PLAINVIEW IS DRENCHED BY BIG SHOWER

Most of West Texas Is Benefitted by Moisture.

Fog which settled down over the North Plains last night, persisted today, but the precipitation was negligible. It was much warmer last night.

Most newspapers entering Pampa from other cities predicted it would be fair today, but it wasn't. It is scheduled to be cloudy and colder tomorrow. Harvester field, where the Pampa-Ranger post-season game will be played, can stand a small rain without getting muddy.

PLAINVIEW, Dec. 4. (AP)—A general rain measuring from one-half to one and one-half inches fell last night and continued today over a wide area of the plains country. Plainview received 3.0 of an inch, Floyd 1.3 inches, Petersburg and Hale Center .92, Olton 1.2 inch, Turkey, Quitaque and Lockney, one inch each.

LUBBOCK, Dec. 4. (AP)—June Phivus threw a curve ball at the weather men last night and this morning in the form of gentle rains totaling an inch over the counties of the South Plains. Temperatures Wednesday night and this morning were springlike, the thermometer standing at and near 56 degrees.

SAN ANGELO, Dec. 4. (AP)—Rain was falling this morning over a large portion of West Texas, ranging from showers to three inches at Pecos in Howard county. The gauge here up to 9:30 o'clock was 3.3 inches. Sterling City and Sweetwater reported heavy rains; Robert Lee, Bronco, Kola, Menard, Junction, Brady and Burnham each got one inch and Rowena and Wall got one-half inch. Range for livestock and crops is not expected to be affected but the best of the cotton crop will be damaged. Motor travel on dirt roads was impeded.

No Clue in Amarillo Case

Motive Is Not Apparent for Brutal Slaying Last Night of Grocer.

AMARILLO, Dec. 4. (AP)—Investigation Thursday failed to reveal a motive for the brutal slaying early Thursday night of Harold McCarrick, 45, Amarillo grocer who fell in the street near his home before a spray of bullets directed by one of two unknown assailants, for whom officers are searching, aided only by meager clues from eye witnesses.

Officers believe McCarrick, regarded generally as highly respectable, may have been "put on the spot" for some unknown reason. Aside from that belief based upon accounts given by witnesses, and aside from the possibility that the gunman made a mistake in the identity of their victim, mystery shrouds the killing.

The two men, one short and one tall, who accosted McCarrick as he was on his way home from his store, darted diagonally across the street east from Fourth avenue, and meeting McCarrick on a Lincoln street one of the men opened fire without warning.

Not a word was spoken, eye witnesses said, McCarrick was less than five feet away from the two men.

At the first shot, believed to have penetrated the victim's stomach, McCarrick staggered and started to turn around. He fell as another bullet was sent into his body. It is believed the second slug, which came from a .44-caliber gun tore through the right lung. A third bullet fired after McCarrick fell, entered the head behind the right ear and plowed a gaping wound in the left temple.

Fine Reception Given Broadcast Of Last Night

The program broadcast from the Pampa studios of KGRS was either the best that has been given, or else there were just more appreciative listeners. Because, not only was the studio flooded with messages sent by local people but 100 telegrams from out of the county were received. Many of these came from citizens living out of the state.

The hit of the program seemed to be the "mysterious tenor" who was on the air last night. Sam Fenberg, announcer, said that he will sing every Wednesday night from Pampa over KGRS. The "mysterious tenor" received six requests for songs.

The reception was particularly good in Pampa last night. The program came in fine with practically no interference, it was unanimously reported. Telegrams were received from Arizona, New Mexico, California, Oklahoma. Several messages were even received from Amarillo.

A new performer over the local station last night was John Cochrane of the Amarillo and Pampa colleges of music. Mr. Cochrane, accompanied by Mrs. May F. Carr played several classical selections with an almost flawless technique. The radio audience responded to his artistry with a number of messages.

Others on the program included Mrs. R. A. Webb and Mrs. W. H. Leale, vocal selections; Mrs. Perkins, the Lunsford Brothers, Preston Shipin, Harry Kelly, Mrs. Tom Brabham, Miss Stallings, a Hawaiian duet, the pep squad of Pampa high school. Various ministers of the town and others made short talks urging citizens to contribute to the Community Chest.

Sherman White of McLean, county attorney-elect, is attending court in Pampa today.

COURT TESTS OF PRORATION TO BE HELD BEFORE NEW ATTORNEY GENERAL, ASSISTANT BELIEVES

AUSTIN, Dec. 4. (AP)—Important oil proration suits, involving authority of the State Railroad Commission to curtail production as a means of conservation may not be heard until the new attorney general is installed.

Dewey Lawrence, assistant attorney general who has been handling the cases for the state, said today that Judge George B. Calhoun, before whom they are pending, has been unable to set an early trial date. He said attorneys for the defense had conferred with him and they would petition Judge Calhoun to set the cases for Jan. 12.

Armed Men Enter New York Hospital For Insane and Free Six Inmates

BEACON, N. Y., Dec. 4. (AP)—Three men, armed with guns, invaded Manhattan State Hospital for the Criminal Insane early today, freed six inmates and liberated six employees.

The leader of the gang was recognized as a former inmate by hospital attendants who said he was William Nelson of New York.

The six liberated were: Harry Gordon, 38, Rochester; Frank Danberkeylen, 31, New York; Joseph Kaylor, 35, the Bronx; John S. Bankill, 22, New York; John Higgins, 30, Brooklyn; Anthony A. Elloy, 44, Brooklyn.

Dr. Raymond F. O. Kleb, superintendent, said the three men entered the hospital grounds through the rear yard where they encountered Patrick McGrath, night watchman, and compelled him to accompany them.

In the kitchen they came upon Clifford Cooper, night cook, forcing him to join them. They continued through the building toward the front, where they picked up Joseph Brown, the roundsman. Then they herded their prisoners into the front office where Samuel Kane, night office man, was on duty.

While one of them guarded their prisoners the other two went to the front dormitory where the six men were in bed. The six apparently were watching for them. Dr. Kleb said, for as soon as the intruders appeared they sprang from their beds and ran out, two of them left clad only in night attire. They drove away in two automobiles.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 4. (AP)—Harry Gordon, 38, one of the six inmates liberated from Matteawan today, was sent to that institution for the slaying Feb. 11, 1927, of two business rivals and the serious wounding of two others.

The giant cowboy-butcher, armed with two guns, shot and killed Harry Katz on the doorstep of his home, brushed aside witnesses of the killing and drove his car to the Tol market, where he fatally shot Sam Tois beside his meat block.

Before the police, a jump behind the mad slayer, could catch up, Gordon entered a delicatessen store and sent two bullets into the body of Morris Klass, another business rival.

Jack Cohen, working with Klass, was shot in the leg.

Purse Owned by Missing Teacher Is Found In Irrigation Ditch by Sheriff

FORT MORGAN, Colo., Dec. 4. (AP)—The purse carried by Miss Edna Marriott, missing school teacher, was found in an irrigation ditch near here, Sheriff Rufus A. Johnson announced today.

The purse, which was empty, was discovered seven miles from the point at which her hat bag was found last week in the main canal of the Bijou irrigation ditch. It was identified by relatives of the missing woman.

Sheriff Johnson said the find increased his hopes of locating the body of Miss Marriott, who disappeared the night of Nov. 15, at Wiggins, Colo.

ALSUP TELLS OF TIP UPON BANDIT RAID

Claims Police Chief Gave Him Gun to Use

DALLAS, Dec. 4. (AP)—John Alsop, charged with the killing of two negroes to collect a bank bandit reward, today denied from the witness stand that he framed the robbery of the First State bank of Polytchnic, Fort Worth, April 10, in which the negroes were slain.

Alsop is on trial for the murder of George Terrell, one of the negroes, after two previous trials had ended in divided juries. He was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment for the murder of Will Tate, the other negro.

The defendant said that about April 1 he received from Will Vincent, a negro, what he considered a bona fide tip that two negroes planned to rob the Polytchnic bank April 8, 9 or 10.

He reported the tip to Chief of Police Lee of Fort Worth, he said, and asked the chief if there was any objection to him helping guard the bank.

The defendant said he stationed himself near the bank April 7, 8 and 9 but nothing happened. He was back April 10, he said. He testified he saw two negroes enter and suspected they were the robbers. About a minute and a half later, he heard a shot, he said.

Before he could run into the bank the negroes ran out. Alsop followed one of the negroes, shooting at the man three or four times until he fell, then jumped on the running board of a passing automobile and went in the opposite direction until he came within range of the other negro, shooting him down also, he testified.

Alsop said he shot the negroes because he thought they had robbed the bank and were fleeing with the loot. District Attorney Robert A. Stuart brought out that Alsop saw no money in the negroes' possession, that he was not in the employ of the police department and that he received no money for his services.

