Pampa recruiters

U.S. Army Recruiters Sgts. Karol Kupec and Bert McCune, stationed at Pampa. As recruiters, the two offer prospective soldiers numerous career and educational opportunities as enlistment bonuses.

Army recruiters tout available incentives

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
 Staff Writer

Soldiers can earn as much as $50,000 for higher education after completing a tour of duty; up to $26,500 for two years; up to $33,000 for three years, and as much as $50,000 for four years.

Today's Army places high emphasis on education and demonstrates this by offering a myriad of educational and financial incentives for prospective recruits.
 "We believe more education put in soldiers makes better soldiers and better citizens," explained Sgt. First Class Karol Kupec of the U.S. Army recruiting station at Coronado Center here.
 Supporting an Army recruit's desire for higher education not only benefits the soldier, but also benefits the U.S. Army, he explained.
 "Statistically those with more college education stay with us longer," he said.
 Through the Montgomery GI Bill plus the U.S. Army College Fund, soldiers can earn as much as $50,000 for higher education after completing a tour of duty; up to $26,500 for two years; up to $33,000 for three years, and as much as $50,000 for four years.

 Recruits who have federally insured student loans from previous college experience may qualify to have up to $65,000 of those loans paid through the Army Loan Repayment Program.
 "A lot of parents look at the Army as a last resort. It's really good for their student and financially, for the family, too," Kupec said.
 In addition to the Army's education incentives, the State of Texas pays for an additional 150 college credit hours after the GI Bill funds have been exhausted, he added.

McVeigh: Dead children 'collateral damage'

In the interviews, which began in May 1999, McVeigh got choked up while talking about killing a gopher in a field, but never expressed remorse for the bombing.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Detailing his motives in the Oklahoma City bombing for the first time publicly, Timothy McVeigh says he pulled the federal building to avenge Waco and Ruby Ridge — and that he regrets having killed children only because it undercut his cause.
 "I recognized beforehand that someone might be ... bringing their kid to work," McVeigh says in a new book. "However, if I had known there was an entire day care center, it might have given me pause to switch targets. That's a large amount of collateral damage."

 In 75 hours of prison interviews, McVeigh talked to Lou Michel and Dan Herbeck, reporters for The Buffalo News, near his hometown of Pendleton, about how and why he bombed the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. The April 19, 1995, attack killed 168 people, 19 of them children.
 In the interviews, which began in May 1999, McVeigh got choked up while talking about killing a gopher in a field, but never expressed remorse for the bombing.
 "I understand what they felt in Oklahoma City. I have no sympathy for them," he told the authors of "American Terrorist: Timothy McVeigh and the Oklahoma City Bombing."
 Before deciding to bomb the Murrah building, McVeigh says he considered a number of possibilities, including assassinating elected officials.

 But he chose the bombing, in part, for its visual impact and decided on the Murrah building because it had federal agents and glass in the front, making it vulnerable and giving TV cameras a good shot.
 Michel told ABC's "PrimeTime Thursday" that McVeigh's only regret was that the children's deaths proved to be a public relations nightmare.
 CNN on Wednesday quoted Danny Detenbaugh, the FBI's lead investigator in the case, saying he had no doubt McVeigh knew children would be among his victims.
 "No matter what and how you go by that building, if you look at the building, you're going to see all the little cut-out hands, all the little apples and flowers showing that there's a kindergarten there — that there are children in that building," Detenbaugh said.

 Detenbaugh also said the FBI found evidence that McVeigh may have considered other attacks in Dallas and Omaha, CNN reported.
 McVeigh, 32, told the authors he was disappointed when part of the building remained standing after his 7,000-pound bomb went off. "Damn, I didn't knock the building down. I didn't take it down," he said.
 Authorities have said the bomb was between 4,000 pounds and 4,800 pounds, but McVeigh told the authors it was heavier by more than 1 ton.
 He said he was the sole architect of the plan and resorted to threats against Terry Nichols' family when his Army buddy, also convicted in the attack, hesitated before helping to load the explosives into a rental truck.
 McVeigh is scheduled to be executed

