Gray probation success statistics over state average Revocation rate about 12 percent

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

A look at 2001 Gray County Probation Office (GCPO) reports indicate more offenders successfully complete probation than officials realized.

District Attorney Rick Roach said in a recent interview that he estimated approximately one-third of the persons receiving probation in this area fail to complete the requirements.

Jeff McClendon, chief probation officer for Gray County, said that 2001 records show that more than three-quarters of the people his office supervises finish probation.

And he agrees with Roach that probation plays an important role in the justice system.

"The community needs to understand if we did not have probation and we locked everyone up that had committed a crime, the state would be out an enormous amount of money," McClendon said.

"There's a need to lock someone up and there's a need to give someone who's made a mistake a chance," he added.

Last year, the three county probation officers supervised an average of 252 probationers — 110 felony offenders and 142 misdemeanor offenders.

Of those, an average of 14 felony offenders and 45 misdemeanor offenders had their probation revoked.

"I calculate that at about a 12 percent revocation rate," McClendon said, adding that 88 percent of the probationers finish the requirements.

A total of 486 offenders were supervised over the course of the year, McClendon said. Some went off probation, some moved, and some continue to be supervised, he explained.

Polls open until 7 tonight

The lines at polls concerning the PEDC election were appreciably longer than those across the foyer of M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium where residents voted on changes to the Texas Constitution. Abandoned animals in need of new homes

Penny Harrow is trying to find a home for a few stray dogs she's adopted — and for some cats, horses, donkeys, llamas, goats, pigs and rabbits.

The Harrows are moving and need to find homes for the animals.

The animals she has adopted, rescued and nursed back to health reside at Bruce and Penny Harrow's place in the country southwest of Pampa.

Harrow's Ranch of Dreams, as it is known, is a sanctuary for abandoned pets.

"Penny's the animal lover," said John Goes, a Pampa police officer who is a volunteer with the animal sanctuary.

The Harrows are moving, however, and need to find homes for the animals.

"She's found homes for a bunch of them," Goes said. There's Nacho, Barney, Abigail, Buster and a dozen more dogs, all pushing their way toward visitors eager for a little attention and a pat on the head.

There's Gretchen, a young, black Great Dane.

"She's the world's largest lap puppy," Goes said.

And there is Lassie, a small black and white dog that has just given birth to a litter of puppies. Another dog that had one puppy rejected it, so Penny slipped the rejected puppy into Lassie's litter. Lassie took the new puppy as one of her own.

"Lassie's a good mother," Goes said.

There's Ranger, a Great Pyrenees, one of five at the ranch, that was rescued from the dog pound in Canadian.

PEDC vote has official watchful eye

An official with the Texas Secretary of State's office was in Pampa today to observe voting on a referendum on the city's economic development corporation.

The signatures of 1,260 Pampa residents were verified as to their request for the election today or whether to dissolve the Panhandle Economic Development Corporation. At least 15 requested that the Secretary of State send an observer.

Jean Lackey, a state election inspector, was at M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium today where the polls are set up for the PEDC election. Voting on the PEDC issue is at the northeast end of the foyer. Voting on the state constitutional proposals are at the southwest end of the foyer.

Lackey said today that she was in Pampa as the result of a request of local voters. She said

PROBATION

Using these total figures instead of the average, the success rate is still 77 percent, he said which compares favorably with the statewide average of 65 to 70 percent.

McClendon said probation involves much more than supervision of offenders for a set period of time.

"A lot of people may not realize that last year we collected $47,083.79 in restitution for victims. This is in Gray County only," he said.

Of the 388 offenders ordered to perform community service last year, 322 worked at total of 15,661 community service hours at local non-profit organizations. Ed Copeland serves as the community service coordinator.

"That's $30,651 in savings to the community," McClendon said. "If you paid someone minimum wage — $5.15 per hour — to do that work, that's how much it would have cost."

Probation also provides persons convicted of crimes the opportunity to improve their education or find treatment for drug and alcohol problems, he said.

"We've had 100 individuals participate in the Literacy and GED program," he explained. Linda Holt, a state-certified educator, teaches basic literacy, English as a Second Language for non-English speaking persons, and GED preparation classes through the GCPO.

Of the 100 participating in these education programs, 12 received a GED.

"That may not seem like much, but when you look at it, that's 12 people that bettered themselves," he said.

Probationers with drug and alcohol addictions are assisted through a 12-week program offered by the Amarillo Council on Alcohol & Drug Abuse.

"We also have an in-house counselor that we contract with through state grant money," McClendon said.

For more difficult addiction problems, the GCPO can turn to Managed Care Center of Lubbock, a 30-day residential treatment program; a 90-day program in Fort Worth paid for through a grant administered by Moore County authorities; or a state-funded residential treatment program that is six months for females and nine months for males.

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice Institutional Division also offers a 12-month drug and alcohol addiction program for felony offenders, followed by 90 days of transitional treatment, and a year of after-care given in Gray County, McClendon said.

"This isn't a perfect system, but it's an effective system. It's the best we've got," the chief probation officer said.

"I don't think locking up everyone who commits an offense is the answer," he added. "But if they continue to commit offenses, then we need to lock them up to keep them from preying on the community."

ANIMALS

"When Ranger wants to be petted," Goes said, "Ranger gets petted."

But there's also Angel, Dickens, Dolly and Major. They're big enough that when they want to get petted, Goes said, they simply stand in front of a person. It's easier to pet them than walk around them.

There are no coyote problems at the Harrows' ranch.

Stuart, a mixed breed dog with an actively wagging tail, was dragged behind a car up at Perryton until he was more dead than alive. Now he's just happy to be scratched behind the ears.

There's Newton and Pippi, therapy dogs, and there's Lincoln, a therapy dog in training, Penny laughed.

There's Calvin, a cat without a tail.

"He went through a fan belt," Penny said, gently stroking Calvin as she talked.

Calvin, however, was warily eyeing the growing number of dogs gathering at Penny's feet.

A dozen or more cats live in the barn or sit in the sunshine of a cage attached to the barn. The chicken wire around them is not to keep them in, but to keep the dogs out.

"They all have names," Goes said, looking at the animals in and around the barn.

There's Little Bit, a lop-eared rabbit that was discarded after falling from a table last year during a rabbit show.

There are also four miniature horses, one full grown horse and three donkeys.

Ashlie Lee, another volunteer at the animal sanctuary, is taking care of the horse and has taken several of the dogs.

There are pygmy goats and pot-bellied pigs.

There are also three llamas, Percy, Snowball and Snowflake, the Poppa, Momma and baby. Percy was scheduled to be the guest of honor at a barbecue when he was rescued, Penny said.

"They've been finding homes for them," Goes said. "They want to find some more."

The Harrow's telephone number is 669-2047.

VOTE

that if at least 15 registered voters request an observer during an election, the Secretary of State's office will try to comply.

She said she would be in town through Wednesday, and then return to Austin.

Lackey said she will issue a written report on the election within 10 working days. That report, she said, will be available to the public through the Texas Secretary of State's office.

Lackey said that as of 9 a.m. today, voter turnout for the election had been good.

At the request of Lackey, Election Judge Maxine Hawkins asked The Pampa News photographer to leave the polling area after he had taken a picture of people signing up to vote.

Hawkins termed the area a "war zone."

Hawkins said that she had no objection to photographs of people voting. She noted President Bush had his picture taken exercising his right to vote, but asked that any pictures be taken outside the auditorium.

Fed prepared to cut interest rate once more

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve is prepared to cut a key interest rate for the 10th time this year in an effort to cushion the economic blow from the terrorist attacks.

Against a backdrop of plunging consumer confidence and soaring unemployment, economists worry that the economic picture might get a lot worse before it gets better.

A big fear is that consumers will continue to cut back as the job market deteriorates, further undercutting a weak economy.

"The danger from a continued decline and a negative spiral is very substantial. The Fed needs to break that cycle," said Lynn Reaser, chief economist at Banc of America Capital Management.