Both the state and defense rested shortly after Alsop's testimony was completed and District Judge Charles A. Pippen said he would give the charge to the jury at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Leo Brewster, Fort Worth attorney, testified that A. P. Boyd told him that Alsop had nothing to do with the plan to rob the bank. Boyd testified yesterday that he and Alsop were co-conspirators in the plot.

Previous to the filing of the motion, Newton F. Willis, counsel for the State, filed several bills of exceptions in which he stated that Judge Clifford Braly began examination of jurors in the absence of the defendant's counsel and in addition, made improper remarks before the jury panel. The defendant's counsel argued that the railroad company could not get a fair trial before the jury.

Plaintiff's attorneys are Cuffis Douglass and Fred Weeks. Other defendant attorneys included the firm of Hoover and Cousins of Canadian.

Carl Dunlap underwent a major operation in Pampa hospital yesterday.

Mrs. F. M. Drumm and infant son left Pampa hospital yesterday.

Mrs. J. S. Wynne and Mrs. DeLea Vears are recovering from slight attacks of grippe.

Olga Thompson of McLean and Amarillo was a Pampa visitor yesterday.

The Western Supply company of Pampa reports 100 per cent subscription to the Community Chest. The firm contributed $50 and each member made a donation.

BUTTE IS NOMINATED BY HOOVER AS VICE-GOVERNOR OF PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. (AP)—President Hoover today nominated George Charles Butte of Austin, Texas, to be vice governor of the Philippine Islands.

Butte has been special assistant to the attorney general since 1923. He was a republican candidate for governor of Texas in 1924, and in 1925 was appointed attorney general of Porto Rico. He was acting governor of Porto Rico three times during 1926 and 1927.

The new vice governor was a professor of law at the University of Texas from 1914 until 1924. He organized the oil and gas conservation department of the state of Texas and assisted in drafting the public utilities law of that state. He served in the army during the war.

Tillman County Attorney Further Involved by Justice's Testimony

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 4. (AP)—F. V. Ruch, Tillman county attorney, was involved further as the purported recipient of protection money from bootleggers in testimony today at the federal court trial of seven Tillman county men indicted for conspiracy against the dry laws.

J. A. Spivey, elderly justice of the peace at Wagonka, testified he had seen his son-in-law, Ed Walls, former Tillman county deputy sheriff, pay Ruch money Walls had collected from bootleggers.

Spivey said his acquaintance with Walls, which preceded the relationship by marriage, was fostered through Oklahoma, Texas and Missouri. Ruch is the only official involved who did not plead guilty. Sheriff C. A. Wages, Walls and Robert B. Rogers, constable, have thrown themselves on the mercy of the court.

CAMPAIGN IS GOING SLOWLY TOWARD TOP

People in General to Be Asked For Money

Three hundred and thirty-one Pampa individuals and firms out of a 12,000 population have contributed a total of $5,500 to the $15,000 goal of the Community Chest, reports made to the Pampa Lions club today by officials of the drive showed.

It was frankly stated that the campaign had reached a crucial point, and that apparently drastic steps would have to be taken to assure success of the effort.

"Merchants of this city are as usual carrying the burden of the drive," Frank Lowder, local merchant, asserted. He urged that the campaign be placed on an individual basis so that the expense would be more widely distributed. It was pointed out that the larger contributions by merchants had already been made.

George Briggs told of a survey in one block in which solicitors found five homes without a source of income out of 12 canvassed. He declared that suffering already is acute in scores of homes.

Merchants Complimented
C. B. Akers, publicity chairman of the drive, complimented the merchants on being first to make their contributions. He said that while the drive calculated $1.25 average from each citizen, many persons would have to give heavily to offset those who need help. He added:

"Humbletown," colloquial name for the Humble Oil and Refining company's camp, yesterday did its bit for the Community Chest. In the space of an hour, the employees made the camp 100 per cent for the chest. All life wage earners.

did that six worthy causes were represented, and that not one cent is being paid these who are giving their time to managing the drive and collecting the funds.

W. H. Curry recalled drives in other cities when the plan of having each working man give the equivalent of a day's salary was used successfully. "Personal sacrifices alone by the people at large will put over this Community Chest," he asserted.

Dr. R. A. Webb told of the work of the American Legion in raising more than $600 for caring for disabled veterans and their families. "We will take care of all needy veterans without calling upon the Chest," Dr. Webb said.

Judge Ivy E. Duncan, chairman of the drive, emphasized that the drive must be put over even if "we have to close shop until we go over the top."

Arranging Party
Mr. Akers also described the plan of the Lions club, assisted by the Rotary club, to have a big Christmas party for children under 14 years of age; candy, oranges, apples and other things will be distributed at a free picture show. A partial list of contributors to the Community Chest drive follows:

Early Shopping and Mailing Is Logical Step for All Pampans

Shopping early is being stressed by this newspaper as usual. It is not just a habit, but a good practice. The first consideration is for the buyer. Stocks now are larger. Variety means satisfaction in one of the most difficult buying periods of the year. Choice of gifts is important and all of us have had experience of having to choose from "what's left."

Confusion and congestion render pleasant shopping impossible. Late shopping is trying to the buyers and clerks alike. Moreover, it should be remembered that the post office clerks are human and congestion of the mails means late delivery of gifts and greetings.

The News-Post office supply department has an exceptionally nice assortment of printed and engraved greeting cards. Orders should be placed as early as possible. Every firm would appreciate the opportunity of rendering untroubled service, which is obviously better.

With buying retarded in recent months, it is time to begin seasonal purchasing. Return of normal business should come with holiday buying. It would be seen that every argument and form of logic is in favor of BUYING NOW!

Buy now, AND BUY IN PAMPA.

and cents" and quotes Roger Babson, Henry Ford, the late E. H. Gray, Thomas A. Edison and many others to prove its economic benefits. Most of the former $3,000,000,000 drink bill is now saved or spent constructively, he contends.

The increase in total life insurance in force was 70 billion dollars in the first decade of prohibition. Members of building loan associations increased from 4,000,000 to 12,000,000 and their assets from less than two billion dollars to more than eight billion.

The death rate dropped abruptly with the coming of prohibition, Dr. Cherrington says, claiming that nearly 200,000 persons would have died annually in the last 10 years had the conditions prevailing in the license period been continued. Figures are presented to show an actual decrease in deaths from alcoholism.

With Henry Wilder as temporary chairman, election of officers featured a business meeting held by the high school band following band practice Wednesday afternoon.

Curtis Stark was elected president by acclamation; Charles Frost, vice-president; Orla Jones, secretary-treasurer; and Ethyl Culsum, drum major.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—As various national dry organizations prepare for their big conventions here, the Anti-Saloon league comes to bat with a 1930 yearbook calculated to show that prohibition has been rather successful despite all the things some people have been saying about it.

This is the product of Ernest H. Cherrington, the league's big education and publicity man, who every day pushes out about a ton of dry literature from the organization's big presses at Westerville, Ohio.

Mr. Cherrington admits prohibition today isn't a pleasant picture. But, says he, think of the old prohibition days when there were 200,000 saloons and probably half as many speakeasies, when annual consumption of liquor was 160,000,000 gallons of whisky, 60,000,000 gallons of wine and about 2,000,000,000 gallons of beer.

Average annual per capita beer consumption in big cities was two and a half barrels, he says, and the average annual drink bill was probably more than $3,000,000,000. Women and girls were drinking "alarmingly" 20 years ago. Drunkenness was commonplace on streets and in public places. The liquor traffic flouted law and built up corrupt political machines.

"If this nation today were consuming as much as even the amount of legal liquors consumed before national prohibition, and that were to be transported by automobiles, each automobile in the nation would need to transport more than 100 gallons," Dr. Cherrington says. There used to be an estimated 20,000,000 adult drinkers, he adds, and if they were "all living and still unreformed," Dr. Cherrington doesn't see how the old-time drinkers could possibly be drinking more than 13 per cent of their former 10.7 gallons a year.

Reports for 1928 showed that only one person in every 1600 was arrested by federal prohibition officers, it is pointed out and figures showing many still seized are apt to be misleading because many are small stills with a capacity of but a few gallons.

People don't die from poisoned liquor, but rather from pure alcohol, says Dr. Cherrington, citing evidence that victims of alcoholism are killed by the same ethyl or grain alcohol which used to kill them in pre-prohibition days.

Tables are presented to show that in 1925, whereas 106 persons per 10,000 population were arrested for drunkenness in Toronto in 1925 and 51 in Montreal, only 14.83 persons were arrested for it in wet New York City.

