Empire Officials Move to Pampa To Be Near Oil

Following the completion of more office buildings at its location two miles west of Pampa, several departments of the Empire Fuel and Gas company which were in Amarillo have been moved to Pampa to be near drilling activities.

C. S. Warren, general superintendent of the company, arrived yesterday and will make his headquarters at the Pampa camp. He will reside in the city temporarily.

Other officials who have moved to the Pampa office are John L. Mead, office manager; Roscoe Haslinson, field superintendent; W. C. Hutchinson, superintendent of drilling; Sam Harlan, production engineer and Charles Cobb, garage foreman.

The Empire Fuel and Gas company has made several new locations in the Gray county field and will commence extensive drilling operations immediately. The company is one of the largest lease holders in the Panhandle, which necessitates extensive drilling although activities have slackened during the winter months.

Harry Rogers to Make Address at Tech Commencement

LUBBOCK, Jan. 19.—Harry H. Rogers of San Antonio, former president of Rotary International and a prominent attorney, educator, and oil operator, will deliver the address to the graduating class of Texas Technological college during commencement exercises. This announcement has just been made by President Paul W. Horn.

Mr. Rogers has attained national prominence for his interest in Rotary and education. He is also widely known as a successful attorney and is a man of large financial means.

His address at Tech will come on May 23 and will be the feature of the graduating week.

Student Union at Texas University Has Big Project

AUSTIN, Jan. 19.—Plans for the Students Union project at the University of Texas being sponsored by the Ex-Students' association of that school have been drawn tentatively by University architects. A campaign to raise funds for the project will be inaugurated shortly, according to T. W. Gregory, president of the Ex-Students' association and sponsor of the project. Regents of the school have already approved the plans and agreed to appropriate a considerable portion of the funds needed. A large number of prominent Texans have also endorsed the project and agreed to work with Gregory in making it a reality. Included in this number are R. J. Lucher Stark of Orange, chairman of the Board of Regents of the University, and W. J. C. Hoeg, of Houston, former regent and for many years active in University affairs. Both men have agreed to make substantial gifts to the project.

Wish Three Buildings

The project calls for the erection on the University campus of three buildings which the University itself could not properly build for many years, according to officials of the institution. These buildings are a large gymnasium-auditorium, a smaller auditorium and union building, and a woman's gymnasium and activities building. University officials declare that the need of such buildings is probably as acute as for any other buildings, but hold that state funds should be used for needed classroom buildings, library facilities and similar structures badly needed in giving formal instruction rather than for the buildings contemplated in this program.

The Union project will not interfere with the erection of such buildings, they point out, and their approval of the project is based on this fact.

Use Spanish Design

The buildings designed by R. L. White, resident architect for the University, and S. P. Vosper, instructor in architecture and designer of the Scottish Cathedral, the Medical Arts Building, and other structures in San Antonio, are of modified Spanish design such as has been used in other University buildings recently constructed, and will fit into the architectural scheme of the University harmoniously.

