PAMPA MAN IS GIVEN LIFE TERM

New City Administration to Be Inaugurated Next Monday Morning

The people have spoken, the election is over, but the building of a bigger and better Pampa must go on. Cooperation will do it—let's pull together, and economically.

Of Other Things
But the Lindbergh heir is still missing, the prices of oil and wheat are still low, the stock market is in ill repute, and Uncle Sam's exports are still dropping. We are Americanizing the world, but losing our markets because of it. Truly, boasting is a bad habit even for a nation.

Mellon is being blamed for the depression. Then pity poor England, already beset with doles and debts, who must play host to him.

Rate Doesn't Sticker
Borger is more fortunate than McLean in the practice of reducing gas rates by ordinance. The McLean gas company has refused to grant the 30-cent rate, and has secured a temporary injunction setting aside the railroad commission's order. And thus the war continues.

Friendly
This is the time of year when the stray hasn't a friend. We refer to stray children, stray dogs, stray cows, stray chickens, and stray cats. Gardening is problem enough without these detriments, and many cities are dusting off their stock and chicken laws.

Question of Who
An expert says the depression is caused by small buying. And to judge by all the rage for economy, the depression is apt to stay quite a while longer. The issue, of course, is over who does the spending.

Strange Dream
The Canadian RECORD prints a story about a Pampa man who dreamed he knew where the Lindbergh baby is to be found. The article follows:
A former Canadian citizen who lives in Pampa, dreamed that the Lindbergh baby was hidden near here. As this man has been known to have had several of his dreams come true in the past, Walter Jones, sheriff, investigated the location named, but nothing was found.

The letter written to the local sheriff is as follows: "Dear Sir:—
"If you know of any shack or small house that is in a canyon close or within two miles of the Santa Fe mile post, seven miles east

ELECTION WILL BE CANVASSED ON THURSDAY

BRATTON, O'KEEFE AND FATHEREE ARE ELECTED

ONE RACE IS VERY CLOSE

CITIZENS TURN OUT IN LARGE NUMBERS TUESDAY

Mayor-elect W. A. Bratton and his associates-to-be, Clyde Fatheree and R. Earl O'Keefe, will take the oath of office and inaugurate the new city administration Monday, it was announced today.

They were elected yesterday in balloting which produced the following results:
For mayor—W. A. Bratton, 1086; E. E. Reynolds, 599.

For commissioner No. 1—Clyde F. Fatheree, 937; W. C. de Cordova, 734.

For commissioner No. 2—R. Earl O'Keefe, 842; Robert Woodward, 831.

The election was featured by the closeness of the O'Keefe-Woodward race. Not more than thirty votes separated them during a day which produced an astonishingly steady ratio, and the final result was in doubt until the tabulation was complete.

The present commission, composed of Mayor D. W. Osborne, Commissioner Lynn Boyd, and Commissioner Clyde Fatheree, will meet tomorrow at 11 a. m. to canvass yesterday's election. The new commission will meet at 10 a. m. Monday, as provided by the city charter, and take their oaths of office. Their regular meeting days will be Tuesdays.

AMARILLO, April 6 (AP)—The Amarillo city commission last night adopted a budget of $610,000 for the next fiscal year, beginning April 15.

Of this amount $250,000 will go to the interest and sinking fund, leaving $360,000 for general operations.

The budget is figured on the present tax rate of $1 and on a valuation of $61,000,000, a reduction of approximately $2,000,000 under last year.

An estimate of $75,000 received from miscellaneous sources will be added to the revenue from taxation, but the tax figures do not provide for delinquent accounts.

Spearman Man Is Accident Victim

SPEARMAN, April 6 (AP)—Roy Martin, about 35, was killed near Spearman today when a belt on a well drilling machine broke and he was struck on the head by a piece of iron. He died en route to a hospital at Perryton.

Martin is survived by his widow, three small children and his mother. His father was slain while serving as sheriff of Hansford county several years ago.

Slayer Is Given New Court Trial

AUSTIN, April 6 (AP)—Jack Hall, convicted in Crane county for the slaying of T. O. Barnsley and given 30 years' imprisonment, was granted a new trial by the court of criminal appeals today.

The 15-year conviction against Clarence Pryon, Wheeler, county, charged with the slaying of Warren Guyton, Sr., was affirmed.

The court reversed and remanded a conviction against Kenneth Wilmer, convicted in Bexar county of a swindling charge, and ordered the prosecution dismissed. The jury had assessed Wilmer's punishment at ten years' confinement in the state penitentiary.

R. G. Inge of Oklahoma City is looking after business here.

PAMPA NEWS ROUNDS OUT QUARTER CENTURY SERVICE TO THIS COMMUNITY TODAY

This is the 25th birthday of The Pampa NEWS and it has been that ever since. Mrs. E. L. Ladd who was the White Deer Land company decided to put 200,000 acres of land around Pampa on the market for farmers. Soon after this decision became known, a young man at Miami, one L. L. Ladd, now owner of the Aircraft company here, decided that Pampa's population would increase rapidly and that George Tyn's "Queen City of the Plains," as he was fond of calling the 250-population village, would be a good place to establish a newspaper.

And so on April 6, 1907, exactly 25 years ago, Mr. Ladd who was then publishing the Miami Chief at Miami, brought out the first issue of the Pampa CRONY. Mr. Ladd had started publication of the Chief in 1899. He continued publication of the CRONY for a year and then sold it to J. M. Smith Sr., who had been getting it out since its establishment.

Mr. Smith changed the name of it to the Pampa NEWS and it has been that ever since. The CRONY was printed on a George Washington hand-press, two pages at a time. Two of the pages were printed in Miami and the other two here. At that time Miami was "up-town" for Gray, Hutchinson and Wheeler counties. Both Hutchinson and Gray counties were attached to Roberts county for judicial purposes, and the county seat got the benefit of the trade of jurors, lawyers, witnesses, and court attaches, as well as visitors. Miami was a trading point for ranchers, also.

At that time there was only one fence between Pampa and Mobeetie. When one came to it he got down off his horse or out of his buggy, wagon or hack and opened the gates. Mr. Ladd owned and operated the Wellington LEADER for eight years. He has been in the newspaper or printing business all his life.

The history of THE NEWS up to 1926 was the history of the Smith family, with Joe Jr., assisting his father in the later years of that ownership. In 1926, David M. Warren of the Nunn-Warren Publishing company changed the weekly to twice-a-week publication, then on March 10 it became a daily.

Thus for a quarter of a century has THE NEWS, the original local newspaper, been serving this community.

Mrs. Turman Hurt In Gas Explosion

MRS. E. R. TURMAN 902 East Francis street, was burned about the limbs when a tub of gasoline in which she was cleaning clothes exploded at noon today.

The tub was on a back porch and as no fire was near, Mrs. Turman does not know how the gasoline exploded.

The porch blazed following the explosion and the fire department was called. The property loss was estimated at $25.

Mrs. Turman was given medical treatment following the explosion, and this afternoon was resting at her home.

FORMER BROADWAY HIT WILL BE PRESENTED SOON BY LITTLE THEATER PLAYERS OF PAMPA

Tickets for "Adam and Eva," three act comedy-drama, went on sale Wednesday at the De Luxe Cleaners and by last night 100 tickets had been sold, according to Morris Johnson, business manager of the play. Reserved seats are 50 cents each. Location of the seats may be seen on a huge piece of cardboard at the Cleaning office. The play will be presented April 19, at the city auditorium.

Mrs. H. H. Hicks is director of the play. Members of the cast are as follows: Adam Smith, Julian Barrett; James King, I. E. Freeman; Julie de Witt, Mrs. E. M. Conley; Clinton de Witt, Jack Kretzinger; Aunt Abby Rocker, Arlene O'Keefe; Eva, Mrs. Don Conley; Horace Pilgram, Dick Hughes; Corintha, Mrs. James Todd Jr.; Lond Andrew Gordon, Jack Foster.

Mr. Freeman, Mr. Barrett and Mrs. Don Conley have the leading roles in the play. Mr. Freeman is a tired business man who becomes tired of the spendthrift habits of his family and his in-laws. He goes off on a long jaunt on doctor's orders and leaves Mr. Barrett in charge, and orders his family to take orders from the new papa. Of course, Adam (Mr. Barrett) and Eva (Mrs. Conley), the independent and untamed daughter fall in love, but it takes a number of clever circumstances to bring their lips together. The play was a Broadway hit three years ago.

BISHOP HERE TO AID GRAND JURY'S PROBE

STATE OFFICIAL WILL DEVOTE TIME TO PROJECT

ARGUMENT IS INVOLVED

GRAVEL SETTLEMENT IS TO BE CLEARED UP SOON

H. D. Bishop, assistant attorney general of Texas, arrived here yesterday to assist the grand jury in investigating asserted irregularities in connection with the graveling of roads in precinct No. 2.

Mr. Bishop came in response to request made to Attorney General James V. Allred by the grand jury. It is understood.

It was made plain that District Attorney Raymond Allred and County Attorney Sherman White had given capable assistance, but that on account of a continuous demand for the two local officials to investigate criminal activities in Gray county, the grand jury needed the services of an attorney who could give his entire time to the investigation.

The jury has been questioning witnesses in connection with charges made in January 1931 in 114th district court by J. L. Noel that the county commissioners had no right to let a gravel contract over $500 without competitive bidding.

Mr. Noel, a member of the present grand jury, charged in a petition for a writ of injunction to restrain the county treasurer from paying Tom Jackson a gravel bill in the amount of $3,840, that the court paid too much for the gravel, that the gravel was of inferior quality, and questioned the amount of gravel placed on the road.

The court was embroiled in another argument recently over the payment of a gravel bill in the amount of approximately $2,900. It was claimed again that the court had no authority to let a contract for over $500. The commissioners refused to pay the bill in lump sum to Mr. Jackson, but agreed to pay individual bills when submitted by workmen on the job. When finally paid, the bills totaled $500 more than the original bill.

Commissioner Lewis O. Cox of this precinct contended that it was not necessary to advertise for bids to let contracts of over $500, and cited a decision of the court of civil appeals, which gave him authority to let the contract.

