One year anniversary of Conrad family deaths passes

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

Texas will have to wait several more months before bringing Levi King of Missouri to trial in the Sept. 30, 2005, murders of the Brian Conrad family.

King, who was indicted March 23 in 31st District Court in Gray County Courthouse on the homicides, remains in a Missouri jail on two murder charges in connection with the deaths of a Missouri man and his daughter-in-law. The two were shot to death at the man's home near Pineville, Mo. the day before the Conrad family was slain.

"Once they're done, we'll bring him to Texas and try him here," said 31st District Attorney Lynn Switzer. "I don't have a timeline. I wouldn't imagine it would be before summer."

King had pled guilty March 21 to the Missouri murders in an apparent attempt to avoid the death penalty. Missouri law requires prosecutors to file notice of aggravated circumstances in order to seek the death penalty, but Special Prosecutor Tim Finnical, the prosecutor in the Missouri cases, said that under the law, the state has up until the trial date to present aggravated circumstances.

The notice had not yet been filed when King entered his guilty plea in the pretrial hearing. Prosecutors asked for a 15-minute continuance, typed the notice of aggravated circumstances.

Pampans involved in aiding Cambodia

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

Cambodians are still trying to rebuild their country after decades of war, turmoil and oppression, during which 1.7 million of the country's citizens, including many in law enforcement, education and other professions, were executed, said Jane Steele.

Steele, an educator who was a longtime employee of Pampa Independent School District, and her husband Richard, director of Pampa Learning Center, traveled to Cambodia last summer to help re-establish the country's education system from scratch.

All schools and libraries in Cambodia were destroyed during the regime of Pol Pot in the 1970s, Steele said, and books were burned. Books are still in very limited supply.

One organization which has stepped in to help Cambodia rebuild its schools is Teachers Across Borders, Inc., a non-profit non-government organization headed by a Pampa native, Heidi Schneider Roupp, in Colorado. Steele went to Cambodia in July as part of that organization's "Teachers Teaching Teachers" programs in Phnom Penh and Siem Reap.

Steele, who was assistant superintendent of schools at PISD when she left employment there, taught administrators in Phnom Penh.

"Many were around my age. Most had been through the Pol Pot regime. I also

Woody Guthrie tribute to get into full swing Friday

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

The 2006 Tribute to Woody Guthrie will get into full swing at 7 p.m. Friday in "Woody's Neighborhood" in the 300 and 400 blocks of South Cuyler Street, with a full day of activities planned for Saturday.

The monthly first Friday jam session kicks off the weekend Friday at 320 S. Cuyler. All interested participants and listeners may attend.

The opening of the Woody Guthrie Center at 10 a.m. Saturday will begin a full day's schedule of events. Visitors to the center can browse the memorabilia on display.

Performances on the outdoor stage in front of the Woody Guthrie Inn at 400 S. Cuyler begin at 11 a.m. and continue all day until a barbecue supper is served at 6 p.m. Tents will be available for more jam sessions during the day.

The inn will be open to visitors this year, according to Reed Echols, one of the organizers of the annual Guthrie tribute.

Hungry attendees may get a

Coney Island hot dog and beverage at the vintage shotgun shack from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Beverages will be served all day Saturday. The shotgun shack, along with a section of railroad track, is located at the "Bound for Glory" sign on Craven Avenue across from the Inn and behind the

County commission to study insurance, equipment

By MARILYN POWERS
Staff Writer

Gray County commissioners will be seeking value for county dollars when they meet at 9 a.m. Monday in the second-floor courtroom at the county courthouse to discuss insurance and equipment.

Commissioners will vote on authorizing seeking bids for mobile video cameras for the sheriff's office and a new pickup for Precinct 3. They will also consider advertising for requests for proposals for the following types of insurance: Comprehensive general liability, property, public officials and employees liability, general liability and lessor's interest concerning Perry LeFors Airport, a heavy equipment floater, business auto insurance, county law enforcement professional liability coverage, and workers' compensation.

Possible purchase of a new CAT 140 motor grader for Precinct 2 via the Texas Buy Board is also on the agenda. The Buy Board is a consortium that allows local and state governments to buy items at a reduced rate without having to go out for bids.

Other money-related items on Monday's agenda include a request by the county clerk to use records management money to build shelves for holding records in storage; cancellation of uncashed juror checks older than 90 days; rental fees for hangars at the airport; and utilization of apron money to be transferred and used on ramp and parking expansion for new hangars to be built at the airport. An apron is the hard-surfaced area, often paved, in front of an airplane hangar.

The usage policy for Gray County Annex and providing flu vaccines for county employees and family members who are covered by the county health insurance plan is also scheduled for discussion.

Conrads

and submitted the notice, whereupon King withdrew his guilty plea.

Then followed a flurry of motions by the defendant's attorney. The Missouri Supreme Court, at 1 p.m. last Tuesday, denied all the motions and affirmed the trial court judge's rulings, Switzer said.

"They will have a preliminary hearing within the next month, and in the trial, they will put in evidence of the Missouri cases only," she said.

The Texas murders can be included in the punishment phase of the Missouri trial if King is found guilty of either or both of the Pineville shootings, Switzer said.

King will also face the death penalty in the Conrad slayings. Switzer has already filed a notice of intent to seek the death penalty for each of the Gray County murders.

"I filed immediately after the indictments were handed up, that day or the next," she said.

King is facing the possibility of four death penalties here. One 31st District indictment alleges King murdered a 14-year-old boy. Zach Doan was 14 at the time he was shot to death.

Another indictment alleges King murdered Brian Conrad, 31. An indictment alleging King murdered Mitchell Conrad, 35, includes a separate count for her unborn child, who was also killed as a result of the shootings.

The Conrads and Doan were found dead at their rural home approximately 13 miles south of Pampa just off Highway 70 after an emergency services dispatcher received a call at about 7:15 a.m. Sept. 30, 2005 from the only survivor of the shootings, Robin Doan, 10, who reported that her family had been killed.

King was arrested Oct. 3 and returned to Missouri in connection with the Missouri deaths as he tried to return to the United States from Mexico at the border at El Paso. He was driving the male Missouri victim's 2005 Dodge Dakota pickup at the time of the arrest.

Officers in Missouri found material with King which might connect him with the Conrad family deaths, and law enforcement investigators working the Conrad cases were notified.

"Judge Emmert has been looking for a death-certified attorney for him," Switzer said concerning King. "In Texas, you have to have that certification to represent a client in a death penalty case."

Steven Emmert is 31st District judge. Switzer predicts that King will be represented in 31st District Court by a court-appointed attorney.

"I doubt very seriously that he will have his own attorney because he has a court-appointed attorney in Missouri, and I doubt if he's got the money available to him to hire his own attorneys," she said.

Once things finally get under way in 31st District Court, however, Switzer does not anticipate an especially lengthy trial.

"What will take the longest is jury selection, which may take up to two weeks. We have to do individual voir dire in death penalty cases," she said.

Testimony will probably fill another week, and the punishment phase if King is found guilty of any or all of the charges will likely consume a fourth week, Switzer said.

There is always a possibility that a change of venue will be ordered, in which case the trial would be moved from Gray County Courthouse to some other Texas courtroom, if not enough objective jurors can be found. "However, Emmert would still hear the case, and Switzer would still prosecute it."

"Just because you've heard or read about a case is, by itself, not enough to disqualify you. It's whether you've formed an opinion and whether you can set that aside and listen to the testimony objectively," Switzer said.

"I anticipate the first thing they'll do is file for change of venue. That's pretty standard," she said.

King has been accused of approximately 25 felonies, including transporting stolen property across state lines and carrying a firearm into Mexico, she said.

Switzer cannot comment before King's trial is completed concerning testimony and evidence she is prepared to present, but did say that her office has received complete autopsy reports on all the victims, along with reports of laboratory analysis of evidence.

"Our case is ready to go to trial. It's just to the point of waiting right now," she said.

Folk Music Center. "From Pampa to New York," the story of Guthrie's life from 1937 to 1947, will be featured on the outdoor stage beginning at 2 p.m., with Guthrie songs sung by various guest artists. Loralee Cooley will narrate as musicians perform to tell in story and song the wanderings of Guthrie from 1937, when he left Pampa, to 1947, when he was in New York. Artists include Frank Simpson of Madison, Wis.; Pat Stewart of St. Louis, Mo.; K.C. Mathey and C.K. Clothier of Oklahoma City, Okla.; and "The Wanderers," composed of Carl Allen and Bill Murlin of Portland, Ore.

This year's Tribute spotlights Guthrie's achievement in the early 1940s, when he was commissioned by the Department of Interior, then in charge of developing electricity on the Columbia River, to write songs based on the people, the land and the construction of the Grand Coulee Dam building project. Guthrie arrived in the area with his wife, Mary Jennings Guthrie, whom he had married in Pampa, and their three children, and proceeded to write nearly 30 songs in a one-month period.

The songs, and how Guthrie came to write them, will be featured at the outdoor concert following the barbecue supper the evening of Oct. 7.

Guest musicians that evening will be "The Wanderers." Murlin was editor of the "Woody Guthrie's Columbia River Songbook."

Guthrie left Pampa in 1937 to follow the westward migration to California, eventually winding up in New York in 1947. He wrote a number of successful songs, including "This Land is Your Land," "Roll On, Columbia, Roll On," and "So Long, It's Been Good to Know You." He died in 1967 at the age of 55 in New York City of Huntington's Disease, a congenital disorder that affects the muscles and central nervous system.

The barbecue supper begins at 6 p.m. Advance reservations are required. Tickets are $25 for adults, $10 for students 11 years and older, and free for children age 10 and younger.

