County mulls proposal to seek more stringent hog waste controls

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

A resolution to strengthen requirements for large scale swine operations is being considered by Gray County Commission. If passed, it be sent to the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission.

The proposed resolution makes suggestions that the TNRCC enact more stringent guidelines on any swine confined animal feeding operation in the county which has 1,000 head or more.

Protection of the health and well being of its citizens as well as protecting the Ogallala Aquifer from pollution is stated as the reason for the resolution.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene presented a suggested resolution to the commissioners court for their evaluation at a recent meeting of the Gray County Commissioners Court.

The first paragraph in the proposed resolution states "Whereas, the Gray county Commissioners recognize the need to protect the health and well being of its citizens, and to protect the Ogallala Aquifer from pollution." The proposed resolution suggests several requirements be met.

Greene told the commission he has spoken with judges and commissioners from 11 counties in the area whom he said are also interested in adopting the resolution.

National Pig Development USA of North Carolina announced plans in July to build a 50,000 head swine facility 11 miles east of Pampa.

"I think it would be good to get several counties together and go to the TNRCC," said Greene. He added that each judge and county commissioner with whom he has talked about adopting such a resolution has been in favor of it.

One of the suggested requirements is "that all hog waste lagoons have a 30-inch clay liner base covered with a geo-textile liner, as distinguished from other cheap plastic liners."

Greene said North Carolina has implemented this requirement for the hog industry lagoons.

Dale Roth, a local retired engineer, said the National Pig Development application seeking a permit to construct a genetic swine research facility 11 miles east of Pampa requests the TNRCC approve (18 inches) feet of clay liner base.

Roth, who worked with lagoons in the petrochemical industry prior to retirement, has read the application and studied numerous procedures to keep hog waste pollution from going into the (See COUNTY, Page 3)

"The county commission needs some way to impose a protection upon the county from health concerns and pollution. We have no way of doing that at this time."

Firefighter Tim Gabel inflates Pampa Fire Department's newest tool, a $3,300 Hurst air bag lift system used to lift objects as heavy as 26 tons.

New lifesaving tool ...

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Maybe they can't move mountains, but local firefighters can now lift vehicles and other objects weighing tons with a new air bag system designed by the same company that makes the Jaws of Life.

"If a person is trapped under something real heavy we can use this system in conjunction with wood cribbing to lift off and extricate the victim," said Deputy Chief Randy Dunham of the Pampa Fire Department.

The Hurst Tool Co. air bag system is comprised of three heavy rubber bladders which when inflated with air can lift from 9 to 26 tons. The City of Pampa recently purchased the system for $3,300.

"We've wanted this for several years," Dunham said. "And we finally got it." He explained that the system is used to stabilize and lift heavy objects, like lifting a wrecked vehicle from an accident victim or stabilizing a vehicle that had been involved in a collision and could overturn causing further injury or damage.

"We can use them to steady like in a vehicle accident, which will make it much safer for everyone," the deputy chief explained.

"We can use this for many different applications, like a building collapse," said Capt. Rusty Horton. He explained that the bladders can be turned vertically and inflated horizontally to strengthen unstable walls.

"We can stack these and lift even more weight," Dunham added. "It's amazing how high these can lift."

Another benefit of the system is that they can be inflated from the air contained in a firefighters' standard air tank.

"We can use the Scott air bottles to power this," Dunham said. "One air pack can fill up three-

Lack of funding has PISD board looking at cuts

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Faced with declining student population, less state money, and unable to assess higher taxes, Pampa Independent School District (PISD) officials decided Thursday night to meet the problem head-on.

Instead of waiting for a crisis to arise, the school administration and Board of Education agreed to begin making changes as soon as possible to avoid a funding/ services crisis.

"We're choosing to manage the problem before it comes to a crisis stage," Dr. Dawson Orr, school superintendent, said.

"We all realize a crisis is approaching us," commented Lee Porter, school board president. He expressed his appreciation to Orr and his staff for taking a pro-active attitude in addressing the issue.

Orr told board members that student population has declined from 4,248 students in 1990-1991 to 3,528 so far this year — a 17 percent drop in 10 years.

To date the school district receives $1.8 million less from the state than it has in the past due to the lower student population, he said. (See PISD, Page 3)

Mesa, CRMWA await water rights ruling from judge

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Law is being made in the century old courthouse here. Although 31st District Judge Steven R. Emmert said during a hearing Thursday that he wasn't here to legislate, his rulings in a lawsuit brought by Roberts County landowners against the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority could impact Texas water and property laws for years to come.

A coalition of landowners here, led by Roberts County rancher and Dallas businessman T. Boone Pickens and operating as Mesa Water Inc., filed suit against CRMWA over the water authority's Conjunctive Use Groundwater Supply Project claiming that water CRMWA was planning on pumping from the underground aquifer in Roberts County would drain water from beneath their lands which border CRMWA's well field.

The landowners sued under the Texas Private Real Property Rights Act, saying that they are entitled to be compensated for the water that CRMWA extracts from beneath the landowners' properties.

Jobless rate stable

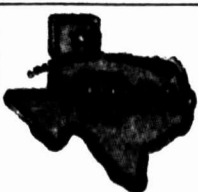

Pampa's September jobless rate of 3.3 percent climbed only slightly over the August figure of 3.2 percent, according to Texas Workforce Commission numbers. Countywide, the numbers were 3.4 percent and 3.3 percent respectively.

In all, 292 people in Gray County who wanted work were out of a job while that figure stood at 284 in August.

The largest area unemployment rate was 5 percent in Borger, according to the report. Amarillo's jobless rate was 2.9 percent.

Statewide, the seasonally adjusted rate remained unchanged at 5 percent in September.

The highest jobless rate was in the McAllen-Edinburg-Mission area with 12.4 percent and the lowest was Bryan-College Station with 1.7 percent.

Texas round up ...

Anthrax scares inundate law enforcement
ODESSA, Texas (AP) — White powder has become the brunt of concern and panic for many Texans as reports of anthrax exposure continued to mount elsewhere in the country.

In Odessa, people inside a moving car on Thursday threw a powdery substance on four boys standing on the street before driving away.

Emergency crews stripped the boys of their clothes and washed them with soap and water in a mobile shower in the street. They were transported to a local hospital to be tested for exposure to anthrax.

"This has to be stopped," said assistant Fire Chief Dale Childers. "It is a huge waste of resources. But we do need to check these things out. It could be something other than anthrax."

In an East Texas school, Friday classes were canceled after the facility was evacuated on Thursday when cafeteria workers unpacking a shipment of boxes discovered a suspicious powder.

In Texas City, the Moore Memorial Public Library was evacuated Tuesday when workers discovered a white powdery substance that turned out to be a common cleaner.

shackling the Mexican girl, whose name officials have declined to release.

The sentencing phase in the trial of Bearden, 27, was scheduled to begin Friday. She faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Bearden remains in Webb County Jail in lieu of $600,000 bond.

A gag order restricted attorneys and witnesses from speaking about the case.

Bearden, a Mexican citizen, was charged with six counts of injury to a child, one count of child abandonment and one count of aggravated kidnapping.

Images entered as evidence show the girl emaciated in a dirty red cotton dress leaning against a tire, with a steel chain wrapped around her waist, arms locked behind her with a padlock. Her bare feet were held together with a similar length of chain with two padlocks.

Cameron County bridge crossings down 16 percent after attacks

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Traffic at three Cameron County border crossings has dropped 16 percent since last month's terrorist attacks, causing revenues to plummet, according to county bridge system officials.

Area officials blame the collapse of the Queen Isabella Causeway, a national economic slowdown, new mandatory laser visas and the attacks for the decrease.

"It wasn't just Sept. 11," County Judge Gilberto Hinojosa said. "The visas are also having an impact and even before this, there was less commercial traffic on the bridges and we were already experiencing an economic slowdown."

But Hinojosa believes the situation is improving. Heightened security created one- to two-hour waits at area bridges in the days following Sept. 11. Security at all U.S. ports of entry is still high, but Hinojosa estimates wait times have dropped to an average of 15 to 20 minutes.

"It's getting back to normal," he said in Friday's editions of The Brownsville Herald. "It's time to go back to Mexico."

Bridge to provide link for trade corridor

MALLEN, Texas (AP) — An international bridge will connect the South Texas border towns of Donna and Mercedes, alleviating long waits for commercial vehicles coming into the country, according to an agreement between city officials.

Donna Mayor Pro Tem Ric Morales said Thursday that the bridge will support economic development for a free trade corridor between the two cities and San Antonio.

San Antonio Mayor Ed Garza will attend a workshop regarding the bridge Friday at Weslaco to provide expertise, Morales said.

The bridge will be built near U.S. Highway 281 and Farm-to-Market Road 493, Morales told The Monitor in McAllen for Friday's editions. A bridge committee made up of Donna and Mercedes City Council members is expected to be formed early next week.

Anthrax once common in labs; tracing difficult, say experts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Finding the source of the anthrax-contaminated letters delivered in Washington, New York and Florida may be difficult, say experts, because growing the bacterium is relatively easy and the microbe was commonly studied in research labs before the 1990s.

Some researchers say they believe the strain used in the Florida attack is a close relative to a culture that was widely used by anthrax scientists.

Dr. Martin Hugh Jones, an anthrax researcher at Louisiana State University, said the Florida bacterium has been identified as "very like Ames," a strain that was selected by the military for weapons research.

Jones said Ames acquired its name when it was supplied to the military by a laboratory in Iowa in the 1980s, but he believes the same or closely related strain was used in research as early as the 1930s. It could still be in many different labs, he said.

"It would take a sophisticated lab and special skills to weaponize" the anthrax strain, said Steve Edward Korguth, director of the biological and chemical defense program at the University of Texas in Austin. "Weaponization is not a trivial thing."

Korguth said the skills to do the job, however, are not rare and that it could be done at any modern pharmaceutical or food technology lab.

Woman convicted in torture of girl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former "Seinfeld" cast member Julia Louis-Dreyfus is working on a sitcom of her own.

NBC announced Thursday that Louis-Dreyfus, who played Jerry Seinfeld's gal pal Elaine, will star in a midseason comedy tentatively titled "22 Minutes With Eleanor Riggs."

In the series, Louis-Dreyfus plays a Los Angeles club singer whose life is examined in what NBC called a "22-minute snapshot." Her circle includes a married older sister (Lauren Bowles), an ex-boyfriend (Steve Carell) and a current flame (Darren Boyd).

The network has ordered 12 episodes of the series, created by her husband, "Saturday Night Live" alumnus Brad Hall. He'll serve as executive producer along with Marcy Carney, Tom Werner and Caryn Mandabach of "Roseanne" and "Cybill" fame.

So far, attempts by "Seinfeld" co-stars to create their own TV magic have fallen short. "The Michael Richards Show" was canceled quickly last season, and Jason Alexander's new "Bob Patterson" on ABC hasn't fared well with critics or in the ratings.

personality and wife of former Secretary of Defense William Cohen.

"We want to laugh, we want to get cheered up, and just feel real good about the homeland defense and the armed forces. We're just armed with our patriotism and our talent and our support," Langhart Cohen said.

Former "Saturday Night Live" writer Al Franken will join the tour, as will some New England Patriots cheerleaders and Lt. Lorenzo Throver, a Virginia firefighter from Fairfax County's search and rescue team who responded to the Pentagon attack.

The celebrities are scheduled to leave this weekend. The military bases they're visiting were not disclosed for security reasons.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Disneyland is bringing Tim Burton's "The Nightmare Before Christmas" to life, sequel style.

The theme park on Thursday introduced an updated haunted mansion inspired by the movie about a pumpkin king who tries to bring Halloween scariness to Christmas.

The attraction, "Haunted Mansion Holiday," is the centerpiece of Disneyland's holiday season celebration, said spokeswoman Michele Nachum. Creative director Steve Davison said the mansion picks up where Burton's movie left off.

Visitors are taken on a tour of the house by Jack Skellington, the movie's lead, who apparently decorated the house to suit his Halloween-ish style.

As a result, the attraction includes very un-Disneyland moments: Christmas trees with pumpkin decorations, bizarre toys and sight gags.

The attraction also includes two animatronic figures who talk and engage visitors.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Natalie Cole married minister Kenneth Dupree in a private ceremony where the guest list included Dionne Warwick, actress Jennifer O'Neill and David Foster, who produced Cole's Grammy-winning "Unforgettable."

