Cabot layoffs to be revealed later in month

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

As rumors of possible layoffs at Cabot Corporation facilities were circulating throughout Pampa this morning, Cabot Facility General Manager Zouhair Issa said some reductions will be made after July 27.

Issa said he can not release any specific information on the changes at the Cabot facility until then.

Cabot Corporation has been a major employer to Pampa and the surrounding area for several decades. According to Pampa Economic Development Corporation records which were verified in January, over 180 employees are employed at the Cabot facilities which include the carbon black plant as well as research and development facilities.

Employee meetings were reported to have been scheduled this morning to provide information. No report was available regarding these meetings.

The local plant laid off some employees in February, 1999.

Issa did issue a statement which was referred to as the start of a

AMARILLO — Jury selection was to begin here today in a whistle-blower lawsuit against Gray County but the case was continued to an unspecified date — possibly to allow for more settlement talks.

Misti Lee Beck, 33, a former jailer for the Gray County Sheriff's Department, is suing the county over what she claims is the loss of her job. She filed suit against Gray County in 251st District Court in Amarillo in February, 1996, claiming that she lost her job under then Sheriff Randy Stubblefield because she complained to the governor's office concerning the way the Gray County jail was being run.

Mediation earlier this year failed. Judge Joe D. Clayton of Tyler in May notified Judge Patrick Pirtle of the 251st District Court in Amarillo, who will hear the case today, that both sides, while nego-

Commission to pick fire pact negotiators

As part of a busy agenda this afternoon, city commissioners are expected to appoint two of their own who will negotiate with Gray County officials on a new city-county fire service contract.

Under terms of the current pact, both entities are to appoint representatives who will meet annually in early August to review contract performance and discuss possible renewal or termination of the agreement.

The City of Pampa provides fire services within the unincorporated areas of Gray County in return for a payment which this year totals $130,000 paid in quarterly installments.

The present contract expires Dec. 31.

In other action to be discussed by commissioners at their 4 p.m. city hall work session and/or 6 p.m. regular meeting include:

- Review of proposed parking ordinance
- Review of proposed sign ordinance

Officer shoots man during chase

A high speed chase starting in Oklahoma ended about 1 p.m. yesterday just outside Shamrock with the shooting of a man accused of stealing a car.

According to Wheeler County Chief Deputy Rick Walden, Oklahoma officials attempted to stop Steven Pennington after he stole some gas in Elk City. Those officials discovered the vehicle had been stolen from Branson, Mo.

Pennington refused to stop, and the chase proceeded down I-40 reaching speeds of 100 mph until it reached Wheeler County. At that point, Constable Jerry Bob Jernigan joined the pursuit followed by Walden.

Walden said deputies there laid out "stinger spikes" designed to flatten tires and the auto was forced to stop. Authorities said Pennington then took off on foot. Walden said he could not comment on what happened next but other officials said Walden fired at least one round from a shotgun.

"global continuous improvement plan". The statement stated the first phase of the plan is focused on tightening the management of the Strategic Business Unit organization and that Cabot is committed to the plan and has seen "market-focused benefits" from over the past year. The statement further stated additional areas of focus will be growth opportunities from current and new technology development platforms and geographic expansion.

"In the course of implementing the continuous improvement plan, some new product development activities have been eliminated. Also, steps have been taken to reduce costs at specific facilities. These two actions have resulted in a reduction in Cabot's global workforce. In two weeks, (July 27) the company plans to issue a third quarter earnings report press release, which will discuss other plans for growth and earnings capability.

"In announcing the plan to employees worldwide, Chairman Sam Bodman and President Kennett Burnes said, "We will focus our talents and skills on a simpler, tighter organization with more clarity and accountability. This continuous improvement philosophy is totally supportive of and aligned with the core values by which we operate. We will continue to perform with the same high standards of respect and integrity, and the same commitment to safety and the environment."

tiating in good faith, were unable to reach a meeting of the minds on certain issues of the case.

The factual issues in dispute are whether Stubblefield was aware of Beck's reports to the governor's office prior to her termination and whether she was terminated or she quit.

The legal issues involve whether the state's whistle-blower law covers Beck and her situation and whether she was retaliated against for her activities.

According to court records, Stubblefield said he interpreted statements by Beck as her resignation. He said he also interpreted them as being insubordinate.

Beck, according to court records, sent Stubblefield a letter dated Nov. 6, 1995, accusing him of lying and causing others to lie. She wrote the governor's office on Nov. 2, 1995, accusing Stubblefield of mistreating prisoners and of falsifying records. She asked the governor's office to investigate and prosecute Stubblefield.

Included in the court documents is a letter from Stubblefield telling Beck she was fired as of Nov. 9, 1995.

Beck had worked as a jailer for the Gray County Sheriff's Department since January, 1993.

Court records also show that Beck was counseled by the chief corrections officer, J.D. Barnard, on several occasions for incidents ranging from releasing a prisoner and failing to get bond to having contraband in the jail to a missing VCR to her attitude toward prisoners to safety in the jail.

