Chisum: Census may shift power

By NANCY YOUNG
 Managing Editor

A shift of power in Texas politics will soon be taking place, State Representative Warren Chisum told Pampa Rotarians Wednesday.

"There will be more and more of a shift of power to the metropolitan areas from the rural areas with the release of the 2000 census results," he said. "These are changing times in Texas. Hopefully, it is for the better."

The state representative said rural areas in the state traditionally held the power base until now. Rural residents are moving from small towns to the more metropolitan areas in search of employment, causing the shift in state and federal representation in Austin and Washington, D.C., he explained.

Chisum lost 25,000 constituents in the 88th District which he represents, according to the census figures releases. Redistricting occurs every 10 years following the release of the figures.

Rural counties are expected to be the losers due to the drastic population decline in the small counties.

Chisum isn't sure just who he will be representing in the next legislative session. Currently, he represents residents of Carson, Childress, Collingsworth, Dallam, Donley, Gray, Hall, Hansford, Hartley, Hemphill, Hutchinson, Lipscomb, Ochiltree, Roberts, Sherman and Wheeler counties.

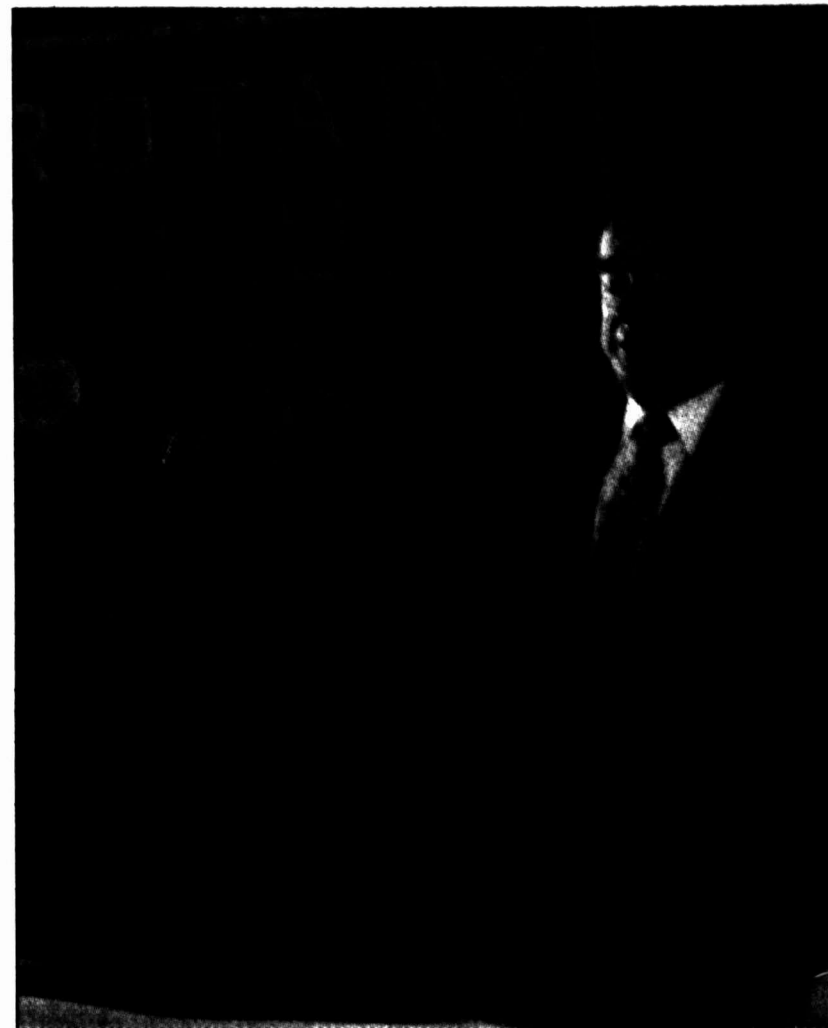

Most of the eastern Panhandle counties lost population in the 2000 Census figures. Carson, Collingsworth, Gray, Hall, Hansford, Hemphill, Hutchinson, Lipscomb, Ochiltree, Roberts, and Wheeler.

Five counties— Childress, Dallam, Donley, Hartley, and Sherman— gained population in the latest census.

He said there is more than one redistricting plan being considered. Under one plan, Chisum could be representing residents as far east as Vernon and as far south as Abilene, and back to Dalhart in the Texas Panhandle.

A second plan that has been mentioned, he said, could extend his district to Paducah to the New Mexico state line.

"Under any situation, it will be a much larger (See CHISUM, Page 3)

Hospital says patient deaths caused by illness, not flood

HOUSTON (AP)— Six patients at the Houston hospital hardest hit by Tropical Storm Allison's devastating flood waters died either on site while power was out or after being transferred to other facilities.

Officials at Memorial Hermann Hospital at the world-famous Texas Medical Center say those patients — five men and one infant — had illnesses so serious they weren't expected to survive, flood or no flood.

"Their deaths were not unexpected and we are confident that they are not attributable to the flood emergency," James Eastham, Hermann's chief executive officer, said Wednesday.

