Celanese announces lay-offs

By NANCY YOUNG
 MANAGING EDITOR

In the face of rising costs, as well as the overall economic environment, we simply must improve the competitive position of our plant.

— Site Director Lisa Ryan

Approximately 25 positions will be eliminated over the next several weeks at the Celanese Pampa plant. This will drop the number of employees to approximately 275 at the local plant.

Citing an uncertain economy, company officials held a plant town hall meeting on Wednesday to make the announcement. According to a news release from the company, Lisa Ryan, Celanese Pampa Plant Site Director, announced plans to implement a program that will simplify work processes and reduce costs in an increasingly competitive chemicals marketplace.

Employees who are being laid off were notified on Thursday, June 5.

"While this has been a difficult decision," said Ryan, "it is clearly necessary at a time when the entire industry is taking critical steps to compete. As the Pampa plant has focused on becoming more productive over the years, our competitors have also increased their efforts. In the face of rising costs, as well as the overall economic environment, we simply must improve the competitive position of our plant. Our goal is to implement work processes that will make the Pampa Plant the model for plant operations for Celanese."

Local D-Day historian shares knowledge

By DAVID BOWSER
 STAFF WRITER

He joined the Army after World War II, but he is perhaps one of the most knowledgeable people in the world about the D-Day invasion of Normandy that led to freeing France, and Europe, from Hitler's iron fist.

Col. Charles Johnson, USA retired, said he is one of only three Americans that the French government recognizes as an authority on Omaha Beach.

"I also sit on the board of the Cannes (France) Museum," Johnson said. "I'm also on the board of the Bastogne Museum (the site of the Battle of the Bulge during World War II)."

It was the morning of June 6, 1944, 59 years ago this Friday, that the greatest armada ever assembled crossed the English Channel and began landing Allied troops on the beaches of France at Normandy.

Chuck Johnson joined the Army in 1946, but he had always been a history buff, and the significance of the Normandy invasion soon drew him to the bluffs overlooking Omaha Beach, the scene of perhaps the bloodiest fighting of the battle.

"I grew up in the World War II era," Johnson said, "and Normandy was the biggest thing that happened as far as I was concerned."

Col. Chuck Johnson, U.S. Army, Ret., recently bought the movie theater in Pampa, but still has a museum in France dedicated to the landing in Normandy, France, on D-Day, June 6, 1944, during World War II.

A native of Oklahoma, Johnson saw combat in Korea and later in Vietnam, where he spent six years as a POW, earning seven purple hearts during his 33-year career before retiring as a colonel.

After fighting in Korea during the early 1950s, Johnson was assigned to Trieste, Italy. From there, he was able to travel to the coast of France in his free time.

"I made my first trip to Normandy in 1954," Johnson said. "The beaches had yet to be totally cleaned up. There were a lot of relics."

It was there that he met Marcel LeBell, who was soon to become his partner.

"Marcel had started a small museum right on Omaha Beach," Johnson said. "His rule was that nothing could be in that museum that didn't come off the beach, and we have honored that tradition since 1954."

Over the years, Johnson bought into the museum, and today maintains a home near there.

"It's not a large museum," Johnson said. "It's a museum that has been dedicated to the sacrifices of the men and women on both sides who gave their lives on Omaha Beach."

It is the only museum in France that every sitting President has visited with the exception of Clinton, Johnson said.

"Omaha Beach is not just a place," Johnson said. "It's a story."

It is a story that is still being told.

"Just a couple of years ago, we uncovered the remains of an American soldier," Johnson said.

The museum was originally housed in a Quonset hut that had been left by the U.S. Army following World War II. Over the years, it has been expanded to include two large buildings. It houses ordnance, pictures, parachutes, uniforms and weapons that have been taken off the beach.

"It is the only totally authentic museum there," Johnson said. "Everything there came off Omaha Beach."

Man sentenced to 20 years for beating of Allsup's clerk

PANHANDLE — Eric Lane Corley was sentenced Monday to 20 years in prison in the July 2, 2002, beating of convenience store clerk Melvin Batman while he was at work at Allsup's in White Deer. Batman is from Pampa.

Corley entered a plea of guilty to the charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in 100th District Court.