"The violations of the prohibition law," says the dry leader, "while more numerous than we might wish, are not sufficiently so as to seriously affect any of the gains made possible by this national policy. These violations are exceptions to the rule. They are committed by a small minority of the American people."

The doctor suggests some codification of the liquor laws, complaining that judges and prosecutors are often "deplorably lacking" in detailed knowledge of the federal statutes. Uniform prohibition legislation in the various states would be of unquestionable value, Cherrington says, and if that is unattainable a national conference of governors or attorney generals to attempt some degree of law harmony might be worth consideration.

Cherrington cites President Hoover himself as saying that "the dry law has proved its worth in dollars

Early Shopping and Mailing Is Logical Step for All Pampans

Shopping early is being stressed by this newspaper as usual. It is not just a habit, but a good practice.

The first consideration is for the buyer. Stocks now are larger. Variety means satisfaction in one of the most difficult buying periods of the year. Choice of gifts is important and all of us have had experience of having to choose from "what's left."

Confusion and congestion render pleasant shopping impossible. Late shopping is trying to the buyers and clerks alike. Moreover, it should be remembered that the post office clerks are human and congestion of the mails means late delivery of gifts and greetings.

The News-Post office supply department has an exceptionally nice assortment of printed and engraved greeting cards. Orders should be placed as early as possible. Every firm would appreciate the opportunity of rendering untroubled service, which is obviously better.

With buying retarded in recent months, it is time to begin seasonal purchasing. Return of normal business should come with holiday buying. It would be seen that every argument and form of logic is in favor of BUYING NOW!

WASHINGTON.—As various national dry organizations prepare for their big conventions here, the Anti-Saloon league comes to bat with a 1930 yearbook calculated to show that prohibition has been rather successful despite all the things some people have been saying about it.

This is the product of Ernest H. Cherrington, the league's big education and publicity man, who every day pushes out about a ton of dry literature from the organization's big presses at Westerville, Ohio.

Mr. Cherrington admits prohibition today isn't a pleasant picture. But, says he, think of the old pre-prohibition days when there were 200,000 saloons and probably half as many speakeasies, when annual consumption of liquor was 160,000,000 gallons of whiskey 60,000,000 gallons of wine and about 2,000,000,000 gallons of beer.

Average annual per capita beer consumption in big cities was two and a half barrels, he says, and the average annual drink bill was probably more than $3,000,000,000. Women and girls were drinking "alarmingly" 20 years ago. Drunkenness was commonplace on streets and in public places. The liquor traffic flouted law and built up corrupt political machines.

"If this nation today were consuming as much as even the amount of legal liquors consumed before national prohibition, and that were to be transported by automobiles, each automobile in the nation would need to transport more than 100 gallons," Dr. Cherrington says. There used to be an estimated 20,000,000 adult drinkers, he adds, and if they were "all living and still unreformed," Dr. Cherrington doesn't see how the old-time drinkers could possibly be drinking more than 13 per cent of their former 10 7/8 gallons a year.

Reports for 1928 showed that only one person in every 1600 was arrested by federal prohibition officers, it is pointed out and figures showing many stills seized are apt to be misleading because many are small stills with a capacity of but a few gallons.

People don't die from poisoned liquor, but rather from pure alcohol, says Dr. Cherrington, citing evidence that victims of alcoholism are killed by the same ethyl or grain alcohol which used to kill them in pre-prohibition days.

Tables are presented to show that in 1925, where-as 106 persons per 10,000 population were arrested for drunkenness in Toronto in 1925 and 51 in Montreal, only 14.83 persons were arrested for it in wet New York City.

"The violations of the prohibition law," says the dry leader, "while more numerous than we might wish, are not sufficiently so as to seriously affect any of the gains made possible by this national policy. These violations are exceptions to the rule. They are committed by a small minority of the American people."

The doctor suggests some codification of the liquor laws, complaining that judges and prosecutors are often "deplorably lacking" in detailed knowledge of the federal statutes. Uniform prohibition legislation in the various states would be of unquestionable value, Cherrington says, and if that is unattainable a national conference of governors or attorney generals to attempt some degree of law harmony might be worth consideration.

Cherrington cites President Hoover himself as saying that "the dry law has proved its worth in dollars and cents" and quotes Roger Babson, Henry Ford, the late E. H. Gray, Thomas A. Edison and many others to prove its economic benefits. Most of the former $3,000,000,000 drink bill is now saved or spent constructively, he contends.

The increase in total life insurance in force was 70 billion dollars in the first decade of prohibition. Members of building loan associations increased from 4,000,000 to 12,000,000 and their assets from less than two billion dollars to more than eight billion.

The death rate dropped abruptly with the coming of prohibition, Dr. Cherrington says, claiming that nearly 200,000 persons would have died annually in the last 10 years had the conditions prevailing in the license period been continued. Figures are presented to show an actual decrease in deaths from alcoholism.

With Henry Wilder as temporary chairman, election of officers featured a business meeting held by the high school band following band practice Wednesday afternoon.

Curtis Stark was elected president by acclamation; Charles Frost, vice-president; Orelia Jones, secretary-treasurer; and Ethyl Chisum, drum major.

GREAT PLAYS OF GREAT COACHES

ROPER NEVER DID HAVE ANY SYSTEM OF HIS OWN

HIS ELEVEN WERE FIGHTING TEAMS

BY HERBERT W. BARKER Associated Press Sports Writer
MONTREAL, Dec. 4. (P)— The five non-draft leagues sought to tighten their defenses today in preparation for a long drawn out struggle with the majors on the draft question.

All relations between the two rival groups—the American and National leagues on one hand and the International, Pacific Coast, American association, Western and Three-Eye leagues on the other—were at a standstill, at least temporarily, and there were no indications that their differences could be patched up in the immediate future.

The majors insist that they be given the right to select or draft at a fixed price players in these five leagues just as they do in other minor circuits. They already have the right to draft from the AA leagues—International, Pacific Coast and American association—any player previously in the minors but they want to obtain the right to include young stars who never have reached the big leagues.

They backed their demands with a drastic action—complete severance, from Dec. 1, of business relations with the non-draft leagues until they accept the draft.

The five leagues affected offered to re-open the question with a view to possible settlement provided the majors rescinded this action within 15 days, but repulsed from President Heydler and Bernard of the National and American leagues indicated there was no chance of the majors doing this and the war was on in earnest.

Anticipating that there will be no move toward an amicable settlement at the joint major league meeting in New York next week, the non-draft minors planned to confer on ways and means of carrying on without the aid of the majors. The most pressing problem was the always troublesome question of where first grade players are to be obtained in sufficient quantities. It was generally regarded that the minors would make no further move towards peace, at least at this time.

Another of baseball's sore spots crept out at the first session of the 29th annual convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues. Branch Rickey, vice president and business manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, largest operators of "chain store" clubs in the country, told the convention the majors were ready to come to the aid of those minor leagues who may be running into financial difficulties but that no further moves in that direction could be made unless some further "protection" was given the minors.

Rickey, whose club has run into trouble at the office of Commissioner K. M. Landis in some of its complicated minor league deals, explained that he thought minor league clubs operated by a major league outfit should be regarded in exactly the same light as clubs owned independently. The point seems to be that Rickey considered it unfair that a player sent to one of the Cardinal farms and then sent to another should still be regarded as under option to the Cardinals. Under the rules major league clubs can not keep a player under option in the minors for more than two years.

A resolution was offered suggesting that "the commissioner and the national board of arbitration should interpret the rules and regulations without discrimination pertaining to ownership of clubs" but it subsequently was withdrawn and the entire subject dropped. Rickey possibly may attempt to get the majors lined up behind his proposal at their meeting next week.

Largely because of the draft dispute, trading has been very light so far. A score of deals have been completed but none of outstanding importance. Few, if any, are expected since the majors cannot do business with the AA circuits, strongest organizations in the minors.

How Much Can a Man Stand? After the Notre Dame-Northwestern game, the boys from South Bend showed little desire for whooping it up. They filed into the dressing room under Dyer stadium with few words. Some who had just gone through 60 minutes of the hardest kind of action limped noticeably. They had accomplished a tremendous task. They were very tired. Yet there were other jobs ahead, such as the battle with the Army, then a long trip to the coast followed with little rest by a hard game with Southern California.

Rockne moved among them, inquiring, directing the attentions that were being given their hurts. Metzger, the pint-sized guard, played throughout the game with an aching side. Kassis, the big Assyrian guard, did the same, though one of his knees was badly strained. Attendants ripped off Marty Brill's sweater and taped up his chest where he had been badly bruised.