Grants will buy S. Army, Carson museum 2 vans

By NANCY YOUNG
 Managing Editor

A brand new 15-passenger van is on the way for Pampa's Salvation Army.
 The Amarillo Area Foundation has announced it has given a $24,000 grant to the Pampa group to purchase a reliable vehicle for the organization's use.
 "We're very happy," said Lt. Guy Watts. "Our 1992 van had almost 130,000 miles on it and needed replacing. But we haven't had the funds."
 He said other funds were earmarked for use for insurance and maintenance, but not for a vehicle.
 "We are very appreciate of the Amarillo Area Foundation. We will be able to transport our 6,000 lb. disaster van with it as well as transport people safely to programs," said Watts.
 He said a group of women from the Salvation Army Church are planning to attend a meeting in May in Dallas, and now they will have safe transportation. "I would not have trusted our old van to get them there," he said.
 Watts said the 2001 Ford is being purchased through West Texas Ford in Pampa and should arrive in six to eight weeks.

Motorist hits ice, plows into DPS unit at I-40 wreck scene

McLEAN — An Ohio motorist topping an icy overpass on Interstate 40 near McLean Tuesday plowed into the back of a Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) cruiser protecting another accident scene.
 The driver of the vehicle, Tim Winkles, 19, of Tiffin, Ohio, suffered minor injuries in the wreck, but everyone else involved escaped injury, said Trooper Lynn Holland of Shamrock. Winkles was treated for cuts and bruises at the scene by the McLean EMS, he said. A 20-year-old passenger in Winkles' vehicle was asleep when the accident occurred and only remembers the air bag going off, Holland said.
 DPS reports indicate that at 4:15 a.m. Tuesday, Trooper Jerome Ingle of McLean was working an accident on I-40 West, 12 miles east of McLean. He had parked his DPS patrol car, a 1997 Ford Crown Victoria in the westbound inside lane of I-40 with emergency lights flashing to alert motorists coming up on the accident.
 Ingle was standing outside the vehicle directing traffic, Holland said, when a 1995 Mercury Cougar driven by Winkles topped the overpass and crashed into the rear of the DPS patrol car.

Freedom Museum creates special fund

Freedom Museum is seeking to establish an endowment fund to help provide future security for the museum at 601 N. Hobart. Donations are tax deductible.
 Meanwhile, efforts continue to get the museum about $1 million from a Texas Department of Transportation fund of $130 million available for statewide highway enhancement projects. The cost split is 80 percent TDDOT funds and 20 percent local money.
 Museum officials say the museum has outgrown its space and is in need of additional exhibit and storage areas, as well as a rotunda to house its B-25 World War II bomber.
 The building plans call for making the facility a 24-hour rest stop by providing rest rooms — something it must have to qualify for the

Wife Finally Sees the Light About Her Controlling Husband

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "At My Wit's End," whose best friend's husband was insanely jealous, prompted me to write.

For 13 years, I was married to a very controlling, much older man. A woman named "Helen" from church would call me occasionally. Since I wasn't allowed to have friends, each time she called, my husband would make a scene in the background. I was extremely embarrassed, but one day she said: "He's trying to run me off. He may have been in your life a long time before me, but I'll be around long after he's gone!"

That statement caused me to review my situation and realize the extent to which I was being controlled. Suddenly, I experienced a feeling of power where before I felt helpless. I came to realize that I was miserable in my marriage, but I had believed it was all my fault. Had it not been for Helen's comment, I might still be in that abusive relationship (which it was).

That was 20 years ago. I divorced him, and my life has changed tremendously since then. Please, Abby, tell "Wit's End" she may be her friend's only link to a new life.

BEEN THERE IN TEXAS

DEAR BEEN THERE: I'll do better than that. I'll point out that being isolated from friends and family by a partner - male or female - is one sign of a potential abuser. Read on for some other signs (adapted with permission from the Project for Victims of Family Violence in Fayetteville, Ark.):

(1) PUSHES FOR QUICK INVOLVEMENT: Comes on strong, claiming, "I've never felt loved like this by anyone." An abuser pressures the new partner for an exclusive commitment almost immediately.