Most economists predict Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan and his colleagues will order another cut to a key interest rate Tuesday. The Fed's chief policy-making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, is expected to announce its decision in the afternoon.

Many economists are predicting a half-point reduction, which would mark the third cut of that size since the Sept. 11 attacks. But some economists see a more moderate, quarter-point move.

On Wall Street, investors wondered whether the Fed's anticipated rate cut would be able to lift the economy out of its malaise. The Dow Jones industrial average was down another 16 points in morning trading.

The Fed at its last meeting Oct. 2 cut the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge on overnight loans, to 2.5 percent, the lowest level since May 1962.

Many economists sat the Fed's aggressive credit easing probably won't avert a recession this year. But they are hopeful the action will prevent any downturn from being drawn out.

The economy shrank at a 0.4 percent annual rate, as measured by the gross domestic product, in the July-September quarter, the government reported last week. Analysts predict the current quarter will show an even larger contraction.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion around Texas: Fort Worth Star-Telegram on balanced Mideast peace plan: President Bush has said repeatedly that our war against terrorism will be waged on a variety of fronts — military, economic and diplomatic. So it makes sense that part of the diplomatic effort should be to examine U.S. policies — past and present — that may have contributed to an atmosphere of anger and frustration in the Middle East that has spawned hatred of the United States.

Such musings are prompted by the recent flap over a proffered $10 million donation by Saudi Prince Alwaleed bin Talal to the Twin Towers Fund for victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks and the rejection of that offer by New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani. The prince, an outspoken member of the Saudi royal family, is chairman of Kingdom Holding Co. and a major investor in U.S. companies. He is sixth on Forbes magazine's 2001 list of the world's richest people.

Alwaleed toured the ruins of the World Trade Center on Oct. 11 and called the terrorist attacks "a tremendous crime." He said he came "to tell America and to tell New York that Saudi Arabia is with the United States wholeheartedly." But it was the rest of the prince's statement that angered the mayor.

"At times like this one, we must address some of the issues that led to such a criminal attack," the prince said. "I believe the government of the United States of America should re-examine its policies in the Middle East and adopt a more balanced stance toward the Palestinian cause."

Bush already seems to be moving in that direction. The president said publicly for the first time on Oct. 2 that he supports the creation of an independent Palestinian state as a part of his "vision" for Middle Eastern peace, "so long as the right of Israel to exist is respected."

Three days later, on Oct. 5, the White House delivered a rare rebuke to Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, who suggested that the administration was trying "to appease the Arabs at our expense," drawing a parallel with Britain's appeasement of the Nazis in 1938. White House spokesman Ari Fleischer retorted: "The president believes that these remarks are unacceptable" and added, "Israel can have no better or stronger friend than the United States and no better friend than President Bush."

On Oct. 12, reports from Washington and Jerusalem said that the United States is putting together a Middle Eastern peace plan that calls for establishing a Palestinian state with a foothold in Jerusalem and that the plan should be ready in mid-November, for presentation before the U.N. General Assembly.

British Prime Minister Tony Blair may have shed some light on the Bush administration's thinking after meeting in London with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. "A viable Palestinian state, as part of a negotiated and agreed settlement that guarantees peace and security for Israel, is the objective," Blair told reporters. "We desire a just peace in which Israelis and Palestinians live side by side, each in their own state, secure and able to prosper and develop."

Which brings us back to Giuliani. "There is no moral equivalent for this attack," the mayor said in response to Alwaleed's suggestion that the United States adopt a more even-handed approach to the Middle East. "The people who did it lost any right to ask for justification when they slaughtered 5,000, 6,000 innocent people. ... Not only are those statements wrong; they're part of the problem."

Democratic Rep. Cynthia McKinney of Georgia jumped into the fray by sending an Oct. 12 letter to Alwaleed saying that she was disappointed by Giuliani's refusal of the check and adding: "I think he should have recognized your right to speak and make observations about a part of the world which you know so well."

Sen. Zell Miller, D-Ga., said McKinney's letter was "disgraceful." And Mark Moskowitz, director of the Atlanta office of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, said the congresswoman should not "divide America at a time when we are still mourning the loss of over 6,000 of our citizens."

A mayor whose city has been dealt a body blow by an unspeakable act of evil can be forgiven for his heated response to the proffered gift from the Saudi prince, especially since money from the Saudis has helped nurture Osama bin Laden and the Taliban movement in Afghanistan. And Giuliani is right to say that there is no moral justification for the crimes of Sept. 11.

But we now live in a changed world. The daunting challenge — and opportunity — for Bush is to chart a course for the United States that will keep us on the moral high ground. As we bring to account those who attacked us and forge a post-Sept. 11 foreign policy, we must demonstrate to the world that the United States is worthy of admiration and respect as a beacon of freedom and the world's only surviving superpower.

That should include an examination of policies that may have brought discredit to the United States in the past, even if the suggestion comes from a Saudi prince bearing gifts.

The Bush administration is correct to pursue a Middle Eastern peace plan that would take into account the grievances and aspirations of the Palestinian people, while at the same time reiterating the United States' longstanding support of Israel.

It's in our best interests.

Sept. 11: The day our bubble burst

Today's question in the weekly column "Quite Frankly" asked local citizens how their lives have changed since Sept. 11.

For me, everything before the terrorist attacks is a dream and everything since then is painful reality. I haven't written a column for some time now because of it. I felt like the public has been so inundated by columns, editorials, and news articles about that tragic day and all that's happened since then, they probably didn't want to hear any more.

On the other hand, anything else I might write about seems insignificant — even trivial — after what has happened.

Within days of the Sept. 11 attacks, a professor and numerous students featured on television championed "peace." At the same time, people all around me advocated swift and deadly retribution.

My emotions are so high right now, I confess I cannot make a cool, rational response.

I can only say — People, freedom doesn't come for free. When you say, "Kill the bastards! Blast them off the face of the earth!" you are sending our sons and daughters, fathers and mothers, husbands and wives, into a situation where they may be called to give their lives so that we may remain free.

This is not rhetoric. War is bloody. Innocent people die. Guilty people often do not.

Those of you who think these acts of terrorism can be resolved without any form of violence through diplomacy and compromise need to wake up!

I can understand the students' thinking. They draw their beliefs from a limited amount of life experience, an infinite amount of idealism and a real fear of dying before they've had a chance to live.

It's harder for me to understand the professor's position. Perhaps he has lived in academia so long his concept of the real world has become skewed.

If we lived in an ideal world, all situations could be handled without violence. People would act in a rational manner. Heck, if it were an ideal world, problems wouldn't exist.

This is not an ideal world. We are dealing with matters far beyond our understanding. We are dealing with people who have no concept of western rationale. We are dealing with people who are waging jihad — a "holy war" to rid the world of infidels such as ourselves.

To them, there is no peaceful solution. Personally, I would have been perfectly happy for Sept. 11 to have never occurred. But it did, and now we must deal with it.

Since that day, our independence has greatly diminished.

For the sake of safety, we accept extensive searches of our persons and belongings before entering a commercial airliner. Our political leaders have endowed widespread powers to the president, the military, and law enforcement agencies — powers they would not have even considered on Sept. 10.

My son Dave, who has served as a NATO peacekeeper in Macedonia for six months, is coming back to the United States in about two weeks. My husband and I willingly gave the military personal information about ourselves as we undergo an extensive background check. All this, so that we can go onto the U.S. Army base at Fort Campbell, Ky., when his unit arrives. I gladly do this to help protect my son.

We see a greater military presence throughout the country. I find it hard to accept the fact that soldiers carrying guns now guard our airports and public buildings. In foreign countries, maybe. But not here in the good 'ol USA.

One day last week, I became aware of a loud, insistent train whistle in the distance. Suddenly I heard a "pop!" and all the electricity went off. I sat there in my living room, afraid to move — mind racing, heart pounding, waiting...

Ten minutes later, the television screen flickered back to life and the ceiling fan began to whir. The train had long since passed.

Everything went back to normal, except for me. I didn't calm down for quite awhile. I didn't sleep well that night, either. Last night I dreamed about bubonic plague.