District Judge David McCoy sentenced Corley to 20 years in prison in connection with the assault which occurred in the early morning hours at the 24-hour store.

Because a deadly weapon was used in the assault, 80 percent of the sentence must be served before Corley will be eligible for parole, said White Deer Marshal Tam Terry.

Corley remains in the Carson County Jail awaiting transfer to Texas Department of Criminal Justice. He has been in the Panhandle jail since February, said Terry.

U.S. withdrawal from Korea's DMZ could change dynamics

By SANG-HUN CHOE
 ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — For decades, South Korea has regarded U.S. troops guarding the border with North Korea as a "tripwire" — a guarantee that the United States would intervene immediately if the communist North attacked, because American troops would be the first in the line of fire.

Now the Americans say they are pulling back, and the withdrawal threatens to change the dynamic along the border.

The Pentagon says it can better deter North Korea by moving U.S. troops farther south from the Demilitarized Zone separating the two Koreas. But while the allies have yet to say when the relocation will occur, many South Koreans are already wondering about the repercussions.

"When people hear the news, their immediate reaction often is, 'What? Who's going to defend the border? Are the Americans moving south so that they can leave our country fast when the war breaks out?'" said Song Young-sun, an analyst in Seoul's Korea Institute of Defense Analysis.

Elderly South Koreans have vivid memories of the 1950-53 Korean War, when communist invaders from the North swept over most of the South within weeks. Eventually, the Northern forces were pushed back by American-led U.N. forces, but allied forces suffered heavy losses in the fighting, including 33,700 U.S. troops.

A half-century after the war ended in an armistice, not a peace treaty, tensions remain high today over Pyongyang's suspected development of nuclear weapons.

North Korea keeps two-thirds of its 1.1 million-strong military, the world's fifth largest, near the border. In a moment's notice, its artillery and rocket launchers can shower thousands of shells on Seoul, turning the capital, only 37 miles south of the border, into what North Korea says would be a "sea of fire."

From a military standpoint, keeping so many American ground troops within the range of artillery doesn't make much sense, strategists say. Large Preachers' kids: Angels or devils?

By JOHN MONACO
BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE

BEAUMONT — There's a classic joke about preachers' kids and why they're sometimes so poorly behaved. They hang around with the deacons' kids.

"There's a lot of truth to that," said Jim Sliger, the senior pastor at Woodland Baptist Church in Beaumont. "I was a deacon's kid, and our pastor's son got into a lot of trouble, and we got into a lot of trouble together."

But being the child of a preacher isn't always a laughing matter, said Sliger, 48, who has a daughter and two sons of his own. In fact, it can be rather difficult, considering the pressure that often goes along with having a parent at the pulpit.

Some preachers' kids successfully manage the burden. Some fail miserably. Either way, Sliger said, the atypical stresses inherent in being the child of a preacher are far from fair.

"Something that people don't understand is that preachers' kids don't ask to be the children of a pastor or a minister," he said. "They don't choose what their parents do for a profession. They're just normal kids."

Caleb Sliger has a parent in the pulpit. But rarely are they treated normally, as evident by the spotlight under which they often find themselves living. Every move they make, it would seem, is subject to the scrutiny of the community in which Mom or Dad is the spiritual leader.

"The problem for teachers or anyone else in a profession of high visibility is that their children are in a fishbowl," Sliger said. "People see them more, and they watch them more."

Sliger's oldest son, Mitchell, a 21-year-old junior at Lamar University, knows firsthand what it's like to live under the microscope.

"All the eyes are on you," he said, "and you want to be on exemplary behavior. It's just like any politicians' kid. Because your parents are there, you have to behave a certain way."

And then there are the expectations with which preachers' children are often faced.

Like the sons of professional athletes or top-notch musicians, preachers' kids sometimes are presumed to have grown up in an environment conducive to their being like their dad. Ken Griffey Jr. was expected to play big-league baseball. Natalie Cole was supposed to be a top-notch singer. Preachers' kids frequently are presumed to be on the fast track to Heaven, and the expectations often are too much.

"The problem with judging people goes two ways," said the elder Sliger. "You can judge somebody and keep them down in the gutter all the time. But another way you judge people is you put them up on a pedestal. The problem with anybody on a pedestal is that you leave him or her no room to trip. If they stumble, they fall a long way."

