Across the country, Americans of many faiths planned services and vigils Friday, joining President Bush in a national day of remembrance for the victims of the terrorist attacks.

"We want people to feel empowered. We want them to feel positive," said Janis Mulhall, an evangelical Christian organizing the memorial in Pleasanton.

Mulhall has been scouring stores for tiny American flags buying about 300 so far — and plans to distribute them to everyone who attends.

In proclaiming Friday a national day of prayer and remembrance, Bush urged com-the petition is on the agenda. Thursday, a steady stream of people arrived at Lovett Memorial Library's meeting room where the petitioners had set up tables where people could sign a petition requesting a citywide vote to prohibit the City of Pampa from providing any further funds to the PEDC and to revoke the one-half of one percent sales tax set aside for the PEDC.

"I can't tell you the number (of signers), because we have a lot of (the petitions) circulating around the town," Terry said. "But I can tell you we've been very pleased with the response so far.'

Volunteers checked voter registration records as the potential signers came in to the library.

The petition drive at the Lovett Library meeting room will continue through 9 p.m. Friday, Terry said.

The grant is available through Public Law 106-554, a federal initiative to help local education agencies (ISD's) make urgently needed repairs and renovations.

The law also provides for private school participation. St Vincent's has indicated a desire to participate. If PISD gets the grant, the private school would qualify for 10 percent of the cost of a project at their school.

Amarillo High School Sandies. Representatives of the 19 local agencies supported through the Pampa United Way will be present for tonight's festivities, said Katrina Bigham, executive direc-

This year's United Way chair - Dr. Dawson Orr, Pampa ISD superintendent - may have had some influence in this unique way to start the campaign.

Dr. Orr will lead the campaign to raise a goal of $375,000 to help 19 non-profit service organizations in the community. "I am honored to lead this year's campaign," Orr said. Orr has volunteered with the Pampa United Way for a number of years as a loaned executive and as chair of the Major Firm Committee.

"The United Way is a critical part of maintaining our sense of community," Orr said. "What a wonderful way to show how Pampa cares!"

tip of Manhattan, also will resume service Monday,

Rescue teams have been digging through the trade center's massive ruins since the attacks, but hopes of finding survivors were dwindling. There were 184 confirmed dead, and more than 4,700 were reported missing.

The rain fell off and on, often heavily, throughout the morning. The rain made the footing a little more dangerous," said Richard Coppo, a rescue volunteer. "We thought that maybe the rain would settle the dust and make things better, but actually it stirred it up."

Giuliani and his aides detailed a series of hoaxes, thefts and other petty crimes that have hampered the recovery effort and unnerved New Yorkers. He warned anyone making false bomb threats that they face arrest, and urged the media to doublecheck any reports that might raise false hopes or kindle unwarranted fears.

He also reported that telemarketing swindlers were calling people to request donations to aid victims' families, and asked for help in tracking down and arresting those responsible. Police Commissioner Bernard Kerik said a woman was charged with reckless endangerment, obstructing fire operations and filing false reports after she came to a police station dressed in medical scrubs and hysterically insisted she had just gotten a phone call from her husband trapped in the wreckage. "It was all fake," Kerik said. "There was no husband. There was no phone call."

Kerik said several people had been arrested for using phony identification or pretending to be volunteers, then committing crimes in the cordonedoff disaster zone.

On Thursday evening, authorities detained about a dozen people of Middle Eastern descent in two separate groups at two New York airports. But Giuliani said investigators determined none of them had any connection to the terrorist attacks.

Friday's rainstorm followed a disappointing 24 hours. No survivors were found, only false hope. Reports of five firefighters recovered alive in a buried SUV were carried by television stations and news agencies, including The Associated Press. Authorities were ecstatic. But the story wasn't true.

The accurate report: Two firefighters had been temporarily trapped in an underground air pocket and freed by other rescue workers.