Allison is blamed for at least 20 deaths, with the cause of an additional death still under investigation, according to the Harris County Medical Examiner's office. About 20,000 homes and 5,000 other buildings in Southeast Texas were damaged, at a cost estimated to reach $2 billion.

"This is clearly the most expensive, the most devastating disaster we've ever had," said Houston Mayor Lee Brown.

On Saturday, up to a dozen feet of water overwhelmed numerous flood retention doors installed at Hermann in 1999. Emergency generators at ground level weren't flooded, but flood

Officials confirm rabies - #10

Another rabid skunk found

By NANCY YOUNG
 Managing Editor

Rabies cases have reached double-digits in Pampa.

The deadly viral disease was confirmed in a 10th skunk found inside the Pampa city limits on Wednesday. A family dog was euthanized Wednesday because the pet had not received the rabies vaccine.

Rabies affects the brain and nerves and is contracted from the bite or scratch of a rabid animal. A person, or another animal, may also be infected by getting a rabid animal's saliva in their eyes, nose, mouth or an open wound.

Animal Control Director Sandy Burns said the latest rabid skunk was killed by the pet cow dog when it entered the yard at the family residence. She said the skunk was dead when Animal Control officers arrived at the residence in the Coronado West Trailer Park, Kentucky and Price Road.

Nine confirmed rabies within the Pampa city limits have been reported since March 23. The skunks were roaming in the middle of the day. The latest rabid skunk was also out in the middle of the day, said Burns, shortly after noon on June 9.

She reminds citizens it is cause for concern when nocturnal animals are out during daylight hours. Skunks who have been confirmed rabid have not been spraying on most occasions, she said.

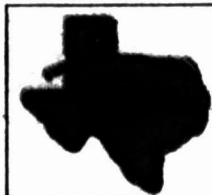

The cow dog was euthanized Wednesday after having direct contact with the rabid skunk, said Burns. She said a second cow dog, also owned by the family will also be euthanized.

The dogs' owners did not see the second dog have contact with the skunk on June 9, but the owners did not want to take a chance, said Burns.

Another suspicious skunk has been sent to the Texas Department of Health (TDH) laboratory earlier in the week, she said. She expects the testing results to be available in a few days. Burns said Animal Control only sends skunks or other animals to be tested which are extremely suspicious.

Alleged drug-cartel lieutenant pleads not guilty to smuggling, assault on federal officer

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A man alleged to have drug cartel ties has pleaded innocent to two counts of possession with intent to distribute more than a ton of marijuana and two counts of assaulting a federal officer.

Jose Manuel La Brocha Garza Rendon, accompanied by his court-appointed attorney Anthony Troiani, pleaded innocent to the charges on Wednesday in front of U.S. Magistrate Judge John William Black.

Garza, one of three alleged cartel leaders named in an indictment offering a reward of up to $2 million, was the subject of a U.S. manhunt targeting leaders of the Gulf Cartel.

The 48-year-old Mexican citizen surrendered to federal authorities June 5.

The indictment also named alleged cartel leader Oziel Cardenas Guillen and another lieutenant, Adan El Licenciado Medrano, according to Thursday's editions of the Brownsville Herald.

Former adoptive father shocked by girl's treatment in trailer

CANTON (AP) — The last time a Northeast Texas couple saw Lauren Ashley Calhoun, she was an energetic, healthy 2-year-old who loved the outdoors and movies.

The image of the child Bill and Sabrina Kavanaugh had tried to adopt is in sharp contrast to the starving girl law officers found six years later in a trailer.

Lauren was rescued from a filthy closet where she'd spent months locked away from her mother, stepfather and five siblings. She'd had little food and weighed only 25 pounds, with her stomach bloated due to malnutrition and her eyes sunken in.

The Kavanaughs, who live near Canton, had arranged for a private adoption upon the birth of Barbara Catherine Atkinson's baby and took custody of Lauren at birth on April 13, 1993. Atkinson was a friend of Bill Kavanaugh's brother-in-law's second wife.

But soon afterward, Atkinson changed her mind and demanded the girl back.

Clear Channel expands deals in Germany, Holland, and Italy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Clear Channel Communications Inc. has completed several international deals under its new moniker, Clear Channel Worldwide, giving the company a greater worldwide presence.

The San Antonio-based company has acquired a minority stake in Germany's Wall AG, entered the Dutch market with a stake in Hillenaar Outdoor Advertising and landed an advertising contract in Naples, Italy.

Clear Channel also has contested the rejection of a merger deal by antitrust regulators in Mexico. The deal to merge Acir, a Mexican radio group in which Clear Channel holds a 30 percent interest, with the Radiopolis subsidiary of Grupo Televisa was blocked because of concerns the company would have a monopoly in some cities.

The stake in Berlin-based Wall gives Clear Channel a presence in Berlin and 56 German cities, as well as Istanbul, Moscow and Amsterdam. Wall also has contracts to sell advertising on "street furniture," such as bus shelters, in St. Louis and Boston.