Nevers Stamina There was a weariness in the atmosphere, the reaction of tense nervous strain and strenuous physical excitement setting in after one of the hardest games a team ever played. Yet two more grim games remained to be fought out, the last game to be the hardest of all, on a foreign field and in an alien climate.

How much football can a man stand? I recall that Ernie Nevers, quarterback of the Chicago Cardinals, told me he once played 25 games in a season, being on the sidelines only half an hour in all those games. This was during the first year after he left Stanford and organized a team in Florida.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 4. (P)—A dynamite-filled box car on a siding at Porto Novo Da Cunha, in the state of Minas Geraes, exploded yesterday killing 36 persons and wrecking three buildings.

Colgate Star to Play With East

HAMILTON, N. Y., Dec. 4. (P)—Len (Iron Legs) Macaluso, Colgate fullback, and Les Hart, Maroon captain and other half of the great backfield team, will play with the east against the west in the New Year's day contest at San Francisco. Andy Kerr, their coach, announced today.

Macaluso leads the nation in scoring with 144 points with the post-season charity contest with New York university at New York Saturday offering further scoring opportunity. Most of the all-American pickers have named "Iron Legs" their fullback.

Amarillo Man Shot to Death

AMARILLO, Dec. 4. (P)—H. A. McCarrick, 45, grocer, was shot four times and fatally wounded by two men last night as he apparently resisted a holdup while en route from his store to his home, several blocks away. He died before reaching a hospital. A bag of money, the day's receipts, was not taken from him. The men who shot him fled on foot.

Gauge is Accurate

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Dec. 4. (P)—One one-hundred-thousandth of an inch can be measured as accurately and quickly as a full inch with an electric gauge developed in the General Electric company laboratory.

Two Days, Two Games

During the present season Nevers and others on the Cardinal team have played two games in two days with a night on a sleeper between games. But I find it hard to imagine Notre Dame and Northwestern playing a series on successive days with the same fire and fight the two teams showed in their recent clash at Evanston.

Ranger Bulldogs named above were journeying to Pampa today for the post-season game with Pampa Harvesters at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow. They are scheduled to arrive this evening and to have a brief look at the local field tomorrow.

Prospects for a hard, dry field were scant today as the weather man promised "colder and cloudy" atmosphere for Friday. It was too late to arrange a postponement, however, and the game will be played and broadcast as scheduled.

Supt. R. B. Fisher said today that answers to invitations sent superintendents of schools had been received in almost every instance, and that the school men would bring delegations with them. The Harvesters have topped off their training and will indulge chiefly in "skull" practice today.

Joe Judge of Senators Given Honor

Chicago, Dec. 4. (P)—Joe Judge, veteran of 15 consecutive up and down campaigns with the Washington Senators, was officially recognized today as the greatest fielding first baseman of all American league baseball history.

Sport Slants by Alan J. Gould

But for the well known activities of a certain Mr. Jones of golfing fame, Macdonald Smith of Carnoustie, Scotland, and Great Neck, Long Island, might have been the open champion of Great Britain and the United States, this year.

Mac Smith was among those most persistently in pursuit of Bob Jones throughout the 1930 campaign on opposite sides of the Atlantic. Mac tied with Leo Diesel for runner-up honors in the British Open; two strokes behind Jones. He was runner-up in the American Open at Interchen, again falling by the thin margin of two shots to overhaul the great Georgian in a sensational finish.

It has been like that ever since Mac tied with his brother, Aleck, and Jack McDermott for the American Open in 1910, losing in a play-off. He has come close to winning the big crowns a number of times. He had the British Open sewed up one year, but went to pieces on the last round.

With Jones no longer in the competitive picture, for the time being at least, Mac Smith has hopes of finally crashing through by concentrating his fire on the principal targets.

He says he will play in only two of the big-money winter tournaments in the west, the $10,000 Los Angeles Open, which he has captured twice, and the $25,000 Agave Caliente Open, in which he finished fourth last winter. Denmore Stone and Gene Sarazen lifted the first prize money in these events last January.

Back from the west, Mac Smith's next major move in the 1931 golf battle will be in the direction of his old home, Carnoustie, where the British Open is to be played late in the spring.

Carnoustie will have the welcome sign out for its native son. The familiar surroundings are as helpful as the wind to Jack Hushon at St. Andrews in 1923. Mac Smith should win and break the first 100 for 20 years has kept the crown of the greatest of all shotmakers from falling to the championship laurels.

When Army takes the gridiron against Navy on December 12 in New York, Cadet Carl W. Carmichael of Mothe, Ill., left one will be the sole survivor of the gridiron forces that figured in the last battle between the two academies in 1927.

Carlmark entered West Point as a cadetmate of Christian Egan in 1926, before Army put in force its rule barring players from the varsity squad. Carl became a first string halfback in his first year, but Carlmark was relegated to the platoon team and subsequently was tackled for a heavy loss to military, being a year's standing because of deficiency in the subject.

LEVIN'S Due to Dollar Day, Saturd...

MENU for the FAMILY

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer. If you are looking for a particularly rich and delicious cake to have on hand during the holiday season, potato caramel cake will prove satisfactory.

If, on the other hand, you want an inexpensive cake that is not rich with butter and eggs but is nevertheless fruity and delectable, apple sauce cake will meet your needs.

Both these cakes keep excellently and are even better several days after baking than when fresh. Cut in slices and served with whipped cream, they can be used as puddings.

Four eggs, 2 cups light brown sugar, 2-3 cup butter, 2 cups flour, 1-2 cup sweet milk, 1 cup hot mashed potatoes, 1 cup grated chocolate, 1 cup nut meats, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-4 teaspoon salt.

Apple Sauce Cake. One and one-half cups apple sauce, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1-2 cup butter and lard mixed, 2 cups seedless raisins, 3 cups flour, 2 teaspoons soda, 1 cup nut meats, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg.

Use apple sauce sweetened as for the table. Cream butter and lard and gradually beat in sugar. Add apple sauce. Mix cleaned raisins with 1 cup flour and add to first mixture. Mix and sift remaining flour with salt, soda and spices. Sift several times to be sure the soda is thoroughly mixed through the flour. Add vanilla and lemon juice to first mixture. Beat well and add dry ingredients and nuts. Stir until thoroughly blended and smooth. Turn into a deep pan lined with heavy parchment paper and bake one and one-half hours in a slow oven.

Any preferred shortening can be used for either of these cakes. The combination of butter and lard is suggested in the second recipe as a means toward economy.

DINNER - Boned leg of lamb, buttered rice, creamed carrots, cabbage and orange salad, prune trifle, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON - Scalloped macaroni and onions, shredded lettuce and egg salad, brown bread, canned cherries, cookies, milk, tea.

BREAKFAST - Stewed figs, with lemon, cereal, cream, fried cornmeal mush, sirup, milk, coffee.

HALT BOOZE MOVEMENTS

TLJUANA, Lower California, Dec. 4. (AP)—Soldiers armed with rifles and sabres today patrolled the open shores, highways and lowlands between this city and Ensenada to prevent unloading of contraband liquor valued at thousands of dollars, said to compose the cargoes of a fleet of ships in rum row off the coast of Lower California.

In conformity with the pledge of Mexican officials to cooperate with the American authorities, secret service agents on both sides of the international border have redoubled their vigilance to halt the flood of liquor along the line southwest of San Ysidro, Calif., long regarded as the easiest route of smugglers.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with tenfold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

FEMININE FANCIES

By HOLLYCE SELLERS

The most joyous of all seasons is returning, and with it is returning an impulse to be merry again, to visit again, to decorate again, to laugh again and play again, to buy again.

Now I just know you're expecting a serious discourse on economics, a plan for getting the most out of the least amount of money, a plea for being practical.

But ladies, you're mistaken. We eat when we're hungry, don't we? And we sleep when we're sleepy. At least we ought to. We yield to practically every other impulse, so why not yield to the Christmas impulse to spend and to be happy—yes, even frivolous.

It's been a long time since we have dared spend our money for anything we did not believe to be a necessity—probably since last Christmas or maybe Christmas two years ago. Why not jar loose this season and buy a few of those things we really want to buy.

Just suppose, for instance, you are going to buy a gift for your best girl friend. "There is one gift," you say, "that can always be used—a pair of hose. Now she will probably get half a dozen other pairs of hose, but that is one thing she can always use. And I'll choose that shade that can be worn either with black or brown shoes, and get a service weight that will last a long time."

Now, I ask you, where is the fun in buying like that? And does any ecstasy appear on the part of your friend when she opens such a package? I think not. Then why not buy, just for fun, one of those pairs of sheer mesh hose that you feel you cannot afford. The pleasure will amply recompense for the extravagance.

Shirts and ties and school supplies might be practical gifts for brother, but would he be as happy over them as he would over a good camera?