Volunteers, running on adrenaline and faith, were evacuated from a damaged office tower across the street from the Trade Center when the top 10 stories appeared unsteady. Workers fled, sprinting down the street.

No buildings fell. Giuliani said inspections Thursday found the buildings still standing were structurally sound.

Worries spurred evacuations across the city — at Grand Central Terminal, the Port Authority Bus Terminal and CNN's midtown offices, among other

Tens of thousands of residents in lower Manhattan remained homeless. From trendy TriBeCa to working-class Chinatown, investigators turned the five-square-mile area into a giant crime scene. Some lucky residents were allowed to retrieve a few belongings before being hustled out because of safety concerns and power outages. At an armory, in hospitals and on the streets of Manhattan, thousands of distraught families searched for the missing. Almost every sentence began the same: "Have you seen ..." And nearly every plea ended the same: "If you know anything, please call ...' More than 2,500 people stood in line at the armory on 26th Street and Lexington Avenue, waiting to complete missing-persons reports. At St. Vincent's Hospital, where many of the victims from Tuesday's World Trade Center attacks were taken. relatives waited to find out if their loved ones had been admitted.

American Airlines to begin resuming flight schedules

DALLAS (AP) - American Airlines said Friday it would gradually resume up to 80 percent of its flights, but the world's largest carrier declined to say whether it would ever return to the full schedule it flew before Tuesday's airliner suicide attacks. American said it was forced to reduce its schedule because of new aviation-security measures that are expected to cause delays in air travel, but it also acknowledged harm from frightened passengers.

'Obviously this week's events are going to have an impact on air travel, everybody knows that," said spokesman Al Becker. 'We just don't know what that's going to be.'

American planned to operate about one-third of its flights on Friday in a limited number of cities, including all three major airports in the New York area.

My son certainly fits your definition of the "strong-willed child." Cut tell me how to get him through these tough years. He is as tough as nails. What specific suggestions do you have for us?

Here is a summary of some approaches or ideas that I think are important:

- 1. You should not blame yourself for the temperament with which your child was born. He is simply a tough kid to handle, and your task is to rise to the challenge.
- 2. He is in greater danger because of his inclination to test the limits and scale the walls. Your utmost diligence and wisdom will be required to deal with him.
- 3. If you fail to understand his lust for power and independence, you can exhaust your resources and bog down in guilt. It will benefit no one.
- 4. For parents who have just begun, take charge of your babies. Hold tightly to the reins of authority in the early days and build an attitude of respect during your brief window of opportunity. You will need every ounce of "awe" you can get during the years to come. Once you have established your right to lead, begin to let go systematically, year by year.
- 5. Don't panic, even during the storms of adolescence. Better times are ahead.
- 6. Don't let your son get too far from you emotionally. Stay in touch. Don't write him off, even when every impulse is to do just that. He needs you now more than ever before.
- 7. Give him time to find himself, even if he appears not to be searching.

8. Most important, I urge you to hold your children before the Lord in fervent prayer throughout their years at home. I am convinced that there is no greater source of confidence and wisdom in parenting. There is not enough knowledge in books, mine or anyone else's, to counteract the evil that surround our kids today. Teen-agers are confronted by drugs, alcohol, sex and foul language wherever they turn. And, of course, the peer pressure on them is enormous. We must bathe them in prayer every day of their lives. The God who make your children will hear your petitions. He has promised to do so. After all, he loves them more than you do.

And a concluding word: Remember that anyone can raise the easy kid. Guiding a strong-willed child through the rebellious years takes a pro with a lot of love to give. I'll bet you're up to the task!