Coline McConville, chief operating officer of London-based Clear Channel International, has joined the board of directors of Wall.

Texas man executed for rampage that killed three children

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Condemned murderer John Wheat apologized for killing three children he occasionally babysat, but insisted in the seconds before he was put to death that their murders in a North Texas shooting rampage six years ago was not deliberate.

"I deeply regret what happened," Wheat, 57, said Wednesday evening while strapped to the Texas death chamber gurney. "I did not intentionally or knowingly harm anyone."

He uttered a word in Vietnamese that Texas prison officials said meant, "Let's get out of here," then coughed and gasped and sputtered as the drugs began taking effect. Eight minutes later, he was pronounced dead.

The former church custodian, the eighth Texas inmate to be put to death this year, was convicted of killing a 20-month-old Fort Worth child, Lacey Anderson, in a shooting spree that also claimed the child's two older siblings, Eddie Ochoa, 8, and Ashley Ochoa, 6.

Four other people also were wounded, including the children's mother, Angela Anderson, and a Fort Worth police officer, Angela Jay.

Judge denies extension in case testing amendment to federal life insurance benefits

LUBBOCK (AP) — A federal judge on Wednesday denied a motion by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. for additional time to file its response in a case that some attorneys say tests an amendment governing the Federal Employee Government Life Insurance plan.

John Rizo, the Dallas attorney representing the company, declined to comment on the denial by U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings. A Friday deadline for the response remains.

The case stems from a 1992 divorce decree in Oklahoma that made Sandra Deaver and her three children beneficiaries of the life insurance policy for Lonnie Duane Barber.

The couple formerly lived in Childress.

Barber, who worked for the Federal Railroad Administration for about 10 years, remarried in 1994 and subsequently made his new wife, Judy Barber, the beneficiary on the FEGLI policy.

USDA officials respond to wheat fungus

OLNEY (AP) — The busiest place in town is an office where a USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service team is responding to a crop fungus crisis.

Officials are examining samples of grain, looking at fields, inspecting grain elevators, checking harvesting equipment and talking to farmers in the wake of the recent wheat quarantine in Throckmorton and Young counties.

Roy Hayes, an Olney-area cattleman and hay-cutter, is worried about the presence of Karnal bunt in wheat hay he already bought.

"We've got about 3,000 bales of hay," Hayes told the Wichita Falls Times Record News. "A bunch of it's in Young County, bought and paid for."

Karnal bunt, a smut-type fungus that shows up in grain like cavities in teeth, was discovered three weeks ago at a grain elevator in Olney. Since then APHIS has reported eight locations in Young County and two in Throckmorton County testing positive for Karnal bunt.

Senate to reconsider uniform discipline

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a 50-50 tie vote, the Senate on Thursday tentatively refused to require schools to discipline special education students in the same fashion as other pupils.

Shortly after the vote, Senate leaders agreed to reconsider the issue later in the day. Republicans were discussing whether to ask Vice President Dick Cheney to come to the Capitol to break a tie if needed on a second vote.

At issue is an amendment by Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., that would require schools and school districts to implement uniform discipline policies for all children, regardless of whether they are disabled or receiving federal special educational funds. Sessions and other Republicans complained that in some cases, disabled students aren't punished as severely as others.

"If a child in a wheelchair sells dope, should they be treated any differently than any other child who sells dope?" he asked.

Democrats said the measure would strip valuable protections from some disabled students.

"We're not going to march backward," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "This is a major, major retreat."

The Senate earlier Thursday rejected an amendment by Sen.

Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, that would have let schools take the child's disability into account when determining punishment — if, for instance, a deaf child misbehaved because he or she couldn't understand a lesson in class.

The Senate expected to put the finishing touches on its version of the education bill, one of President Bush's top priorities, by late Thursday. Education Secretary Rod Paige suggested that House and Senate negotiators start a "summer-school session" to reach a final compromise by September "so we can get school started with a smile."

The House approved its version last month. After senators complete theirs, negotiators must sift through both bills to come up with a compromise on which programs will be included and how much money to authorize for them.

Still pending at midday Thursday were two amendments by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., that would limit student access to "morning-after" contraceptives in school and block federal funds to public schools that deny the Boy Scouts equal access to school facilities. A similar Boy Scout measure passed the House last month.

The Senate bill survived two challenges Wednesday as senators upheld Bush's requirement for annual math and reading tests. They also preserved a program that would cut federal regulations for some school systems if their pupils performed better.

The twin votes signaled that Bush's bipartisan coalition remains intact after last week's historic midsession Senate shift to a Democratic majority.

Annual math and reading tests for students in the third through eighth grades remain the cornerstone of Bush's effort to improve student achievement. Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., led the effort to make them optional.

His proposal was roundly rejected, 78-22.

People in the News

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Jane Fonda said she's happier than ever after her divorce from CNN founder Ted Turner.

The divorce was granted last month by a judge in Atlanta.

"Oddly enough, this is the most wonderful period of my life," the 63-year-old actress told reporters Wednesday.