And can you think of anything nicer than an artistic atomizer filled with choice perfume for sister? Choose it to suit her appearance and personality. If she is a delicate blond, sweet pea will be just the thing. If she is a medium type of redde personality, perhaps rose would be better, while for the brunettes, there is nothing more fascinating than the oriental odors.

Perhaps even the mother of the family would like something besides a household necessity. A huge bouquet of flowers or a five-pound box of candy might mean a rare pleasure for her, and a picture of her children would be appreciated. Oh, there are scores of lovely things that she would enjoy having which she may feel is too much of a luxury to buy herself.

There are other good things that will result from Christmas extravagance. In the first place, you will be better looking. Sounds foolish at first, but did you ever notice anyone who had been on a frivolous shopping tour? Did you ever see such sparkling eyes—such a vivacious personality? The extravagance is refreshing, and as a result one's entire disposition may be changed. Christmas cheer then can be spread in the truest sense of the word. Where will that headache go that you have had every afternoon for weeks? You'll always wonder, but just the same it will be gone.

And had you thought that by a bit of extravagance you might be helping to eliminate some of the financial depression that we have heard talked for months? Financial experts have said that if each of us would spend $1 more per week, the depression would be over. And what a pleasant way to remedy the condition!

Now, I wish you every one a glorious, extravagant Christmas.

Mrs. Craven led the devotional and presided for a short business session before the meeting was turned over to Mrs. E. H. Hazlett. Mrs. Hazlett spoke on Christ's imprisonment, his trial at Jerusalem, and his trial before Felix.

Tea and refreshments were served during a social half hour. Mrs. Julian Barrett was welcomed as a new member, and Mrs. Thomas was a visitor for the afternoon.

Old members attending were Mrs. E. H. Hazlett, Mrs. John Morgan, Mrs. Wheat, Mrs. M. K. Brown, Mrs. E. A. Palmer, Mrs. John Peake, Mrs. S. G. Surratt, Mrs. S. F. Thornton, Mrs. Henry Thut Sr., Mrs. Newton C. Smith, Mrs. Merrittweather, Mrs. W. S. Kiser, and Mrs. W. M. Craven.

The meeting of Dec. 17 at 3 o'clock also will be held in Mrs. Craven's home, with Mrs. John Morgan as hostess.

Miss Katie Daffin Addresses U. D. C. In State Meeting

AUSTIN, Dec. 4. (AP)—A new movement to perpetuate the memory of the war between the states was before the Texas division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, in convention here today.

In her fifth and final presidential address, Miss Katie Daffan of Ennis, suggested that every county in Texas named for a hero of that war be enlisted in the movement. In the court houses of each of these counties would be placed a painting of the man for whom the county named.

Among these, she said, would be Lee, Jefferson, Wood, Tom Green and many other counties of the state.

Reviewing the year's work, Miss Daffan found words of commendation for virtually every officer and committee of the organization.

Special words of praise were voiced for the work of the legislative committee which she had obtained a promise from the state board of control that no post-mortem surgery would be performed on the bodies of Confederate veterans.

Reports that this was to be done had been spread widely, the president said. Miss Daffan also praised the committee's work in fighting movements to remove the original constitution's mention from the old land office building here. The convention pledged itself to oppose all efforts to move the building.

Progress was reported in the educational movement to have the war known as the "war between the states." Today's program principally consisted of a continuation of committee reports.

COBLENZ and Its FORTRESS

COBLENZ AND THE FAMOUS FORTRESS OF EHRENBREITSTEIN

The city of Coblenz is at the junction of the Rhine and the Moselle, and its gigantic fortress is on a hill just across the Rhine. This place has been the scene of constant strife ever since the Roman general, Drusus, built a fort there in the year 9, B. C.

Lately the world knows Coblenz as being a part of the scene of the after-war "occupation," which Lloyd George calls "a middle through which everybody loses and nobody gains and which was dictated by short-sighted and short-tempered statesmanship." Our American soldier-boys made many friends among the German population there and have many pleasant memories of their sojourn.

By LILLIAN HAYDEN HESTON

Now that we have express trains and aeroplanes we scarcely realize how great the traffic was through many centuries of history on the broad Rhine. It was natural that a place where this important small tributary flowed into the larger river was strongly fortified and held by force of arms. Travel was much safer on the river where one could at least see one's foes and far easier than through trackless forests, full of human enemies and of wild animals. The Rhine was the highway of trade for much of Europe during many centuries.

The wise Romans realized the necessity of fortifying Coblenz. It was not only a strategic position because of the rivers but also because it was on the boundary between hostile tribes. To quote Lloyd George again on the after-war peace (?) terms: "It is ill gambling with men's passions. The Romans did all in their power to reconcile warring tribes and to offer such terms of surrender that even the most greedy recognized that they were better off under Roman rule. It impressed even the most hostile of the conquered with a feeling of friendship and gratitude for the Romans. It was a fact in history that the conquered tribes were often the best friends Rome had, better sometimes than the Romans themselves.

Scenes of Many Battles Ehrenbreitstein, the great fortress of Coblenz, has been a bone of contention between France and Germany during many centuries. A few of the innumerable struggles over it are these: In 1631 it surrendered to France after a long siege but was soon won back. In 1834 the French besieged it in vain for a long period. In 1793 they took it and kept it three years. In 1795 they besieged it for months in vain, in 1798 also, in 1797 also—still in vain. In 1799 they surrounded the place and succeeded in keeping away all supplies of food and finally starved it into submission. Less than two years afterwards they were forced to evacuate it but attempted to blow it up before leaving. Triumphant Germany made France pay fifteen million francs for its restoration. Ehrenbreitstein has always been known as the Gibraltar of Germany. An interesting bridge of boats connects the fortress with Coblenz. There are also three stone or iron bridges which link Coblenz with the shores beyond her rivers.

As everyone knows, the region around Coblenz and all of the Ruhr Valley is one of the great coal and iron manufacturing places of the world. Essen, not far away, is the center of this steel business. It is interesting to recall in these latter days of the emancipation of women that Essen, the Pittsburgh of Germany, belonged once, centuries before the day of Berta Krupp, who recently inherited her father's vast interests, to a woman, an abbess who was also a princess.

THE GERMAN CORNER MEMORIAL TO THE GLORY OF GERMANY

who founded and ruled over a magnificent nunnery on the same site as the huge steel foundries of today. This nunnery was one of the most powerful in all Europe and belonged to the Benedictine order. This lady, the princess and abbess Hedwig, in the early years of the Middle Ages, founded the town of Essen and ruled it, and all the territory for miles about, both wisely and well. She held court surrounded by fifteen lesser princesses, and they asked the help of no men either for government or defense. In fact this region was still under the rule of archbishops and nuns when the town was secularized in 1803 and was incorporated with Prussia.

Great Steel Works In recent years Essen has been wholly kept up and owned by the great steel manufacturer, Krupp. This family has, out of its vast income from the steel made there, supported all public works and institutions and has been helper and friend to every workman in their enormous mills. They have built model homes for workmen and made friends of them in every way. It is all this district that France wished possession of and insisted that her allies in the war help her police.

The whole country about Coblenz is picturesque and there are innumerable places to visit. There is not a hill or rock, or bit of forest in all the neighborhood that is not rich in legends and woven into the very heart and soul of Germany.

Home Of Kings The Frankish kings lived long in Coblenz. In 1018 the city had its first charter and was put by the emperor Henry II under the charge of the Archbishop of Treves. This archbishop and several of his followers built the fortress to overawe the people of Coblenz itself as they were getting rebellious and unmanageable. The town had been ruled very happily by Hedwig and her nuns but the population resented the coming of the archbishops-electors. The city was also surrounded by very strong and massive walls. The original city was more on the Moselle than on the Rhine but later covered all the point between the two rivers. It is quite a railroad center, being so near the great coal and iron districts and on the direct line north and south.

GENERAL VIEW OF COBLENZ BRIDGE OF BOATS OVER THE RHINE

two banks of the Rhine. There is a distinct old town and a more modern one and a special corner that has German memorial monuments called the German Corner or "Ecke" which is a resort and observation place with fine view of the river.

The fortress of Ehrenbreitstein is supposed to have defied the name from a family of powerful nobles who held the place for a while during the eleventh century. It is on a rocky hill some four hundred feet high whose sides are very precipitous. There is but one approach and that can be easily guarded. Coblenz, under whatever rulers, was always under the governing charge of Germany, since the more-or-less fighting tribes of the vast territory Charlemagne and certain other rulers held as a whole was divided into what we know as Germany and France. Of course, I do not mean the recent Germany of Bismarck, but rather the vast district between Russia and Turkey and France. There were many of the old emperors who held power over all of Europe, including Italy, but their sons were never equal to holding on to what the father won and so the countries were all mixed up again. These all-powerful emperors lived as it chanced, at Prague, Aix-la-Chapelle, Paris or Rome, or even at Buda. The vast region was known by turn as the Frankish Empire, the German Empire or the Roman Empire. It is only in very recent times that what we know as France and Germany existed in their modern state.