(2) JEALOUS: Excessively possessive; calls constantly or visits unexpectedly; prevents you from going to work because "you might meet someone"; checks the mileage on your car.

(3) CONTROLLING: Interrogates you intensely (especially if you're late) about whom you talked to and where you were; keeps all the money; insists you ask permission to go anywhere or do anything.

(4) UNREALISTIC EXPECTATIONS: Expects you to be the perfect mate and meet his or her every need.

(5) ISOLATION: Tries to cut you off from family and friends; accuses people who are your supporters of "causing trouble." The abuser may deprive you of a phone or car, or try to prevent you from holding a job. (6) BLAMES OTHERS FOR PROBLEMS OR MISTAKES: It's always someone else's fault if something goes wrong.

(7) MAKES OTHERS RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS OR HER FEELINGS: The abuser says, "You make me angry," instead of, "I am angry," or says, "You're hurting me by not doing what I tell you."

(8) HYPERSENSITIVITY: Is easily insulted, claiming hurt feelings when he or she is really mad. Rants about the injustice of things that are just a part of life.

(9) CRUELTY TO ANIMALS AND CHILDREN: Kills or punishes animals brutally. Also, may expect children to do things that are far beyond their ability (whips a 3-year-old for wetting a diaper), or may tease them until they cry. Sixty-five percent of abusers who beat their partner will also abuse children.

(10) "PLAYFUL" USE OF FORCE DURING SEX: Enjoys throwing you down or holding you down against your will during sex; finds the idea of rape exciting.

(11) VERBAL ABUSE: Constantly criticizes or says blatantly cruel, hurtful things; degrades, curses, calls you ugly names. This may also involve sleep deprivation, waking you up with relentless verbal abuse.

(12) RIGID SEX ROLES: Expects you to serve, obey, remain at home.

(13) SUDDEN MOOD SWINGS: Switches from sweet to violent in minutes.

GOP pushes Bush tax cuts for marriage, children and death

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax relief affecting millions of married couples, children and people who stand to inherit wealth is next on the agenda for House Republicans, who are forging ahead with President Bush's $1.6 trillion tax cut plan piece by piece. The House was scheduled Thursday to vote on legislation costing nearly $400 billion over 10 years that would cut taxes for virtually all married couples, including the 25 million who now pay more than they would if they were single. The legislation also would gradually double the $500 child tax credit, including a $100 increase effective in 2001. Later Thursday, the House Ways and Means Committee planned to approve legislation that would eliminate estate taxes by 2011 while shifting some of the tax burden to heirs who sell assets above a certain value. That bill is headed for a House floor vote next week.

Israel says bombardment was intended as warning to Arafat

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — Israel's bombardment of Palestinian military targets was a warning to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat to rein in militants who killed three Israeli children this week, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said Thursday. Windows in Arafat's two-story villa were shattered in Wednesday night's rocket attack aimed at headquarters of Force 17, a Palestinian security service, in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Ramallah. One Force 17 member was killed. About 60 Palestinians injured. In fresh clashes Thursday, three Palestinians were killed by Israeli fire. A Palestinian policeman died in a gun battle with Israeli troops near the Jewish settlement of Netzarim in Gaza. Two boys, ages 13 and 17, were shot dead in a stone-throwing clash near the Erez crossing between Gaza and Israel. Eight teen-agers were wounded in the clash. The bombardment was the first military strike ordered by Prime Minister Ariel Sharon.

Congress and White House signal support for ban on human cloning WASHINGTON (AP) — Concerned that a few researchers may try to clone a human despite the risks, lawmakers are planning legislation outlawing such experiments. The White House says President Bush will sign the bill. Scientists told a congressional panel Wednesday that efforts to clone humans are ethically treacherous and likely to produce deformed babies. While someone might want to clone himself, ethicists said, a resulting baby would have no choice in the matter. The Food and Drug Administration says any human cloning experiments in the United States would need its approval and, based on safety concerns, the agency would not approve any applications at this time. But cloning opponents worry that federal law may not be strong enough to back up FDA's authority, and some want a ban in place even if safety concerns are satisfied.

