Southern Baptists: Rescind appointment of gay ambassador

By JULIA LIEBLICH
 AP Religion Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Homosexuality dominated the final day of the Southern Baptist Convention's annual meeting, as members criticized the appointment of the nation's first openly gay ambassador and cheered football great Reggie White for again condemning homosexuality.

"God said it, not Reggie White," the player turned preacher told the audience Wednesday. "Leviticus 18:22 says, 'Do not lie with a man as one lies with a woman.'"

The applause at the Georgia Dome was thunderous. Last year, White declared homosexuality a sin when he addressed the Wisconsin Legislature.

Earlier Wednesday, members of the nation's largest Protestant denomination voted overwhelmingly to urge President Clinton to rescind James Hormel's appointment as ambassador to Luxembourg.

"We need to speak out and say we do not want an avowed homosexual to represent the U.S.," said the Rev. Wiley Drake of Buena Park, Calif., who wrote the 1997 resolution calling on Southern Baptists to boycott Disney because of its gay-friendly policies.

Hormel, a former dean of the University of Chicago law school, used part of his family's meat-packing fortune to help create the Human Rights Campaign, the nation's largest gay and lesbian political group. Senators had held up Hormel's nomination since 1997, but Clinton appointed him while the Senate was in recess, angering religious conservatives.

David Smith, a spokesman for the Human Rights Campaign, defended Hormel and called him a qualified and honorable man.

"It's become an annual convention event: devote a day to gay bashing," Smith said. The convention also rebuked Clinton — who is a Southern Baptist — for proclaiming June as Gay and Lesbian Pride Month.

Previous conventions have been marked by tension between moderates and conservatives and have produced controversial pronouncements like the Disney boycott and the decision to target Jews for proselytizing.

This meeting was far from contentious, as many moderates stayed home. The Rev. Paige Patterson, a conservative, was elected to a second one-year term as president without opposition. About 11,000 of the nation's 16 million Southern Baptists attended.

Patterson said members — who are mostly suburban and rural whites — should increase recruitment in inner cities. Chicago, Phoenix, Las Vegas, Boston, Philadelphia and Seattle will be targeted over the next three years.

Southern Baptists also approved a resolution urging Congress, NATO and the United Nations to halt "genocide and ethnic cleansing" in Kosovo.

Fort Worth garbage strike ends after three weeks

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A three-week garbage strike is over in Fort Worth. Striking Teamsters members have agreed to a three-year contract with Waste Management Inc. that union officials say improves pay, sick leave, training, grievance and promotion procedures. But the union failed to win a pension or retirement savings plan, and Waste Management has replaced some of the striking drivers. Mike Williams, the company's labor relations director, said 42 drivers will get first crack at job vacancies.

"It wasn't the best proposal," said John Shorts, business agent for Teamsters Union Local 767 in Forest Hill, a Fort Worth suburb.

The Fort Worth workers once had a 401(k) retirement savings plan. However, that was eliminated from the initial contract after workers voted down company offers on May 21 and May 28, Williams said.

DREDGE

pump that will help pull the silt, rock and sediment to the retention station.

"The booster pump is a lot more expensive than Forest Service or I thought," Wright said.

Inquiries were made about getting an electric motor pump but Wright said Southwestern Public Service can't provide enough power for a pump that large. Diesel pump prices ranged from $30,000 to $80,000 depending on the horsepower.

He said the Forest Service hopes to eventually remove all the silt build-up to get the lake back to its original depth. Wright estimated that could mean removing five-to-eight feet of silt.

While the Forest Service owns the dredge, part of the agreement with the county is that Gray County will provide the people to operate the dredge. While commissioners discussed the possibility of hiring two people full time they decided to use regular county employees, at least at first. Each precinct will donate people to the operation as it can.

Wright's opinion the dredging may take eight-to-10 years for the 316-acre lake includes time when there will be no one available to operate the equipment.

In other lake related business, Wright said the concessionaire has reported lake usage is up this year since the new shower/bath and other improvements were made. The Forest Service and Gray County are exploring the possibility of running electricity to a underused camping area near the dam in an effort to increase usage.

QUEEN

es provided by a stock contractor. When the girls arrive in San Antonio, a drawing for the horses will be held.

During the week's activities each contestant will be required to give a prepared three-minute speech about the area she represents. This area of competition will be easy for Mandy as Pampa is the area she represents and it is her home.

All contestants will be required to field impromptu rodeo questions to test their knowledge of rules and background in the sport. The girls must also answer impromptu personality questions which help the judges evaluate the girls' personalities and standards. Other judging sessions include a word association session with the contestants required to use rodeo terminology to describe the words given them by the judges. The contestants will also be evaluated on their knowledge of current events.

Contestants will be treated to a fashion show, a dance, dinners and a swim party during their week's activities.

Mandy must have eight dresses and three pants outfits for the week's competition. Helping to design her dresses and pant sets for the competition has been Dana Rideout who is the mother of the current Miss Rodeo Texas Danyelle Rideout.

Local horsewoman Betty Wilson coached Mandy for the 1998 local competition and has been coaching her for the state pageant.

The young woman has competed in numerous Tri-State high school rodeos as she is a junior at Pampa High. A member of the National Barrel Horse Association, she participated in the state NBHA in 1998. She qualified this year, but it conflicts with the state pageant. She has participated in many rodeos around the panhandle and West Texas area as well as in Oklahoma as she is also a member of the West Texas Barrel Racers Association.

She also is a member of 4-H and has participated in many 4-H rodeos and play days, and most recently a horsemanship clinic. She also has participated in horse judging as a Future Farmers of America member at PHS.

The young cowgirl is also a member of the American Quarter Horse Association and the Wrangler Star Program.

Mandy's parents and sister will be on-hand while she is competing in San Antonio. However, the contestants will not have contact with their families during the week as they will be sharing accommodations with fellow contestants. The girls will be responsible for getting themselves ready for all activities and competitions during the week.

The Pampa cowgirl is looking forward to next week. "It will be a week of fun and a time of meeting new people and making friends," she said. "It has been well worth the time and money for this pageant." Entering the state pageant was an option for Mandy, and she is very glad she made that choice.

As Bob and Nancy Poole prepare to take their daughter to South Texas for the pageant, her mother says winning the local pageant has "opened many doors for Mandy." Mandy and her family attended the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, Nev., in December.

While at the Finals, Mandy watched Danyelle Rideout represent Texas in the competition for National Rodeo Queen. She also was thrilled to meet Mary Show, a former national title holder. The group also saw the first snow in Las Vegas in many years while they were there.

Nancy Poole said her daughter has gained many positive experiences during the past 11 months, and has especially enjoyed working with kids. "She is always striving to pay attention to those younger kids," said Poole. She also noted the first runner up in the contest in 1998 was Nicole Bruton, a close friend of Mandy's, who is also encouraging Mandy.

Mandy's sister, Megan, and grandmother Florence McCunn, will be joining Bob and Nancy in San Antonio to encourage Mandy in her endeavor.

As the young cowgirl prepares to leave for the competition, she is receiving the best wishes of the Pampa community. Win, lose or draw, Mandy will be back in Pampa for the 1999 Top O' Texas Rodeo as she ends her year. Either way it goes, she is planning on being a contestant in many more pageants.

Southern Baptists: Rescind appointment of gay ambassador

By JULIA LIEBLICH
 AP Religion Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Homosexuality dominated the final day of the Southern Baptist Convention's annual meeting, as members criticized the appointment of the nation's first openly gay ambassador and cheered football great Reggie White for again condemning homosexuality.

"God said it, not Reggie White," the player turned preacher told the audience Wednesday. "Leviticus 18:22 says, 'Do not lie with a man as one lies with a woman.'"

The applause at the Georgia Dome was thunderous. Last year, White declared homosexuality a sin when he addressed the Wisconsin Legislature.

Earlier Wednesday, members of the nation's largest Protestant denomination voted overwhelmingly to urge President Clinton to rescind James Hormel's appointment as ambassador to Luxembourg.

"We need to speak out and say we do not want an avowed homosexual to represent the U.S.," said the Rev. Wiley Drake of Buena Park, Calif., who wrote the 1997 resolution calling on Southern Baptists to boycott Disney because of its gay-friendly policies.

Hormel, a former dean of the University of Chicago law school, used part of his family's meat-packing fortune to help create the Human Rights Campaign, the nation's largest gay and lesbian political group. Senators had held up Hormel's nomination since 1997, but Clinton appointed him while the Senate was in recess, angering religious conservatives.