HEARING IS POSTPONED
AUSTIN, April 5 (AP)—The Texas Railroad commission today postponed a hearing on application of Hagy, Harrington, and Marsh of Amarillo to extract gasoline from gas and use the residue in the manufacture of carbon black. The applicants claimed they at present do not have a market for gas from their wells in Carson and Moore counties and alleged that pipeline companies had refused to purchase it. The hearing may be held tomorrow.

PAID THE FIDDLER
RAYMONDVILLE, April 6 (AP)—While John Merriman fiddled, four companions in the Wilacy county jail dug their way through the walls of the jail today. The five prisoners escaped on a ladder made from blankets in the cell they occupied.

RELATIVES CHARGED
CROCKETT, April 6 (AP)—Five jurors, relatives of the woman who said Dave Tillis, 52, negro, insulted her, have been accused of participation in the lynching of Tillis Friday night.

Satterwhite Has Announced for Rail Commission

AUSTIN, April 6 (AP)—Lee Satterwhite of Odessa, veteran Texas legislator and a former speaker of the state house of representatives, announced his candidacy for railroad commissioner today.

The place sought by Satterwhite is now filled by C. V. Terrell, who is chairman of the commission. Terrell is asking re-election and there are several other candidates.

Scout Course Is To Start Monday

The Boy Scout leadership training course will officially open at 8 o'clock Monday night in the basement of the First Methodist church. John B. Hessey is chairman of the committee in charge.

Twenty-five local men met last night and discussed the course. The men will be divided into patrols and will study scouting from every angle.

MURDERER OF TWO PERSONS

The man in overalls is Barney Blackshear, who confessed to killing an aged well digger, George Brimberry, and his wife, with a flat iron and robbing them of $17. At the left of the photo is Deputy Sheriff Jim Brandford. Blackshear, aged 23, is to go to trial April 7 at Tyler for the murders, which occurred near Arp, Texas.

ATTORNEY GENERAL ALLRED COMES OUT FOR RE-ELECTION

Official Disclaims Intention Of Seeking To Become Governor of Texas.

AUSTIN, April 6 (AP)—Attorney General James V. Allred announced today he would be a candidate for re-election to his present office.

"I have not been, am not now, and will not be a candidate for governor," Allred stated.

Politicians speculating on probable entrants in the governor's race had mentioned Allred as a possible candidate.

"I have been too busy trying to interpret and enforce the law to even think of politics," Allred said in a prepared statement.

He said he regretted speculation had drawn his name into the governor's race, and added:

"While it is a compliment to be mentioned for that high honor, I feel that it is my duty to continue to apply myself faithfully to the interests of the people in the attorney general's office."

WOMEN ARE RETAINED
MOUNT IDA, Ark., April 6 (AP)—The so-called "petticoat government" here has been retained in office for another term of two years. The women's ticket of candidates, head by Mrs. J. E. McClean, mayor for the past two years, won in yesterday's election over an all-male slate. Mount Ida is a town of 600 population.

RELATIVES CHARGED
CROCKETT, April 6 (AP)—Five jurors, relatives of the woman who said Dave Tillis, 52, negro, insulted her, have been accused of participation in the lynching of Tillis Friday night.

Darrow in Many Clashes

Prejudice Flares Up in the Mixed Race Panel Being Examined.

HONOLULU, April 6 (AP)—Court room clashes made the guilt or innocence of Joseph Kahahawai in an assault on Mrs. Thomas H. Massie the burning question as selection of jurors proceeded today for the murder trial of Mrs. Granville Porteus and three navy men.

Opposing counsel disputed yesterday for the second time over whether the jury should be permitted to consider the fact the young Hawaiian awaiting a new hearing after a mistrial when he was kidnapping and slaying last Jan. 8.

Mrs. Porteus, her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N., and the two naval enlisted men listed the two ways as Barry S. Ulrich, assistant prosecutor, demanded of a prospective juror:

"Will you find the defendants guilty whether you believe they had the right to what they did or not?" Instantly the elderly Clarence Darrow of Chicago, leader of the defense, was on his feet. "That isn't the law," he said.

CONVICTION IN MURDER TRIAL HANDED BYBEE

BRECKENRIDGE SLAYING OF DEPUTY SHERIFF CHARGED

KILLING IN DANCE HALL

DEFENDANT UNDER 20-YEAR SENTENCE IN ALBANY

BRECKENRIDGE, April 6 (AP)—William H. Bybee, 26, of Pampa, was found guilty of murdering Deputy Constable Ollie Parks by a 51st district court jury reporting here this morning and his punishment fixed at life in the penitentiary. The trial was concluded last night.

Parks was shot to death at a dance hall near here the night of March 16, when he attempted to arrest several men, one of whom had dropped a pistol on the floor.

Bybee was given a 20-year sentence in Albany on March 25 for holding up a filling station operator.

Electric Lighting and Printing Are Rotary Subjects

Jack Cunningham, manager of the Southwest Public Service company, told of the production and distribution of electric light and power to members of the Rotary club at its regular luncheon today. He explained the necessity of producing and at the same time distributing the company's product.

He told of the big financial investment necessary in plants, lines and equipment for a company to properly serve all its customers at the time they needed service.

Bob Brashears told the club of the history of printing and traced the development from the first forms to the present highly organized personnel and latest equipment used in the production of a newspaper.

Visitors today were E. H. Hamlett, Clyde Gold, R. G. McKinney of Bartlesville, and Rotarian S. F. Sullenburger of Amarillo.

A number of Rotarians will go to Borger Tuesday for the third inter-city meeting of the year.

STERLING IN ANNOUNCEMENT

LAREDO, April 6 (AP)—Governor R. S. Sterling in an address last night before the fifth district convention of the Texas Federation of Women's club announced the candidacy of Mrs. Alex Adams of San Antonio for congressman-at-large on the democratic ticket.

Mrs. Adams was president of the fifth district federation. Sterling urged women of the organization to support Mrs. Adams.

Gib Jackson of Amarillo visited Coach Odus Mitchell yesterday.

C. L. Etteson of Fort Worth is visiting in Pampa for a few days.

An outspoken expression of a Hawaiian's feeling toward the defendants shocked the court room into speechless surprise for a moment.

William Huihui, drawn as a juror, was questioned closely by Darrow on whether he had ever expressed an opinion of the defendants. Finally Huihui blurted out defiantly:

"I said they ought to be shot."

MR. MENCKEN HAS AN IDEA

Henry Mencken, Baltimore publicist and editor of the American Mercury magazine, editorially urges the ride of farmers from the country as a panacea for most of our ills. Says Mr. Mencken:

"Getting rid of farmers would not only reduce the cost of living at least half, it would also improve the politics of the country, and have a good effect upon religion. As things stand, the farmer is always on the verge of bankruptcy, and hates everyone who is having a better time.

"Thus I look forward to their ruin with agreeable sentiments. It will make living cheaper in the United States, and very much pleasanter. This country has been run from the farms long enough.

"He'd be better off and we'll be better off when the mortgage sharks rid him of his farm at last, and he goes to work as a wage slave for his betters; that is for men of normal intelligence. Food will be much cheaper and more abundant.

"He is so stupid that he not only expects such operations to pay their way, but even to yield a profit. He deserves no such profit, whether from the poor consumer or from the public till. If the American farmer got but one meal a day and had to go naked he would still be grossly overpaid.

"It is as silly for farmers to own their farms as it would be for sailors to own their ships. Both belong to the lowest grade of labor, and are too stupid to be trusted with the care of valuable property and production of useful goods."

To this the Denison Daily HERALD answers with a scorching editorial accusing Mr. Mencken of probably "being the spokesman of a certain type of capitalist who would like to freeze out all individual endeavor in this country." Writes the editor of this alert North Texas daily:

The irrepressible Henry Mencken, who tries to be an imitator of George Bernard Shaw, has recently burst forth with a new tirade against the American farmer. The asininity of most of the writings of this elementary scribbler prevent them being taken seriously, hence the farmer will lose no sleep because the Baltimore publicist is out to get his scalp. Mencken has thrown rockets at everything and everybody from Almighty God to Rotary clubs, and none of them seem to have dissolved in deference to his fulminations.

Henry doesn't say who would grow the food for him and his ilk if the farmers were abolished. Perhaps those New York farmers could produce it out of books. It is all very easy to advocate the enslavement of farmers, sitting in a comfortable office in an Eastern city, but producing his own sustenance would not be so easy.

And the Round Rock LEADER concludes with: "Well, when you farmers have been rid of your farms and have gone to work them as wage slaves for your 'betters,' we can think of but one place where Editor Mencken might fit in the scheme, and that is to furnish hot air for the incubation of buzzard eggs."

W. T. C. C. COMMITTEE DRAWS FIRE

There is a growing wave of protest from ex-service men and from members of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce over the stand of the tax and expenditures committee of the organization on the full payment of the adjusted compensation certificates.

Recently posts in the Stamford territory held a meeting at Stamford, the town that is famous as the one-time holdout of Homer D. Wade and as the headquarters of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Former service men are asking the pointed questions:

OUT OUR WAY..... By WILLIAMS

NO FOOL LIKE AN OLD FOOL. © 1932 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

"Why single out the full payment of the adjusted compensation certificates? Why not the federal reconstruction corporation, which is making, and is in the process of making even greater loans to the railroads and industry in the East? Were not the railroads well taken care of for their use during the war? Why should the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, mouthpiece of the agricultural Southwest, follow the lead and the dictates of the United States Chamber of Commerce which is notable in its stand on economic topics counter to the interests of this territory?"

They point out that none of the deficit of the federal government has been occasioned by the payment of the first half of the adjusted compensation. Two funds have been utilized in making these loans. Eight hundred forty million dollars have been loaned from the adjusted compensation certificates fund, which is a reserve built up over a period of years from annual appropriations by congress. The remainder has been loaned from their government life insurance fund, which was created by insurance premiums paid by veterans on their government life insurance. Not one penny has been loaned by the treasury of the United States on these certificates.

