texas was 12-year-old Marguerite Keng. D. P. Trent, district R. A. supervisor, said the girl canned 345 containers of fruits and vegetables and 75 containers of jellies and relishes while her mother was ill. She also kept house for the family of three and cared for a flock of 200 chickens.

FISHERMEN DISAGREE ON BEST HOURS TO CATCH FRESH WATER BASS

Some prefer the early morning, others the late afternoon.

Indeed There is a Difference

In the Taste and Quality of Beers

It would be quite as logical to say that corn whiskey tastes like pure rye or bourbon as it is to say that a corn and malt beer tastes like a true barley malt beer. As a matter of fact, there is all the difference in the world in the taste, the quality and the morning-after stomach effect. COORS EXPORT LAGER is one of the very few American brews which contains no corn and which is brewed to a private and exclusive formula comprising Pure Rocky Mountain spring water, Coors own pure barley malt, Coors own yeast from aristocratic strains and Coors own importations of choice Bohemian hops.

That's why COORS EXPORT is never harsh, scratchy or bitter. That's why COORS EXPORT has that smooth, mellow SOFTNESS found only in the true Vienna type lagers produced by the foremost old-world brew masters. That's why the taste and quality of COORS EXPORT is deliciously different.

WAR DEBUNKED

Romance and sentiment are vanished from war. Perhaps they always were rather imaginary, existing more in retrospect, in the memories of veterans and the creation of poets and romancers rather than actually at the time of conflict.

That was easier in the old days, when wars were largely local and far away, when communication was slow, and facilities for following current campaigns and battles scarcely existed.

The whole civilized world might almost be said to sit in a grandstand and see those rebel war planes raining bombs on Madrid and its suburbs, the women and children blown to pieces in city parks, the blood spattered over the walls and images of a church as a shell crashes through the roof.

Seeing these things so intimately, we are not thrilled but horrified. And thus, even while selfishness and suspicion and economic rivalry seem to drive nations relentlessly toward war, a stronger prejudice develops against war.

FISTS AND COLONIES

Gen. Hermann Goering, in charge of Hitler's four-year economic plan, starts with a plausible "out" for himself by a blunt statement of the difficulties.

"Our colonies have been stolen from us," he thunders. "Our gold has been stolen from us. Germany has been held white by reparations. Then came the Chosen People and plundered Germany through the inflation. It is a bitter mockery to say, 'Why don't you buy your raw materials?'"

"Britain has one-third of the world. If we had only a fraction of those colonies, we would not need to talk about raw materials or food shortages."

He concludes: "We must prevent the foreign fist from grabbing at our throat. We will break that fist during the next four years, finger by finger. We know that others beguile us our place in the sun, but we shall not capitulate."

They are bold words. Germany may follow them up with bold deeds. If Great Britain and France are wise, they will restore some of those German colonies, not necessarily as an act of justice but as a friendly and sensible gesture, in spite of the fact that Germany lost them in a war for which she was primarily responsible.

Bygones should be bygones. Britain and France do not need those colonies, but are supposed to be mere guardians of them, and it is folly to hold them at the cost of new and still more ruinous wars. The League of Nations, which gave the mandates for them under the terms of the Versailles treaty, should demand a redistribution for the sake of world peace.

DAILY WASHINGTON LETTER

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—When you talk about the conservation of natural resources, the ordinary citizen is apt to conclude that you are in favor of wrapping up in burlap all our forests, mineral deposits, oil pools, and what-not, and putting them away in a cool place with a "do not touch" label on the outside.

We tend to look on conservation as a plan for keeping us from using the advantages with which nature has blessed us. It sounds like going without things. Hence it is an idea which is very hard to sell.

But, as a matter of fact, conservation does not mean that at all. To conserve our timber resources, for instance, is not to stop cutting down trees; it is merely to cut them down sanely and intelligently, so that there will be some left for our grandchildren to cut.

An excellent illustration of the way a smart conservation policy would work is provided in an article by C. B. Stott, of the U. S. Forest Service, in a recent issue of the Forestry News Digest.

Mr. Stott discusses a certain stand of virgin timber in upper Michigan. The stand comprises 129,000 acres of forest; at present rate of cutting, between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000 board feet of lumber are removed each year.

In 20 years all the timber on this land will be gone, the towns in the vicinity—prosperous now because of the lumber boom—will be without visible means of support, unemployment will be common, and the state will be left with a vast area of land which is utterly unproductive and cannot even be taxed.

Suppose, now, says Mr. Stott, that the rate of cutting were reduced to something like 8,500,000 board feet annually. Suppose that, at the same time, an intelligent reforestation scheme were put into operation. New timber could be raised as fast as the mature timber was being cut.