Eight inmates also lodged a grievance against Beck claiming that she spent a total of 2.5 hours in the pickette or control room with Hank Skinner, now on death row after being convicted of killing a family of three in Pampa, and taking him alone into the kitchen of the jail for two or three minutes in apparent violation of jail procedures.

Beck is seeking lost compensation of wages and fringe benefits and seniority rights. She claims she has suffered great embarrassment, humiliation and mental anguish.

There wasn't a check.

I watched the commercials on the television about how if you got a Publisher Clearing House envelope with a green star on it there could be a real check in it. So when I got the envelope sure enough it had a green star. I ripped open the envelope and looked through all the stuff looking for a real check.

There wasn't a check.

Oh, there was the usual fake check, there saying I could be the winner of $100,000 if I send the fake check into the Clearing House I was definitely a winner of at least $1. But as far as a real check?

There wasn't a check.

I took the check they had enclosed, the one that said it could be worth up to $100,000 if I send the fake check into the Clearing House I was definitely a winner of at least $1. But as far as a real check?

There wasn't a check.

That's what they said, even after I'd other stuff that you have to tear out and paste on and check and pick what magazine I wanted and all that. I figured since I'd as good as won the money I'd save myself and those nice folks at the Clearing House a lot of trouble and just go ahead and cash the check. You know what the folks said about the stuff I'd brought to them.

There wasn't a check.

That's what they said, even after I'd explained about how the TV people had said I'd probably get a check and how the stuff in the envelope had told me I'd definitely won something and it could be as much as $100,000. The bank people said a lot of people get those kind of envelopes and nobody around here has ever won $100,000 even after ordering lots of magazines. Even people who had been doing it for a long time, even for them.

There wasn't a check.

Well, if you can't trust the man with the sincere voice on the TV, who can you trust? But the way I look at it is if what they say about the $100,000 is kind of far fetched, maybe what they say about the magazines is not true either. So when the Clearing House people get an envelope from me, they looked at it but you know what they'll say?

There wasn't a check.

Be good to one another and be good to yourselves.

Opinion

The senator's lying statistics

Gun statistics don't say much.

If Benjamin Disraeli's observation that "there are three kinds of lies: lies, damn lies and statistics" holds true, then we should be particularly wary of statistics offered up by politicians.

Take the report issued recently by Sen. Charles Schumer of New York, which included the information that Texas ranked fifth among states for guns involved in crimes and traced by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The Democratic senator from New York said he did an analysis of guns traced by the BATF and found the states and gun dealers from which those weapons originated. Schumer, a staunch advocate of gun control, then ascended his bully pulpit and clamored for more BATF inspections of gun dealers.

It isn't that we doubt Schumer's claim that 1,176 guns were traced by the BATF from outside the state to Texas. It's just that the good senator has completely misrepresented to the public what that statistic means.

First of all, less than 10 percent of guns used in crimes are traced by the BATF, according to David Kopel, research director of the Independence Institute in Colorado, who has written extensively on Second Amendment issues. It's up to local law enforcement agencies to call for a BATF trace, so use of those statistics is highly arbitrary.

Additionally, just because a trace has been requested on a gun does not mean that it was used in a crime, Kopel said. "Not all crime guns are traced and not all traced guns are used in crimes," he summarized.

So, of what use are Schumer's statistics? Very little. "Tracing is fine when you want to find out more about a certain gun. But it is not systematic or widespread or evenly spread so that you can draw an policy conclusions," Kopel said.

But, that, of course, is precisely what Schumer is attempting to do. Wielding his lies, he wants the federal government to "go after" a "few bad apples" in the gun-selling business the 1 percent that, his statistics say, sold 45 percent of the guns used in crimes and then traced by BATF.

But problems with his desired crackdown are many. The BATF statistics are arbitrary; they can be influenced by various factors that have nothing to do with shady dealings by gun dealers. For instance, there's nothing in the survey that indicates how many of the crimes were committed by the people who originally bought the guns. No doubt, some (or maybe even many) are stolen weapons.

Local crackdowns could sway the findings; so could the predominance of very large gun-sellers in a business that has many very small dealers. Even cooperating with authorities' investigation of suspected gunrunners could lead to an abundance of BATF-traced weapons in the "analysis," Kopel said.

"For all we know, 45 percent of all guns used in self-defense came from these 1 percent of stores. For all we know, 45 percent of police guns came from these 1 percent of stores," Kopel said.

"He (Schumer) doesn't look for anything about positive gun usage, so it isn't surprising that he doesn't find anything," Kopel said.

Schumer's agenda-driven study is worse than worthless. It's better to be ignorant than to be misinformed by such statistics.

Economics unpopular politically

The financing of health care has not gone away as a political issue. It isn't just the probable Senate run by Hillary Clinton that will give the matter new life. The political reality is that health care is just too tempting a target for Democrats to leave alone for long.

Writing in the July/August issue of The American Enterprise, Dr. William C. Waters III offers a lucid explanation of medical costs and how we came to be where we are today.

