PAMPA — Gray County Latchkey will pre-enroll Aug. 3 from 6-9 p.m. at Lovett Memorial Library for all four elementary schools. For more information, call Susan Gallagher at 665-7179.

No ticket correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 7-17-21-42-46-48. Wednesday night's drawing will be worth an estimated $27 million.

DALLAS (AP) — Because senior citizens frequently have accumulated a sizeable nest egg for retirement, they are targets of many telemarketers who would like to separate them from their money. That was one of the messages at four hearings last week in Houston to teach them how to avoid being ripped off by scam artists. Rep. Ken Bentsen, D-Houston, was among the officials who organized the hearings. He's a co-sponsor of the Seniors Safety Act of 1999, which is designed to prevent the elderly from becoming victims of crimes such as health care fraud, pension fraud and nursing home neglect.

Residential parking law tops agenda

By KATE B. DICKSON
Associate Publisher

A residential parking restriction ordinance will be up for review Tuesday when city commissioners meet at City Hall for their 4 p.m. work session. The meeting is open to the public and will be followed, at 6 p.m., by the regular meeting.

Also on tap will be a discussion of a proposed commercial sign ordinance which, if passed, will regulate types, sizes and permitted locations of signs.

Neither proposal will be voted on during this meeting, but are discussion topics only, said City Manager Bob Eskridge.

Both proposals are outgrowths of the commission's efforts to improve the appearance of the city and each was talked about when the group held an informal planning workshop early this year.

Additionally, the parking ordinance, which has not been formally presented previously, is designed to reduce traffic hazards and protect property values, the document says.

Among provisions of the parking proposal are:

- Recreational vehicles, equipment and trailers as well as trucks, or truck-tractors can't be parked on the required or established front setback, the front yard or side yard. The exception to this is that recreational vehicles may be parked in a driveway for up to 48 hours while it is actively being loaded or unloaded. Other vehicles named may be parked on a driveway for up to four hours while engaged in active loading or unloading. Back yard parking will be allowed.

The above type of vehicles will also not be permitted to park on any public street/alley, parkway, boulevard, or public place within or adjacent to any area zoned as a single-family dwelling, district or two-family or multi-family or mobile home district. Loading and unloading of vehicles will be permitted, however, in those areas.

- Prohibits the parking of a vehicle carrying one or more head of livestock on any street except within a certain distance of a stockyard or slaughterhouse or packing plant.

The sign ordinance that will be discussed has been revised since commissioners first talked about it several weeks ago.

If passed, the ordinance will require licensing for sign construction and heights of signs must conform to the current zoning ordinance. Any sign over 40 feet requires either an architect's or engineer's seal.

Included in the proposal are regulations pertaining to electric signs, permits for permits and annual inspection variances, licenses and bond requirements, wind pressure and dead load requirements, revocation of permits, etc.

Johnson wins first in interview skills

Pampan in Miss Texas Pageant

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Laura Johnson

Pampa's Laura Johnson was named first over all 53 contestants in the Miss Texas Pageant in interview skills during the pageant on live television Saturday night.

Competing as the title holder of Miss Amarillo Area the young Pampa woman left her mark on the Miss Texas Pageant. Patti Stapp, executive director of the Miss Amarillo Area Scholarship Pageant, said Sunday Johnson made her presence known at the Miss Texas Pageant.

"Laura was very well respected at the week long pageant. She was a class act. She will be one hard act to follow," said Stapp. While Johnson did not make the 10 finalists during the final night (See JOHNSON, Page 2)

Queen's luncheon tickets available

Pampa residents interested in attending the Queen's Luncheon and style show Thursday for the Rodeo Top O' Texas queen candidate must get their reservations in Tuesday to be able to attend.

Each of the 11 contestants will model western attire and will give a three-minute speech. Five of the contestants are in the queen contest and six are in the teen queen competition.

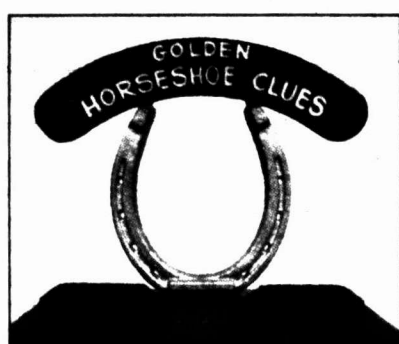

Current Top O' Texas Queen Brandy Kempf and Miss Top O' Texas Teen Queen Mandy Poole will end their year-long reign Saturday night when the new queens are selected during the coronation at the rodeo.

The two young women have participated in many parades, events, visited nursing homes and other events. Both of Pampa, they have represented Pampa and the Top O' Texas Rodeo very positively the past year, according to rodeo officials.

The contestants will be judged in four categories: appearance, personality, horsemanship and ticket sales.

Golden Horseshoe found!

The Golden Horseshoe has been found!!!!

The annual search for the Golden Horseshoe ended Saturday afternoon when Aaron Hayden and Josh Taylor found the famous item.

The horseshoe was located near the M.K. Brown Auditorium on the musical display. The two winners will receive box seat tickets for all performances of the Top of the competition, Stapp said she was very well respected at the pageant. "She was the belle of the ball among so many of the production people," said Stapp.

O' Texas PRCA rodeos and will ride in the parade Saturday morning.

The Golden Horseshoe Treasure Hunt generates interest in the rodeo each year to kick off the annual rodeo festivities. Numerous local residents participate in the hunt. Several local businesses are involved in the hunt for the horseshoe as clues are located at the businesses.

The 21-year-old Pampa woman was competing in the Fort Worth-based pageant for the second consecutive year. Stapp said a Miss Texas Pageant board member told the young contestant following the pageant Saturday night that her skills would be taking her far in her entire life. Stapp said Johnson was definitely a favorite of the audience at the pageant.

Based on interview, swim suit, evening gown and talent, the pageant is held annually in July in Fort Worth.

Johnson was named recipient of the William Morris Scholarship Award during the pageant. She also received $2,200 in cash from the competition. She had the distinction of being one of 10 contestants selected to perform in the closing dance number of the pageant.

She was also one of 19 contestants selected to participate in a Johnny High production. She also was first runner-up in most pages sold.

Johnson is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jay Johnson of Pampa. Born in Pampa, she is a 1996 graduate of Pampa High School. She is a junior at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Her talent during the competition was a vocal presentation of "Unforgettable". Her platform for the contest was Keys to Good Character. She said her career ambition is to be in corporate public relations or owning her own firm.

The new Miss Texas is Yanci Yarbrough, a native of Childress. Competing this year as Miss Hurst-Euleus-Bedford, the young woman had competed as Miss Lubbock in 1996 while attending Texas Tech in Lubbock. She was fourth runner-up in the Miss Texas contest that year.

Currently a graduate student in communications at the University of North Texas, Yarbrough will represent Texas at the Miss America pageant on Sept. 18. She sang Patsy Cline's "Sweet Dreams" for the talent portion of the competition.