Consequently, the timber would not be gone in 20 years; to all intents and purposes, it would last forever. One hundred years hence the region containing this forest would be as busy as it is today. It would be producing its 8,500,000 board feet of timber every year, providing a finished product worth $6,500,000, and supporting a $75,000 annual payroll.

The state would not have a tax delinquency problem on its hands. It would not have a little group of dying towns with thousands of former wage earners on relief. It would have, instead, a permanently thriving community, producing a valuable commodity year in, year out.

Altogether, the nation would get much more lumber out of these 129,000 acres than the amount which is in sight under the present rate of cutting.

That is what real conservation means. It does not mean going without things; it simply means using them intelligently, with an eye to the future, giving up a brief boom for the sake of an enduring, if less spectacular, prosperity.

INSECTS CANNOT DESTROY THE GIANT SEQUOIA TREES; WHEN AN INSECT DRILLS INTO THE BARK, A TANNIN-LIKE DUST CHOKES IT.

THE sequoia is almost indestructible. The armor of thick bark acts as an asbestos protection against fire, and as insulation against frost and freezing. The wood seems to be almost immune against rot, and a thick healing sap quickly heals up any scar.

MAN ABOUT MANHATTAN

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK.—That booming crash which jarred Manhattan and sent tremors over the face of the midtown skyscrapers was just Sidney Kingsley colliding with an axiom. Ole debbil axiom won, leaving Kingsley with a $40,000 headache, but don't cry for him, Susannah. This extremely young man has several times 40 grand and is still going strong.

The axiom (an old hand at derailing trail-blazers) insists that successful authors almost never succeed at producing their own plays.

That made Master Kingsley laugh. Well, he reasoned, I wrote "Men in White" and it won the Pulitzer prize. Broadway liked it and the movies bought it and I made a lot of money. Then I wrote "Dead End" and that made a lot of money, too. But, in both instances the producers got half. Now if I can write successful plays, and I certainly seem to have that ability, why not produce them myself and keep all the money?

That's the way Kingsley reasoned and you've got to admit there was logic to it.

Wherefore he went off on a junket, dug up a lot of ideas, and wrote "Ten Million Ghosts." It seemed like swell entertainment to me. But the critics drew aim and shot the foundation out from under it, and several days later it collapsed in a holocaust of scenery and wrecked plans.

The records show that only in rare instances are playwrights able to produce their own plays successfully. Not unexpectedly, Noel Coward is of these. He produces his own plays and makes far more money as a producer than he does as an author.

On the other hand, no amount of talk could persuade Eugene O'Neill to finance his own dramas. He realizes that successful producers are geniuses in their own right and that financial disaster is the usual lot of untutored beginners.

Abbott Invests In Others. One is reminded of another approach often followed by George Abbott. This author, a winner at cooking up his own plots, occasionally invests in other people's plays, but never in his own.

It was Irving K. Davis who had that closest resemblance to the part. Back in 1927 he decided to finance one of his own plays. But he wasn't taking much of a risk. This play was "Courtesan" and there was only one person in the cast. And to make it even more of a sure thing his wife, Eliza Shaker, played the part.

Curiously enough, there was another play that year which made the rounds of the Broadway offices, but everybody turned it down. When Davis saw it he threw up his hands in horror. It was a drama built around a railroad terminal and it called for a cast of 282 actors.

And yet a compromise here and there would make the wheels of home life run much more smoothly. Of course if there is a real reason for one's domestic peculiarities, all right. If the table is worn and ugly, dollies are probably out of the question, and the children must bow to the inevitable. If the housekeeper's life is greatly simplified by breakfast in the kitchen, the youngsters can be made to see the point.

Often, however, the parents' objections are based on nothing more than habit. It is a nuisance to change one's mode of life; it involves new notions, new ideas. But parents must change. Change is essential if one brings up children. They are always in contact with new ideas, new conventions, new ways of living. They want to try out a few of the novelties themselves, and their home is the one place where they can do so.

A little yielding on the parents' part will find them eager to cooperate in working out what can and cannot be done.

And it will not hurt the parents to make a few adjustments. Middle age is apt to grow set in its ways. A little shaking-up may rejuvenate the parents, and in the long run do them good.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

Chapter 31 DEATH STRUGGLE With that it seemed the man's patience came to an end. His large fists clenched; he took half a pace forward; and at that Mahony's pistol came out of his pocket and he pointed it at the man's stomach.

"Better not," he said curtly. At the sight of the pistol pointed at him the Irishman paused. But only for a moment.

"So that's the game—twist me out of me money and threaten me with a gun!" he exclaimed in a tone of outraged astonishment. "Shoot, then, me foine gentleman, if you've the pluck, and if you kill me, may you swing for it."

At that, with an agility astonishing in a man of his bulk, he darted suddenly sideways, in order to confuse Mahony's aim, then sprang, his huge hands outstretched towards Mahony's throat.