San Antonio rocked by corruption scandal

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two San Antonio police officers quit their jobs and two others were suspended without pay Wednesday following their arrests along with five police officers on federal drug charges.

Police Chief Al Philippus was working Wednesday to get rid of four others, including two who have been denied bond, according to the San Antonio Express-News' Thursday editions.

The resignations and suspensions came just hours before an undercover FBI videotape apparently showing police officers laughing and sharing cash from drug deals was aired on local television news stations.

The FBI says the video shows San Antonio police officers protecting loads of fake cocaine being sold by a midlevel drug dealer who really was an FBI agent.

Phillippus declined to discuss the suspensions, but publicly condemned the actions the federal authorities have attributed to accused officers.

The FBI last Thursday arrested San Antonio police officers Sgt. Conrad Fragozo Jr., Patrick Bowron, Peter Saenz, Arthur Gutierrez Jr., Lawrence Bustos, Manuel Cedillo Jr., Alfred Valdes, and David Anthony Morales.

Gutierrez and Saenz resigned. Bustos and Cedillo were suspended.

Valdes is also expected to be suspended, the newspaper said.

Also charged in the FBI's sting were Bexar County Sheriff's Deputy Richard Rowlett Buchanan; former Bexar County Reserve Deputy Constable Gilbert Andrade Jr.; and civilians Edward Fragozo, the uncle of Fragozo, and Albert Mata.

"They were very somber," Philippus said after meeting with Bustos and Cedillo. "Some come in here with their young wives, and you can see it in their faces that their family are the true victims here."

The chief said he was consulting with the department's legal office to determine how to serve the same kinds of suspensions on the other three officers.

More than 3,000 state criminal cases ranging from drunken driving to narcotics trafficking could be in jeopardy because they involve at least one of eight law enforcement officers.

The cases date from 1998, when the first allegations against the officers are said to have occurred, Bexar county officials said Tuesday.

After a five-hour hearing for four officers on Monday, a judge set bond for each of the defendants at $100,000.

Top prosecutors said it could take weeks to sort through the files, some of which involve the accused officers.

"We're talking about more than just the credibility of their (officers') testimony," Michael Bernard, Bexar County first assistant district attorney, told the San Antonio Express-News in Wednesday's editions. "As a practical matter, the officers simply aren't available to testify."

Federal prosecutors say four of the officers — Fragozo Jr., Bowron, Cedillo and Bustos — admitted to drug crimes shortly after they were arrested last Thursday.

In detention hearings Tuesday, U.S. Magistrate John Primomo denied bond for the two San Antonio officers, Fragozo Jr. and Bowron, who are accused of leading the group.

Prosecutors filed a transcript of comments they attribute to Morales in preparation for the detention hearings. Morales is accused of offering, on duty and in uniform, to guard cocaine shipments in a gated community around the clock and asked for an automatic weapon so he could kill intruders at "close quarters."

Morales' chance to argue for release is scheduled later this week.

In court documents that detail the accusations against six police officers and the uncle of one, prosecutors allege that the men were paid from $1,500 to $6,500 each time they helped protect or escort what they thought was cocaine. Different combinations of officers participated in at least nine deals throughout the year 2000, authorities said.

Bernard declined to discuss individual cases among the 3,000 until his office has determined how they will be settled, but he added that none of those reviewed so far involve homicide or other violent felonies.

He said he didn't expect to see those kinds of cases emerge given that most of the accused officers worked patrol.

"Patrol officers are going to make DWI arrests. They're not going to be the lead officers in a homicide or a sexual assault or a major fraud case," Bernard said. "I think we're looking at a lot of lower-level drug cases."

But there are more than 50 felony cases — most of them drug-related — involving the officers that the district attorney's office has accepted for prosecution.

Most were handled by Buchanan, 44, a Bexar County deputy sheriff who worked as an evidence technician.

Buchanan is the sole defendant in the FBI's sting facing only a theft charge. No drug charges have been filed against him.

Bernard said five or six section chiefs within the district attorney's office will review the 3,000 cases.

"We haven't mapped it all out yet," Bernard said. "It's a huge amount of work."