"While sad, divorce doesn't necessarily mean failure. The things which cause us the most pain are also the things we learn most from," said Fonda, who won best-actress Oscars for 1971's "Kluge" and 1978's "Coming Home."

Turner, the 62-year-old billionaire founder of the Cable News Network, married Fonda in December 1991. It was the third marriage for both. The couple announced in January 2000 that they were separating.

Fonda's decision to become a Christian — which Turner has said played a role in their breakup — has given her social commitments extra drive.

"It doesn't matter if you're a late bloomer as long as you don't miss the flower show," she said. "I question everything I do in the light of what Jesus Christ would have done."

Fonda made the comments while at the International Council of Nurses' world congress, where she encouraged support for the nursing profession.

"Nurses are not paid enough because it's primarily a female profession, and they don't get the respect they deserve," she said. "But nurses are the bedrock of health care."

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Kaczmarek has learned this about parenthood: "You can't live with a white couch when you've got kids."

As Lois on Fox's "Malcolm in the Middle," Kaczmarek is the mother of four sons, including Malcolm (Frankie Muniz), who provides sharp-witted commentary on the family's zany middle-class lives.

In real life, the 45-year-old actress is married to Bradley Whitford of "The West Wing." They have two young children.

"One of the nice things about the show is the relationship between the parents," Kaczmarek told Ladies' Home Journal magazine in its July issue. "They have great kindness and forgiveness for the kinds of things they're each trying to do."

And she insists her TV family isn't dysfunctional.

"I've gotten a little heated under the collar about that description," she said. "This family has dinner together every night. They function extremely well as a unit."

"I often think of dysfunctional families as those in which no bounds are being set; there are definitely bounds in this family. They survive by common sense."

NEW YORK (AP) — Here's a nice job perk: At the end of each season, the stars of HBO's "Sex and the City" can purchase some of the outfits they've worn on the hit series.

"We buy them at very discounted prices," says Kristin Davis, who plays Charlotte. "A lot of our clothes are samples from the designers, so we have to give them right back because they're one of a kind."

"But about half our wardrobe is left," the 36-year-old actress told People magazine in its June 18 issue.

Davis said she and co-stars Sarah Jessica Parker, Kim Cattrall and Cynthia Nixon can pick one free outfit and then "pay very little for the rest."

district that I will be representing," said Chisum. Although several plans are being discussed, he said the final area will not be settled for some time to come because "lawyers will have to get their hand in it."

He predicts after the legislative redistricting board makes their recommendation the plan will go to the Court of Appeals as well as federal courts.

The Pampa state representative said that the number of counties he represents will probably increase from the current 16 to as many as 20 or 25 because of the declining population in the rural areas. Boundaries are created not only for the two chambers of the Texas Legislature, but also for the Texas congressional delegation and the State Board of Education.

Amarillo State Senator Teel Bivins' district also is certain to increase due to the population shrinkage in the Panhandle.

U. S. Representative Mac Thornberry's 13th District lost more than 54,000 residents, according to Census 2000. The area his district represents will also be increased due to the decline in population.

His district currently runs as far east as Denton, and includes the Texas Panhandle.

to urge local pet owners to get their animals vaccinated against the deadly rabies. It is required by Texas law that they be vaccinated.

"I feel like we are just sitting on a time bomb," Burns said. "We have the rabies in all areas of town now. Even though all the confirmed cases have been skunks, it can so easily go to the domestic pets."

Rabid animals have been found in all areas of Pampa.

The following are the confirmed rabies cases in Pampa:

• March 23 — A skunk found on Price Road on the western edge of Pampa was positively confirmed rabid.

• April 20 — A skunk was located in the 900 block of Reid in the southeastern edge of Pampa was diagnosed as rabid. Also, a horse in Deaf Smith County was confirmed to have rabies.

• May 4 — A third skunk found in Pampa was confirmed to have rabies. The skunk was found dead by city employees in a water meter box in the 600 block of North Banks.

• May 10 — The fourth skunk to be rabid was located in Lions Club Park, located in southeastern Pampa.

• May 10 — The fifth skunk was confirmed as rabid. It was located in the 1100 block of North Finley, also in southeastern Pampa.

• May 11 — The sixth rabid skunk was confirmed. It was located in the 900 block of South

Osborne in southeastern Pampa.

• May 17 — The seventh rabid skunk was confirmed. It was located at a residence at the intersection of Tignor and Brunow in southeastern Pampa.

• May 29 — The eighth skunk to be confirmed as rabid was found in the 1000 block of Scott in southeastern Pampa.

• June 1 — A ninth skunk was confirmed as rabid. It was found in the 2700 block of Comanche Trail in northern Pampa.

DEATHS

waters later deluged the system to switch to emergency power along with transformers underground early Saturday.

That left ventilators, heart monitors and other critical equipment without power, forcing staff to evacuate patients to neighboring hospitals, which faced less serious flood problems.