That's how my life has changed since Sept. 11.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 6, the 310th day of 2001. There are 55 days left in the year. This is Election Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 6, 1888, Benjamin Harrison won the presidential election, defeating incumbent Grover Cleveland with enough electoral votes, even though Cleveland led in the popular vote.

On this date:

In 1860, former Illinois congressman Abraham Lincoln defeated three other candidates for the presidency.

In 1861, Jefferson Davis was elected to a six-year term as president of the Confederacy.

In 1893, composer Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky died in St. Petersburg, Russia, at age 53.

In 1900, President McKinley was re-elected, beating Democrat William Jennings Bryan.

In 1906, Republican Charles Evans Hughes was elected governor of New York, defeating newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst.

In 1913, Mohandas K. Gandhi was arrested as he led a march of Indian miners in South Africa.

In 1928, in a first, the results of Herbert Hoover's election victory over Alfred E. Smith were flashed onto an electric sign outside the

New York Times building.

In 1956, President Eisenhower won re-election, defeating Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson.

In 1976, Benjamin L. Hooks was chosen to be the new executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, succeeding Roy Wilkins.

In 1977, 39 people were killed when an earthen dam burst, sending a wall of water through Toccoa Falls Bible College in Georgia.

Ten years ago: Kuwait celebrated the dousing of the last oil fires ignited by Iraq during the Persian Gulf War. Actress Gene Tierney died in Houston at age 70.

Five years ago: A day after being re-elected, President Clinton threw a party on the White House lawn; that same day, he received resignations from secretaries of state, defense, energy and commerce. A cyclone struck southeastern India, claiming an estimated 1,000 lives.

One year ago: On Election Eve, George W. Bush and Al Gore campaigned through the final hours of their run for the White House, seeking last-minute momentum in a costly and exhausting race to become the nation's 43rd president. Surgeons in Manchester, England, separated conjoined twin girls, a procedure that involved allowing one of the girls to die, while giving the survivor a chance at life.

Government can't stimulate the economy

Everyone in both parties in Washington is now determined to stimulate the economy by spending money. It won't work.

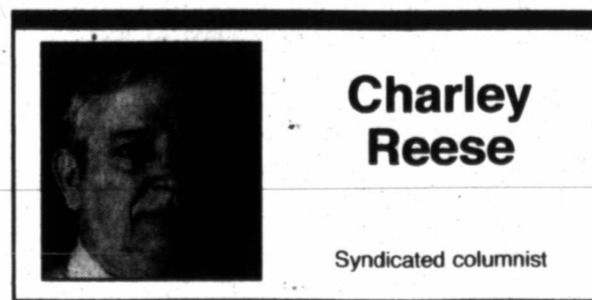

Of course, government spending stimulates the economy of the particular people and corporations who get their hands on it. You can bet that that won't be a lot of folks, especially as far as any big bucks are concerned.

I got my $300 tax refund, but I haven't deposited it yet. Guess it's my fault we're having a recession. It probably is, in a symbolic sense, as the reason I haven't deposited it is because I already have most everything I want.

And that is the crux of the present recession. It's the plain old cycle of supply and demand. Most folks have already bought all the toys and gadgets they want, so the toy and gadget manufacturers have to cut back production and lay folks off.

A second factor is that even those folks who can't satisfy their desires have maxed out their credit cards and are so loaded with debt that they can't buy anything else, despite their bad judgment.

Until toys and gadgets wear out or people get bored with them, and until folks can pay down their debts, there isn't going to be an economic recovery.

Charley Reese

Syndicated columnist

As for government spending, well, government can't spend until it takes or borrows. All government can do is redistribute income, and in case you haven't noticed, that usually involves taking from the working class and redistributing it to the rich. Yes, I know about welfare, but the amount of government dollars that drifts down to the truly poor amounts to little more than a mist. The truly poor don't have any lobbyists in Washington, and lobbyists are the chief tree-shakers in that town.

We have drifted far from the republican model, in which the president quietly enforces already-existing laws and administers already-existing programs, while a thoughtful legislature only occasionally tunes the nation's laws.

No, we have gotten to the point where politicians feel they have to follow the daily news and, whatever is happening, "do something" about it. Well, if you stop and think about it, the only thing legislators can do about anything is pass laws, and we already have thousands too many on the books. The only thing the president can do is make appointments and speeches and order the military to shoot or bomb somebody. None of that seems particularly suited to helping the economy.

I expect any day now for more people to realize that government is very limited in what it can do to solve anybody's problems. It can do some good, and it can do some harm, and it usually manages to do both at the same time. It is, after all, simply a great engine of force, but force is rarely the answer to most problems of the human condition.

Certainly, taking money from A and giving it to B is not good for the economy. If you add a minus and a plus you get a zero, and zero effect is what most government spending has on the real economy, which is all private.

The best thing the government can do is just leave the private sector alone, neither taxing it too much nor subsidizing it at all. In the meantime, the rest of us should leave home without our credit cards and buy only what we truly need.

Avenues designs local, area homes

Avenues in Pampa is the place to go for the latest in interior design. The business offers a complete selection of interior design materials and services. DeLynn Gordzelik and Lori Fulton-Groenwald teamed together to form the local business in September, 1999. Lori moved to Pampa from Amarillo two years ago while DeLynn has lived in Pampa since she was a child.

DeLynn and her mother, Pam Ashford, began the local business by custom making home draperies and bedding in their workroom. The business has grown considerably the past two years and four women are now employed in the workroom. The women can make anything out of a fabric a customer may want, said DeLynn.

"We will do one room or the whole house," said Lori, as she discussed the varied services the two young women provide to their customers.

Lori has been a licensed designer, #3907, for 12 years.

The two young women operate the only interior design store in Pampa, and said they offer a wide selection of products as any interior design store in Amarillo.

In-stock materials are offered for the latest styles in interior design. The local store is the only in-stock distributor of Ralph Lauren fabric within 500 miles, said DeLynn.

Whether it be the popular animal skins, fabrics with an oriental flair, the vintage look, or even the lodge design, DeLynn and Lori will uniquely design your home. The vintage look, or shabby chic, is very transitional.

Animal prints are currently in vogue in interior design. Leopard, mink, fox and zebra are all in demand.

"There are currently so many

"We will go to the homes of our customers," said DeLynn. "We will help them pick out furniture or anything for their home."

colors and designs which are popular," said Lori. "It's such a broad range."

The most current colors considered to be fashionable are reds, purples, golds and sage greens, she said.

If the local store doesn't have the exact fabric a customer wants, the two young women will locate it.

"We will go to the homes of our customers," said DeLynn. "We will help them pick out furniture or anything for their home."

Lori said she and DeLynn will take their own things and assist with arrangement.

"We'll even help pick paint colors to match the draperies and wallpaper."

Experienced in design, they will also shop with the customers.

If the customer prefers, Lori and DeLynn will obtain the customer preferences and do the shopping for them.

Avenues has an attractive selection of accessories in stock for their customers, also.

"We will help pick out furniture or anything for the home," said DeLynn.

The local store offers custom-made blinds as well as anything out of fabric. A wide selection of upholstery fabrics is available to the customers, and the staff will make cushions to the customer specifications.

Avenues also has a wide selection of wallpaper books for customer to browse and make their selections.

Lori and DeLynn will go anywhere to assist their customers. They have designed homes all over the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles — including Stratford, Amarillo, Canadian, Miami, Panhandle and Guymon, Okla.

These two attractive young women provide extremely high quality work. They will be happy to discuss with customers about any interior design job — large or small.

Avenues is located at 119 S. Western.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting Lori or DeLynn at 665-0983 at their Pampa-based store.

Lori Fulton-Groenwald and DeLynn Gordzelik are providing the latest in design for their customers locally and across the area. The two young women formed their business two years ago combining their talents to give exceptional service to people interest in decorating their homes.

Dad's Life With Second Wife Is Cause Of Children's Thanks

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Desperate for a Life of My Own," whose daughters successfully thwarted his attempts at love after his wife of 47 years passed away, landed right in our family's backyard.