For more information or to make supper reservations, call the Pampa Chamber of Commerce at 669-3241, or visit the Chamber's web site at www.pampachamber.com and click on the "Visitors" link. Go to "events" and find the "Woody Guthrie" listing. Information is also available at www.woodyguthrie-pampatx.org.

Checks for supper tickets may be made payable to Pampa's Tribute to Woody Guthrie and mailed to 320 S. Cuyler, Pampa, TX 79065. Tax-deductible donations to help with costs are also accepted.

Some things make you scratch your head and wonder

Sometimes you look at a story or hear a story that just leaves you shaking your head, muttering, "What were they thinking?"

I did that last week when I came across a story on the Associated Press state wire.

It was datelined Frisco, which, I think, is a Dallas suburb. It concerned Sydney McGee, a 28-year veteran art teacher at Fisher Elementary School who took 89 students on a school field trip to the Dallas Museum of Art last spring.

One of her fifth-grade students saw a nude sculpture at the museum.

A parent of the child complained to the school principal, Nancy Lawson. McGee was reprimanded by Lawson and put on paid administrative leave. It was not known if any of the other students saw the offending nude statue, but none of the remaining 88 students' parents complained.

Last week the Frisco School Board, in a closed meeting, decided to not renew McGee's contract.

McGee's attorney, Rogge Dunn, said it was Lawson who urged McGee to take the museum field trip.

School district officials, though, say the reprimand was not about the museum field trip, but other performance issues. They mentioned only lesson-plan preparation.

It was not revealed which parent made the complaint.

School board members would not take questions after the closed meeting.

Now there may have been other factors that led to McGee's dismissal, but being put on paid leave because of a nude statue in a museum is a stretch.

I haven't seen the offending statue, but every nude I have ever seen in a museum was certainly not suggestive or pornographic.

It is possible to view nude statues and nude art in museums and enjoy the images for what they are, pieces of art.

I suppose I may be a little more open-minded than others about a common sense approach to problems, but some things are just plain wrong.

The E coli spinach scare has certainly put me in my place.

Whenever we get fruits or vegetables at the grocery store or farmers' market, my wife always washes them in the sink with a capful of bleach. Two rinses later, they are ready for the refrigerator.

I would kid her about being overly concerned about germs and stuff, but she kept her chin up and told me to just go on about my business because she was busy.

Well, I don't have to tell you that after people started dying because of the tainted spinach, I didn't mind the extra work she put into our produce.

She is a little smarter than I am anyway.

Technology just keeps getting better and better. Not that I know that much about all the new gadgets. For instance, I would not know the first think about using an Ipod until I became familiar with its workings.

The latest craze announced last week is that Fossil and Sony Ericsson are producing Bluetooth watches.

That's right. Now, when your cellular telephone rings in your pocket or purse, you can just glance at your new Bluetooth watch and the caller ID will tell you who is calling.

Of course the watch only works with select Sony Ericsson telephones.

The Associated Press reported that the watches will be available in late October under Fossil's "Mobile Wear by Abacus" brand, the regular Fossil brand and a Sony Ericsson-branded version. They will set you back anywhere from $200 to $250.

Old Dick Tracy was not that far ahead of his time with his Two-Way Wrist Radio, now, was he.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Oct. 1, the 274th day of 2006. There are 91 days left in the year. The Jewish Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur, begins at sunset.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 1, 1908, Henry Ford introduced the Model T automobile to the market.

On this date:

In 1800, Spain ceded Louisiana to France in a secret treaty.

In 1885, special delivery mail service began in the United States.

In 1896, the U.S. Post Office established Rural Free Delivery.

Agnes Repplier, American essayist (1858-1950).

In 1936, Gen. Francisco Franco was proclaimed the head of an insurgent Spanish state.

In 1943, Allied forces entered Naples during World War II.

In 1949, Communist Party Chairman Mao Zedong proclaimed the People's Republic of China during a ceremony in Beijing.

In 1961, Roger

Maris of the New York Yankees hit his 61st home run during a 162-game season, compared to Babe Ruth's 60 home runs during a 154-game season.

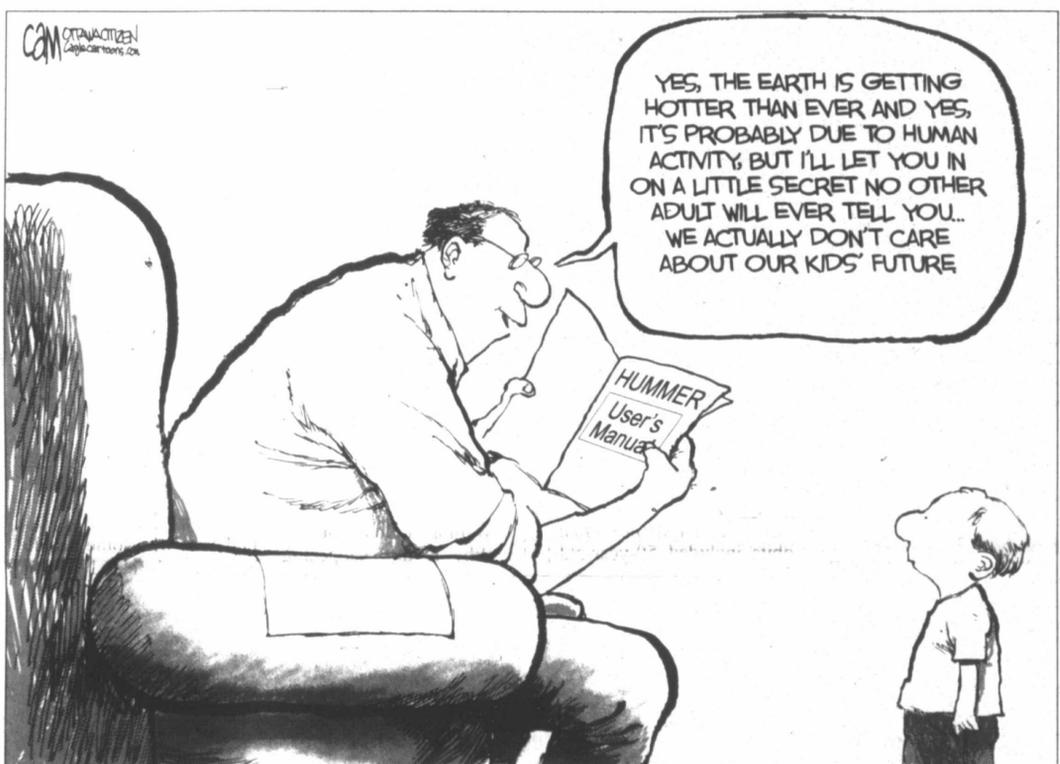

In 1964, the Free Speech Movement was launched at the University of California at Berkeley.

In 1971, Walt Disney World opened in Orlando, Fla.

In 1986, former President Jimmy Carter's presidential library and museum were dedicated in Atlanta with help from President Reagan.

Ten years ago: A federal grand jury indicted Unabomber suspect Theodore Kaczynski in the 1994 mail bomb slaying of advertising executive Thomas Mosser. (Kaczynski was later sentenced to four life terms plus 30 years.) The federal minimum wage rose 50 cents to $4.75 an hour. NASA began turning over day-to-day shuttle operations to private industry.

Five years ago: New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, in an impassioned speech to the United Nations, said there was no room for "neutrality" in the global fight against terrorism and no need for more studies or vague directives. The Supreme Court suspended former President Clinton from practicing before the high court. A Pakistan-based militant group attacked the state legislature in Indian-ruled Kashmir, killing 38 people.

Idle American: Potpourri from the papers

This is a feeble attempt to dissect miscellaneous news items from near and far. But it's as good a way as any to headline "potpourri," a favorite word rarely seen and almost never heard. Most of us can't give it the French pronunciation to properly romanticize it.

This week's stew will be from several mini-pots of news bubbling with topics for comment.

Let's rush right in — where wise men fear to go.

Politics aside, the former Gov. Ann Richards' memorial service was arguably the most unorthodox ever for anyone — dignitary or otherwise. It was unstuffy and even funny. But wasn't she?

No doubt speakers on the lookout for fresh material were scribbling notes feverishly on funeral programs throughout the auditorium.

The televised event was a fitting tribute offered in high humor — the very way she'd have liked.

Big 12 schools aren't faring well in football games against top 25 teams. At this writing, they were 0-9. In fact, one critic calls it the "Brag 12."

Texas A&M fans, eyebrows raised that playing Army was a bar-lowering maneuver, sweated bullets in the final seconds. The Aggies' goal-line stand in the final seconds protected a four-point win.

Had A&M lost, Coach Dennis Franchione may have been strung up, and I don't mean in effigy. A loss to Army, though, would not have stung as much as a College Station loss in 1922 to Howard Payne, 13-7.

Football coaches are always looking for disparaging comments from enemy camps to enrage their troops. They call it "bulletin board material."

Well, the University of Texas coaches may want to photograph a billboard at Dallas Love Field. An Oklahoma State University ad there touts a "brighter shade of orange."

Now that can be taken several ways. Are we talking about brighter school colors or brighter athletes? UT hosts OSU Nov. 4 in Austin.

Look for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Cockroaches to scurry to hidey holes upon hearing news.

Six Flags Over Texas amusement park has a new Halloween promotion: Patrons willing to chow down on insects — specifically Madagascar Hissing Cockroaches — will be ushered to the front of lines for favorite rides through today — opening weekend of Fright Fest.

For some 'twill make the turnstiles hum; to me, it's a brighter shade of dumb.

