Builders say one-third of housing inquiries are from people moving to Pampa

Demand, construction costs increasing

by David Bowser
 dbowser@thepampanews.com

In the evening, Chuck Morgan will stop by the new construction site and pick up trash and visit with people stopping to look at the new homes he's building on Crane Street.

"I think we're getting four or five phone calls a day now from people interested in new housing," Morgan said.

He estimated that about a third of the phone calls are from people moving to Pampa.

"I've had several phone calls from Dallas," Morgan said.

He said people are moving in for jobs at Titan and Halliburton.

"There's one company that we'd never heard of," Morgan said. "They sell drill bits for rigs, and they're going to open up a branch office here."

What prompted him to build the homes was the increasing demand for housing in Pampa. There have been some larger custom-built housing built over the past few years, but few in the mid-range.

In talking with real estate agents, Morgan said, that demand seems to be growing.

"They seem to have as good a feel for the market as anybody," Morgan said. "They have first hand knowledge of people coming in and needing housing."

Morgan said he started planning these houses about a year and a half ago.

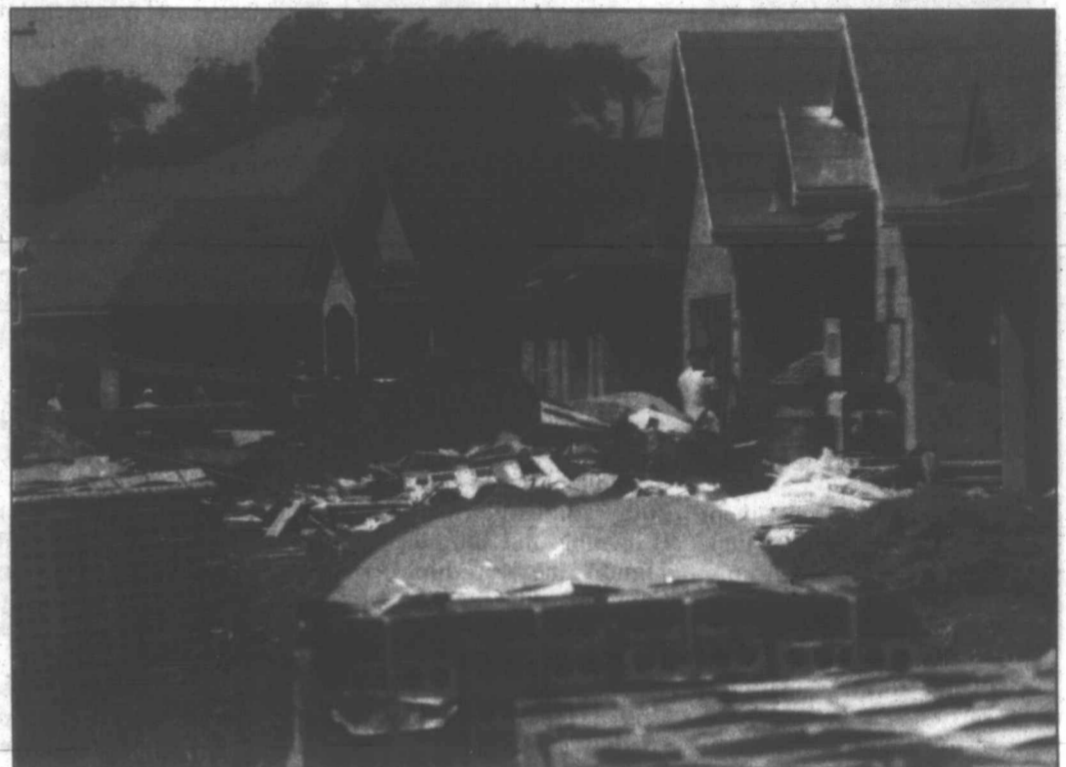

"We're building 12 right now," Morgan said. "They're all 1,550 to 1,580 square feet."

At $103 per square foot, these houses will cost about $160,000, but those prices will likely rise as the cost of building goes up.

"Really," he said, "it needs to be more than that."

The price of steel and petroleum has gone up, and that's affected the costs of steel and petroleum-based products in home building.

"Petroleum is in just about everything in a house," he said, "from the PVC pipe in our plumbing to our asphalt shingles on the roof."

 New houses are under construction along Crane Street in Pampa.

He said the standard composite shingle that's been used for years used to cost $35 a square.