"We're all going to stumble. And when that guy falls, everybody will say, 'Look how far he fell.' But he didn't ask to be up there."

Some preachers kids, however, don't get the chance to fall from the pedestal, opting instead to jump down voluntarily in an effort to rid themselves of the pressure in short, they rebel.

"It causes some children to go to an extreme a tangent that maybe otherwise they wouldn't have," Sliger said.

Wes Moody, an 18-year-old senior at Silsbee and the son of a pastor, said he's known more than a few preachers' kids who have drifted from the straight and narrow.

"A lot of people expect preachers' kids to rebel," he said. "And a lot of them do."

CHURCH BRIEFS

Central Baptist readies for Vacation Bible School

An exciting week has been planned at Central Baptist Church, Starkweather and Browning, for June 9-13 from 9 a.m. to noon.

The church youth directors invite local young people to join them for an intriguing mission through the vibrant streets of London and throughout the colorful British Isles to investigate and uncover clues in the case of The Great Kingdom Caper.

While on special assignment, the children will experience fact-revealing Bible studies, crafts, music with a British flare, unusual and fun snacks, and challenging recreation.

Paula Gilreath, preschool division director, invites those children ages 4 by Sept. 1, 2002 through kindergarten age and Connie Molitor, children's division director, invites children who have completed grades 1-6 to participate.

Each day features a special emphasis and on Friday a hot dog lunch will be provided for each child. For more information, call 665-1631.

Golden Spread Emmaus to meet in Pampa on June 12

First Christian Church of Pampa, 1633 N. Nelson, is hosting the Golden Spread Emmaus Community meeting Thursday, June 12, at the church.

Board members will meet at 5:30 p.m., followed by a pilgrim sponsors training at 6 p.m. A potluck supper is planned in Fellowship Hall at 6:30 p.m. A praise and worship service will be held in the church sanctuary at 7:30 p.m.

Anyone interested in the Walk to Emmaus is welcome to attend.

A Christian's role as a citizen

"Render therefore unto Caesar," Matthew 22:21
"Is it right to pay taxes to Caesar?"

Matthew's ears must have perked up when he heard some Jewish leaders ask Jesus this question. He had once been a tax collector, an "IRS agent" for Caesar, so he knew how angry people could get about taxes. When Matthew wrote a gospel account of Jesus' life from a tax collector's point of view he included this incident in chapter 22.

Followers of the Pharisees bitterly opposed paying any tax to a foreign king, considering it to be religious treason. The Herodians, on the other hand, supported Herod, governor of Galilee, and hence supported the payment of taxes as a religious obligation to civil authorities. These two groups could agree on little but their hatred of Jesus, so they conspired to formulate the trick question. (Matt. 22:5-17) Should a believer support Caesar's government or God's kingdom? It was the perfect rap. No matter how Jesus answered, He would offend one camp or the other and would risk government prosecution or religious persecution.

Minister's Musings

JIMMY FLYNN, PH.D.
CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN

But Jesus did not fall for the false dilemma. With supernatural incisiveness He exposed the wicked motive of the hypocritical questioners (Matt. 22:18), and He asked them to show Him a coin (Matt. 22:19). Apparently He had no coin Himself. When the conspirators admitted that Caesar's image and name were on the coin, Jesus said, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." (Matt. 22:21)

In one sentence, the theological tricksters were trumped, their false dilemma destroyed. Jesus stated the divine alternative: You can, and should, be both a good citizen and a good Christian. God does not give you the choice of one or the other. A commitment to the heavenly kingdom is no excuse for neglect of earthly government. The Great Commission is like a pair of scissors. The two blades, evangelism and discipleship, are both necessary. Discipleship is teaching all that Jesus commanded (Matt. 28:19), including the command to be salt and light (Matt. 5:13-14), to bring Christ's influence to bear in culture and government.

But what if Caesar exceeds his jurisdiction and starts taxing or legislating or regulating the "things of God?" Then the disciple has a duty to prevent larceny from the divine precincts. We must not render to Caesar the things that are God's. Christians have long defended the biblical principle of religious liberty that religious conscience is the province of God over which Caesar has no jurisdiction. Even as to taxing and spending, Caesar must not be allowed to intrude upon conscience. Thomas Jefferson wrote: "To compel a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions which he disbelieves is sinful and tyrannical ..."