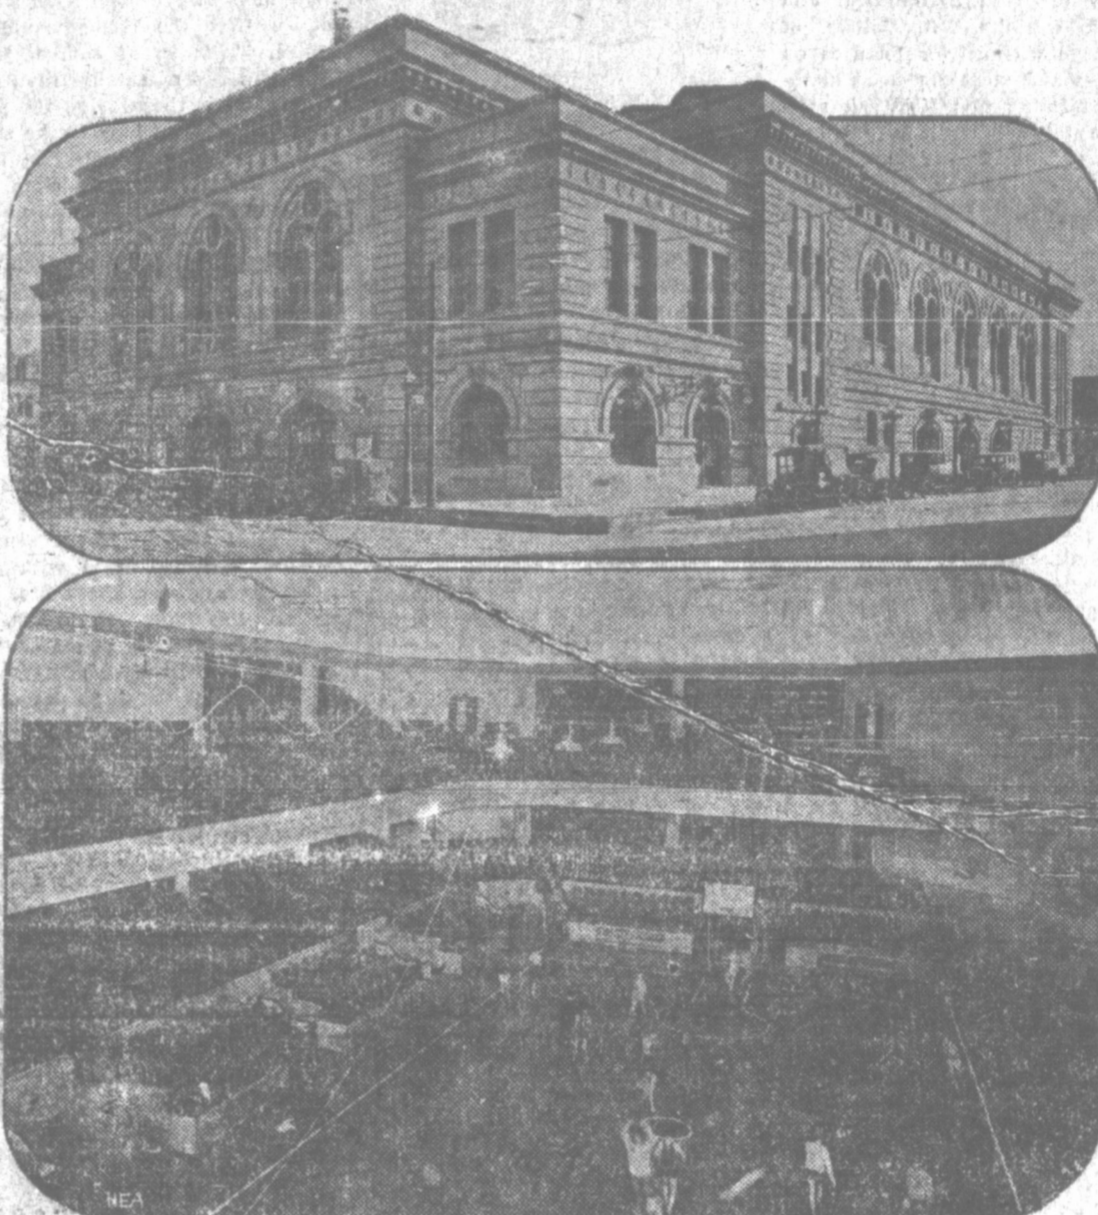

The auditorium-gymnasium will be the largest of the three buildings. It will consist of two floors with a balcony on three sides of the auditorium floor. The auditorium will comfortably seat eight to ten thousand persons, with the balcony, and will be large enough for convocations of the entire student body. The largest social affairs, concerts by internationally famous artists, lectures by visiting celebrities, etc. It will also provide a fitting setting for large gatherings not directly connected with the school but for which it may be made available. The other floor of the building will be devoted to the physical training program of the University, and will contain locker rooms, gymnastic apparatus, quarters for corrective physical training work, shower baths, etc. Connected with this building will be a covered swimming pool which may be heated, and which will be one of the largest in the South. There will be a trophy room in the lobby of the building where the victories of Texas students may be properly commemorated and office space for the athletic staff of the school.

Gym For Women

Similar provisions for women's athletics will be made in another building. This building will consist of a large vaulted gymnasium proper flanked on either side by wings of three stories. One of these wings

Cotton Gin Will Become Part of Tech Equipment

LUBBOCK, Jan. 19.—Dean A. H. Leidig of the department of agriculture in Texas Technological college announces that a modern cotton gin will be the next addition to the college's school of Agriculture to the plans the unit will carry the latest in ginning equipment, cleaning machinery for ginned and snapped cotton being featured.

Vacuum conveyors on the gin will allow the school of Agriculture to carry on seed standardization and propagation.

With the establishment of this gin on the Tech campus cotton, Texas' leading product, may be carried from the seed to its final uses in the home, by way of the school of agriculture, the textile mill and the home economics school.

Purple Sage Head Likes Daily News

Oil companies operating in the Pampa field are among the best non-resident boosters of the Pampa Daily News. The local daily is going into the head offices of most of the companies, and the officers and directors are keeping in daily touch with Pampa's civic and oil development.

Extracts below, from W. R. Clayton of Denver, president of the Purple Sage Oil corporation, are typical of many received:

"We have been receiving your valued publication daily and have found the oil news of much value to us.

"We believe your county is due to produce some very spectacular oil pools, and we are very much pleased with the way in which you are disseminating the news relative to developments thus far."

(Special to the News)
ALANREED, Jan. 19.—The Alanreed basketball boys are proudly displaying their newly arrived service sweaters in school colors of purple and white, with service stripes on the arm and a large chenille letter "A" on the front.

As an observer of several games the writer is confident that each boy wearing these sweaters has played clean ball and has been of real service to the team.

Although the basketball season is not over, the sweaters have arrived in time for some real comfortable service during the remainder of the winter season.

About a dozen others of 46 Democrats were absent. Robinson and Heflin's Alabama colleague, Senator Black, did not vote.

Jamesons Conduct Big Farm Sale

I. S. Jameson and son, D. B. Jameson, conducted one of the largest farm stock and implement sales yesterday that has been held in Panhandle for some time. Dr. W. L. Joss, a medical doctor at Wheeler, sold all his stock and equipment yesterday at his ranch about ten miles north of Wheeler.

Dr. Joss plans to devote all his time to his hospital at Wheeler.

More than 40 head of cattle, 200 hogs, 80 mules and horses, 800 chickens and a large quantity of farm implements were disposed of at record prices. Mr. Jameson estimated that the crowd present at the sale would number more than 2,000. It took the entire day to dispose of the stock and implements.

Residence Building Under Way Here

Work has commenced on the beautiful $12,000 home and large brick garage in the East End addition for George Cox, W. E. Davis, local man, has the contract and states that the residence will be completed by March 1.

Morris Levine, manager of the Peoples store, has purchased the $5,000 residence on West street north of the Haggard apartment, being erected by Alex Schneider. The house will be completed by February 1.

This home is the first of six residences being erected by Alex Schneider. Work on one of the others will commence immediately, Schneider states.

Road Building Machinery Now Highly Efficient

The largest one-industry display the world has ever known—the Good Roads Show last week at Cleveland—gave a picture of road progress that would be difficult to visualize fully otherwise. Road development has been so rapid and marvelous that the nation is just catching its second wind.

Gigantic machinery, small machinery, simple devices, complex devices, covering floor space at Cleveland equivalent to that provided by a building 150 feet wide and 1,000 feet long, exemplified not the road construction changes of a century, but those of a mere ten or fifteen years.

A whole month, for instance, was frequently required in 1910 for building a single mile of concrete highway. This excess time was due to lack of experience and lack of equipment. The trained road builder of today, armed with mammoth paving mixers that turn out a cubic yard of fresh concrete every minute or so, can create a 1,500-foot concrete ribbon in eight or ten hours.

Boys of Agriculture Class Enjoy Visit on Stockstill Ranch

Professor J. L. Lester, accompanied by his agriculture class at the high school, visited the C. C. Stockstill ranch east of Pampa Tuesday morning and vaccinated 50 hogs with cholera vaccine. Mr. Stockstill has the same number to be immunized on another ranch.

Mr. Stockstill invited Professor Lester and his boys to stay for dinner and the entire group were loud in their thanks for the ranch meal.