Before the government began permitting companies to deduct the cost of providing medical insurance (and before the government began paying the bills of the elderly outright), individuals either purchased their own insurance or paid for medical expenses out of pocket. In either case, they had an incentive to use medical services prudently.

But after medical insurance became a fringe benefit — after a third-party payer forked over 80 percent or 100 percent of the price of a visit to the dermatologist or psychiatrist or podiatrist — the individual had little or no incentive to curb his appetite for medicine. If the same system applied to food expenses, who wouldn't choose filet mignon and caviar every night?

Food sellers would have every incentive to raise prices and to offer ever more enticing specialties. Those with food insurance would dine on lobster and champagne while those lacking food insurance would find prices prohibitively high.

That's what has happened in the realm of medical care. In 1960, medical spending amounted to 5 percent of gross domestic product. By 1997, it was 14 percent, and unreformed, federal spending on Medicare and Medicaid are expected to triple as a percentage of GDP over the next 40 years. Dr. Waters, one of three generations of doctors in his family, summarizes this way: "My father and his patients were prudent; my patients and I were spendthrift; my son and his patients will be told what to do by people without training or knowledge of the individual consumer's situation."

The Democrats have used the threat that "Republicans want to take away your Medicare" to good effect in countless election contests. The difficult but necessary task for Republicans is to explain that Medicare isn't free, and neither is employer-provided health insurance. Medicare is paid for in taxes, and employer-provided insurance is paid for in foregone wages.

The typical head of household with a wife and child, Waters explains, currently earns $156,000. But when his employer calculates the cost of hiring him, he figures his cost as $39,600. The $3,600 difference is used to purchase a hybrid — part pays for catastrophic insurance, and another part pays for ordinary office visits and other medical expenses.

An excellent reform would be to give the tax deduction to individuals instead of employers. Employers would then pay higher salaries in place of offering the medical benefit. With the extra cash, the employee could purchase catastrophic insurance for between $800 and $1,200 per year. He could use the remainder to purchase more insurance (depending on his family's needs), or he could pay for medical expenses out of pocket as they arose. The consumer would then have an incentive to shop around for bargains and to use his funds carefully, as he would keep anything he didn't spend.

This would be a dramatic departure from our current system, which suffers from too much regulation and too little competition. We are chasing our tails now: The high costs encourage HMOs. HMOs then ration care in ways we dislike. Legislatures in turn pass laws invalidating the actions of HMOs, and medical inflation continues apace. (Medical costs have risen faster than inflation for the past 30 years.)

Reform would have to entail a system for the uninsured. Waters suggests government subsidies or vouchers for the poor to buy catastrophic insurance. This is more economical than paying big bucks, as we now do (it's a hidden part of all medical bills), for the uninsured to be treated in hospital emergency rooms.

Economics is not easy to explain or sell politically. But it does sink in over time. New Democrats proudly proclaim their conversion to belief in markets. Republicans should remind themselves that they were the ones who never doubted.

We should focus more on agriculture

The world's population is estimated at 6 billion. The U.S. population is around 270 million. In just 30 years, the official guess is it will be 350 million-360 million. Americans had better start paying attention to population and immigration.

Many in the conservative political camp pooh-pooh population concerns. Some see it as an excuse to promote abortion. Some have a superstitious belief that technology is the new god and can solve any problem. Some remember the excessive rhetoric of Paul Ehrlich, whose book "The Population Bomb" said in 1968 we'd be toast by the year 2000. Obviously, he was wrong. Most people are when they try to predict the future.

But he was wrong in his timing, not on his basic point. If you think a mushrooming population isn't going to eventually cause horrendous problems, then you will end up with more egg on your face than Ehrlich has on his. Already, some 2 billion folks live in abject misery with zero hope.

Those of us who live in air-conditioned offices and make our living wiggling our fingers on computer keyboards have to take special care not to lose touch with flesh-and-blood reality.

Lin Yu-tang, a Chinese writer, said it best many years ago: God created man with a bottomless pit called a stomach. Every day of a man's life, he must find something to put in it. Ultimately, human existence depends on agriculture, which in turns depends on topsoil and sweet water. Population growth is not good for topsoil or sweet water.

Charley Reese

Farmland converted to suburbs isn't productive, and underground aquifers, thousands of years in the making, aren't easily replenished once drained by irrigation so men can grow crops in places God never intended for those crops to grow. Topsoil, once lost, flat can't be replaced.

There is this thing called carrying capacity. You can describe it as the amount of people a given piece of real estate and or a given set of natural resources can support. The real estate and the natural resources are finite. The variable is the population. As the population increases, the quality of life that a given amount of real estate and natural resources can provide decreases. And, at some point, poor quality of life becomes no life.

To use a simplistic example, two deer and a hundred acres is deer paradise; 1,000 deer and a hundred acres is a death sentence for the herd. And humans, despite our ability to alter our environment, ultimately are no different. There are limits, however strongly that concept is denied by people living an artificial existence far removed from the soil and sweat labor.