LULAC to hold week-long convention in Corpus Christi

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Education, civil rights, immigration and issues related to the 2000 census will take center stage this week when the League of United Latin American Citizens holds its 70th annual National Convention and Exposition.

More than 6,000 members of the country's oldest and largest Hispanic organization are expected to attend the convention, which runs through Saturday. LULAC was founded in Corpus Christi in 1929.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, president of the National Rainbow Coalition, will speak at this year's event. Also on the agenda are Secretary of Education Richard Riley, Secretary of Energy Bill Richardson and Secretary of the Army Louis Caldera.

Friday's national policy summit is expected to be the highlight of the convention. In that forum, panelists will explore issues considered vital to the Hispanic community at the turn of the 21st century.

LULAC spokesman Ruben Canales told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times for a story in Sunday's editions that the dis-ussion topics are similar to the ones important to the founders of the organization, but the focus is changing.

For instance, he said that Hispanics are no longer fighting for the right to be educated, but are instead having to confront educational problems like high dropout rates and teen pregnancy.

"I see education still as a major focus, for different reasons," Canales said. "Somewhere along the line our educational system lost its focus."

LULAC officials said they also are concerned with the country's immigration problems, civil rights issues and the lack of Hispanic representation in federal government. They say the 2000 census is especially important to this year's convention, explaining that it is critical for Hispanics to make sure they are represented.

"We have to educate the people as to why it is important to be counted," Corpus Christi LULAC Council No. 1 president Mary Helen Salazar told the Caller-Times. "You have to be counted in the census in order to qualify for grants or money coming into the city." The convention will include a three-day youth conference featuring workshops and discussions on topics covering education and drug and gang prevention.

LULAC officials said they also are concerned with the country's immigration problems, civil rights issues and the lack of Hispanic representation in federal government.

Also this week, LULAC will elect new officers and conduct a career development program for government and private sector employees. In addition, computer databases with listing more than 10,000 federal job openings will be available.

LULAC has about 250,000 members nationwide, with councils in almost every state and Puerto Rico.

The organization sponsors a scholarship fund, school improvement committees and a preschool training program that teaches Spanish-speaking students basic English vocabulary.

Doctors Should Follow Up On Patients' Test Results

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Lucky in Connecticut," whose doctor failed to notify her of abnormal pap smears (for three years!) was inappropriate. You told her that in these days of managed care, doctors are seeing many more patients than they used to, and many of them expect their patients to be more sophisticated and responsible for their health than a generation ago. You further advised her to take the initiative and call the doctor for test results instead of waiting for notification.

Abigail Van Buren

when a doctor performs tests, it is the doctor's responsibility to inform the patient of the results — and an irresponsible doctor should be held accountable. However, in today's chaotic health-care environment, we all need to be more aware of our personal medical needs and insist on good care. Read on:

Abby, it is the physician's responsibility to notify the patient about an abnormal test result. I know some MDs who tell their patients to call for results, but I (and most other physicians) disagree. I tell my patients I'll call them about an abnormal pap. If it's a normal report, they'll receive a card by mail — and if they haven't heard anything by three weeks, they're to call me to find out why. You should not have made "Lucky" feel guilty that she didn't call for her report. She did not fail in her responsibility as a patient.

DEAR ABBY: I have a bit of advice I'd like to give to "Lucky in Connecticut." Keep your own health file. After every visit to the doctor for a complete physical, pap smear, mammogram, ultrasound, MRI, etc., ask — no, tell your doctor that you want a copy of the results. It is your right! You'll probably have to sign a waiver, that's all. Then compare your test results from visit to visit. It is amazing what you can learn from your blood panel results.

Thank you for letting me have my say. Your column is great!
ANDREW JAMIESON, M.D., BUTTE, MONT.

Abby, you were right when you said there is an overwhelming ratio of patients to doctors. Patients must ask questions. That is also their right. Of course, all of us want our doctors to treat us as though we are their one and only patient. Unfortunately, nately, we must lower the pedestal we once had them on to a more realistic level. We cannot put all our faith in them — we must help them out.

Oh, by the way, patients should make sure the names on the test result forms are theirs. Here's a little incident that happened to me: Last February, I was admitted for major surgery (a complete hysterectomy). I was next on the list, and a young woman called my last name. We sat at her desk and she said, "Have you ever been here before for this surgery?" "No," I replied, "if I had, I wouldn't be here now." She said, "Oh, you'd be surprised. Some people come back three or four times." I said, "You're kidding!" She said, "No."

We both looked at each other with that quizzical look and I said, "What's the first name on that form?" The first names were different, of course. The person whose file was in her hands was going to have foot surgery! Could you imagine? My middle name was about to become "Ooops!"

I have kept my own file now for about 15 years and only wish I had started sooner. I guess my middle name back then was "Naive."
INFORMED NOW IN WEST BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICH.

DEAR INFORMED: That's a valuable suggestion, and all that's required is taking the initiative.

BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Everything seems to be out of control. Extravagance and excess combine. Tempers flare. One thing is for sure — you don't have the whole picture. Perhaps if you're lucky, you might get a glimpse! Allow creativity to play out. Let more caring into your life. Tempting ideas come from a friend. Tonight: Put on your dancing shoes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★ Communication brings reactions from a partner. Get to the bottom of problems. Gain insight by walking in another's shoes. You might not be exactly sure what to do when you do gain understanding. Discussions with family remain key to taking the next step. Tonight: Head home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Be careful about committing funds to a work project. Establish boundaries. Know how much you are willing to spend. Find answers. Realize that not everyone has the same reactions. News from a distance adds an element of confusion. Sort through information. Tonight: Make that additional effort.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Understand what ails a child or loved one. What he might be yelling and screaming about may have very little to do with what is really bothering him. Confusion surrounds finances and how much another is willing to offer you. Tonight: Treat another to a home-cooked or gourmet dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Though you mean well, you may come out fighting. Stop and think about what you are doing. Gain a better perspective about what is happening. Don't count on a partner being able to shed light on the present situation. Grin and bear it. Let your personality speak. Others are clearly drawn to you. Tonight: Your call.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Reach out for a friend early in the day. You might not like what you hear. Starting a fight isn't going to help. Be willing to deal with facts. Confusion surrounds your work, goals and daily life. Avoid making a decision prematurely. Stay centered. Take a walk at lunchtime to clear your mind. Tonight: Take some time for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Establish your role in an up-and-coming project. You might feel pressured financially, but making a decision is important. Set priorities. You might not understand where another is coming from. Bring friends together. You enjoy yourself nearly everywhere. Tonight: Where the gang is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★ You might not be sure what another is saying. Don't hesitate to question. Get to the bottom of what is happening. Sometimes you have difficulty absorbing all the different sides of an issue. Confusion surrounds a domestic matter.