Nurses and other staff used hand-held ventilators to manually help patients breathe — including three of the men and the infant who died — while all 540 of Hermann's patients were evacuated. The power outage, which continued Wednesday, forced Hermann to shut down for the first time in its 76-year history.

Eastham said officials hoped Hermann would at least partially reopen by next week as crews worked to clean up mud and debris left on underground floors.

Three of the men and the infant died at Hermann Saturday within 15 hours of losing power. The other two men died after they were transferred to other hospitals.

Dr. Steve Allen, Hermann medical director, said none of the patients were expected to survive before the flooding. Those who died at Hermann were:

— A 63-year-old man whose condition hadn't improved after undergoing brain surgery for a head injury. Time of death: 3:15 a.m. Saturday.

— A 72-year-old man whose lungs and kidneys weren't functioning properly because of massive internal infections. Time of death: 6 a.m. Saturday.

— An 88-year-old man with multiple internal organ failure who had been transferred to Hermann from another hospital. Time of death: 3:55 a.m. Saturday.

— A 7-month-old premature twin with underdeveloped lungs whose heart had stopped at least once and who had been hospitalized for six months. Time of death: 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Allen couldn't say how many patients needed ventilators, but he said no one was left without help to breathe. "Having enough people to hand ventilate the patients was not an issue," Allen said.

Of the two other patients, one died when his heart stopped in an ambulance on the way to a nearby hospital. Allen said that man had been expected to die.

The other died after he arrived at Memorial Hermann Hospital in Katy, about 25 miles west of Houston. Allen said the man, 42 or 43 years old, had a seizure disorder and his outlook was poor before Saturday.

Neither Eastham nor Allen could say how many patients were in Hermann's intensive-care unit that night. The unit has 145 beds, and "we've been running high," Allen said.

Eastham said that as a top-level trauma center, Hermann typically houses patients in the most critical of conditions. He said that on an average weekend, up to nine critically ill patients die. Marshall Heins, vice president of construction, engineering and support services for Hermann, said the disaster surprised hospital officials and construction consultants who advised them. Efforts to flood-proof the facility worked when floods hit Houston in 1994 and 1976.

Heins said hospital officials would study moving the hospital's electrical hub to upper floors, as well as other basement facilities that were deluged, including Hermann's pharmacy and several laboratories.

"We have never seen these levels of water," he said. "We had researched it all, and we were told we were protected from flooding."

Investigators blame Crown Prince for family massacre

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Investigators on Thursday blamed the late Crown Prince Dipendra for the massacre of Nepal's royal family, saying he had drunk whiskey and smoked hashish before gunning down his parents and seven others.

The much-anticipated probe said that just before shooting his family, Dipendra spoke several times by mobile phone with the young woman he wanted to marry — but whom his parents, King Birendra and Queen Aiswarya, opposed.

The two-member probe released its report Thursday after Birendra's brother and successor, King Gyanendra, ordered it to provide an explanation for the killings to an outraged Nepalese public.

CDC: Biotech corn not to blame for allergy attacks

After the CDC began investigating complaints about StarLink, the Food and Drug Administration developed a blood test that could tell whether someone was allergic to the Cry9C protein.

The 17 people who gave blood samples to CDC were among 24 people interviewed by investigators after reporting complaints.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has cleared biotech corn as the culprit in a rash of allergy attacks that were reported after discovery of the grain in taco shells spawned nationwide food recalls.

The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Wednesday its investigation of the complaints "did not find any evidence that hypersensitivity" to a special protein in StarLink corn caused the reactions.

Blood samples were taken from 17 people and tested for sensitivity to the protein, known as Cry9C.

Critics of biotechnology say the CDC investigation was too limited to conclude that the corn is safe. "This is a small piece of evidence," said Rebecca Goldberg, senior scientist with Environment Defense, an advocacy group. "It's far from being definitive."

StarLink corn was only supposed to be used for animal feed or industrial purposes because of questions about whether it was a human allergen.

The Cry9C protein breaks down slowly in the digestive system, an indication that it might induce allergic reactions. However, scientists say people would have to be exposed to the protein repeatedly to become sensitive to it.

StarLink is one of several types of corn that have been genetically engineered to produce their own pesticides.

StarLink was withdrawn from the market last year but the grain has contaminated a significant portion of the nation's corn supply.

After the CDC began investigating complaints about StarLink, the Food and Drug Administration developed a blood test that could tell whether someone was allergic to the Cry9C protein.

The 17 people who gave blood samples to CDC were among 24 people interviewed by investigators after reporting complaints.

CDC's findings should give EPA "the final piece of information" it needs to approve the Aventis request, said Val Giddings, a spokesman for the Biotechnology Industry Organization.

After the CDC began investigating complaints about StarLink, the Food and Drug Administration developed a blood test that could tell whether someone was allergic to the Cry9C protein.

The 17 people who gave blood samples to CDC were among 24 people interviewed by investigators after reporting complaints.

Keith Finger, a Florida optometrist who was included in the CDC study, said he suffered a severe allergy attack last September shortly before the first recall of a StarLink-tainted product, Taco Bell-brand taco shells.