Perhaps one cause of today's bitter hatreds is that the nations of Europe are descendants of the same family, and it is well known that no strife is so bitter as that between brothers. They are all more or less descendants of those tribes that swarmed west, full of the love of adventure and ambitious for new lands and new experiences. They called the seas of north and south and came overland and over the territory as tidal waves might. They were conquered and they conquered and fought and made friends and fought again. There were years of civilization and culture and years of extreme ignorance and retrogression, years of cruelty and inhuman dignity and then some upward step—much as there is today. It is the great white race, all of it, and should stick together if possible—that is, if it doesn't want to be driven out and killed off. Winston Churchill says: "The next great war may well be the suicide of the white race." Does the world of Europe and America want that? Perhaps the most interesting building in Coblenz is the Romanesque where the election of the ancient emperors of Germany took place. They were crowned in the cathedral near by. In connection with the Romanesque there is a fine group of buildings, a large sculptured hall where the feast of the coronations took place and rooms for the electors and the guests. Along the river front of Coblenz is a shaded boulevard and this is the pleasure promenade of the town and has on it the finest cafes, hotels and shops. There is an interesting monument to William I. Coblenz is at the beginning of the highlands of the Rhine which end at Bingen.

A VENOMOUS SPECIES FROM THE SOUTH CHINA SEA

SEA SNAKE FROM THE BAY OF BENGAL

A SNAKE FROM JAPANESE WATERS

Countless Numbers of Them in Tropical Seas—They Are Venomous and Dangerous—Ships Sometimes Pass Through Vast Swarms of Them Sleeping On the Waves—Their Eggs Go to Eat

By ARTHUR BUDD

EXTENDING in equatorial latitudes all the way from the east coast of Africa to the west coast of Panama, two-thirds of the distance around the world, is the oceanic Snake Belt. It contains probably hundreds of times as many snakes as are to be found on all the lands of the globe. That, of course, is a guess. But it does not seem to be an exaggeration. Judging from the testimony offered by many persons who with their own eyes have seen those reptiles swimming on the sea in numbers so great as to be incalculable.

Forty-four species of them are known. They are from three to twelve feet long, beautifully striped or otherwise marked in patterns of brilliant colors, extremely ferocious, and as dangerously venomous as the spectacled cobra. Their venom, indeed, is unquestionably more deadly than that of the rattlesnake.

On a voyage to Sumatra, Dr. Rudolph Weber, of the American Museum of Natural History, when about fifty miles from land, beheld what he describes as the most astonishing sight that ever met his gaze. It was clear, calm weather, and the surface of the ocean as far as the eye could see was literally alive with snakes swimming in all directions.

Apparently they are more numerous in those eastern seas than anywhere else in the world. Fishermen fear them greatly. Dr. Weber hired a man to help him collect specimens of fishes, and one haul of the drag-net fetched two snakes. The net also contained a couple of dozen fishes, but the snakes had swallowed nearly all of them before they could be landed.

Victimized By Hot Water When the mountainous island of Krakatoa blew up, in 1883, thousands of inhabitants of the eastern end of Sumatra sought to escape in boats from the rain of hot ashes thrown out by the volcano. As if that menace were not enough, they were further terrorized by swarms of venomous sea snakes which, tormented by the increasing heat of the water, swam in circles around the boats and made frantic and persistent efforts to climb aboard.

Curiously enough, the eggs of sea snakes are commonly eaten in Sumatra and Java, and are even considered a delicacy. They are found in bunches on sandy beaches, where they are laid, fifteen to twenty-five of them in a "clutch," by the reptiles. The female snake, depositing them just above high-water mark, leaves them to be hatched by the warmth of the sun. They are about the size of hen eggs, but with soft shells.

When the young are hatched, about six inches long, they take advantage of the first high tide to wriggle into the water, and for several weeks thereafter they do not venture beyond the shallows, but grasp with their prehensile tails branches of coral or other objects, keeping the tips of their snouts above the surface of the water to breathe.

The sea snakes are air-breathing animals, and when full-grown are obliged to come to the surface at frequent intervals to fill their lungs, which extend almost the whole length of the body. Their nostrils are fitted with valves that shut when they are under water. They have small heads and fat tails for locomotion and steering, and their speed in swimming is so swift that they can overtake the fastest fish.

Venom Paralyzes Their Prey They feed on fishes, which they swallow whole and head first in order to fatten the fins of the prey conveniently. Their teeth are short and recurved, with two grooved venom fangs sharper than needles. On each side of the head, behind the eye, is a gland which supplies venom to the corresponding fang. It is supposed that the venom serves the purpose of paralyzing the funny little fish.

They never go ashore except to lay their eggs, and then only to the edge of high-water mark. On land they are helpless. Sometimes it happens that large numbers of them are thrown up on shore by the surf in a storm, and thus perish, being unable to crawl back into the water because of their lack of abdominal scales. Attempts have been made to keep living specimens captive in large tanks of sea water, with fishes for them to eat, but they took no notice of the fishes and soon died.

The sea snakes have eyes specially modified for seeing under water, and are almost blind. They have a habit of sleeping on the surface of the waves, and now and then ships pass through vast swarms of them, floating and apparently asleep, their air-filled lungs giving them the buoyancy of cork.

When one of these reptiles is captured, it exhibits almost ferocious striking and biting at everything within reach. Being unable to see when out of water, however, its strike is easily avoided. Occasionally there have been fatal incidents, and in one recorded instance a fisherman died four hours after being bitten.

Dangerous And Beautiful One of the commonest species in eastern seas is called the malla whallaga ray, and has the most extensive range. It is the smallest of all the sea snakes, seldom attaining a length of four feet. It is this species that is so often hauled up in the fishermen's nets, and it is not the less dangerous by reason of its small size.

The "chithel," a large and beautiful snake, colored sulphur yellow with broad black stripes or rings, is often seen in those waters, attaining a length of forty feet. It is this species that is so often hauled up in the fishermen's nets, with head and neck of a size so small as to bear the proportional relation of a little finger and wrist.

Most peculiar of them all is the "mangon," which has two long horns on its front part of its head.

SEA SERPENT FROM THE REGION OF THE MALAY ARCHIPELAGO

The use of these appendages is unknown, unless, as has been suggested, to "puzzle naturalists." It may be that they are merely intended for ornaments.

Characteristic of the sea snakes in general are a stout body, relatively small head, a tall compressed and paddle-like (the only organ of locomotion), small eyes, and a long and slender tongue. They are unable to stay under water for any great length of time, being air-breathers. When disturbed, they immediately dive, leaving a long trail of bubbles behind. They do not go very deep, but swim along a few feet beneath the surface, to reappear a long distance away. On one occasion R. P. Withers, of the Museum of Natural History, saw a large specimen resting on the bottom in fourteen feet of water for half an hour.

Eaten By Big Fishes And Birds The young sea snakes are often eaten by large fishes, and the adults, though so formidable, are preyed upon by sharks and sea eagles. The sea eagles pounce upon the snakes as they lie sleeping on the waves, and carry them off without difficulty. Presumably they know how to grab them behind the head, so as to prevent them from biting.

One species of them, the "mangon," is found in the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. It is seldom over a yard long, and has a black back. Specimens have been reported as seen far north along the Atlantic Coast, even as far as New Jersey. Viewed without prejudice, these true sea serpents are beautiful creatures, brightly colored in what might be termed fancy patterns, and in their native element they are exceedingly graceful. Like land snakes, they have no eyelids, but this does not interfere with their sleeping in the manner described. Instead of shutting their eyes, they, as do terrestrial snakes, drop them off in places, the lower

Railroad Men Want Safer and Shorter Periods

CLEVELAND, Dec. 4. (P)—Executives of five big railroad brotherhoods met today with the object of making railroad jobs shorter and safer.

The conference is concerned primarily with doing something for the 50,000 unemployed estimated to be on the brotherhoods' rolls. The other purpose is to prepare for a common fight with railroad operators against the competition of motor trucks, pipelines, waterways, and buses, according to David B. Robertson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

Robertson said the men now out of work could be given jobs at once if the number of miles traveled by train crews on each shift were reduced and the number of working hours cut down for other railroad men.

Ultimately, the brotherhoods hope to gain what is understood to be the equivalent of a six-hour day without a wage reduction from the present eight-hour day. Temporarily, however, Robertson said readjustment could be made without an increase in operating costs.