Understand what starting an argument could cause. Are you sure you want that? Tonight: Working late.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Discussions reveal a whole different side to what is happening. You are full of energy, though you could be motivated by frustration. See the whole picture, pull back and do a better job of listening. Confusion surrounds communication. Let your sense of humor come out. Tonight: Rent a movie.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Sometimes deferring to others helps you understand them better. A friend could be testy, especially about a money matter. When something isn't working for you, say so. Change what is necessary. Your creativity comes out when dealing with others. Tonight: Go for togetherness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Plunge into work. Worry less about a partner who insists on having things his way. A boss could be angry; his expectations may not be reachable. Do your best. Stay in touch with what you need to do. Make time for an important meeting. Tonight: Let your imagination lead you.

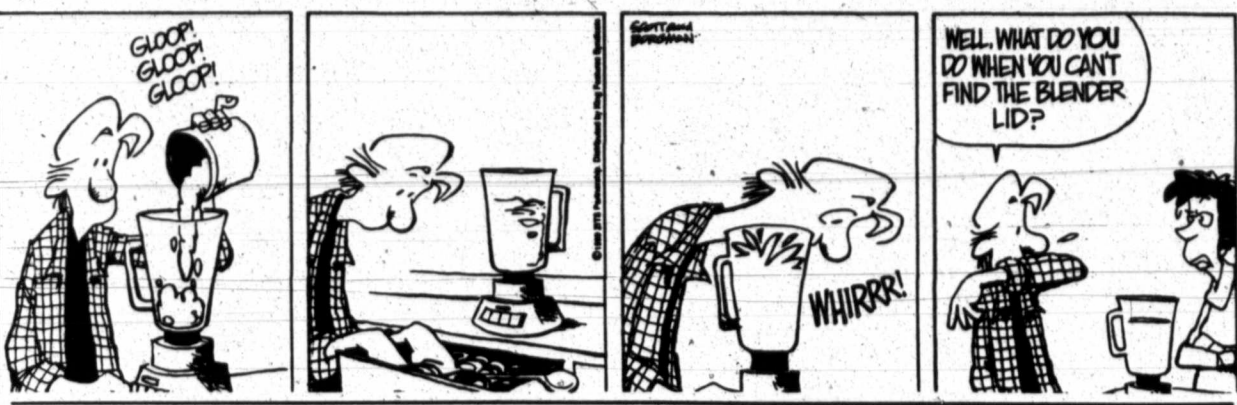

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Allow your imagination to play out. Know your limits and what you need. A loved one or child lightens up your day. Another communicates in an unusual manner. A change in plans might be absolutely necessary. Don't worry as much about what others are thinking. Do your work. Tonight: Burning the midnight oil.

TDH offers healthy heart hints

AUSTIN — The heart is an amazing muscle. For our entire lifetime, it works to pump blood to all parts of the body, carrying nutrients and taking away waste products. In 70 years, it will beat about 2 1/2 billion times.

But for almost 40 years, diseases of this powerful muscle have claimed more lives in Texas and in the nation than any other cause including cancer. Health professionals say you can beat some of the odds, and the key is to take care of your heart by adopting a healthier lifestyle that will not only add years but improve the quality of life.

Among the risk factors that can be changed are smoking, physical inactivity, high blood cholesterol, high blood pressure and overweight. The more risk factors a person has, the greater the chance that he or she will develop heart disease. "Improving the diet can make a big difference in changing more than one risk factor for an individual. Buying heart healthy foods need not be difficult or expensive," said Dr. William R. Archer, Texas Commissioner of Health.

The Texas Department of Health has a list of heart healthy hints for grocery shopping on a budget:

—When shopping for fresh fruits and vegetables, know which ones are in season — they will be much cheaper than those out of season.

—Frozen fruits and vegetables are usually much cheaper than fresh, and they hold just as much nutritional value. They are especially economical because they don't go bad as quickly — if you're not going to use the food all at once, just freeze it for later.

—While leaner cuts of meat are usually more expensive than regular full-fat meats, don't let the price deter you from cutting saturated fat from your diet. Buy the leaner meats, but decrease your portion size to stretch your meat purchase. Make smaller hamburger patties, use less ground beef in favorite recipes such as tacos and try just one piece of steak instead of two. Make up for it by increasing the portion sizes of your favorite fruits and vegetables.

—Did you know that in the U.S., milk is the second-leading contributor of fat to the a tult diet? Why not make the switch to one percent or nonfat milk instead of whole or two percent? The cost is the same, the nutritional value is the same, but the decrease in fat makes a difference.

—Canned soups are an inexpensive and timesaving way to eat heart-healthy — if you choose the right ones. Avoid cheese- and cream-based soups unless they are marked as low-fat. Stay away from those that are extremely high in sodium, too — look for those labeled "low salt" or "low sodium." Some soups packed with vegetables and fiber include lentil, navy bean, minestrone, split pea and gumbo.

—It seems like all the low-fat snacks such as cookies and crackers cost more than their high-fat counterparts. Not necessarily! Search your supermarket's bottom shelves for the store brands they almost always offer low-fat alternatives at a lower price.

—Olive oil is known to reduce LDL, or "bad" cholesterol levels, which makes it the smartest cooking oil choice for the heart. Unfortunately, olive oil is extremely expensive. Good substitutes that are more wallet-friendly are canola and soybean oils.

—If you think that buying juice is just too expensive, why not try frozen juice? The taste is comparable, the nutritional value is identical, and the price is economical. Drink up — 100 percent fruit juices such as orange, grapefruit, and cranberry can count towards one of your five servings of fruits and vegetables a day.

Using this list to reduce the controllable risk factors — those you can change — may prevent a heart attack in the future. Eat more fruits, vegetables and grains; cut down on the higher fat foods; and take up some form of aerobic exercise you enjoy. Not only will you live longer; your quality of life will be better as well.

Among the risk factors that can be changed are smoking, physical inactivity, high blood cholesterol, high blood pressure and overweight. The more risk factors a person has, the greater the chance that he or she will develop heart disease.

Precautions will help 'beat the heat'

HOUSTON — Taking a few precautions when working or playing out in the heat this summer can help prevent heat-related illnesses.

"The key is drinking a lot of fluids," said Dr. Robert Fromm with Baylor College of Medicine and The Methodist Hospital in Houston. "It is best to drink water, however, some sports drinks will also replace salts and potassium the body loses when sweating."

Fromm says stay away from alcohol and soft drinks with caffeine because both can increase urine flow, contributing to dehydration. Dehydration can cause a person to become dizzy or drowsy, develop headaches and a dry mouth. In infants, symptoms would include decreased urination and sunken eyes.

It is important to wear loose-fitting, light colored clothing, plenty of sun block and get out of the heat every 15 to 30 minutes.

Drugs and insemination help with fertility problems

HOUSTON — A new study of 900 couples with unexplained infertility has found that combination of fertility drugs and intrauterine insemination increases the chances of getting pregnant.

Couples with unexplained infertility are those who do not exhibit a medical problem after an infertility evaluation.