David Smith, a spokesman for the Human Rights Campaign, defended Hormel and called him a qualified and honorable man.

"It's become an annual convention event: devote a day to gay bashing," Smith said.

The convention also rebuked Clinton — who is a Southern Baptist — for proclaiming June as Gay and Lesbian Pride Month.

Previous conventions have been marked by tension between moderates and conservatives and have produced controversial pronouncements like the Disney boycott and the decision to target Jews for proselytizing.

This meeting was far from contentious, as many moderates stayed home. The Rev. Paige Patterson, a conservative, was elected to a second one-year term as president without opposition. About 11,000 of the nation's 16 million Southern Baptists attended.

Patterson said members — who are mostly suburban and rural whites — should increase recruitment in inner cities. Chicago, Phoenix, Las Vegas, Boston, Philadelphia and Seattle will be targeted over the next three years.

Southern Baptists also approved a resolution urging Congress, NATO and the United Nations to halt "genocide and ethnic cleansing" in Kosovo.

director, said 42 drivers will get first crack at job vacancies.

"It wasn't the best proposal," said John Shorts, business agent for Teamsters Union Local 767 in Forest Hill, a Fort Worth suburb.

The Fort Worth workers once had a 401(k) retirement savings plan. However, that was eliminated from the initial contract after workers voted down company offers on May 21 and May 28, Williams said.

Fort Worth garbage strike ends after three weeks

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A three-week garbage strike is over in Fort Worth.

Striking Teamsters members have agreed to a three-year contract with Waste Management Inc. that union officials say improves pay, sick leave, training, grievance and promotion procedures.

But the union failed to win a pension or retirement savings plan, and Waste Management has replaced some of the striking drivers.

pump that will help pull the silt, rock and sediment to the retention station.

"The booster pump is a lot more expensive than Forest Service or I thought," Wright said.

Inquiries were made about getting an electric motor pump but Wright said Southwestern Public Service can't provide enough power for a pump that large. Diesel pump prices ranged from $30,000 to $80,000 depending on the horsepower.

He said the Forest Service hopes to eventually remove all the silt build-up to get the lake back to its original depth. Wright estimated that could mean removing five-to-eight feet of silt.

While the Forest Service owns the dredge, part of the agreement with the county is that Gray County will provide the people to operate the dredge. While commissioners discussed the possibility of hiring two people full time they decided to use regular county employees, at least at first. Each precinct will donate people to the operation as it can.

Wright's opinion the dredging may take eight-to-10 years for the 316-acre lake includes time when there will be no one available to operate the equipment.

In other lake related business, Wright said the concessionaire has reported lake usage is up this year since the new shower/bath and other improvements were made. The Forest Service and Gray County are exploring the possibility of running electricity to a underused camping area near the dam in an effort to increase usage.

Justin Sober, 22, of Pampa, remains in Gray County Jail on charges in connection to the May 30 incident. He was charged with intoxicated manslaughter in connection with the death of Sehorn and two counts of intoxicated assault in connection with the injuries received by Horton and Reames in the wreck. Sober is also being held without bond on a probation violation charge on a previous charge being driving while intoxicated in Donley County.

Sober received a broken leg in the wreck in which troopers said none of the occupants were wearing a seat belt. There was however, a driver's side airbag that deployed.

es provided by a stock contractor. When the girls arrive in San Antonio, a drawing for the horses will be held.

During the week's activities each contestant will be required to give a prepared three-minute speech about the area she represents. This area of competition will be easy for Mandy as Pampa is the area she represents and it is her home.

All contestants will be required to field impromptu rodeo questions to test their knowledge of rules and background in the sport. The girls must also answer impromptu personality questions which help the judges evaluate the girls' personalities and standards. Other judging sessions include a word association session with the contestants required to use rodeo terminology to describe the words given them by the judges. The contestants will also be evaluated on their knowledge of current events.

Contestants will be treated to a fashion show, a dance, dinners and a swim party during their week's activities.

Mandy must have eight dresses and three pants outfits for the week's competition. Helping to design her dresses and pant sets for the competition has been Dana Rideout who is the mother of the current Miss Rodeo Texas Danyelle Rideout.

Local horsewoman Betty Wilson coached Mandy for the 1998 local competition and has been coaching her for the state pageant.

The young woman has competed in numerous Tri-State high school rodeos as she is a junior at Pampa High. A member of the National Barrel Horse Association, she participated in the state NBHA in 1998. She qualified this year, but it conflicts with the state pageant. She has participated in many rodeos around the panhandle and West Texas area as well as in Oklahoma as she is also a member of the West Texas Barrel Racers Association.

She also is a member of 4-H and has participated in many 4-H rodeos and play days, and most recently a horsemanship clinic. She also has participated in horse judging as a Future Farmers of America member at PHS.

The young cowgirl is also a member of the American Quarter Horse Association and the Wrangler Star Program.

Mandy's parents and sister will be on-hand while she is competing in San Antonio. However, the contestants will not have contact with their families during the week as they will be sharing accommodations with fellow contestants. The girls will be responsible for getting themselves ready for all activities and competitions during the week.

The Pampa cowgirl is looking forward to next week. "It will be a week of fun and a time of meeting new people and making friends," she said. "It has been well worth the time and money for this pageant." Entering the state pageant was an option for Mandy, and she is very glad she made that choice.

As Bob and Nancy Poole prepare to take their daughter to South Texas for the pageant, her mother says winning the local pageant has "opened many doors for Mandy." Mandy and her family attended the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, Nev., in December.

While at the Finals, Mandy watched Danyelle Rideout represent Texas in the competition for National Rodeo Queen. She also was thrilled to meet Mary Show, a former national title holder. The group also saw the first snow in Las Vegas in many years while they were there.

Nancy Poole said her daughter has gained many positive experiences during the past 11 months, and has especially enjoyed working with kids. "She is always striving to pay attention to those younger kids," said Poole. She also noted the first runner up in the contest in 1998 was Nicole Bruton, a close friend of Mandy's, who is also encouraging Mandy.

Mandy's sister, Megan, and grandmother Florence McCunn, will be joining Bob and Nancy in San Antonio to encourage Mandy in her endeavor.

As the young cowgirl prepares to leave for the competition, she is receiving the best wishes of the Pampa community. Win, lose or draw, Mandy will be back in Pampa for the 1999 Top O' Texas Rodeo as she ends her year. Either way it goes, she is planning on being a contestant in many more pageants.

Grandchildren are 'grand'

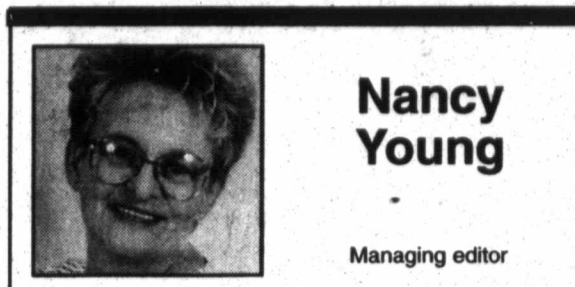

I went back in time last weekend. I kept all three of my youngest daughter's children from Friday evening to Sunday afternoon as she was having to work all weekend. I thought I'd just help her by keeping the "little darlings."

As they are 4 years, 2 and 1/2 years and 12 months, I was a little nervous about having all three at the same time. Then I remembered, my first three were born over a time span of 2 and 1/2 years. Then I remembered it had been 30 years, and I became queasy again.

Nevertheless, once I picked the children up on my way home from work Friday evening, I thought, this isn't too bad. Clad in their swimsuits, the trio was ready for our first stop which was a swimming party being held in honor of their cousin, Cade, who was celebrating his first birthday.

Paige, who is three weeks senior to Cade, wasn't at all excited to see him as she spied his toddler swimming pool going into the back yard. She immediately nose dived in the pool and quickly succeeded in splashing water on all the adults.

Her older brother, Christian, followed right behind her. Both wanted to remain in the water during the entire party, even after attempts by me and the other adults to coax them out to eat hamburgers, ice cream and cake. Not these two kids- they weren't buying it- they wanted to swim. And swim they did! Their older sister, Peyton, enjoyed swimming, but she also liked helping cousin Cade open his presents. She thinks she has to be Mother Hen to all the little ones-she's also a little bossy, too.

After no major incidents during the party, it was time to leave. When we arrived at my home these three were not a bit tired. I was, but they weren't. Immediately as we drove in the driveway, the teens in my neighborhood surfaced. These girls think these little ones are "so cute." I was ready for a break, and thought maybe, just maybe, the little ones would wind down soon.