Thank God for religious liberty. Ask God to help you to be salt and light in your sphere of influence so that you may render to Caesar your sanctified involvement in self-government while rendering to God the free expression of religious conscience in public affairs.

Something new on horizon

Something new is coming to Pampa and we wanted you to be aware.

It's not a furniture store, but a place where you can be renewed.

It's not another restaurant, but a place where you can be fed. It's not a car wash, but a place where you can find cleansing.

It's not a grocery store, but a place where you can find food for your soul.

A place ... a promise ... a possibility.

Panhandle to host meeting

Rushing Wind Emmaus community will meet at the First United Methodist Church in Panhandle on Saturday, June 14, at 6 p.m.

The meeting will start with a pot luck supper, followed by praise and worship service. Persons interested in the Walk to Emmaus are welcome to attend. A nursery will be provided and training for sponsors of pilgrims will be conducted.

Rushing Wind community will be sponsoring a women's Walk to Emmaus on June 26-30 at the Waka Christian Center with Gary McDonald of Darrouzett ministering as spiritual director.

Longhorns visit top-seeded Seminoles

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State was pushed to the limit before surviving last weekend's regional. And to earn a chance at playing for the program's first NCAA crown, the Seminoles must pass an even tougher challenge — they must eliminate defending national champion Texas.

The two programs, both among college baseball's most storied, will meet this weekend in the best-of-three super regional, with a berth in the College World Series in Omaha, Neb., going to the winner.

The series pits the two programs with the best all-time winning percentages in Division I baseball history — Texas (.757) is atop that list, followed by Florida State (.732), which overtook Grambling for the second spot this season.

"I haven't lined up with them in Tallahassee," Florida State coach Mike Martin said. "I know it's a school with tradition. So is ours."

Texas (46-18) won three of four games in its regional last week, ousting Lamar 6-3 in the championship game. It's the third super regional trip since 1999 for the Longhorns.

Florida State (54-11-1) needed to play its way through the losers' bracket in its regional, winning consecutive elimination games from South Alabama in the regional's final day to keep its season alive.

The top-seeded Seminoles have earned 18 trips to Omaha since 1957, but have missed the trip the past two seasons. Despite being the No. 1 national seed a year ago, FSU was upset in the super regionals by Notre Dame.

Florida State first baseman Jerrod Brown said the Seminoles learned a lesson about focus last year in the super regional.

"We (thought) we were going to roll through it and get straight to the Series," Brown said.

Texas has an NCAA-record 29 appearances in the College World Series and is tied for second all-time with five national championships.

The Seminoles are 3-2 all-time against the Longhorns with all five meetings coming in the postseason. FSU won the last meeting in the 2000

College World Series.

"It's the road that we've been given to take and it's our opportunity to play in the College World Series," Texas coach Augie Garrido said of traveling to Tallahassee. "We want to get focused on that opportunity, be excited about that opportunity and make the most of it."

Both teams enter with big bats propelling them through the postseason.

Shortstop Stephen Drew, the younger brother of the St. Louis Cardinals' J.D. Drew, is the igniter for the Seminoles. While his numbers (.326, 11 HRs, 59 RBIs, 33 SB) are down from last season, Drew has two homers and 10 RBIs in four postseason games.

Outfielder Dustin Majewski is the Longhorns' best hitter with a .395 average, 81 RBIs and 12 home runs.

Texas also has extra incentive for a win. Garrido is one win shy of tying former Texas coach Cliff Gustafson as the winningest coaches in college baseball history with 1,427 victories. If Texas makes it to Omaha, Garrido will have the record to himself.

"That's something that's definitely on everybody's minds," Majewski said.

The team's two left-handed aces will take the mound for the series' first game on Saturday with Texas' J.P. Howell (8-2) meeting Trent Peterson (10-1). Game 2 is Sunday and a deciding Game 3, if necessary, will be played Monday.

AUTO RACING

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Season points leader Bobby Hamilton will start from the pole in the NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series race at Texas after qualifying was canceled Thursday because of rain.

The lineup for Friday night's O'Reilly 400K was determined by season points and other criteria. It's the third time in seven races this season that qualifying has been rained out.