"The ceremony was very low-key and simple, very spiritual and sacred," wedding coordinator Jayne Bubis said Wednesday. "It was just like Natalie — elegant."

The ceremony took place on Oct. 12 at Dupree's Victory Baptist Church. Cole, 51, wore a lavender and gray beaded gown. It's her third marriage and Dupree's second.

Hundreds of elk being destroyed to stop disease spread

DENVER (AP) — At least 1,500 commercial elk are being destroyed in Colorado and other states to stop a fatal disease that threatens to spread to wild deer and elk.

The outbreak of chronic wasting disease was traced late last month primarily to the Elk Echo Ranch in Stoneham.

State Agriculture Department spokeswoman Linh Truong said 1,500 elk in Colorado were marked for destruction, beginning with 148 on Thursday, and the number could grow.

At least 245 elk that were shipped to 15 other states from Colorado ranches have been quarantined, and some or all of those will be destroyed, too.

Recognized in 1967, chronic wasting disease causes animals to grow thin and die. It comes from the same family as mad cow disease but is not known to be transmissible to humans.

Wildlife officials, environmentalists and hunters are worried the disease could spread to deer and elk in the wild and damage the multibillion-dollar hunting and game-watching industries.

"I cannot even imagine what it would do to the hunting industry if this disease gets out into the deer population," said Bob Meulengracht, field director for the Mule Deer Foundation, an organization of hunters.

PAMPA — Today, sunny. Highs around 74. Variable winds 5 to 15 mph.

Tonight, mostly clear. Lows near 45. South winds 5 to 15 mph.

Saturday, mostly sunny. Highs around 80. South to southwest winds 10 to 20 mph.

STATEWIDE — A weak cold front stalled early Friday across the Permian Basin on its slow southeastward trek toward North Texas. Patchy light fog developed near Houston.

A broad band of mid- and high level clouds extended eastward across far West Texas, the Trans Pecos and Marfa Plateau into the southern Permian Basin. A few narrow bands of high clouds covered the Concho Valley and Edwards Plateau.

Early-morning temperatures ranged from the 30s and 40s in the west and north to 60s elsewhere.

Extremes were 35 degrees at Dalhart and 62 degrees at both El Paso and Guadalupe Pass. Winds were mainly westward and northward at 5 to 10 mph over the Panhandle, South Plains and northern Permian Basin. Speeds were more variable ahead of the front in the Concho Valley, Edwards Plateau and far West Texas.

A slight cooling trend was expected through Saturday with the front's passage.

Daytime highs should range from the lower 70s in the north to the upper 80s to around 90 along the Rio Grande.

Lows overnight were expected near 40 in the Panhandle.

COUNTY

Ogallala Aquifer.

The retired engineer thinks there are more efficient and effective technologies to handle the hog waste which wouldn't be as likely to damage the environment than lagoons, and said these methods would be much less expensive for the producers in the long run.

Roth has requested meetings with John Carter, General Manager of NPD, but he has not met with him yet on Carter's trips to the Pampa area.

Also suggested to be in the resolution is that all lagoons shall have eight or more monitor wells of 50-foot depth on all sides of the lagoons. It is recommended monitor wells are to be locked, except when tested by an outside independent laboratory for pollution each month and that cost of said testing to be paid by the owner of the operation.

Greene said both North Carolina and Kansas now have this requirement for swine facilities.

The resolution also requests that any existing hog waste lagoons in Gray County be replaced with new non-lagoon technology by Jan. 1, 2003.

Another issue the resolution addresses is financial requirements in the event the hog farm closes. The state of Kansas estimates it is paying $42,000 an acre in clean-up of abandoned hog waste lagoons, according to published reports.

The resolution asks for financial assurance requirements such as insurance, letters of credit or sinking funds of 10 percent of the total cost of the entire facility (including barns) for possible remediation of pollution from the total operation. It requests a closure plan to require 100 percent of cost of closure insured.

It calls for automatic penalties of up to $10,000 per day to be assessed for lagoon or treatment loss of containment, crop field runoff or discharge into groundwater, with a second occurrence resulting in revocation of permits.

Roth, who was not aware of the proposed resolution until contacted by The Pampa News, has been researching the issue for several months following NPD's announcement they were going to build near Pampa.

One of the methods Roth said would be better is the method to dry the hog waste before disposal. Roth expressed environmental concern about the present method of spraying effluent over farmland.

County Commissioners Court members indicated they want the current Texas regulations strengthened.

"If five, 10 or 20 counties can get together, maybe we can do something about it," said Precinct 4 Commissioner James Hefley.

County Judge Richard Peet said, "The county commission needs some way to impose a protection upon the county from health concerns and pollution. "We have no way of doing that at this time," he said.

Peet said counties have been given authorization to zone properties and can now regulate salvage yards. He added that a septic system for a residence outside corporate city limits in the county requires a permit from the TNRCC.

"I think we need to get a resolution and get them (the other counties) involved," said Hefley.

Greene asked all county commission members to give input on the measure and recommended the commission seek the assistance of County Attorney Todd Alvey in preparing the resolution.

The resolution will be on the next county commission agenda. That meeting is Nov. 1 at 9 a.m. in the former SPS building at 315 Ballard.

State Representative Warren Chisum of Pampa said environmental concerns are very high on his list of priorities. He said the TNRCC has expertise in dealing with the engineering type issues and will take the resolution into consideration.

"We're concerned about environmental issues," said Chisum. He is chairman of the house committee on environmental regulations.

PISD

He predicted that the local district will continue to receive less state funding as the state struggles with funding issues of its own, particularly the teacher health insurance plan.

At $149.01, PISD is only nine-tenths of a cent away from the state-set tax ceiling of $1.50 per $100 valuation, he said, adding that assessing that .9 cent would only generate approximately $60,000 more per year.

Orr recommended the following solutions:
• Short-term measures to contain and reduce costs;

• Long-term efforts to develop cooperative plans with other school districts; and
• Long-term efforts to seek legislative support.

"Cost containment and reduction scares people," Orr conceded. "We're embarking on a journey where we know where we need to be, but we don't know the path we're taking."

He also recommended that the school board set guidelines for the process of addressing these issues.

Board members agreed to meet in a work session on Nov. 8 to identify the data needed to start making the necessary decisions. At the regular meeting, Nov. 29, the board will hear staff suggestions on areas to consider for cost reductions. A formal report with specific recommendations for cost containment will be presented at the December meeting.

Orr's plan includes the principals and school district staff through information sessions. He said he will brief school principals each Friday morning after a school board meeting. The following Monday he will hold a similar briefing for all staff, he said. He encouraged at least one board member to attend these meetings.

In the quarterly financial report, Business Manager Mark McVay reported that at the end of the 2000-2001 fiscal year, the school district came in approximately $475,000 under budget. These funds will be placed in the school district's reserves increasing the reserve account to approximately $1.5 million.

McVay said that state revenues are down by $1.3 million compared with this time last year. He explained that an 11 percent increase in state property values has caused Pampa ISD to now be considered as a "poor" school district.

Because of this, the state funds are sent to the school district at a different time of the year.

"I didn't expect this," McVay said. "We'll get the same amount, but it will come at different times," he explained. "It will affect our cash flow and investment earnings."

McVay said he has analyzed the cash flow, and "we should still have enough to make it. Our lowest point will be in November and December, but we still have about $1.5 million to draw on."

Orr announced the resignation of Facilities Management Supervisor Denver Bruner to accept a position with a hazardous waste removal firm.

"With the support of Mark (McVay) and others, I'm temporarily acting as facilities management supervisor," he said, adding that he will be at the facilities management office in the mornings from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. Assistant Superintendent Jane Steele will cover his administrative duties at Carver Center during that time, he said.

In other action Thursday, the board approved bids for athletic equipment and Pampa Middle School band instruments as recommended.

Dustin Johnson and Justin Lemons, state officers with the FCCLA (Family Career and Community Leaders of America), were honored by the board during the Academic Spotlight.

Johnson related his first experience at a national FCCLA meeting. "It was one of my most memorable moments," he said, explaining that he had been encouraged to join the organization by Lemons, his cousin.

"I saw all that he had talked about and more," he said, adding that his FCCLA experiences have been a "life-changing" experience.

"It's made me more responsible as a person."

"It's mind-boggling to look back three years and see how I've changed — and not just maturity," said Lemons, the first male president of the state organization. "I'm starting to realize more and more that if you're going to get anything out of life, you have to be willing to go out and take chances."

"The proof is going after this office," he added. "It's a female dominated organization. Women have a lot of power!"

"It's been my high school experience. It's what I'll reflect back on with my children. It's what's made me who I am."

Lemons thanked the board, the school staff and the community for supporting Johnson and himself in their endeavors.

"That's what drives us," he said. Orr and the board recognized FCCLA sponsors Gaylene Skaggs and Katie McDonald for all that they had done to support Johnson and Lemons.

"We're very proud of you," he told the young men. "We do this to spotlight students, but I think you've turned the tables on us and honored us."

"I leave you with this challenge — that you live your life so that 20 to 25 years from now, you'll be the ones we honor in the PHS Hall of Fame."

WATER

While admitting that the pumping would impact the landowners underground water, CRMWA said that under the rule of capture, the basis for Texas water law, the landowners had no cause to sue.

Under the rule of capture, a common law doctrine, a landowner can pump as much water as he wishes so long as he does it for a beneficial use and it is not done with malicious intent to deprive neighboring landowners of their water.

Since water locked in underground aquifers does not recognize legally-drawn property boundaries, pumping on one plot of land will draw down the water table on adjoining pieces of property.

At issue is whether the Texas Private Real Property Rights Act applies to CRMWA and whether the statute of limitations laid out in the act has run out.

Mesa contends that the property act does apply to CRMWA.

CRMWA, says Michael Powell, who represents Mesa, is a political sub-division of the state and a governmental entity. As such, it is subject to liability for a taking of property from individuals, in this case the water beneath their land.

Judge Emmert questioned whether such an interpretation of the property act would not place a heightened liability against governmental entities since Powell admitted that the act does not apply to individuals.

If such was the case, said Doug Caroom, who represents CRMWA, it would place an onerous burden on every municipality in the state that relied upon groundwater.

Caroom argued that the property act was written with the regulatory actions of governmental agencies in mind, such as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service prohibiting the use of a piece of property because of the presence of an endangered species on that land.

CRMWA's lawyer said that CRMWA bought the land, just as a private citizen might, and is planning on pumping water from beneath the land, just as a private citizen could. Their standing as a governmental agency should not affect their ability to pump the water.

CRMWA also said that even if the act applies to this situation, the statute of limitations has run out and that Mesa should not be able to press its case.

The act states that any action must be taken within 180 days of when a person determines that he is going to be harmed.

The landowners argued that they would not be harmed until CRMWA begins pumping and therefore the clock on the statute of limitations has not yet begun to run.

CRMWA argued that the landowners knew when the project began in the mid-1990s that some of the water from beneath their lands would be removed and that the 180 day limitation has long since passed.

The opposing sides appear to agree on the facts of the case. The problem that Judge Emmert faces is ruling on the legal interpretation and how they affect the facts of the case.

fourths of a bag. Plus it's easy to store. It doesn't take up much room."

A valve on the bag is designed so that if it should become disconnected from the air source, the air will be released very slowly, fire officials said.

Dunham said the air bag system will be stored on Engine 1-A, the same fire truck that contains the Jaws of Life extrication tool.

"All this fits in one little compartment on the truck," said Horton with pride, indicating the three air bags, the hose, and a bright yellow carrying case for related equipment.

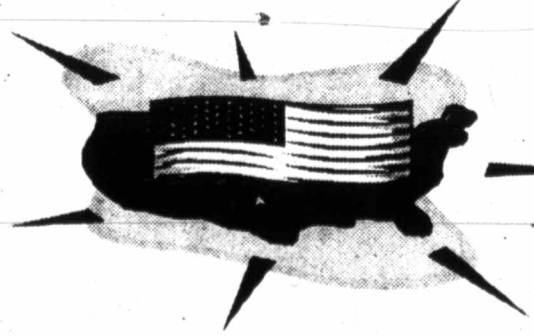

Sweeteners pulled from NW air flights

EAGAN, Minn. (AP) — Northwest Airlines has pulled artificial sweeteners and powdered coffee creamer from all flights amid concerns about white powder found on two flights.