Wife Discovers That Sex Is About Love, Not Entertainment

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this because of letters and surveys I have seen that indicate a large percentage of American women lack interest in sex. I hope my experience will help

My husband has always been a generous and thoughtful lover. However, my lack of interest in sex for more than 10 years caused much sorrow and frustration. Once I told my husband I would give him a divorce if it weren't for our children. He said he never wanted to hear that again - he loved me and wasn't going anywhere. Though that was incredibly reassuring, my difficulties with sex continued. I sought counseling, but although I realized some of my problem resulted from unwise earlier sexual relationships and issues with my parents, nothing changed for the better. In my bitterness, I could never call sex "making

Then one day in passing, I heard the comment, "Sex isn't entertain-

"Well, what is it then?" I wondered. It came to me that sex then must be about love and giving, cherishing and adoring another person, and the other person also giving, cherishing and adoring in return - a supreme representation of unconditional love given exclusively between two people. This understanding changed everything.

The next time my husband and I had sex, I thought about how much I things he did for me, and tried to give myself in cherishing and adoring him. It was an amazing, healing and transcendent experience unlike anything I had experienced. It was making love for the first time.

Energy I never knew I had emerged and I "made love" three more times that weekend with my amazed but grateful husband. I have gone from dreading sex to realizing I would miss it if I lost my husband. Although at times I need to remind myself what I have learned, I feel reborn to my marriage and able to love my husband more deeply which is true joy. I am so grateful.

One more observation: Since my new outlook more than a year ago, I truly believe the casual and graphic way sex is portrayed on television and movies cheapens it and encourages an attitude that definitely made my difficulties much worse. The use of sex - or violence, for that matter by the media for ratings or money causes much distorted thinking and needless pain in many people.
A READER IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR READER: You have written a terrific letter. Somewhere down the line, many people have stopped regarding sex as communication and adopted the idea that it was recreation - or even sport. What was lost in the translation was intimacy and, in many cases, fidelity.

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, I dated a man who gave me a family heirloom as a gift. We went our separate ways on very good terms, and he never asked for it back. This gift has always been very special to me because it was made by his grandfather and had been given to his mother. Eventually I married someone else and so did he.

I recently learned that this man has died. I don't know if I should give this heirloom to his widow. Some of my friends say that if he wanted it back he would have asked for it. Others say I should return it to his widow. Your thoughts, please.

SUSAN IN CHESTERFIELD, VA.

DEAR SUSAN: You seem like a lovely lady. The item was given as a gift and it legally belongs to you. You are under no obligation to return it. However, since you think it might have sentimental value to the widow or their children, it would be a kindness to offer it to them.

Weekly Word By Pastor Leland Lewis First Assembly of God

Just a rumor ...

Did you know that Abraham Lincoln's coffin was dug up and the lid pried open two different times?

The first time was in 1887, 22 years after his assassination. Why? Not to see about the bullet wound, but because a rumor was sweeping the nation that his coffin was empty. So a very select group of witnesses was chosen to check this story out. The coffin was dug up, the lid opened, the body viewed. The coffin was again sealed with lead, then lowered into the ground. No one left the cemetery until the dirt again completely covered the coffin. Then they solemnly made the announcement that indeed the president's body was in the coffin.

Fourteen years later the martyred president's withered body was viewed again. Why? For the same purpose as the first time. Lincoln's son protested the viewing. But, again, officials felt the rumor should be answered. Then the coffin was to be permanently entombed, itself enclosed in a new wooden box, which would then be encased in cement.

You may be thinking, How thoughtless and unkind! But rumors are like that; they play fast and loose with the facts and then admit no direct source. So we are left beating the air in an attempt to restore the truth and peace.

Unfortunately, one can easily get pulled into this game. But let me suggest some ways in which we can deal with rumors and 1. Identify sources by name. If someone rumormongers. wants to share with you information that is suspect, insist on a

2. Support evidence with facts. Rumors tend to fade quite rapidly when exposed to the light of the truth.

3. Ask the person, "May I quote you?" It's remarkable how quickly a gossiper can back-pedal and recant.

4. Openly state, "I don't appreciate hearing that." Now this approach is for the strong, but it's a sure way to halt the regular delivery of garbage to your ears.