"We were paying $50 at the first of the year," Morgan said. "Now, we're paying $70, and the shingle companies tell us that they're liable to be $100 by the end of the year."

As for steel, Morgan said that the cost of the rebar that they put in the concrete foundations has doubled over the past year.

Local teens earn $1,738 for CASA programs

"We expected to close at noon Friday, and we were there until 3 p.m.," Marszal said of the garage sale. "People would buy $11 worth and give us $40. People would come by and give money even if they didn't buy anything. Someone sent a private donation after the garage sale, saying, 'Sorry I missed the sale. Hope this helps.'"

This year's total is more than twice as much as was collected in the junior volunteers' garage sale in 2007, when they collected less than $300.

Teens age 13 and up are eligible to be Junior CASA volunteers. The Pampa chapter is the first of its kind in the State of Texas, Marszal said.

For more information on CASA, call 669-7638.

The JCV Teens in Action collected $1,738 over a two-day period as a result of a garage sale they held Aug. 1 and 2.

JCV is the Junior CASA Volunteers, a group of teenagers affiliated with CASA, or Court Appointed Special Advocates, a non-profit organization whose volunteers act as advocates for children who have been removed from abusive and/or neglectful homes. The Pampa chapter is known as CASA of the High Plains.

All proceeds from the garage sale will be donated to CASA of the High Plains for use in programs to benefit its clients, said Ofelia Marszal, volunteer coordinator for

Housing

"We've really experienced some major increases this year," Morgan said.

Morgan said that when he moved to Pampa in 1988, the few houses under construction were being built for $40 per square foot.

"It's crazy how much costs have escalated," Morgan said.

He said that $103 per square foot is the minimum today. Custom built homes are costing at least $125. Some of the larger homes are running up to $450 a square foot.

"The sky's the limit out there," Morgan said. "There are so many options now that you didn't have 20 years ago."

Morgan said he thinks Pampa will continue to need homes that are 1,500 to 2,000 square foot with three and four bedrooms and multiple baths.

"We've had several calls asking about four bedroom homes," Morgan said.

But the costs are rising, not just the building costs, but the costs of the land as well.

"There's a reason why lots cost what they do," Morgan said.

He said it costs a lot of money to put in utility systems and streets.

"Until we use up all the $8,000 to $10,000 lots in town," Morgan said, "we're not going to sell any $20,000 or $25,000 lots."

But he said the less expensive lots are almost gone.

Morgan said he thinks the Pampa Economic Development Corporation should be able to help defray the cost of infrastructure.

"What they could do is front the money to open up a development," Morgan said, "and as the lots sold, that money could go back to the EDC."

They've started framing the last two of the dozen new homes. The first house that they started is now ready for interior painting.

"We're pro-Pampa," Morgan said of his company and his investors. "I've been here for over 20 years."

He said there had been such a lull in the housing market, there wasn't much incentive to build new homes. Now, that is changing.

"We're really optimistic about Pampa's future," Morgan said.

The new lease on life is still primarily because of oil and gas, the industries that traditionally drive Pampa's economy.

Morgan said that there is a diversity of jobs that are bringing people to Pampa, but mostly they are still oil field related jobs.

He said they started planning their new construction long before Boone Pickens announced his intentions to make Pampa the wind capital of the world. Now, the future is looking even brighter for the city, Morgan said.

Although the home building industry is growing in Pampa, that doesn't mean it's not without problems.

Finding the labor force and the land are the trouble spots right now.

"Land is going to be an issue," he admitted.

There has been a shortage of available lots on which to build. In fact, this particular project had its origins when a landowner contacted Morgan and told Morgan that he had 12 lots near Travis Elementary School after he heard that Morgan was interested in building some new homes.

The location turned out to be excellent. It's close to where the new junior high's going to be, Morgan said.

"We felt like it was a great opportunity," he said. "Especially since the 12 lots were all right there together."

The houses could be built at the same time, making a nice neighborhood.

Morgan said that once the new development planned for northwest Pampa opens up, there would be a number of new housing starts.

Don Campbell and his family have donated the land for a new junior high school northwest of Pampa and plan to develop the area around the school.

"I've talked with Don," Morgan said. "We do some work for him."

Morgan also does work for Boone Pickens.

"He helped us get started," Morgan said.

Morgan said that while he is using Pampa companies on the new construction, there are enough of them. He's had to reach out to crews from surrounding towns.

"We use B&G Electric," Morgan said. "We use Larry Baker on all of our commercial stuff."