As the sun went down, the three little ones were forced to stop playing and go into the house. Paige soon began rubbing her eyes and into the baby bed she went. Christian and Peyton, being the "older" children, wanted to play games. After about an hour I got them talked into going to bed. I don't know who went to sleep first, but I slept well.

As the morning sun came up, I thought "not so soon." However, Paige, Christian and Peyton were ready for another day.

After getting them all bathed and dressed (which was no easy task), we had errands to run. Off we went to the local discount store, cosmetics store, and supermarket. Miraculously, there were no earth shattering occurrences, no injuries, and no fights.

I did make some purchases at the grocery store which I normally don't buy-pizza, cokes, cereal, ice cream, etc.

The kids laughed and played, and were exhausted. So was I.

When their mother came to get them Sunday afternoon, I noticed she was eying me closely. "Are you okay?", she asked. I assured her I was fine, noting I was an experienced mother of 33 years and raised four children. She just kept looking at me.

When she arrived home with the children, she called and again inquired as to how I was. I told her it had gone great and I was fine and had really enjoyed the children. I just didn't tell her how deafeningly silent the house felt after those children left. I also didn't tell her I had fallen asleep on the couch.

Grandchildren are "grand."

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers: The Monitor (McAllen) on Tom Landry's illness and donor awareness:

People throughout the Rio Grande Valley surely are glad that coaching legend Tom Landry has successfully completed the first stage of treatment for leukemia.

Landry, a Mission native, began chemotherapy in May for treatment of the disease, a cancer that affects the blood system. The former Dallas Cowboys head coach, who holds the third-best record in National Football League history, is convalescing at his Dallas-area home.

With Landry's battle with leukemia raising awareness of the disease, many people might ask what can be done to help either the coach or anyone else fighting the malady. The answer is that little needs to be done, but that little bit can be of great help.

Leukemia is fought by traditional cancer-fighting methods, including chemical and radiation therapy. Because the disease affects blood cell production in the bone marrow, transfusions of marrow or other stem cells from umbilical cord blood or donated peripheral blood can be effective treatments.

Blood matches for such transfusions must be exact. For this reason, the best chances leukemia patients have is for the greatest number of potential donors to sign onto a registry.

The process is simple. People interested in donating marrow add themselves to the registry and give a small amount of blood for typing. Shari Miller, coordinator at the South Texas Blood and Tissue Center in San Antonio, said only about two tablespoons of blood are taken for the initial test.

If a match is made, the potential donor is contacted to determine if the person still wants to give. More blood samples are taken for more exact matching, and the donor undergoes an orientation session about the procedure. The donor can back out at any time.

Miller noted that the removal of marrow procedure normally takes 45-55 minutes and is performed under general anesthesia. A small cut is made in the back of the pelvic bone, roughly above the back pocket line.

"People need to know that the incision is nowhere near the spine," Miller said. "For some reason some people think this is a dangerous procedure."

Donors generally feel some pain for a couple of days to a couple of weeks, she said, adding that pain relievers are given after the procedure.

"It's nothing major," she added. "We've had 78 people donate since 1991, and all have said they would do it again."

The greatest problem the center has, she said, is getting enough people on the registry. She noted that about 3,000 people every day search the registry for a possible bone marrow match. And even though 3.1 million people already have signed up, only 9.3 percent of them are Hispanic.

That figure is critical, because one is more likely to find an exact blood match within ones own ethnic group.

Many people who join the bone marrow registry are never called to donate, because an exact match isn't made. But the people who do donate will know that they have given someone a chance at a longer and healthier life.

The Dallas Morning News on reducing airplane pollution:

Dallas-Fort Worth — the region comprising Dallas, Tarrant, Collin and Denton counties — must comply with federal clean air standards, or else. The "or else" is tight federal restrictions on industrial development.

For the region to comply, everyone must do his part.

But who will ask commercial airlines to do their part?

The question is highly relevant because airplanes contribute significantly to the region's air pollution but are not subject to the same type of federally mandated emissions controls as cars.

The success of Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport, the region's greatest economic asset, hangs in the balance. The Federal Aviation Administration could halt parts of the airport's planned $2.2 billion expansion unless it meets its state-mandated clean-air targets, which it cannot under current circumstances.

That's because the state's plan for cleaning the region's air holds the airport responsible for all emissions generated at the airport — even those of airlines. But the airport lacks power to control the airlines' emissions.

Bills proposed by Texas Sen. Chris Harris and Rep. Toby Goodman, both Arlington Republicans, would have absolved the airport from responsibility for emissions that it does not directly control. The bills were overly broad, but the general principle behind them deserved to be made law.

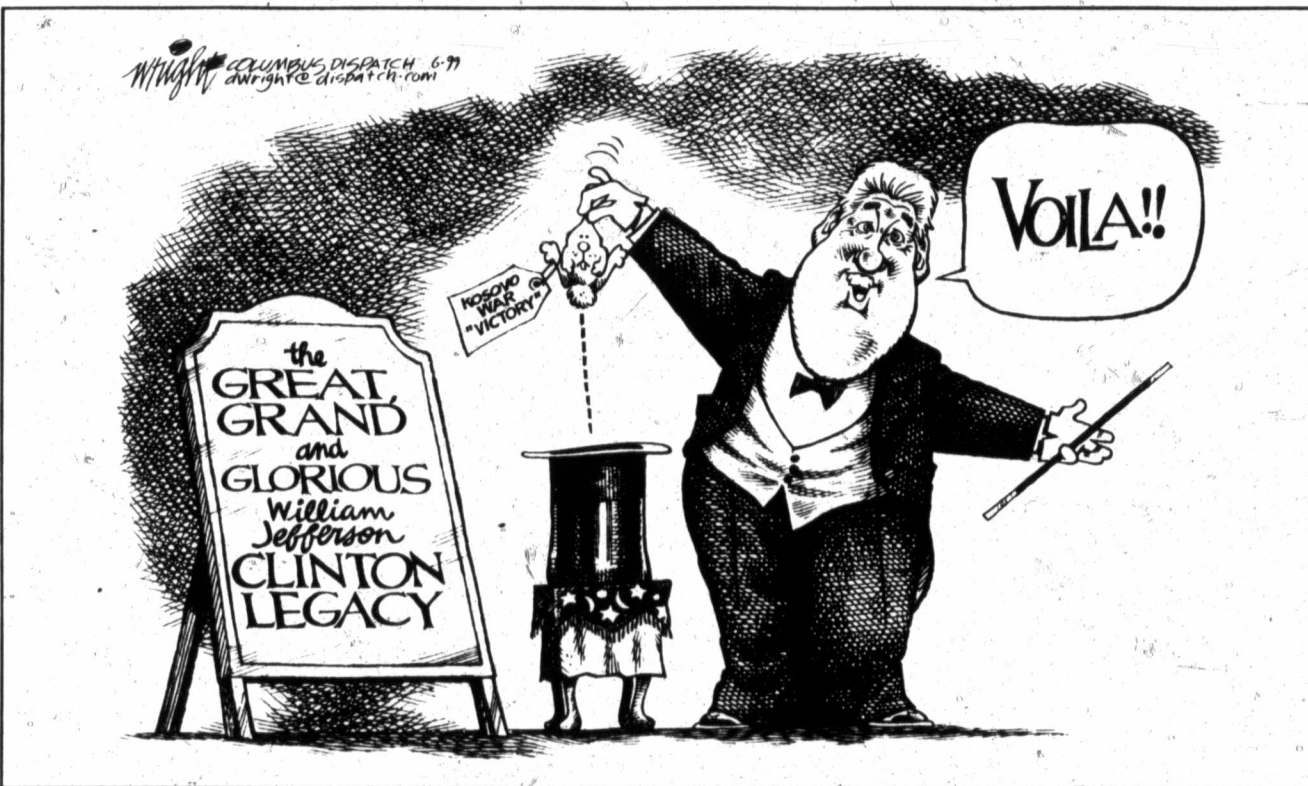

The bills died in committee, victims of the growing awareness that the region must reduce its pollution and the impression that the airport was trying to avoid its responsibilities.

Having lost that battle, the airport is asking the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to amend the state's plan.

The commission should absolve the airport from responsibility for the airlines' emissions.

But the problem of airline-generated pollution will not go away. Airlines still must reduce air pollution, if they do not, greater sacrifices will be required of motorists and other businesses.