The carrier removed packets of the powdery substances Wednesday to prevent delays and ease fears amid the anthrax threat, Northwest spokesman Kurt Ebenhoch said Friday.

On Monday, passengers were detained on a jet in Detroit for more than an hour after a white powdery substance was found.

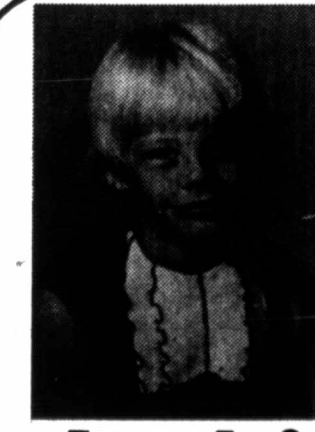

Also Monday, a substance was found on top of baggage that was being removed from a jet in Burlington, Vt. Tests are pending.

TV reporter fired after anthrax joke in front of co-workers

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A television news reporter was fired after he jokingly sprinkled face powder around the newsroom in front of co-workers, his lawyer said.

Steve Oswald, 48, who worked at KCCI-TV for 15 years, sprinkled the powder Monday, attorney George LaMarca said.

The prank was clearly done in a joking manner in front of managers who knew there was no threat, LaMarca said.

"I don't know how any reasonable person could believe that Steve had anthrax," LaMarca said.

News director Dave Busiek said Oswald was no longer an employee as of Friday. He declined further comment.

Employees said Oswald, who has received honors for investigative news reporting from the Radio and Television News Directors Association, was escorted from the station Wednesday. They said station managers told them not to discuss the matter.

LaMarca declined to comment about possible legal action.

WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW CAN HELP YOU

Robert Schuller tells this story of sitting on an airplane next to a man with his nose in a book. Finally, the man looked over at Schuller and asked him what he did. Schuller said he wrote books. The man quickly responded that he wrote books, too ... on mathematics.

Schuller said he wrote books on possibility-thinking but admitted that they probably had nothing in common, for "in mathematics" it doesn't matter whether you are a possibility thinker or impossibility thinker. Two plus two equals four regardless of whether you are a negative or a positive person.

"Well, I'm not so sure about that," his seat partner countered. "Let me tell you about myself. My name is George Danzig, and I am in the physics department at Stanford University. I've just returned from Vienna as the American delegate appointed by the president to the International Mathematics Convention."

"I was a senior at Stanford during the Depression; our class knew when we graduated we'd all be going into unemployment lines. There was a slim chance that the top man in class might get a teaching job, but that was about it. I wasn't at the head of my class, but I hoped that if I were able to score a perfect paper on the final exam, I might be given a job opportunity."

He paused, remembering. "I studied so hard for that exam that I ended up getting to class late. When I arrived, the others were already hard at work. I was embarrassed and just picked up my paper and slunk to my desk. I sat down and worked the eight problems on the test and started in on the two on the chalkboard. Try as I might, I couldn't solve either of them. I was devastated; out of ten problems, I had missed two for sure. I took a chance and asked the professor if I might have a couple of days to work on them. He agreed. I spent hours and finally solved one, but I couldn't get the other. So I turned in that paper; it was the blackest day of my life."

"The next morning there was a pounding on my door. It was my professor, very excited. 'George, George,' he kept shouting, 'you've made mathematics history!' 'I didn't know what he was talking about. He explained: I had come to class late and missed his opening remarks. He had encouraged the class not to give up during the test. Remember, he had told them, there are classic unsolvable problems, which no one can solve. So he listed two on the board. When I came in I didn't think them unsolvable and so I worked one of them. Yes, I got a job at Stanford and have been there for forty-three years.'

Mark 9:23 "Jesus said to him, If you can believe, all things are possible to him who believes."

Song sparks controversy

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The ballad "Danny Boy" has long been played at funerals, wakes and memorial services, its mournful strains conjuring up images of Ireland's green pastures and wind-swept hills.

New York Fire Chief Peter Ganci, killed in the World Trade Center attack, actor Carroll O'Connor and John F. Kennedy Jr. all were laid to rest with the plaintive melody.

So when the Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence banned "Danny Boy" and other secular songs from funeral Masses, it raised the ire of Irish-Americans.

"I want 'Danny Boy' sung at my funeral Mass and, if it isn't, I'm going to get up and walk out," retired Pawtucket police officer Charlie McKenna wrote in April to The Providence Visitor.

The weekly diocesan newspaper got dozens of letters, some from as far away as California, urging Bishop Robert E. Mulvee to reverse his decision — at least when it came to "Danny Boy." So far, he hasn't.

"The controversy took on a life of its own," said the Rev. Bernard A. Healey, theological consultant to the Visitor. "I don't blame people, but really it's a lack of understanding of what a funeral Mass is supposed to be."

"It's about their connection with Jesus Christ and the church, not their connection with the Emerald Isle."

Other bishops have left the question of funeral music up to parish priests.

The Archdiocese of New York, which has buried scores of police officers and firefighters since Sept. 11, often playing "Danny Boy" at the service, usually discourages the use of secular music during Mass.

"All music played at church services should be liturgically appropriate music," said Joe Zwilling, a spokesman for the archdiocese. "But we don't have a policy about any one song, or a list of songs that can't be used."

Besides lacking the appropriate piety, the song itself can counter what funeral services are supposed to accomplish, Healey said.

"Part of what I do at a funeral Mass is try to lift people's spirits," he said. "But the song is emotionally manipulative. Everything I've spent the last hour working toward is gone within two minutes because everyone is reduced to tears."

"Danny Boy" tells the tale of an Irish lad called to military duty by the sound of distant bagpipes, and a loved one who promises to wait for him.

The tune has long been cherished by police officers and firefighters, who identify with its message, McKenna said.

"Danny's answering a call, and it's uncertain whether he's going to return or not," he said. "If you think about it, a policeman and a fireman, they do the same thing. What happened in New York is a perfect example."

Also, fire and police departments have historically been dominated by Irishmen, another reason why "Danny Boy" is often blown on the bagpipes during ceremonies for fallen officers.

The song has been played at many funerals connected to the World Trade Center attacks, he said.

"The Irish community was hit particularly hard by the tragedy," Deignan said.

Back in Providence, Mulvee's decision may be unpopular, but he's on solid ground from the church's perspective. Church documents plainly advise that popular ballads be excluded from Mass, said David Early, a spokesman for the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops.

"These kinds of songs should clearly be avoided," Early said. "But it's not a matter of church doctrine. It's a pastoral decision left to the interpretation of the local bishop."

"If you allow 'Danny Boy,' then you open all kinds of other questions about what should and shouldn't be allowed," said Healey, who personally has rejected requests to have Frank Sinatra's "My Way," John Denver's "Annie's Song," and Bette Midler's "Wind Beneath My Wings," played at funerals.

The diocese formed a committee to look at the infiltration of secular music, Healey said, and the group intends to send a letter by the end of the year to parishes detailing what is acceptable during Mass.

One alternative has been to play the song for other parts of the funeral rites, such as at the wake or during a procession. Some church music directors are using a version of the song with lyrics from the hymn "In Paradisum" with the music from "Danny Boy."

But even Healey admits that priests can only be so insistent with a family mourning the death of their beloved.

"I'm not going to fight with the family over 'Danny Boy,'" he said. "And with the tragedy the scope of what happened in New York, I can't fault any priest who's allowed it to be played in their church."

Briefly

San Jacinto Baptist Church in Amarillo will present Mark Schultz in concert, along with special guests Eric O'Donnell and Ben Glover, at 7 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 15 at the church located at 801 Tascosa Road in Amarillo. Tickets are $10 in advance or $12 at the door. For more information, call (806) 353-1668. Schultz, a former Nashville youth minister, is the winner of seven Dove Award nominations and has headlined on two separate tours.

Redeeming Grace Mission, 422 N. West, will sponsor a "Singspiration" at 1 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 26 at the church. Performers will include the Cabales sisters — Becky Mullin, Esther Osborn and Liz Sculthorp. The event is free and open to the public.

First Free Will Baptist Church, 731 Sloan, will be conducting a free clothing outreach from 10 a.m.-12 noon, Saturday, Oct. 20 at the back entrance of the church. Clothing will be distributed on a first-come-first-serve basis.

"Spiritual Renewal" services are set for 7 p.m., Oct. 19-20 and for 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 21 at First Church of the Nazarene, 500 N. West, Pampa. The revival will be led by the Rev. Robert and Ramona Williams, former pastor of the church currently of Andrews. Luncheon will be served following the Sunday morning service. Visitors are welcome. For more information, call 669-3144.

Wally Chavez, youth minister at Trinity Fellowship Church of Plainview, stops for a moment on a 500-mile trek from Tulsa, Okla., back to Plainview. Chavez's hike brought him through Gray County last Friday. The youth minister braved high winds, rain, hail, a tornado, temperature extremes, painful muscles and blisters to raise funds for a youth center in Plainview and to raise awareness of the importance of God in the lives of young people. He was expected to arrive in Plainview late this week.

American ground troops move into Afghanistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A handful of U.S. special forces are operating in southern Afghanistan, a government official said Friday, opening a significant new phase in America's military response to terrorist attacks.

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld had said Thursday that airstrikes alone will not be enough to rid Afghanistan of the al-Qaida terrorist network. Ground forces will be needed to root out Osama bin Laden and other terrorists and the Taliban that shelter them, the secretary said, though he made no explicit reference to U.S. ground forces.

A senior government official said Friday that a small number of U.S. forces were supporting efforts by the intelligence community to undermine the Taliban regime.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said military action in Afghanistan could increase significantly in coming days though there will never be a conventional force the size of that used in the Persian Gulf War.

Postal carrier contracts anthrax; FBI tries to trace origin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are trying to track anthrax-laden letters back to their point of origin as a New Jersey postal carrier who may have handled the envelopes tested positive for the disease.

Authorities offered $1 million for information leading to the arrest of those who sent the anthrax.

The female letter carrier who may have handled the envelopes sent to NBC News anchorman Tom Brokaw in New York City and Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle in Washington worked out of the West Trenton, N.J., local post office facility. She and a CBS News employee who opens Dan Rather's mail in New York brought to six the number of people infected with the disease since Oct. 4, including a Florida man who died.

The Washington Post reported in Friday's editions that FBI agents were tracing the mail route of the female letter carrier, who had contracted cutaneous, or the skin form, of anthrax, suggesting the anthrax-laced letters may have come from her route.

firm that American special forces were now on the ground in southern Afghanistan.

The handful of U.S. special-forces troops were supporting intelligence work in the south, working to undermine the Taliban regime, the U.S. government official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In neighboring Pakistan, the Taliban Embassy's spokesman said Afghanistan's Islamic leaders had no information American ground troops had arrived — but challenged them to come on.

"Fifteen or 20 troops will be able to do nothing," embassy spokesman Sohail Shaheen said in Islamabad, the Pakistan capital.

"If they want to send in soldiers they should send in 100,000," Shaheen said. "Then it can be a fight between our soldiers and theirs. Now it is just a war against civilians."

On the 13th day of the campaign, U.S. pilots returned overnight for new strikes at Kabul.

Other attacks hit Kandahar, the Taliban's southern headquarters, and the eastern city of Jalalabad, one of several provinces where bin Laden's al-Qaida organization has outposts.

Jiang cautions Bush about bombing precision in Afghanistan

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — President Bush and Chinese President Jiang Zemin declared themselves partners in the war on terrorism Friday, although Jiang cautioned that the U.S. air war in Afghanistan must be aimed at clearly defined targets to "avoid innocent casualties."

"President Jiang and the government stand side by side with the American people as we fight this evil force," Bush said after his first face-to-face meeting with his Chinese counterpart.

Bush came here at a time when the sometimes volatile Sino-American relations are on the upswing, but both leaders alluded in a joint news conference to lingering differences.

"The war on terrorism must never be an excuse to persecute minorities," Bush said, an apparent reference to China's treatment of the restive Uighur population in China's northwest Xinjiang region.

Bush said he also stressed the need "to combat the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and missile technology." On Sept. 1, the State Department imposed sanctions on a Chinese arms producer for allegedly selling missile technology to Pakistan in violation of a U.S.-Chinese agreement.