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

Sept. 24
The Dallas Morning News on doctors' fighting infections:

To us moderns, who believe that there's a pill to cure what ails us, the current outbreak of antibiotic-resistant staph called MRSA by physicians is unnerving.

It's a potentially life-threatening bacterial infection that's turning up in thousands of healthy people nationwide, with Texas a particular hotbed for the stuff. "We seem to have lost control of it," says Shirley Shores, director of infection control at Parkland Hospital. The New England Journal of Medicine recently reported that antibiotic-resistant staph, rare a decade ago, is now the most common skin infection treated in U.S. emergency rooms. In fact, the problem has become so severe that the British medical journal The Lancet last month declared that we're in a global "pandemic."

Staphylococcus aureus is so common as to be inescapable and is mostly harmless. But the new strains have developed immunity to most antibiotics and potentially can quickly kill those infected.

Last year, a 2-month-old Illinois girl grew so sick from it in a matter of hours that she had to be airlifted to a hospital, where she lingered for 11 days before dying. This February, Kimberly Jackson of Fort Worth died of complications from a staph infection her family believes she acquired from a pedicure. Months of intravenous antibiotics did no good.

Those worst-case scenarios are not typical doctors have some high-powered antibiotics that can work but the cases do indicate how seriously this stuff should be taken.

Doctors cannot fight this alone. People must understand the risks and practice diligent hygiene, including frequent hand-washing and use of alcohol-based sanitizing gels. Don't share towels. Take special care in gyms and on playgrounds.

Any opening in the skin can be a potential entry point for MRSA. These

Latino, Latina WWII exhibit on display at Clarendon College

Images of Valor, a 12-panel exhibit produced by the U.S. Latino & Latina WWII Oral History Project at the University of Texas at Austin, will be on display at the Clarendon College Vera Dial Dickey Library from Oct. 2 until Oct. 27.

Through images and stories, the exhibit shows the great social and economic change that the United States experienced as a result of World War II.

In addition to historical photographs from the Project's archives, Images of Valor incorporates contemporary photographs of men and women of the WWII generation, photographed by photojournalist Valentino Mauricio. The exhibit also features excerpts from more than 500 oral history interviews that were part of the project. The exhibit focuses on individual stories that reveal larger themes such as citizenship and civil rights.

Describing an incident in which a commanding officer reprimanded him and other "American soldiers," Armando Flores from Mission offers deep insight into issues of identity. "Nobody had ever called me an American before that time" he said. "I'd been called a lot of things ... that was the first time in my life I had been called an American."

Sponsored in part by a We the People grant from Humanities Texas, Images of Valor is now one of the more than 50 Humanities Texas traveling exhibits.

Humanities Texas is the state partner of the National Endowment for the Humanities. Images of Valor is one of three exhibits planned during the 2006-2007 school year. Students, faculty and the community will have the opportunity to view The Road To The Promised Land: Martin Luther King Jr. and the Civil Rights Movement in January and Citizens At Last: The Woman Suffrage Movement In Texas in March. Educational materials will be available with each exhibit.

Keeping a clean environment can help prevent many illnesses

COLLEGE STATION — As with nutrition and lifestyle choices, the environment inside a home can affect a family's health, said a Texas Cooperative Extension expert.

Many homes are full of hidden health dangers, said Janie Harris, Extension housing and environment specialist. Tracking down and correcting those dangers can be the difference between feeling well and not.

She offered seven steps to maintaining a healthy home. Step 1: Control moisture. "Water and excessive humidity support the growth of mold, insects, rodents and dust mites," Harris said. "Keeping a home dry helps control mold and pests, and discourages dust mites."

The ways to do this include: keeping indoor humidity between 40 percent and 60 percent; using exhaust fans or a window to vent cooking or showering steam outdoors; venting clothes dryers to the outside; and increasing air flow in closets and behind furniture.

"In addition to the relative humidity, three important sources of moisture that require control are rainwater, groundwater and plumbing," Harris said. "Repair leaking roofs, doors or windows. Repair plumbing leaks in a timely manner."

And make sure rainwater and lawn irrigation water flow away from the home's foundation, she added.

Step 2: Keep it clean. "A clean house is a healthier house," Harris said.

Controlling dust in the home is one way to start. Dust provides food for molds, insects, rodents and dust mites, and in older homes may also contain lead, which can harm children, she said.

Washable throw rugs at each outside entry can help eliminate dust and pollen that is tracked into the home on shoes. These rugs should be washed weekly, she said.

Clutter can catch dust and be difficult to clean, so eliminating clutter is also advised.

"Store your belongings in an enclosed area such as a chest, plastic box or even a cardboard box rather than in piles or stacks," she said.

Step 3: Keep it ventilated.

"Ventilation provides a way to remove pollutants and to control humidity," Harris said.

Use exhaust fans to keep air circulating throughout the home. Keep outside temperature, humidity and pollen levels in mind before using open windows for ventilation. When using heating or cooling systems that bring outside air into the house, make sure the equipment is properly filtered in order to keep the pollutants down, she said.

Step 4: Keep it free of combustion by-products.

Carbon monoxide, sulfur oxides, nitrogen oxides and soot have no place in a healthy home, Harris said. Appliances and equipment — such as furnaces, water heaters and fireplaces — need to vent to the outside.

"Stoves, ovens and cooktops that burn fuel must be used with fans that vent the combustion by-products to the outside," she said.

"Never use the kitchen stove or oven to heat your home because they release sulfur oxides and nitrogen oxides," Harris said.

"Never warm up a car in an attached garage because of the carbon monoxide it releases." Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless gas that can be deadly.

Do, however, install a carbon monoxide alarm that will alert residents of dangerous levels of the gas, she said. If the alarm goes off, leave the house immediately, call 911 from a phone away from the house and "don't go back home until all problems have been fixed."

Step 5: Keep it pest free. Because insects and rodents can bring in disease and allergic reactions — not to mention the use of pesticides and other chemicals used to get rid of them — Harris advised minimizing pests' presence in the home by lessening their reasons to come in.

Keep food and water covered or stored; seal entry points where pests could get into the house; keep the windows screened; and use the least-toxic pesticides available.

"Make sure any pesticides that you have left over are either destroyed, shared with someone else or stored safely away from young children," Harris said.

Step 6: Keep it free of chemicals.

Although no environment will be completely free of chemicals, their impact can be lessened, Harris said.

Choose household products that don't smell or release chemicals, she said. Do not store cleaning compounds, pesticides, oil- or alkyd-based paints and solvents inside the home, but do follow label instructions on disposing of them.

"Many municipalities operate household chemical disposal programs," she said.

Step 7: Keep it comfortable.

In addition to the discomfort of a home that is too hot or too cold, keeping the thermostat set too high or too low can drive up energy bills.

spinach. This could be the first time the E.coli outbreaks are slowed down by restraining orders.

Spinach in the news brings to mind the late Jerry Clower's okra story.

The mention of his name warrants smiles as his down-home comedy is recalled.

With a barrage of fodder from growing-up years in Mississippi, he said that his mother cooked up tubs of stewed okra multiple times each week during growing season, and canned the rest. "I ate so much stewed okra as a kid that I was a full-grown man before I could get my socks to stay up," Clower claimed.

What's the most bizarre promise ever?

High on the list would be Wayne Terwilliger's vow to his wife. He promised that if his Fort Worth Cats took top baseball honors last season, he'd get an ear pierced. They did, and the 58-year veteran of playing/managing/coaching made good. He figured that his wife's rules outranked the players; for them, pierced ears are forbidden.

The 81-year-old added the earring this summer, and it's taken some getting used to. Players correct him regularly that jewelry is called "bling," not "blink." Wonder if the employee who performed the piercing checked policy to see if the store offers laugh leave?

Paid obituaries in newspapers across the land often include the weirdest stuff. One recent metropolitan publication ran one that referenced the deceased man's passions in life — "his children and hauling cows."

Methinks society has moved from straight-laced to unlaced. And we used to think it laughable when obits included 50-year-old high school graduation pictures.

infections, which resemble boils or spider bites, should be treated quickly.

Waiting could be fatal.

Why is this happening now? A main cause is the use and abuse of antibiotics, which has sped up the natural evolutionary process through which staph has acquired immunity. Parents who demand antibiotics for their children, doctors who are too eager to prescribe them, and patients who do not finish their entire course of antibiotics all have helped get us to this dangerous point.

Doctors are still mystified as to why some people become infected with MRSA and others don't. But one thing is clear: There is no way to be entirely safe from MRSA and, for now, no magic bullet to destroy it.

had young ones who'd just trained as teachers and were appointed to smaller provincial schools," Steele said.

"They have teacher training but no administration training. We're trying to improve the teacher training," she said.

She was careful to take into account the concerns of her class during the administrative workshops she led.

"I created teams of various ages and areas together, and let them work on projects. They were mostly secondary school administrators," she said.

"One picked student performance, one picked teacher quality, another picked discipline, and a fourth picked security issues such as fighting and kidnapping," Steele said.

"I did not want to impose my concepts on them. I wanted to give them structure within which to address their own concerns," she said.

One thing she noticed was that many of the participants' questions and concerns were the same as those expressed by American educators, such as discipline and student performance.

It might appear difficult for an American to surmount language, cultural and economic difficulties in order to teach a course to Cambodians.

But the Cambodians are eager and working to learn English.

"English is a major push for the entire country," Steele said. "The vendors all have some English. One person said, 'Because it is the language of power, business and law' when I asked why they want to learn English."

Cambodians have been exposed to Western peoples for decades, but still find differences which amuse them.