Mom died suddenly in June of 1982, a mere three months after we helped my parents celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary. Seeing Dad so broken and old at the funeral, we ached for him and worried about his health and future. Silly us! By the end of the year, he called to inform us that he was seeing "Jane," a widowed longtime friend, and that they were being married. I was speechless (a rare occurrence, according to my wife), but quickly gave my blessing along with my brother and two sisters. We knew that Mom and Dad were soulmates, but if Dad was lucky enough to find love again, who were we to deny him?

Dad passed away last June, three months after we celebrated his 80th birthday. We're heartbroken, but our grief is tempered by thoughts of Dad's happy and full 18 years spent with Jane. His life was honored by hundreds of family and friends at his funeral service. I know I speak for the rest of the family in saying that we owe Jane an eternal debt of love and gratitude for sharing her life with Dad. We embrace her as part of the family and will continue to do so until the day she leaves us.

Your advice to "Desperate" neglected to address one small detail. Unless they had obtained a court order, the wiretap his daughters put on his phone was illegal, and they could have been prosecuted. What I say to "Desperate" is simply this: Sir, if you are fortunate enough to find love again in the autumn of your life, go ahead and jump in, right after you tell your daughters to go take a flying leap!

Dear Abby

Is written by Pauline Phillips and daughter Jeanne Phillips.

DEAR FORTUNATE SON: It appears your father had many blessings in his life — not the least of which were his children. Thank you for such an upbeat letter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: How sad to read the letter from the elderly widower whose daughters drove away his new wife and now threaten to do the same with his new potential mate. I am a lawyer who does a lot of estate planning, and I have a couple of suggestions for him.

First, disinherit these greedy offspring and leave his estate to charity. If he won't do that, have his will include a clause like this: "If at the time of my death I am married to (the new flame), I leave all of my estate to my two daughters, in equal shares. If I am not married to (the new flame), I leave all of my estate to the following charities..."

That should induce the daughters to be kind to the new wife. If the new wife dies first or leaves on her own, the daughters may get nothing, but that is what they deserve anyway.

Finally, his two daughters sound so determined to have his estate that he might want to add a clause that says the provisions for his daughters are to be effective only if they can establish by clear and convincing evidence that his death was not the result of a homicide caused or procured by either of them.