Finger said he had a meal containing corn ingredients shortly before the attack, which included severe stomach cramps and swelling of his throat. He has since eaten the same products, which included a tortilla made with corn starch, without a reaction, he said.

Oil companies sought to boost prices by cutting refinery output

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the Bush administration cites the lack of refineries for energy shortages, internal oil industry documents show that five years ago companies were looking for ways to cut refinery output to boost profits.

It takes about four years to build a large refinery so any substantial additional new capacity from new plants would have had to begin by the mid-1990s, energy expert acknowledge.

But some internal industry documents obtained by Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., suggest that in the mid-1990s oil companies had no interest in building new refineries because of low profit margins and, in fact, were discussing the need to curtail refinery output to boost profits.

"If the U.S. petroleum industry doesn't reduce its refining capacity, it will never see any substantial increase in refinery margins (profits)," said an internal Chevron document in November 1995.

The memo cited warnings given about refinery profits by a senior analyst from the American Petroleum Institute, the industry trade group, at an industry conference that year.

API spokesman Jim Craig, reached Wednesday evening, said he knew nothing about the memo or its reference to an API conference.

A year later, an official at Texaco, in a memo marked "highly confidential," called concerns about too much refinery capacity "the most critical factor" facing the refinery industry — resulting in "very poor refining financial results."

The Texaco memo, written in March, 1996, concluded that "significant events" were required to deal with the excess refinery capacity problem and suggested one solution might be to get the government to lift clean air requirements for an oxygenate in gasoline. Removal of the additive would require more gasoline to be used in each gallon of fuel, tightening supplies.

While refinery capacity now has become tight, the oil industry is still pressing for an end to the federal requirement for an oxygenate in gasoline, arguing new blends of gasoline can meet the same clean air requirements.

"The documents suggest that major oil companies pursued efforts to curtail refinery capacity as a strategy for improving profit margins," said Wyden, who was releasing the papers at a news conference Thursday.

Attempts to get a comment from either Texaco or Chevron officials were unsuccessful Wednesday evening. No one answered the phone at Texaco's corporate offices in White Plains, N.Y., nor Chevron's headquarters in San Francisco.

Texaco and Chevron are awaiting government approval to merge, creating the nation's fourth largest oil company.

The need for more refinery capacity has been the focus of President Bush's energy plan. Vice President Dick Cheney frequently has blamed gasoline price increases on tight supplies caused to a large part, he says, by the fact that no new refinery has been built in 20 years.

West Texas A&M to offer speech and theatre camp

CANYON — Debate, drama and more will take center stage at West Texas A&M University June 17-29 at the Guy P. Yates Speech and Theatre Camp.

Students from Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana are expected to take part in the two-week camp. The camp is designed for students 12-18 years of age to prepare them for speech competitions and drama productions. High school teachers from across the state will join with WTAMU faculty to lead campers through workshops in extemporaneous and oratory speaking, theatre, technical theatre, oral interpretation and debate.

Campers will attend workshop sessions in their chosen area of study. They will receive classroom instruction as well as lab time to work on material with camp faculty. Students involved in the forensic aspects of the camp will keep busy working on debate cases, preparing material and researching and writing speeches.

"Students spend two weeks working on their speech and debate skills so that when the school year starts in August, they are ready," Dr. Russell Lowery-Hart, WTAMU forensic director and director of the camp, said.

Campers involved in theatre will work at the University's Branding Iron Theatre on a play that will be presented to the public at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, June 28. The facility has just recently been renovated and will offer campers the chance to work with state-of-the-art equipment including lighting and sound.

At the end of the two-week camp, students will showcase their talents at a camp festival. Campers will be featured in forensic and one-act play venues. Awards will be presented to the top performer and/or debate team. Certificates, based on experience, will be awarded to forensic students rated as "Excellent" and "Superior."

"After two weeks with this camp staff, these students will gain personal confidence, professional skills and a competitive edge," Lowery-Hart said.

For more information about speech and theatre camp or other WTAMU summer camp offerings, call (806) 651-2037.

Houston company hopes to sail messages, DNA into space

HOUSTON (AP) — California businessman Dennis Tito paid up to $20 million for an eight-day trip to space. Now, a Houston-based company can send you — well, part of you anyway — for $50.

Encounter 2001 is working to build an unmanned spacecraft, fill it with DNA samples and messages from up to 4.5 million people, then blast it beyond the solar system. The company hopes to launch its spacecraft in late 2003.

"This is a chance for people to participate in a real space mission," said Charles Chafer, Encounter 2001 president. "Maybe one day it will be found."

For $50, people can have their digitized photos and messages as well as hair samples placed on the spacecraft.

Encounter 2001 is the sister company of Celestis Inc., which in April 1997 began using commercial rockets to launch the cremated remains of people into space.

Encounter's spacecraft will be made up of a solar sail the size of a football field and a small container carrying the photos and messages, plus dehydrated hair samples with the DNA codes of 4.5 million people.