The adjusted compensation certificates have been issued as evidence of a debt which has been recognized by the United States, it is pointed out by friends of the veterans who have been constant since the days when they were loudly proclaiming their virtues in "Minute Men" speeches. The interest rate being paid now by veterans is a money-making proposition for the government, and many a veteran in straightened circumstances will have his certificate eaten up by the interest charge. Veterans' organizations of Texas feel that the West Texas Chamber of Commerce committee's stand is untenable and is not the opinion of the rank and file of the organization and that opinion is strongly reflected elsewhere.—Plainview HERALD.

Stolen Loot Is Burned in Crash

ESTELLINE, April 6 (AP)—Burglars who broke into a ladies' ready-to-wear store here last night and escaped with $1,000 worth of merchandise drove their car into a bridge abutment near the city and the car and merchandise burned.

Officers were on the trail of the burglars at the time of the crash. A posse gave chase after several shots fired by R. R. Eddleman, night watchman, failed to hold the men as the drove away from the store.

County and city officers and local citizens were searching the canyons near the city today.

Woman Welfare Worker Succumbs

PHILADELPHIA, April 6 (AP)—Mrs. J. Willis Martin, 68, nationally-known political and welfare worker, died last night.

She was the first Pennsylvania woman delegate to a republican national convention—the Cleveland convention of 1924; the first woman to speak, as chairman of a major committee, from a republican national convention platform and to present a major committee's report; the first woman commissioner of the Pennsylvania state department of welfare; and the first woman ever to address the Pennsylvania bar association.

of Canadian, examine it for Lindbergh baby.

"I dreamed he was seven miles out of some town between Canadian and Waynoka. I thought it was Waynoka, but it could have been any other. It was a shack in sight of a large culvert under the railroad on a small creek in a V-shaped canyon. The dream may not mean anything and again it might. I won five World Series games on a dream in 1930."

There is a cake house on a ranch near Canadian that is located in a place answering this description. However, it is not in sight of the railroad, but within a short distance of the right-of-way.

Maybe So
 The Donley County LEADER says, "We can profit more from observing the mistakes of so-called progressives than from imitating their actions and ideas." Yeah, but it's hard on the progressives, who, however, like the publicity they get out of it.

An Explanation
 Husband-calling contests are common enough, but you never hear of wife-calling. . . Such things are done by husbands, but you would need an amplifier to hear the faissetto: "Oh, Wifie, de-ar!"

HELD IN LOTTERY

BROWNSVILLE, April 6 (AP)—Will Horwitz of Houston, accused of conspiracy to violate the federal lottery laws in connection with his operation of radio station XED at Reynosa, Mexico, was released today on $10,000 bond.

His wife, charged with the same offense, was liberated under $5,000 bond. Three other defendants in the case, Milton Hall, Manuel D. Gonzales and Manuel C. Guerra, failed to make the $5,000 bonds set for them. Hall managed the radio station.

HAPPY AGAIN

For awhile the future looked dark for this little family. But now Mrs. Luis Martinez—together with her 15-month-old son Joseph—won't have to stay behind when her husband returns to Spain under pressure from Uncle Sam. When Martinez' deportation was ordered and it appeared that he would have to leave the country alone, Burlington, N. J., women intervened and raised enough money to pay the trans-Atlantic fare of the mother and child (shown here).

BODY IS RECOVERED
 PALESTINE, April 6 (AP)—The body of Dan McLean, 31, state game warden who was drowned in the Trinity river west of Palestine last Saturday, was recovered today. Funeral services were planned at Crockett.

MANGER FORM SURVIVES
 OKLAHOMA CITY, April 6 (AP)—Survival of the city manager form of government against organized opposition in three cities—Muskogee, Shartles and El Reno—and Herman F. Newblock's return to the Tulsa mayoralty were high points of yesterday's municipal elections in Oklahoma.

A talk on "The Child in the Home" given by Mrs. E. Bass Clay at a recent council meeting was read by Mrs. J. C. Browning, and other talks included the following: The home as a health center, Miss Jimma Searcy; the home as a play center, Mrs. C. Puckett; the home as a work center, Mrs. Tom Alford; the home as a social center, Mrs. A. C. Jones.

During the business session it was decided that about two cars of mothers would be present both Thursday and Friday for the district Parent-Teacher association meeting in Panhandle. Mrs. B. T. Hargis will be delegate to the convention, and Mrs. Browning, president, will attend and will read her report.

ROASTING AT FIREPLACE IS MUCH ENJOYED

GAMES AND CONTEST HOLD INTEREST OF GROUP

Entertainments in which entire families may participate are growing in popularity among Pampans, and one of the most successful of these gatherings was the one held in the H. H. Isbell home last evening when members of the Civic Culture club entertained their husbands and children.

The crowd gathered at 7:30 o'clock and spent the early part of the evening roasting wieners and marshmallows over the fireplace. These items then were served with potato chips, pickles, buns, and black coffee.

Lively games and contests were enjoyed, after which Frances and Walter Jean Workman entertained with readings, and Miss Kathryn Vincent favored the group with dance numbers.

Ice cream and cake were served and later the Virginia reel was danced. The following attended: Mr. and Mrs. Joe Berry and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Fahy, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. TAX ON COSMETICS NO BOTHER TO MRS. GARNER—BILL $1.75

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Mrs. John N. Garner, wife of the speaker of the house, is not bothering much about the proposed 10 per cent tax on cosmetics which the house already has voted.

Her bill for "beautifying" in the last year amounts to just $1.75. A year ago last October she spent $1.00 for a jar of face cream. Later she bought a rouge compact for 50 cents and then spent 25 cents for a mill—another cake of rouge to replace the old one. She uses very little powder, and her old box is still lasting her.

"I think it's all right for women to use cosmetics," she says, "but it takes a lot of patience and somehow I just can't spend so much time fixing my face. Some of the congressmen's wives, discussing the proposed tax, said it would not affect them much, then added: 'But oh, our daughters!'"

Neither does the proposed jewelry tax of 10 per cent mar the serenity of the speaker's wife. She wears very little—only a necklace of an old brooch of blue stones which she has had a long time.

"And they're not luxuries—I really need them," she explains. As for furs, on which a 10 per cent tax also is proposed, Mrs. Garner has not much patience with women who parade about in mid-summer with heavy furs slung across their shoulders.

"They ought to be taxed," she says, "such foolishness! Putting on thin dresses and then putting heavy, hot 2000 furs over them."

Wearing her blue brooch and just a touch of her 25-cent rouge on her cheeks, Mrs. Garner sat quietly on a step in the house gallery and for the second time in her life heard her husband make a speech.

MRS. JOHN GARNER, and thinks, she says.

Mrs. Garner's cheery office is a refuge for the stocky, white-haired Texan who is prominently mentioned as a possible democratic presidential nominee. He goes there every morning to read the papers and rest before going to his own office on the floor above.

Mrs. Garner did try having some plants to "make the place more homelike"—but she had to move them out to make room for the flood of mail telling her husband how to balance the budget. One from an ex-janitor was 30 pages long.

RACING WORLD MOURNING PHAR LAP, WONDER OF TRACKS

COLIC BRINGS END TO GREAT RED GELDING

HEAVY GUARD FAILS TO PREVENT HIS PASSING

BY RUSSELL J. NEWLAND
MENLO PARK, CAL., Apr. 6 (AP)—Phar Lap is dead.

All the world of turf and thoroughbred mourned today the passing of Australia's wonder horse—whose silks have been lowered in the final chapter of a career as glamorous as any in the history of racing.

Word of his death from colic came late yesterday as suddenly as the lightning, from which he drew his name in Benegalase, sears the sky.

Those who find their pleasure, or their pay, on the track were too stunned at first to believe such reports. Phar Lap dead! It seemed impossible.

Only a little more than two weeks ago this great red gelding had signaled his North American invulnerability by winning the rich Agua Caliente, Mex. handicap, a matter of $50,000.

Rivals Were Waiting
His return trip by motor car up the coast was uneventful. He was quartered contentedly in private stables here, awaiting a special race at Tanforan track. It was to be a prelude to an attack on one of the strongholds of racing in this country, Chicago. There some of America's finest bits of horseflesh, such as Twenty Grand and Mate, were waiting to match drives with the "Red Terror From Down Under."

An autopsy showed the great thoroughbred died from the effects of green feed nibbled from a California field, after he had withstood the rigors of a 10,000-mile sea voyage across the Pacific.

Guarded by attendants who watched his every movement by day and slept near him at night, the big horse was believed to have picked up a mouthful of green food while exercising in a field adjacent to his quarters.

Worth Half Million
Veterinarians think a bit of fox-tail, or alfalfa or barley, sodden with dew, induced the colic. The horse was valued at $500,000 by J. J. Davis of San Francisco, joint owner with Harry Telford of Australia of the mount.

Owner Davis, on business in Los Angeles, arrived last night by airplane. He was too broken-up to make a statement.

Phar Lap started fifty-one times and won thirty-seven races. Fourteen of these victories were consecutive. He was the son of Night Raid, imported English horse, out of Entreaty, a New Zealand mare.

CHICAGO, April 6 (AP)—Phar Lap, the departed thoroughbred from Down Under, will be the mythical horse for at least the next 20 years, Col. Matt Winn, picturesque racing leader, said today.

"Anything that another horse accomplishes during the next 20 years will always bring up the question—could he have beaten Phar Lap?" Col. Winn predicted. "He had caught the public fancy. His performances were honest, scandal had never touched him or his owners. He will be known as the mythical horse of the turf."

MALONE IS PEACEFUL

DALLAS, April 6 (AP)—So far big Pat Malone has kept his word about reforming. Because of his escapades and assault on two Chicago newspapermen last fall, Malone was slated for a new uniform but was given a chance to make good all over again with the Cubs. He was one of the first Cubs to report for spring training and has been dazzling the opposition all spring with his fast ball.

TOO MANY STRAYS

RICHMOND, Va., April 6 (AP)—The negro lad who draws down about four-bits a day for patrolling the James river in a rowboat and reclaiming stray balls is of the opinion that "those thar Braves can shore wallop the old ball." He threw up his job after the third ball had gone into the river.