The regulatory solution lies in Washington. The Environmental Protection Agency sets the pollution standards for airplane engines; the Federal Aviation Administration enforces them. Only Washington can require airlines, and jet-engine manufacturers, to reduce their emissions. For the sake of breathers in Dallas-Fort Worth and other heavily polluted cities, they need to talk.

Conservatives are losing ground

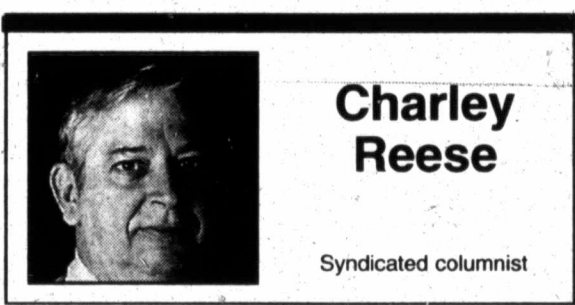

Paul Weyrich, a decent Washington conservative, sent out a private letter after the Senate failed to impeach Bill Clinton. In essence, he said conservatives have lost the political war.

The reason "is that politics itself has failed. And politics has failed because of the collapse of the culture. The culture we are living in becomes an ever-wider sewer. In truth, I think we're caught up in a cultural collapse of historic proportions, a collapse so great that it simply overwhelms politics," he wrote.

I think he's right. I've long believed that the claim there is a conservative majority in America is a myth. I don't believe there is. I also think the claim by Samuel Francis, another conservative, that there is a corrupt dominant culture but also a traditional culture is wishful thinking. Where is this traditional culture in 1999? I haven't been able to find it.

The traditional American culture was first of all Christian. Where is there any evidence that this is still a Christian culture? What Christian influence do you see in art, the movies, television? Christmas is even banned from government schools.

I know about the numbers, but there are more professing than practicing. And much of what claims to be Christian is Christian in name only and otherwise unrecognizable. (If you wish to see a Christian service as it was practiced at the time of the apostles, visit an Orthodox church.

Charley Reese

Syndicated columnist

The Orthodox church is the most unchanged of all the Christian denominations.)

Another key aspect of traditional American culture was belief in minimal government. Save for a few libertarians, who could hold a national meeting in a small hotel, where are these Americans who believe in minimal government? I can find big-government conservatives and big-government liberals, big-government Republicans and big-government Democrats, but I can't find very many minimal-government folks hiding under any label.

Traditional Americans believed the Constitution was a compact among sovereign states, that the federal government created by the compact was merely the agent of the states, and its powers were absolutely and strictly limited. Where will you find Americans who believe that anymore? Not in either of the major parties. Certainly not in Washington.

Greatest events of the 20th century

Somebody recently asked, "So, what are the greatest stories of the 20th century?"

It wasn't asked at a particularly good time, so your reporter mumbled, "Darned if I know. Haven't really thought about it." And, I then thought to myself, "All of this 'greatest of the century' stuff is getting pretty boring. There's too much of it."

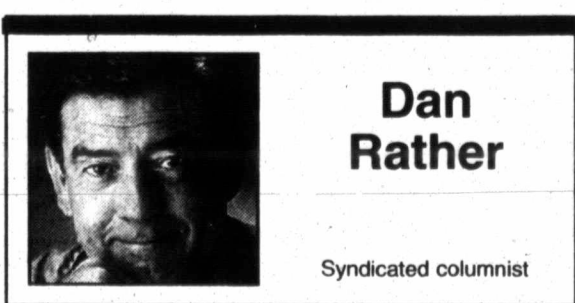

But since then, traveling around the country on reporting assignments, a book tour and speaking to college students, your correspondent has been humbled (as often happens). It turns out to be one of the questions I'm asked most often. People seem to be genuinely interested in recollecting the great stories and events of this century.

And not just in America. Hunkering down in an old Belgrade hotel during a bombing raid blackout a few weeks ago, two English-speaking Yugoslav students smiled and asked the exact same question.

"Most important stories of the century — whaddya think?" Sure, they were eager to cloak their understandable nervousness about the bombing. But they seemed to really want to know.

They got an off-hand answer. Well, let's see. Man lands on the moon and machines made by humans land on Mars — the whole opening of the cosmos to exploration has got to be one of them.

"The population explosion, the tremendous growth in the number of humans on Earth in the 20th century probably is another. It gets less attention than a lot of stories. It may be one of the most under-reported important stories of the century, but let's not underestimate its importance.

Dan Rather

Syndicated columnist

"When the 20th century began, the world's population was an estimated 1.6 billion. As this century ends, it's close to 6 billion. In other words, the population has grown more in this century than it did in all the previous centuries combined.

"And the growth is continuing at a rapid rate. If that isn't one of the big stories, I don't know what is."

Somebody lighted a candle, and then the conversation continued.

"Any other ideas?" came the question.

Answer: "Well, the development of nuclear and then thermonuclear power might be one. Invention of the microchip? Maybe.

"The rise of the power of the state at the expense of the freedom of the individual — and all that this led to including Hitler's fascism and

People are trying but will fail to amend the Constitution just so they can make it illegal to burn or otherwise desecrate the flag. Listen, if it is safe to burn the flag in public, it's pointless to make it illegal. In the traditional American culture, you couldn't burn a flag in public because passersby would stop you and probably beat you to a pulp, if not lynch you.

You can't impose by law values on a people that they don't already have. I think this is one of the things Weyrich has realized. Culture comes first, and politics are a byproduct of culture — an effect, not a cause. Therefore, you cannot use politics and legislation to create a culture. A culture produces the politics, not the other way around.

I'm convinced that if the majority of Americans had to rewrite the 23rd Psalm, it would read: "The government is my shepherd and I shall not want." I think the American people today are by and large socialist and by and large decadent. Most of those not decadent themselves are tolerant of decadence. I also believe that government schools have succeeded in doing what Hanna Arendt said totalitarian schools do — make it impossible for people to form and hold strong convictions about anything.

Any hope for America's future will come from church and hearthside, if it comes at all — not from politics. Extant traditional Americans have indeed lost the political war.

the Holocaust, and also including the rise and fall of Communism — certainly was one of the long, ongoing key stories of this century."

And so it went through the night.

Since then, there's been plenty of time to make a longer list.

There have been so many medical and scientific breakthroughs these past 100 years. You have to ask yourself if one or more of these shouldn't be considered.

For example, vaccines that have practically eliminated such scourges as smallpox and polio entirely, and in most industrialized nations, yellow fever.

And what about the pill? Development of birth control pills revolutionized the way the world thinks about sex, gave women more control over their lives than ever before in history and led in no small way to deep changes in the way women think about themselves.

The whole communications revolution, led by 20th-century development of movies, radio, television and the Internet, has to get some consideration on any "great stories of the century" list.

And so it goes to this day, adding and subtracting nominations. After initial reluctance, this journalist now plays this mind game eagerly.

Whether future historians will agree with anybody's nominations made here near the end of the century is interesting to ponder. In the meantime, it's fun to guess.

And believe me, your guess is as good as mine.

FBI arrests longtime Symbionese Liberation Army fugitive Olson

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — In more than a decade of community theater work, the reviewers were almost always kind to Sara Jane Olson.

One singled her out as the strongest performer in a 1990 production of "King Lear." Another praised her "vibrant" 1993 performance in "All's Well That Ends Well."

The critics had no idea what an actress she was. If the FBI is right, Sara Jane Olson — a 52-year-old mother of three who lived with her doctor husband in an ivy-covered home in an upscale neighborhood — is really Kathleen Ann Soliah, a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army, the band of 1970s radicals who kidnapped Patricia Hearst.

Agents arrested the fugitive Wednesday after receiving tips from viewers of "America's Most Wanted," which featured her in a recent broadcast. The FBI offered a $20,000 reward for Ms. Soliah last month, on the 25th anniversary of a Los Angeles shootout that killed six SLA members.

Ms. Soliah has been wanted since 1976, when she was indicted in Los Angeles for murder conspiracy and explosives charges for allegedly placing pipe bombs under two police cars. The bombs did not explode.

She was to be arraigned today. California is expected to seek extradition.

In a federal warrant drawn up this year, authorities said that in 1984 her husband was aware of her true name and fugitive status. It was unclear whether she was married at the time to her current husband, Gerald Peterson. They bought their St. Paul house in 1989.

Peterson said neither he nor his children had any inkling of his wife's double life.

"I know nothing about that," he told the Los Angeles Times. "I'll tell you the truth, I'm totally shocked."