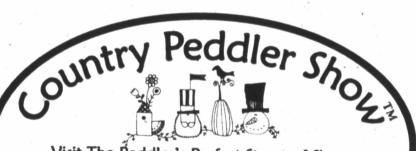

Pause 10-seconds and mentally review your words before your lips start moving. Ask yourself. Is it true? Is it accurate? Is it kind? Is this necessary? Think first before you say it. And start today.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) The Texas Rangers arrived in Dallas Thursday night after using first a bus and then a chartered plane to return from California.

The team started for home about 2 p.m. CDT after major league baseball decided to postpone all games. until next week because of the terrorist attacks, said spokesman John Blake.

The Rangers had planned to make the 1,800-mile trip from Oakland to Texas by bus, a journey that could have taken 30 hours.

But on the way, the team traveling secretary made arrangements to charter an airplane in Bakersfield and got clearance to fly to Texas. Blake said the morale of the team is still high, even if players were shaken by the tragedies in New York and Washington D.C.

"I think most of our players were in agreement with not playing until next week," Blake said. "Everyone was patient in the whole travel process. Players were prepared to take a 25hour bus ride.'

The players, who haven't worked out for about three days, will practice this weekend at the ballpark before their next game on Tuesday, Blake said.

Texas will play Oakland in the start of a nine-game homestand. The Rangers will then head back to the West Coast to end their sea-

College football cancels weekend schedule

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT AP Football Writer

Coach Frank Solich played fullback for Nebraska the day after President Kennedy was assassinated in 1963.

On Saturday, four days after terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, his. Cornhuskers — and every other major college team — won't be running onto the football field.

"I don't think it was necessarily easy for anybody to move forward with that," Solich said of Nebraska's game against Oklahoma the day after Kennedy was killed on Nov. 22, 1963.

"When you have things happen like happened recently to this country or like Kennedy, there is concern and there are different ways to possibly go on it. The decision was to go. we went forward and I guess that's

Oklahoma-Nebraska was one of just a few games played that day. Most others were called off. The fourth-ranked Huskers rescheduled Saturday's game against Rice for Sept. 20. On Thursday, all 58 weekend games involving major college teams were postponed or canceled, along with NFL games and every other weekend sporting event.

All 11 Division I-A conferences, including the ACC, Big East, Big 12, Pac-10 and SEC, and most I-AA leagues called off their games. The Big Ten did not officially postpone games, but its 11 schools either suspended home games or had road games postponed for them. On Thursday, the Big 12 and Southeastern conferences reversed field and postponed their games, just hours after the NFL called off its 15 games. The ACC, Big East and Pac-10 made the decision to postpone on heavily with the colleges.

"It had a very significant impact," Benson said. "We haven't been able to the go five minutes without seeing or hearing reports from the World Trade Center. No one has ever had to face this crisis before, not the commissioner of the NFL, the PGA or myself. The longer you can wait to make a decision the better decision you can make."

The WAC, Conference USA, Mid-American, Mountain West, Sun Belt and Western Athletic were the other major conferences postponing games.

Notre Dame, an independent, and Purdue called off its game and rescheduled for Dec. 1.

SEC commissioner Roy Kramer said its league changed plans after the NFL made its call. But he added it's important to get back to a normal routine. "We can't allow these terrorists to totally stifle our way of life," he said.

Fifty-four I-A games were postponed, and four were canceled. Games that won't be made up are Navy at Northwestern, Bowling Green at South Carolina, Marshall at TCU and Appalachian State at Troy State.

Other teams will try to find a way to reschedule, hoping to find common open dates, add a game around the Thanksgiving weekend or play on Dec. 1, the final day of the regular season.

The SEC left open an option of moving its Dec. 1 league title game to Dec. 8 to give teams a chance to fit in postponed games.

As of early Friday, there were still six Division I-AA games scheduled Saturday. New York City schools Columbia and Fordham planned to make a decision Friday on whether to play their scheduled game in the Bronx.