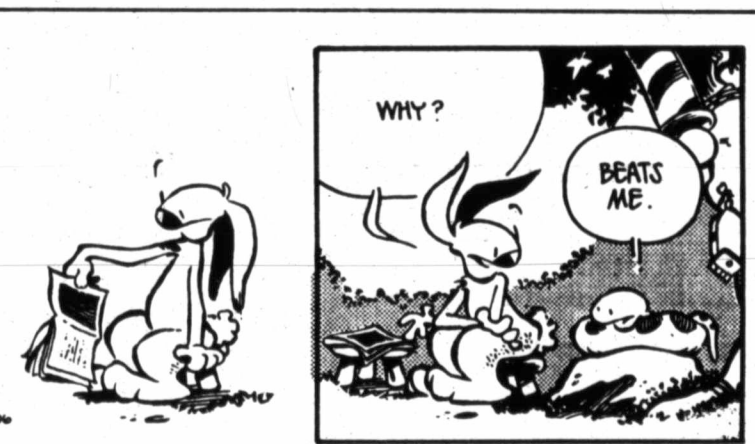

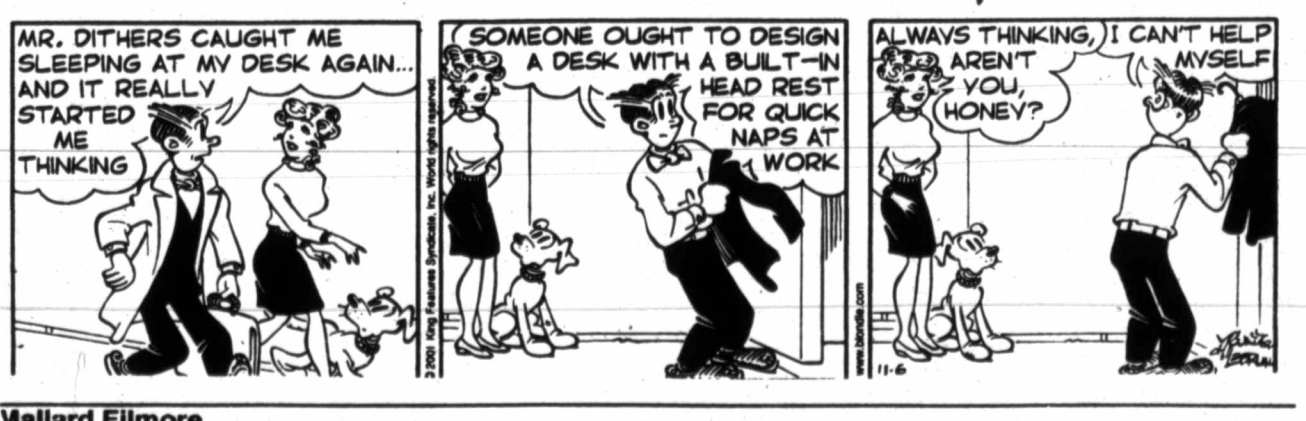

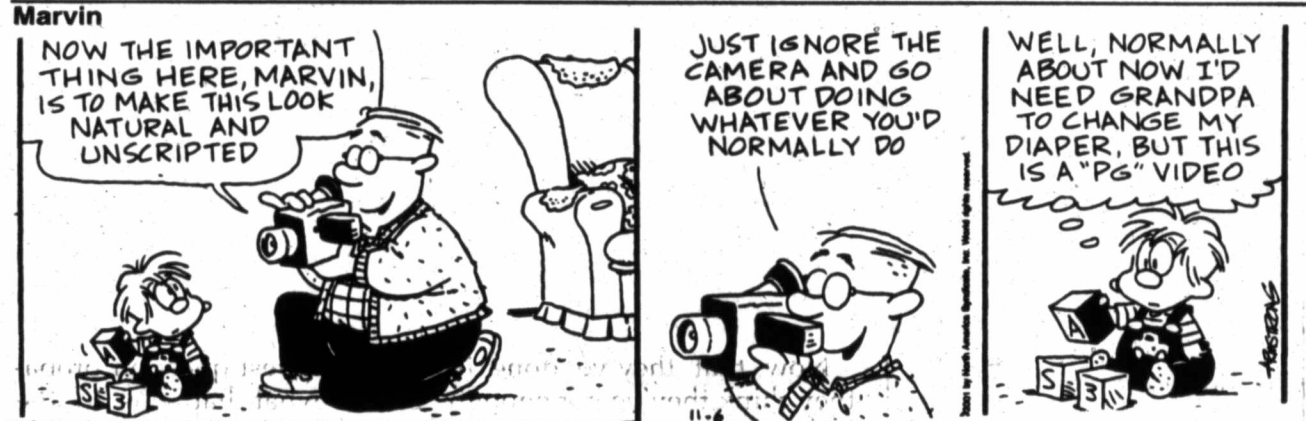

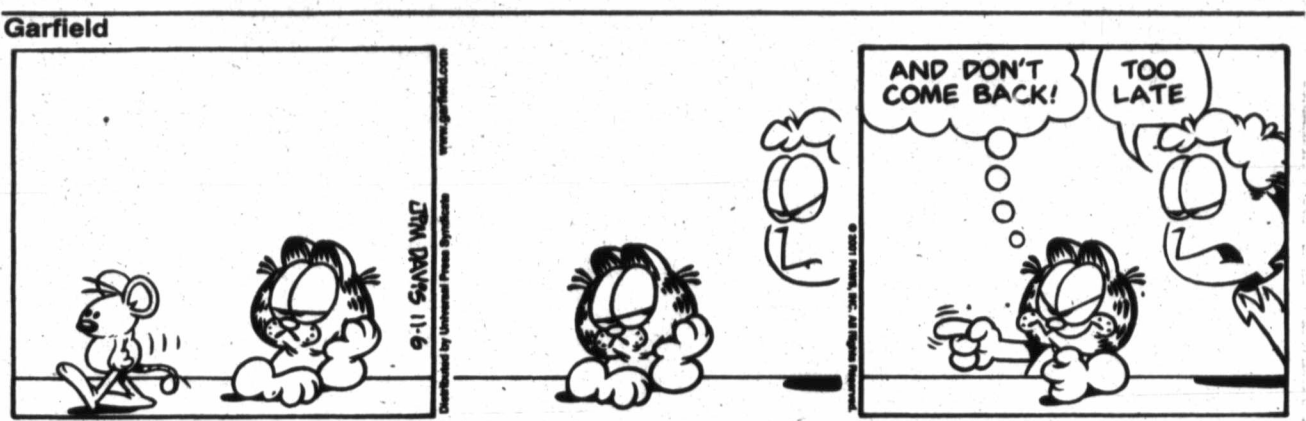

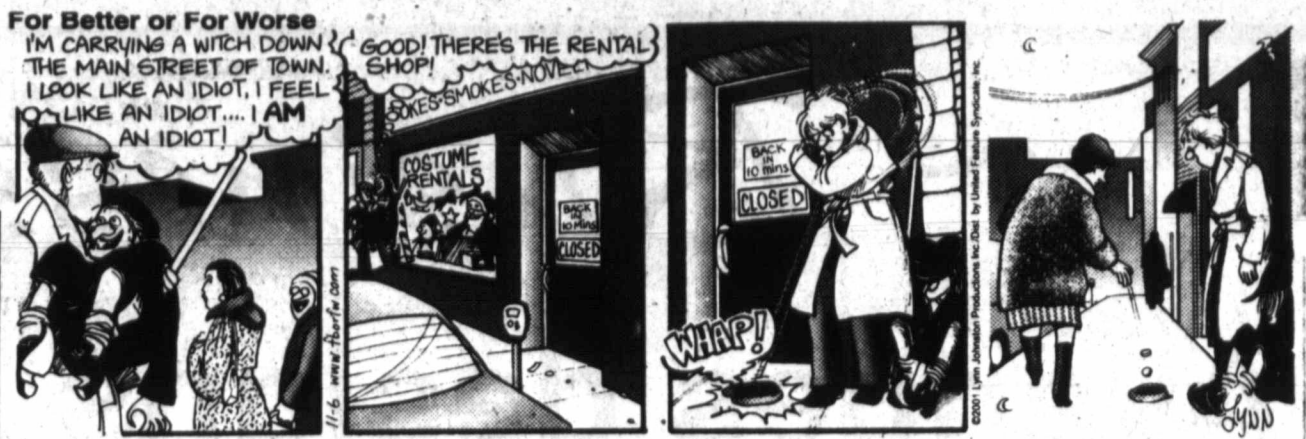

Let the old guy have a life!

ATTORNEY IN EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR ATTORNEY: When I suggested to "Desperate" that he talk the entire situation over with his attorney, a legal document of some kind was what I had in mind. It did not occur to me that he might need to hire a food-taster. I hope he sees your letter and takes it to heart.

FOOTBALL

LEFORS — Caleb Barnes scored three touchdowns, including a 60-yard kickoff return, to open the game, and Lefors rolled to a 47-0 win over Higgins in six-man action last weekend.

Lefors improved to 2-2 in District 1-1A play and 5-4 for the season. Higgins falls to 0-4 and 0-8.

Andrew Jennings also ran for two touchdowns, and Josh Jackson tossed a 23-yard scoring strike to Josh Garcia. Andrew Johnson added a rushing touchdown.

The game ended after three quarters due to the 45-point mercy rule.

Lefors closes the season at 7:30 Thursday night against Fort Elliott.

GENERAL

ST. MARTINVILLE, La. (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys offensive lineman Nathaniel "Nate" Newton Jr. was arrested with three other people when state police confiscated 213 pounds of marijuana from a van on Interstate 10, state police said Tuesday.

Newton, 39, and two others were booked with possession with intent to distribute marijuana on Sunday, said Trooper Willie Williams of Louisiana State Police Troop I. A fourth person, arrested in a separate vehicle with $18,000, was booked with conspiracy to possess narcotics.

BASEBALL

PHOENIX (AP) — George Steinbrenner delivered a message to the rest of baseball just minutes after his New York Yankees lost the World Series:

"We'll be back," Steinbrenner said. "Mark that down. We'll be back."

The question remains who will be part of that "we."

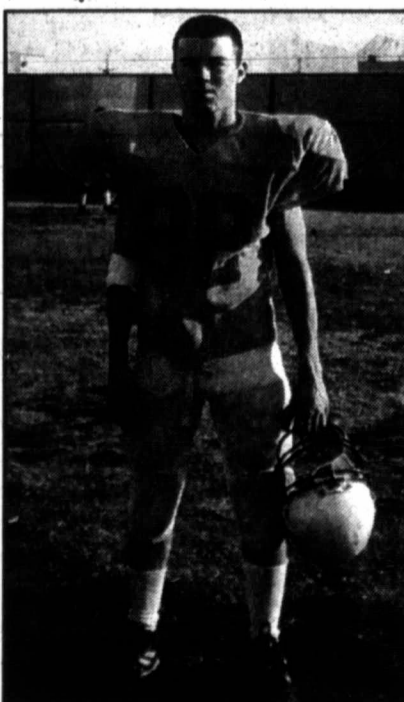

The great Yankees dynasty that was denied a fourth straight World Series title by Arizona's improbable Game 7 comeback is headed for what could be its biggest overhaul since it started in 1996.

Paul O'Neill, a fixture in New York the past nine seasons, won't be there for the Yankees patrolling right field, hitting line drives and throwing his equipment. Instead, the heart and soul of the Yankees will be enjoying retirement at home in Ohio.

He's not alone. Luis Sojo, who along with O'Neill is one of the seven Yankees who played on all four title teams, also is retiring. Fellow four-time winner Tino Martinez filed for free agency Monday, as did Scott Brosius and Chuck Knoblauch, who have been around for three championships.

"We haven't even had five minutes to process this stuff yet," Brosius said. "We'll let that stuff play itself out."

Infielder Randy Velarde and reliever Mark Wohlers also filed for free agency Monday.

Charlie Craig, Pampa varsity special teams, was named Player of Week for his performance in the Canyon game.

PAMPA — Because of Pampa cornerback Michael Galloway, Randall quarterback Jacob Felton couldn't save the day for the Raiders.

Galloway intercepted an end zone pass by Felton to preserve Pampa's 20-19 win last Friday night.

Some second-guessers felt Felton should have attempted a field goal since he had drilled a 29-yarder earlier in the District 3-4A tilt, and the Raiders were on the Pampa 21 on their final drive. However, Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier could only speculate as to the reason why there wasn't a field goal try.

"I was surprised. I've been trying to figure out what their situation was. I know they were out of timeouts and they were in a no-huddle offense, but you've have to ask coach (Alan) Cornelius why they didn't go for it," Cavalier said.

"My own speculation is that if the pass was incomplete, it would have stopped the clock, and then they could bring in their field goal unit. But Galloway was there to pick off the pass."

Prior to Felton's final pass, the Raiders tried to move closer to the Harvester goalline with a running play, but linebacker Orlando Madrid tackled tailback B.J. Young at the line.

"Madrid made a terrific tackle on him to stop their running play for no gain," Cavalier said. "I came away feeling very grateful that we had won that game."

Randall led the statistics in everything except where it counted the most — on the scoreboard. The Raiders led in total yardage (334-316) and first downs (20-13) as the talented Felton ran for 80 yards and passed for 122 more.

"Felton was very difficult to defend against," Cavalier said. "It looked like we had him trapped several times, but he'd turn what looked to be a sack into a gain. He played extremely well against us."

Offensively, the Harvesters also enjoyed an outstanding night. Quarterback Randy Tice and receiver Adam Rodgers made things happen in a hurry for the Harvesters.