No one at the house would comment Wednesday. But Soliah's parents, Martin and Elsie Soliah of Palmdale, Calif., said Peterson knew his wife was wanted.

"She told him about her situation when they got serious," Mrs. Soliah told the Times. "He understood."

Sometime in the late 1970s, Ms. Soliah arrived in the Minneapolis area, where she moved next door to Peterson, then a medical intern.

Mrs. Soliah said the two lived for a number of years in Zimbabwe, where Peterson worked as a physician and her daughter taught drama and English. There, her daughter gave birth to the second of their three daughters.

Kathleen Soliah and her husband returned to the United States in the mid-1980s, the Soliahs said, settling in Minnesota after a brief stay in Baltimore.

The FBI said she took the last name of Olson, which is common in Minnesota because of the large number of people of Scandinavian descent.

Detectives described Ms. Soliah as being surprised by her arrest — and relieved at the same time.

"We've got a pretty good fingerprint identification that she's the person we're looking for," said James Burrus Jr., the agent in charge of the Minneapolis FBI office.

Her capture closes a chapter in one of the most sensational news stories of the 1970s.

The SLA, a band of anti-government radicals with a seven-headed snake as their symbol, kidnapped Ms. Hearst from her Berkeley, Calif., apartment in February 1974. She was 19.

The group demanded that the newspaper heiress' parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst, distribute $2 million worth of food to the needy before it would discuss freedom for their daughter. The demand later climbed to $6 million.

But then Ms. Hearst changed into Tania, a member of the group that took her prisoner. Two months after the kidnapping, she was photographed carrying a carbine during an SLA holdup of a San Francisco bank — the robbery for which she eventually was convicted and sent to prison.

In May 1974, as people watched on live TV, Los Angeles police trapped heavily armed SLA members in a house and riddled it with bullets. The group's leader, an ex-convict who called himself Cinque, and five other SLA members died.

Ms. Soliah did not participate in the shootout or the Hearst kidnapping.

Ms. Hearst went underground and didn't emerge until 1975, when she was arrested in San Francisco. Although she claimed she was the victim of brainwashing, she was sentenced to seven years for the bank robbery. She served two years before President Carter commuted her sentence.

Today, she is a married mother living in Connecticut, and a sometime actress and author. "This is all so old," she told WCBS-AM. "I don't want to be drawn into all of this."

The federal warrant charges Ms. Soliah with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. It also said she attempted to negotiate a surrender in 1989 through her lawyer, but talks failed because she requested complete immunity.

Soliah's parents took offense to FBI allegations that she was a terrorist.

"She was not among the students who were causing problems," Mrs. Soliah told the Antelope Valley Press in Palmdale.

Soliah told the Daily News of Los Angeles that his daughter was in Guatemala in August 1975, when authorities say she tried to blow up the police cruisers.

Ms. Soliah's neighbors described her as a well-spoken and friendly woman, and an avid jogger and gardener. Pat Kramer, who lives across the street, said she was a "very down-to-Earth person" who would bring a casserole to block parties.

At least one other former SLA member is still at large: James Kilgore, Ms. Soliah's boyfriend in her SLA days. He was profiled on the same "America's Most Wanted" show as Ms. Soliah, but FBI spokeswoman Coleen Rowley said she wasn't aware of any leads on Kilgore.

Grocery store chain launches milk price war; prices tumble

DALLAS (AP) — Shoppers in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and points east have been benefiting from a price war that has sent milk prices tumbling to 99 cents per gallon.

The mooove started about a month ago, and visitors to the dairy case can still find a big break on the food staple at chains such as Kroger, Albertsons and Tom Thumb.

"We're just enjoying it while it lasts," said Maxine Whitton, director at King Arthur's Castle of Little Tikes in Sunnyvale, which uses about 20 gallons of milk each week to feed approximately 120 children at the day care center.

"As soon as that one that started it stops, everyone will stop," she predicted.

A Kroger spokesman said his company was the first to cut prices, but he doesn't know when the deep discount will end.

"As long as the wholesale price of milk remains lower, we plan on passing that along to the customer," said Gary Huddleston of the grocer's regional office in Houston.

Ellen Jordan, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service dairy specialist in Dallas, said milk producers will be getting nearly 9 cents more per gallon beginning July 1 for the raw product that is sold for further processing and bottling.

The anticipated increase follows a significant drop in milk prices in April, when the price paid to producers dropped by 53 cents per gallon, she said.

Kroger cut the price on milk from $2.59 to 99 cents a gallon at its stores in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and farther east in Nacogdoches, Palestine, Marshall, Paris and Longview.

While the drop corresponded to a slight decline in raw milk prices, Kroger also wanted to increase the volume at its Fort Worth dairy and "increase the value to our customers," Huddleston said.

A spokesman for Minyard Food Stores Inc. said the company matched prices for a week or 10 days but has since pulled back. Wednesday's gallon milk price was $2.89.

Personal watercraft to continue at Meredith

FRITCH — Lake Meredith National Recreation Area is one of 13-units of the National Park Service that is exempt from new rules that prohibit personal water craft use. Since boating and all forms of water recreation are one of the basic purposes of Lake Meredith and other National Recreation Areas, it is doubtful that PWCs will ever be banned from the lake. In many national parks, where natural quiet, wildlife and other important values would be adversely affected by PWCs or other high-powered engine-driven craft or vehicles, the machines are banned.

PWCs clearly differ from conventional watercraft in terms of design, use, safety record, controversy and visitor and resource impacts. PWCs are high performance vessels designed for speed and maneuverability and are often operated in an aggressive manner. With a disproportional thrust capability and horsepower to vessel length and weight, in some cases four times that of convention vessels, PWCs are designed to be capable of operation at high speed and are able to perform stunt-like maneuvers.

Complaints leveled against PWCs by other boaters at Lake Meredith concern recklessness and disregard to safety — operating too close to other craft, jumping wakes of other boats, buzzing swimmers, underage operators, excessive noise and failure to observe no wake zones.

Studies have shown PWCs disturb fish and wildlife for a considerable distance. While PWCs make up about 11 percent of the vessels registered in the country, they comprise over 35 percent of vessels involved in accidents.

The U.S. Coast Guard classifies PWCs as Class A Inboard Boats. PWCs are, therefore, subject to the same rules and requirements as any other powerboat. There are age restrictions for PWC operators and the craft cannot be used at night. These and other regulations are enforced by Texas Parks and Wildlife Wardens as well as NPS rangers and county deputies.

Detailed information on PWC equipment, registration and operation requirements is available at Lake Meredith National Recreation Area headquarters, Hwy 136, Fritch, and is posted on bulletin boards at most lake access points.

KACV to air 'Rick Husband: Man With a Mission'

AMARILLO — Rick Husband, astronaut and Amarillo native, recently piloted NASA shuttle mission STS-96. Ellen Robertson Neal and the KACV camera crew followed Husband through training to shuttle launch, while making "Rick Husband: Man With a Mission," which premieres at 9 p.m. Tuesday, June 22. This half-hour documentary chronicles the final weeks leading up to Husband's journey into space: his personal lifelong quest. Accompanying Neal on the launch trip were Emily Taylor and Dan Bufford, both honors students at Crockett Middle School, Husband's alma mater, who competed with other Crockett honors students for the honor of attending the launch. "It was just amazing, incredible, just to see that go up into space," says Bufford. Marcella Herrington, honors science teacher at Crockett, who escorted the two students to the launch, also found the experience moving. "There's nothing to compare to it ... It made me proud to be an American," states Herrington. "My heart was racing and beating," affirmed Taylor. The program includes interviews with Husband and fellow Amarillo astronaut, Paul Lockhart at the Houston Space Center, as well as interviews with Husband's wife, daughter, mother and members of his NASA support team. Additional interviews and footage shot at the Kennedy Space center in Orlando, Fla., and are also shown. A trip for four to Houston's Space Center will be given away during the June 22 airing of the program. A repeat broadcast is scheduled to air at 5 p.m. Sunday, June 27.

Pictures of Open Casket Are Worth Many Angry Words

DEAR ABBY: Less than two weeks ago, I lost a friend of more than 40 years. He had been in poor health for the better part of two years and succumbed to the many complications of emphysema. He left a wife and two adult children.

The evening before the funeral, there was a viewing that was attended by many friends and relatives. At that time, his sister told the widow she would like to take some pictures of the floral arrangements, some of which were sent by relatives in the Midwest. She wished to send these relatives some pictures. She was given permission, as long as she took only snapshots of the flowers, and not the open casket. The sister-in-law agreed to abide by this.