Mahony did not fire. The last thing he wanted was the noise of a shot, which would attract the attention of the whole neighborhood, including the police, to the house.

He ducked quickly under those outstretched hands, stepped nimbly to one side, and slipped the pistol back into his pocket. Then, as his opponent turned for another spring, Mahony stepped in and brought his right over in a crisp, hard punch to the man's face.

The man's head went back; before he could recover himself Mahony had hit him again with a left in the stomach, and the right, with a good solid hefty punches that might easily have knocked an ordinary man out.

The big Irishman took them without flinching; then he gathered himself together and sprang again.

Once more Mahony slipped lightly to one side; again his fist lurched into his opponent's face. The big man's right cheek was cut; one of his eyes was fast closing; his lower lip was considerably swollen. It seemed that he had learned his lesson; he no longer indulged in those mad rushes.

Instead he adopted a half crouching attitude and began to advance quite slowly across the room towards Mahony, watching him like a cat the while. His intention was evident; he meant to crowd Mahony into a corner where he could pen him and get a grip on him.

But Mahony was not having any. He realized very well that once he came to grips with his Herculean opponent he would stand very little chance.

Smack, smack, his fists landed in rapid succession in the man's face, and he slipped away out of range. But the Irishman, it seemed, knew something of boxing; though he could not avoid the blows altogether, he managed to turn his head slightly, so that none of them reached a vital spot.

Slowly, remorselessly, he shuffled after Mahony, taking all the punishment the Mahony dealt out to him, waiting his chance to come to close quarters and get a grip on Mahony with these huge hands.

His chance came as Mahony, stepping back quickly out of range, caught his heel in the edge of a rug. For a moment Mahony staggered, off his balance, and in that moment the Irishman leaped.

Mahony twisted desperately, trying to get out of range; he almost succeeded, but not quite. The Irishman's left hand got a good grip on Mahony's coat; with a sudden jerk he drew Mahony near to him; and his right hand, like a snake striking, closed around Mahony's throat.

"Now, me foine gentleman, me can continue the argument more comfortably," said the Irishman in a triumphant tone.

For a moment, in that tremendous grip, Mahony felt utterly helpless. He struggled, hitting out with both fists at his opponent's body, but it was like battering at a brick wall. The Irishman was smiling; his eyes were blazing with a light of victorious exultation. Mahony's struggles grew weaker.

And then the rug which had been his undoing proved his salvation. As the two men struggled, the loose rug, which had become thoroughly rucked up, became entangled between their feet. Still holding Mahony, the big Irishman tripped; the two men together staggered into a small chair, knocked it over, and came crashing down.

As he fell, the Irishman had instinctively released his grip and flung out on arm to try to retain his balance. Mahony gave a desperate wriggle and got clear.

The two men rose to their feet almost simultaneously. Mahony's back was against a corner of the wall, his breath was coming painfully in sobbing gasps; and the Irishman barred his exit from the corner. In another moment that terrible grip would close on Mahony's throat again.

Mahony had neither the energy nor the breath remaining to dodge. There was only one thing to do, and he did it. As the Irishman sprang in again to the attack, he marshaled all his strength in one supreme effort and sprang to meet him.

At this time, either from sheer carelessness, or because he thought that his opponent was exhausted, the Irishman left a vital spot unguarded. Mahony's fist, with all the skill and timing learned during many hours of boxing, and with every bit of bone and muscle, and all the strength of desperation behind the blow, crashed fairly onto the angle of the big man's jaw.

The Irishman, coming forward at full speed, was knocked clean over in his tracks, landing on the flat of his back with a crash that seemed to shake the building. Mahony, panting and exhausted, leaned back against the wall. His right hand felt as though every bone in it was broken. The Irishman lay still.

From outside in the street came a sound of voices and a car drawing up. The big Irishman stirred. Slowly and feebly he raised himself stepped forward from the wall. In case of any more trouble he meant to use the butt of his pistol.

The big man, sitting on the floor, stared up at him in a bewildered manner, his eyes wide with wonder. A hideous smile twisted his battered lips.

"That was a foine punch, Mister," he said in a tone of amazed admiration. "I don't know that anybody ever hit me as hard as that before."

"I'll hit you a damned sight harder, with the butt of this pistol, if you try to get up," said Mahony bluntly.

The Irishman raised a protesting hand.

"Be easy," he said. "You can keep the money, I know."

He was interrupted by a knocking on the front door below. Mahony turned swiftly to the window and looked out. A car was drawn up in front of the house, and by it was standing a uniformed policeman. Another was standing a few yards away down the street. Both of them were looking at the house.

"Hell! The police!" exclaimed Mahony.

"What's that?" exclaimed the Irishman.