KILLEFER SAYS END OF BONUS SYSTEM WILL PROVE AID TO BROWNS' TEAM PLAY

With no prospect of players disrupting team play by working for individual bonuses, Manager Bill Killefer is optimistic over the chances of the St. Louis Browns for the 1932 pennant chase. In training games in the South, Killefer is trying to unearth another winning hurler. Three of the likeliest prospects are pictured here with the manager.

BY WILLIAM KILLEFER

(Manager, St. Louis Browns)

ST. LOUIS, (AP)—Getting rid of the bonus system, I am certain, not only will help the Browns in general but will be a boon to each individual player.

In one or two exceptional cases on a ball club, a bonus may be a good thing, but to adopt the plan generally I am convinced is a detriment to smooth team play.

The Browns had a pretty fair pitching staff last year, but one good man was needed to work with Blaholder, Coffman, Gray and Stewart. I hope we have him this year in young Wallace Hebert. He appears certain to help us a lot. Coffman figures to get off to a better start this year and turn in more victories. He has the stuff. Of course, I am grooming Bob Cooney and Americo Polli in our training in the south and they may help the club. Cooney won 17 for Wichita Falls last year and Polli accounted for 21 victories with Milwaukee. Good records, both of them.

I wish we had another good left-handed hitter for outfield duty. The club would be fixed out there then. The present outfield shapes up as Goslin, Schulte and Kress. Kress will be started in right field, and I hope to keep him at that post. He played everywhere last season except in the box. It was pretty tough, but I had to keep shifting him to put up the stoutest front possible. Levey will go in again at short, and I feel sure he will be a better boy and therefore a better ball player this year. He should be a corking shortstop. Storti will start at third, and with a season's experience should show improvement. Burns will get the call at first and I count on him to have a good year. Last season both Burns and Storti were light hitters. If they improve we will go places. In general, I feel pretty good over my pitching and catching staffs and the outfield. The chief worries are caused by the infield and reserves. The game will probably be the last of the spring season. The boys have been working hard for more than two months.

SCHNEIDER HOTEL BOWLERS TOP LEAGUE DURING SEASON

Pin Aggregation Finishes With Average of .679; Clauson Motor Second.

The Schneider hotel bowling team finished the league season here with 55 wins and 26 losses for an average of .679. Clauson Motor was in second place with 43 wins and 38 losses. Peake and Landry's entry took third money with 39 wins and 42 losses. The Country club quintet finished in last place with 25 wins and 56 defeats.

The Schneider hotel team also won the high three-game score prize with a total of 2,879 pins. The team rolled high single game during the season by knocking down 1,012 pins.

Bill Holmes of the Schneidermen rolled high three games with a total of 669 pins. Karl Cullum of the same five had high single game of 224 pins.

Holmes, the veteran, rolled 68 games during the league season and tumbled 12,183 pins for an average of 179.16 pins a game. Cullum was second in average, having rolled 10 games more than Holmes and topped 13,895 pins for an average of 178.14 pins. Bill Thompson of Peake and Landry took third honors rolling 43 games for 7,675 pins or an average of 177.09 pins.

PIRATES VS. CUBS

DALLAS, April 6 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs were scheduled to play an exhibition here today. Sweeney for Pittsburgh and Bush for Chicago were announced as the probable starting pitchers. The Dallas Steers, who have won six consecutive exhibition games, five of them against Class AA competition, were scheduled for an airy workout today. Then watch the Pirates and Cubs play.

BUFFS WILL PLAY

HOUSTON, April 6 (AP)—The Buffs meet the Houston Lighting and Power team tonight in an exhibition game and probably will use Judd, Heusser and Breeden. The line-up will be the same that will start the Texas league race.

Maple Leafs Are Better This Year

NEW YORK, April 6 (AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs, the "almost team" of the National Hockey League for the past two or three seasons, are off to a flying start on the final lap of their race for the Stanley cup, a trophy they never have succeeded in winning.

The Leafs began their first final series for the emblem of world supremacy in professional hockey by turning back the New York Rangers, 6 to 4, last night in the last and best of the season's hockey games at Madison Square Garden.

The Rangers now must finish the series of the best three out of five games on foreign ice where, according to the accepted ideas of the game, they can not be expected to do as well as at home.

They will play at Boston Thursday then move to Toronto for the third game Saturday and as many more games are needed to decide the 1932 world's championships.

GIVEN A SCARE

SAN ANTONIO, April 6 (AP)—Almost upset by the Ninth Infantry army team in an exhibition game yesterday, the San Antonio Indians backed down to hard work without a game scheduled today seeking to smooth their teamwork and improve their hitting. They beat the Soldiers, 7 to 6, thanks to a double steal by John Brewer and Leo Najco.

YOUNGSTERS HURT

CINCINNATI, O., April 6 (AP)—Two of the most promising younger members of the New York Yankee pitchers are on the injured list. Paul Andrews is under treatment for an infected foot, while Johnny Murphy, the former Fordham star, is suffering from an injury to the index finger of his left hand. Murphy forgot to remove the finger before he closed a taxi-cab door.

ST. PAUL NEXE

FORT WORTH, April 6 (AP)—Fort Worth was scheduled to play St. Paul today. Ed Stoner was slated to start in the box for the Cats and work seven innings. White probably will finish.

Harris Believes He's Modern Job

KANSAS CITY, April 6 (AP)—Manager Stanley R. Harris of the Detroit Tigers is beginning to suspect he is the American league reincarnation of Job, who also had lots of trouble.

Pitcher Earl Whitehill has a sore leg, Charlie Gehringer has twinges in his throwing arm, although it is improving. Pitcher George Uhle has a strained back muscle. Bill Rhel has a badly swollen finger.

SCHOOL BOYS CRIPPLED FOR SPRING TILT

HARVESTERS AND EXES TO MEET TOMORROW ON GRIDIRON

It will be a crippled team of Harvesters that faces the ex-Harvesters on Harvesters field at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Rufus Walker is hobbling around in a sprained ankle. Jack Benton has a torn knee and Gerdis Schmidt has a bad cold. Joe Kahl has finally decided that he will not wear the green and gold next year, so he will not be used.

Cochs Odus Mitchell said yesterday afternoon that he had no idea who would start in any position. It is known, however, that Hoot Fullington will be sent to center and Clovis Green will take a tackle job. Gerdis Schmidt will also be sent into the line from the backfield, where he has been practicing.

Wayne Kelley will go to a backfield position from end and Tuke Sausbury will be toting the ball. Captain Jim Pool will be the big fullback in the argument. Other backfield material available will be Sullins, Turner, Hamilton, Robinson, Owens, Roberts, Adair, and maybe one or two others. Ledrick is out of the city.

The ex-Harvesters will probably line up with Albert Lard, Don Sausbury, Dick Benton, and Ray Chastain in the back field. Linemen available will be Mullin, Pafford, Reno, Seitz, Ayres, Groom and others. The game will probably be the last of the spring season. The boys have been working hard for more than two months.

Great Horses to Race Next July

CHICAGO, April 6 (AP)—Top Flight and all her great rivals for the three-year-old championship of the American turf world have been nominated for the rich $70,000 Arlington classic next July.

The richest stake race in the world for three-year-olds has lured 113 of America's finest thoroughbreds to the test over a mile and one-quarter. Additional nominations were expected as the closing date for nominations is June 1.

Tick On, Burning Blaze, On Post, Byro, Burg King, Liberty Limited, Evening, Sweeping Light, Air Pilot, and Brother Joe were among those named, composing the best all-around field named in the big event.

PARTING WITH 'FARM'

MACON, Ga., April 6 (AP)—The pruning knife hung over the Brooklyn Dodgers today as they prepared to part company with their "farm" team, Hartford of the Eastern league. Macon, which formerly housed a Brooklyn farm and now is Hartford's training ground, is the traditional place at which few rookies are lopped off the list.

Besides wearing modernized trench helmets, Japanese sentries at exposed posts wear a new type of body armor which affords additional protection from waist to neck.

They will play at Boston Thursday then move to Toronto for the third game Saturday and as many more games are needed to decide the 1932 world's championships.

TIED IN SERIES

PHILADELPHIA, April 6 (AP)—Tied for the mythical "city championship," the Athletics and the Phillies resume their series today. The Mackmen defeated Princeton, 3 to 2 yesterday after the collegiates had out-hit them to 10 to 7. The Reading team was defeated by the Phillies 5 to 2.

SPUDDERS ARE FINALLY LICKED

Des Moines of the Western League Defeats Wichita Falls by 9-7 Score.

What, we asked, has been baseball's greatest outfield trio? Perhaps you would not agree with William Henry (Bill) Dinneen of Syracuse, N. Y., on this subject but at least he has thoroughly good grounds for any opinion he cares to utter about baseball.

Way back in baseball's button shoes days, Bill was the ace right-hander of the Boston Red Sox staff. Connie Mack once told me that Bill ranked among the great pitchers of any day, any era. He started with the Boston Braves in 1901, reached his greatest heights with the Red Sox from 1902 through 1906, and wound up his career with three years on the Browns' lot in St. Louis.

For years now Bill has been calling him in the American league. He has seen great ball players come and go. As well as anyone, then, Bill has a right to name the best he has seen. They were, he says:

"Sabe Ruth, Earle Combs, Bob Meusel."

Fals Had To Go
There was probably a wrench as Bill, still as husky and as broad-shouldered as when he burned them down the alley for the Red Sox passed up a great outfield from the town and club of his greatest fame.

"A lot of folks say," Bill admits "that there never was an outfield to beat this Speaker, Duffy Lewis and Harry Hooper in the days when the Red Sox were world champions and there's no arguing them down. They were a magnificent trio, perfectly matched, hitters, infielder, throwers, smart."

"But for my personal ball club give me the Ruth, the Combs, the Meusel of 1926, 1927, 1928, when the Yankees were about as great a team as any I ever saw."

"They could out-hit Speaker, Lewis and Hooper and they were three great ball hawks. If there was any weakness in the three it was Combs' throwing arm, never very powerful. But for the long throws he had on either side of him Ruth, from deep right field, with a magnificent peg, and Meusel, from left, with an arm that was as strong and as accurate as any I ever saw."