The solar sail — the spacecraft's power source — is a very thin sheet of reflective material that will use the sun's photons to propel it forward, Chafer said. The concept is similar to a sailboat being pushed along the water by the force of the wind.

Like wind, sunlight exerts pressure and a large enough sail in space could harness this force and travel without using fuel. Although a solar sail is at first slower than a conventional rocket, it continues to accelerate over time and achieves a greater velocity.

Pieces of historic banner on display

BALTIMORE (AP) — The original Star-Spangled Banner survived the British shelling of Baltimore in 1814, and the image of the flag flying over Fort McHenry inspired the poem later used as the national anthem.

But less than a century after the fort's commander took the flag home, it was about 10 feet shorter and missing one of its 15 stars.

For decades, the family of Maj. George Armistead bestowed flag snippings upon officials and esteemed acquaintances, in a practice once considered an honored tradition.

Many fragments have been lost, squirreled away in private homes or buried with their recipients. But others go on display Thursday — Flag Day — at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, where the original flag has been displayed since 1964.

"Snippings from the Star-Spangled Banner" will run at the museum through Sept. 23.

Armistead, who took command of Fort McHenry during the War of 1812, decided the installation needed "a flag so large that the British will have no difficulty seeing it from a distance."

A 30-by-42-foot flag was stitched together by Mary Pickersgill. When Armistead retired after successfully defending the fort, he took the flag home.

Grain officials seek probe into crop disease outbreak

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Convinced the federal government didn't respond quickly enough to the recent outbreak of a contagious wheat disease, grain officials in Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas plan to ask for a congressional inquiry into the matter.

The disease, Kamal bunt, broke out about three weeks ago in Throckmorton and Young counties in Texas, but Oklahoma Agriculture Secretary Dennis Howard and others say they received their first notice of the situation on Friday.

"It's totally unacceptable what they've done," said Joe Neal Hampton, Oklahoma Grain and Feed Association president. "In our opinion their bureaucracy and their policy allowed the possible contamination of Oklahoma and Kansas wheat."

Hampton faxed a letter Wednesday to U.S. Rep. Frank Lucas, R-Cheyenne, requesting the inquiry. His counterparts in Kansas, Tom Tunnell, and Texas, Ben Boerner, verified that they also want an inquiry into the Agriculture Department's response.

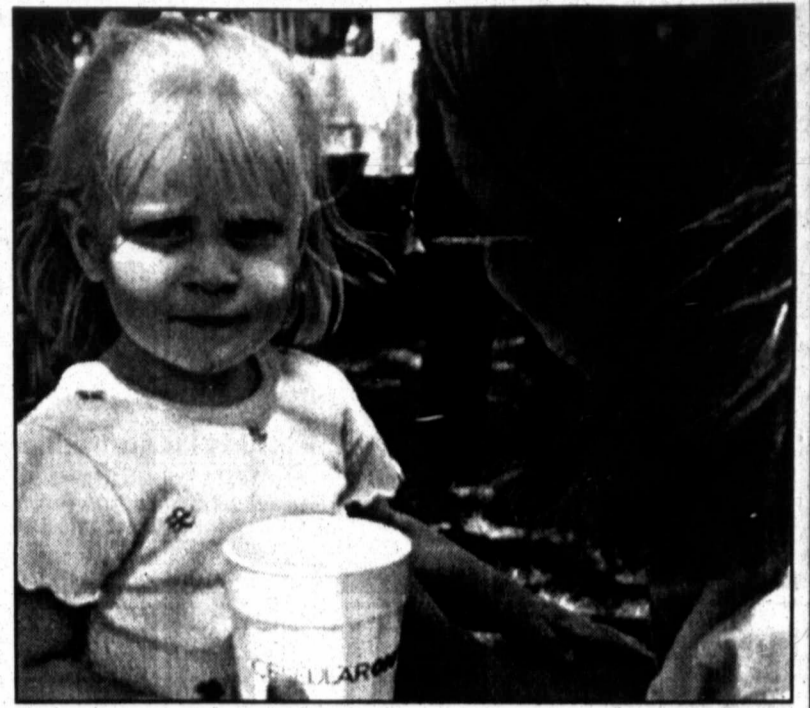

Lucas said he tried to call U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman after getting the letter, but she had not called him back.

Lucas said the inquiry ultimately could end with farmers and grain handlers getting compensation from the government for their losses from Kamal bunt.

A wheat kernel infected with Kamal bunt smells and tastes fishy, but is not considered a health hazard.

Still, state agriculture officials worry the disease could spook foreign wheat buyers who account for 50 percent of Oklahoma's wheat sales.

Mother-in-Law's Talent Takes The Cake — and Bakes It Too

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from "New Mom in Ohio," concerning whether she should allow her mother-in-law to decorate the cake for her child's first birthday, I fought back tears. I lost my beloved mother-in-law two years ago. How I wish she was still here to thrill us with her creative cakes.

Each year she would plan a theme cake for my husband, depicting the major events of the last year. The whole family waited and speculated on what the cake would be like. I was blessed to be part of the secret, and we would hunt for the perfect things to put on the cake. The fun we shared is something I will treasure forever.