Dealing with population is complex. Often, technology aggravates rather than helps. Saving too many babies in Africa ultimately resulted in famine in some areas. Left alone, nature had balanced — cruelly as it always does — the population with the resources. Medical technology upset that balance, so babies who didn't die of measles as infants died of starvation as adults.

As I said, there are limits. The big danger facing Americans is complacency. We are so blessed (or, if you atheists prefer, so lucky) we have forgotten that affluence like ours is an aberration, not the norm. The norm in human existence is poverty. We tend to forget, too, that the constant in human life is impermanence.

Conservatives and liberals alike need to focus their minds and energy more on earth, water and air rather than on ideology. We just literally blew up several billions of dollars worth of stuff and people in the Balkans and accomplished nothing except to intensify human misery. Agriculture, not armaments, is the real key to human security and human survival. That's where our focus should be.

High-Flying Flags Available At Bargain-Basement Prices

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing the letter reminding us of the importance of Flag Day and for urging Americans to fly Old Glory. As I read it, I wondered if your readers knew that by contacting their senator or congressman, they can get a flag for as little as $7.50 — the actual cost of the flag — plus $4 for shipping. They can even have it flown over the U.S. Capitol and have that event commemorated with a personalized certificate.

Regardless of where they get their flag, however, I wanted to join with your patriotic correspondent in urging Americans to take pride in our nation by displaying an American flag. Yours respectfully,

U.S. SEN. PHIL GRAMM, WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR GRAMM: The fact that people can purchase flags at cost (plus shipping charges) from their legislators in Washington was news to me. Batten down the hatches — because I'm sure that offer will interest a lot of people.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the bald man from Fort Lauderdale who sweeps his hair over his bald spot and bugs his wife with the foot-long flag of hair streaming in the breeze when they go boating.

I have barbered for 49 years and don't claim to be an expert, but have learned a little along the way. We all have customers with special requests and try to honor them. That head of hair could and should be cut so that no matter which way it is combed or not combed — or windblown — it would not be a problem.

I produce some haircuts just like that one, because that is what the customer asks for and he is paying the bill, but don't ask me to autograph the work as an artist who is proud.

"Baldy" has one good thing going for him. His wife is sick of his denial, and he should take her advice. His problem is in his head and not on it. Winding a flag of hair over your head is like wearing a sign telling the world you are bald.

WILLARD M. KERK, CHAPPELL, NEB.

DEAR WILLARD: I'm printing your letter because there's no denying that when it comes to hair, you are an expert. But if I see one more letter about baldness, I'll curl up and dye. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In response to your recent column about a husband who attempts to cover his baldness with a comb-over:

Perhaps we could form a support group for balding men and call it "United Hairlines."

WADE KNIGHT, JUNCTION CITY, KAN.

DEAR ABBY: I've had a best friend for nine years. (I'll call her Christy.) She's always been there when I needed her, but here's the problem: She flirts with most of the guys I'm interested in.

Last month I found a guy that I really like. We hang out all the time. I've come to find out that Christy's also interested in him. She never even told me! I had to find out from someone else. He also has the same feelings toward her. He and I are still friends, but I really don't want to have anything to do with Christy anymore. She knew for about a month that I liked him a lot, but she went after him anyway! What do you think about this best friend's behavior?

MELLISA IN THE SUNSHINE STATE

DEAR MELLISA: With friends like Christy, you don't need any enemies! But it may not be her fault that he's more attracted to her than he is to you, and one person does not "own" another person. "All is fair in love and war" — and this is a combination of both.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic, 4-Positive, 3-Average, 2-So-so, 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Express ideas. Let creativity flow for you and those around you. Pressure intensifies at work. Sometimes you let responsibilities weigh too heavily. Money seems to be a bargaining tool — one you might be unwilling to use. Regroup; think about goals. Consider "plan B." Tonight: Let another play devil's advocate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You are pushed beyond your limits. Rather than losing it, pull back. Your questions are valuable. Brainstorm. Discuss issues with a trusted advisor. The unexpected occurs with a boss or someone you put on a pedestal. Establish limits, even though you might not want to act on them just yet. Tonight: Home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Flexibility makes a big difference. Call upon this skill while pressure seems enormous. Could you be a bit negative? Take a walk and think through startling news. Others seek your opinion and ideas. Find what is workable. Communication easily overloads. Tonight: Join friends at a favorite hang-out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Expenses go out of whack. Sort through what is happening. Zero in on the main problem. Others appreciate your feedback. Rethink a recent decision involving a friendship and key direction. Another cannot handle money. Trust your judgment as you pull the financial wild card. Tonight: Go over your budget.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Deal with change and pressure by seeking solutions that work. The boss is in a "bah humbug" mood. A partner's unpredictability continues. Don't compromise or let yourself feel intimidated. Keep at it! Laugh through the impossible, and you'll gain. Tonight: Do your thing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Take time out. Don't worry as much about work and what appears to be useless gossip. Needless to say, you find it difficult to listen to all this. Don't take others personally. Keep your own counsel. Take a walk to cool off. Refuse to make any quick decisions. Tonight: Run home and cocoon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