Since noting the first signs of cholera among hogs in this vicinity, Professor Lester has vaccinated more than 350 head. He has requests to vaccinate 200 more as soon as he has the time.

Since the Professor commenced vaccinating the hogs, very few deaths have been reported and he thinks the malady has been checked, but advises all hog owners to have their droves vaccinated.

If by chance any hog owner has been missed he may notify Professor Lester or the Chamber of Commerce and his drove will be examined.

train and four of the cars will carry specially prepared agricultural and livestock exhibits. Specialists of the college will deliver lectures on the latest and most approved methods of farming and livestock raising, the talks to include dairying, poultry raising, hog raising, fertilizers, soils, livestock feeding and breeding, boys and girls farm club work, home demonstration work, and other topics. Meetings at the various stops will last from two to three hours. An electrically controlled voice amplifier will be used at the open air meetings.

Of the agricultural-educational nature, the program will stress diversification and the exhibits and lectures have been designed to bring to the attention of farmers the results of late experiments in agricultural development. Following the lectures visitors will be invited to go through the train. Passenger coaches will be used for meetings in inclement weather. The speaking program has been arranged so as to interest women and children as well as men and questions concerning farm problems will be invited.

Income Tax Office Opened in Pampa

The A. E. Dixon company of Amarillo has opened a permanent office in Pampa, and will specialize in income tax work and oil depletion.

The local office, which is in the First National bank building, is in charge of A. E. Dixon, who has had several years' experience with the government in all branches of the income tax department, including field and office work, divisional chief and head of the income tax department of the Oklahoma district.

J. R. Roby has been doing some work for the firm in Pampa, and will continue to do so.

SNYDER, Tex., Jan. 10.—A three-town mass meeting is being planned by Jamesa, Brownfield and Snyder in connection with the efforts of these towns to secure an eastern rail trunk line for this section.

Markets

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—A feature which has caused considerable comment in the past several months has been the lowering tendency of hog price levels throughout the year, the decline being noted until near the close of the year when prices struck more or less of a steady keel.

In some quarters this has been attributed to possible increased pork supplies, but receipts at the principal markets do not bear this out. The supply for the year was virtually steady with the preceding year but the weakness of the market cropped up in the demand and it is thought that an important factor in this weakening was due to decreased exports of pork and pork products. A decrease of around 30 per cent is recorded in exports for the year along with a 5 per cent decrease in lard exports. This is accounted for in a large extent by increased hog production in European production sections, with a heavy increase in European hog slaughter in the face of substantial decreases in the number of cattle and sheep slaughtered.

During 1927 the volume of pork in cold storage was heavier throughout the year than during 1926, and, no doubt, served to diminish buying power. One way of accounting for these heavier stocks of pork was the anticipated hog shortage which seemed imminent in 1926, resulting in the laying in of larger supplies than normal to cover what was thought might be a period of short supplies during 1927.

Although stocks of pork in storage at the beginning of the present year are heavier than a year ago, and the decreased export demand continues to prevail, it is evident that hog prices have reached a level in their downward movement which will probably not be passed for at least several months to come, with the possible exception of local fluctuations which may occur at the various markets. There is a strong undertone to the market and if there were any appreciable change in the near future conditions would indicate that the trend would be upward. This is, of course, justified to a large extent by three governing factors, these being the presence of a supply of hogs in the country which does not exceed requirements, the strong position of the sheep market and price levels being realized for beef cattle which everything indicates will be maintained at least during a good portion of the present year and perhaps longer.

The Western hog producer is, fortunately situated in this instance as production of hogs West of the Rick Mountains does not at this time exceed 30 per cent of the Western requirements and in California it is estimated that not over from 10 per cent to 15 per cent of local demands are filled with production from within the State. So long as this situation exists, of course, the Western producer will receive the benefit of the differential in prices in his favor at the Coast markets, representing the shipping expense and risk involved in bringing in supplies from distant points, and it is very likely that this differential will remain for some time to come as increased Western production is falling short of keeping pace with increased consumed demand represented by the constant growth in population at Pacific coast metropolitan centers.

Poll Tax Drive Is Getting Results

Have you paid your poll tax? More than 200 proxies were received at the Chamber of Commerce today from the committees working on the "Pay Your Poll Tax" campaign. The Chamber of Commerce rooms are the campaign headquarters and anyone who has been missed in the drive may call there and leave a proxy.

One enthusiastic worker received more than twenty proxies in one place Tuesday where the employees had forgotten to pay their tax.

An additional ten men started on the drive this morning. They report the response gratifying. "The people of Pampa are responding wonderfully well," I. E. Duncan, chairman of the committee, stated to the News this morning, "and I am sure we will have almost 2,000 proxies by the end of the drive."

THE STORY THUS FAR

Vance, a student of psychology and of crime, has his own theories about law courts and police procedure, and he tells them to Markham. The latter is considerably worried over the outbreak of crime in New York. Then the newspapers announce the murder of Margaret Odell, known as the "Canary," a former Follies girl and reigning Broadway beauty.

CHAPTER II

(Tuesday, Sept. 11; 8:30 a. m.)

It was barely half-past eight on that momentous morning of September the 11th when Markham brought word to us of the event.

I was living temporarily with Vance at his home in East 35th street—a large remodeled apartment occupying the two top floors of a beautiful mansion. For several years I had been Vance's personal legal representative and adviser, having resigned from my father's law firm of Van Dine, Davis and Van Dine to devote myself to his needs and interests. His affairs were by no means voluminous, but his personal finances, together with his numerous purchases of paintings and objets d'art, occupied my full time without burdening me. This monetary and legal stewardship was eminently congenial to my tastes; and my friendship with Vance, which had dated from our undergraduate days at Harvard, supplied the social and human element in an arrangement which otherwise might have degenerated into one of mere drab routine.

On this particular morning I had risen early and was working in the library when Currie, Vance's valet and majordomo, announced Markham's presence in the living-room, this early morning visit, for Markham well knew that Vance, who rarely rose before noon, resented any intrusion upon his matutinal slumbers. And in that moment I received the curious impression that something unusual and portentous was toward.