After the sub-committee completes its deliberations, the general committee may be called in. These scheduled to meet today were Robertson; Alwayne Johnson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Alex F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen; E. P. Curtis, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors; and T. C. Cashen, president of the Switchmen's Union of North America.

Big Oil Blaze Finally Quelled

NEW YORK, Dec. 4. (P)—Streams of flaming oil pouring from the Pratt works of the Standard Oil company illuminated the Brooklyn waterfront early today.

The fire, which threatened for a time to wipe out the entire plant, was stemmed by forces working by hand and by water after three hours fight. More than 200,000 gallons of gasoline, crude oil and turpentine and 18 tanks in which it was stored, were destroyed. Piers, barges, a fireboat and a tanker were damaged as the fire mass poured into East river between the Williamsburg and Fulton street bridges.

Fire department officials said the loss might reach a million dollars. Precautions were taken to protect the plant of the Brooklyn Union Gas company and nearby tenements. The fire started in a terrific explosion of a 10,000-gallon crude oil tank. Through underground pipes, the flames and burning fuel spread quickly to a 30,000-gallon petroleum tank eight more crude oil receptacles and eight turpentine tanks. As the petroleum tank blew up, it tore away an 18-foot brick wall, hurling debris on the firefighters. The remaining tanks produced blasts as they caught fire and rocked the area. The liberated oil flowed into the river through sewers and over the ground.

Says Capone Is Not So Fierce

CHICAGO, Dec. 4. (P)—Alfonse Capone, gang leader, in the opinion of Michael J. Sheehan, former New York detective, is not such a "big shot" as he is generally believed to be. "Al," he said, "is just like a wolf who vents chickens. After the wolf has taken a dozen chickens from a farmer's coop, the neighbors may come by night and steal a few more. But the wolf always gets the meat when a chicken is missing. That's the way with Capone. He gets credit for many things of which he knows nothing."

Sheehan came here for a visit with friends. PITCHER IS PURCHASED MONTREAL, Dec. 4. (P)—Lon Chagnon, right hand pitcher, has been purchased from Wichita of the Western league by the Pittsburgh Pirates. Chagnon was released to Wichita where he pitched effectively.

Spanish Revolt Plot Is Revealed

LISBON, Dec. 4. (P)—Police announced today that a large quantity of bombs and explosives had been seized in various parts of the city, and a revolutionary movement, in which it was planned to blow up public buildings, thwarted.

A mysterious taxicab gave the police their first hint of the plot. The cab was stopped and found to contain a cargo of bombs, destined for one of the depots of the revolutionaries. The driver confessed participation in the conspiracy and implicated Sergeant Joaquin Feliciano Freire. When arrested, Freire implicated others, all of whom were arrested, except two, lieutenant Manuel Correia and Pio, both of whose escapes. Police searched the homes of the conspirators and seized more than 300 bombs.

San Francisco Golf Meet Begins

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4. (P)—Leading professional and amateur golfers prepared to tee off today in 36-hole qualifying tests to determine the 32 survivors for the San Francisco open, match play tournament, which ends next Sunday.

The 72-hole event, worth $7,500 to the pros, with trophies for the winning amateurs, attracted 143 entries. Of this number, 133 were professionals, including Tommy Arnold, Gene Sarazen, Horton Smith and George Vln Elm. Former national amateur title holder, now a "business man golfer," outstanding amateurs were H. Chandler Egan of Medford, Ore., two times winner of the national crown; Fay Coleman, Los Angeles, and Jack Neville, Pebble Beach. First prize for the pros was $1,500 with $1,000 for the runner-up.

About New York

NEW YORK—A fellow with an open handbag is surrounded in front of a Broadway movie house by a thick circle of lingering pedestrians.

"Yes, SIR," he says, "a '11 dollar watch for a quarter. Yes, SIR, there's your change right there. And there's YOUR change right there. Yes, SIR, a '11 dollar watch for a quarter. Yes, SIR, there's your change right there. And there's YOUR change right there."

He hands out wrist watches attached to cards, right and left, with one hand while the makes change out of his side coat-pocket with the other.

A close observer notices that several seem to be taking advantage of the bargain in a big way. They buy a watch, walk to the edge of the crowd, then come back and buy another watch.

It's the old watch racket, still holding its own, and the repeaters are shillabars, or shills, who follow the man with the bag as business stimulators. For the watches, of course, have no works. The same kind are sold in dime stores.

The purchasers, the real ones, poor suckers, never think of that. They wait until they get outside the crowd, before they test their bargains and even then they couldn't hear a bona-fide watch tick for the noise of the Broadway traffic.

And the racketeers keep moving gradually, stopping in one place only about 10 minutes, then shutting the bag and disappearing.

Following one of the other day, we trailed him and his four shills to a spot on a side street a half-block away. There they stood a while, as lost from their late crowd as they would have been had they left town. For 15 minutes they just stood there, Broadwaymen of leisure to all appearances, discussing race-horses, girls and a party one had been on the previous night.

Presently the five started back to another Broadway corner, two shills in front, two behind, the man with the bag between them. Soon a new crowd of New Yorkers would be biting 10 cent—pardon me, five dollar—watches for a quarter.

Manhattan Mary Boland, the actress and a Detroit girl, is very religious. She has been through several faiths, including Christianity.

The three in the revue, "Three's a Crowd," are Luby Holman, Clifford Webb and Fred Allen. Luby is out of Cincinnati 1926, at some place in Dixie and Allen of Boston.

Although the Wickersham telephone exchange is in his neighborhood, George W. Wickersham's telephone number is on the Butterfield switchboard. That of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform is on the other hand, is in the Wickersham exchange.

A drug store on Broadway has come to be known, not for its sandwiches, but as the place to buy cut-rate theater tickets. The other day a petition in bankruptcy was filed against the drug department.

Donald Ogden Stewart is out in Hollywood writing for the talkies. Yet his book, "Mr. and Mrs. Hadgood Abroad," is being rewritten for the pictures by a couple of other fellows.

The coil peddler, in an all-night club, is suffering from a nervous breakdown. The patrons are getting smarter. The number of play-lates is reported falling way down.

Great X-Ray Tube Fifty Times as Strong as All Radium in World

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4. (P)—Wonders of new and powerful X-Ray machines whose potentialities are unfathomed even by their creators are being unfolded here before scientists attending the convention of the Radiological Society of North America.

The greatest of these machines—an X-Ray tube of 650,000 volts, said to produce more than 50 times as much power as all the radium known to exist—was exhibited before the scientists last night by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted physicist.

This tube produces rays approximately in length those of the penetrating gamma ray of radium, and hence, in some respects is capable of doing the work now done by the $5,000,000 worth of radium which the world thus far has yielded.

Dr. Millikan and Dr. C. C. Lauritsen, both of California Institute of Technology, developed the big tube. Its potentialities in the fields of medicine, physics and engineering, the scientist said, were undetermined and might require years for discovery.

Development of the tube, Dr. Millikan said, opened three principal fields of research—a physical study of the properties of the gamma ray, research into the nature of metals and other opaque substances, and the study of the X-Ray's effect upon plant and animal tissue.

The latter field, he said, would determine whether the big tube would produce rays containing the curative properties of the ordinary X-Ray and of radium, and whether it could be used in the treatment of cancer and other diseases. Dr. Millikan stated the tube might be useful to engineers in determining whether masses of metals contain inhomogeneities.

Four Parks Will Be Recommended

ABILENE, Dec. 4. (P)—Twenty West Texans, including several legislators and representatives of park associations, voted here last night to present an urgent appeal to the legislature to enact a bill providing for establishment of at least four major parks in Texas.

D. E. Colp of San Antonio was named ex-officio chairman of a committee to work for the legislative program. Park associations represented on the committee were the Palo Duro Park association, the Guadalupe Mountain Park association, the Caddo Lake Park association and the Davis Mountains Park association.

Senator Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock and Representative-elect Lee Satterwhite of Odessa pledged support to the bill and W. R. Ely, chairman of the State Highway commission, spoke in favor of establishing state parks.

Testimony in Denver Case to Be Debate Topic

DENVER, Dec. 4. (P)—A fight loomed today over admissibility of the testimony of the state's chief witness against Pearl O'Loughlin, on trial charged with murdering her 10-year-old step-daughter, Leon.

The state's announcement it would call Capt. A. T. Clark, Denver detective chief, who directed the investigation of the slaying, brought the gauge of battle from John M. Keating, defense counsel. Keating said he was prepared to contest any statements Clark might make concerning his questioning of Mrs. O'Loughlin on the ground her answers were given under duress.