Meusel looked lazy out there sometimes but that was his style. He roamed around with so little effort that it looked as though he wasn't trying. There weren't many balls that got away from him, though. Sometimes he dropped what looked like an easy chance. No other left fielder in the league would have been near enough to get his hands on it."

Two Still Around
Ruth and Combs still are good enough to be paid close to $100,000 together, but that was his style. He roamed around with so little effort that it looked as though he wasn't trying. There weren't many balls that got away from him, though. Sometimes he dropped what looked like an easy chance. No other left fielder in the league would have been near enough to get his hands on it."

Against this squad Canada will throw a team composed of Dr. Jack Wright and Marcel Rainville of Montreal, Gilbert Nunn of Toronto and Walter Martin or Reginald Wright and Rainville, in all probability will play the singles and Rainville also may be asked to carry on in doubles as well, perhaps with Wright.

Of the American team only Vines has had no previous experience in Davis Cup play. Van Ryn and Allison formed the American Davis cup doubles combination in 1929 and 1930 and against Mexico in the American zone last year. Let's look Allison's place as Van Ryn's partner overseas. Shields played through the cup campaign of last year.

McGraw IS BUSY
DENVER, April 6 (AP)—Although his athletes have had nothing to do for a couple of days while making their way toward the east, Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants has not been entirely idle. He has decided on the personnel of his second team which will make the trip home via a route different from the regulars.

ANOTHER SLAUGHTER?

BERMINGHAM, Ala., April 6 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians resumed hostilities with the Birmingham Barons today after walloping the South-erners yesterday, 18 to 1. Twenty-one hits were garnered by the Tribesmen in the carnival, including two home runs, a triple, and a single by Earl Averill, and one homer, two triples and a single by Johnny Hodapp.

IN FINAL EXAMS
BEAUMONT, April 6 (AP)—Guy Green and Glen Gabler were slated to oppose each other in another nine-inning camp tilt today in the "final examinations" Skipper Del Baker is giving Beaumont's pitchers. Yesterday Lefty Sackett pitched the regulars to a 13 to 4 win over the Yannigans, slamming out a home run himself to help his cause along.

REDS VS. SENATORS

CINCINNATI, April 6 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds this afternoon will play the Columbus Senators of the American association. A two-day visit to Indianapolis will follow. Although both teams are 11 hits, the Reds lost to the New York Yankees yesterday 9 to 5.

WILLIE RITOLA SOON TO BEGIN TRACK WORK

RIVALRY WITH NURMI SPURRING HIM TO EFFORT

Associated Press Sports Editor
NEW YORK, April 6 (AP)—While his old rival and countryman, Paavo Nurmi, is busily engaged combatting charges of professionalism abroad, Willie Ritola plans to put aside his carpenter's tools shortly, climb aboard the Olympic bandwagon and start his "come-back" by participating in the classic Boston A. A. marathon April 19.

When he went to Florida this winter, Ritola decided to start training for a return to the foot races. The one-time Finnish-American iron-man, winner of Olympic championships in 1924 and 1928, had heard of Nurmi's plans to try the marathon. "Three years ago he hung up his spiked shoes and concentrated on the carpentry business, but this year presented too good an opportunity for a resumption of his old rivalry with Paavo to be overlooked."

So Willie, the iron-man with the black hair and the pounding stride, took to the road again to get himself back into running condition. He reports to his friend and adviser, Hugo Quinn, that he can now go the marathon route at a good pace. He is 36 years old, two years older than Nurmi, but barely approaching his prime, according to the Finnish distance running standards.

Another Finnish star coming back to the marathon was Willie Kyronen, who competed for Finland in the Olympics of 1912 and now runs a bakery shop in Brooklyn. According to Quinn, Kyronen, although over 40, is running better than ever. He not only will enter the Boston marathon again but hopes to earn place on the Finnish Olympic team once more.

THIS MOB IS MAD
ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 6 (AP)—Newfoundland was expected to resort to a national government today to placate the mob which yesterday smashed the windows of the House of Assembly and caused the precious flight into hiding of Premier Sir Richard Squires. Resignation of the Squires government, the promise of which halted the angry mob's into the harbor, had not been received at 10 a. m. today.

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

It is a sad but perhaps inevitable circumstance that the fifteenth anniversary of war with Germany should be a football of high politics.

The whole dispute is over the question of political responsibility. Who is to take the blame if help is refused, as it seems likely to be? Who will get the credit for fighting the soldiers' battles, and who the credit for fighting the taxpayers' battles?

There is more hesitation and straddling just now on this issue than any other before congress—even excepting prohibition. The country will see a pretty political mix-up before the records of debits and credits finally is handed over to the voters for audit at the polls.

PUTTING THE OCEAN TIDES TO WORK

MAIN DAM OF TIDE POWER PLANT

TIDE-PREDICTING MACHINE OF THE U.S. COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

A TIDE MILL

TIDAL BORE ADVANCING UP THE PETITCODIAC RIVER - IT IS A WAVE THREE FEET HIGH

Engineers Are Now Trying to Harness the Sea and Compel it to Make Electricity for Large-Scale Industrial Purposes—The Problem Likely to Be Solved—A Wave-Power Outfit That Works.

By RENE BACHE

IN the rise and fall of the tide are seen enormous quantities of water in motion, and moving water means energy. To find a means whereby some of that energy can be economically utilized is a problem now exercising the minds of engineers as never before.

As the stores of coal and oil provided by a host of nature approach exhaustion, the quest for other sources of energy will be more anxiously pursued, and it seems beyond a doubt that means for harnessing the tides on a considerable scale will be found.

But engineers today are of opinion that such utilization, on a large scale, will never be economically practicable save in a few localities where, as in Passamaquoddy Bay, on the coast of Maine, the range of the tides from low to high is exceptionally great.

The so-called basin system (which the new Passamaquoddy project illustrates) is the only one that permits large-scale installations. In such a case the tidal power available depends (1) on the area of the water space closer and (2) on the vertical range of the tide.

But the range is all-important, inasmuch as the power increases as the square of the range. As between two basins of equal size, one having a tidal range of five feet and the other of twenty feet, the power potential of the latter is sixteen times that of the former.

Human ingenuity has busied itself with the tide-harnessing problem for many hundreds of years. In England, and also in Brittany, tide mills for grinding grain were in use as early as the eleventh century. Formerly there were many such mills on the New England coast, in places where a tidal inlet could be conveniently dammed, with a pond to hold the water that flowed in on the rise of the tide.

Even at the present time a few of these mills are operated, for making flour and sawing lumber, the flow of water driving a large paddle-wheel, like that of an old-fashioned steamboat. Bevel gears at the ends of the wheel-shaft transmit the power, the pinions being free to slide up and down two vertical spindles, so that the wheel is automatically raised and lowered with the rise and fall of the tide.

Most ingenious is an arrangement by which the tides are made to operate the mill on the flow as well as during the ebb. The pond that serves as a reservoir is connected with the sea by two channels which cross each other, and the water-wheel is placed where they intersect. Hinged gates, closed and swung open by the tidal current, so govern the movement of the water that it always runs past the wheel in the same direction, whether the tide is rising or falling.

The first electric tide-power plant in the world is now in actual operation at East Saugus, near Lynn, Mass. It is equipped with turbines, driven by a flow of water which on the rise and ebb is controlled by a huge gate lifted and lowered by a hoist. The electricity it generates is produced without cost, save for the pay of a couple of men to look after the machinery. It is an outfit of very substantial size, undeniably efficient, yet not large enough to be of economic importance. The owners regard it as merely experimental, and have in view a similar installation on a much greater scale.

A French Project of Magnitude

The next few years will surely see the development of one or more really great tide-power projects. An enterprise of the kind contemplated by the French Government concerns a location near Brest, where there is an immense estuary in which the tides have a range of thirty-five feet. Another, in England has in view the damming of the Severn River, and the production of power comparable to Niagara. Much of this power is to be sent over wires to London, for industrial and other uses.

The tides in the estuary of the Severn have a range of over thirty feet. Water, admitted through the dam as the tide rises, will, in flowing out during the ebb, drive turbines and generate more than 500,000 horsepower. If that were all, the plant would be idle much of the time. But, during the ebb, surplus power will be used to

This is the more remarkable because tide prediction is largely an astronomical problem. The pull of the moon is the main cause of the tides, but the sun's attraction is also importantly concerned. In fact, the sun's pull is nearly half as strong as that of the lunar orb, the relation being as one to two and a quarter. Highest tides occur at the full of the moon, because then the sun and moon are pulling together.

To make tide predictions for any given locality, the machine must be adjusted with reference to known tidal conditions (ascertained by long-time observations) in that place, and also with due regard for the positions of sun and moon. Then it will grind out the advance information automatically. The data it furnishes, giving predictions for every day two years ahead, are printed in a book and annually issued for the use and benefit of mariners, fishermen and others who may be interested. Were it worth while for any reason, the machine could predict the tides with equal accuracy for the next thousand years.

Wave power, of course, should not be confused with tide power. The surface of the sea is never free from waves, and many attempts have been made to utilize their energy through the medium of wave motors. But they have nothing to do with the tides.

The only successful wave-power plant thus far developed has been established on the coast of Algeria by a French engineer named Pissinot. An elongated basin, running inland from the sea, is narrowed toward its bottom to augment the swell of the waves that enter through a passage in a sea-wall of solid masonry. Inside the basin, floats with lever arms, rising and falling, act upon ratcheted wheels and drive machinery.

OIL OPERATORS AND OFFICIAL AUTHORITIES IN AGREEMENT

AUSTIN, April 6 (AP)—Midcontinent oil operators and the state government administering the fields seemingly have reached a happy understanding that has patched differences and allayed confusion that agitated the petroleum industry many months.

Not only has one dollar oil come back, but there is a noticeable absence of bickering and undercurrent quarreling about field and state allowances. Take the case of the Texas railroad commission giving the oil states advisory committee more than it recently asked when it requested an allowance for Texas fields not to exceed 875,000 barrels daily.

After Texas finished prorating virtually all the oil-bearing areas in the state last week, the aggregate production maximum fixed added up 855,000 barrels, 20,000 barrels less than the oil states committee suggested.

Texas oil interests were not disturbed when the advisory committee suggested that Oklahoma and Kansas be permitted to raise their allowances, while Texas was asked to cut down.