I found Markham pacing restlessly up and down, his hat and gloves thrown carelessly on the center-table. As I entered he halted and looked at me with harassed eyes. He was a moderately tall man, clean-shaven, gray-haired, and firmly set up. His appearance was distinguished, and his manner courteous and kindly. But beneath his gracious exterior there was an aggressive sternness, an indomitable, grim strength, that gave one the sense of dogged efficiency and untiring capability.

"Good morning, Van," he greeted me, with impatient perfunctoriness. "There's been another half-world murder—the worst and ugliest thus far . . ." He hesitated, and regarded me searchingly. "You recall my chat with Vance at the club the other night? There was something damned prophetic in his remarks. And you remember I half promised to take him along on the next important case. Well, the case has broken—with a vengeance. Margaret Odell, whom they called the Canary, has been strangled in her apartment; and from what I just got over the phone, it looks like another night-club affair. I'm headed for the Odell apartment now . . . What about rousing out the sybarite?"

"By all means," I agreed, with an alacrity which, I fear, was in large measure prompted by purely selfish motives. The Canary! If one had sought the city over for a victim whose murder would stir up excitement, there could have been but few selections better calculated to produce this result.

Hastening to the door, I summoned Currie, and told him to call Vance at once.

"I'm afraid, sir—" began Currie, politely hesitant. "Calm your fears," cut in Markham. "I'll take all responsibility for waking him at this indecent hour." Currie sensed an emergency and departed.

A minute or two later Vance, in an elaborately embroidered silk kimono and sandals, appeared at the living-room door. "My word!" he greeted us, in mild astonishment, glancing at the clock. "Haven't you chaps gone to bed yet?"

For Moran arrived ten minutes ago." "Well, Heath's a good man," declared Markham. "We'll work it out . . . Which is the apartment?" Feathergill led the way to a door at the rear of the main hall. "Here you are, sir," he announced. "I'll be running along now. I need sleep. Good luck!" And he was gone.

It will be necessary to give a brief description of the house and its interior arrangement, for the somewhat peculiar structure of the building played a vital part in the seam-ple and obvious an architectural design played such an important part in a criminal mystery. By its very simplicity and almost conventional familiarity—indeed, by its total lack of any puzzling complications—it proved so baffling to the investigators that the case threatened, for many days, to remain forever insoluble.

CHAPTER III

As Markham entered the Odell apartment that morning Sergeant Heath came forward at once and extended his hand. A look for relief passed over his broad, pugnacious features; and it was obvious that the animosity and rivalry which always exist between the detective division and the district attorney's office during the investigation of any criminal case had no place in his attitude on this occasion.

"I'm glad you've come sir," he said; and meant it.

He then turned to Vance with a cordial smile, and held out his hand.

"So the amachoor sleuth is with us again!" His tone held a friendly banter.

"Oh, quite," murmured Vance. "How's your induction coil working this beautiful September morning, Sergeant?"

"I'd hate to tell you!" Then Heath's face grew suddenly grave, and he turned to Markham. "It's a raw deal, sir. Why in hell couldn't they have picked some one besides the Canary for their dirty work? There's plenty of James on Broadway who coulda faded from the picture without causing a second alarm; but they gotta go and bump off the Queen of Sheba!"

As he spoke, William M. Moran, the commanding officer of the detective bureau, came into the little foyer and performed the usual handshaking ceremony. Though he had met Vance and me but once before and then casually, he remembered us both and addressed us courteously by name.

"Your arrival," he said to Markham, in a well-bred, modulated voice, "is very welcome. Sergeant Heath will give you what preliminary information you want. I'm still pretty much in the dark myself—only just arrived."

"A lot of information I've got to give," grumbled Heath, as he led the way into the living-room.

Margaret Odell's apartment was a suite of two fairly large rooms connected by a wide archway draped with heavy damask portieres. The entrance door from the main hall of the building led into a small rectangular foyer about eight feet long and four feet deep, with double Venetian-glass doors opening into the main room beyond. There was no other entrance to the apartment, and the bedroom could be reached only through the archway from the living-room.

There was a large davenport, covered with brocaded silk, in front of the living-room, with a long narrow library-table of inlaid rosewood extending along its back. On the opposite wall, between the foyer and the archway into the bedroom, hung a triplicate Marie Antoinette mirror, beneath which stood a mahogany gate-legged table.

On the far side of the archway, near the large oriel window, was a baby grand Steinway piano with a beautiful designed and decorated case of Louis-Seize ornamentations. In the corner to the right of the fireplace was a spindle-legged escritoire and a square hand-painted wicker basket of vellum.

To the left of the fireplace stood one of the loveliest Boule cabinets I have ever seen. Several excellent reproductions of Boucher, Fragonard and Watteau hung about the walls. The bedroom contained a chest of drawers, a dressing-table, and several gold-leaf chairs. The whole apartment seemed eminently in keeping with the Canary's fragile and evanescent personality.

As we stepped from the little foyer into the living-room and stood for a moment looking about, a scene bordering on wreckage met our eyes. The rooms had apparently been ransacked by some one in a frenzy of haste, and the disorder of the place was appalling.

"They didn't exactly do the job in dainty fashion," remarked Inspector Moran.

"I suppose we oughta be grateful they didn't blow the joint up with dynamite," returned Heath acidly.

But it was not the general disorder that most attracted us. Our gaze was almost immediately drawn and held by the body of the dead girl, which rested in an unnatural, semi-recumbent attitude in the corner of the davenport nearest to where we stood.

Her head was turned backward, as if by force, over the silken tufted upholstery; and her hair had come unfastened and lay beneath her head and over her bare shoulder like a frozen cateract of liquid gold. Her face, in violent death, was distorted and unlovely. Her skin was discolored; her eyes were staring; her mouth was open, and her lips were drawn back. Her neck, on either side of the thyroid cartilage, showed ugly dark bruises. She was dressed in a flimsy evening gown of black Chantilly lace over cream-colored chiffon, and across the arm of the davenport had been thrown an evening cape of cloth-of-gold trimmed with ermine.

There were evidences of her ineffectual struggle with the person who had strangled her. Besides the dishevelled condition of her hair, one of the shoulder-straps of her gown had been severed, and there was a long rent in the fine lace across her breast. A small corsage of artificial orchids had been torn from her bodice, and lay crumpled in her lap. One satin slipper had fallen off, and her right knee was twisted inward on the seat of the davenport as if she had sought to lift herself out of the suffocating clutches of her antagonist.