"They found my left-handedness and my coloring and height fascinating," Steele said. "In some countries the left hand is used only for personal hygiene, and the right hand is for eating, business, pointing, shaking hands, and so on. They loved my accent, and were very accepting."

Steele had some accommodations of her own to make during her stay.

"I do not like to sweat, and I get very hot easily. All my friends were teasing me before I left," she said of the Cambodian summertime climate.

"I don't think I was dry for any hour except in my hotel room, which had air conditioning," she said.

The meeting place for Steele's training sessions was not air-conditioned.

"I never checked the temperature because I was afraid it would scare me. I was dripping most of the day. I would say the humidity was 90 to 100 percent, and the temperature got to at least 90 degrees every day," she said.

Other facilities, such as toilets, are primitive in many places in Cambodia, she said.

"I did not have to deal with that. Our hotels were quite modern," she said.

A common form of public city transportation is a motorized version of a rickshaw, in which a motorcycle or motorized two-wheeled vehicle pulls a carriage.

"Most Cambodians ride motorbikes or bicycles. Some motorbikes pull small carriages for passengers. There are still a few rickshaws. There are also some bicycles pulling rickshaws," Steele said.

Anyone looking for a fast-food restaurant might be disappointed. The closest thing to fast food Steele found was an eatery which sells pizza, sandwiches and fried chicken.

Teachers in Cambodia do not earn what their counterparts make in the States. All elementary schools teach half-day classes, two per day. Elementary school teachers earn $21 per month, while secondary school instructors make $30 to $35 per month. At the same time, the price of gasoline in Phnom Penh at the time of Steele's visit was the same as in the U.S.

Steele hosted some illustrious participants in her workshops. The director of the National Institute of Education and his four assistants were among those Carved faces and other images can be found everywhere at Angkor Wat, the largest religious monument in the world, in Cambodia. The monument was built in the 1100s and abandoned in 1431. Thai soldiers having too much fun

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand's military coup leaders may be losing their sense of humor. Five days after instructing soldiers to keep smiling, the ruling council has decided there is a limit to how much fun soldiers should have. The council ruled Wednesday that sexy dancers are forbidden near tanks and tourists are no longer permitted to handle weapons when posing for photographs with troops deployed in Bangkok. The military toppled Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra in a bloodless coup Sept. 19. As soon as the danger of violence subsided, the troops mingled freely with residents and foreigners and their tanks became a tourist attraction. Hundreds had photos snapped of themselves posing with the soldiers. At first, the ruling generals turned a blind eye when a troupe of go-go dancers with naked midriffs and sexy camouflaged pants performed in front of the tanks.

attending the sessions. She discovered while in Cambodia that it truly is in some ways a small world. She worked with Kol Pang, the Cambodian minister of education, youth and sports, and discovered he was familiar with the Texas Panhandle. "He was very well educated. He did graduate work at the University of Texas," Steele said. Pang had worked for the Texas Department of Transportation while in Texas, and was familiar with Highway 60 and the Panhandle. "One of his assistants, Mak Ban, was educated at the University of Virginia. His children and their families still live in the Virginia area. He's an engineer," she said. "For these men to come back and help their country shows commitment."

Teachers Across Borders plans to return to Cambodia in January and again in the summer of 2007, and Steele plans to be part of the group. She will be executive director of the teaching program at Phnom Penh. "We had a wonderful response this summer. I fell in love with these people," she said. "I wasn't sure, as an American, knowing our past involvement with Cambodia, how I would be received. But they judge you on what you have to offer.

They're cautious and don't share themselves immediately. Once they warm to you, they are wonderful." All U.S. participants in Teachers Across Borders pay their own way. Donations to the organization are used only for other project costs, Steele said. Hotel guests leave behind plenty of germs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hotel guests leave behind more than just socks and old paperbacks: A new study found viruses on TV remotes, light switches and even hotel pens after cold sufferers checked out. The germ testing was done before the rooms were cleaned, so it likely overstates the risks that most travelers would face. Nevertheless, it shows the potential hazards if a hotel's turnaround amounts to little more than changing the sheets and wiping out the tub. "You sure hope the cleaning people were good," said Dr. Owen Hendley, the University of Virginia pediatrician who presented results of the study Friday at a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology.

Besides hotel hazards, the findings point out things that people may not think to clean in their homes when someone has a cold. "We know that viruses can survive on surfaces for a long time — more than four days," said Dr. Birgit Winther, an ear, nose and throat specialist at the university who led the study. Its aim was to test the survival of rhinoviruses, which cause about half of all colds, especially in children. Researchers had 15 people with lab-confirmed rhinovirus colds spend a night in individual rooms at a nearby hotel and, after they checked out, tested 10 items they said they had touched. About one-third of the objects were contaminated with rhinovirus. "We were surprised to find so many," Winther said.

Virus was found on 7 out of 14 door handles and 6 of 14 pens. Six out of 15 light switches, TV remotes and faucets tested positive, as did 5 of 15 phones. Shower curtains, coffee makers and alarm clocks also harbored viruses. Surprisingly, virus turned up on only one of the 10 toilet handles tested. Experts did not test items like bedspreads because cloth dries out germs, making them far less likely to survive than they do on smooth or moist surfaces. Several months later, 5 of the 15 participants were asked to return to the hotel and visit rooms where certain items had been deliberately contaminated with their own mucus, which had been frozen previously when they had their colds. Because they had developed immunity to these germs, doctors could study how easily they picked them up without putting them at risk of getting sick again. Each volunteer visited two rooms and their hands were tested afterward for viruses. Results were positive on 60 percent of contacts in rooms where mucus had dried for at least an hour, and on 33 percent of those in rooms where mucus had dried overnight. The study was sponsored by Reckitt-Benckiser Inc., makers of Lysol, but did not test any products. Doctors with no ties to the company designed the study to lay the groundwork for future research on germs and ways to get rid of them. Some in the hotel industry say they have strict policies on how to disinfect rooms between guests. "We do wipe everything down, from the remote control to the telephone," said Michelle Pike, corporate director of housekeeping for Hilton brand hotels.

UT-Austin gets grant for powerful computer

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas at Austin has been awarded a $59 million grant from the National Science Foundation to build and operate a new supercomputer that would be among the world's most powerful.

The system will be built by Sun Microsystems Inc. and use 13,000 microprocessors from Advanced Micro Devices Inc., said officials at UT's Texas Advanced Computing Center, which will run the machine.

When finished in October 2007, the supercomputer will be capable of 400 trillion calculations per second, officials said.

Currently, International Business Machine Corp.'s Blue Gene/L system at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California is the fastest supercomputer in the world, according to the Top500 project, an independent group of university computer scientists who release supercomputer rankings every six months. The computer is capable of 280 trillion calculations per second. The Texas computer will be a collaboration between UT-Austin, Santa Clara, Calif.-based Sun Microsystems, Arizona State University and Cornell University.

Through an application process, the computer will be available to academic and government researchers for various projects, from better understanding proteins to predicting severe weather to modeling interstellar supernovas. Ten percent of the machine's capacity is being reserved equally for other Texas universities and for business applications.

"This resource will help Texas academic researchers provide answers to some of the most perplexing scientific questions," said Mark Yudof, chancellor of the University of Texas System.

The $59 million federal grant, which was announced Thursday, will pay for the system and operating expenses for the next four years.

Lake Marvin receding

Recent drought conditions have had an impact on Lake Marvin, east of Canadian. Water levels are noticeably down at the lake, which is part of the Black Kettle National Grasslands. On the Friday that the above photo was taken, only one other person, a maintenance worker mowing the grounds, was at the lake. Some docks are no longer near the water as a result of the low lake level.

IRS ensnared in the politics of the pulpit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The IRS is increasingly being asked to referee disputes over whether churches are improperly engaging in partisan politicking from the pulpit. And some fear the trend could endanger the taxman's neutrality.

Months before November's midterm elections, the Internal Revenue Service warned that it would be scrutinizing churches to make sure they do not violate their tax-exempt status. Groups both liberal and conservative have responded by lodging numerous complaints against churches with the IRS.

"Any citizen can form a group and spy on all these churches and report the results," said Ed McCaffery, dean of the University of Southern California School of Law and a tax law expert. "This entanglement of church and state vis-a-vis the tax laws is deeply out of control."

Churches can be important political forums during election season. Under federal tax law, churches can discuss politics, but if they endorse candidates or parties, they can be stripped of their tax-exempt status.

The IRS saw a spike in complaints of partisan politicking in 2004, the last national elections.

More recently, a group of pastors in Ohio filed a complaint with the IRS against two megachurch pastors they accused of actively supporting Ohio Secretary of State Ken Blackwell, a Republican running for governor.

And the IRS was in the spotlight last week when the liberal All Saints Church, an Episcopal congregation in Pasadena, refused to cooperate with an investigation into an anti-war sermon a guest pastor delivered two days before the 2004 presidential election.

William Murray, who started the Web site www.ratoutachurch.org in 2004, predicts the number of IRS complaints about politics in the pulpit will increase in two years as Republicans and Democrats hone their tactics.

Murray said he collected more than 30 complaints against liberal, mostly black, churches on his Web site during the last presidential contest. He referred several cases to the IRS, he said, and has received two more during this year's midterm contests.

"I actually believe that what I'm doing with this is wrong, but I'm doing it in a defensive nature," said Murray, executive director of the Religious Freedom Action Coalition. "Somebody has to defend the conservative churches and the only way to protect them is to attack the liberal churches."

Some of those familiar with the IRS say recent changes in how the agency handles such cases could make it more vulnerable to political manipulation.