"We found couples who took the drugs and went through intrauterine insemination were three times more likely to get pregnant than other couples who did not go through the same procedure," said Dr. Sandra Carson, director of Assisted Reproductive Technology at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and one of the study's lead investigators. "Only five percent of these couples had multiple pregnancies with the overwhelming majority of those multiples resulting in twins."

The study appeared in a recent edition of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Preparation key to traveling with ill child

HOUSTON — Taking a critically ill child on vacation, away from hospitals and clinics, can boost their spirits and dramatically improve their quality of life.

"When planning a trip check with your pediatrician to make sure a vacation is advisable," said Dr. Ernest Fruge with the Texas Children's Cancer Center at Baylor College of Medicine and Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. "If you get the go ahead, make sure to pack all of the child's medications, hospital discharge summaries, insurance cards, and list of emergency contacts. It's important to keep these things on you at all times."

Parents should also plan a leisurely schedule and look at a vacation as another form of treatment.

Nasal spray flu vaccine provides additional protection

HOUSTON — A recent study finds a nasal-spray flu vaccine provides protection against strains of the influenza virus, including those not found in the virus.

"The virus circulating in the community during the study was A/Sydney and the nasal-spray vaccine contained the A/Wuhan virus," said Dr. Pedro Piedra with the Influenza Research Center at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "The nasal spray provided 87 percent protection against the A/Sydney."

Currently researchers have to have a good match between the virus in the vaccine and the virus in the community to provide the best protection against influenza infection. The nasal-spray flu vaccine is expected to be approved by the FDA in the near future.

Study: Genes can play role in cervical cancer

By WILLIAM McCALL
Associated Press Writer

A study of Swedish women offers some of the best evidence yet that heredity plays a role in cervical cancer, a disease blamed mostly on infection by a sexually transmitted virus.

Scientists know that the human papilloma virus can lead to cancer of the cervix in a small fraction of cases. But they have long suspected that genetics plays a role in at least some cases.

The researchers looked at public health records on mothers and daughters to reach their conclusion. They did not estimate what percentage of cervical cancer cases might be attributable to heredity.

The study published in a recent issue of the journal Nature was led by Ulf Gyllensten, a geneticist at the University of Uppsala in Sweden.

The study, based solely on statistics, is considered exceptional because of the detail provided by Swedish records, and the highly stable and homogeneous population in the Scandinavian country.

"This certainly gives us more of a reason to believe it's related to genetics," said Dr. Wendy Brewster, an epidemiology expert at the University of California at Irvine. "For so long with cervical cancer it's been argued that it's environmental, or a sexually transmitted cancer."

Gyllensten compared the Swedish cancer registry, which contains records of all cancer diagnosed in Sweden between 1958 and 1993, against the Swedish national registry of parents of people born after 1940.

The study looked at nearly 127,000 relatives of 71,533 women with cervical cancer. It tracked mothers and daughters in the same families, and distinguished between biological and adoptive relatives.

The results showed a strong link in the risk of cervical cancer between women related biologically.

"This study doesn't tell us what gene it's on, or whether it's multiple genes, but it's very exciting," Brewster said.

The study also indicated that women are at risk for cervical cancer at a younger age if they had a mother or sister with the disease. That typically is true of most types of cancer.

The human papilloma virus is the nation's most common sexually transmitted disease, infecting up to half the women in the United States with between 100 and 200 different strains, said Denise Galloway of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle.

Spot on brain can trigger depression

BOSTON (AP) — Accidental electrical stimulation of the brain during medical treatment can trigger bouts of deep depression that come and go almost instantly, researchers reported in a recent New England Journal of Medicine.

French doctors made the discovery while treating a woman with Parkinson's disease. They implanted electrodes deep in her brain in an attempt to stimulate the parts that malfunction in her disease.

To their surprise, they found that turning on one of these electrodes made the woman profoundly sad. She leaned to the right, started to cry and told of feeling of sad, guilty and useless.

"I no longer wish to live, to see anything, hear anything, feel anything," she told doctors. Asked if she felt pain, she replied, "No, I'm fed up with life. I've had enough."

Ninety seconds after the doctors stopped the electrical stimulation, the woman's depression disappeared. Stimulating another electrode implanted nearby dramatically relieved the woman's Parkinson's disease, enabling her to give up taking her medicine.

The doctors asked if they could repeat their stimulation of the depression electrode while they videotaped her. The woman agreed, and twice more they triggered profound sadness.

Dr. Boulos-Paul Bejani and others from INSERM, the French research organization, published the report.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Stuart Yudofsky of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston wrote that the report "raises fundamental and far-reaching questions about depression" and the use of electrical treatments. Among them:

—Is depression hard-wired into the brain?

—Does depression carry some evolutionary advantage, such as intensifying grief in a way that helps hold families together?

—Can brain stimulation also trigger symptoms of mania, and would this be a possible treatment for depression?

—Could stimulation of other parts of the brain treat such disorders as alcoholism, drug abuse, aggression and violence?

Baseball

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Phillies ace Curt Schilling was selected Sunday to start for the National League in the All-Star game, The Associated Press learned.

A baseball source confirmed that Schilling was chosen by NL manager Bruce Bochy to start over Arizona's Randy Johnson.

Bochy, the San Diego Padres manager, would only say he was leaning toward starting Schilling.

Bochy will make the official announcement regarding the decision Monday.

LOUDON, N.H. (AP) — First, Tony Stewart ran away from the field.

Then he ran out of gas. Then he just ran away, leaving crew chief Greg Zipadelli to explain everything.

"I guess we shouldn't take chances like that," Zipadelli said of the fuel miscalculation that denied his sensational rookie driver his first Winston Cup victory. "This was just one of those stumbling blocks."

And when they stumbled Sunday on the 298th lap of the Jiffy Lube 300, Jeff Burton syphoned off what spirit remained in their tank and won the race for the third consecutive year.

Stewart, apparently upset, was not available for comment.

But Burton couldn't help but wonder about the strategy that gave him his ninth career victory.

"When everybody else pitted, I was surprised that the 20 chanced it," he said of Stewart. "They had such a gap at that point that they could have pitted and still won because everybody else had pitted."

Zipadelli, whose leadership has helped Stewart establish himself as one of the great rookies in NASCAR history, said the attempt to run the final 104 laps without a fuel stop was not made blindly.

They performed a fuel test on Saturday.

"We ran the car out of gas yesterday, and had a real good indication of what it would pick up, and it just didn't work out," he said.

If Stewart was doing all he could to save gas, it certainly was not reflected in track position. Despite knowing he could run hard because he already was committed to pit in the final laps, Winston Cup points leader Dale Jarrett couldn't keep up with Stewart.

After a brief challenge with about 90 laps remaining, Jarrett steadily fell back.

He wound up fourth in his Ford, but increased his lead in the series to a season-high 240 points.

He came in 177 ahead of Stewart's teammate, Bobby Labonte. He fell to fourth, 288 points back, because a crash relegated him to a 38th-place finish.