Judge Hefley A. Calvert announced arguments on Clark's testimony would be made with the jury excluded. The sixth day of the trial started with Leo O'Loughlin, husband of the defendant, on the stand. Under cross-examination he testified he suspected his wife of the crime after he had been taking what the state claims was pulverized glass, administered as food.

LOTTE HOWELL studied singing at a fashionable girls' school and after graduation went home to Bowling Green, Ky., to tell her parents she was going on the stage. She was allowed to go to New York—because her parents believed she would be unsuccessful and that discouragement soon would drive her home. Although without professional experience when she tried out for a theater prolog, she got the job. Musical shows and vaudeville came next. Now Miss Howell earns her living singing in the talkies.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CELIA MITCHELL, 17, leaves Baltimore where she has lived with her seamstress mother, MARGARET ROGERS, to join her wealthy father, JOHN MITCHELL, in New York. The parents are divorced and Mrs. Rogers is a widow following a second marriage.

BARNEY SHIELDS, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl. Mitchell asks EVELYN PARSONS, beautiful widow, to introduce his daughter to other young people. Mrs. Parsons agrees, considering Celia a means to win Mitchell's affections. She soon becomes jealous of the girl and schemes to get rid of her by encouraging a romance between Celia and TOD JORDAN, fascinating but of dubious character.

Although Mitchell forbids Celia to see Jordan she goes about with the young man frequently. LILLI DUNCAN, a girl of Celia's age, becomes her loyal friend. Shields comes to New York to work for a photographic service and meets Celia. She tells him she has lost her heart to Jordan.

One evening the building in which Shields is working catches fire. The terror Celia feels until she learns he is safe brings her to a realization that it is Shields she really loves and that her infatuation for Jordan is ended. Shields calls but Celia has no opportunity to talk to him privately.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIV
Afterward Celia knew that she herself was to blame for what happened. Mrs. Parsons had an engagement for dinner and bride and the girl dined alone. She could have telephoned someone and had company, but she preferred solitude. It gave her opportunity to think of Barney and plan the future.

Even though it had been annoying not to have the opportunity to talk to him alone, she was proud of the impression Barney had made on Mrs. Parsons. Celia told herself that what she had to say to the young man would keep—but not for very long.

She decided to telephone him in the morning. Barney lived at a young man's club, an institution which was not social, but provided a surprising degree of comfort at low cost.

For one impetuous moment after she had left the dining room and lay back against the blue and silver divan Celia thought of calling him at once. She hesitated. No, it would be better to wait. She made up her mind that she would ask Barney to meet her somewhere. The Park Plaza would do. They could walk in the park, and by the very publicity of the place be shielded from notice.

This time there must be no third person present.

Her dreaming was interrupted by the ringing of a bell. The maid had been dismissed for the evening. Celia went to the door.

"Father!" she cried. "Come in—I'm so glad to see you!"

John Mitchell entered, kissed his daughter dutifully, and put aside hat and gloves.

"Are you alone?" he asked.
"Yes, Mrs. Parsons had an engagement and I've been sitting here wishing for someone to talk to. You couldn't have timed your arrival more perfectly."

"That's good. Just happened to be in the neighborhood and thought I'd drop in. Why didn't you let me know you wanted company? We could have had dinner together and seen a play."

"I wish I had. I really didn't know Evelyn was going out until just before she was leaving."

They talked of trivialities for several minutes. Celia asked about her grandmother and learned that she would be back in the city next

Right Way to Treat RHEUMATISM Pains—Swellings

The days of painful labor lost in America every year thru that agony of mankind—rheumatism—amounts in money to millions of dollars.

In worry, mental anguish and despair and in physical agony and suffering—what is the cure?
When you make up your mind that you are going to get Uric Acid out of your blood and be free—and keep free from joint stiffness, pain, agony and swelling—the first thing to do is to go to a reliable Drug Company or my progressive Drug Company anywhere and get a big bottle of ALLENRU.

Complete and simple directions on how to swiftly and sensibly combat all forms of acute rheumatism conditions come with each bottle and you'll be thankful that you followed this advice.

What you must do—if you are wise—is to drive the cause of rheumatism from your blood.
Continually taking heavy medicine for relief—to deaden the pain—will eventually result in such deep seated uric acid deposits in your joints and tendons that will mean days of pain and agony to the end—perhaps a crippled condition.

month. Mrs. Mitchell's health had entirely recovered.
"That reminds me," Mitchell said. "Mother thinks October 15 will be the date for you to sail. She asked me to book passage. That's—let's see, not quite three weeks from today."

Celia sat up wide-eyed. "Sail—you mean me?" she asked.
"Yes. Surely you haven't forgotten you're to spend the winter in France? I distinctly remember mother said she talked to you about it."

"Oh, yes. Of course."
"Don't you want to go?" Mitchell asked. The girl's attitude was puzzling.

Celia nodded. "Yes," she said. "only I didn't know—well, I really haven't been thinking about it. After grandmother became ill I thought perhaps she wouldn't care to go."

What Celia meant but did not wish to say was that she had serious doubts about her grandmother's feeling toward her. The girl did not want to appear ungrateful, but prospects of a winter anywhere with Mrs. Mitchell were terrifying.

"Well, I'm glad I mentioned it," Mitchell said complacently. "Get Evelyn to help you get your clothes ready. Guess you'll be sorry to leave Evelyn, won't you?"
"I will!" Celia assured him. "I'll miss her a lot."

There was a pause, and in those moments Celia missed her opportunity. She had been trying ever since her father's arrival to tell him about Barney Shields. How could she sail to Europe now and leave Barney? Mention of the elderly Mrs. Mitchell had instantly widened the breach between father and daughter.

She tried to frame the words, but they would not come. She was groping for a means of introducing the subject when Mitchell rose.

"I believe you're tired tonight, Celia," he said. "Better go to bed early. It's time for me to be getting along anyhow. Tell Evelyn I'm sorry I missed her, will you?"

The girl assured him that she would, went to the door with him and said good night. Then she returned to the living room and sat for a while staring out at the night. At last she went to her own room, undressed and slipped into a negligee.

A whole new series of problems were presenting themselves to Celia. The months ahead loomed ominously. Life had been so comfortable during the past weeks that she had scarcely given a thought to the time when she would return to her grandmother's home. To find it before her—scarcely three weeks away—was startling.

The hazy happiness in which she had been drifting since Barney Shields' visit faded. How did she know what might happen if she went away for six months? All thought of her grandmother's ambitious plans for a social career Celia rebelled.

As usual in moments of despair the girl's thoughts ran to Margaret Rogers. If only her mother were there she would know what to do. In sudden haste Celia got out paper and pen and began to compose a letter to Mrs. Rogers. She told the whole story of meeting Barney in New York, telling him she cared more for Jordan, and then how realization had come that it was Barney she loved. It was a long while before she finished the letter. When it was sealed in its envelope, stamped, addressed and put aside ready to post, she felt relieved.

Still she was not sleepy. Celia selected a magazine, curled up in a big chair and began to read.
She was still reading when she heard footsteps outside the door. It was nearly midnight.

"Is that you, Evelyn?" Celia called. She jumped up and opened the door leading into the hall.
Mrs. Parsons appeared.

"I was trying to be quiet not to wake you," she said.
"Oh, but I wasn't asleep! I've just been reading. Come in and tell me about the evening. Did you enjoy it?"

Evelyn Parsons' pink-tipped fingers rose to her lips to stifle a yawn. "Rather a bore," she said in languid tone. "Some cousin of Fannie's was there, and he was so stupid. Insisted on talking about Arizona or some such place all the while."

Mrs. Parsons sat down, carefully smoothing the gold lace of her gown about her.
"Too bad," Celia sympathized. "I had a surprise. Father called."

"Your father?"
"Yes, he wanted me to tell you he was sorry to miss you. But, oh, Evelyn, I've got the most awful news! Grandmother's going to take me to France!"

"For the winter, you mean? When does she plan to sail?"
"The 15th of next month. I don't want to go at all, but I suppose I'll have to!"

"Most girls would be pleased."
"Yes, I know, but—well, there are a lot of reasons."

Evelyn Parsons smiled archly. "I can guess one of them," she said. "A certain young man?"
Celia colored. "Well, partly," she admitted, "but that isn't all." She was silent for a moment and then the words burst forth. "Oh, if things could only be different! Do you know what I want more than anything else in the world? I want my father and mother—both! I'd give up everything else if only I could have a home like other girls. Evelyn, do you think there is anything I could do to bring them together again?"

Mrs. Parsons' face froze. Celia was so aroused that she did not notice how the pupils of the woman's eyes seemed to grow smaller, nor did she see the look of pure rage Evelyn flashed on her.