A partner is hard on you once again. How can you be surprised? The message remains the same: claim your power, move on and don't let this person restrain you. The unexpected occurs with a child or loved one. Anchor, knowing what you want. Networking proves to be unusually successful. Tonight: Where your friends are.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Another certainly knows how to rain on your parade. Opt to move in another direction rather than deal with this person. Your sense of humor comes out with a boss as you work through ideas. Together, you make a strong team. Emphasize what is working for you, rather than what isn't! Tonight: A must appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Your own fatigue could limit you most. Don't depend on physical brawn; rather, use your imagination and mind. You can accomplish a lot if you seek out information. Unexpected developments could jolt you, but they get you going, as well. Tonight: Start planning your weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

One-to-one relating helps you smooth some of the difficult issues you are dealing with. Worry less about money, but act in your traditionally responsible Capricorn fashion. Working as a team helps you see other sides of an issue. Trust your judgment, but detach before making a decision. Tonight: Get romantic!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

You act in your usual, unexpected manner and have others grasping at straws. A family member could put you down because of your willingness to let go and move on. Others continue to try to talk you into their type of thinking. Tonight: Where the action is.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

You might not see eye-to-eye with others, presently. Instead of allowing a conflict to get out of hand, focus on work. Complete one project at a time. Screen calls, as you find others most distracting presently. Know what you want, but be willing to delay plans if the timing is off. Tonight: Exercise away stress.

The Pampa 9-10-year-old All-Star softball team downed Dumas 13-7 recently to win the district softball championship, at Optimist Park.

Pampa pounded out 14 hits during the contest. The offensive barrage was led by Cassidy Tice, who pounded out four singles. Stephanie McVay followed Tice with three singles, Maggie Hopkins connected for a double and a single, Britteni Rice nailed two singles and Nicole Clark, Kenzi Nickell and Erika Silva all connected for singles during the contest.

McVay picked up her third win of the tournament en route to the championship, allowing four hits while striking out four. Hopkins also pitched, allowing three runs and striking out five.

For the tournament, Pampa pounded out 60 hits, outscoring opponents 86-38. Pampa pitchers held the opposition to just 18 hits and struck out 37 batters.

The team now advances to the sectional tournament, which will be held in Iowa Park beginning Saturday, July 24.

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos have reached a contract agreement with second-round draft pick Montae Reagor.

Reagor, a defensive end selected 57th overall out of Texas Tech, agreed Monday to a four-year contract worth close to $2 million, his agent Vann McElroy said.

"I'm very excited, very pleased," said Reagor, who was expected to sign the contract today. "I'm just glad it flowed so well and the deal's coming to a close."

The 6-foot-1, 256-pound Reagor holds the Texas Tech records for career sacks (24.5) and tackles for loss (47). He also set the school's single-season record last year with 19 tackles for loss.

"I thought I proved throughout my college years that I should have been a first-round pick," Reagor said. "But it doesn't matter where you get picked. It's what you do once you get there, and that's what I've realized."

Reagor is the fourth of Denver's 12 draft picks to reach a contract agreement.

The Broncos still are trying to sign their first-round pick, former Tennessee linebacker Al Wilson, before players report to training camp July 23.

DALLAS (AP) — Gil Johnson, quarterback for two of the three years that Doak Walker played for Southern Methodist University, is dead at 75.

Johnson died Saturday of complications stemming from a sudden illness.

The Mustangs had a combined record of 18-1-3 in 1947-48, the two years that Johnson and Walker played together and won the Southwest Conference football championship both seasons.

Johnson was known as "Old Man" to teammates because of his appearance and age. He was one of several players who returned to play football after serving in World War II and was 24 by the time he began his SMU career. He already had a receding hairline by then.

He was known for his mischievous nature. His youngest son, Scott, recalled some of the stories his father told.

Once, on a dare, Johnson threw a pass from 30 yards away into a bucket of ice water, causing it to topple onto SMU football coach Matty Bell, Scott Johnson said.

Bell was said to have turned and growled, "Old Man, if you were any closer to me, you'd be off the team."

Johnson played one season of pro football — in 1949 with the New York Yankees of the AAFC.

Originally from Tyler, Texas, Johnson had lived in Dallas since his college days.

BOSTON (AP) — Billy Wagner, Sean Casey and a bunch of their new National League teammates could barely contain themselves. Not only was this their first All-Star appearance, but it was coming at Fenway Park.

"I saw my first major league game there, back when I was in the Cape Cod League," Wagner said Monday. "I remember walking up the runway and the Green Monster popping out. You never forget it."

The Houston reliever hoped to add to those memories tonight, preferably by preventing any AL hitter from clearing the famous left-field wall. Then there was 10-time All-Star Ken Griffey Jr., who planned to claim a piece of the park.

"Chip some paint off the wall, put it in a bag and take it home," Griffey said. "There's something I will take from this ballpark before I leave."

Griffey made his mark Monday night, overcoming a monstrous performance by Mark McGwire to win the home run derby for the second straight year. It was his best effort yet at Fenway, where he's connected for only eight of his 379 career homers.