Hidden Hills claims victory

PAMPA — Both Hidden Hills and Farm Bureau came to play in girls 11-12 softball action this week.

Carolyn Teichmann pitched for Hidden Hills and Libby Dyson pitched for Farm Bureau. Carolyn Teichmann allowed one run on four hits while striking out eight and walking six. Libby Dyson for Farm Bureau gave up seven runs on five hits while striking out seven and walking nine.

The score was 1-1 going into the fourth inning when Hidden Hills scored six runs on the way to another victory.

Brooklyn Barker had two singles in two at bat to lead Hidden Hills hitters. Kelby Doughty, Carolyn Teichmann and Haley Steger had one single each.

Caitlin Hampton was two for two, including two singles, to lead Farm Bureau hitters. Monica Pairsh and Amisha Williams had one single each.

Hidden Hills pro David Teichmann demonstrates the proper way to grip a club during a Junior Golf Clinic this week. The clinic was for youngsters ages 6 to 15.

Astros rip Orioles to sweep three-game series

HOUSTON (AP) — When Brian Hunter was in Colorado three years ago, then manager Buddy Bell had some advice for him — just have fun.

Hunter heeded that advice Thursday night as he tied his career highs with four hits and four RBI to help lead the Houston Astros to an 11-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

It was the ninth time in his career that Hunter had collected four hits, the last coming July 26, 2000 against Colorado shortly after he was traded to the Cincinnati Reds. It also was the second time he had driven in four runs in a game, the other time coming July 4, 1997 against these same Orioles.

For Hunter, it was just a matter of relaxing and enjoying himself.

"It's like Buddy Bell used to tell me, you're a better player when you're having fun out there," Hunter said. "Tonight was a lot of fun for me. I was hitting sixth and had three of the best hitters in the league (Jeff Bagwell, Jeff Kent and Lance Berkman) in front of me, so all I had to do was put the ball in play to score some runs."

Hunter certainly did that. He hit a sharp single to right in the first to drive in Bagwell, then doubled to left in the third. In the fourth, he singled through the hole at shortstop to drive in Morgan Ensberg, then topped it off in the sixth with a two-run single up the middle.

"He had a four-hit night and drove in some runs and he made a nice play in right field," manager Jimmy Williams said. "He had a good game. A lot of them had good games."

Hunter has been playing more lately because Richard Hidalgo has been on the disabled list since May 23 with a viral infection. In a game last Saturday against the Cubs, Hunter had his first multi-RBI and multi-hit game of the season with two apiece, but Thursday was the best he has felt this year.

"It was exciting," Hunter said. "It was good to contribute. Roy (Oswalt) did a great job of keeping us in the game."

"Right now, with Richard out, all of us are pulling for each other and it could be any guy on any given night who comes in and contributes. That's what is going to make us different in the end."

Oswalt (4-4) struck out a season-high 11 as he allowed one run on eight hits in seven innings to help the Astros sweep the three-game series. Oswalt recorded no walks for the second straight game.

"When you get runs early, it makes it a lot easier to pitch," Oswalt said. "I felt loose and I felt good and the team played well behind me. I had a pretty good fastball early in the game and late in the game I went with my breaking stuff and tried to keep them off balance."

Williams praised Oswalt's ability to remain consistent despite an 11-minute break in the game when plate umpire Mike DiMuro was injured in the third inning.

DiMuro had to leave the game after his face was bloodied when he was hit by a throw from Orioles pitcher Travis Driskill on a squeeze play in the third inning. DiMuro was taken to nearby Methodist hospital, where he got stitches for a split in his nose and had X-rays which revealed no fracture.

Sosa awaits penalty for using corked bat

By NANCY ARMOUR
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Sammy Sosa is ready for whatever punishment major league baseball gives him.

Sosa is expected to be suspended for using a corked bat this week, with a decision coming as early as Friday.

Bob Watson, baseball's vice president in charge of discipline, met with Chicago Cubs manager Dusty Baker and general manager Jim Hendry at Wrigley Field on Thursday morning, then returned to New York. Watson did not talk to Sosa.

"I don't know what's going to happen," Sosa said. "But I'm prepared for anything."