Tice and Rodgers hooked up on touchdown strikes of 75 and 55 yards. Tailback Johnny Moore scored Pampa's other TD on a 42-yard run.

Senior tailback Ty Elledge continued his workmanlike running for the Harvesters. He rushed for 82 yards on 19 carries to lead the Harvester ground game.

Up front, the Pampa offensive linemen opened up holes and held off Randall defenders — consistently throughout the game. Center Brandon McElroy, linemen Jon Lambright and Aaron Burrows led a team effort by throwing some key blocks.

On defense, Madrid and Galloway shared starring roles. Madrid led his team in tackles with seven solo stops, including one for minus yardage, and 16 assists. He also had a quarterback hurry.

Besides his crucial interception near the end of the game, Galloway also had a pickoff in the second quarter after the Raiders had gained a first down on their own 43.

Pampa hosts Borger at 7:30 Friday night to close out the home season. A win would give the Harvesters a spot in the Class 4A playoffs.

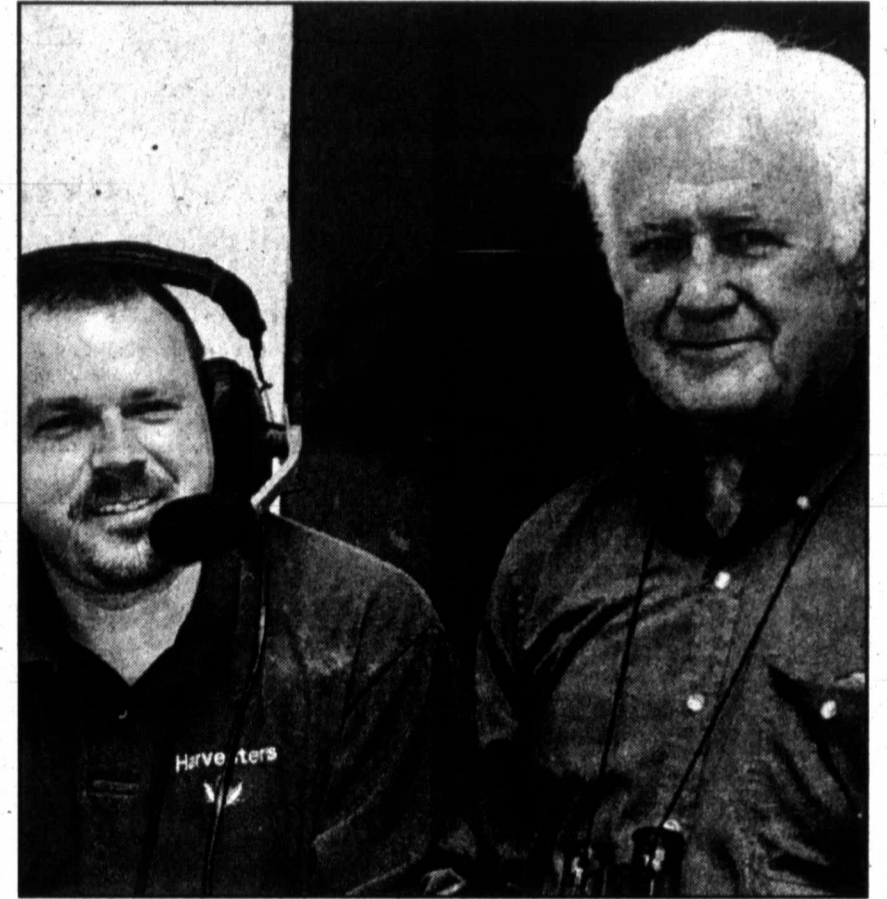

The Harris Rating System has the Harvester favored by three points.

Pampa is 6-3 for the season and 5-1 in district. Borger is 6-2 overall and 4-2 in district.

The Harvesters are currently tied for first place with Palo Duro in the district standings. Borger is in a three-way tie with Hereford and Randall for third place.

Former Pampa football coach Weldon Trice (right) was a visitor in the broadcast booth at Canyon's Kimbrough Stadium during the Harvesters' game with Randall last Friday night. Trice was interviewed by KGRO-radio sports announcer Donnie Hooper at halftime. Trice is now retired and lives in Canyon.

Graying Diamondbacks eye repeat as Series champs

PHOENIX (AP) — With a roster loaded with players in their mid-to-upper 30s, the Arizona Diamondbacks knew time was running out in their bid to win a World Series.

Now that they've done it, they think they've got enough left for a repeat performance.

"I believe this is not our last," Curt Schilling said. "We have the makeup and the chemistry and the talent and personnel to do it again, and maybe it will go through New York again. Who knows?"

Randy Johnson is 38, Mark Grace 37 and Schilling 35, but they showed all season, and especially in Game 7 Sunday night against the New York Yankees, that they aren't ready for the rocking chair quite yet.

Johnson and Schilling were co-MVPs of the Series and are leading candidates for the National League Cy Young Award.

Grace batted .298 in the regular season, and had three hits in the Series finale, including the leadoff single that ignited Arizona's stunning ninth-inning rally.

The core of the team is under contract at least through next season.

The biggest question probably is what happens to the younger players who made the Diamondbacks' bench one of the best in baseball.

Erubiel Durazo has made it clear that he wants a starting job, but Grace's contract goes through next season. Jay Bell, who lost his second base spot, doesn't want to end his career as a bench player.

Trades are possible for the likes of Durazo or David Dellucci, but the Diamondbacks want to hold on to the younger players for when the old guys finally call it quits.

Miguel Batista will be back, and so will embattled 22-year-old Byung-Hyun Kim, who could become a setup man if closer Matt Mantei successfully comes back from "Tommy John" elbow surgery.

Todd Stottlemire is trying to make a comeback, and young reliever Bret Prinz will bring some much needed power to the bullpen.

Brenly believes Kim will recover from the psychological beating he took by giving up the two game-tying, ninth-inning home runs in Yankee Stadium.

In the postgame bedlam Sunday night, Kim was shown on the giant screen at Bank One Ballpark wandering in the outfield with a big smile.

The crowd gave him a huge cheer.

"It was like 49,000 people giving him a hug," general manager Joe Garagiola Jr. said. "It was just a wonderful moment."

A World Series that went seven games undoubtedly will bring some much needed money to a franchise that lost at least $48 million over its first three seasons.

Ten of the top players agreed before the season began to defer large chunks of their salary to help the financially strapped franchise through the next two years.

An estimated $16 million in World Series revenue will certainly provide a boost, and season ticket sales that have declined each year since the 1998 expansion season probably will go up.

The team also did a huge business in merchandise sales over the past few weeks.

Arizona has just five free agents. The most prominent are starting right fielder Reggie Sanders and one of the World Series heroes, Danny Bautista. The others are pitchers Albie Lopez, Mike Morgan and Bobby Witt.

Sanders could be headed elsewhere after resurrecting his career with 33 homers and 88 RBI this season. He had signed a one-year, $1 million contract and will get far more than that now.

The Diamondbacks retain the rights to second baseman Craig Counsell, but probably will have to give him a big raise because he is eligible for arbitration.

The team was basking in its glory on Monday. Manager Bob Brenly and Garagiola made the rounds on radio talk shows. Johnson left for Los Angeles to appear on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno." A parade was planned for downtown on Wednesday, culminating with a rally at the ballpark.

Brenly, who shrugged off the criticism he got for his moves throughout the Series, said he slept as soundly as he has in months.

"I really don't think it has completely sunk in yet," he said. "It was overwhelming. We talk all of the time in baseball and other sports about playing for the feeling instead of the money. That feeling last night, there is no way you can reproduce that chemically or any other way."

"That is the most unbelievable feeling you can ever experience. That's priceless."

Leaf will start for Cowboys this week

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Ryan Leaf has been almost a model citizen in the locker room and on the practice field since joining the Dallas Cowboys a month ago.

There have been no signs of his well-earned reputation as a troublemaker. He has been cordial to everyone while working hard to do and say the right things.

Now comes his chance to show he's also a different person on the field.

Leaf becomes the fourth starting quarterback for the Cowboys — a first in one season — on Sunday in Atlanta.