"It's a good ballpark to hit in," Junior said. "It's a classic. There are certain ballparks that have a lot of tradition behind them, and this is one of them. And before they tear it down, they're having an All-Star game here."

Just in time for 15-time All-Star Tony Gwynn.

"This is the one old park I haven't played in," the San Diego outfielder said. "I saw what Wade Boggs used to do here. I'm looking forward to doing it myself."

Gwynn, tied with Boggs at 2,982 career hits, won't be able to help the National League try to extend its 40-28-1 edge. Hobbled by injuries, he'll sit out as Boston ace Pedro Martinez starts for the AL against Philadelphia's Curt Schilling.

Still, Gwynn wanted to take batting practice and maybe field a few balls off the wall. How excited was he about seeing Fenway? He had a book detailing the history of the ballpark in his hotel room.

Likewise, Casey was eager to take some swings in a park he'd only seen on television.

"I'm going to try to hit a couple over in BP, just to say I hit one over the wall," the Cincinnati first baseman said.

Milwaukee's Jeromy Burnitz had other goals. Normally a right fielder, he was to start in left for the NL.

"I just hope I don't get a bad bounce off the wall and get embarrassed," he said.

Reds reliever Scott Williamson brought a camcorder to the home run derby and filmed all around Fenway.

"To have an opportunity to step on a field that Ted Williams played on, it's great," he said.

Williams, who will throw out the ceremonial first ball, sounded less enthused about his old haunts.

"No, I'm not sentimental about it. I want to see a new ballpark where the seats are bigger," the 80-year-old Splendid Splinter said. "I've heard a lot of fans say, 'Oh, geez, I wouldn't even think about going any-place else.' It wasn't that great. The park is just an old park."

With a lot of history wrapped up in that wall.

At times, it was made of wood, brick, concrete and sheet metal. Now, the side facing the hitters is all tin and stretches about 240 feet toward center field.

It became known as the Green Monster in 1947 when ads for Lifebuoy, Gem Blades and other products were covered up with green paint. There's also a thin ladder running to the top — grounds crew members use it to retrieve balls that wind up in the 23-foot screen on top.

One other fact about the wall: The initials of former owner Thomas Austin Yawkey and his wife, Jean Remington Yawkey, appear on it in Morse code. Easy to overlook, a series of dots and dashes for "T-A-Y" and "J-R-Y" show up in the vertical white lines to the left of pitchers' numbers on the out-of-town scoreboard.

Hugh Bradley of the Red Sox hit the first shot over the wall on April 26, 1912 — "Few of the fans who have been out to Fenway Park believed it was possible," the Boston Herald reported the next day.

Sammy Sosa hit his first major league homer over the Monster off Roger Clemens in 1989. McGwire hit 18 home runs at Fenway.

Rocky Colavito connected for the AL in the 1961 All-Star game at Fenway, stopped by rain after nine innings for a 1-1 tie.

Williams preferred to pull the ball to right. He put on a one-man show in the 1946 All-Star game at Fenway with two home runs, including a drive off Rip Sewell's "eeephus" pitch, in going 4-for-4 with five RBIs in a 12-0 rout.

Marked at 310 feet down the line in left, many believe the wall isn't even that far.

"The wall's 290 feet," Williams insisted. "When I first got there in left field, they had a rise out there to let you know you're getting near the fence. But that was taken out."

"But still I knew the wall was only 290 feet. And I had a good conception of how close I was," he said.

All-Star pitchers prepared for duel

BOSTON (AP) — Not many hitters have given Pedro Martinez trouble this season. So he's not about to worry now that he has to face Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa and the rest of the NL's best.

"What should I do, start crying?" he said with a laugh Monday.

No, just keep pitching the way he's been doing all season. He's 15-3, the most wins in the majors, with a 2.10 ERA. He'll be the AL starter in Tuesday night's All-Star game in his home park against Philadelphia's Curt Schilling.

"I pitch the only way I know. I'm not going to switch anything," said Martinez, chosen for his fourth straight All-Star game, the last two with Boston.

That can't be good news for the National League, who had to face Martinez in his two seasons with Los Angeles and four with Montreal before he was traded to Boston before the 1998 season.

NL catcher Mike Piazza was with the Dodgers in Martinez's rookie season in 1992.

"Catching him, I knew he was going to be an outstanding pitcher," Piazza said. "He can make you look bad."

Plenty of American Leaguers would agree. In 132 2-3 innings, Martinez has allowed just five homers, struck out 184 and walked only 24.

"I don't think I have a hit against him yet," said AL second baseman Robbie Alomar of Cleveland.

"He throws so many pitches. His ball moves," said Cleveland's Kenny Lofton, the starting left fielder. "He can throw one ball 70 (mph) and the next one 96. You don't see that every day."

He has a chance to become baseball's first 30-game winner since Denny McLain won 31 in 1968. That's a longshot since starters usually work on four days rest instead of three as they did 31 years ago.

But it's not impossible.

"The chances are there if you get the outings," said Martinez, who has a decision in all 18 of his starts. Then he added, with a smile, "After getting 25 (wins) I'll probably ask to pitch every day."