Other players who have used corked bats have been suspended for up to 10 games, and that precedent is expected to play a part in Watson's decision. But the Cubs are hoping that Sosa's cooperation, as well as the fact that no cork was found in any of his 81 bats that were checked, will work in his favor.

The Hall of Fame said Thursday that X-rays or CT scans of its five Sosa bats showed no cork or anything else that would violate baseball rules. Baseball officials didn't find anything in 76 bats confiscated from Sosa's locker after he was ejected from Tuesday night's game, either.

"The sad part about the whole thing is that he had 70-some bats and it's like you still don't believe it. That's what's unfair," Baker said. "He was wrong with that one bat. It was a bad decision."

Boston Red Sox ace Boston pitching ace Pedro Martinez came to his Dominican cousin's defense, saying the incident was being blown out of proportion because of racial bias by the media.

"If it was (Mark) McGwire, it would still be a big deal, but not like this," Martinez said. "We might be Latin and minorities, but we're not dumb. We see everything that happens."

A piece of cork was found just above the handle in Sosa's bat Tuesday night when it shattered after he grounded out in the first inning of the Chicago Cubs' 3-2 victory. Sosa doesn't deny the corked bat was his, but said it was a batting practice bat he accidentally grabbed.

Sosa insists he's never done anything illegal.

Glo-Valve stays unbeaten

PAMPA — Heath Skinner allowed only three hits and Freddie Ramirez had four hits and four RBI to lead Glo-Valve to an 11-2 victory over Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency Tuesday at Optimist Park. Glo-Valve will play Rotary Club at 5:45 p.m. today for its final regular season game in the Optimist 11-12 Cal Ripken League. A City Tournament for the league is expected to start Monday.

Glo-Valve flexed its defense in the top of the first inning against DFB. Evan McElwain made a diving catch in center field off a line drive from the bat of Tye Powell.

After two walks, Freddie Ramirez at shortstop caught a line drive off the bat of Craig Conner and tagged the runner at second for an unassisted triple play.

The winners flexed its offense in the bottom of the inning. Heath Skinner led off with a blast over the left field fence. A walk to Kade Wilson, a single by Hayden Skinner and a double by Freddie Ramirez sent two more runs across the plate for a 3-0 Glo-Valve lead.

DFB narrowed the score to 3-1 in the fourth inning. Martin Aliva singled and came around to score after walks to Sean Malone, Zach Doan and Ricky Davis. Anthony Allen started Glo-Valve's half of the fourth with a single. He moved second and third on wild pitches and scored on a single by Heath Skinner. Heath Skinner took second on a wild pitch and went to third on a ground out by Wilson. Hayden Skinner was safe on a fielder's choice as Heath Skinner held at third.

A walk to Lane Douglass loaded the bases. Freddie Ramirez delivered again with a two-run single to left field. Mark Ruth was safe on an error which scored Douglass.

A triple by Brett Powell and a ground out by Conner netted DFB another run in the fifth inning, but Glo-Valve answered again with four runs. Jose Ramirez was safe on an error and went to second on a single by Allen. Both runners moved up on a double steal. An infield single by Heath Skinner plated Jose Ramirez and sent Allen to third. Heath Skinner was permitted to take second. Both runners came home on a single to left by Hayden Skinner. An error on a ball hit by Douglass allowed Hayden Skinner to score.

Heath Skinner allowed two runs and three hits to notch his fifth win of the season. He struck out 11, walked six and hit two batters. Wilson and Allen combined to pitch the sixth inning. Wilson struck out one and walked two while Allen struck out one of the two batters he faced. Davis and Stillwagon pitched for DFB.

DFB made several outstanding defensive plays. In the first inning, first baseman Conner picked up a ball in short right field and threw a rope to Tye Powell to nip a Glo-Valve runner at home. In the third inning, it was Ricky Davis firing to Brett Powell at the plate to nab another runner. In the fifth inning, Zach Doan hustled after a hit to left field and threw to Brett Powell, who was then playing shortstop, who relayed to third baseman Sean Malone, to retire another Glo-Valve runner.

Other offensive leaders for Glo-Valve included Heath Skinner with three hits, including his home run, three runs scored and three RBI. Hayden Skinner had three runs on two hits and two RBI. Allen added two runs and two hits.