"The reasoning behind it is we want to get an evaluation of where we're at at quarterback," coach Dave Campo said. "If we come out of this year not knowing what we have at quarterback, we've made a mistake."

Campo confirmed the start for Leaf on Monday, a day after the former No. 2 overall draft pick got his first action for the Cowboys in a 27-24 overtime loss at the New York Giants.

For Leaf, it's another chance — and maybe his last — to prove that he can be a quality NFL quarterback.

"He understands where he's at," Campo said. "We are going to get him ready to go, and give him the best opportunity to go out there and try to revive his career. That's good for him and good for us at the same time."

Leaf was drafted by San Diego in 1998, and was 4-14 as a starter the past three years while throwing 33 interceptions and just 13 touchdowns. The Chargers cut him after last season and then he didn't make Tampa Bay's roster during training camp.

"I think I'm ready," Leaf said Monday. "I've been here for about three weeks now. And like I've said before, the only way you're going to get better and more comfortable is to play in a game. I got a chance to do that, and hopefully I will continue to progress."

Leaf follows rookie Quincy Carter, Anthony Wright and Clint Stoerner in the starting quarterback shuffle.

Carter and Wright are out with injuries. Stoerner threw interceptions on four straight drives, including two in the end zone, in the second half against the Giants.

Leaf took over with 4:23 left in regulation when the game was tied at 24, and was 4-of-8 for 85 yards. The Cowboys had blown a 24-7 halftime lead.

Kelby Doughty takes top honors

SAN ANGELO — Kelby Doughty, Gymnastics of Pampa Level 6 team member, took top honors recently at the District One Championships held in San Angelo.

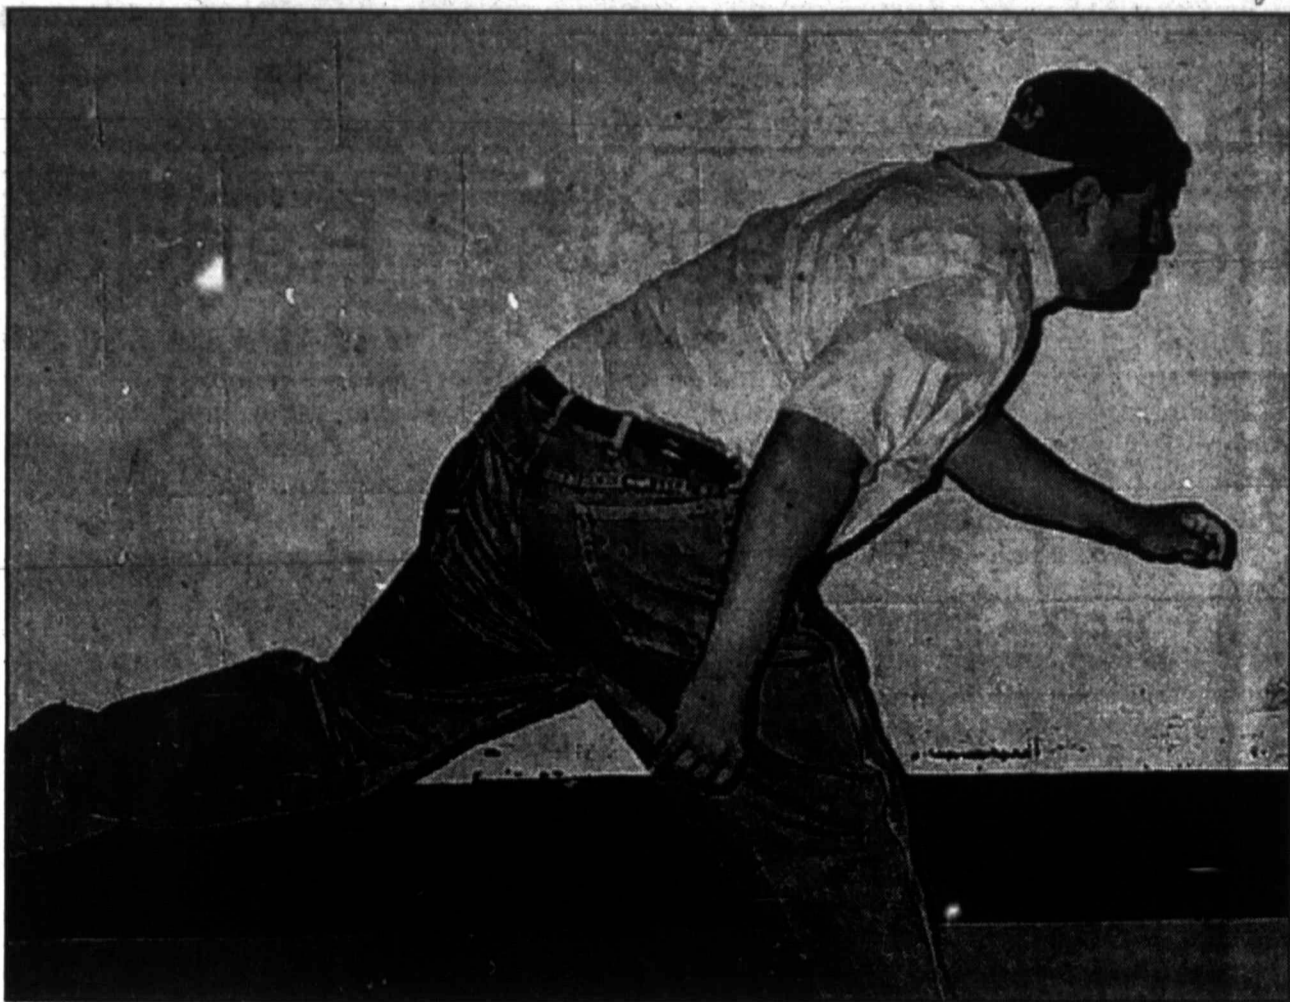

Kelby came away with District Champion titles on vault, bars and All-Around, and she had personal bests on bars, beam, floor and All-Around.

Kelby is a first-year Level 6 gymnast who competes in the 10 year old age group. Her gold medal performance on vault earned a 9.45 and her winning score on bars was a 9.25.

She scored a 9.1 on balance beam for the bronze medal, and had a 9.2 on floor exercise for fourth place.

Kelby's District Champion All-Around score was an outstanding 37.0. Her performance earned her a trip to the North State Semi-Finals.

About 15 Pampa bowlers will advance to the State Winter Games to be held in Austin on Dec. 7-9.

Owners face crucial issues

PHOENIX (AP) — Less than 48 hours after the last out of a riveting World Series, owners meet Tuesday uncertain whether to try to eliminate teams or start baseball's ninth work stoppage since 1972.

Owners have informally discussed cutting two teams, perhaps as soon as next season, with Montreal, Minnesota and Florida mentioned most often as possible candidates.

But there's no indication owners will take any action when they gather in a Chicago suburb. A baseball official and a team executive, speaking Monday on the condition they not be identified, said a contraction decision was possible but not definite.

Commissioner Bud Selig has not informed all teams of his plans, the officials said. Minnesota owner Carl Pohlad was pushing for his team to be eliminated in exchange for a large payment, the team executive said. Twins president Jerry Bell declined comment Monday.

Selig also hasn't said whether he favors locking out players before free agents can start signing with new teams on Nov. 20. A lockout would be a risky strategy for a sport whose average attendance still hasn't fully recovered from the 232-day strike of 1994-95.

On Monday, management and the union said players and owners had agreed Sept. 17 to extend the sport's labor contract through Nov. 6, a move made when the regular season was extended by a week following the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington.

The labor contract, signed on March 14, 1997 and retroactive to the 1996 season, originally had a provision that it would expire this Oct. 31 or on the day of the final game of this year's World Series, whichever was later.

Under U.S. labor law, the provisions of the expired agreement remain in place until there's either a new deal or the sides bargain to impasse and management imposes new work rules.

Selig and union head Donald Fehr were both at Sunday night's game. Fehr is waiting for owners to tell players they are ready to start bargaining, but Selig has not said when that will be.