The grieving widow had no sooner left the room than the deceased's sister proceeded to take snapshots of her brother in the open casket! At the graveside service the next morning, she also took snapshots of the people attending the service, and even went so far as to take pictures of the casket as it was being lowered into the ground. When the widow learned of it later, she was furious.

She called her sister-in-law the following day and expressed shock and disappointment that anyone would commit such a morbid, insensitive and uncaring act. The sister-in-law rationalized that the pictures were her own personal memento of her brother — since he looked so good, better than she had seen him look in a long time. The widow demanding the exposed roll of film, for which she offered to reimburse her sister-in-law, but was refused.

Abby, what do you think of this? Should the sister-in-law have taken those pictures?

ONE WHO HAS LOST A FRIEND

DEAR ONE WHO HAS LOST A FRIEND: The sister-in-law was wrong to promise the widow she would refrain from photographing the open casket and then going back on her word. However, everyone grieves in his or her own way — and if a sibling would find comfort in having pictures of her brother in his coffin, who am I to argue? It's not something I would want to revisit; however, I'm sure this situation isn't a first. What is interesting is her statement that her brother's corpse looked better than he did when he was still alive.

DEAR ABBY: I was sitting in a restaurant at noon, enjoying lunch with my husband. Sitting at a window table directly ahead of us was a nicely groomed older couple.

Abby, this woman whipped out her compact and a pair of tweezers and proceeded to pluck the hairs from her chin and neck! Her husband just stared off into space. Our server told us the couple are regular customers, and she does this every time she comes in.

I know some of the old rules of etiquette have relaxed in recent years, but now I've seen everything. Abby, what do you think?

HARRIETT IN HOLLYWOOD

DEAR HARRIETT: I think the woman displayed bald indifference to common table manners. A quick lipstick application is acceptable in public; however, any procedure that lasts more than 30 seconds is a no-no and should be performed in the powder room.

Abby shares her favorite recipes in two booklets: "Abby's Favorite Recipes" and "Abby's More Favorite Recipes." FOOTBALL

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Nate Newton figures he has two more years left in his NFL playing career. The Carolina Panthers hope he's at least half right.

The Panthers signed Newton to a one-year contract Wednesday, making the 37-year-old offensive guard the oldest player on their roster.

Newton played 13 seasons for the Dallas Cowboys, helping them to three Super Bowl titles and appearing in six Pro Bowls. The 6-foot-3, 320-pound Newton started 180 of a possible 191 games with the Cowboys, including all 16 last year.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Cowboys cornerback Deion Sanders has agreed in principle to a contract extension with the team that was expected to let the All-Pro complete his career with the Dallas organization, says owner Jerry Jones.

Jones told The Dallas Morning News in today's editions he hoped that the deal would come by the week's end.

Although terms were not disclosed, Jones said financial details of the contract were "significant." The total package was expected to surpass the four-year, $22.8 million benchmark that Dale Carter established for the cornerback position when he signed with Denver this off-season, according to the report.

Regular season nears an end in 11-12 League

PAMPA — Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency's bid for a double upset ended abruptly in the bottom of the fourth inning as Mateo Campos crushed a grand slam home run to end the game 13-2 on the 10-run rule.

DFB had defeated second-place Cabot Corporation by the 10-run rule in the early game 12-2 and was bidding to make Glo-Valve Service its second victim of the night when Campos took a 2-2 pitch high over the left field wall for only the second grand slam in team history.

Glo-Valve rapped out 10 hits off three DFB pitchers with half going for extra bases as the regular season Optimist Major Bambino 11-12 champions upped their season record to 13-2. DFB remains in fourth place with a 4-9 record.

Braydon Barker was the story for DFB in the first game, pitching a complete game win. Tyson Hickman was the winning pitcher for Glo-Valve in the second game. He relieved Campos in the third inning. Hickman allowed one hit, one unearned run and three walks while striking out three. Campos gave up one run, two hits and two walks. He stuck out two.

Shane Goldsmith started for DFB. He was relieved by Eric McClure in the third inning. McClure gave way to Jared Winegeart in the fourth.

Glo-Valve scored in the bottom of the first. Campos was safe on an error. He went to second on a passed ball and stole third. He came home behind an infield single by Mitchell Crow.

DFB tied the score in the second inning when Dak Fallon was hit by a pitch. Winegeart singled sharply to center and walks to Ryan Hook and Jacob Rousey forced Fallon home.

Glo-Valve edged back into the lead in the bottom of the second on a walk to Keaton Hutto and a run-scoring triple by Christopher Moody. McClure then made the defensive play of the day for DFB by grabbing a groundball and firing home to catch a sliding Moody.

Hickman took over pitching duties for Glo-Valve in the top of the third inning. A walk to Shane Goldsmith with one out was followed by a great running back-handed catch in center field by Glo-Valve's Eric Willingham. His throw to first trying to double Goldsmith off got by the first baseman, allowing Goldsmith to proceed to second. Winegeart got his second hit of the game one pitch later to bring in Goldsmith and tie the score at 2-2.