Her fingers were still flexed, no doubt as they had been at the moment of her capitulation to death, when she had relinquished her grip upon the murderer's wrists.

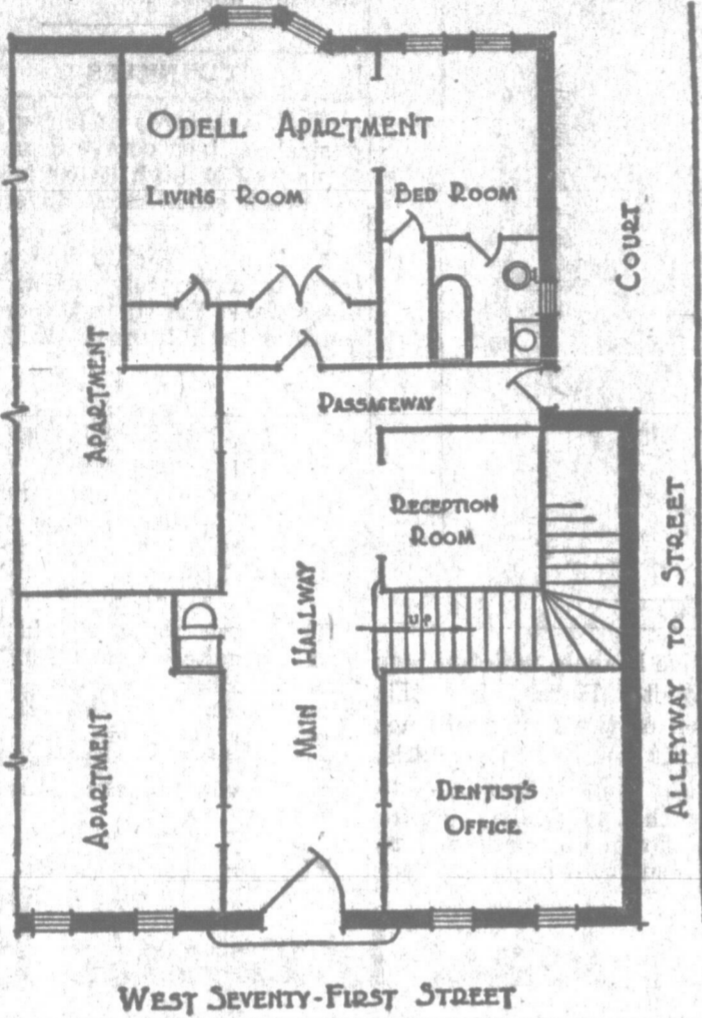

The spell of horror cast over us by the sight of the tortured body was broken by the matter-of-fact tones of Heath.

"You see, Mr. Markham, she was evidently sitting in the corner of this settee when she was grabbed suddenly from behind."

Markham nodded. "It must have taken a pretty strong man to strangle her so easily."

"I'll say!" agreed Heath. He bent over and pointed to the girl's fingers, on which showed several abrasions. "They stripped her rings off, too; and they didn't go about it gentle, either." Then he indicated a segment of fine platinum chain.

He strolled to the mantel, and selected a gold-striped Regie cigarette from a small Florentine humidor.

Markham's eyes narrowed; he was in no mood for levity.

"The Canary has been murdered," I blurted out.

Vance held his wax vesta poised, and gave me a look of indolent inquisitiveness. "Whose Canary?"

"Margaret Odell was found strangled this morning," amended Markham brusquely. "Even you, wrapped in your scented cottonwool, have heard of her, and you can realize the significance of the crime. I'm personally going to look for those footprints in the snow; and if you want to come along, as you intimated the other night, you'll have to get a move on."

Vance crushed out his cigarette. "Margaret Odell, eh? . . . Most distressing!"

Despite his offhand manner, I could see he was deeply interested. "The base enemies of law and order are determined to chivy you most horribly, aren't they, old dear? Deuced inconsiderate of 'em! . . . Excuse me while I seek habitments suitable to the occasion!" He disappeared into his bedroom, while Markham took out a large cigar and resolutely prepared it for smoking, and I returned to the library to put away the papers on which I had been working.

In less than ten minutes Vance reappeared, dressed for the street.

We rode up-town along Madison avenue, turned into Central Park, and came out by the West 72d street entrance. Margaret Odell's apartment was at 184 West 71st street, near Broadway; and as we drew up to the curb, it was necessary for the patrolman on duty to make a passage for us through the crowd that had already gathered as a result of the arrival of the police.

Feathergill, an assistant district attorney, was waiting in the main hall for his chief's arrival.

"It's too bad, sir," he lamented. "A rotten show all round. And just at this time! . . ." He shrugged his shoulders discouragingly.

"It may collapse quickly," said Markham, shaking the other's hand. "How are things going? Sergeant Heath phoned me right after you called, and said that, at first glance, the case looked a bit stubborn."

"Stubborn?" repeated Feathergill lugubriously. "It's downright imperious. Heath is spinning round like a turbine. He was called off the Boyle case, by the way, to devote his talents to this new shocker. Inspec-ingly insoluble problem posed by the murder.

The house, which was four-story stone structure originally built as a residence, had been remodeled, both inside and outside, to meet the requirements of an exclusive individual apartment dwelling. There were, I believe, three or four separate suites on each floor; but the quarters upstairs need not concern us. The main floor was the scene of the crime, and here there were three apartments and a dentist's office.

The main entrance to the building was directly on the street, and extending straight back from the front door was a wide hallway. Directly at the rear of this hallway, and facing the entrance, was the door to the Odell apartment, which bore the numeral "3." About halfway down the front hall, on the right-hand side, was the stairway leading to the floors above; and directly beyond the stairway, also on the right, was a small reception-room with a wide archway instead of a door. Directly opposite to the stairway, in a small recess, stood the telephone switchboard. There was no elevator in the house.

Another important feature of the ground-floor plan was a small passageway at the rear of the main hall and at right angles to it, which led past the front walls of the Odell apartment to a door opening on a court at the west side of the building. This court was connected with the street by an alley four feet wide.