In the lone game Thursday night, Tennessee-Martin beat Kentucky Wesleyan 54-14.

Among the most prominent games postponed were three matchups in Florida: No. 13 Washington at No. 1 Miami, No. 8 Tennessee at No. 2 Florida and Florida State.

Saturday's schedule had featured 18 games involving 22 of the AP's Top 25 teams.

Prep games to be played

DALLAS (AP) — Major college football and NFL games have been postponed, but high school games from coast to coast are still being

"We're looking at our activities as an extension of the classroom, which might be a little different than colleges look at their activities," said Larry Klaassen, commissioner of the Wyoming High School Activities Association.

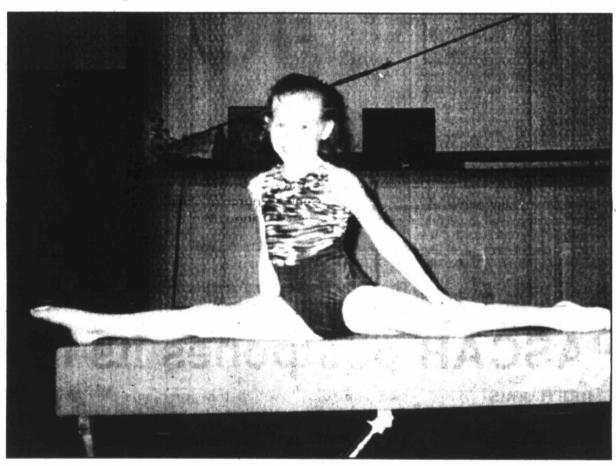

Nevertheless, it was clear that this week's terrorist attacks would be on the mind of participants and fans, including those in Iowa, where the state's high school athletic association encouraged high schools to consider going ahead with football and other sports.

"At athletic events, it is entirely appropriate to invite fans to bow their heads in a silent prayer or moment of silence for those who lost their lives and others affected by this tragedy," the association said in a statement.

In Texas, where football is king, many school districts - including Houston and Dallas - planned to continue with Friday's games, despite tragedy on the East Coast that caused routine events across the nation to be put on hold.

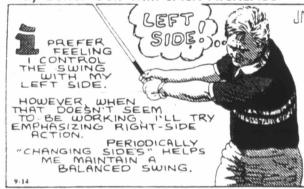

"Obviously, we got a lot of phone calls. The schools are simply calling for information and asking if we are asking for anything or mandating anything," said Peter Contreras, spokesman for the University Interscholastic League, which governs Texas' public school athletic competitions.

PAMPA — Dumas downed Pampa 15-8, 15-3 in a District 3-4A volleyball match Thursday in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa coach Carmen Pennick said Jennifer Lindsey, Abbi Covalt and Angie Williams looked good for the Lady Harvesters.

"Jennifer has played very well for several matches. She's been an offensive threat and has been playing good defense," coach Pennick said. "Abbi has been doing a job of setting and she's continuing to work on her defense. Angie stepped up with her blocks and she did a good job on offense."

The Lady Harvesters were boosted by the return of injured starter Danielle Martinez, who had missed two and a half weeks with an ankle sprain.

"We're excited about getting her back, but she's not quite 100 percent yet. Morgan White came in a did a good job in her place," Pennick said. "I know Morgan is happy to be back in her old posi-

The announcement will be made by some other means, probably via fax, although the means and time are still being determined, said a source close to Jordan, speaking on condition of anonymity and confirming a report in Friday's Washington Post.

On Monday, Jordan said a news conference had been planned for Washington within 10 days at which he would announce his decision. He strongly indicated that he would return from his threeyear retirement and play for the Washington Wizards.

The source said Jordan is now in no rush to make his decision and that continually developing national events could change its timing. It is all but , however, that he will make his intentions known before Oct. 2, when the Wizards are scheduled to begin training camp in Wilmington, N.C.