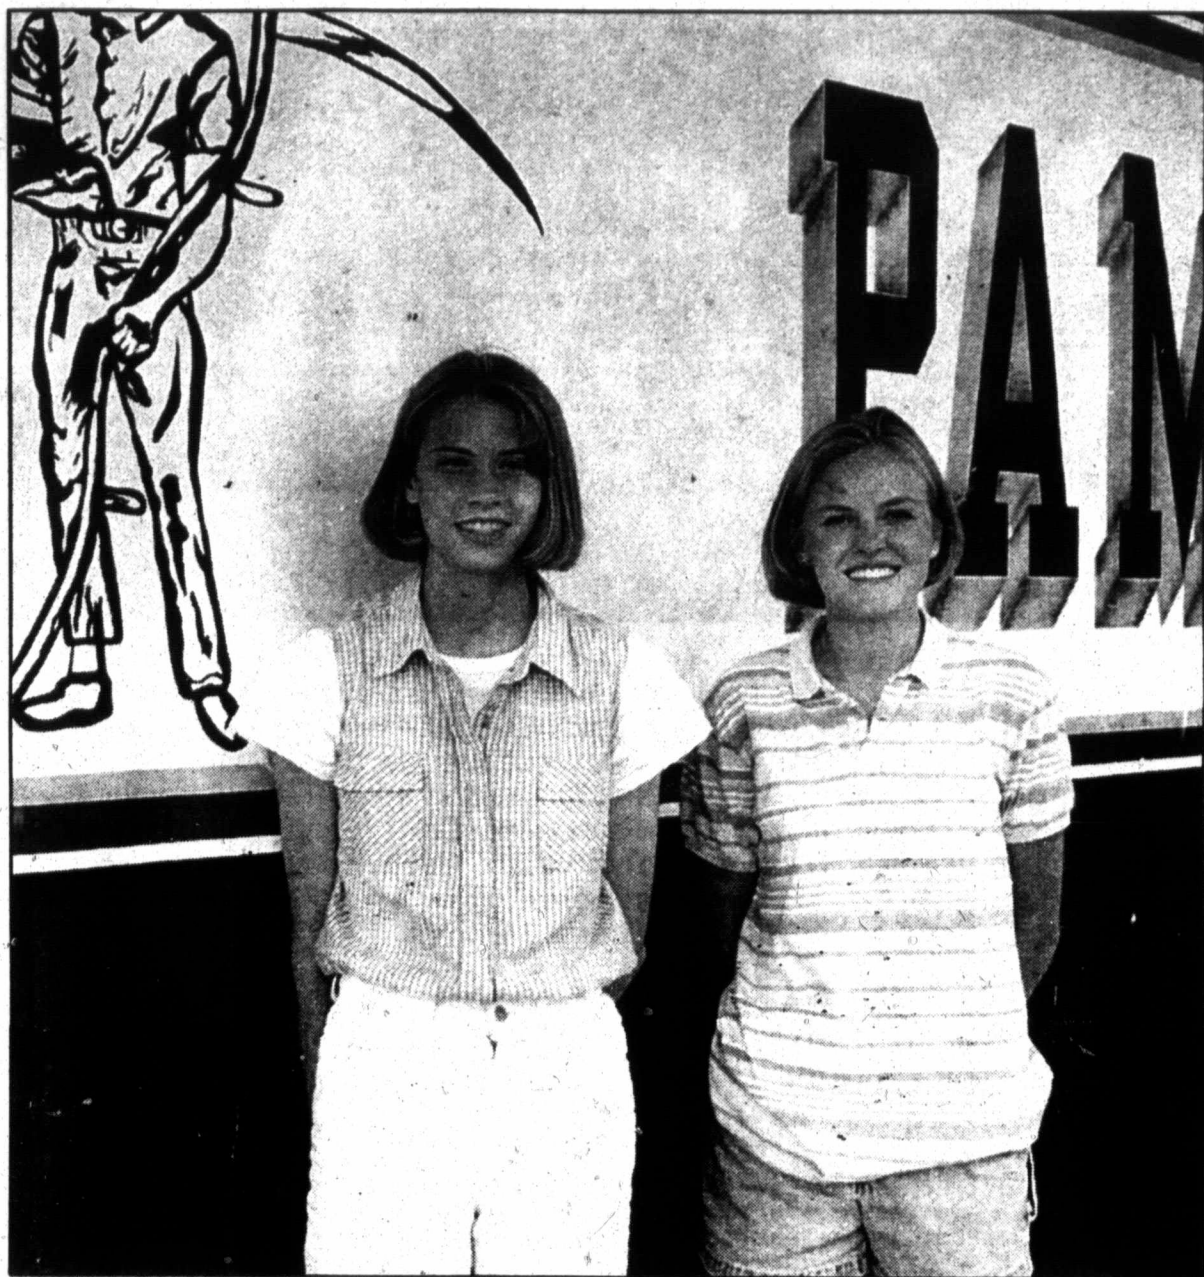

Glo-Valve scored three times in hits half of the third inning to grab a 5-2 lead. Crow led off with a single and made it all the way home on throwing errors. Hickman singled and was forced at second at Willingham. A double by Eric Kingcade and walks to Keaton Hutto and Moody forced in Willingham. Kingcade scored on a wild pitch.

DFB loaded the bases in the fourth, but was not able to get a run home. They also left the bases loaded in the second inning.

Campos led off the bottom of the fourth for Glo-Valve with a walk and a steal of second base. He scored on a single by Hickman. Hickman went to second on an error and tore home on a double by Willingham. Willingham trotted home on Kingcade's second extra-base hit of the game, a triple. Ryan Hansen brought in Kingcade with a single. Moody and Matt Parks walked to load up the bases, setting up Campos' game-ending homer.

Major Bambino play continues tonight as Glo-Valve plays its last regular-season game against Rotary Club at 5:45. DFB challenges Celanese Corporation in the late game. Friday's action pits Cabot, with a record of 8-6-1 against Celanese, with a record of 8-6 in the battle for the second seed in the City Tournament, which begins Monday. DFB will take on Rotary in Friday's late game as the regular season comes to an end.

1st Bank of SW wins 9-10 title, again

PAMPA — First Bank of Southwest clinched first place in the 9-10 Bambino Baseball League for the second year in a row. However, more teams this season gave the Bankers tough competition.

First Bank will be the top-seeded team in the upcoming league tournament, which is scheduled to begin on Monday.

With most teams having one game remaining in the regular season, First Bank is waiting to see how the rest of the teams will be seeded. There's still a mad scramble for the next five positions.

Robinson, Jackson play big roles for Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tim Duncan's starring performance needed a strong supporting cast.

David Robinson and Jaren Jackson took center stage along with Duncan. Robinson blocked shots and dished out assists and Jackson hit a flurry of 3-pointers to help the San Antonio Spurs defeat the New York Knicks 89-77 Wednesday night in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

Accustomed to playing in Duncan's shadow all season, the veteran Robinson did it again with delight and reveled in the Spurs' opening victory in the best-of-7 championship series.

"It's been a fun ride so far," Robinson said. "Our team this year has grown up tremendously. It's been incredible."

Duncan was virtually unstoppable with 33 points on 13-for-21 shooting. He also grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked two shots.

Robinson shot only 3-for-10 from the field, but scored 13 points thanks to making seven of 12 free throws. He blocked three shots and had seven assists, either tossing the ball to point guard Avery Johnson for a layup or firing a precision pass to Duncan waiting under the basket.

"When you get Tim rolling like that and he's playing good basketball, I'm looking for him. I'm going to try to get him as much as possible," Robinson said. Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy praised the way Robinson and Duncan performed as a duo — both in passing the ball and shot blocking.

"They throw the high-low pass very well," Van Gundy said. "The biggest difference for us, we played against three good shot blockers in the first three series, but never two on the court at the same time. To me, that's a huge difference."

It certainly didn't help the Knicks that Jackson made half of his 10 3-point attempts and scored 17 points. Jackson's biggest basket came with 8:10 left in the game after the Knicks closed to 74-68.

Closely guarded in the corner, with the shot clock running down, Jackson hit a fallaway 3 as he nearly tumbled out of bounds. It sent the 39,514 fans in the Alamodome into an uproar.

"I try to make sure I do a good job of spotting up on the perimeter," Jackson said. "I get aggressive on my shot and just let it go."

Another of his 3-pointers swished in at the buzzer with 3:01 left to play in the third quarter, giving San Antonio a 64-54 advantage.

"I usually catch it when they throw it out there with three, two, one on the shot clock and I let it go," he said.

For good measure, Jackson hit another 3-pointer with 2:23 left to give the Spurs their largest lead of the game at 87-72.

Jackson said the Knicks aren't an easy team to stop.

"They play with a lot more pride than the other teams we've played," he said. "They do play tough. They don't give up."

Jackson, who lost his starting job at off-guard to Mario Elie early in the season, averaged only 6.4 points during the regular season, but he's had some big games in the playoffs.

In the Spurs' sweep of the Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference semifinals, Jackson had a career-high 22 points in Game 3 at Los Angeles, then followed with 20 points in Game 4.

"Jaren's been playing like that on the road. We were surprised he played like that in the Alamodome," Johnson said.

"All his 3s this year have been timely."

Jackson, in his ninth NBA season, played college basketball at Georgetown before spending time in the CBA and WBL. He played for seven NBA teams before joining the Spurs before the 1997-98 season.

Although this is San Antonio's first trip to the NBA Finals, Jackson said the Spurs are trying to take it in stride.

"That's how we've got to treat it," he said. "We're playing the same way we've played all year."

BIG SHOT: Patrick Ruder, 33, of San Antonio, hit a 3-point shot during a break in play and won $75,000. The shot was taken from similar spot on the floor at the Alamodome where Sean Elliott hit a 3-pointer that gave the Spurs a victory in Game 2 against Portland in the Western Conference finals.

Ruder gets $75,000 from Southwestern Bell, and the phone company also donates $25,000 to the Spurs Drug-Free Youth Basketball League.

Rule #1. Understand Why.

Almost always it's rebellion, alienation, despair, peer pressure or some combination. As a parent you can have a powerful effect on how your kids deal with these things. Helling, Stevens lead Ranger win

NEW YORK (AP) — No, no, no, the Texas Rangers insisted. Loss after loss after loss to the New York Yankees wasn't weighing on their minds.

Yeah, sure. And that three-game sweep last October didn't cause any sleepless nights.

Rick Helling, backed by Lee Stevens' two-run, second-inning homer, pitched seven shutout innings, helping Texas end a seven-game losing streak in the Bronx and an overall four-game skid — its longest since last July 24-28 — with a 3-0 victory.

"It was a night we need a well-pitched ballgame, and Rick Helling certainly gave it to us," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "There's no doubt in my mind if we had to win one game, Rick Helling would get the start."

Helling (6-6) allowed four hits, dropping his ERA to 4.18, its lowest since opening day.

Texas beat New York for the second time in eight meetings this season, including five in Yankee Stadium. It was the Rangers' first shutout at New York since Kevin Brown's 9-0 win on April 17, 1993.

"We all feel that we can play with the Yankees," Helling said. "We all feel we've played well against the Yankees. We just didn't play well enough."

Offense has been the biggest problem. Texas is hitting .190 (67-for-353) with 27 runs in its last 11 games against the Yankees, including the playoffs.

"We're in first place. We're 10 games over .500 (37-27). We know we're a good ballclub," Oates said.

Helling, who allowed runners in his first six innings, made his key pitches after Scott Brosius' leadoff double in the third.

First, he threw a called third strike past Derek Jeter. Next he threw one by Paul O'Neill. And then he fanned Bernie Williams on a checked swing.

"It can get out of hand real fast," Helling said. "You have a hit here, a hit there. The crowd gets in the game. The players start picking up on the emotion. I don't think I was sharper than I was right there."

Orlando Hernandez (7-6) got in trouble in the second, walking Juan Gonzalez after getting ahead 0-2 in the count.