With an effort he staggered to his feet, and looked around him. The smile had left his lips; his expression was that of a hunted man.

"It will be me they're after," he went on. "Some dirty traitor must have seen me come here and given them the wire. Get me out of this, mister—you will get me out of it, won't you? Sure, me like you, a fightin' man, wouldn't see a poor devil of a fellow sent to jail without stirring a finger."

"I don't know the blasted way out myself; I don't want to be caught here any more than you do," replied Mahony. "From what I can see, the place is surrounded. It will be no good going downstairs; I'm going to try my luck upwards. You can come if you like."

IN LAND ERROR

HAYS, Kas. (AP)—Officials were stumped recently when they discovered the city didn't own a quarter of a mile of one of its principal streets.

City commissioners found one half of the street for 1,504 feet belonged to Casey Cochran and not to the city. On the other hand, the city had title to the same amount of land Cochran thought he owned. An error in description on the deed caused the mixup.

Cochran and the city swapped land.

OLD COWHAND FROM DALLAS IS IN 'DUTCH'

Deportation Hearing For Hungarian Arranged

HOUSTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—Irmi Semendi, Texas "cowboy" who is better on a motorcycle than he is a horse, put away his boots and ten-gallon hat today.

The events of the last few days had been a little breath-taking for the 37-year-old Hungarian citizen, who has been able to adapt himself to Te as costuming than to the English language.

Yesterday he was taken to the immigration detention station at Galveston to await the outcome of a deportation hearing.

A few days ago he was regularly employed as a butcher.

It was Semendi's good intentions which brought his case to the attention of the U. S. immigration service.

The first that Houston immigration inspectors ever heard of Semendi was on the day when he strode into the immigration office, dressed in boots, a ten-gallon hat and a loud cowboy shirt, and asked for information on how he could become an American citizen. L. D. Crossman, inspector in charge, said he looked like a cowboy, but his accent was distinctly continental.

An inspector asked Semendi a few questions and learned that:

The "cowboy" got his costume while working in the Centennial exposition in Dallas for six months. He rode to Houston on a motorcycle.

He entered the country some three years ago on a passport.

He had been in 18 countries and had made movies of scenes from most of them.

He had overstayed his time in the United States on his passport.

Semendi's case was wired to Washington and a warrant was issued for his detention.

When Semendi went to the immigration office for the last of the hearings, he wore no boots, but brown suede sport shoes. His cowboy boots and hat had been put aside.

Semendi was disturbed over what people might think about him.

"I am no bum," he said.

He also explained he believed his passport had entitled him to remain in the country as long as he had been here. He explained he was ready and desired to return to his native Hungary voluntarily without deportation.

Harpo's Bride

When Arthur "Harpo" Marx, film comedian, mentioned to President Roosevelt, in a letter thanking the latter for an autographed picture, that "Harpo" had been married since September, it was learned the bride was Susan Fleming, above, former Follies girl. She is a native of New York City and was educated in Forest Hills, Long Island.

STOVE POPULAR PLACE TO HIDE XMAS MONEY

BY EDDY GILMORE.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP)—This is the season for the treasury's annual harvest of damaged money.

All over the nation people are kindling fires for winter and with the first blaze come walls of woe from kitchen bankers whose currency has gone up in smoke.

Officials of the treasury's redemption office have never figured out the reason for it, but the kitchen stove, the furnace and the open hearth remain the most popular places to hide money about the American home.

A dozen sob stories a day are filed with the redemption office from middle November to the last of December.

Junior has started a fire in the stove where daddy hid a roll of bills last summer.

Mother discovers to her horror that daddy has built a blaze in the furnace where she had been keeping the Christmas money.

The tales of distress, along with what is left of the currency, go to expert examiners and you would be surprised how much of it is redeemed at full value.

Fires are not the only cause of destroyed money, however, goats and dogs are high on the list.

BARE LEGS AND BACKS HIT AS TEMPTATIONS
SALT LACK CITY, Nov. 12. (AP)—Mrs. Ruth May Fox at the threshold of 83 says she's no prude—but she can't abide bare backs and bare legs for girls.

As "guardian" for nearly 70,000 young women, she said, she considers such immodesty "one of the greatest temptations for evil."

Mrs. Fox, who crossed the plains by ox team when she was 12, is president of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement association, a Latter Day Saints church group of 69,000 members. She will celebrate her eighty-third birthday Monday.

"I don't think the young men care to see girls wearing backless dresses either," asserted the gray-haired mother of 12 children, 10 of whom are still living.

"And, thought I don't want to seem prudish, I think girls should refrain also from beer-drinking and smoking."

Mrs. Fox admitted that girls today are stronger-willed than they used to be—"When they want something, they want it." But she quickly denied she believed the younger generation was going to the dogs.