The Oklahoma public service commission hiked the sooner state's allowable 12,500 barrels daily, fixing the maximum output at 452,153 barrels. This was still considerably under the 575,000 barrels suggested by the committee. Kansas' allowable was suggested as 320,000 barrels, and California's 475,000 barrels. The Kansas current allowable would be increased 10,000 barrels, and California's decreased 25,000 barrels.

The Texas railroad commission's hearing of operators in virtually all the fields created barely more than routine interest, whereas several months ago such an event had caused inter-field jealousies and contentions that required a week to consider.

The East Texas field continues under a maximum allowable of 325,000 barrels. That order will expire May 1. There has been agitation there for state permission to produce more oil. Under the commission's order the 325,000 top allowable is prorated to the producing wells, the latest count divided into the field allotment giving each well 71 barrels daily.

USE DOLL CLOTHES

KANSAS CITY, April 6 (AP)—Garments from a doll's wardrobe were used today to clothe the tiny form of Baby St. John, who weighed one pound at birth Monday night. The doll clothes were presented to the parents, Mr. and Mrs. William St. John, by a small girl who expressed the hope that "these might help." Clothing provided by the parents for the event proved much too large.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

Although mutton is very popular in England, comparatively few American families use it. Lamb is steadily gaining in favor, but is usually high in price and not practical for everyday family meals. Consequently, many home-makers limit their meats to beef, veal and pork and overlook a chance for a pleasant change.

Carefully prepared and cooked, mutton is a truly delicious dish, stronger flavored than lamb but tender and fine grained in texture. Since it is not expensive and it nourishing, it is excellent for family meals. The fat gives the rather strong flavor so many people dislike, so careful and thorough trimming is essential.

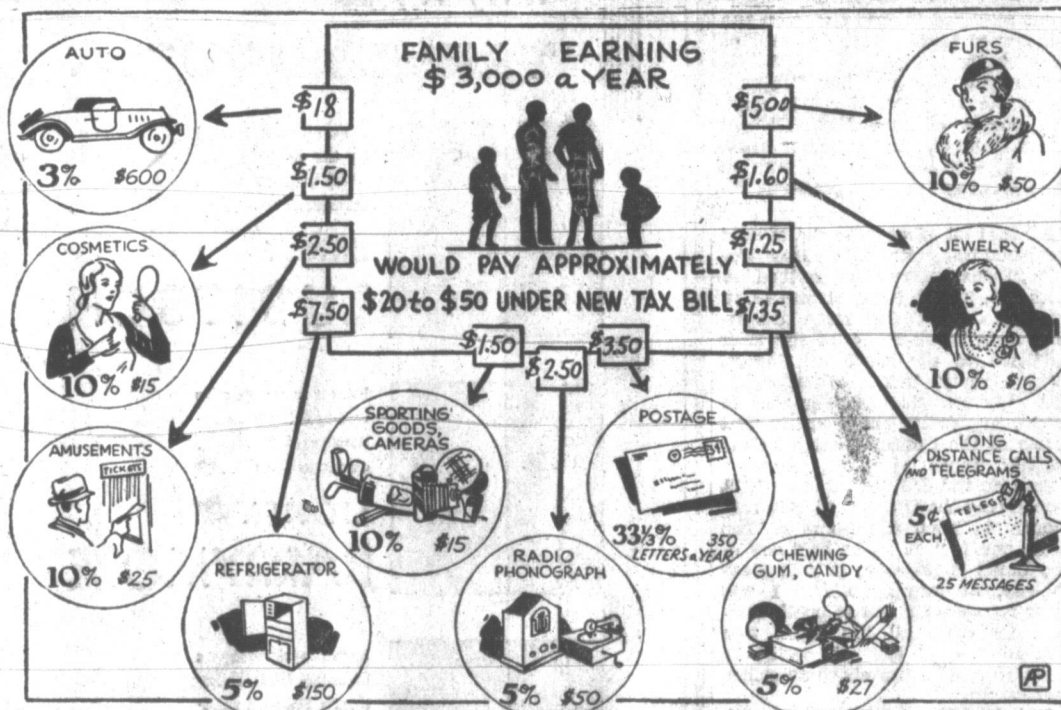

The cuts of mutton are the same as of lamb. The leg, the shoulder and the breast are all good for roasting or broiling. The chops are broiled, pan-fried or braised. The neck is excellent for making stews. The "saddle" of mutton is the entire loin cut off before the animal is divided, and of course is a large piece of meat. This cut is prepared at market with some of the bones removed and the flank ends rolled and either sewed or firmly skewered and tied in place. The kidneys are left clinging to the upper side and are roasted with the saddle.

How to Judge Mutton Mutton of good quality is fine grained and of bright pink color, deepening to red with the fat white, hard and flaky. Mutton is sure to be good if the outside skin comes off easily. Be sure to remove any pink skin or the outside skin before cooking, because both these skins contribute to the strong flavor of mutton. It should also be remembered that mutton absorbs odors more readily than most meats and should therefore be protected from them with special care. The dinner menu in tomorrow's balanced and nourishing. No out-of-season foods are suggested, since economy is an important feature.

HOW TAX BILL AFFECTS THE AMERICAN FAMILY

The chart above shows the semi-luxuries from which Uncle Sam hopes to get about $275,000,000 to help balance the next federal budget. The amounts spent represent, in general, what the average family with an income around $3,000 uses for these items. The family, of course, does not need to buy an auto, a refrigerator or a radio, but the remaining items ordinarily take about the amount listed. Depending on the purchases, the family earning $3,000 would pay from $20 to $50 in new taxes in a year.

Casserole of Mutton

One slice of mutton cut 1 inch thick, 1 cup white turnip balls or cubes, 1 cup potato marbles, 1 cup carrot marbles, 1 cup tiny onions, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons water, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 cups boiling water or stock, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon celery seed. Choose a slice of mutton from the upper part of the leg. Trim and pan broil until half done or broil six minutes under a flame, first on one side and then on the other. Put into a hot, well greased casserole and add vegetables. Stir butter and flour together until perfectly blended. Add with seasoning to stock or water and bring to the boiling point, stirring to make smooth. Pour over meat and vegetables in casserole, cover and cook in a moderate oven until vegetables are tender, about fifty minutes. Serve from casserole.

A TYPICAL SCENE IN THE EVERGLADES

A Pond 700 Square Miles in Area and Only Fifteen Feet Deep - Originally Surrounded by Morasses, the Latter Have Been Converted by Drainage Into Rich Farming Land - Wonderful Productiveness.

By RENE BACHE

THE most disastrous effects of the recent hurricane were felt in the region about Lake Okeechobee, where people perished by hundreds, most of them drowned.

That lake, in its way the most remarkable body of water in the world, with a surface area of 700 square miles, is nearly half as big as Lake Ontario. Yet its greatest depth does not exceed fifteen feet.

It is a vast pond, its bottom as smooth and flat as a billiard table. The deepest part of its bottom is exactly on a level with the ocean. In an age long past it was part of the sea, but was later cut off from the latter by an uplift of coral rock.

The lake, receiving the whole drainage of central Florida, mostly through the Kissimmee River, and its annual overflow during the rainy season creates the water wilderness to southward called the Everglades.

Much of the land surrounding the lake has been reclaimed by drainage canals and the building of dikes. One such canal, on the west side, carries surplus water into Lake Hitchcock, which empties by the Caloosahatchie River into the Gulf of Mexico.

Operations of this kind are being steadily continuing and new areas are brought under cultivation as fast as they are drained. It is the richest land in the world, a black muck containing 30 per cent of vegetable matter. Extensive tracts are devoted to raising early vegetables for the northern markets, and a profit of $1,000 in a season from an acre of tomatoes is not unusual.

Prosperity Before The Hurricane

All along the shores of the great pond are scattered small towns and thriving plantations. Freight boats on the lake carry the produce, which includes oranges, grapefruit, bananas, and alligator pears, to railroad shipping points, such transportation being facilitated by several canals, each provided with a lock. There is an active fishing industry, with five packing houses engaged chiefly in the preparation and shipment of fresh-water catfish to all parts of the United States.

The rich soil is cultivated by steam power. Ditches checker-board the land, which is broken for planting by steam plows drawn back and forth across the fertile acres by engines on board boats that puff slowly along the ditches on both sides of the fields. The cost of plowing by this means is about one-fourth that of mule power, and it is much easier. Mules, when thus employed, have to be shod with steel plates eighteen inches wide, to keep them from sinking into the soft muck.

In that region it is easy to dig a ditch or a canal. All that is necessary is to start a steam dredge at one end and go straight ahead. For rice-growing the areas surrounding the lake are particularly suitable, inasmuch as they can be easily overflowed when desired. Another important advantage enjoyed by the Okeechobee fruit-growers and market gardeners is that they are below the frost line.

Extending a distance of eighty miles southward from Lake Okeechobee, and with a width of fifty to sixty miles, are the Everglades - the name a corruption of River-glades, as they were originally called. They are an overflowed wilderness, covered by water from one to six feet deep, save for innumerable islands of all shapes and sizes.

The water is remarkably clear and pure, and over the bottom is spread a deposit of decayed vegetable matter representing the accumulation of ages. Beneath it are white sand and limestone rock. The water is in most places covered with a growth of tall "saw grass," which splits its straight and slender stems to a height of ten-feet above the surface.

Out of the muck of Okeechobee's shores have been dug many strange objects of human manufacture, some of them idols apparently, carved from ironwood. The latter is so dense and heavy that it will sink in water. Seemingly, burial in the muck preserved the objects, which are supposed to have been sculptured by the ancient Fish People, a vanished race far older than the Indians, and whose houses were built on platforms upheld by piles, as if on stilts, along the borders of the great pond.

The Seminole Indians Today the only human inhabi-maintaining a commerce with the West Indies and Yucatan. That they were a very numerous population is proved by the mounds of oyster and other shells which they left behind. These are by far the largest shell mounds in the world, and the making of them must have required many centuries.