He said Pampa doesn't have the labor force to do large projects.

"Everybody's capable of doing those," Morgan said, "but they don't have the staff."

The timing is right, he said. There's been a slow down in building in Amarillo, so there are construction crews available to work in Pampa.

"Everybody's been lagging behind because of where we've come from," Morgan said.

He said the support for the new homes has been very positive.

"Everybody's coming up to me and saying, 'We're so glad that you're doing that,'" Morgan said. "This is what we've needed all along."

He said the feedback has been incredible.

"Getting these 12 sold will help," Morgan said. "I think there are builders sitting on the sidelines, waiting."

Morgan said he doesn't see the demand for housing going away any time soon. Every one in Pampa is expanding and hiring more people and those people have to have some place to live.

"We have people driving in from Amarillo, Borger, Perryton, who can't find a place to live here," Morgan said.

A family with the drill bit company wanted to buy one of Morgan's homes, but they couldn't find a place to live until the home was finished.

"There weren't any rent houses," Morgan said. "There weren't any apartments. There wasn't any place to live here while they waited on us three months to get the house built."

Morgan said that is an indicator of the need for new housing in Pampa.

"Our demand is there," he said. "We're really excited about Pampa's future."

oncoming traffic when they step into the roadway, so drivers must remain alert. The most dangerous time of a student's journey on a school bus is when they are entering or exiting the bus, and state law requires that approaching drivers stop when a school bus is stopped and operating a visual signal. The visual signal may be red flashing lights or a stop sign, or both.

State law requires approaching drivers to stop when a school bus is stopped and operating a visual stop signal. Drivers should not proceed until the school bus resumes motion, the driver is signaled by the bus driver to proceed, or the visual stop signal is no longer activated.

A driver does not have to stop for a school bus if it is on a highway with roadways separated by an intervening space or physical barrier. If a highway is divided only by a left-turning lane, the road-

Amarillo BLM office faulted for deals with refiners

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Private refiners aiming to extract helium from a pipeline got improper deals with the Bureau of Land Management office in the Texas Panhandle that could cost U.S. taxpayers more than $100 million, a Department of Interior report alleges.

Amarillo's BLM office made deals with four refiners who take crude helium from the pipeline that runs from a field northwest of the city to central Kansas, allowing the refiners to garner huge profits by overcharging for construction equipment, the report released Thursday states.

The refiners formed a private shell company in 2000, four years after lobbying Congress on behalf of a law that privatized production and refinement of helium.

A whistleblower who contacted the interior department's inspector general's office told of a "less-than-arms-length relationship" between government workers in the Amarillo office and helium contractors, the report states.

The report did not name the private company involved in the helium agreements, but BLM officials confirmed to the Washington Post in a story Thursday that Amarillo-based Cliffside Refiners L.P. was the subject of the investigation.

A fax tone beeped when a call was placed to Cliffside on Friday; a fax sent to the number seeking a return call for comment was not immediately returned.

Helium was a key component in the development decades ago of the atomic bomb, surveillance blimps along U.S. borders and weather monitoring balloons. Now it is used in the nation's space shuttle operation, weapon development programs, and magnetic resonance imaging.

The newspaper reported the review was cut short and a letter Tuesday from the inspector general's office to BLM's director said "immediate action is paramount."

A call seeking comment from the BLM was not immediately returned Friday.

The arrangement could double the government's equipment costs by 2015, the year the contracts expire. In private meetings, Cliffside was allowed to adjust overhead costs to decrease its costs and to build much of the helium extraction equipment, the report found.

A former Amarillo field office manager said the bureau agreed to the deals in violation of contracting and procurement rules "because it did not want to fight the refiners," the report states. The violations occurred in part because of lack of oversight by the bureau's New Mexico office and Fluid Minerals Division, according to the report.

Calls to Tony Herrell, deputy state director of the bureau's minerals program in New Mexico which oversees the helium program there, and his spokesman were not immediately returned Friday.

He told the newspaper his office is taking the report "very seriously," but pointed out that no independent findings substantiating the report have been done.

Agreements with Cliffside Refiners are based on existing antitrust law and have been "mutually beneficial" for the government and the company, he said.

Jeffs lawyer says he'll challenge search

PHOENIX (AP) — A lawyer for polygamist sect leader Warren Jeffs said Friday that he plans to fight the use of any evidence seized during a raid on the sect's Texas ranch at Jeffs' trial in Arizona.