Thousands protest outside U.S. and British Embassies in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Thousands of demonstrators rallied outside the heavily guarded U.S. and British embassies on Friday to protest U.S.-led attacks in Afghanistan.

Police estimated that between 5,000 to 6,000 marched through downtown Jakarta.

The peaceful protest, organized by a small Muslim political party, was the biggest in a series of anti-

U.S. protests in Indonesia, the world's most populous Muslim nation, in recent weeks.

Hundreds of riot police stood guard behind rows of razor wire. Protesters held up banners that read: "The real terrorists are America and its allies" and "Stop the war."

The protest took place as Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri was to arrive in the Chinese city of Shanghai for a summit of Asian Pacific leaders, where she is expected to meet President Bush. The two met for the first time at the White House a few days after the Sept. 11 attacks. At that time, she pledged her support for Bush's war on terrorism. However, she has been under increasing pressure to condemn the bombings in Afghanistan, which critics say have killed Muslim civilians.

TG institutes library program

AUSTIN — Texas Guaranteed (TG) is partnering with the Texas State Library and the Texas Library Association to make higher education resources more accessible for millions of Texans. TG has updated the materials and resources for the second year of its "Know Before You Go: Unlocking the Door to Your Future™" campaign, available at more than 300 public libraries across the state.

"In working to promote the value of education for over 20 years, we have found that students and their families often lack the information they need to make informed decisions about their higher education pursuits," said Milt Wright, TG President and CEO. "Know Before You Go provides direction and access to information to make the entire college experience an easier and more understandable process from beginning to end."

A key campaign component is the resource notebook that helps librarians assist college-bound Texans and their families find information on the following topics:

—Career planning and college admission - when to prepare for college, standardized tests, how to find the right school, and when to apply for admission;

—Student financial aid - sources and types of financial aid, when and how to apply for financial aid, and the role of the financial aid office; and —Money management and budgeting - how to create a budget, credit education, responsible borrowing, and student loan delinquency and default assistance.

UW funds utilized at day care center

This article is one in a series of articles of profiles on the agencies and organizations supported by Pampa United Way. This information is being provided by Pampa United Way as part of its 2001 "The Way America Cares, Community by Community!" fund-raising campaign.

Community Day Care Center, Inc., is a United Way Agency. The funds received from Pampa United Way are administered to assist single-parent or low-income families. With United Way assistance, these families are able to choose quality care for affordable child care fees.

The center has joined other educational enrichment programs. It provides Early Head Start (0-3 years) at 1100 Gwendolyn and offers the new Three-Year-Old Head Start program at 916 W. Kentucky.

The center continues to serve children and families of all socio-economic levels in Gray County. It was established as a licensed facility in 1979. Its goals remain the same: Affordable, quality child care in a learning environment.

West Texas A&M to host haunted house, Halloween carnival and bassoon concert

RHA Creates Haunted House for Halloween

CANYON — West Texas A&M University's Terrill Hall will be transformed into something spooky when Residence Hall Association (RHA) students unveil their annual Haunted House from 9 p.m. to midnight on Friday, Oct. 26.

Students from the University's eight residence halls will decorate the units of Terrill Hall to create a haunted house for the public. In the past, students have made life size mazes out of mattresses, recreated "psycho-moments" in unit bathrooms and provided the usual ghosts and ghouls that any haunted house offers.

"The residents can be really creative when coming up with ideas. They can take an empty room and make something really spooky out of it," Mital Patel, committee chair for the haunted house project, said.

The event is open to the public, and it is recommended that children under 10 be accompanied by an adult. The cost is $2 per person or $1 with a canned food item. Proceeds will help send RHA delegates to a leadership conference in Austin. The canned food items will go to the High Plains Food Bank.

For more information, contact the Residence Hall Association at (806) 651-3004.

WTAMU Faculty Member to Present a Bassoon Concert

CANYON — West Texas A&M University will present a faculty bassoon concert at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 28 in the Mary Moody Northen Recital Hall.

Tina Carpenter, WTAMU associate professor of music, will perform a full program of music including a Trio Sonata for two recorders and continuo by Joseph Bodin Boismortier. She will be joined during the concert by University faculty David Palmer, piano and harpsichord, Sally Turk, flute, and Sandor Ostlund, viola da gamba and double bass.

The concert is free and open to the public. For more information, call (806) 651-2840.

WTAMU Students Plan Halloween Carnival

CANYON — WTAMU students are ready to transform the Virgil Henson Activities Center into a spooky Halloween carnival for the public from 6-8 p.m. on Oct. 31.

The Student Activities Council, Multicultural Center and Commuter Services will sponsor game booths with prizes and treats. Games will include twister, a ping-pong toss and a bean bag toss. The organizations will have candy on hand for game prizes. Other student organizations are encouraged to participate by bringing their own fun activity for the children. Students have the option of dressing up for the festivities but have been asked to keep it simple so they do not scare the younger children.

"This is for the community and since we are expecting children as young as 2-year-olds, we don't want them to be afraid of the students," Prairie McChristian, director of the Multicultural Center, said.

The event is open to the public. For more information, call (806) 651-2313.

Chinese Acrobats to appear in Berger

The Chinese Golden Dragon Acrobats will be presented by the Tri-City Community Concert Association at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 27, in the Berger High School Auditorium in Berger. This performance is the first of four to be presented during the 2001-02 season. Admission is by season membership or by individual tickets which can be purchased at a cost of $15 for adults and $5 for students.

For more than 27 centuries Chinese acrobats have been thrilling audiences, making it the longest running folk art in history. In China, acrobats are revered in much the same way prima ballerinas and opera singers are in the West. The 20 performers in this touring group represent the best of this honored tradition, mixing award-winning acrobatics, traditional dance, spectacular costumes and ancient and contemporary theatrical techniques to present a show of breathtaking skill and beauty.

The Tri-City Community Concert Association has been presenting live, professional entertainment to citizens of the area for over 50 years. Other attractions this season include the Manhattan Rhythm Kings, a trio which combines close harmony singing, instrumental work and tap dancing; Ronald Romm, trumpeter; and James Lent, award-winning piano virtuoso.

The concert by the Manhattan Rhythm Kings will be presented in Pampa jointly by the Pampa and Tri-City Concert Associations.

Season memberships or individual concert tickets for the Chinese Acrobats can be obtained by contacting Marie Poulain at (806) 273-3574. Tickets will also be available at the door the night of the performance.

Buy at Home Support America Now

The attack on America is not just a strike at people and buildings, it is an attack on our economic way of life.

Our enemies want to steal our optimism. They want us to approach the future with fear, uncertainty and hesitation.

If we do, they win.

Americans have responded quickly with generous support for rescue and relief efforts.

We also must invest in our freedom by investing in our local economy. A strong economy could be our strongest defense against the forces of terror and destruction.

We must show the world our confidence in our own economy is high. We must bolster that confidence with strong, bold economic actions. Instead of cutting back, we should push forward boldly with investments in our community.

Buy at home, support America now.

Buying something now is a way to stand up for our country. There are many ways to make your investment, but we all must act now to keep our economy strong.

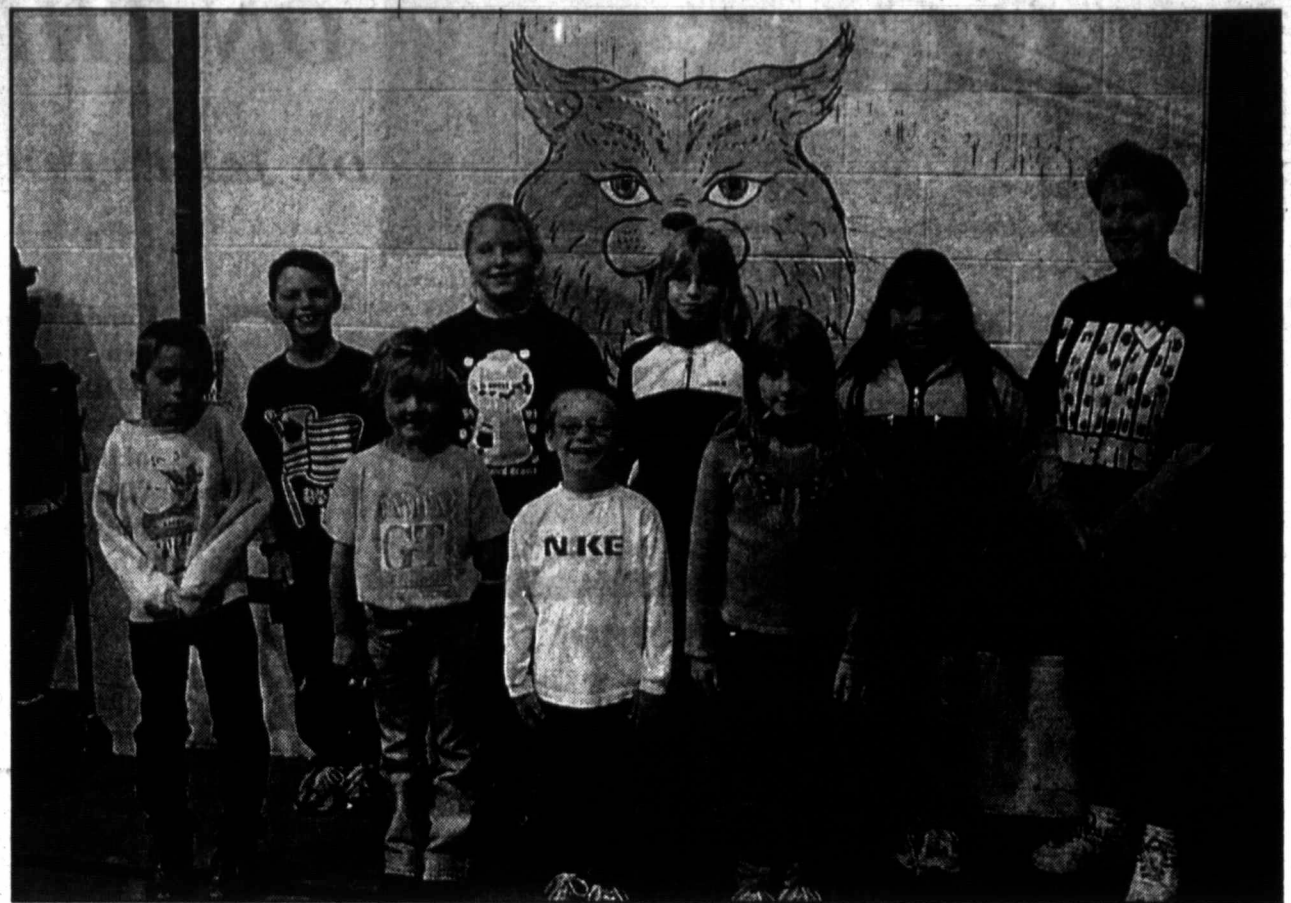

This message is supported by Panhandle area cities and chambers of commerce.

Let's Talk Real Estate

Realtor

DOWN TO BASICS
The typical first-time home buyer saves for about 2 1/2 years for the down payment on a home. If that seems beyond your reach, bear in mind that the typical first-time home buyer now puts down 10% or less, thanks to many low-down-payment programs available from banks, mortgage lenders and developers. The advantage of a low down payment is obvious. Many financial experts, however, advise coming up with the full 20% down payment whenever possible for several reasons. For one, the lender will not require you to pay for mortgage insurance. You might also get a better interest rate. And with more equity in your home, the greater the likelihood you will come out ahead financially should you need to sell quickly.

This column is presented by CENTURY 21 - PAMPA REALTY INC. in an effort to interest and enlighten you about how you can benefit from real estate investments. For more information, contact us any time of the day at 669-0007. As members of a multi-list service, our real estate representatives can look at any property in this area, ensuring that our customers are presented with the maximum available home choices. Located at 312 N. Gray Street in Pampa, we are here to guide smart consumers through their dealings.

"Thy Word Is Truth"
John 17:17

Q I understand that I can't diagnose my own son for attention deficit disorder (ADD), but it would be helpful if you would list the kinds of behavior to look for in a child or adult who may have ADD. You've described the condition in general terms, but what are the specific characteristics of someone who has this disorder?