It wasn't a good day in the Gibbs garage, especially for Zipadelli.

"It was the third or fourth one we might have given away this year," he said. "We'll have to deal with. We've got to walk before we run."

Burton, now second to Jarrett in the points race, didn't have much hope for victory after qualifying 38th in the field of 43.

"We never say if we qualify bad we can't win," he said. "But I have to tell you that going into this race we didn't think we had a chance."

But they got it from Zipadelli and Stewart.

"That's a tough break for them," Burton said.

"He's a helluva race car driver, and they've got a real good team."

Burton's teammate, Mark Martin, who started 37th, wound up sixth despite driving with leg, wrist and rib fractures. He got them from a crash during practice nine days ago for the Pepsi 400.

Martin is third in the standings.

Jeff Gordon, whose chance to win a record-tying third straight series championship is all but gone, wound up third in a Chevrolet. Gordon bumped his way by Jarrett at the end.

Both Jarrett and Rusty Wallace — a spin-and-crash victim after contact with Gordon — offered mild criticism of Gordon's driving.

"That's between me and Jeff," Jarrett remarked when asked what he said to Gordon in the garage area after the race.

Gordon remained fifth in the standings, one spot ahead of Stewart, who wound up 10th in the race.

Kenny Wallace, never a factor in the race but the chief beneficiary of all the late fuel stops, wound up second in a Chevrolet, 1.347 seconds behind for his best career finish. Bill Elliott finished fifth in a Ford, his best result in nearly two years.

Padres roll Rangers 6-2

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pinch-hitter Phil Nevin broke a an eighth-inning tie with a two-run single and the San Diego Padres went on to beat the Texas Rangers 6-2 Sunday and take two of three games from the AL West leaders.

Nevin's two-hopper up the middle off Mike Vepafro came with one out and the bases loaded. Wally Joyner, Carlos Baerga and rookie Ben Davis followed with RBI singles.

Starter Matt Clement and relievers Dan Miceli and Trevor Hoffman held the Rangers to four hits, with Miceli (3-2) pitching one perfect inning for the win. Hoffman, pitching in a non-save situation, allowed Rafael Palmeiro's homer leading off the ninth. Royce Clayton had the other three Texas hits, all singles.

The Padres started the winning rally off reliever Esteban Loaiza with a pinch single by Dave Magadan, who was replaced by pinch-runner Ed Giovanola.

Quilvio Veras laid down a sacrifice bunt that catcher Ivan Rodriguez picked up right in front of the plate. However, his throw to second base sailed over the head of shortstop Royce Clayton and into center field for his fourth error of the season.

Third baseman Todd Zeile made a diving, back-handed catch of Eric Owens' foul bunt attempt and Reggie Sanders walked to load the bases and chase Loaiza (0-1), who allowed three runs and one hit in 1 1-3 innings.

Padres rookie Matt Clement held the Rangers to just two hits through five scoreless innings only to see Texas tie the game at 1 in the sixth without a hit.

With one out, Ivan Rodriguez was hit by a pitch and started trotting toward first.

When plate umpire Brian Runge said something to Rodriguez, he went up to the umpire and pulled up his uniform sleeve and showed him his left biceps. San Diego manager Bruce Bochy, not sure the ball actually touched Rodriguez, came out and argued unsuccessfully.

Rodriguez took third on third baseman Carlos Baerga's throwing error on Rusty Greer's grounder and scored on Rafael Palmeiro's sacrifice fly.

Reggie Sanders, who had his 14-game hitting streak end on Saturday, hit an RBI double in the first to give San Diego a 1-0 lead.

Clement allowed one run and three hits in seven innings, struck out seven and walked one. Texas starter John Burkett went six innings, giving up one run on six hits.

Notes: Texas' Juan Gonzalez was scratched from the starting lineup after his 3-year-old daughter, Gabriella, was taken to Mercy Hospital to be treated for asthma about three hours before game time. Lima pitches Astros past Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — As they headed into the All-Star break with three straight wins, the Houston Astros thanked Matt Galante.

Taking over as interim manager when Larry Dierker underwent brain surgery, the bench coach guided the Astros to a 13-14 record despite several injuries.

When Dierker returns, the Astros will be one percentage point behind first-place Cincinnati in the NL Central.

"Matt's done a great job," said Jay Powell, who got the save in Sunday's 7-3 victory over Kansas City that completed a three-game sweep of the Royals. We had some pitchers get hurt and it's not easy to manage when that happens. But Matt came through for us."

Dierker, who had a seizure in the dugout on June 13 and underwent surgery to repair abnormal blood vessels in his brain, returns Thursday following the All-Star break.

"We miss the skipper. But we got Galante and he did a great job for us. You have to give him credit," said Jose Lima, who got his 13th victory. "We've been doing the little things to win ballgames."

Pinch-hitter Carl Everett hit a two-run double in a five-run eighth inning for Houston (50-37), which is just behind the Reds (49-36) at the bryers more than I do myself."

Lima (13-4), one of three Astros pitchers picked for the NL All-Star team, took a 7-1 lead into the bottom of the eighth but needed relief help after giving up a one-out triple to Rey Sanchez, Carlos Beltran's RBI double and Johnny Damon's run-scoring single.

After Mike Sweeney's single, Powell came in and struck out

Jermaine Dye with runners at first and third.

Lima allowed three runs and nine hits in 7 2-3 innings, struck out five and walked none for the third time in four starts. He has walked two or fewer in his last six starts.

Jeff Bagwell, Bill Spiers and Everett each drove two runs for the Astros.

Craig Biggio hit his league-leading 38th double leading off the fourth, and Houston took a 2-0 lead on RBI singles by Bagwell and Spiers.

Dye's run-scoring double in the seventh pulled Kansas City within a run, and Houston broke it open in the eighth.

Bagwell chased Suppan with an RBI single, Spiers hit a run-scoring single off Tim Lincecum and Richard Hidalgo walked. Everett added his double and Matt Mieske made it 7-1 with a sacrifice fly.

Armstrong snags top tour position

METZ, France (AP) — Soon, the plane would be taking off for Geneva on the way to the French Alps, where the Tour de France gets a whole lot more grueling. But first it was time for champagne.

Lance Armstrong of Austin, Texas, had won Sunday's crucial time trial a few hours earlier, recapturing the yellow jersey and staking his claim as a clear favorite to win cycling's biggest race.

So the U.S. Postal Service team was having a champagne toast to celebrate their star rider's success.

"It's one thing to expect it. It's another thing to see it happen," said the team's gleeful general manager, Mark Gorski.

The 27-year-old Armstrong is earning a lot of new admirers these days, far from home. Many see his comeback from testicular cancer to the very top of cycling as inspiring, not to mention amazing.

"His comeback is great!" enthused Christian Kohl, 19, of Neustadt, Germany, waiting for an autograph before the race. "He was so sick, and now he's one of the favorites."