Until 2000, the decision to investigate churches and charities was made by one of a few high-ranking regional commissioners. Now that decision is made by a lower-level administrator, who may be less politically attuned, said Marcus Owens, All Saints' attorney and a former IRS administrator.

"What was not intended to be a biased audit program is at risk of becoming one," Owens said.

Steve Miller, commissioner of the IRS' tax exempt and government entities division, dismissed such concerns, saying each complaint is reviewed by a three-person panel before being forwarded to the administrator. The decision to investigate a church must also be approved by an attorney, he said.

In 2004, the IRS launched investigations of 110 organizations; of the 90 it completed, it found violations in about 70 percent of the cases. In 2005, the agency began audits of 70 churches and charities, which are still pending. It has 40 cases pending this year, a time when IRS officials have promised to redouble their scrutiny.

The agency relies on material gathered by outsiders. "I don't think anyone would want to see our guys sitting in the back pew," Miller said.

According to the IRS, the only church ever to be stripped of its tax-exempt status for partisan political activity was a church near Binghamton, N.Y., that was penalized in 1995 after running newspaper ads against Bill Clinton in 1992.

In fact, Miller said half of all complaints are immediately thrown out as frivolous.

Despite concerns about the politicization of the IRS complaint system, many say the agency is still a crucial check that prevents religious organizations from becoming arms of a political party.

Sea Center sees resurgence in species after hurricanes

LAKE JACKSON, Texas (AP) — Many of those delicious redfish and speckled trout Texas fishermen so love to catch are born in tanks in a nondescript white building in Lake Jackson.

But a year ago, Hurricane Rita killed most of the breeding stock at Sea Center Texas, one of the premier saltwater fish research and hatchery facilities in Texas.

Thanks to techniques developed at the center since it opened in 1996 including regulating temperature and light, new breeding stock are once again in the throes of piscine romance. So far this year they have produced about 15 million young, and are expected to have several million more, said director

David Abrego.

Not bad for 60 hardworking fish.

Fishing is big business in Texas. Last year anglers caught about a quarter-million redfish and almost a million speckled trout along the Texas coast, said Mark Fisher, coastal fisheries science director for Texas Parks and Wildlife.

The number of redfish is now the highest it has been in the 30 years they have been tracked in Texas, Fisher said. In the 1960s, commercial gill netting hit the species hard, as did a series of severe freezes in the 1980s.

Abrego said he and other workers at the center were heartbroken Sept. 24, 2005, to return from the hurricane evacuation to find all but nine of the center's breeding redfish and all of the speckled trout dead.

"They were just cooked," he said. "We were devastated. It was horrible."

Workers were forced to leave a few days earlier when a mandatory evacuation was called for Brazoria County. At the time, Rita was headed straight for Freeport.

Fish in the tanks are dependent upon electrically pumped water circulation, aeration, lighting, heating and cooling.

The center has a backup generator, but malfunctions shut down power to the tanks, Abrego said.

The aquarium has tanks of sea life representing various Texas coastal waters, ranging from tidal pools to the open Gulf. All of the sealife, including the state's largest moray eel and the aquarium's star, a 300-pound Queensland grouper named Gordon, weathered the storm just fine, Abrego said.

A native of Australian waters, Gordon is an adopted Texan that was once owned by a San Antonio fish fancier.

When he got too big for his owner's tank, he went to live at the San Antonio zoo's aquarium. When he outgrew the zoo's tanks, he was sent to live at Sea Center.

Now he's so well-known to fish lovers that he gets his own birthday party.

"He's a real ham," Abrego said, smiling at the massive gray fish that placidly waved his fins and rolled his eyes.

"When there's a crowd here and when he sees the camera flashes go off, he comes right up here and poses."

Breeding fish can be a frustrating job. Young fish die for all sorts of reasons. Temperatures can be wrong and there can be too much rain at the wrong time on outdoor ponds. The center never had experienced a loss of breeding stock like that caused by Rita.

Workers cleaned out the smelly remains of the fish, cleaned the tanks and used the tragedy as an opportunity to refurbish some leaks, valves and piping.

New breeding fish were captured in coastal waters, and the program resumed.

Breeding of red drum, more commonly called redfish by Texas anglers, is the main business at the center. In the wild, the fish follow yearly patterns of mating, using water temperature and the length of daylight as a calendar.

But at Sea Center, the temperature and amount of light are manipulated to make the fish think the year is only 150 days long, causing them to produce more baby fish every year.

Dad can teach daughter about polygamy

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A father may teach his young daughter about his religious belief in polygamy despite his ex-wife's objections, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court said Thursday.

The 5-1 decision by the state's highest court said

Stanley M. Shepp has a constitutional right to express his beliefs about plural marriages and multiple wives even though bigamy is illegal. Shepp considers himself a fundamentalist Mormon, though the Mormon church officially renounces polygamy.

"Where, as in the instant matter, there is no finding that discussing such matters constitutes a grave threat of harm to the child, there is insufficient basis for the court to infringe on a parent's constitutionally protected right to speak to a child about religion as he or she sees fit," Justice Sandra Schultz Newman wrote.

The girl's mother, Tracey L. Roberts, testified that Shepp's interest in polygamy broke up their marriage, and expressed concern that he may introduce the girl to men in preparation for marriage at age 13, according to the court opinion.

Roberts and Shepp have joint legal custody of the girl, who is now 13.

Parcells says Owens will make trip to Tennessee

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Bill Parcells hasn't decided whether Terrell Owens will play Sunday, but the Cowboys receiver will be in Tennessee.

Owens practiced for the second straight day Friday, his first workouts since breaking his right hand Sept. 17. The injury didn't appear to bother him during the 15 minutes of practice open to the media.

Although Owens has done everything he's been asked to do in practice, Parcells said Friday he still would have "to make some game-time decisions about who will participate" in Sunday's game against the Titans.

Owens refused to say if he'd play, reminding reporters surrounding his locker that he talks on Wednesdays. There was only a small bandage over the scar on his still-swollen hand.

"No, it's gone down a lot," Owens said of the swelling.

When asked if he had sat down with Owens, Parcells said he "would have time to do that."

The coach has spoken only briefly with Owens since the receiver was hospitalized Tuesday night after mixing painkillers he was prescribed for his hand injury with his usual supplements.

Parcells has said he must make sure Owens is physically and mentally ready to play. Although the coach will have the final say, he defers to experts in the other areas.

"I have to, as the coach, rely on other people to keep me informed as to what's going on," Parcells said on Thursday. "I can't form my own independent opinion other than those involving, 'Is his hand functional and can he play on Sunday?' If my medical people tell me those things are in place, and then he looks like he's (OK), we'll make that consideration then."

While Owens was in the hospital, a police report obtained by the media said he was depressed and had attempted suicide. Owens denounced it a few hours later, and several pieces of information released Thursday - a final report from police and the 911 tape from Tuesday night - supported his assertions.

The police have closed their investigation, calling it an accidental overdose not a suicide attempt. Dallas Police Chief David Kunkle said he still has "great confidence" in his officers' initial report, but noted that document is not "the definitive account of the incident."

"We're dealing with incomplete information, and facts that change," he said. For instance, the initial report indicated there was an empty pill bottle and 35 unaccounted for painkillers; Owens later said the missing medicine was in a drawer.

"Further investigation leads you to a different conclusion," Kunkle said. The 911 call by Owens' publicist Kim Etheredge shows that she was on the line for 41 seconds, never said anything about a suicide attempt and never mentioned Owens' name.

"I think he took too many pills," she told a paramedic. "Please. Now. ... What do I do if the pills are down the throat?"

When Etheredge spoke to reporters Wednesday, she lashed out at authorities, saying, "I am just upset that I just feel they take advantage of Terrell. Had this been someone else, this may not have happened."

Kunkle dismissed the criticism Thursday, but the head of the Dallas Police Association didn't. He called for an apology from Owens and Etheredge, saying, "We police officers don't go out to these calls and make stuff up."

"They're being put under a microscope by some fancy little football person," Senior Cpl. Glenn White said Thursday. "Give me a break. Those officers are 10 times better than this man."

Etheredge later said she was sorry in an interview with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. She added that her comments were "about the entire situation with the report and ensuing media controversy," not just the police.

"I would like to apologize for any slight and am extremely thankful to the police, the fire department and the paramedics for their quick response," she said.

Etheredge was far from being angry and outraged on her call to 911. She started out politely, saying in an urgent tone, "Hi, I have an emergency please."

Anxious but composed, she said "thank you" before being transferred to a paramedic, then told the second operator, "Hi. I need an ambulance please, immediately."

The paramedic asked if her friend was still breathing. Told that he was, the paramedic reassured Etheredge that rescue workers were en route.

"Thank you," she said.

Capers returns to Houston

HOUSTON (AP) - Dom Capers was fired by the Houston Texans in January after the worst season in his head coaching career. On Sunday, he'll return as an assistant with Miami to try and help the Dolphins keep the ever-struggling Texans winless.

Because Dolphins coach Nick Saban has made media access to assistants almost non-existent, thoughts about what this game means to Capers were left to those permitted to address the subject.

"It's always disappointing to anyone who doesn't succeed, at whatever they work hard to try to do," Saban said of Capers. "I would feel no different than that. But I think he's got too much class to really hold any grudges or be negative about it. I think he's just positive about the opportunity he had."

Good feelings aside, Capers would love to beat the team that fired him, right?

"I'm sure it means a little something for him, but I'm sure he's not going to make too much out of it either and just treat it as one game," Dolphins linebacker Zach Thomas said. "I know he was there since the start. It's probably something that deep inside he wants to win it."