A Edward M. Hallowell and John J. Ratey, authors of an excellent text titled "Driven to Distraction," list 20 symptoms that are often evident in a person with ADD or ADHD (attention deficit hyperactive disorder). They are:

1. A sense of underachievement, of not meeting one's goals (regardless of how much one has accomplished).
2. Difficulty getting organized.
3. Chronic procrastination or trouble getting started.
4. Many projects going simultaneously; trouble with follow-through.
5. Tendency to say what comes to mind without necessarily considering the timing or appropriateness of the remark.
6. An ongoing search for high stimulation.
7. A tendency to be easily bored.
8. Easy distractibility, trouble focusing attention, tendency to tune out or drift away in the middle of a page or a conversation, often coupled with an ability to focus at times.
9. Often creative, intuitive, highly intelligent.
10. Trouble going through established channels, following proper procedure.
11. Impatient; low tolerance for frustration.
12. Impulsive, either verbally or in action, as in impulsive spending of money, changing plans, enacting new schemes or career plans, and the like.
13. Tendency to worry needlessly endlessly, tendency to scan the horizon looking for something to worry about alternating with inattention to or disregard for actual dangers.
14. Sense of impending doom, insecurity, alternating with high risk-taking.
15. Depression, especially when disengaged from a project.
16. Restlessness.
17. Tendency toward addictive behavior.
18. Chronic problems with self-esteem.
19. Inaccurate self-observation.
20. Family history of ADD or manic-depressive illness, or depression, or substance abuse, or other disorders of impulse control or mood.

Q You've said that schools need to have enough structure and discipline to require certain behavior from children whether or not they have a natural interest in the subject being taught. Then you must favor a very structured, teacher-led program, were student behavior is rather tightly controlled. Why?

A One of the purposes of education is to prepare a young person for later life. To survive as an adult in this society, one needs to know how to work, how to get there on time, how to get along with others, how to stay with a task until completed and, yes, how to submit to authority.

In short, it takes a good measure of self-discipline and control to cope with the demands of modern living. Maybe one of the greatest gifts a loving teacher can contribute to an immature child, therefore, is to help her learn to sit when she feels like running, to raise her hand when she feels like talking, to be polite to her neighbor, to stand in line without smacking the kid in front, and to do English when she feels like doing soccer.

I would also like to see our schools readopt reasonable dress codes, eliminating suggestive clothing, T-shirts with profanity or those promoting heavy metal bands, etc. Guidelines concerning good grooming and cleanliness should also be enforced.

I know! I know! These notions are so alien to us now that we can hardly imagine such a thing. But the benefits would be apparent immediately. Admittedly, hair styles and matters of momentary fashion are of no particular significance, but adherence to a standard is an important element of discipline. The military has understood that for 5,000 years!

If one examines the secret behind a championship football team, a magnificent orchestra or a successful business, the principal ingredient is invariably discipline. Preparation for this disciplinary lifestyle should begin in childhood. That's why I think it's a mistake to require nothing of children -- to place no demands on their behavior, to allow them to giggle, fight, talk and play in the classroom. We all need to adhere to reasonable rules and school is a good one.

CAR CARE

CART's team makes Indy driver feel secure

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

Hardly a day goes by when Rick Mears doesn't think about CART's safety team and say a prayer of thanks.

The four-time Indianapolis 500 champion doesn't walk so much as shuffle, the result of his feet being crushed in a terrifying crash in 1982 in St. Pie, Quebec. Quick work by the safety team saved his feet.

Alex Zanardi's legs couldn't be saved when he was injured last month in Germany, but he swears rescuers gave him something far more precious.

"I owe the safety team my life," he told close friend and fellow driver Max Papis.

Things weren't as critical for Mears, but the outlook for his career was bleak.

"The doctors in Canada wanted to amputate my feet," he said. "Dr. Olvey wouldn't let them."

Dr. Steve Olvey, director of medical affairs for CART, told Mears not to sign the release.

"That simply wasn't going to happen," Olvey said.

He talked with Mears' team owner, Roger Penske, who sent his private jet to fetch Terry Trammell, an orthopedic surgeon. Trammell, now a regular at the CART races, saved Mears' feet.

They had to be rebuilt and they no longer have as much padding as normal feet. Still, Mears, now a team adviser for Penske, came back to walk and race again — and win.

There have been many success stories for the safety team since then, with perhaps the biggest challenge coming last month at the inaugural CART race in Germany.

Zanardi lost both legs above the knee after a crash with Alex Tagliani. It could have been worse had the safety team not reached Zanardi's mangled car in less than a minute.

Working quietly and efficiently, the men — all licensed doctors, paramedics, emergency medical technicians or firefighters — somehow stemmed the heavy flow of blood from what was left of Zanardi's legs. They got him out of the car and into a helicopter, put him on intravenous fluids and had him on his way to a Berlin trauma center in minutes.

"Medical literature tells us that injuries like those suffered by Alex are 100 percent fatal," Olvey said. "Usually, the injured person bleeds out, and Alex did lose about 70 percent of his blood."

"But most people are injured in car crashes or in places where help isn't less than one minute away."

Zanardi is recuperating and insists he will walk again with the aid of prosthetic legs.

The safety team, which works out of a first-rate mobile hospital staffed by a team of doctors and nurses, was the brainchild of former driver and now-retired CART chief steward Wally Dallenbach.

Olvey, an internist, trauma specialist and a founding member of the team, was a race fan who worked as a volunteer each May with the late Dr. Tom Hanna at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway infield hospital — the early prototype for driver care.

"Wally saw some things happen at other tracks that weren't up to the standards of care at Indianapolis," Olvey said. "The care was inconsistent. Several of us talked about it, and we decided to look for some doctors who would be willing to travel to the races for expenses."

From that modest beginning in 1975 has emerged a group of more than 40 professionals from around the country, all of them specialists, supervisors, captains or lieutenants in their regular jobs.

Dave Hollander, a firefighter with 28 years of experience from Clark, N.J., has been with the Simple Green Safety Team longer than anyone but Olvey. When Hollander drove Safety 2 — one of the four trucks used at most events — during last Sunday's Honda Grand Prix in Monterey, Calif., it was his 310th consecutive race.

"This is the only safety team in the world where everyone is 100 percent certified in their specialty — doctors, nurses, firefighters, paramedics and EMTs," Hollander said.

Only Olvey, safety team director Lon Bromley, Hollander and Mike Carey, who drives Safety 3, go to every race. Other members of the now-salaried team are on a rotating schedule of 12-14 races a year.

"The travel is hard on families and jobs," Hollander said. "But there is so much dedication and caring that families feel like they're part of the team, too."

Hollander was part of the team that saved Zanardi.

"There was no panic, no commotion," he said, remembering the tense moments after the crash. "Don't forget, we had two accident scenes. Tagliani's car was going about 200 when he hit Zanardi and he wound up a quarter of a mile away from Zanardi's car, and we didn't know how badly he was hurt."

"We had people working at both places. Hardly anybody talked. Everybody knew exactly what to do. They performed flawlessly."

Tagliani also was removed, stabilized and sent to Berlin by helicopter. He had no serious injuries, and was released the next day.

Burton didn't reach expectations

By HANK KURZ Jr.
AP Sports Writer

For many Winston Cup drivers and teams, the season Jeff Burton has put together would be a high-water mark.

He won the Coca-Cola 600, is 10th in the Winston Cup championship race and has earned more than $3 million.

For Burton, though, frustrating only begins to describe it. This was the year when a series championship seemed reachable.

"We have several problems," Burton said. "The cars don't handle the way they need to, they don't make the horsepower they need to make, we don't have the downforce we need, we haven't got the right springs on them and the drivers aren't driving them the way they need to."

Burton isn't complaining. But he's wondering what has happened to a team that in the last four seasons has finished fourth and fifth twice before a career-best third last year in the points.

He's effusive in his praise of the dedication of his team and all members of the Roush Racing family, which has endured a season of consistently disappointing results. Burton is the only one of four Roush drivers in the top 10 heading into Sunday's EA Sports 500 in Talladega, Ala.

"When no one is running well, there's a tendency to think, 'Gosh, we're really doing something wrong,'" he said. "Will we ever be able to get to the place where we need to be? There's less optimism."

Teammate Mark Martin, like Burton a perennial championship contender, is an uncharacteristic 11th in points and could wind up winless for only the second time in the last 13 seasons.

Burton and Martin have grown weary of trying to pinpoint the trouble.

"I can't tell you what the fix is going to be because if we knew what the fix was, we certainly would have already fixed it," Martin said.

Roush thinks many things have contributed to the declining results, not the least of which is an increased attention to safety that came about after Dale Earnhardt was killed in the season-opening Daytona 500.

"It's caused some of the drivers who had felt a measure of comfort or invincibility in what they're doing to really consider how dangerous their work was and it gave them pause," Roush said.

The increased focus on safety translated into a dilution of effort on making the cars better, Roush said, calling 2001 "a year of pause, a year of introspection, of stepping back and thinking about what was going on and looking at what we're doing, the way we're doing it and questioning many things that under a normal scenario would not have been questioned."

Plus, he and Burton said, many teams would gladly change places.

Meanwhile, Burton is gratified by the way his team has responded.

"Our morale hasn't changed, as silly as that sounds," he said. "Through struggling, we've learned a lot about ourselves as a team, and what we've learned has been good."

"I'm tickled to death with the attitude, the morale, the continued commitment to our program. It's unreal."

Because of the struggles, though, Burton's name has been bandied about frequently in the rumor mill. Two popular scenarios have him going to Richard Childress Racing or replacing the fired Jeremy Mayfield in one of Roger Penske's cars.

Burton laughs, though he admits there have been calls.

"You know, when you get a call from certain people in the sport, you return that call out of respect," he said. "Any conversation I've ever had with any car owner that has called me, I've always told him, 'First things first. I'm not available. I appreciate your interest in me. It's an honor that you called me. I appreciate it, but I love where I work.'"

Now, though, he wants to again be considered a top contender for the Winston Cup championship and back up his expectations on the track.

"You strive to be considered one of the best teams in the sport," he said, smiling. "That's what you've worked your whole life for. And when you get that, if you don't want it, you're in the wrong deal."

Even in adversity, Burton can see that. Last week, in Martinsville, Va., Burton was running practice laps when his car hit an oil spill and then the wall, causing him to go to his backup Ford.

Starting 41st, he worked his way steadily forward, finishing fifth in a car he hadn't run one lap in before the green flag flew.

"That's a microcosm of what our team is all about, and what our year has been like," he said.

Wife's Outbursts of Temper Escalate to Physical Assault

DEAR ABBY: My wife, "Delia," is normally a very caring person, but she has a volatile temper. When she loses it, she shouts, curses, slams doors, etc. Even as a child, Delia had a reputation for being a hothead. But she's no longer a little girl. We're both over 50. Recently her temper has escalated to hitting in addition to verbal outbursts.

While I was driving during our vacation, I made the mistake of laughing at something Delia considered serious. In full view of our children in the backseat, she hauled off and hit me across the face. This was no love tap; my jaw was stiff the entire next day. Even more troubling, now that the vacation is over and she has cooled down, she sees no need to apologize. She claims I deserved it.

I have my faults, but violent behavior is not one of them. I've suggested anger management to Delia — she even went for a few sessions — but now this. How can we help her to change?

NEVER BEEN HIT BEFORE IN TINSELTOWN

DEAR NEVER BEEN HIT BEFORE: Violence, whether verbal or physical, cannot be tolerated. Your wife's out-of-control anger must be harnessed before she inflicts serious injury on someone.

Everyone feels angry at some point. It can be triggered by many things, including feeling fearful and helpless. Many people have never learned to express that anger in acceptable ways.

Suppressing her anger until it erupts is one cause of the violent outbursts. Venting is like releasing steam from a pressure cooker. Explain to Delia that the challenge is not to deny her anger, but to understand what is making her angry and to express it in ways that will be more effective and constructive. Rather than flaring up, a few well-chosen words that make the point are more likely to achieve the desired results.

There are more proven methods for coping with anger without lashing out or hurting those around us. I have incorporated some of them in my booklet, "The Anger in All of Us, and How to Deal With It." To order a copy of this booklet, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $5 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby — Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. (Postage is included in the price.)

DEAR ABBY: After reading a recent column of yours, I feel compelled to write. One of your letter-writers included "massage parlors" with vices such as lap dancing and strip clubs.