When we are young, we think we have many years to share with our parents. Don't be fooled. Time goes by too fast to quibble over who bakes a cake! Join the fun, love this special person, and let her honor you and your family with her cakes for years to come.

MISSING HER IN HURON, OHIO
DEAR MISSING HER: I agree, but not everyone did. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: While the mother-in-law may be great at baking, it's not how the cake looks but the joy a new mom gets to experience in making it. I'm sure the mother-in-law didn't ask her husband's mother to make hers when she first had children.

This mom wants to make her child's cake. No one should deny her that privilege. If her mother-in-law really cared about her, she would understand and not cause a problem. Recently I was watching some old videos with my daughters, now 12 and 8, and when my 12-year-old saw her first birthday cake, she thought it was so pretty she asked where I bought it. Even at 12, she was happy to know I cared enough to take the time to make it myself. Please tell "New Mom" there's nothing wrong with her making the cake and not to feel guilty. This is her time, not her mother-in-law's.

LOVE BEING A MOM,
JACKSON, TENN.

DEAR LOVE BEING A MOM: I know you speak for many young mothers. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I have a compromise: In our circle we always let the babies have a cake of their own to dig into and make a huge mess on their first birthday. It's so much fun. Perhaps "New Mom" could make a smaller cake for the baby to dive into, and Grandma's cake can be for the guests to enjoy. Baby can pose for pictures with both, and everyone will be happy. A first birthday is very special for a new mom, so the more cakes, the merrier!

DAWN IN RIVERSIDE, N.J.
DEAR DAWN: I like your style. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The first year we were married I took both of our families on a Saturday to a local ice cream parlor to celebrate my husband's birthday. On the day of his actual birthday, I made a cake and planned a dinner just for the two of us. Lo and behold, who comes knocking on our door but my in-laws with a cake my mother-in-law had baked. To make matters worse, my husband had a piece of her cake and none of mine. I was devastated and let him know it after they left.

Now we laugh about it and I say, "Anytime someone else wants to cook — go for it!" Your advice was correct, Abby. There are more important things to agonize over. This too shall pass.

NO LONGER A BRIDE
IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR N.L.A. BRIDE: If there's anything I have learned from this series of letters, it's not the cake that's important, but what it symbolizes — and it means different things to different people.

Glo-Valve downs Celanese in battle of unbeaten teams

PAMPA — Brett Ferrell needed just 86 pitches to dispatch Celanese Corporation as he twirled a three-hit shutout and raised Glo-Valve's record to 3-0 Wednesday in the Optimist Cal Ripken 11-12 League City Tournament.

In a battle of unbeaten, Glo-Valve scratched out only six hits in the 3-0 win. Jarron Clark led Glo-Valve hitting with two hits and one RBI. The defense of both teams was brilliant as no errors were recorded in the game.

After a scoreless first inning, Aaron Carter walked to become Glo-Valve's first base runner. He went to second on a passed ball and reached home on a single to left field by Clark. Robbie Dixon led off Glo-Valve's half of the fourth inning with a double. He advanced to third on an infield out and scored on an infield hit. Travis Marsh beat out an infield hit to open Glo-Valve's fifth inning and raced home on a double by Ferrell.

Celanese saw Tanner Dyson single in the bottom of the first inning. He went to second on a passed ball and to third on a wild pitch. Taylor Busse walked for Celanese in the second inning. DFB's biggest threat came in the third inning when Tyler Hall singled and Colby Copeland walked. Glo-Valve came up with a fine defensive play from Aaron Carr flipping to Jonathan Carr to nip a runner at second and end the inning. Ferrell did not allow another baserunner.

Ferrell picked up his sixth victory and third shutout of the season. He allowed three hits and walked two while striking out 11 for Glo-Valve. Hall pitched the first, third and fifth innings for Celanese. He gave up one run on two hits. He struck out four, walked one and hit a batter. Copeland pitched the second, fourth and sixth innings for Celanese. He permitted two runs and four hits. He struck out three and walked two.

Dustin Fomey, Celanese right fielder, made a running catch of a line drive for the outstanding defensive play of the game for Celanese.

Glo-Valve moved into first place in tournament standings with a 3-0 record. Celanese is second at 3-1. Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency holds down third with a 2-1 record. Rotary Club and Pampa Cyber Net are tied for fourth place with 2-2 records. Cabot Corporation (1-2), Triangle Well Servicing Co. (1-3) and Bill Allison Auto Sales (0-3) round out the standings.

Today's games find Triangle playing Allison Auto at 5:45 p.m. in Pampa with Celanese and Cabot battling at 7:45 p.m. In Miami, DFB will try to handle dangerous Cyber Net in the early game while Glo-Valve and Rotary tangle in the nightcap.

The top four finishers in the first round of the tournament will play a double-elimination second round next week to determine the City Championship.

Lakers close in on another NBA crown

If they can close out the series Friday night in Game 5, the Lakers will finish with the best postseason run in NBA history — 15-1.