In several respects these people were different from any known Indians; but the most notable point about them was their method of living in houses erected on stilts over the water. The region principally occupied by them was the west shore of Florida, southward of Tampa, and the outlying islands. That part of the coast of the peninsula is very irregular, with numerous islands and points of mainland. The villages must have been thickly scattered, judging from the shell heaps which today mark the ancient sites.

Life On The Water

The mounds are composed chiefly of oyster shells, but contain immense quantities of the shells of other species of mollusks, such as clams, mussels and scallops. Shells of big sea snails of the kind called "conchs" are very numerous.

Depending upon seafood for their subsistence, the Fish People found it most convenient to live on the water. Their pile-supported dwellings kept them out of the wet, while affording some degree of safety from attack. As fast as they ate the oysters, they dropped the shells into the water beneath, and thus in the course of time the accumulations rose to a level with the platforms. Finally, the houses came to rest upon the shell heaps directly, and in the latter are buried the relics of many generations.

The men wear shirts, breechcloths, and curious turbans formed with one or more shawls wrapped around the head. The upper rims of their ears are pierced with holes, sometimes as many as ten, to hold wooden plugs. The women adorn themselves with strings of large cut-glass beads, which they buy from white traders. They literally load themselves with necklaces of these beads, a beile of the Seminole deceming six quarts of them not in excess of the fashion.

The Fish People of prehistoric Florida are altogether a mystery. They seem to have vanished from the peninsula long before the first arrival of the whites. They were fishermen and traders by sea,

THE TOWER OF BELEM - SOOT WHERE VASCO DA GAMA LANDED ON HIS RETURN FROM HIS GREAT VOYAGE

Portugal, once a very prominent leader in the world's affairs, and still one of the most picturesque and beautiful of countries, is much visited by artists who rave over the magnificent palace of Cintra, the favorite haunt of the Moslem-loving Moors, and over the great monastery and cathedral of Belem.

By LILLIAN HAYDEN HESTON

ABOUT four miles from Lisbon, on the shore, is a little town that was known as Restello until Vasco da Gama's glory made the port from which he sailed on his great mission so celebrated that the pious king renamed it Bethlehem, which is in Portuguese Belem. The king also built, to celebrate the occasion, an enormous and superb monastery and church to replace the little chapel where Da Gama and his crew had passed the night before their embarkation in prayer.

There was many a person to tell the daring explorer that he was a fool to set out on a quest that had caused the death of countless men but that did not make him hesitate. With four little ships, the largest of which was a bare two hundred tons, the smallest only fifty, he set sail to try to round the Cape of Good Hope and find that long-sought sea-passage to India. Portuguese ships had explored much of the wild and savage coast of Africa but rounding the Cape had proved a costly and dangerous task. Portugal claimed to be mistress of the seas in those days, and she was determined to find and hold the water route to India—if any existed, Cathedral Commemorates Success Of Da Gama

Prince Henry, called the Navigator, had been the constant patron of all exploration but he was dead at that time and the king, Manuel, had graciously made ready the expedition and invited Vasco da Gama, the last of a famous family of explorers, to take charge of it.

The crews consisted of 170 men—only 55 of whom came back to tell the tale. The last night before embarkation was spent by them all in prayer. At dawn the men went, bare-footed and with lighted tapers in their hands, to the little hermitage chapel, built near the beach by Prince Henry, and received the blessing of the priest upon their venture. A large crowd saw them start July 8, 1497, and it was two years and two months before Portugal had any news of them. Then they came back and landed at what is now the town of Belem, and the king received them with great honors and built the beautiful cathedral of Belem to commemorate their success.

This cathedral with its large monastery was given in charge to the monks of St. Jerome, hence the Portuguese name of Mosteiro of the Jeronymos. Fortunately, it was built of a very durable stone so that today it is in perfect repair except for some slight damage the great Lisbon earthquake of 1755 did to it. All parts of the buildings are elaborately carved and decorated. The cloisters, of two stories, are perhaps the most beautiful part. The cathedral is the Portuguese Pantheon, where her illustrious dead are buried, poets, discoverers, artists—all those that have brought glory to their native land.

The great epic poem of Portugal, the "Lusadas," gives a graphic account of the bravery and daring exploits of Vasco da Gama, who went, as the poem says: "To view the cradles whence the no kings rise."

Tower Of Belem

Not far away stands another building of the same period, the so-called Tower of Belem, also known as the Tower of S. Vicente, the patron saint of Lisbon, put to death by Diocletian in 336. This has three stories of square turrets and battlements. Political prisoners were confined in its lower dungeons. A fine Ethnological Museum is in the neighborhood which contains among many other curiosities, a remarkably complete collection of royal coaches, painted, carved, gilded, the first of which were brought to Portugal by Philippe II, in 1581.

Beauty Spot Of Portugal

Cintra is the most beautiful place in Portugal. Fourteen miles from Lisbon, the town lies on the slope of a high ridge of steep hills, protecting it from the north. The climate is very mild and there are abundant flowers at all seasons and tropical palms. On the north side of the hills are immense forests of pines, chestnuts, oaks and cork trees. Among the trees are old monasteries and palaces. One of the most interesting is the Franciscan monastery, all of whose cells are walled with cork, thus keeping them dry for the inmates. Little paths lead through the woods to "Stations of the Cross," located out-of-doors among the forest glens. Cintra is known as the city of palaces. All along the heights of the Serra are magnificent homes of the nobility and ruins of ancient strongholds of ages ago.

The Celts came and settled here, then the Romans, followed by Goths and Moors—the latter doing most of all to embellish the place, and building on one of the topmost peaks a strong and artistic palace, rather a fortress of retreat in case of danger, but with all the loveliness inseparable from any Moorish dwelling. From this palace of the Moors were two secret passages by which in case of danger the inhabitants of the palace could escape.

Many Palaces

All along this rocky ridge are palaces, one called the Palace of Pena, was originally a convent, dedicated to Our Lady of the Rock (da Penha). It was enlarged and embellished at the time when convents were suppressed and was thereafter occupied as a residence by various nobles and by the king. It is impressive, with battlemented walls and high lookout tower. The gardens and grounds are especially beautiful and the view from its great terraces supported on high arches of masonry is magnificent over all the surrounding country and over the sea. The handsome chapel was built at the time of Vasco da Gama's return by Manuel and contained a statue of the Virgin adorned by a golden crown made from the first gold brought from India.

A Garden Spot

That part of Portugal is one of the finest climates in the world, never too warm nor too cold and with a wealth of blossoms throughout the year. The high mountains protect it from the north and the many mountain streams render it fertile. The very high land and the proximity to the sea make it healthy and the loveliness of the vegetation, which is almost tropical, renders the place very beautiful.

KITTY FREW

by JANE ABBOTT

SYNOPSIS: Kitty Frew determines to tell her husband, Gar, that she must not be so extravagant. She tells him that she is going to the problems of her life. Her husband is advised by her husband's sister, David. She doesn't suspect her greatest danger—Marge Crosby's interest in Gar.

Chapter 30

GAR'S ROADSTER WAITS

"I WENT over our bills yesterday, Gar," Kitty said. "We'll have to scripp for the next two months to pay for them." She laughed, to make the scripping seem nothing.

"Bills? Oh, I guess we don't have to worry about those."

"Christmas always costs a lot of money but it's worth it, isn't it? We can catch up easily; neither of us will need any clothes for ages. And I don't really need flowers, darling, though I love them when you send them. And I can cut down quite a bit on the house expenses." She kept her light tone.

Gar pinched her cheek. "What you can't seem to grasp, Kit, is that you're married to a rich man's son. I could run an account in every store in this city and they'd stand for it; they know I'm coming into a lot of money some day."

Kitty had turned away to pour fresh coffee. Gar could not see the quick color that flamed to her face, the way she bit her lips together. She'd been dangerously near to a retort that would have made Gar angry. When she answered it was in a steady voice, soberly.

"I don't want it that way, Gar. I want us to get ahead on our own. And we will."

"Sure we will. And you're not to stew about money. Where are those bills? Give them to me. I'll take care of them."

"But how, Gar?"

"Oh, I've got a deal on. If he keeps his eyes open a man in business can turn over a thousand any time he wants to."

She gave him the little packet of bills and he put them in his pocket. "After this, I'll take care of these matters at the office. I'm not going to have you fussing about them. His manner was all tender.

He kissed her, put on his coat, kissed her again.

Kitty began her day's program with a light heart. Oh, what a good she'd been to worry, to feel afraid of talking to Gar about their finances. And what a man of the world Gar was getting to be!

The morning's mail brought her a long letter from Sally Withers.

"... Kitty, I'm telling you before anyone else, except my family, of course. Phil and I are engaged."

"He's been working in his father's bank but last month he got a position over at the power plant at Corinth and he's getting fifty dollars a week and I'm going to take Miss Brant's place at the library and I'll get twenty, so with that we can manage beautifully. We're going to live with his father and mother for awhile. They're fixing an apartment on the third floor."

"Can you come down for the wedding? Phil says he'd like Gar to stand up with him and of course I want you. It's going to be very simple, just here at the house, and we plan now that it will be in March or April. I'll write to you the moment we've decided."

Kitty glowed and laughed over the letter. Practical Sally, putting her happiness in such a matter-of-fact way.

Of course she and Gar would go to the wedding.

She called Gar on the telephone to give him the news. But Gar was not in his office. Old Jonathan told her that Gar would not be in until four o'clock.

Probably, Kitty exulted, he was out, somewhere, "turning" his cool thousands! She compared it, complacently, with Phil Corey's plodding.

The crisp winter's afternoon invited her out for a walk. Within a few blocks of Ketchum Street she yielded to a sudden impulse to hunt David out.

He answered her ring, hesitating a moment before he admitted her. But she knew by the swift lighting of his sensitive face that he was glad to see her.

"You've timed your coming by some magic," he told her. He indicated a thick flat package on his table. "There it is, ready for its fate."

"Oh, David, we'll celebrate! Let's have tea at that little place where we went before. David, when it's out, won't it show them?"

He knew what she meant. He shook his head. "That was my trouble. I was working on that and, you see, and I was down a blind alley. I got out of it. I don't care if they never see it. I finished it to get a better opinion of myself. And now it's done maybe I won't need the scorn of a certain blue-eyed lady I know to stiffen my backbone."