I realize there are some businesses that call themselves massage parlors and are no more than fronts for prostitution. However, therapeutic massage is a growing field that is doing well at getting past certain unsavory stereotypes. As a massage therapist, I implore you to remind your readers that therapeutic massage is a valid means of enhancing one's personal well-being. Massage can increase circulation, improve muscle tone, relieve pain, and improve a range of motion in stiff joints. Some large companies actually contract on-site massage therapists in an effort to reduce repetitive-motion or static-positioning injuries and also to improve employee morale.

JOY IN FORT COLLINS, COLO. DEAR JOY: You're absolutely right, and you'll get no argument from me. I enjoy massages myself from time to time. I consider them to be the ultimate luxury.

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips and daughter Jeanne Phillips.

SOFTBALL

PAMPA — There will be a Lady Harvester Softball Booster Club meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the Pampa High auditorium.

FOOTBALL

HEREFORD — Pampa played Hereford in 8th grade football action this week.

Hereford defeated Pampa 36-8 in the A team game.

Trevor Day threw a 14-yard pass to Jarret Kotara for Pampa's only touchdown. Brody Smith scored a conversion run.

Pampa's record is 1-4. Pampa defeated Hereford 6-0 in the B team game.

Outstanding team defense led to the Pampa B team's third win in a row.

Pampa's touchdown came on a 38-yard pass from Tyson Hickman to Nick Julian.

Pampa B's record is 3-2.

Pampa's next games are Oct. 23 at Harvester Stadium. Gametimes are 5 p.m. for the B team and 6:30 p.m. for the A team.

CANADIAN — Canadian can stay near the top of District 6-2A with a win over Wellington tonight. Gametime is 7:30 in Canadian.

The Wildcats are 2-1 in district play and 3-3 for the season. Wellington is 1-2 and 1-5.

Canadian had an easy time of it last week, rolling past Shamrock 73-8.

Jay English led the Wildcats' offense with six touchdowns on 11 carries. Others who scored TDs for Canadian were Riley Morris, Lance Gray, Steven Livingston, Bryan Carr and Chris Lay.

The Wildcats held a 53-0 lead at halftime.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Jacksonville Jaguars thought the bad times were behind them. The Buffalo Bills taught them that things can always get worse.

Rob Johnson guided the Bills into scoring position, and Jake Ariens made a 46-yard field goal with 1:03 left Thursday night to put Buffalo in the win column with a 13-10 victory over sinking Jacksonville.

"How mindboggling is it for me?" Jaguars coach Tom Coughlin said. "I don't know how to describe it. It's a low point for me personally, professionally and every other way."

Bills coach Gregg Williams felt quite the opposite. He earned his first victory as a head coach and got the game ball, in part because he gave Ariens a chance at the game-winner on fourth-and-inches, even though the kicker missed from 41 and 39 yards.

"Jake came back," Williams said. "We talked about it at halftime. I said, 'Jake, you're going to win this ballgame for us.'"

Three plays after Ariens' kick, Travares Tillman intercepted a pass that bounded off Stacey Mack's hands, and the Bills (1-4) found themselves on the winning side for the first time this year.

"Unbelievable," Johnson said. "It's been six weeks and we finally got a win. It was a team win. The first one is always the toughest."

Mark Brunell threw for 150 yards and was showered with boos by Jaguars fans, who watched Jacksonville (2-3) lose for the third straight time and take part in an inept display nobody could have expected from a team with so much supposed talent.

"The bad part about it is that games we should win, we're just giving them away," Jaguars receiver Jimmy Smith said.

They needn't worry about that for a while. After dropping "winnable" games to Cleveland, Seattle and Buffalo, Jacksonville's next two games are at Baltimore and Tennessee — a pair most people expect them to lose.

Dick Bivins Stadium hasn't been user-friendly to the Harvesters

PAMPA — Pampa plays Caprock this weekend, and head coach Dennis Cavalier doesn't see the Longhorns as a pushover team. Especially since the District 3-4A game will be played in Amarillo's Dick Bivins Stadium, which has a history of being win-resistant for the Harvesters during daylight hours.

"Playing Saturday afternoon in Dick Bivins has been bad for us. Caprock beat us the last two times we played them there, and of course, Palo Duro beat us in Dick Bivins on a Saturday afternoon." (Pampa lost to PD Caprock 10-7 on Sept. 29). So, I'm always concerned about Saturday afternoons in Dick Bivins," coach Cavalier said.

Caprock is 1-5 for the season and 0-3 in district play.

"Caprock was predominately a senior club last year, and they've had to do some re-tooling, if that's the right word," Cavalier said. "They're not quite as talented as they have been."

Turnovers have largely been the Longhorns' downfall, according to Cavalier.

"Caprock seems to do real well on execution and techniques. Their main nemesis has been turnovers early in the game," he noted.

Caprock is dependent on three players — tailback John White (172-pound senior), Skyler Farris (210-pound senior) and offensive guard Marty Eakin (167-pound senior) — to perform successfully to have a chance of winning.

"White broke a long touchdown run on us last year. Tape evaluation of him this year shows him doing the same good things," Cavalier said. "Farris is a fine player and Eakin has been a real catalyst for them. Eakin also starts at linebacker. Both are two-way players."

White is averaging 5 yards per carry and has scored 4 touchdowns for the Longhorns. After putting down stubborn Dumas 14-7 last week, the Harvesters are 2-1 in district and in a four-way tie for second place.

"It was a hard-fought game," Cavalier said. "Dumas played very hard and very well against us. Fortunately, we were able to score late in the game to seal the victory."

Senior tailback Ty Elledge and senior cornerback Ryan Nash were key players for the Harvesters. Elledge rushed for 164 yards and scored both Pampa TD's, including the game-winning 34-yard run in the fourth quarter. Nash had eight tackles against the Demons, including one for minus yardage. He had three assists and four pass breakups.

Elledge is the team's leading rusher, averaging 4.3 yards per carry with 3 rushing touchdowns.

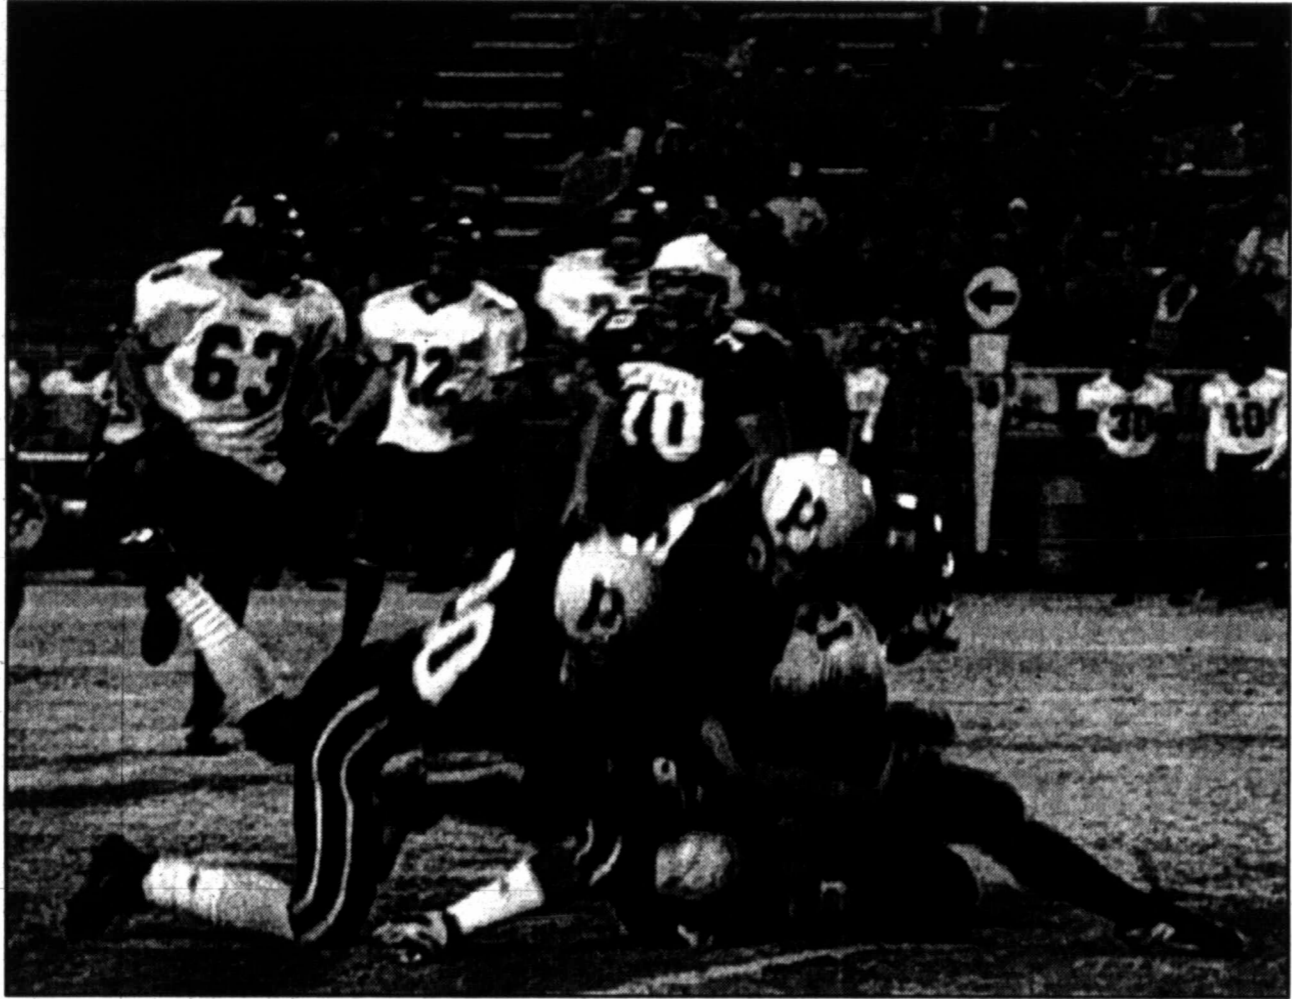

As a team, the Harvesters are averaging 256.8 yards per game. Their defense is allowing 181.3 yards per game.

Players of the week for last week in games against Dumas were: Cameron Seiger, freshman; Hunter Craig, junior varsity; Ryan Nash, varsity, defense; Chris McSparrin, varsity, special teams, and Justin Waggoner, varsity, offense.

Kickoff for the Pampa-Caprock contest is at 1 p.m.

Cavalier said three Harvesters have been suspended for two games because of a violation of team rules.

The suspended players will miss the Caprock and Canyon games.

Texas Tech comes first for No. 3 Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — After weeks of denial, the Nebraska Cornhuskers finally admit it: They've thought about Oklahoma.

Even with Saturday night's game against Texas Tech pending, a showdown with the No. 2 Sooners has been creeping into the No. 3 Huskers' thoughts.

"I'd be lying if I said you didn't hear it that much," tight end Tracey Wistrom said. "I think for everybody's sake, we just need to concentrate on this game and worry about that one when it gets here."

Texas Tech (3-2 overall, 1-2

Big 12) has never beaten the Huskers in six tries. Add the fact that Nebraska has won 55 of its last 56 games at home, and Husker fans call it a gimme. They are talking more about the defending national champion and No. 2 Sooners, not the Red Raiders.

The Huskers (7-0, 3-0) can't escape it.

"People in general will come up to you and bring up the Oklahoma game like it's the only one on the schedule," quarterback Eric Crouch said. "They're a great team, and we'll focus on them when it gets here."

In the meantime, there are the Red Raiders, who upset then No. 24 Kansas State 38-14 last week behind Kliff Kingsbury's 409 passing yards.

Tech's offense is even more pass-happy than the one coach Mike Leach installed at Oklahoma before taking over the Red Raiders last season.

But Nebraska defensive coordinator Craig Bohl, who has repeatedly denied looking ahead, said he wouldn't know.

"Not going to do it," Bohl said with a shake of his head. "I can look you straight in the eye and say I have not looked at one snap of Oklahoma."

Tech runs the ball about as often as Nebraska passes it — rarely. The Raiders lead the Big 12 in passing with an average of 315.2 yards per game, which is fifth nationally. Kingsbury has completed 160 of 236 passes for 1,561 yards.