Texans coach Gary Kubiak had only good things to say about the man whose job he took.

"He knows these players better than anybody," Kubiak said. "On top of that he's a great football coach, he's always given us fits playing against him. But you know the Miami Dolphins have great defense for many, many years. And add his expertise to that and that makes it even tougher."

Capers took over in Miami for current Texans defensive coordinator Richard Smith. While the Dolphins' defense remains solid, allowing just 276 yards per game, Smith hasn't brought success to the Texans' defense. Houston is allowing an NFL-worst 484 yards a game.

"I think if there's patience there that this group will turn into a really good unit," Saban said of Houston's defense. "They're very capable of playing well."

No. 1 pick Mario Williams, a defensive end, hasn't made much of an impact and Kubiak publicly criticized him for the first time this week, saying he was "disappointed" in his play.

"I feel like it was well deserved," Williams said of the criticism. "Obviously the production has not been where everybody anticipated, not just you guys, but myself. I have to be the leader on the field. I realize that, and I just have to go out and get better every day and help the team out."

Dolphins running back Ronnie Brown, who has 190 yards rushing and two scores, isn't that curious to get a look at Williams.

"Not really. I've watched a little bit on him on film," Brown said.

"He's a big guy, athletic. His size is one of his advantages, but I think we're going to try to take advantage. He is a rookie."

Miami has had its share of trials this year, but is trying to build momentum after picking up its first win last week, 13-10 over Tennessee.

Daunte Culpepper has just one touchdown pass, three interceptions and has been sacked 16 times, numbers that have raised questions about his health in the wake of his comeback from last year's reconstructive knee surgery.

"It's always going to be a work in progress," Culpepper said. "I've always said that. Coming off an injury like this, I knew things would be a little bit different early."

Saban remains confident in his quarterback despite the struggles.

"He thinks he's healthy enough," Saban said. "We think he's healthy enough. If we don't think he's healthy enough we'll play somebody else. It's simple."

While Culpepper is trying to get back to his old self, Houston's David Carr is looking to become the quarterback Houston projected when he was taken first in the 2002 draft.

Though the Texans have yet to establish a running game without Domanick Davis, Carr is better protected and has six touchdowns with one interception. His 113.6 passer rating leads the league.

But he remains worried Houston can't be effective if the running game doesn't improve, despite the strong play of receivers Andre Johnson, who is third in the NFL in yards receiving with 309, and Eric Moulds.

"Me and Andre and Eric and all those guys, we're going to give our best effort outside," Carr said. "We're going to be able to make plays. It's just a matter of how many are we going to be able to make if we can't get a running game established? That's why you have to try and go in and do it."

The Texans plan to stay with Ron Dayne, who has 95 yards in two games, as their starter. He got his first start in almost two years last week against Washington.

Braves end Astros' streak

ATLANTA (AP) - Roger Clemens wasn't ready to talk about any endings for himself or the Houston Astros.

"We still have some baseball to be played," Clemens said after losing in what might have been the final start of his career, 4-1 to the Atlanta Braves on Friday night. "Standing here in front of y'all with two games left to play, that's pretty nice."

Houston's run at one of baseball's greatest late-season comebacks — the Astros trailed in the division by 8 1/2 games on Sept. 20 — was dealt another blow when first-place St. Louis beat Milwaukee 10-5, extending the Cardinals' lead in the NL Central to 1 1/2 games.

"This just slowed us down a little bit," Astros manager Phil Garner said. "We've been playing mighty good, and we've still got some momentum. We've got to take that to heart tonight."

With the score 0-0 in the sixth, first baseman Lance Berkman misplayed Chipper Jones grounder as Atlanta's first run scored in a two-run inning. Edgar Renteria and Jones added consecutive homers off Fernando Nieve in the eighth.

There were runners on first and third when Berkman charged in for a possible throw to the plate only to miss the ball.

"He was coming hard and that was going to be his play," Clemens said. "We had just talked about that on the mound, that was what he was going to do on a hard-hit ball or a soft-hit ball."

Clemens (7-6), a 44-year-old right-hander who has won seven Cy Young Awards in a big league career that began in 1984, allowed two runs — one earned — and six hits in six innings.

"Roger proved tonight that he can pitch in any big game," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

The Rocket dropped to 348-178 in his career, and with seven strikeouts he raised his total to 4,604, second only to Nolan Ryan's 5,714.

Rangers 6, Mariners 5

SEATTLE (AP) - Even with power numbers lower than the previous two seasons, Michael Young of the Texas Rangers continued to improve as a hitter this year.

Young doubled twice to set a franchise record for two-base hits in a season, and drove in two runs in the Rangers' 6-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Friday night.

Young hit his 51st double in the first inning to break Juan Gonzalez's club record set in 1998.

His more damaging hit came in the sixth, snapping a 3-3 tie with a two-out, two-run double off reliever Emiliano Fruto.

"To be in a situation where I can improve every year and set a record with an organization that has had so many great hitters means a lot," Young said.

Young has 14 homers this year, down from a career-high 24 last season. But he topped 100 RBIs for the first time and the 52 doubles are 12 more than last season.

Young is closing the season strong, hitting .396 over the last 12 games.

Young set another franchise record

Friday with his 740th plate appearance, besting his mark of 739 in 2004.

"Mike just never ceases to amaze me, the things he does," Texas manager Buck Showalter said. "He is playing today like it's the first day of spring training. He's got that same zest."

Vicente Padilla got career-high 15th win. Padilla (15-10) pitched 5 1-3 innings, allowing four runs and seven hits in winning for the second time in six September starts.

Padilla teased and flustered some Seattle batters with off-speed floaters as slow as 61 mph, only to throw 94 mph fastballs on the next pitch.

He struggled with control at times walking four, but struck out six and allowed only three hits after the first inning. He was pulled after giving up Ichiro Suzuki's ninth triple of the season with one out in the sixth on his season-high 118th pitch.

"We kind of smiled at each other when we got those runs to go ahead," Showalter said. "I think it was indicative of the way he has pitched for us this year."

Randy Johnson may miss start of playoffs

NEW YORK (AP) - Yankees left-hander Randy Johnson has a herniated disc in his lower back, an injury that could prevent him from pitching in the playoffs next week.

The injury was discovered during an MRI exam Thursday. After being examined by team physician Dr. Stuart Hershon and back specialist Dr. Paul Kufflick, Johnson received an epidural injection Friday. Johnson, who turned 43 on Sept. 10, is expected to play catch Saturday and throw a side session Sunday at Yankee Stadium.

The Yankees wouldn't specify which disc is herniated, but said it's not the one that caused Johnson to have back surgery in 1996.

CHICAGO (AP) - The daughter of Chicago Cubs first baseman Derrek Lee has a rare genetic disease that causes blindness in young children, and he said he has started a foundation with the owner of the Boston Celtics to find a cure.

Jada, who is 3 years old and Lee's only child, has lost vision in one eye. Lee, the 2005 NL batting champion, has spent the last two weeks researching Leber's Congenital Amaurosis. He has teamed with Celtics owner Wyc Grousbeck, whose son is one of only about 3,000 people in the United States with the disease.

Lee said the goal of his foundation, called "Project 3000," is to have everyone with the disease tested because that will aid research.

So far, he said, only about 500 of those diagnosed have undergone genetic testing.

Lee has not played since announcing Sept. 17 that his daughter was ill.

GOLF NOTES

Woods catches fire in England

American Express
CHANDLER'S CROSS, England (AP) - Tiger Woods made another eagle on the 18th hole Friday in the American Express Championship, only this one didn't finish off a great round. It pumped life into what had been a dull one.

Woods, who started his round on the back nine, went on to birdie four of his next six holes on his way to a 7-under 64 that gave him his best 36-hole start in six years and a five-shot lead going into the weekend in the World Golf Championship event.

He was at 15-under 127 and will be paired in the third round with Ryder Cup partner Jim Furyk, who played his last five holes in 1 over and still managed a 65. Stewart Cink (67) and David Howell (66) also were at 10-under 132.

Padraig Harrington shot a 69 and was another shot back.

It was Woods' lowest over the first two days since he shot 64-61 at Firestone in 2000 to build a seven-shot lead at the NEC Invitational. In the midst of his best year in golf, Woods went on to win that tournament by 11 shots.

Woods already has won seven times this year on the PGA Tour, including two majors (Masters and British Open) and one World Golf Championship at Firestone last month.

Southern Farm Bureau Classic

MADISON, Miss. (AP) - D.J. Trahan shot a bogey-free 4-under 68 to take a two-stroke lead after the second round of the Southern Farm Bureau Classic.

Trahan had an 11-under 133 total on the Annandale Golf Club course. Joe Durant (65) and Brad Faxon (67) were tied for second.

Mathias Gronberg (68) was 8 under, Skip Kendall (69) was alone at 7 under, and Ted Purdy (70), Robert Damron (69), Troy Matteson (66) and Nick Watney (71) were 6 under. Thirteen players, including two-time champion Fred Funk (70), were four shots back.

After an opening-round 76, John Daly shot a 65 to avoid the cut. He was six shots back at 3 under.

Greater Hickory Classic
CONOVER, N.C. (AP) - Andy Bean matched his best score in four years on the Champions Tour, shooting a 9-under 63 to take a four-stroke lead after the first round of the Greater Hickory Classic.

The 53-year-old Bean, winless on the 50-and-over tour after winning 11 times on PGA Tour, tied the tournament record set by Joe Inman in 2003.