His statement, put simply, moved Kitty curiously. She felt rebuked and unaccountably elated all at the same moment. "I don't think I ever was scornful about you, David!" she denied quickly. And then she laughed, the color flooding her face. She was taking a great deal to herself! Dorcas' eyes were blue.

"But, David, I'm glad for you! 'Jungle.' I can see it on the bookstands."

He agreed that they'd celebrate. He was in a gay mood.

They drank several cups of tea and ate innumerable sandwiches. She told him about her letter from Sally and laughed as she pictured for him Sally and Phil, the unromantics.

"I'm going to have a good talk with Sally. I must warn her not to take everything so seriously. Kitty assumed a very experienced and much-married manner. "We found that out." She gave a little laugh. "David, haven't I changed a lot since that first night we met?"

He considered, without any answer, the bright face opposite him.

"I can see, myself, just how I've changed," she pursued, rather liking the review. "I must have seemed very young to you at first."

"You were a kid—and a very lonesome one at that," David agreed gravely.

"And you were so nice to me. You said then that I must be patient with Gar. And something about my standing on my two feet."

"Well, I didn't do either the one thing or the other. The first clash we had I got crazy and rushed away from Gar, went to you—"

"You call it crazy, now?"

"Oh, yes, David. I wasn't patient. And I didn't stand on my two feet at all; I leaned most awfully on you!"

"You are disillusioning me. I thought you were rather a wonder!"

"Oh, I wasn't anything of the sort. Now I'm adapting myself. And isn't that the way it should be?"

"Do you want my honest opinion?"

"Of course," she challenged.

"I liked the you you were when you were living on Ketchum Street. There was something rather fine about you. I thought you were going to be—"

"He hesitated, bringing his brows together over a little doubt, then finished inadequately, "different."

"Oh, David! And I was so un happy then!" She, in her turn, stopped confuted, a little angry.

"It's that you think just of me and not of me and Gar," she protested sharply.

He did not look at her. He nodded his head. "Exactly. I prefer to think of you and not of you and Gar."

"Well, it can't be done." She managed an ungrinned tone. "Gar and I are indissolubly one." She had an irresistible desire to flaunt her security. "I'm sorry if you're disappointed in me, she finished archly.

"Did I call it that? I'm interested, notwithstanding."

"Will I make copy for your next book? There will be a next, won't there?"

"Perhaps," he answered noncommittally.

She was afraid he was shutting a door on her. "What does Dorcas say now that you've finished 'Jungle'? Isn't she pleased?"

"She doesn't know."

"Oh, David, you're the limit. You're hopeless." Kitty laughed in exasperation. He was too incurably sensitive; he wouldn't tell Dorcas until he knew the manuscript was sold.

David walked with her a part of the way back to the Tudor Arms. Kitty was thinking what a pleasant afternoon they had had together.

They had turned into the street that led past the Crosby house. It stood now, in the dusk, a shadowy pile of granite with oblongs of mellow light suggesting luxurious warmth and comfort within.

SYNOPSIS: When Kitty Frew sees her husband's car parked outside Marge Crosby's house, she perceives herself that Gar is conspiring with Marge's committee about their little theatre work. Though Gar's sister, Carol, has warned her of Marge's interest in Gar, Kitty is sure she can keep Gar happy to his home.

Chapter 31

GOODYE, BUDGET BOOK

KITTY waited for Gar to tell her what the "committee" had done that afternoon.

But he said nothing about it. He said nothing about his deal, or the bills, or why he had been absent from the office during the middle of the day.

He was in high humor and Kitty thought, "It's all right."

They talked about Sally and Phil. "We'll go to the wedding, won't we?" Kitty gave a little sigh of dismay. "Oh, dear, just when I thought we wouldn't have any extra expenses!"

"There you go! Gar warned, laughing. "We'll make it, some way. Oh, say—"

He changed the subject abruptly. "What do you think? Carol's left home. Set up for herself in two rooms over a garage on Elmwood terrace. She's dotty."

"Gar, maybe she'll be happier, aow."

Gar stared at Kitty. He made a sound of disgust. "Happier! What's the matter with her being happy at home? She's just plain crazy."

Kitty had an impulse to tell him of what she suspected between Carol and Somerset. But she checked it on sober afterthought. She knew Gar would feel no sympathy.

"What does your mother say?"

"What I say—that she's nutty. She's going in for arty stuff—selling Russian doodads." Kitty could not see Carol's move as Gar pictured it.

The next afternoon she went to Elmwood Terrace. She took a chance on following a man with a long packing box who might, she thought, be delivering a part of Carol's stock of "doodads." To her delight Carol opened a door to the man. She saw Kitty standing behind him.

"Oh, hello! Wait a minute—"

she signed the book the man gave her. "How did you know where I was?" Her greeting was not altogether gracious but there was a new excitement on her face and she stood aside for Kitty to enter the little hallway.

"Gar told me."

"Oh, he did, did he?"

Carol led the way up the narrow stairs, the big box across her arms. "I suppose he had a lot to say!"

Kitty was surveying the room she had entered. It was a pleasant room, with little window nooks at each end. It was in a confusion of boxes, half unpacked.

Carol put her burden down. "Well, I'm here!" She said it with a hard little note of triumph. "Isn't it a cute place? I'm going into business here, selling peasant dresses and Russian books and pictures. I'm getting out cards. I'll send you one. My friend, Nina Barikoff, is helping me. You don't know her, of course."

"I think it's splendid, Carol."

"Well, it's got to go." Carol frowned at the box which she was trying to open. "I've staked everything I own on it. I sold every bit of jewelry I had and I've borrowed money, too—but not from my mother!"

She threw back her head and leveled a sharp meaning glance on Kitty.

"I'm sure it will go! Perhaps Dorcas Taber—she's on the Times, you know—will give it a story."

"Thanks, you needn't bother to say anything about it to Gar's friends. I don't want them around. I wouldn't tell Margery Crosby inside my door!"

Carol was thinking of Somerset, Kitty knew. If only she could win Carol's confidence—talk it out with her, tell her that Somerset wasn't worth her caring so!

"Let me help you unpack some of these boxes, Carol."

"They've got to be unpacked," Carol conceded.

"You see I know something about hanging stock away." Kitty laughed. "I was working in Stratton's all that time Gar thought I was in Bridgewater." It came to her that if she made confidences to Carol she might win Carol's return.

Carol stared at her, amazed, across the brightly embroidered garment she had taken out of the box.

"Oh, you think it is, do you?"

"Why, of course!"

Kitty began to clear a table for some books. She took up a framed photograph which was lying there, face down. Carol snatched it out of her hand but not before Kitty had seen that it was Paul Somerset.

"I'll take care of that," Carol protested, coloring.

"Carol, I know you know Paul Somerset. I saw you with him one day, at Hoffman."

"I'm all through with him!" Carol cried, passionately. But she held the photograph against her breast, her eyes belying her words.

Carol put the picture down with a little air of carelessness. "I told him if he wanted to let Marge Crosby make a fool of him—"

But she could not keep to the manner. Her lips began to quiver. "I said I was through with him but if he so much as crooked his little finger at me I'd go to him!"

"It was that way with me, Carol, about Gar, after those weeks," Kitty said simply, sympathetically. And the two girls looked at one another, a little solemnly, wholly friendly, now.

"Oh, well—"

Carol caught up some books, handed them to Kitty. "Put these anywhere. We've made a good start. Another day and I'll be settled."

Kitty went home, rejoicing. She'd broken down Carol's indifference. They were friends.

She told Gar when he came home that she'd hunted Carol out.

But Gar wasn't interested in Carol or what she was doing.

When they sat down to their meal he scowled at the nicely browned chops.

"See here, Kit, you won't get rose, will you, if I lay down the law to you?"

She laughed at his preface in spite of the pang of alarm she felt. "I don't want you to go marketing the way you do. Mother told me—Mrs. Close told her—Carrying a basket. The least you can do is to appear to live like a lady—"

A great anger flooded Kitty so that she shook. His mother—how dared she talk to Gar of her, so!

Gar took her silence for agreement. He modified his tone. "Probably it didn't occur to you how it looked. But now you know how I feel about it."

He did not notice that she ate nothing, that her eyes were dark.

"I don't want you working like a housemaid, either, Kit. They have women here in the building who'll come in."

Following Gar's suggestion, Carley, a soft-voiced mulatto girl, was established in the apartment. She came each day at eleven o'clock and remained through dinner.

Kitty ordered her days' needs by telephone. They were delivered at the service door.

She threw her budget book away. When her week's allowance was exhausted she charged what she had to get.

She spent her mornings curled on the divan, reading. Afternoons, she walked or shopped or went to Carol's. One day she telephoned to David and met him again for tea.

She dressed with elaborate care every evening for dinner. She'd bought two new dresses, a stock of undergarments, stockings, shoes, paying for them out of her preclear savings.

She was very gay; when she and Gar went out with the "crowd" for dinner or to dance or to play bridge she was vivacious, lightning quick with witty retort, dazzling to poor Tubby.

She was very gay—and she was frightened, frightened at herself, at this mad recklessness that possessed her, at the burning anger she carried deep in her heart and smothered with laughter. She'd forget it, she had said to herself.

After a little she came not to resent Carley, in the kitchen, or to criticize her. "Being a lady isn't such hard work, even for me," she thought.

With Carol she could forget her hurt. She knew now that Carol liked to have her come to her rooms. Often they ate lunch together, frugally, at the end of the deal table on which Carol displayed some of her stock.

Sometimes Carol talked of Paul Somerset. She'd known him two years. It had been a clandestine acquaintance. "Do you think I'd take a chance on inviting him to the house?" she'd said bitterly. "I wasn't going to have him laughed at!"

GRAINS IN RALLY

CHICAGO, April 6 (AP)—Grain prices rallied quickly today from initial downturns that were associated with weakness of securities and with setbacks in wheat quotations at Liverpool. Drought districts of the domestic winter wheat belt reported high winds and no rain of any consequence. Opening 1/2-1 cent lower, wheat afterward recovered in full. Corn started 1/4 off and later scored gains.