Attorney Mike Piccarreta told a judge at a court hearing in Kingman that he will challenge the search because it was based on a call that Texas authorities should have known was a hoax.

"They proceeded to search the premises nevertheless," Piccarreta said in an interview after the hearing. "And there are also a whole assortment of constitutional errors by the Texas authorities and we intend to raise each and every one of them."

"I believe the search is illegal and unconstitutional, even by Texas standards."

The main focus of Friday's hearing in Arizona was a defense effort to have the case against Jeffs sent back to a grand jury for reconsideration. Piccarreta argues that Jeffs was denied a fair, impartial and unbiased grand jury, and that the prosecution presented false or misleading evidence to the grand jury.

Mohave County Judge Steven Conn said he'll rule on that next week.

Mohave County Attorney Matt Smith wasn't immediately available for comment.

Jeffs, 52, leads the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which practices plural marriage as part of its faith. He is awaiting trial in Arizona on four counts of being an accomplice to sexual conduct with a minor stemming from the marriages of two teenage girls and their adult male relatives.

Jeffs originally faced 10 charges, but four incest counts were dropped at the request of the defense because Arizona's incest law didn't fit the circumstances. Two others were dropped at the request of the prosecution because the alleged victim refused to testify.

FLDS members practice polygamy in arranged marriages, believing it brings exaltation in heaven. The teachings are rooted in the 19th century beliefs of the mainstream Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — commonly known as the Mormon church — which renounced polygamy in 1890 as a condition of statehood.

Most FLDS members make their homes in the twin border towns of Hildale, Utah, and Colorado City, Ariz., but the church also has enclaves in Colorado, South Dakota, Texas and British Columbia.

Leaders of the sect set up a compound in Texas several years ago that was the focus of a raid by Texas authorities earlier this year.

Authorities raided the FLDS-run Yearning For Zion Ranch in April, looking for evidence of underage girls forced into marriages and sex with older men. Texas child welfare authorities initially put all 440 children at the ranch in foster care but were forced to return them by a Texas Supreme Court ruling that found evidence showed abuse in only a handful of cases.

The tip that led to the raid was eventually determined to be a hoax.

But in July, Jeffs and four followers were indicted in Texas for sexual assault of a child. One follower was also charged with bigamy and a sixth member was charged with three misdemeanor counts of failing to report child abuse. Three new felony indictments were handed up in Texas against sect members on Thursday.

Piccarreta said Arizona authorities had earlier received similar tips about activities in Hildale but quickly determined they were hoaxes and took no action.

He said he warned Arizona authorities they should not become involved in the Texas case or it may taint their prosecution of Jeffs, but they sent investigators and an assistant attorney general to assist anyway.

Jeffs was convicted last year in Utah of rape as an accomplice in the arranged marriage of a 14-year-old girl and her 19-year-old cousin. He was sentenced to two terms of five years to life in prison. He remains jailed in Kingman as he awaits his Arizona trial. No date has been set.

Long-lived peach trees enrich state's history

Texas has numerous ancient oaks and other varieties of trees that have been around for a long time, but peach trees are a different story.

More formally known as Prunus persica, peach trees are not indigenous to the Lone Star State. They are believed to have originated in China, migrating from there along the trade routes to Persia (Iran) and from the Middle East to North Africa and Europe. As America began to be colonized, Europeans brought peach seedlings with them.

Though peaches are found around the world, they nevertheless are picky about where they will grow. They do best in sandy soil and climates with the right number of freezing days.

The commercial hot spots in Texas, which ranks ninth in the nation in production of peaches, are the Hill Country, particularly Gillespie and surrounding counties, East Texas around Smith County, and Northwest Texas, centered in Montague and adjoining counties.

Stonewall calls itself the Peach Capital of Texas. The 4,000 or so acres of peach trees in the Hill County produce about a third of the state's peach crop each year.

Wherever they grow, if a peach tree reaches 30, it has lived an unusually long life. Indeed, most peach trees seldom make it past their first decade of existence.

That's what made the peach tree outside the old stone structure in Burnet at the site of Fort Croghan so unusual. No one could remember how long it had stood there, but every summer, it still bore tasty if somewhat tart peaches.

The famed Second Dragons—established the fort in 1849 to protect the area from hostile Indians. After the military abandoned the post overlooking Hamilton Creek in 1853, settlers moved into some of the old government structures, including the small rock building where the peach tree still flourished in the early 1960s.

Some said whoever had lived there must have planted the tree. Others said its proximity to the entrance of the structure indicated someone might simply have discarded a moist peach seed that took root and flourished on its own.