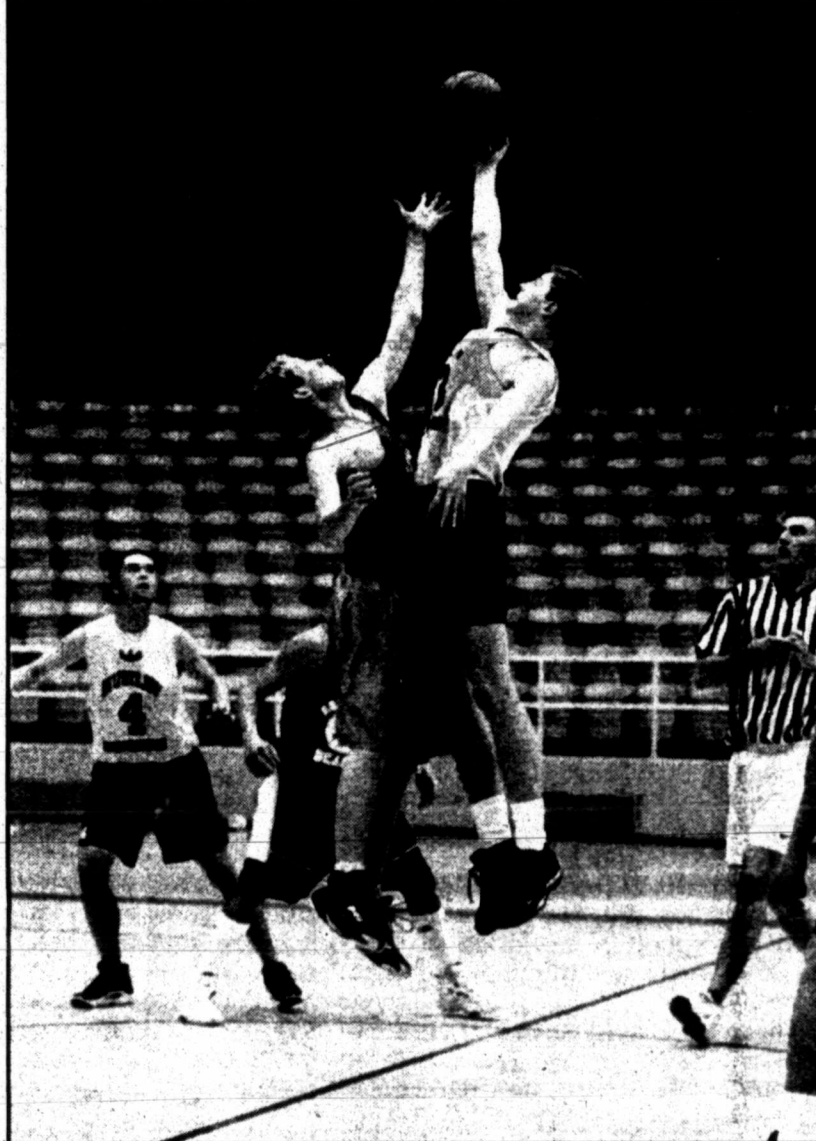

Armstrong, wearing the red-white-and-blue jersey of the U.S. Postal Service team, powered through the 34-mile course in one hour, eight minutes and 36 seconds.

He rode at an average of nearly 50 kilometers an hour.

He left such specialists as Abraham Olano of Spain, the world time-trial champion, and Britain's Chris Boardman in the dust.

He called it "one of the greatest victories of my life."

Now Armstrong, once so severely ill that almost everyone assumed his career — at the very least — was over, is a decisive favorite as the Tour hits the Alps.

Pampa basketball player Kurt George goes up for a ball during a contest at the Eastern New Mexico University team camps. The Pampa squad went 16-0 en route to a championship during the event.

Pampa softball earns appearance in finals

Pampa's 11-12-year-old girls softball team lost to Dumas Friday night in a contest of undefeated teams in the area tournament hosted by the Pampa Optimist Youth Club.

Dumas scored four runs in the bottom of the first inning and one run in the second for a 5-0 lead that turned out to be enough to boost Dumas to a 10-1 victory in the rain-shortened contest.

Pampa's only run was produced in the third inning when Amy Youree walked and later scored on a single by Skye Niccum.

Pampa pitcher Kellie Mullican, along with good defensive plays by Morgan Meharg, Jennie Rogers, Autumn Schaub and Wendi Miller, held Dumas scoreless in the third and fourth innings.

The contest was called in the fifth inning. The loss moved Pampa to an elimination game against Borger Saturday evening. The game against Borger also ended early, but not because of rain. The game was run-rule shortened in the fourth inning, Pampa snagging a 14-4 victory.

Pampa pitcher Sam Cenicerros struck out four batters in the first two innings and Miller caught a foul ball and immediately threw out a Borger base runner attempting to steal second base to hold Borger scoreless early.

Pampa scored eight runs, including two by Schaub, in the bottom half of the second inning.

Pampa profited from nine base-on-balls and a double by Youree. Others crossing the plate included Jacklyn Spearman, Teryn Garner, Mullican, Miller and Cenicerros.

Borger rallied in the third inning, scoring three runs on four hits. But a strikeout by Cenicerros, a fly ball to Rogers and a line drive knocked down by Niccum and thrown to Schaub covering first quickly ended the Borger threat.

Pampa failed to score in the third inning, stranding Rogers, who had singled.

Borger came out hitting again in the fourth inning, using three straight singles to send a run across the plate and put runners at first and third with no outs.

But again, Pampa's defense came to the rescue with three straight damage-control outs. A groundout to third baseman Kari Terrell, a fly ball to Youree in center field and a line drive snagged by Schaub at second base ended the threat.

Pampa began the bottom half of the inning with four straight hits by Terrell, Garner, Schaub and Niccum. Terrell and Garner scored during the hitting streak, and Schaub and Niccum were driven in by a one-out Cenicerros triple. Cenicerros later scored on a ball hit by Jackie Gerber.

Pampa loaded the bases with two outs and Gerber scored on a fielder's choice.

The run ended the contest and effectively ended Borger's tournament run.

Pampa will play Dumas tonight at 7 p.m. at the Optimist Club. A Pampa victory would force another game between the same teams on Tuesday.

Census records invaluable tool for researchers

It will soon be that time again. Seems only like yesterday that I received a census form to fill out and return so my household would once again be counted. The upcoming census will be a first for me in what I call my "new life AD," after divorce. A smile comes to my face when I picture my ancestor's 100 years from now trying to find me after the year 2000. They will be faced with the same puzzle many researchers experience. They find a person one year where they expect to find them, and 10 years later, they seem to have disappeared.

Census records are officially used to determine the number of congressional seats each state is entitled to have in Congress. However, all over the world genealogy researchers count on them as an invaluable aid in researching their family history. If the world systems survive the dreaded Y2K bug, April 1, 2000, will be the official census recording day.

Early census records listed the name of the head of household and how many male or female children were living at home. The census takers themselves might have had little or no education so misspelling of names was a common occurrence. In many instances, names were spelled phonetically. Spend a few hours at a microfilm machine staring at these early records, and you'll understand why many of us wear glasses and carry around magnifying glasses.