Some teams, especially those in low-revenue markets, favor locking out players. That would cause the labor confrontation to start during the off-season, when no games are affected, rather than during the next season.

But there are no indications Selig has attempted to solicit votes in favor of a lockout. Large-market teams generally are against a lockout because it would cause some season ticket-holders to not renew and could hurt advertising sales for next year.

Baseball

Owners haven't met since they gathered June 13 in Pittsburgh. They were to have met Sept. 11 in Milwaukee, but that was called off following the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington.

Teams could propose to not lock out players and to not change work rules in exchange for the union giving a no-strike pledge through next year's World Series. That would ensure another season of labor peace as talks start.

Without such an agreement, teams would be vulnerable to a players' strike late next season. Players struck on Aug. 12, 1994, about two months after teams proposed a salary cap, and the walkout led to the first cancellation of the World Series in 90 years.

Raiders have rare win over Broncos, 38-28

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders realized the danger of taking too much satisfaction from a midseason victory over a limping opponent.

Still, that opponent was the Denver Broncos — and any victory over the former beasts of the AFC West is a cause for great celebration for Al Davis' team.

With Rich Gannon and Tim Brown leading the way, the Raiders returned all of the Broncos' best shots on Monday night, beating their archrivals 38-28 in a victory that affirmed the westward shift of divisional power.

The win was the first over Denver in seven tries for Oakland coach Jon Gruden, who finally cleared one of the few remaining hurdles in his quest to pass Denver as the AFC's most consistently outstanding team.

"Gruden wanted to win bad," Raiders running back Charlie Garner said. "He was trying to downplay it, but it was the back of everyone's minds."

In a testy game featuring plenty of the late hits, hard blows and questionable sportsmanship that always erupts up when these teams get together, the Raiders ended a seven-game losing streak against the team that ruled their division for several years.

"It wasn't our Super Bowl tonight," Gruden said. "At the same time, we wanted to win badly."

Oakland (6-1) won the division last season but lost twice to Denver. Altogether, the Raiders dropped 11 of 12 meetings with the Broncos and coach Mike Shanahan, who has taken extra pleasure in repeatedly beating the team that fired him more than a decade ago.

Davis, the Raiders' iconoclastic owner, and Shanahan still are disputing $250,000 Shanahan says Davis owes him from his contract. Davis, who watched the game from his customary box, must have enjoyed watching Shanahan finally leave Oakland without a victory.

"They did a really good job mixing it up in the short passing game," Shanahan said. "I was very impressed with Gannon, the way he scrambled and made plays and showed a lot of discipline."

Texas news round up ...

East Texas escapees recaptured after chase

GRAPELAND, Texas (AP) — Two East Texas jail escapees were back in custody early Tuesday morning after leading state troopers, Texas Rangers and other law officers on a foot chase that spanned two counties and several hours.

Anderson County dispatcher Terry Keils said the fugitives were apprehended without incident about 4 a.m. CST at Grapeland, in neighboring Houston County.

The chase began shortly after midnight when the inmates, who escaped over the weekend, allegedly robbed a liquor store in Palestine at gunpoint. The escapees, still barefoot and in their jail uniforms, fled from the store in a car that authorities said was low on gas.

A Texas Department of Public Safety helicopter and search dogs were used to hunt down the escapees, Keils said.

"They apparently flushed them out and got them into custody," Keils said.

The escapees, Rocky Delphine Janes and Patrick Randall Poston, both of Palestine, escaped Sunday from Anderson County Jail in the East Texas city about 100 miles southeast of Dallas by scaling a wall after telling guards they were going to a recreation yard.

It was the latest in a rash of jail breaks across the state in the past month.

Brown seeks third term

HOUSTON (AP) The votes in Tuesday's election to avoid a runoff.

A pair of City Council members, Orlando Sanchez and Chris Bell, were Brown's chief opponents in the field that also included three unfunded candidates.

"This is not the time for on-the-job training," Brown said, arguing he should be allowed to serve a final two years before term limits send him into retirement.

In a final day of campaigning Monday, Brown talked about endorsements, Bell continued knocking on doors in neighborhoods and Sanchez appeared on radio stations and made pitches by telephone from his campaign office.

Father of girl charged with sexual attack

DALLAS (AP) — The stepfather of an 8-year-old Hutchins girl found severely malnourished and locked in a lice-infested closet has been indicted on a charge of aggravated sexual assault.

Kenneth Ray Atkinson already faced a first-degree felony indictment accusing him and Barbara Atkinson, the girl's mother, of severely injuring the child by locking her in a closet in their mobile home for months.

Atkinson, 33, is accused of sexually abusing the girl in several ways, according to reports made public Monday.

A doctor previously testified that the girl had been sexually mutilated.

Defense lawyer Malcolm Dade, Atkinson's attorney, declined to address the latest allegations until talking with his client.

Hutchins Police Chief Gregory Griffin said the additional charge was filed after the 8-year-old said she was sexually abused.

"The girl ... has made an outcry. Now it's round two of the charges," Griffin told The Dallas Morning News for Tuesday's editions.

Griffin's agency headed the investigation after the emaciated girl was found June 11 in a closet lined with human waste.

Records show that Atkinson posted a $100,000 bail Oct. 30, releasing him from Lew Sterrett Justice Center into the custody of Ellis County sheriff's deputies.

Schwarzkopf: Afghanistan bombing is effective

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The U.S. military campaign in Afghanistan is making progress despite reports of ineffectiveness, says retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf in urging Americans to retain their leadership role in the war against terrorism.

The former commander of allied forces in Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm on Monday urged Americans to remember the thousands of victims in the World Trade Center and Pentagon attacks when facing these difficult times.

"They targeted 5,000 innocent civilians" in the Sept. 11 attacks, Schwarzkopf told an audience at the University of Texas-Pan American. "Don't ever forget about those 5,000 civilians."

American leadership is the key to ending the war on terrorism swiftly.

"It's up to you," the former four-star general said in response to a question from a man in the audience regarding the United State's war against terrorism.

He discounted media reports that some of the bombing in Afghanistan had been ineffective.

"But don't get discouraged by what you're hearing," he said. "We're doing good."

Reports checked; holiday mail-order a concern

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Tests for any anthrax contamination are continuing at postal facilities in the state, with East Texas the latest focus of investigations which have so far yielded no confirmed presence of the deadly bacteria.

But concern about possible terrorist threats are having a chilling effect on deliveries of some products, including holiday foods, for which manufacturers have traditionally relied upon the mails as the prime delivery choice to customers.

At least one suspicious powdery substance seen with mail at the East Texas Processing and Distribution Center has been tested and deemed harmless. But other reports of suspicious substances have not been tested locally, prompting safety concerns from at least one employee.

A weekend cleaning with bleach at Tyler mail facilities, initially termed a routine move, was later described by a U.S. Postal Service employee as the result of an urgent directive from the Dallas district office.

Court's unusual practice creates judicial dilemma

TYLER, Texas (AP) — An East Texas court's unusual way of handling guilty pleas has stirred a judicial dilemma in the case of a 27-year-old man who testified to killing his childhood rival, then rejected a 50-year prison sentence offered by the judge.

In State District Judge Cynthia Kent's practice called "timely pass for plea," she accepts guilty pleas and considers evidence, then announces sentences, leaving defendants the option to withdraw their pleas if they don't want to accept her punishment recommendation.

In Kelvin Bowie's case, he was charged with perjury after he admitted in court he lied to a grand jury about the shooting.

Bowie testified that he had been bullied for years by a reputed gang member. Built-up rage, he said, compelled him to shoot Michael Wideman after he allegedly stole Bowie's eyeglasses.

Bowie took his option to reject the judge's sentence and change his plea to innocent. He asked for a jury trial and had the case transferred to Dallas. His testimony in Kent's court is inadmissible in his upcoming Dallas trial.

But when Bowie showed up for pretrial proceedings in Dallas Friday, he was served with two aggravated perjury indictments alleging that he gave statements to a grand jury that differed from his testimony during sentencing.