The Husker defensive backs expect to be a little more tired than usual at the end of Saturday's game.

"It's going to be a game where we're going to have to be on our P's and Q's," cornerback Keyuo Craver said. "It keeps us on our toes and lets us be more aware and not to fall asleep."

Actually, the Nebraska defense is anxious for a shot at Kingsbury, who they expect to pass 40 to 50 times. The resurgent Blackshirts already have 25 sacks this season, tying the number of sacks they finished with all of last year.

"I think our quickness up front and our ability to get to the quarterback will pay off," end Chris Kelsay said. "Their quarterback is obviously a good thrower. We're going to have to get pressure on him or else he can pick our defense apart."

Nobody expects Tech, which lost to Nebraska 56-3 last year, to dismantle next weekend's No. 2 vs. No. 3 matchup. Then again, nobody expected the Raiders to beat Kansas State, either.

"I feel good about where our players are," Leach said. "We need to make the improvement we made this last week and raise the bar and now shoot higher and achieve that and go into Lincoln."

Nebraska's last home loss was in 1998 when Texas came in and won 20-16. Saturday is also Nebraska's homecoming games, which the Huskers haven't lost in 33 years. The 6 p.m. CDT will give fans a few extra hours to get rowdy.

Leach wasn't worried about the added factors.

"They are all hostile environments because this is kind of a hostile business," Leach said.

No place like home

PAMPA — Opponents are finding out the hard way that there's no place like home for the Pampa tennis team.

Earlier this week, the Harvesters closed out their home season with a convincing 19-2 victory over Randall.

With the win, the Pampa netters extended their homecourt winning streak to 28 in a row.

Pampa led 6-1 after doubles, and went on to win 11 of 12 singles matches. Pampa, now 13-0 in district, closes out the regular season in Berger on Saturday.

Players of the week are juniors Jay Gerber and Helen Brooks. Brooks plays mixed doubles and No. 5 singles. She is 24-2 in district play. Gerber plays No. 3 singles and No. 2 doubles. Gerber, who is 25-1 in district, won his 100th career match against Randall.

Yankees go up 2-0 vs. Mariners

SEATTLE (AP) — Everything has changed for the New York Yankees.

After six days and four cross-country flights, they've gone from the verge of first-round elimination to a streak leading to a possible fourth straight World Series trip.

Everything has changed for Seattle, too. Those 116 regular-season wins have become a tightening noose around their necks, no longer a mighty accomplishment, now merely a burden.

"We just have to keep doing whatever we're doing," Mariano Rivera said after completing Thursday's 3-2 win over the Mariners.

Slumping Scott Brosius sparked a three-run second inning, Mike Mussina slid by without his best stuff and Rivera got his 22nd straight postseason save.

Freddy Garcia, who got the Mariners' only two wins over New York in last year's ALCS, pitched on three days' rest for just the second time in his career. He allowed five of his first 10 batters to reach and couldn't escape a second-inning jam.

Seattle couldn't get out of a 3-0 hole and headed to New York faced with the formidable task of having to win two of three just to send the series back to Safeco Field. The series resumes Saturday at Yankee Stadium, where Orlando Hernandez (9-1 in the postseason) faces Seattle's Jamie Moyer.

"We're going to be back here to play Game 6," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said in a MacArthurlike postgame pronouncement. "I've got confidence in my baseball club. We've gone to New York and beaten this baseball team five of six times and we're going to do it again."

Seattle's players weren't sure a public declaration of defiance was necessary.

"That's good. That's great. He doesn't have to tell us that," Mark McLemore said.

Mussina, who saved New York's season with seven shutout innings that beat Oakland 1-0 in Game 3 of the first round, showed why the Yankees gave him $88.5 million for six years.

Other than a two-run homer to Stan Javier in the fourth — the only earned run off Mussina in his last 22 postseason innings — he gave up just three singles despite struggling without his best stuff.

"It speaks volumes — the ability not to lose your cool," Yankees manager Joe Torre said.

Seattle is in danger of matching the 1996 Chicago Cubs, who also won 116 games, then lost in the postseason 4-2 to the crosstown White Sox in the World Series.

Ramiro Mendoza escaped trouble in the seventh when McLemore hit an inning-ending grounder with two on. Derek Jeter again saved the Yankees in the eighth when he calmly stretched to get a low-and-wide throw by Tino Martinez for a forceout at second.

"He never loses his cool," Torre said. "Yeah, I did swallow a bit."

Rivera completed the six-hitter with five straight outs — striking out three. Piniella was angry that after Rivera was told to come in, he got three extra warmup pitches in the bullpen.

"This looks like this guy makes his own rules," Piniella said. "Nobody told me. I kept throwing," Rivera responded. "I don't know if there's different rules for myself. But if there is, it's good, I guess."

Brosius, 35, was 1-for-20 in the postseason before his second-inning double — which followed a single by Martinez and a walk by Jorge Posada — gave the Yankees a 2-0 lead.

"Whew! Finally! It's been a long time since I ran the bases," said Brosius, the 1998 World Series MVP.

His drive off a 96-mph fastball hit low in the left-field corner — on the concrete under the wall's padding — and skipped by Javier, allowing the slow-footed Posada to score from first.

Chuck Knoblauch, 5-for-8 in the series, scored Brosius with a sinking liner to center that fell just in front of Mike Cameron, who trapped the ball after barely missing on his try for a diving grab.

"I thought I caught it," Cameron said.

That was enough for the Yankees, who have won five straight after falling in a 0-2 hole against Oakland in the division series.

New York, seeking to become the first team to win four straight pennants since the Yankees of 1960-64, also got another backhand flip play, bringing back memories of Jeter's game-saving flip in Game 3 at Oakland.

After fouling off seven straight pitches, Dan Wilson put one into the right-center field gap in the second, sending Javier from first to third. Paul O'Neill, the 38-year-old right fielder whose two-run homer carried the Yankees to a 4-2 win Wednesday, ran down the ball and flipped it to center fielder Bernie Williams, whose quick throw prevented further advances.

Tiger League Broncos

The J.E. Carlson Broncos Optimist football team has a 5-0 record this season in the Tiger League. Players are Chisolm Burns, Tyler Caldwell, Kendrick Carey, Garrett Erickson, Michael Fisher, James Hathaway, Jessie Jimenez, Ramon Jimenez, Ryan Jimenez, Terrell Johnson, Terrin Johnson, Zach Murray, Bradley O'Loughlin, Braxton Reagan, Cannan Rhoades, Gabriel Rodriguez, Daniel Smith, Nathan Smith, Kendrick Tillman, Fabia Tinajero and Dytray Williams. Cheerleaders are Alexis Johnson, Candia Jimenez, Tyree Johnson, Kali Jimenez, Veronica Carey, Vanessa Carey, Kambra Jimenez and Stephanie Jimenez. Head coach is Alfredo Jimenez. Assistant coaches are Bob Erickson, Jo Murray, John Perez, Keith Stewart, Jimmy Johnson and Bryan Fisher. The Broncos play the Packers on Saturday, starting at 9 a.m. at the Pampa Middle School Field.

Dierker resigns as Astros' boss

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Dierker led the Houston Astros to four division titles in five years. What Dierker's teams did after the regular season caused his downfall.

The Astros never got past the first round under Dierker, who resigned as manager Thursday after the Astros were swept out of the playoffs by the Atlanta Braves last week.

"In our business, it's a fact of life that change is part of the game," general manager Gerry Hunsicker said. "Success doesn't necessarily equate with longevity of a manager. There are so many expectations. We all are looking to get to and win the World Series."

While praising Dierker, the Astros decided it was time for a new leader.

"What he's done puts him up there with the elite, and yet even the elite change jobs," Hunsicker said. "It's just part of what you have to do to keep an organization fresh and keep the manager from losing his mind and sanity."

Dierker became the second-winningest Astros manager behind Bill Virdon in five seasons, but Houston went 2-12 in the postseason under Dierker's leadership.

Dierker has one year left on his contract and will be offered a position in the team's front office. Hunsicker said he doesn't have a list of candidates to replace Dierker.

"I can't think of any other player or person who is as synonymous with the Houston Astros as Larry Dierker," Hunsicker said. "He's served this organization literally over decades in various capacities. He's always accepted the challenge, and his latest venture is no exception."

Dierker didn't like Astros fans' standing ovation for Barry Bonds when Bonds was chasing the home run record. He bristled when questioned about playoff moves.

After Game 1 of the playoff series against Atlanta, Dierker snapped at questions about bringing reliever Mike Jackson into the game in the eighth inning instead of usual setup man Octavio Dotel. The Braves hit Jackson hard and won 7-4.

"I was probably too outspoken," Dierker said Thursday. "I don't mean by verbally yelling, but in the sense that when you guys asked a question, I gave you the whole answer. I didn't leave anything unsaid. I probably should have. Sometimes you caught me when I was mad. But I don't regret it."

In Game 2, Dierker used Chris Truby, who spent most of the season in the minors, as a pinch-hitter instead of Jose Vizcaino, who had a game-winning hit for the New York Yankees in the 2000 World Series.

Dierker felt he didn't have the full support of the players.

"In the days I played, you only had a one-year contract and the manager had more power," Dierker said. "Today, he only has the power to influence. There may be somebody who can do that better than I did, and I hope we find him."

"I was not able to get the players to do some of the things I wanted them to do. Mostly, because they said, 'I don't think that's the right thing to do and I'm not going to do it.' They didn't say it to my face, but that's the way they acted."

Dierker's 448-362 record puts him second in franchise history for victories. Virdon managed the team to a 544-522 record in the late 1970s and early '80s.

Dierker started his Houston career as an 18-year-old pitcher with the Colt 45s.

In his major league debut, on Sept. 22, 1964, Dierker struck out Willie Mays and Jim Hart in his first inning.

He became Houston's first 20-game winner in 1969, a season in which he threw 20 complete games, and was an All-Star twice.

Dierker pitched a no-hitter July 9, 1976, against Montreal and still holds many of the club's pitching records.

He became the sixth manager in major league history to win a division title in his rookie season.

The next season, 1998, he was NL Manager of the Year as the Astros won a team-record 102 games.

In 1999, the team's last in the Astrodome, Houston won its third straight division title. Dierker had a seizure in the dugout during a game in June. He had surgery and returned to managing.

A rash of injuries and some pitchers' ineffectiveness at hitter-friendly Enron Field led to a fourth-place finish in 2000, but the Astros posted the biggest turnaround in franchise history this season.

"I'm extremely happy they gave me a chance to come back after that (2000) year," Dierker said. "I would have hated to go out 70-92, especially with the talent we had. I felt I did a poor job that year."

"It's not one person. I didn't win 102 games. I didn't lose 92 games. I didn't want to go out with that kind of record."

Oregon is starting to peak as tough part of schedule arrives

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT
AP Football Writer

Oregon's offense has been fine, thanks to quarterback Joey Harrington. Now the defense is picking up the pace, and the Ducks hope they are rounding into championship form.

Not that No. 5 Oregon (6-0) is the only Pacific-10 Conference team in pursuit of a national championship, which would be its first since USC won the title in 1972.

No. 4 UCLA (5-0) and No. 19 Washington State (6-0) are also in the title chase entering the weekend. Overall, there are still 11 teams without a loss as the second half of the season begins.

The Ducks, though, know their last three wins — Utah State, Arizona and California by a combined 149-56 — were not against top-grade competition.

That's about to change. Oregon brings its 23-game home winning streak into Saturday's game against Stanford (3-1) at Autzen Stadium. Then there's Washington State, Arizona State, UCLA and Oregon State.

"We've played well the last three weeks and come together," said Harrington, who has thrown for 1,408 yards and 13 touchdowns. "And it's time to see if we can take this into the heart of the Pac-10."

Oregon's defense had five turnovers in each of the last two games, wins over Arizona (63-28) and Cal (48-7). While the offense scores 38 points per game, the defense allows just 19.3.

The Cardinal lost to Washington State 45-39 last week.