As time passed, more information was gathered, census takers were better organized, and in most cases made a better effort to obtain the correct spelling of names and assure accuracy in the information that was gathered from each family. With our modern times, census takers are only used as a last resort if a household does not respond to the census questionnaire that will be mailed sometime in March.

As you fill yours out, stop to think that 100 years from now, your ancestor could be floating around in their home orbiting Earth, attempting to track you down on whatever device will replace our modern day computer.

Rep. Thornberry appointed to committee for second year

For the second consecutive year, Pampa's congressman has been appointed to the conference committee for the Defense Authorization Act.

Rep. Mac Thornberry

The committee, consisting of members from the House of Representatives and Senate Armed Services Committees, is responsible for drafting the final version of the 2000 Defense Authorization bill.

The committee, consisting of members from the House of Representatives and Senate Armed Services Committees, is responsible for drafting the final version of the 2000 Defense Authorization bill.

"I appreciate having the chance to serve on this committee again," Thornberry said. "A lot of important decisions regarding the future of our national defense will be made here. To the extent that this appointment helps me further some of the priorities I've been pushing, then I think it's a good thing and an opportunity to get some positive things accomplished for the area and the country."

Earlier this year, the House and the Senate each passed a version of the Defense Authorization bill for fiscal year 2000. The House bill contained several provisions authored by Thornberry, including an additional $30 million for the Pantex nuclear weapons plant at Amarillo, an extra V-22 Osprey aircraft and improved TRICARE health benefits for military retirees.

The $30 million for Pantex is in addition to what the Clinton administration had budgeted. According to Thornberry, it will be for infrastructure upgrades at Pantex and will help meet increased operational requirements. The defense authorization bill includes $298 million for the plant's general operating budget for the coming year.

In connection with the Osprey aircraft being built in Amarillo, the Clinton administration had budgeted for 10 aircraft. Thornberry said the additional $60 million he wants for the program translates into one extra aircraft.

Thornberry said his proposal for the TRICARE health benefits would raise the quality of care for military retirees. Among other things, it would examine ways to increase care accessibility, increase revenue for military treatment facilities and cut red tape.

In addition, Thornberry said, the FY2000 Defense Authorization Act would increase the pay and benefits of armed services personnel. The provisions include pay raise of 4.8 percent for all military personnel, targeted pay raises for mid-grade and non-commissioned officers, a three percent reduction in out-of-pocket housing costs and added incentives to improve retention among pilots and special skilled areas.

The authorization also reforms the military retirement system. Military personnel would have the option of taking 50 percent of their pay upon retirement or 40 percent of their pay and a $30,000 lump sum payment at 15 years of service upon reenlistment.

Thornberry is a member of the Military Personnel Subcommittee which oversees pay and benefits for the armed forces. He is also vice chairman of the Military Procurement Subcommittee which has jurisdiction over Pantex and the V-22 program.

For first time, state contracts highway maintenance work

DALLAS (AP) — On Sept. 1, for the first time, the state will turn over to a private company the maintenance on a stretch of Texas highway.

VMS Inc. of Richmond, Va., submitted the winning bid to handle repairs, mowing and other upkeep of 65 miles of Interstate 20 in the Dallas area for five years.

The Texas Transportation Commission is to give final approval to the company later this month. VMS already provides similar services in Virginia, the first state to privatize highway operations and maintenance.

Under the contract, VMS will oversee everything from mowing and de-icing to fixing traffic signals, potholes and bridges.

The deal means state highway crews no longer will have to worry about the freeway from the Dallas-Tarrant county line to the boundary between Kaufman and Van Zandt counties.

The move is expected to save the state $2.3 million. According to estimates, it would cost state crews about $13.6 million to do the same work that VMS has contracted to do for $11.3 million.

With fewer miles to maintain, state crews should be able to handle needed repairs on other area roadways, according to Gary Charlton, maintenance director for the seven-county Dallas highway district.

"We're testing the waters right now," Charlton told The Dallas Morning News. "There's plenty of work to go around for our employees."

The private company is required by contract to fix potholes immediately after they're reported.

Nick Masucci, president of VMS, said the company has a special vehicle that can fix miles of potholes in a day. A machine on board the vehicle cleans out the pothole with a high pressure air hose, sprays patch material into the cavity and dries it instantly, Masucci said.

In Virginia, VMS can repair a pothole for $58 — hundreds of dollars, and in some cases thousands, less than state crews.

Masucci said state agencies don't have the same incentive as private firms to keep costs low.

The move is expected to save the state $2.3 million. According to estimates, it would cost state crews about $13.6 million to do the same work that VMS has contracted to do for $11.3 million.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — As she met with hundreds of children indoors, Nicole Johnson wanted them to be somewhere else: Outside, playing.

The reigning Miss America said Saturday the rate of children diagnosed with diabetes is climbing and their lifestyle may be at fault.

"Kids are not running around and playing like they should be," she said. "There's too much watching TV, using computers."

Ms. Johnson, 25, spoke about her own experiences with diabetes, telling the crowd at a mall how she was diagnosed at age 19 after experiencing symptoms such as weight loss, hair loss and excessive thirst.

Since her diagnosis, Ms. Johnson has been an advocate of diabetes education. She said she regularly hears from people who were tested for the disease after she brought up the issue.

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Rapper DMX was arrested in mid-concert by police who accused him of using obscene language.

DMX, whose real name is Earl Simmons, was led from the stage Saturday night as concertgoers hurled bottles at police, who fired their guns into the air to control the angry crowd.

DMX remained in jail Sunday pending a court appearance scheduled today. It was unclear Sunday what words Simmons was charged with using.

Public use of obscene language is illegal in this conservative former British colony. Police stopped a concert by hip-hop singer Foxy Brown on July 3 and escorted her off the stage because of similar allegations. No criminal charges were filed.

DMX has had been in trouble with police in his own country. The 28-year-old rapper was charged last month in New Jersey with possession of illegal firearms and ammunition. He also is free on bail in connection with an assault charge in Yonkers, N.Y.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — When it's a birthday bash for one of the world's foremost restaurateurs, you know the food's going to be as impressive as the guest list.

Such was the case Saturday night when friends of Wolfgang Puck turned out to celebrate his 50th birthday.

Among the 300 guests were former astronaut Buzz Aldrin, actors Ed Begley Jr. and Tony Curtis, television personalities Gary Collins, Mary Ann Mobley, Pat O'Brien and Vanna White, and San Francisco Mayor Willie Brown.

Culinary choices featured Inari sushi, lobster tacos, Moroccan ground lamb and ratatouille ravioli prepared by top restaurants, including Olives, Le Cirque 2000, Shintaro and Sam's.

The party was thrown by Mirage Resorts Inc. Chairman Steve Wynn and his wife, Elaine, and held at the new $1.6 billion Bellagio hotel and casino.