However it came to be at Fort Croghan, the fruit tree had been there for a good while.

I first saw the tree, and tasted its fruit, in the summer of 1963. A precocious teenager as interested in Texas history as girls and cars, I attended (thanks to my late mother, who drove me there) the annual meeting of the Burnet County Historical Society.

They met at the old fort every year for a potluck picnic topped off with a cobbler made by Mrs. L.C. Ross from the peach tree that grew at the fort.

She had been president of the society in 1960, the year the group began working to restore the old fort. While at the site that year, she told me later, she picked the choicest peaches from the tree "before the squirrels and birds got to them." She baked them in a cobbler and a tradition had begun.

The longevity of that Fort Croghan peach tree is all the more unusual considering the care a peach tree normally requires. It has to be pruned after the first hard freeze in the fall, a process that must continue through early spring when the trees bloom. Since the trees normally produce more fruit than they can ripen, they have to be thinned of fruit to keep peaches spaced six to eight inches apart.

Too, a peach tree takes a lot of water, weeding and insect and disease control. Another venerable peach tree once grew in Lampasas

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Aug. 24, the 237th day of 2008. There are 129 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 24, 1814, during the War of 1812, British forces invaded Washington, setting fire to the Capitol (which was still under construction) and the White House, as well as other public buildings.

On this date:

In A.D. 79, long-dormant Mount Vesuvius erupted, burying the Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum in volcanic ash; an estimated 20,000 people died.

In 1572, the St. Bartholomew's Day massacre of French Protestants at the hands of Catholics began in Paris.

In 1857, the New York branch of the Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co. failed, sparking the Panic of 1857.

In 1932, Amelia Earhart embarked on a 19-hour flight from Los Angeles to Newark, N.J., making her the first woman to fly solo, non-stop, from coast to coast.

In 1949, the North Atlantic Treaty came into force.

Cemetery fund used to maintain Memorial Heights

Dear Editor,
Anyone wishing to contribute to the Lefors Cemetery Fund may do so in full confidence that the money donated will solely benefit the cemetery. Donations, memorials, remembrances and monetary gifts should be made to the Lefors Cemetery Fund at the Lefors Federal Credit Union, P.O. Box 425, 117 E. 2nd St., Lefors, TX 79054. (Phone: 806-835-2773)

Several years ago, Lefors experienced some misunderstandings with the use of the cemetery funds. This was resolved by the 23rd Judicial District Court of Gray County and strict guidelines were mandated regarding the establishment of a cemetery committee to be comprised of five individuals — the mayor, one city council member and three members from the community at-large elected by a majority vote during the city's annual general elections.

A majority vote of the committee is required to authorize any withdrawals or disbursements from the cemetery fund which is maintained by the Lefors Federal Credit Union and subject to audits by state authorities. The cemetery fund is specifically and strictly designed solely for the care, maintenance and upkeep of the Lefors cemetery and for no other purpose. The fund is an entity of its own, totally separate from city funds.

Memorial Heights, the Lefors cemetery, sits atop a hill overlooking the small

Idle American: A round-up of reflections

Miscellany ruled as summer wound down, and the Olympics heated up. Observations herein were gathered from "hither and yawn."

With Beijing's "smogginess" roughly six times that of Los Angeles, it's a good bet that the "air condition" was a major topic of conversation among Olympic participants. Two women, reportedly members of the USA's curling team, offered hair spray when they heard two others bemoaning a "bad hair day."

What a misunderstanding! The complainers were actually lamenting a "bad air day." We should forgive them — words filtered through air masks lack clarity....

My Uncle Mort often worries about back-burner issues that sometimes aren't even "pilot light warm." Now, he's warning friends that cranes are "headed for extinction."

I challenged him with strong statistical support: "Whooping crane numbers have grown by six-fold in three decades." I added that when the birds dipped into double-digits back in the 1970's, one aviary expert said we might need to "teach 'regular' cranes to whoop."

We were on different tracks, as usual. "I'm not talking about cranes that fly," Mort clarified, "I'm talking about cranes that fall."....

He's all excited about the upcoming football season.

His friends chuckle when he admits to being "head-strong." Most of 'em think his admission is off by 180 degrees, and some claim he's "headweak." For example, he's convinced he knows why the Dallas Cowboys took the train ride down to San Diego for the season's first exhibition game. "They can blame the loss on 'rail lag,'" he joked, but a five-hour train ride after a loss "feels" longer....