Glo-Valve improved its season record to 13-0-2.

Rangers' loss streak at six

ATLANTA (AP) — All that hard work during the offseason is sure paying off for Javy Lopez.

The Atlanta catcher came through with another big hit in his comeback season, hitting a tiebreaking homer in the seventh inning to lift the Braves to an 8-4 victory over Texas on Thursday.

"I'm pretty impressed with myself," said Lopez, hitting .303 with 14 homers. "I'm locked in."

That wasn't the case last season, when he batted a career-low .233 and hit only 11 homers. Afterward, Lopez dropped 35 pounds and committed himself to regaining the form he showed as a two-time All-Star catcher.

"Sooner or later, I was going to explode," he said. "I always believed in myself. I came out this year with a totally positive mind."

Lopez had missed five straight games with a sore right hamstring, but he didn't have to run hard when he led off the seventh by knocking a 0-1 pitch from Aaron Fultz (1-1) into the left-field stands.

Gary Sheffield also homered for the Braves, who overcame an injury shorted start for Mike Hampton. He left the game in the second with a strained groin, but six relievers limited the Rangers to only one run over the final 7 1/3 innings.

The Braves completed a three-game sweep of Texas, which extended its season-high losing streak to six in a row.

Jung Bong (5-0) got out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh after the Rangers tied it at 4 on a run-scoring double by Juan Gonzalez. Third baseman Vinny Castilla leaned into the stands to catch a foul pop, then Donnie Sadler flied out to center to end the inning.

"We had a golden opportunity to open it up, but we couldn't take advantage of it," Rangers manager Buck Showalter said.

Lopez put the Braves ahead for good with his 14th homer on a pitch that Fultz said "was supposed to be a slider, but it didn't slide very much." Atlanta poured it out in the eighth with three runs against R.A. Dickey.

Hampton was charged with three runs during his brief appearance, but none of them was earned because of an error by shortstop Rafael Furcal to start the second.

Furcal bobbled a grounder by Mark Teixeira, who scored on Ryan Christenson's double. Todd Greene grounded out and Sadler walked before pitcher Victor Santos put down a sacrifice bunt.

Hampton pulled up as the ball rolled toward the mound and first baseman Robert Fick had to make the play.

"Normally, he would be all over that ball," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "He didn't even move. He said he could keep going, but I didn't see much sense in it."

Horoscope BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 7, 2003:
You will have your hands full this year, as you have a tendency to juggle others' needs. What you want could change substantially this year as you see those around you changing. You often might wonder about boundaries — when you are giving too much and when not to give. Finances prove to be a major focal point — learning to say "no" to yourself, or to someone else. If a professional option appears, jump on it. This path might lead to a more dynamic career or work situation. If you are single, you will easily meet people, especially during the summer. You often wonder about your role as you juggle demands. If you are attached, your partner could be more demanding than in the past. Again, you juggle your needs with your loved one. Be innovative. CAPRICORN helps you get down to the basics.

was cited by Human Relations Manager Joe Mullenax as the company is working to be sure Celanese remains profitable.

"I don't see any more layoffs in the foreseeable future," said Mullenax. "We will continue to evaluate jobs and may eliminate some through attrition."

According to the release, the Pampa plant's program will involve a rigorous process of identifying non-essential tasks and using proven manufacturing best practices. Employees will be involved in the efforts to change their work processes.

"This is a close-knit facility with a can-do spirit and a track record of making the most of every opportunity," said Ryan. "We will all work hard to accomplish a smooth transition both for the employees affected and the facility.

According to the release, employees affected by job eliminations are eligible for severance benefits, including services to help them find other employment.

Pampa's Celanese plant manufactures acetic acid, acetyl derivative and co-products, and acrylates based products.

Johnson and LeBell have extensively researched the gun positions and bunkers overlooking Omaha Beach.

"A lot of people don't realize how fortified that area was," Johnson said.

Much of the fortifications were not large cannons, but mortars and machine guns that laid down a deadly fire across the beach.

"The morning of June 6, 1944, there were only 750 Germans that were in place," Johnson said. "They held off 54,500 Americans."

That June morning, 2,552 U.S. soldiers were killed.

"To this day," he said, "the trench lines are still there."