In the accompanying diagram this arrangement of the ground floor can be easily visualized, and I suggest that the reader fix it in his mind; for I doubt if ever before so sim-

FEW HOGS—While the official report is not available, preliminary estimates justify the belief that Texas farm statistics as of January 1 will show a scarcity of hogs in Texas.

This scarcity is in comparison with the numbers of hogs in adjoining states, and in relation to the numbers of other farm animals. Statistics likely will show that this state leads the nation in the production of cattle, sheep, goats and mules, but is far behind in the production of hogs.

Cotton raising in the past has discouraged extensive swine production, and recent heavy shipping has offset the growing numbers of farms which have a few hogs. Moreover, present market conditions do not encourage hog raising, although this condition, in view of the numerical shortage, should be temporary. It is claimed that present hog prices result not so much from overproduction as from under demand. "Eat more ham" might be a suitable slogan in the Southwest. Beef is not only in great market demand and quotable at the highest peacetime prices on record, but the general condition of the industry is regarded as very encouraging.

Texas needs more hogs on more farms. Perhaps the most welcome immediate result would be brought about if every farmer raised his own meat. The amount of farm income spent for farm-raised products purchased indirectly from farmers of other sections is enormous. This applies to the Panhandle as to other sections.

PORTABLE FUEL—Londoners laughed with unusual

gusto when it was proposed to light the city with gas. Pioneer Texans, despite their dreams for the Texas empire, would have been skeptical of predictions which would have indicated the present extent of gas lines.

Unusually rich in agricultural resources, Texas is doubly blessed in the possession of mineral resources. The Texas Public Service bureau is authority for the statement that more than 8,000 miles of main gas pipelines has been laid in this state. West Texas leads in recent pipeline building, with East Texas and South Texas sharing the activity. Billions of feet of gas is coursing along the network of lines to the principal cities of the Lone Star state.

Already famous for its potentialities, the Panhandle has been indelibly entered in the nation's journal of assets as a territory of unusual possibilities, and cities of adjoining states are tracing their fuel source to the Panhandle gas field, many of them to the Pampa pools.

Cities with gas want cheap rates; those who haven't it are eager to obtain the best franchises possible. With all this development, the Panhandle becomes the reservoir for a huge Southwestern empire. As the stores of gas become less, it may become necessary for this territory to fight for the fuel which, despite its proximity, may not be very accessible. That day is a long way off, but its meaning should be kept in mind.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — When Commander Leroy Reinberg of the coast guard, explaining why the Paulding rammed the submarine, S-4, testified in Boston that the Paulding had some 300 rum ships to watch out for, he caused a certain elevation of eyebrows among those who had understood that the rum fleet had been chased off the North Atlantic seaboard.

"Well?" your correspondent asked coast guard headquarters here with a half-suspicion that someone must have been fibbing. "Well, replied the coast guard, "it's this way. There isn't really any rum fleet any more, but Commander Reinberg's division extends all the way from Halifax to Norfolk and he knows of three hundred questionable vessels which are to be viewed with suspicion and investigated when sighted or heard from."

All large vessels, or does that include motor boats and small craft? "All large, seagoing vessels, both trans-Atlantic and coastwise," replied the coast guard.

For more than a hundred years there have been protests against the increasing power of the president, but that power has continued to grow. Some serious thinkers insist that the executive power today, for all that it appears often under the guise of a cabinet officer's prerogative, is perfectly appalling.

It is now proposed—or seemed to be in Secretary Mellon's last letter to Senator Smoot—that taxation be taken from among the remaining powers of Congress and placed under executive control along with government expenditure on the ground that it is poor business for one set of men to decide what the appropriations and expenditures shall be while another group fixes the taxes from which the revenue is to be collected. Secretary Mellon's row with members of Congress over the extent to which taxes can be reduced without causing a treasury deficit illustrates the point.

It might not be a good thing to toss any more power to the executive branch, which means the White House, but this question of tax fixing will not be fought simply on that basis. Mussolini himself will have to occupy the presidency before Congress can be persuaded to give up such an important political football as tax reduction.

Who buys the family meat in your home? We are now entitled to ask the butcher to show us the government's inspection stamp on meat which assures us that said meat was taken from a healthy animal and prepared in a strictly sanitary manner. The Department of Agriculture maintains a rigid inspection service which puts the inspection stamp "U. S. Insp'd & P's'd." on all wholesale cuts of inspected beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton. Reports reached the department late last year that some dealers often cut the stamp off carcasses and retail cuts, whereupon it was pointed out that the stamp was quite harmless, the marking fluid being a vegetable coloring material.

TWINKLES

High standards of living are desirable, but competition in standards of high living is doing much harm these days.

Endurance flights are getting monotonously plentiful, but at least the fliers are more sensible than trans-ocean fanatics.

An Amarillo radio announcer recently informed the listening world that "Pampa now has about 2,500 people and is growing." Did he miss that many people from that town last week?

They are going to install loud speakers on English trains. Most American passengers can hear the station announcer well enough, but they would like an interpretation of what he says so loudly.

The Democrats have decided to hold their convention in Texas. Now we'll find out how good the Texas Rangers really are. . . . Those Texans who persuaded the delegates to convene in Texas must have known their ropes. . . . Houston should enjoy having the Democrats there, however, as it has been some years since the town has had anything good and bloody. . . . This offers a wonderful opportunity to educate Mexico. Only a few Mexicans could see the convention, of course, but all of them probably will hear it.

This Society was organized at Nashville, Tenn., in 1878 by a group of women of a Bible Class with the purpose of helping the Chinese, this making it a foreign-missionary. It is interesting to know that during the first seven years, this group, and others following it, raised $200,000 for foreign missionary work, while in this last seven years $6,000,000 has been secured for foreign and home work.

The entire society was divided into four groups, with a captain elected to the head of each group. The boy from Dodge City is a headliner, but is coming here with O'Brien and has consented to fight in the semi-final. He is the boy who beat Pat Shelby in one round, while it took Freddy Whittington five to beat Shelby here. He holds decisions over Sid Young, Eddie Dwyer, Pat Shelby, Billie Pelts, and other big time boys.

Warnie Smith, who meets O'Brien, is working out every afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Pampa Athletic club. The workouts are public and large crowds are attending.