"Three-two, he tried to make the perfect pitch," Yankees catcher Jorge Posada said. "That's when he gets in trouble."

Stevens drove the next pitch — a hanging changeup — halfway up the right-field bleachers for his second homer in 27 games. He began the season with eight in his first 23.

"I tried to get him early before he goes deep in the count and throws tougher pitches," Stevens said.

Ruben Mateo added an RBI double in the seventh — the Rangers' first hit at Yankee Stadium in their last 35 at-bats with runners in scoring position, a streak dating to last year's playoffs.

Overall, the Rangers had been hitless in 26 at-bats with runners in scoring position since Rafael Palmeiro singled Saturday.

Jeff Zimmerman got out of a two-on jam in the eighth by retiring O'Neill, Williams and Tino Martinez in order. John Wetteland, the World Series MVP for the

Arthur wins Autogroup title

SAN ANGELO — Perry Arthur, the director of golf at the Plantation Club in Frisco, came from five strokes back following round one to capture the Lynn Alexander Autogroup Western Championship in a playoff.

Arthur had rounds of 73-66 (course record) 139 (5 under par), and was one of only eight players to better par for the championship. For his efforts, Arthur pocketed $3,200 from the $16,800 purse.

Travis Deibert, assistant professional at Hillcrest Country Club in Lubbock, finished tied with Arthur, but bogeyed the second hole of the playoff, a 220-yard, par 3. Two other players finished one stroke behind Arthur and Deibert.

They were John Horne from Borger Country Club in Borger and overnight leader Bob Mims from Sunset Golf Club in Dallas. Mims recovered well after making a triple bogey, a seven on his first hole of the final round to finish tied for third.

Pampa's Mickey Piersall finished in a tie for 33rd with a two-round total of 152.

There were 69 PGA professionals and apprentices from the Northern Texas entered in the tournament.

The tournament was held at Quicksand Golf Course, a 7,171-yard, par 72 course in San Angelo. The course opened in 1996 and was designed by Dr. Michael Hurdzan.

Jackson reaches agreement with LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The hipie is going Hollywood.

It's the "Shaq, Kobe & Glen Show," directed by Phil Jackson and featuring Jack Nicholson and Dyan Cannon in supporting roles.

Jackson, the motorcycle-riding Zen master with a knack for conjuring up championships, is bringing his unique coaching style to Los Angeles.

He reached an agreement in principle Tuesday to become the Lakers' coach and, barring last-minute snags over details in his reported $30 million, five-year contract, was to be introduced in his new role today.

The NBA's coach of the '90s with the marquee cast of Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and Dennis Rodman, Jackson will try to match his boffo success with Shaquille O'Neal, Kobe Bryant and Glen Rice.

Although expectations will be high, Jackson takes over a team that hasn't won a title in 11 years after being the league's dominant force in the 1980s with Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Showtime.

The Lakers won five championships in the '80s, but haven't reached the NBA Finals since 1991, when they were beaten by Jackson and the Bulls.

During his nine years in Chicago, Jackson orchestrated the diverse talents and egos of his stars into an NBA powerhouse that won six titles this decade and became one of the league's best teams ever.

He will face a similar challenge with the Lakers, widely regarded as a splintered group of talented underachievers.

Jackson seems well-equipped for the job.

A coach who has gone to bookstores to pick out books for each of his players, he was motivator, mediator and basketball maestro all in one for the Bulls.

He related to the players with, as Jordan refers to it, "that Zen Buddhism stuff."

Even the bizarre Rodman, who spent a mostly disastrous month and half with the Lakers this season, thrived under Jackson in Chicago.

When Rodman heard Jackson was taking the Lakers' job, he told Fox Sports News, "I would like to play for Phil Jackson and the Lakers. I think he's the only coach in the league that really understands me."

Jackson or not, any chance of Rodman rejoining the Lakers seems remote.

The 53-year-old Jackson, who took this season off, had a 545-193 record at Chicago and was 111-41 in the playoffs.

He has the highest winning percentage of any coach in NBA regular-season (.738) and playoff (.730) history, and was coach of the year in 1996.

Jackson averaged 6.7 points in his 13-year NBA playing career, 11 of them with the New York Knicks. He missed their 1970 title season because of a back injury, but played on their 1973 championship team.

He is one of only nine men who have won NBA titles both as a player and as a head coach.

Jackson worked his way up the coaching ranks, leading the Albany Patroons of the CBA for five years. He served as an assistant under Doug Collins with the Bulls for two years before Collins was fired and he became the head coach on July 10, 1989.

Jackson, who will replace interim coach Kurt Rambis, also was coveted by the New Jersey Nets and, to a lesser degree, by the Knicks before they made their improbable run to the NBA Finals.

The Lakers fired Del Harris 12 games into last season and promoted Rambis from his job as an assistant.

They were swept in the playoffs for the second year in a row, losing in the second round to San Antonio after being beaten by Utah in the Western Conference finals last year.

The Lakers' courtship of Jackson was a whirlwind affair. The Lakers recently indicated that Rambis would be retained, but team owner Jerry Buss instead decided to spend more millions to go after the high-profile Jackson.

The Lakers began talking with Todd Musburger, Jackson's agent, last week. Jackson was off fishing in a remote area of Alaska, and Lakers executives Jerry West and Mitch Kupchak offered him the job in a telephone call Monday, after he returned to Montana.

Mickelson takes early lead as wet course greets U.S. Open golfers

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — A soggy Pinehurst No. 2 greeted golfers this morning as play began in the U.S. Open on a course soaked by overnight rains.

Phil Mickelson, carrying a beep-er to alert him if his pregnant wife began going into labor, made three birdies in his first five holes and held the early lead with about a third of the field on the course at 2-under after seven holes.

Despite the rain that softened the famed domed greens, early starters found trouble everywhere as they played through a light but steady rain.

Jack Nicklaus, playing in his first Open since having hip replacement surgery, bogeyed five of his first six holes, while Japan's Jumbo Ozaki took a quadruple bogey on the 11th hole and was 10-over through 13.

Ozaki was the first player off the tee this morning, hitting a drive through the fog-shrouded first fairway into the right rough to open play under conditions that seemed more similar to the British Open than the American version.

More than a half-inch of rain fell overnight, and dozens of groundskeepers spread out before dawn to drain greens and make sure the course was in condition for the 156 golfers scheduled to tee off on the first day of play.

A drizzle greeted the morning's first group of Ozaki, David Toms and Brandel Chamblee, and forecasters predicted occasional showers and possible thunderstorms throughout the day.

The skies were expected to begin clearing late in the day, though, and conditions for the weekend should be hot and dry.

Rain was the one thing Open officials didn't want because it softens the greens, helping players hit iron shots directly on the pins perched precariously on the slopes of the famous Donald Ross design.

Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum displaying cotton-farming exhibit

CANYON — In keeping with its 1999 agricultural theme, the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum has installed in its Graphics Gallery 14 lithographs about cotton farming by Texas artist Merritt Mauzey (1897-1973). The lithographs were used as illustrations in Mauzey's children's book, "Cotton Farm Boy." The exhibition will run through Aug. 22.

Having been a cotton farmer for many years, the Clifton, Texas, born Mauzey "bade farewell to the farm" and moved to Sweetwater, Texas, in 1920, saying he was "tired of snakes, self-sucking cows, cannibalistic hogs, grasshoppers, [and] army worms." In 1927, he moved to Dallas where he worked for a cotton exporter and rekindled an interest in art.

Mauzey took night classes with Frank Klepper and John Knott, sketched outdoors, and painted a night. He exhibited his works based on rural life at the Texas Centennial Exposition (1936), the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition (1937), and at the Art Institute of Chicago, Delphic Studio and the Whitney Museum in New York.

In 1955, Mauzey published "Cotton Farm Boy," the first in a series of six children's books for which he drew lithographs and wrote the text.

Mauzey was a charter member of the Lone Star Printmakers in 1938 and began specializing in lithography. In 1946, he received a Guggenheim fellowship, the first Texas artist to be selected for the honor.

In 1955, Mauzey published "Cotton Farm Boy," the first in a series of six children's books for which he drew lithographs and wrote the text. American print expert Carl Ziggrosser called Mauzey's work "the translation of cotton into art." The 14 lithographs on exhibit at PPHM are presented courtesy the Museum of the Southwest, Midland, Texas, which has an extensive Mauzey collection, most of which was donated by the artist. A volume of "Cotton Farm Boy," lent by the Cornette Library of West Texas A & M University, is also part of the installation.