There was little doubt he would start Tuesday night because of his outstanding record and the site of the game at Fenway Park, which "makes it really special," Martinez said.

"That was the only choice," AL manager Joe Torre said.

The selection of Schilling as the starter didn't come until Sunday when he got a call from NL manager Bruce Bochy. The other leading candidate was Randy Johnson. He was 9-3 before losing his last four decisions despite striking out 54 and allowing just five earned runs. Arizona hasn't scored in Johnson's last 34 innings.

"I'm honored to be chosen to get the start," said Schilling (13-

4) "but seeing the lineup they're throwing out there, it might not have bothered me throwing second or third."

Schilling, on his third consecutive All-Star team, said, "I'm as nervous for this as I've been for any game I've ever pitched."

Like Martinez, Schilling has a link to the Red Sox, although that was severed more than a decade ago. They drafted him in 1986 before trading him and Brady Anderson to Baltimore for Mike Boddicker in 1988. He went to Houston in 1991 and has been with the Phillies since 1992.

"No," he said, when asked if he had any bad feelings about leaving Boston, "because I think everything that's happened to me happened for a reason."

Schilling takes a five-game winning streak into the game. In his last start, he allowed eight hits in his seventh complete game, a 4-2 win over Baltimore on Friday. He is tied with Johnson for the major league lead in complete games and second in the NL to Johnson in strikeouts.

"Is Curt the starter?" AL backup catcher Brad Ausmus of Detroit said. "That's a full concentration at bat right there."

Martinez has been even tougher.

"He's somebody I've always watched with a little bit of admiration," Schilling said. "Watching him this year, for me, has been like a Triple-A player watching the big leagues."

Big Mac conquers Fenway's Monster

BOSTON (AP) — The Green Monster met its match Monday. Mark McGwire didn't just conquer The Wall. He embarrassed it, making it look like little more than a picket fence.

He didn't even dent the 87-year-old icon. He sent one soaring off the light tower, about 100 feet above the field and 60 feet over the wall's top.

Clearing Lansdowne Street was easy. A few seemed to soar over the Mass Pike toward the Citgo sign in Kenmore Square.

Even on an official off-day, McGwire set another home run record.

By the time Ken Griffey Jr. repeated as Home Run Derby champion Monday night, it was all anticlimactic. Fenway Park was buzzing about McGwire's 13 home runs in the first round.

"I was having fun," Big Mac said. "I love doing these things. Earlier in my career, when I didn't accept myself as a home-run hitter, I didn't enjoy these things. Now I enjoy them. Sometimes it's better than the game."

McGwire's 13 homers off Tim Flannery broke the one-round record set by Cal Ripken in 1991 at Toronto's SkyDome. His longest shot was his last of the first round, a 488-foot drive deep over the screen and into the summer night.

All the other All-Stars were on their feet, applauding him. Just like all of baseball last year.

Rafael Palmeiro and a few other players followed every swing with camcorders.

Boston's Nomar Garciaparra questioned the measurements. He thought McGwire's balls went a lot farther.

"I don't think it's 480 feet to the Mass Pike," he said.

"510. That's impressive," said Griffey, making his own estimate.

Big Mac's attack totaled 5,692 feet — more than a mile — and a lot more than he hit one mile up at Denver's Coors Field last July.

move derided by players such as Courier. But after watching a tape of the United States beating Great Britain in dramatic fashion during the first round in April, Sampras had a change of heart.

"It was an inspiration to me," he said.

Knowing his about-face was a sensitive topic with his teammates, Sampras said, he'd only play doubles when he announced his willingness to join the team in June.

Since then, Martin has said he'd step aside if coach Tom Gullikson decided to insert Sampras in his singles spot.

"I think Peter should be playing," Martin said. "I've told Tom I think we should have the best team on the court. If he thinks that I'm not part of that, that's fine with me."

Sampras, however, was not persuaded.

"I think Todd's a nice enough guy to step aside," Sampras said.

"It's just not something I'm comfortable doing."

Tour de France reaches Alps

ANNÉCY, France (AP) — For the climbing specialists in the Tour de France, winding mountain passes and thin air will come as a relief after a week of flat stages.

After a day's rest, the tour resumes today in the French Alps where the tough terrain can make or break champions.

American Lance Armstrong, enjoying an incredible renaissance and wearing the coveted yellow jersey for the second time, leads France's Christophe Moreau by more than two minutes.

The 27-year-old Texan has been training hard for the mountain stages.

But after his stunning victory in Sunday's time trial, which he said left him exhausted, today's climb was a test of his recovery powers.

"Before coming in, we all thought I would climb better than I would time trial," Armstrong said Monday.

Echoing the sentiment of many riders, he believes the real racing begins at altitude. "The phoney war is over. Now the real one begins," he said after Sunday's victory in Metz.

Today's 133.4-mile stage begins in the resort of Le Grand Bormand and ends across the Italian border in the ski center of Sestriere.

The race begins downhill, but from then on it's a daunting, relentless climb, with riders having to scale the Col du Telegraphe en route to the 8,729-foot Col du Galibier.