Rusty Cahill and Guy Beard will meet in one preliminary, while Kid Andrews and Bat Sikes will provide the entertainment in the other one.

The matchmakers were so enthusiastic over the crowd at the Whittington-Varnier fight that they have gone to a heavy expense to bring some of the best boys in the country here Monday night.

SOUTHERN MANAGER TRAINING ANOTHER PITCHING PIPGRAS

Canny Jimmy Hamilton (inset), pilot of the Nashville club of the Southern Association, hopes to make a big league hurler out of young Ed Pipgras (left) by applying the same homely kind of baseball psychology that helped make a star pitcher of his brother, George Pipgras (right), now of the world champion Yankees.

NEW YORK—Jimmy Hamilton, veteran and successful minor league manager, thinks as much baseball is played on the bench as on the field.

Hamilton for five years pilot of the Nashville Volunteers of the Southern Association, a good record in that vicinity, gets a lot of good pitching from Ed Pipgras by telling him what Southern Association clubs in general and Atlanta in particular, did to his brother, George, four years ago.

Jimmy told the story when he came to New York to gossip with his big league friends at the annual meeting of the majors.

"George Pipgras showed 'em a fast ball in the world series, didn't he?" was a question and statement combined from the Vol manager.

Brothers Much Alike

"I have George's brother, Ed, on my ball club and he may be as good as George some of these days. He looks like George and throws like him, and while he hasn't got as much stuff as his brother, I am not through with him yet.

"I had George with me at Charleston in 1922 when I won the Sally pennant. The Red Sox had taken him on from Madison, S. D., and sent him down to South Carolina. He pitched good ball and went back. Boston then traded him to New York and in 1924 he was with Atlanta when he went there to play a series.

"I had heard that Atlanta was going to let him go when they had to cut down, and as it was the day before the clubs had to be down to the limit, I said to Bert Niehoff, the Atlanta manager, 'I see you have that wild Pipgras.'

"Yes," Bert came back, 'but I won't have him long.'

"He can't hit the grandstand, eh?" I asked.

"He can't hit the Candler building," Bert said.

Nashville Gets "Wild Pipgras"

"That was all I wanted to know, so I wired Ed Barrow and told him that if the Crackers turned Pipgras back to the Yankees, I would take him with Nashville.

"The next day Niehoff came to me and showed a wire from Barrow saying to turn Pipgras over to me. I explained right away that I planned to use him to kill off all the good hitters in the league by busting them with pitched balls.

"We jumped back to Nashville that night to play a Sunday game against Atlanta the next day and I told George on the train that I had telegraphed ahead to the papers that Pipgras would pitch the next day and I knew he could beat Atlanta. Long before we got to Nashville he knew it too, and the next day he shut 'em out.

"He pitched a lot of baseball for me that year. Sometimes I would have him in there three or four days in a row, finishing a game here, starting one there, and maybe pitching an inning or two somewhere in the middle. It was good for him and look at him today.

Ed Too Beats Atlanta

"And now I have his younger brother, and Ed has something too. I had him out in the Cotton States League and he was with Pensacola until I recalled him late in the season last year.

"Atlanta came along soon after he came back to the club and I had a little talk with him before the game.

"'Ed,' I said to him, 'that's the club out there that turned George loose. He would be mighty proud to read in Sporting News that you beat 'em.'

"He did."

Jimmy has a reputation among his fellow managers of having three

No Excuse for Heehey

Since the unsatisfactory result of the first big number of his heavy-weight elimination tournament between Sharkey and Tom Heehey, the public may be inclined to figure Tex Rickard in a tight place as the time rapidly approaches for him to get two opponents for Gene Tunney's summer campaign.

Sharkey and Heehey were the two best cards in the rather mediocre herd of heavyweights that Rickard had to choose from, and if the bout ended with either one a decisive winner the difficulties of the promoter would have been reduced some, at least.

The form, however, shown by the principals in what was to have been the star number of the eliminations made the customers present feel that neither one will do as a part of a record-breaking attraction.

For Sharkey, however, there may be a good excuse. He had been out of the ring for a long time and had had not fought since he was pumped in the tummy by Jack Dempsey and it is reasonable to believe that if he had had a fight under his belt he would have made a better fight. But for Heehey there is no excuse.

His possibilities are limited only to 20 rounds, where his stamina might enable him to outlast any of clubs all the time, one playing, one going and one coming.

"You need plenty of players," he said, "and since you can't keep a long string of them on hand in the minors you have to have some of them coming and going."

"The Bushiest Busher"

"Big league stars who are all through in the big show are good as gate attractions in the minors, for the fans like to point them out and say, 'He was in the World Series,' and 'He hit 300 five years in a row in the big leagues,' but these boys are smart and take care of themselves so you can't get as much baseball playing out of them as you could use. They get a lot of base hits but some of them won't take a chance on getting hurt.

"Now the bushers don't mind getting hurt. They'll get killed if it will win the ball game. I have an outfielder on my club who is the bushiest busher you ever saw, but say, what pepper he has! He plays a deep outfield but he'll beat a third baseman to the bench.

"His name?"

"I'll tell you when I sell him to the big league."

HOUSTON, 1928 DEMOCRATIS HOST, FACES HEAVY TASK CONFIDENTLY

Houston and all of Texas confront without qualms the task of playing host next June to the first democratic national convention ever to meet in the Lone Star state. Above is the imposing skyline of the city of 300,000 persons, and below are two men who will play important roles in preparations for the gathering: Dan L. Moody (left), 35-year-old governor of Texas, and Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee.

HOUSTON, Jan. 18.—The city of Houston, chosen by the democrats as the scene of their 1928 nominating convention, has no misgivings about its capacity for entertaining a throng of 30,000 persons next June, although it is one of the smallest cities chosen in recent years to play host to such a gathering.

Four other cities that have entertained national political conventions since 1880 were smaller than Houston, which today claims 300,000 inhabitants.

Kansas City had only 164,000 population when it was host to the democrats in 1900, Indianapolis entertained the republicans in 1892 when it was a city of 170,000, Denver was the democratic meeting place in 1908 when it had only 210,000 inhabitants, and when the democrats went to Cincinnati in 1880 they met in a city of but 255,000.