Over the years, veterans from both sides have returned there.

Franz Gorckel and John Chapman shot at each other at 4:15 p.m. June 6, 1944.

John Chapman was in a tank, the first tank to breach the wall," Johnson said. "Gorckel was firing a machine gun at the tank, when Chapman fired a single round and hit Gorckel in the leg."

Each of the two men eventually returned to the museum at the beach years later, where Johnson met them and later introduced them to each other.

"It's interesting because the battle was still raging that late in the afternoon," Johnson said. "It was not by any means a secure position. We were supposed to have been 20 miles inland by that time, and we were less than a mile off the beach."

Johnson spent 33 years, six months and four days in the Army, then worked for the Defense Intelligence Agency for 10 more years.

Sent to Vietnam in 1960, he was captured in 1963 and spent six years as a prisoner of war.

Johnson retired in 1970, only to be recalled a year later and sent to Germany to run covert operations.

His last military assignment was as official historian for heads of state.

"My job was to travel with visiting heads of state and answer any questions," Johnson said.

Retiring from government service, Johnson returned to Oklahoma and the business of running movie theaters.

Last year, he and his partners sold the theater in Elk City and bought the one in Pampa. Johnson came to Pampa just after the first of the year to run it.

"I didn't think I'd like Pampa," Johnson said.

He said when he arrived, he found a lot about Pampa that he did like.

Johnson's involved with the VFW and with the Freedom Museum USA - and he remains a history buff.

KOREA

numbers of U.S. troops would likely die in the first hours of a North Korean attack, or would have to retreat and regroup.

Younger South Koreans, growing up amid economic comforts and a mood of reconciliation with North Korea, are less grateful for the American military presence and more confident of peace.

Some radicals even see the foreign military presence as a slight to national pride. The death of two girls hit by a U.S. military vehicle triggered massive anti-American rallies late last year.

President Bush and South Korean President Roh Moo-hyun believe South Korea's economy, the world's 11th largest, allows it to play a bigger role defending itself.

"This is a time to move beyond outmoded concepts or catch phrases such as the term 'tripwire,'" Paul Wolfowitz, the deputy U.S. defense secretary, said in Seoul on Monday.

In Manila, Adm. Thomas Fargo, U.S. military commander for the Pacific, said Friday that South Korea's military is "much more capable than it was 10 or 15 years ago... They have made dramatic improvements in their own capability."

In the Pentagon's view, moving U.S. troops away from the DMZ and consolidating them at perhaps two main "hub" bases south of Seoul will still enable them to respond quickly. It believes the relocations will give the U.S. forces the flexibility to train for missions elsewhere in the region.

But "the redeployment can also be a direct message to North Korea that the United States is now readier than ever to launch a pre-emptive strike if Pyongyang does not behave," said Park June-young, a political scientist at Seoul's Ewha Woman's University.

Bush has said he prefers diplomacy in trying to persuade Pyongyang to give up its nuclear weapons programs, but has not ruled out military options. Pyongyang says Washington plans to invade following its victory in Iraq.

Prime Minister Koh Gun had urged the U.S. military to delay talk of redeployment until after the North Korean nuclear crisis has been resolved.

Some South Koreans worry the removal of U.S. forces from the border could raise the potential for hostilities on the peninsula.

"The U.S. troop presence near the DMZ meant they wouldn't do anything dangerous because they were so close to North Korea. Now when they are far away, they will feel more comfortable to attack North Korea and start a war," said Kim Jong-soo, 42, a textile dealer in Seoul.

South Korean Foreign Minister Yoon Young-kwan told Seoul's SBS radio Friday that the redeployment would take "a significant amount of time," probably five to six years.

The realignment will force South Korea to boost its defense spending to help finance part of the relocations and make up for equipment lost by the withdrawal.

"The concept of tripwire is a selfish concept for South Koreans," said Park. "It's time to change that. It doesn't really matter where the U.S. troops are stationed, as long as they are in South Korea."

But many here don't buy that explanation.

"We could sleep in comfort, with our legs stretched, because of those American soldiers between us and North Korea," said Park Joong-kwon, 65, who attended a recent rally in Seoul supporting U.S. military presence.

With the troops farther south, he said, "I will feel more vulnerable."