After a descent to Briançon, the riders faced two further climbs before Sestriere.

"I and others will have to attack," said Spaniard Abraham Olano, currently in third place, who was eclipsed by Armstrong on Sunday.

"It's looking good for Armstrong. But there are still two weeks left."

The Alps presented a chance for controversial Frenchman Richard Virenque, who tour officials tried to ban from the circuit for drug use, only to be overruled by world cycling authorities.

Virenque was a member of the Festina team banned from last year's drug-plagued tour. Unlike most of his former teammates, he denies ever knowingly taking illegal substances. But Tour de France officials say he has come to epitomize drug abuse.

Trailblazing Armstrong by 7 minutes, 21 seconds, the four-time King of the Mountains would dearly love to grab the headlines for the right reasons.

"I have to hope that the leaders crack there," Virenque said. "I hope to do well in the mountains."

"My fitness is getting better and better. Every day that passes, I'm in better shape. In sporting terms, I'm now in my domain."

Racing in the Alps, where temperatures are forecast to be high today and Wednesday, is a test of physical and mental endurance. Many racers openly dread it.

Sampras set for doubles competition at Davis Cup

BOSTON (AP) — When Pete Sampras decided to join the U.S. Davis Cup team, he restricted himself to doubles to avoid upsetting those who were there from the start.

Even a masterful win over Andre Agassi in the Wimbledon final and teammate Todd Martin's entreaties haven't changed Sampras' mind as the team prepares for this weekend's quarterfinal meeting with Australia.

Sampras insisted Monday that because he wasn't part of the team when it earned the berth, his proper place at Longwood Cricket Club in Brookline is the doubles court with partner Alex O'Brien.

"The last thing I want to do is jump on the bandwagon," Sampras said.

Only injuries to Jim Courier or Martin, the current singles duo, could make him reconsider, Sampras said.

"Unless that happens, I don't think it's right," he said. "I think those guys deserve to play singles. It's their show."

Earlier this year, Sampras refused to play the Davis Cup, a

FBI has alleged railway killer in custody today

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, the rail-riding fugitive suspected of killing eight people who lived along railway lines, surrendered at a border checkpoint today in a deal brokered by his sister, officials said.

The FBI planned a news conference in Houston to describe how it got hold of the 39-year-old drifter, who is charged in two murders and linked to six other slayings. The Texas Department of Public Safety planned its own news conference in Austin.

DPS spokesman Mike Cox said Resendez-Ramirez surrendered at the Ysleta port of entry to Texas Rangers Sgt. Drew Carter.

Cox said Ramirez's sister, who lives in Albuquerque, N.M., called Carter on Sunday while he was on a West Coast fishing trip and said she had been in touch with her brother through an intermediary.

Carter, an FBI agent and a deputy U.S. marshal met with the sister Sunday night and Monday to negotiate a surrender on a burglary warrant related to one of the eight slayings.

Resendez-Ramirez was being held at the El Paso County Jail this morning, Cox said.

His ability to elude law enforcement had been an embarrassment, topped by his release to Mexico by Border Patrol agents June 2, although he was wanted by the FBI and Houston police had earlier told the immigration service they wanted him for questioning in a murder.

Two days after his release, authorities believe, he killed a 73-year-old woman west of Houston.

The following day, they say, he killed a 26-year-old Houston schoolteacher at her home. His fingerprints then were found June 15 in Gorham, Ill., at the scene of the slaying of a 79-year-old man and his 51-year-old daughter.

INS officials said when Resendez-Ramirez was in the custody of the Border Patrol, which apprehended him for illegal entry into the country, they didn't have information on his criminal records or of any outstanding warrants.

But Immigration Commissioner Doris Meissner said the Immigration and Naturalization Service, parent of the Border Patrol, had multiple entries on Resendez-Ramirez in a computerized photo and fingerprint database that provides immediate identification of aliens apprehended by the Border Patrol. That computer system also is supposed to record lookouts for individuals wanted by other law enforcement agencies but neither the FBI nor Houston police interests in him were recorded there.

The Justice Department inspector general has been ordered to investigate why the computer did not contain those requests.

INS first encountered Resendez-Ramirez in 1976 after he was arrested in Michigan. He was returned to Mexico, but since that time has been deported from the United States on three occasions — in 1985, 1987 and 1991. He was also apprehended by Border Patrol agents eight times since January 1998.

School board votes not to remove book from library

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — A children's book about a boy whose uncle dies from AIDS will remain on library shelves at a Dallas-Fort Worth-area elementary school.

The Grapevine-Colleyville school board voted 3-1 Monday night to keep the book "Tiger Flowers" after deciding it is up to parents to screen the books their children read.

Board trustee Hayden Chasteen said during the meeting he saw nothing wrong with the book and felt it deals with grief in a constructive way.

"It's been said this is about homosexuality. ... After reading the story, that's not what this is about," Chasteen said.

The 29-page illustrated book hints at a homosexual relationship in its telling of a young boy's grief after an uncle dies from AIDS.