Democratic delegates and visitors to Houston during the week of June 26 will share such hospitality as few gatherings of the sort have experienced, for they will literally be taken into the homes of Houston people if hotel facilities are strained.

Houston has a municipal auditorium seating 5,000 persons and capable of holding another thousand, on such an occasion as this, in a junior auditorium. If this seems insufficient the city is willing to house a new meeting place to house the thousand full-fledged delegates, their alternates and the attendant throng.

That its hotels can care for 15,000 visitors Houston has shown, and Galveston is only 51 miles away with its additional facilities, linked to Houston by fast electric and steam lines.

Houston is a bit proud of its own record. It has grown to its present size from a city of 45,000 in 1900, set with tiny pearls, which hung over one of her shoulders. "And they grabbed whatever it was hanging round her neck, and broke the chain doing it. They weren't overlooking anything, or losing any time. A small, gentlemanly job. Nice and refined."

"Where's the Medical Examiner?" asked Markham.

"He's coming," Heath told him. "You can't get Doc Doremus to go anywhere without his breakfast."

"He may find something else—something that doesn't show."

"There's plenty showing for me," declared Heath. "Look at this apartment. It wouldn't be much worse if a Kansas cyclone had struck it."

We turned from the depressing spectacle of the dead girl and moved toward the center of the room.

"Be careful not to touch anything, Mr. Markham," warned Heath. "I've sent for the fingerprint experts—they'll be here any minute now."

due in large measure to its ship canal completed in 1920. With half a hundred steamships making it a port of call, and with an export tonnage ranking ninth in the country, it has become a bustling modern city with little of the repose of the old south.

Representatives of the Texas city feel that by winning for their metropolis the first national convention of a major party to be held in Texas, Houston has thrust another feather into its caps and brought further recognition of its record of expansion.

Vance looked up in mock astonishment.

"Finger-prints? You don't say—really! How delightful!—Imagine a Johnnie in this enlightened day leaving his finger-prints for you to find."

"All crooks aren't clever, Mr. Vance," declared Heath combatively.

"Oh dear no! They'd never be apprehended if they were. But, after all, Sergeant, even an authentic finger-print merely means that the person who made it was dallying around at some time or other. It doesn't indicate guilt."

"Maybe so," conceded Heath doggedly. "But I'm here to tell you that if I get good honest-to-God finger-prints outa this devastated area, it's not going so easy with the bird that made 'em."

Vance appeared to be shocked. "You positively terrify me, Sergeant. Henceforth I shall adopt mittens as a permanent addition to my attire. I'm always handling the furniture and the teacups and the various knickknacks in the houses where I call, don't y' know?"

Markham interposed himself at this point, and suggested they make a tour of inspection while waiting for the Medical Examiner.

"They didn't add anything much to the usual methods," Heath pointed out. "Killed the girl, and then ripped things wide open."

Heath had become acquainted with Vance during the investigation of the Benson murder case two months previously.

Student Union---

will contain rest rooms for those women students for whom the medical service has prescribed regular periods of rest and individually prescribed corrective gymnastics. The wings will also contain dancing floors and swimming pools for exhibition purposes and regular classes and office space for the staff of the women's athletic department. Other offices will be available for organizations of women students.

The union proper will be included in a third building. This will be a dual structure of two buildings connected by an arcade in which outdoor meetings and gatherings may be held in the mild Texas climate for much of the year. Both buildings will contain lounging rooms for men and women, reading rooms, game rooms, etc. In one of the units there will be an auditorium seating about 1,500 persons for the use of dramatic clubs, debating societies and similar organizations, which are now forced to use theatres and auditoriums away from the campus. A dance floor large enough to care for small social affairs will also be provided here. In the other unit of this building will be office space for all worthwhile campus organizations, the student self-government and honor councils, and committee rooms for student meetings.

The project was designed from recommendations made by a committee of the presidents of all campus organizations to meet the needs of all interest, athletic, cultural, literary, dramatic, social, forensic, and scholarly, and to correct as far as possible the lack of common interests among the students or the school. Two of the buildings will be in use every day of the school year and has been estimated that there are more than 800 functions each year that would require one of the auditoriums.

Greater Activity Is Planned by the W. T. C. C. in 1928

STAMFORD, Jan. 19.—With greater activity the keynote for 1928, the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has launched its New Year's program with four epochal meetings scheduled for this month, the first of which is an important session of the executive board to be held in Fort Worth, January 19.

A complete outline for work of the year, plans for the tenth annual convention of the organization, ratification of suggestions tendered by the staff of the West Texas Chamber and other items are listed to receive attention of the directorate at Fort Worth. The cream of West Texas' business and professional men are on this directorate, which numbers 98 members, and a large attendance is indicated by acceptances already in.

Immediately following the executive board meeting, the Poultry and Dairy bureau of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will hold a general conference of all persons interested in agricultural work at Wichita Falls. Since members of the Poultry and Dairy Bureau and committee of the organization are likewise directors, a full attendance is expected at Wichita, January 20 is the date set for the meet.

More than five hundred oil and gas men of the West have been invited to attend the session of the Oil and Gas bureau of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to be held in San Angelo, January 25. Many vital questions of this industry are up for consideration and all response is being given to the call for the meeting.

The 1928 district convention season of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will open at Dublin the latter part of January when the Oil Belt District convention meets. The gathering last year was held at Abilene and was a record-breaker since this district is one of the most thickly populated in the West Texas territory. A big representation is therefore expected at Dublin.

Judge Ben S. Baldwin and W. H. Doyle transacted business in Amarillo today.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Logan have returned to Lubbock from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. I. F. Ryder.

Mrs. G. W. Buschong, 1012 South East St. Bloomington, Ill., says in her own home paper, the Bloomington Pantagraph: "Lithiated Buchu tablets relieved me of bladder weakness. Was distributed 20 to 25 times a night. I feel I am well, I tried many treatments, submitted to operation and much torture. In one week after taking Lithiated Buchu I could notice improvement. I will be glad to tell or write my experience."
Lithiated buchu is not a patent medicine. The formula is on the bottle. It cleanses the bladder as soon as it is used. The tablets cost 2c each at all drug stores, Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at Fatheree Drug Co.