In other Top 25 games, it's Baylor at No. 2 Oklahoma, Texas Tech at No. 3 Nebraska, California at No. 4 UCLA, No. 14 Colorado at No. 9 Texas, No. 11 Tennessee at Alabama, Duke at No. 12 Maryland, North Carolina at No. 13 Clemson, Arizona at No. 15 Washington, Vanderbilt at No. 16 South Carolina, Kentucky at No. 17 Georgia, Air Force at No. 18 BYU, Louisiana Tech at No. 20 Auburn, No. 21 Florida State at Virginia, Penn State at No. 22 Northwestern, North Carolina State at No. 23 Georgia Tech, and No. 25 Toledo at Ball State.

Montana State is at No. 19 Washington State on Thursday night, while Boise State is at No. 8 Fresno State on Friday night.

No. 1 Miami, No. 6 Virginia Tech, No. 7 Florida, No. 10 Michigan and No. 24 Purdue do not play this weekend.

On Monday, the Bowl Championship Series releases its first set of standings that eventually will determine which teams play for the national title in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 3. The AP media poll and the coaches poll, eight computer rankings, strength of schedule and won-loss records are used in compiling the BCS standings.

Among one of the more intriguing matchups has Colorado (5-1) at Texas (5-1) in a Big 12 Conference game. The surprising Buffaloes try to keep pace with Nebraska in the Big 12 North before the two meet on Nov. 23. A second league loss for the Longhorns all but knocks them out of the Big 12 title race.

Colorado's defense allows just 16 points per game, while Longhorns quarterback Chris Simms directs an offense averaging 38 points.

"This team has a great deal of chemistry right now," Colorado coach Gary Barnett said after last week's fifth straight win, 31-21 over Texas A&M.

When the Sooners play Baylor, Jason White steps in at quarterback for Nate Hybl, who was ineffective last week.

"He'll be the starter and then we'll take it from there," OU coach Bob Stoops said. "We have proven we can win with both of these quarterbacks and we feel we can be a good team with either of them playing."

Oklahoma has the nation's longest winning streak at 19 games.

Also, Penn State (0-4) is at No. 22 Northwestern as Nittany Lions coach Joe Paterno tries for a fifth time to equal Bear Bryant's major college record of 323 wins.

While there is great gloom and doom in Happy Valley, JoePa remains optimistic. The Lions were off last week.

"There's no question these kids have the ability," Paterno said. "It's confidence, and it's probably the whole football team right now. They just need to have some good things happen to them, and they'll go from there."

Stars take 3-1 victory over Coyotes

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Stars made the Phoenix Coyotes pay for a series of second-period penalties.

Pierre Turgeon scored two power-play goals in a span of just over a minute in the Stars' 3-1 victory over the Coyotes on Thursday night.

"It's very important to take advantage in that situation," Stars defenseman Derian Hatcher said. "Then you make teams think twice before they do something stupid or haul you down. They took the penalties."

Turgeon, signed as a free agent over the summer to give the Stars' offense a boost, didn't have a goal in his first six games in a Dallas uniform before breaking out against the Coyotes.

"It's good to get the first one out of the way, but it's not like it hadn't happened to me before," Turgeon said. "I had been getting good chances, so you know it's only a matter of time before they're going to start going in."

Phoenix took a 1-0 lead early in the second period on Paul Mara's goal, but penalties to the Coyotes' Todd Simpson and Teppo Numminen gave the Stars a two-man advantage.

Turgeon tied it at 7:25 of the second when his centering pass got past Sean Burke. Turgeon capitalized with a man-advantage 1:07 later, giving Dallas a 2-1 lead.

The Stars hadn't won in nine days. In a span of three games, they lost twice, once in overtime, and had a 2-2 tie at St. Louis on Wednesday night. Dallas was playing its second game during a stretch of three games in four nights.

"Bottom line, you're going to get games like this that aren't pretty," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said.

Shaun Van Allen added an empty-net goal for Dallas with 19.2 seconds left.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult ARIES (March 21-April 19)  Try as you might, you cannot shirk certain responsibilities. Be good-natured. Ultimately, you will see that others respond and pitch in. An older relative or boss does need your help. Tonight: Think in terms of tomorrow. This week: All the recent convoluted problems start clearing out. Hurray! Monday and Tuesday give you much to consider. Take action from Wednesday on. TAURUS (April 20-May 20)  A day trip simply might be too enticing to say no to. And why would you want to? Others clamor around you, even when you don't know anyone. Develop your people skills through more observation. Tonight: Simply enjoy the moment. This week: Listen to news carefully. There is much going on. Finally, you get a grasp on work and relationships. GEMINI (May 21-June 20)  Strange as it might seem, someone "claims" you. Instead of resisting, go along with the program. You might be surprised at what a good time you have just hanging out with this person. Tonight: Continue the togetherness theme. This week: You gain clarity as your ruler goes direct. Get ready for more clarity. You could dance all week long! CANCER (June 21-July 22)  Others seek you out. You really have to do nothing. Think in terms of success and a change of pace. If possible, curb your moodiness. You could feel like a pendulum from your mood swings. Just remember to go with the flow. Tonight: Don't make it an early night! This week: You start looking at the hows and whys. You'll get the answers in the next few weeks. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)  Make it OK to pull yourself out of the social whirl and do something other than socialize. You relax by using your hands and concentrating. Don't hesitate to take a nap or two. Tonight: Think of the most relaxing activity you can do. This week: Invest time in your personal finances. You'll learn a lot. As a result, you don't have immediate answers for you make excellent choices for yourself and a partner. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)  Dance away and let go. Perhaps it takes you longer than many others to allow your playful side to emerge. A child or loved one responds and simply wants to join in. Allow yourself to be silly and childlike. Remember that you have one life to live! Tonight: Be a wild thing! This week: Your ruler goes direct on Monday. Though a slight amount of uproar surrounds you, you finally start sweeping clean your life, work and finances. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)  Nest at home. Make this a lazy day. Understand the role of being laid-back more. Sometimes, you feel like you have to do everything. A "no" could be refreshing - especially for you. Order in. Call friends. Visit with loved ones. Tonight: Remember, you don't have to do anything. This week: Mercury goes direct in your sign on Monday. Suddenly, the fog lifts. You handle personal and professional funds well. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)  Browse through a favorite mart or go to an art show or movie. Get away from daily life by doing something enjoyable, perhaps with an element of escape. Visit with a new friend. Get to know this person better. Tonight: Out and about. This week: The sun moves into your sign on Tuesday. You feel better and better. You become a formidable opponent to anyone silly enough to take you on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)  Dig into your resources and make the most of the moment and an opportunity. Others do not need to agree; your decisions affect your wallet, not theirs. Carefully listen to another's bright ideas. There is logic there. Tonight: Enjoy yourself with your pals. This week: Much starts happening that you don't have immediate answers for. Begin heavy research. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)  You can express ideas and feelings. You also easily command another's attention. Use your influences positively, not to block out another's point of view. Invite a parent out for a late lunch and movie. Tonight: Enjoy yourself more than you intended. This week: Work issues might heat up at the beginning of the week, but what the planets know is that you're about to handle the problems. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)  Use your ability to detach when speaking to a child or difficult friend. Only logic might work, and there are no guarantees. Flip through a travel catalog and start thinking about vacation. Tonight: Do your own thing. This week: You smile, as you know positive changes will greet you this week. Read another's smoke signals. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)  Listen to a friend's side of the story. A loved one gives you more insight into what is happening. Give up a tendency to be emotionally resistant. Your sense of humor loosens up a difficult situation. Realize another's limitations. Tonight: With your pals. This week: Family and associates start acting as you would like them to. Detach, and play amateur psychologist. Learn to understand others better. BORN TODAY Actress Carrie Fisher (1956), inventor Alfred Nobel (1833), musician Dizzy Gillespie (1917)

Consumer prices rise in September

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices edged up in September pushed higher by the biggest jump in gasoline prices in 15 months, the government reported Friday.

The Consumer Price Index, a closely watched inflation gauge, rose by 0.4 percent last month, the largest increase since May, the Labor Department said. The advance came after a tiny, 0.1 percent increase in August.

The "core" rate of inflation rose in September for the third month in a row by 0.2 percent, suggesting that most other prices are well-controlled.

To stabilize the tottering economy, the Federal Reserve has cut interest rates nine times this year, with two of those reductions coming after the Sept. 11 attacks. One of the reasons the Fed has been able to act so aggressively is because inflation has not been a problem.

Given the tame inflation environment, the more than 50 million Social Security recipients will get a smaller, 2.6 percent cost-of-living increase in their monthly checks next year, the government said Friday. That will mean an extra $22 a month for the average retiree. Last year, they got a 3.5 percent boost, a nine-year high.

While economists are hopeful that prices will remain stable in the aftermath of the attacks, some worry about price spikes, especially for energy products. Others are concerned that the Fed's credit easing to support the economy could sow the seeds of inflation down the road.

During the first nine months of this year, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 2.8 percent, compared with an increase of 3.4 percent for all of 2000.

One of the reasons inflation is more subdued this year is because energy prices have been easing after spiking last year.

After posting double-digit increases in both 1999 and 2000, energy prices for the first nine months of this year increased at an annual rate of just 0.4 percent.

In September, energy prices rose by 2.6 percent after falling by 1.9 percent in August. Energy prices rose immediately after the terror attacks but then began falling quickly.

Virtually all of the increase in energy prices last month reflected a jump in gasoline prices, which rose by 8.6 percent, the largest advance since June 2000. More recently, gasoline prices have fallen as Americans have trimmed travel and crude oil prices have eased in the face of a global economic slowdown.

Prices for natural gas and electricity, however, fell in September by 5.5 percent and 0.6 percent, respectively.

Food prices rose for the second month in a row by 0.2 percent in September, reflecting higher prices for vegetables, fruits and pork.

Those higher prices blunted lower prices for other items.

Housing costs fell by 0.2 percent in September, the first decline since February 1986 and the biggest drop since December 1982.

Airlines fares fell by 0.7 percent in September and new car prices were flat.

United Way Check-in Luncheon

At its most recent check-in luncheon, Pampa United Way reported a total of $132,183.53 — 35 percent of its total campaign goal. The next check-in will begin at 11:45 a.m., Tuesday, Oct. 23 in the large meeting room of Pampa Community Building. As always, pledge cards will be due.

The following is a comparison of last year's and this year's receipts: Commercial, $1,530

(2001)/$3,929 (2000); Individual, $14,173/$14,779; Major Firms, $36,702/$298,620; Oil and Gas, $2,110/$13,020; Professional, $22,114/$35,750; Public, $3,535/$7,611; Special Gifts, $25,252/$33,285; and other $47/$4,096.

The next meeting will be sponsored by: Boy Scouts, Gray County Child Protective Services and Girl Scouts. Pledge cards are accepted at any time at the local UW office.

RACING

There is no glamour for the safety teams, who most often spend a long day at the track waiting for something to happen. When it does, and there is no injury to deal with, they simply clear the track of debris.

And rank has no privileges on asphalt.

"The doctors fit into the safety team like brother firefighters," Hollander said. "They're out there with shovels and brooms picking up debris with the rest of us."

In some ways, Hollander said, the adjustment to working within the confines of the safety team on an active race-track is hardest for the doctors, who are used to emergencies in a hospital environment.

"It takes about four or five years for any of the new guys to really get totally comfortable and completely fit into what we call the street scene," Hollander said. "The environment is different. In a hospital or at the scene of a road accident, you rarely get to know the victim. Here, you get to know them as friends."

"We know how much they depend on us and we don't want to let them down."

It hurts the safety team that it can't save every driver every time. In the last three seasons, drivers Gonzalo Rodriguez and Greg Moore were killed in crashes.

As tough a job as the safety team faces, there's no shortage of applicants for the few spots that open up each year. Bromley says he gets between 900 and 1,200 resumes a year.

Todd Coulton, a flight paramedic with firefighter certification from Naples, Fla., has been part of the team since 1996, a year after being sent to work at a Florida track during a test session with Jimmy Vasser.

"I didn't know anything about racing and it didn't interest me at all," Coulton said. "It was intriguing, though. I saw the speed of the cars and the situations these guys put themselves in and I got interested."

"I sent a resume to Lon and forgot about it, but he called me to check it out and make sure I wasn't making it up. The only guy I knew when I got here — and not very well — was Jimmy Vasser. But since I've been doing this, I'm hooked on it."

Bromley says everyone on the team is just as motivated and caring as Olvey, Hollander and Coulton.

"We're able to take the cream of the crop," Bromley said. "They've got to be the best because it's an awesome responsibility."