Puck has opened restaurants in Las Vegas, a move that has prompted some of the top chefs in America to set up shop in the gambling capital.

NEW YORK (AP) — Emmy-winning actor Dennis Franz says he probably would have left "NYPD Blue" after the first season because he and co-star David Caruso didn't get along.

Franz, who has won three Emmys during his six-year tenure on the ABC cop drama, said he has gotten along much better with Caruso's two replacements, Jimmy Smits and Rick Schroeder.

"I honestly don't know how much longer I would have stayed with the show," Franz told TV Guide in the July 17 issue. "Life is too short to be that unhappy with something you should be loving. ... The work process for me became not enjoyable."

Caruso left the drama in 1994 to pursue a movie career that never took off.

Franz said Smits' exit after four years last spring was very hard for him because they had grown so close.

"After the last scene I did with Jimmy, I had tears rolling down my cheeks," he said.

Search for bombing suspect now entering its second year

ANDREWS, N.C. (AP) — It was a year ago that serial bombing suspect Eric Rudolph slipped through a police dragnet, loaded up on food and gear at an acquaintance's home and vanished into the rugged Southern Appalachians.

Since then, tracking dogs, 200 searchers and infrared-equipped helicopters have failed to find Rudolph in the dense mountain forests.

The trail has grown steadily cold, and now only a dozen police remain to follow up leads.

"All that's left up here are some investigators," said Macon County Deputy Kenny Cope, who knew Rudolph when they were growing up and later helped search for him. "If they get a hot lead, they can call in the search teams."

Rudolph has been charged in three Atlanta-area bombings, including the 1996 Olympic park bombing in which a woman died. Investigators also suspect he was involved in a January 1998 explosion that killed a police officer and maimed a nurse at the New Woman All Women Health Care clinic in Birmingham, Ala.

Task force leaders said Rudolph watched local resident George Nordmann's ridgetop home 10 miles east of town for several days before approaching it on July 7, 1998, to take some food.

Two days later, he reappeared, collecting oatmeal, batteries, dried fruit, cayenne pepper and other items. He left $500 and drove off in the truck.

Nordmann waited two days before notifying authorities. His truck was found at a campground a few miles away with a note left on the front seat.

Nordmann, who continues to work behind the counter at a health food store in downtown Andrews, said his brief encounter with Rudolph changed his life.

"It's been a year since all this baloney started," he said in a brief conversation with a visitor to his shop last week. He said federal agents leave him alone.

Rudolph put this small mountain community on the map early in 1998.

Hours after the Birmingham, Ala., clinic bombing on Jan. 29, 1998, a truck seen near the explosion site was traced to Rudolph. Authorities set about tracking him down for questioning.

Rudolph rented a video in nearby Murphy that night, bought a large cache of food and supplies and vanished. Searchers found his pickup truck outside Andrews several days later.

Scores of law enforcement officers converged on the area. Rudolph quickly became the prime suspect when nails and other evidence were found in his home, pickup truck and a rented mini-warehouse. Charges were filed.

Later, he was charged in three Atlanta-area bombings, including the 1996 Olympic Park bombing. Rudolph was placed on the FBI's 10 most wanted list and a reward of $1 million was posted for information leading directly to his arrest.

For weeks, search teams aided by tracking dogs disappeared into the thick forests, trying to pick up Rudolph's trail. They explored caves deep in the mountains. Helicopters cruised the ridgetops day and night.

By last July, the manhunt had ebbed as the thick summer foliage and heat rendered much of the task force's high-tech equipment useless.

Then Rudolph visited Nordmann, and everything changed.

Some 200 law enforcement officers soon returned to the woods. In August, James "Bo" Gritz, the former Green Beret colonel and leader of the right-wing Patriot Movement, led about 40 volunteers into the woods to try to find Rudolph. They left empty-handed.

In March, Woody Anderson, leader of the Southeast Bomb Task Force, said investigators were studying about a dozen break-ins over the winter in which food, toilet paper and other supplies were stolen. Sometimes, the intruder wanted only a shower and shave.

Last week, a task force source said the mission will not be dismantled until Rudolph's capture or proof he has left the area.

Residents have learned to take it all in stride — the large task force command post behind the town hospital, the occasional helicopter flyovers, the federal agents in the restaurants and at weekend flea markets.

At the Bob Allison Campground, Pat Bonanno and Ronnie Davis were loading their two mules, Sadie and Daisy, and their horse, Sam, onto a trailer after camping about 200 feet from where Nordmann's truck was discovered.

Bonanno, who works for the Clay County Sheriff's Department, joked that they must have run into Rudolph while riding the horse trails leading to Nantahala Lake.

"I swear I've seen him before all this," said Bonanno, who works part-time at a barber shop in nearby Warren. "I might have cut his hair once or twice."

Cope wants Rudolph, 32, to get his day in court. "All we have is one side of the story. We don't know his side yet."

Whether he is guilty or not, Rudolph has impressed Cope with his resiliency.

"Love him or hate him, I'd like to walk up to him and shake his hand," he said. "I'd tell him he's done a hell of a job."

Five teens in comas after drinking liquid

LAKE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Five teens shared a drink at a get-together and then suffered convulsions and went into comas, authorities said as they worked today to figure out what the liquid was.

The five were hospitalized after they fell ill about 10 p.m. Sunday at a home in this Missaukee County community.

"They all passed around a drink, and they all got sick," state police Sgt. Mike Salasky said. "We know it wasn't alcoholic."

A sample of the liquid was being tested at a lab, Salasky said today.

The five teens ranged in age from 13 to 17. A sixth teen who was at the home but apparently didn't drink any of the substance and hasn't been able to give much information on what it was, Salasky said.

The five were hospitalized after they fell ill about 10 p.m. Sunday at a home.

"Down the road he'll be talked to a little bit more, once we figure out what the drug is," he said.

The victims were not immediately identified. A police statement said all of them were comatose this morning.

The victims initially were taken to Mercy Hospital in Cadillac. One was transferred to Spectrum Health hospital in Grand Rapids; two others were taken to Munson Hospital in Traverse City. Spokesmen at all three hospitals either would not release information this morning or did not return a call.

Expert suggests 'spree killer' mode for 'railroad killer'

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Serial killing suspect Rafael Resendez-Ramirez may have gone into "spree killer" mode, according to the crime expert who pioneered psychological profiling at the FBI.

"He's killing for food, lodging, transportation, whatever his needs are," Robert K. Ressler, a former FBI special agent, told the El Paso Times.

According to Ressler, Resendez-Ramirez has become desperate since being identified as a suspect.

Ressler also said unsolved slayings in Ciudad Juarez, where Resendez-Ramirez has family, could be linked to the tattooed drifter.

"It stands to reason that with his Juarez connections, and based on the homicide case files I saw last year, that Resendez-Ramirez has killed somewhere from six to a dozen people in the Juarez area," Ressler said. "It would be easier for him to get away with crimes in Mexico."