Bean, who also shot a 63 two weeks ago in the second round of the Constellation Energy Classic in Maryland, eagled the par-5 fourth hole and had eight birdies and a bogey on the Rock Barn Golf and Spa's Jones Course.

Chip Beck, making his second senior start, was four strokes back at 67 along with Dana Quigley and Mark Johnson. Tom Kite, Tom Purtzer, Leonard Thompson, Tom Wargo and Bob Eastwood shot 68s.

Remembering motoring's golden age, but not everything

By ADAM GELLER
AP National Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — It is time once again to journey to the past. And so, as they have for one afternoon each of the past 21 summers now, the old autoworkers flock to Moose Lodge 288 on the fringes of this car capital, collecting name tags at the door. For a few, treasured hours, this is an unlikely portal back to a sort of industrial Brigadoon. "There he is!" they greet each other. "Hey, I know you!" comes the answer. "You see that little guy over there? He reminds me of that guy on American Bandstand. Never changes," one man whispers, pointing across a room of silver hair and stooped shoulders. When what was left of the Reo Motor Car Co. died 31 years ago, its sturdy Speed Wagons and torpedo-nosed Royale Eights, already collector's items, gained added currency as the last tangible artifacts of a golden time. The memories live on vividly here under the slow-spinning ceiling fans and faint fluorescents of the fraternal hall. At least the good ones do. They were the best of times, the Reoites recall. Bosses treated workers with respect then. Workers treated each other like family. No sir, there's nothing like the Reo of memory anymore, they lament.

The question, unspoken and perhaps unanswerable in the warm fog of nostalgia, is: Was there ever, really? America's long relationship with the auto industry is often described as a love affair. But it's much more complicated than that.

Today, with General Motors Corp. cutting thousands of jobs and Ford Motor Co. struggling to find its way, Americans mourn all that we may be losing. To appraise what is at stake now, it helps to take measure of what has already been lost. And in the case of Reo, folks seem to have set aside the less comfortable memories.

"Willful amnesia," says Lisa Fine, an associate professor at nearby Michigan State University who has documented Reo's history. Selective memory about America's autobuilding past is something many of us share.

"The nostalgia is there," says Sean McAlinden of the Center for Automotive Research, "but it might be for something that never existed."

Jim Cataline was just out of high school in 1945, clerking at A&P and waiting for the Eaton County draft board to call. In the interim, he applied for a job at Reo.

The following Monday he reported for work at the sprawling, red-brick factory. It was a heady summer for a 17-year-old kid, quickly introduced to a life at Reo that went well beyond the end of his shift.

"I remember the biggest party," he says, recalling a July night 61 years ago when a crowd packed the grand columned clubhouse Reo erected for its workers. "Everyone had their own bottle in there and was mixing their booze and the Coke. The band was playing and everybody was dancing. This was bigtime."

Stories like his fill a treasured chapter in Lansing's rich autobuilding lore. Few people even know such a company existed. Maybe they've seen Reo's logo of outstretched wings, heard of the little truck it initially called the Hurry-Up Wagon, but only because they were adopted as the name and symbol of a 1980s pop band.

That hardly troubles Reo folks, who speak of Reo as kin. "This is a family," says Peggy Hadwin, widow of a former Reo worker. "Always has been. Always will be."

The patriarch of the REO family was Ransom Eli Olds, best known as the creator of the Oldsmobile, who started the company in 1904, naming it with his own initials.

By the late 1920s, Reo employed 5,600 and turned out flamboyantly stylish cars and dutifully utilitarian trucks. Its heyday didn't last. Reo introduced its luxury Royale as the Great Depression hit. The company staggered, and gave up cars in 1936 to focus on trucks. It was saved largely by the federal government's loans and wartime orders. It survived until 1975, when a bankruptcy judge ordered its liquidation.

Reoites had little choice but to move on. But three decades later, they retrieve carefully preserved memories of the Reo life. For Dick Lundy, Reo is the place he quickly grew up. It was 1964, and Lundy was working in a special group designing trucks for the U.S. Army fighting in Vietnam. Thanks to a special phone line, generals in Saigon would call the plant, asking for help in remodeling the trucks to fend off the Viet Cong.

Lundy's group responded, with innovations like steel plates to bolt underneath the trucks after the rebels planted explosives beneath the gas tanks.

"We had to fix it in the field because people were dying," Lundy says. "It gave me confidence. It told me what I was capable of, my imagination. My inner self."

For Harry Sayles, a former welder, Reo is a story from 1972, when the inside of his home was devoured by fire. It deprived Sayles, his wife and two children of clothes, shelter and security — at least until co-workers at the plant took up a collection. What, he asks, would they have done otherwise?

"It was things like that that kept it family," he says. Cataline remembers it much the same way. He leads the way now through the thick summer must, deep into his garage and a file cabinet filled with a personal Reo archive. Newsletters. Brochures. Hire slips. Letters. But Cataline, now 78, isn't just holding on to bits of paper.

"Yeah, Reo," he says, with a sigh and a smile. "It was our whole life at one time."

There was another side to Reo, too. It's the one old-timers don't talk about so readily. And although the place closed years ago, its factory jobs were in many ways much like the ones today's autoworkers describe.

"I got off the line as soon as I could," says Noel Johnson, now 68, who hired on at Reo installing gas tanks on truck, after truck, after truck.

Back then there was little in the way of safety procedures or equipment. In an old plant, jerry-rigged for a new age, workers on the line stooped and ducked as steel baskets loaded with parts rotated overhead. Johnson points to the crease etched in the skin between his eyebrows, a scar left by one of those baskets when the factory worker, preoccupied with trying to catch up with the line, turned around too quickly.

"You're doing the same old humdrum every day, every moment doing the same thing and you've got to work at a fast pace because the line doesn't wait for you," he says. "It just keeps on moving."

Working on the line required tolerance of both discomfort and tension. Older line workers wouldn't show new hires how things worked for fear their jobs would be taken. The roof had so many holes that the men hung buckets from the ceiling.

"It leaked like a sieve. It was cold in the winter. Part of the building didn't have any heat in it. But still it was a great place," Sayles says.

Such statements perplexed Fine, the professor who interviewed scores of the workers for a book "The Story of REO Joe."

They described a Reo with virtually no conflicts between unionized workers and management. But Fine found a long, bitter record of such tensions, including wildcat strikes that stretched from 1942 to 1946.

Yet Fine's suggestion to workers that they mention the labor struggles on the historical marker being made for the factory site was ignored.

"They shut out the bad things that they didn't want to remember or didn't choose to remember," she says.

Harvester Hall of Fame

A reception Thursday and an induction ceremony Friday will be held to honor this year's inductees into the Pampa High School Harvester Hall of Fame. Edward "Skip" Culberson, Class of 1955, and James Orr, Class of 1952, are the new inductees.

The reception will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Pampa High School library, and the induction ceremony will be at 10 a.m. Friday at McNeely Fieldhouse.

James Orr

Jim (whenever someone asks for "Jimmy" he knows that it's either a relative or someone from Pampa) was born outside Seminole, Okla., on Jan. 22, 1935, to Robert and Annelle Orr. When he was 6 months old, the family moved to the Phillips Pampa camp 10 miles south of town. That house was his home for the next 17 years.

His only sibling, Martha, graduated from Pampa High School in 1940. Her class was the last to graduate from the downtown building which became Pampa Junior High.

Jim attended Hopkins School in the camp, along with such luminaries as Harold Courson; Alma Ruth Alverson McBride; Neva Lynn Cox Davis-Wright; James, Dick and Alice Seawright; Marva Su Stone and several others whose names have faded from his failing memory.

Marvin Bond lived at the Cabot camp a couple of miles away, Chuck Broyles lived in another camp a few miles toward Lefors, and Jimmy Smith moved to the camp for PJHS and PHS. They all rode the bus into PJHS and PHS for the eighth through 12th grades. At PJHS, Jim was salutatorian (Blaine Johnson was valedictorian) and moved on the PHS.

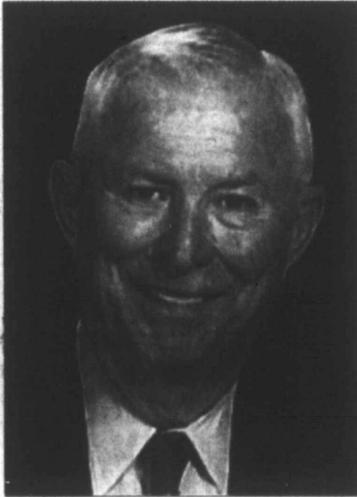

At PHS, Jim was involved in a lot of activities, including Mixed Chorus, and A Cappella choir, Hi-Y, class plays, Student Council, and intramurals, and held offices in most of the activities in which he participated. He was inducted into the National Honor Society in his junior year, and in 1951 he represented Pampa at Lone Star Boys' State.

When graduation came, he had the misfortune to be in a class with some really bright girls, so they made up a category for him called Highest Ranking Boy. He attended Sunday school and church at the First Presbyterian Church which still stand on Gray Street.

In addition to his parents, a lot of faculty members and other adults had a lasting influence on him. Sheriff Rufe Jordan and the Rev. Doug Nelson taught him that character matters. Bill Hopkins, John Plaster, Mrs. Norman, Wayne Cox and Johnnie Douglas inculcated a love of science and mathematics. Eloise Lane and Ken Baumgardner instilled a love of vocal music that endures to this day.

Jack Edmondson, Cameron Marsh and Warren Hasse made him understand that service to his country was a fundamental duty of every citizen. Miles Morgan taught him the pride of a job well done. Bill Hopkins and Coach Tripp threatened to whip him behind the gym if he joined the Marine Corps out of high school and didn't pursue his college opportunity. He also owes Pat Ellis Marlin, whose birthday is in March, for keeping for keeping him from being the youngest member of the '52 class.

At Rice Institute, (now Rice University) Jim matriculated on a Naval ROTC scholarship. He participated in a number of extracurricular activities and graduated in 1957 with bachelor of science and bachelor of arts degrees in Civil Engineering.

Orr

The best part of his Rice experience was meeting his supermodel look-alike wife, the former Elizabeth Todd of Beaumont. Since the Navy paid for his education, he owed them three years, and he chose to serve it in the Marine Corps.

He got the opportunity to go to flight training, and spent the next 20-some years traveling the world and flying the world's finest airplanes. He spend three years in Hawaii and did a Mediterranean cruise aboard the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga. He had two tours in Vietnam, the second flying combat missions in the A-6 Intruder.

He completed the U.S. Naval Test Pilot School where he was top student in the class. He did two tours as a test pilot. He flew the unique vertical takeoff and landing Harrier jet in its early its and commanded the Marine Corps' first Harrier squadron.

He accumulated more than 5,000 hours of flight time and hundreds of carrier landings (many at night) in heaven knows how many types of aircraft.

He is a member of the prestigious Society of Experimental Test Pilots. He graduated with honors from the Naval War College and the Defense Systems Management College.

His final assignment as a Marine officer was program manager of a $10 billion airplane acquisition program. He retired with the rank of colonel and ran the North American office of a British-owned aerospace company before opening his own consulting business. He describes a consultant as someone too lazy for a full time job.

Col. and Mrs. Orr now reside in Lago Vista, Texas. Jim is an active member of the local Lions Club and Hope Presbyterian Church in

Edward Culberson

Edward was born on the morning of Sept. 12, 1936, in Pampa-Jarrett Hospital, the first born of four children, to his parents, Edward and Gertrude Culberson.

He attended grade school at B.M. Baker and junior high at the "yellow brick" school on the corner of Cuyler and Francis streets, and graduated from Pampa High School in 1955.

In December of 1955, he wed the former Norita Lynn Sasser. They were married for 23 years until her untimely death in July of 1978.

Edward worked for the next few years at Celanese in Pampa, and as a traffic policeman in Lubbock. During this period they were blessed with their first son, Edward M. III, better known as Buster.

While in Lubbock they determined that he should join the U.S. Navy, and on April 21, 1959, they entered the service of our country.

During the next 17 or so years, Edward attended Navy Basic Electronics School in Treasure Island, Calif., served at the Naval Air Station, Point Mugu, Calif., where he was advanced to 3rd Class Petty Officer. From there, he was transferred to the USS Norton Sound, AVM-1 in Port Huenueme, Calif.

Nine months later their second son Jeffrey was born. Edward was transferred to the Naval Communication Station in Adak, Alaska, and Norita went back to Pampa for the duration.

During this tour, Edward was promoted to 2nd Class Petty Officer and re-enlisted for the Navy's advanced electronic school. This resulted in a transfer to the Service Schools Command, TI, San Francisco, Calif., where Norita and the boys rejoined him.

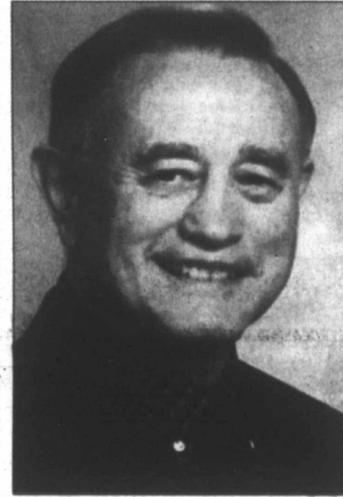

While there he was promoted to 1st Class Petty Officer. Upon graduation, they were transferred to the Service Schools Command at Great Lakes Naval Training Center in Waukegan, Ill., where Edward served as an instructor in the Navy's Basic Electronic schools.

While there, their third son Brian was born in the Great Lakes Naval Hospital. He was also advanced to Chief Petty Officer, E7, and shortly thereafter was selected for the Navy's newly reinstated Warrant Officer program.

Edward attended both the Navy's Officer Candidate School for Warrant Officers and also the Communication Officer School in Newport, R.I., while Norita and the boys remained at Great Lakes.

After Rhode Island, he spent the next two years at the Naval Communication School in Keflevic, Iceland, but before Norita and the boys came to be with him, their first and only daughter Lisa was born in Pampa Highland General Hospital. Actually, with the exception of Brian, all their children were born in Highland General Hospital in Pampa.

After Iceland, Edward was transferred to the USS Isle Royale, AD-29, in Long Beach, Calif. This two-year tour was cut short by 12 months when they were transferred to the Naval Communication Station, Hawaii. During this tour, he was promoted to Commissioned Warrant Officer, W-2.

After four years in Hawaii, Edward received orders to the USS Ogden, LPD-5, in San Diego, Calif. After almost two years aboard the USS Ogden, he was transferred to the U.S. Navy Service Schools Command, San Diego, for humanitarian shore duty. It was at this time that Norita passed away. After a period of time, he became reacquainted with Marlene Rice (Kolb), who was also a Class of 1955 graduate, and they married. A year later a son Noah (His fourth and Marlene's fifth child) was born in Balboa Naval Hospital in San Diego in April of 1979.

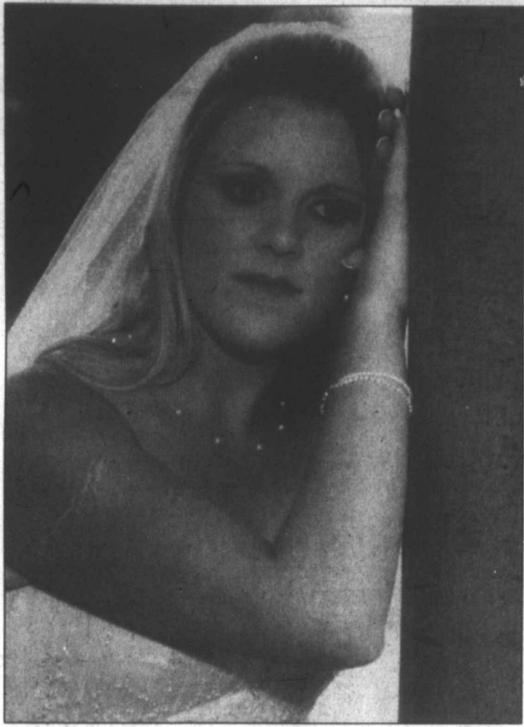

A short time later, the Navy offered Edward a billet at the Naval Communication Station in the Philippines as both the Operations Officer and also Command Electronics Materiel Officer. It was here he was advanced to Commissioned Warrant Officer, W-4.

After two years in the Philippines, Marlene and Edward determined it would be better for Noah if he retired from the service, so in August 1981, after 22 years of navy life, they became civilians.

The change from navy life to civilian life led them to their first civilian duty station at Beckman Instruments in Porterville, Calif., where Edward worked as a manufacturing engineer.

Edward worked in Tucson from April of 1994 until his retirement from Raytheon in April, 2006. He says, "I'm actually into my third career and loving every moment of it." Jeri and Edward reside in Sugar Land, Texas.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. We know the most effective method of early detection is mammography screening. However, the most recent survey of American women has shown that more than 40 percent had not had a mammogram in the past year, that many women fail to get regular mammograms, and that only one-third of women without health insurance were able to get a mammogram the previous year. This issue resonates deeply with me for reasons that go beyond my being president of the American Cancer Society and a surgeon who meets and treats women with cancer every day. I, too, am a breast cancer survivor. It breaks my heart knowing there are women who should be getting mammograms, but aren't. Mammograms save lives! For many women, the decision about whether to get a mammogram is out of their hands. They simply can't afford it. The American Cancer Society feels strongly that mammograms are not a luxury but a necessity, and all women deserve one every year. We have spent decades in the fight to reduce cancer disparities by working to ensure that a greater proportion of Americans have access to screening and treatment. The society has been a longtime supporter of the CDC's National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program, which provides access to high-quality breast cancer screenings and treatment to uninsured or underinsured women, with an emphasis on women between the ages of 50-64. While the program has done extraordinary work to save the lives of women from breast and cervical cancer, it serves only 20 percent of eligible women due to lack of funds. And if that is not sad enough, its limited reach could be further compromised by proposals out of the White House and Congress to decrease funding. I hope that you and your readers will agree that income level should not determine whether someone survives breast cancer. For more information on the program, or to find a local program to determine their eligibility, your readers should call 1-800-ACS-2345. — CAROLYN RUNOWICZ, M.D., AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

DEAR DR. RUNOWICZ AND READERS: Rather than cutting a valuable program that serves only one out of five women, shouldn't we be asking how the program can be extended to reach the other four who need help? A lifesaving program such as this one is too important to cut, because with a modest investment, more lives could be saved through it. The American Cancer Society is asking Congress to support this program and give it greater flexibility to reach the women in greatest need and increase the funding so it can help more of them. Because this is an election year, I urge concerned women to contact their legislators in Washington, D.C., and tell them how you feel about this important program. If you don't know who your representatives are, go to www.house.gov and enter your ZIP code. In simple terms, the squeaky wheel gets the grease, so speak up and be heard.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO MY JEWISH READERS: At sundown the Day of Atonement -- Yom Kippur -- begins. It's a time when observant Jewish people fast, engage in reflection and prayer, and formally repent for any sin that might have been committed during the previous Hebrew year. To all of you, Shana Tovah. May your fast be an easy one.