Mort also wanted to inform me that he believes that there are three kinds of working men: I braced myself, hardly knowing what to expect.

He continued, "There are a few men with their names on buildings, many with their names on their doors or desks, and hoards of us with names stitched on our shirts."

My 90-year-old uncle told me about the preacher who had hoof and mouth disease, explaining that the parson "refuses to visit and can't preach a lick." Our conversation ended abruptly when it was his turn to shuffle the dominoes....

"Hold the mayo. Hold the mustard. Hold the catsup." Sounds like orders to a short-order cook, right?

Wrong! It's Dallas County Sheriff Lupe Valdez's cancellation of packaged cancellations for jail prisoners. With a budget awash in red ink, it's a $150,000 lick at a $6 million shortfall.

The Dallas Morning News on NATO expansion:

John McCain and Barack Obama disagree on many things, but in response to Russia's invasion of Georgia, they were of one mind about what the United States should do: Redouble efforts to bring Georgia into NATO.

They're wrong, and dangerously so. Consider that if President Bush had gotten his way over European objections, Georgia would already be a NATO member country. The recent Russian invasion would have committed NATO to go to war with Russia which, despite its weakened state, still has a sizable army and thousands of nuclear missiles to defend Georgia.

Are Americans willing to engage in a shooting war with Russia over this former Soviet republic? What is the vital U.S. interest at stake worth paying that kind of price?

Others say that were Georgia in NATO, Russia never would have invaded. Maybe. Maybe not. Is that a chance worth taking? If the U.S. is not prepared to fight for Georgia, it has no business extending security guarantees to it.

Nearly six years ago, when NATO was on the verge of expanding into former Soviet Baltic republics, this newspaper praised the move. Those who predicted that bringing in former Warsaw Pact nations Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic in 1999 would antagonize Russia were wrong, we said.

In retrospect, Russia's economic and military weakness at the time prevented Moscow from doing anything about NATO expansion. Times have changed. Russia is now flush with oil and natural gas money and, under Vladimir Putin's hard-nosed leadership, has greatly strengthened its hand. Plus, the U.S. military has become bogged down in seemingly endless wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. The balance of power has shifted.

In April, Mr. Putin demonstrated community. A walk through the necropolis grounds will evoke memories of times past and loved ones and friends remembered. The then-existing cemetery was moved to its present location in the early 1930s. Approximately 10 graves were moved to the new location.

Over the years, the cemetery became a worthy project of various Lefors civic and service organizations. The Lefors Art and Civic Club, the Lions Club, the Optimist Club, Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Girl Scouts and others devoted the time and efforts to its upkeep. With the decline in population and the decrease of businesses and merchants, the contributions to the funds have been lacking.

Traditionally, and appropriately, cemeteries have been a place of dignity, respect, serenity and a place of personal reflection. It is the intent and purpose of the Lefors Cemetery Committee and the City of Lefors to monitor the appearance, upkeep and maintenance of the cemetery grounds.

County. In the early 1930s, a tree belonging to L.W. McCrea measured six feet in circumference. At the time (1934), it was considered one of the oldest peach trees in Texas. McCrea said his family planted the tree in the late 1860s or early 1870s.

A few years after enjoying my first Croghan Cobbler, I was with my granddad when he stopped to buy some peaches at a roadside stand between Fredericksburg and Stonewall.

When we walked in the tent, two women about my granddad's age sat happily gossiping away in German. As granddad selected a basket of peaches, they continued their conversation, secure in their belief that the older man and teenage boy — obviously tourists — knew nothing of the language they spoke.

What they did not know was that my granddad's last name was Wilke. His grandfather, Herman Wilke, had settled in Fredericksburg in 1850. Granddad grew up hearing German spoken and all those years later, still knew a little.

As we walked away, the women resumed their German discussion. Suddenly, acting as if he'd almost forgotten his manners, Granddad stopped and turned toward the gossips.

"Danke schon," he said with a smile. Realizing he must have understood what they had been talking about, the women froze worse than a peach orchard hit by a late-March norther.

Historically, similar actions haven't set well with inmates. They've been howling about jail conditions since locks were installed on cell doors. The late Lew Sterrett, for two decades Dallas County Judge whose name now adorns the justice center, had a word for the protestors, in the form of a suggestion: "Those who don't like the Dallas County Jail should commit their crimes in some other county." ..

Those crunches we hear all over the country are coming straight from the budget sheets. Most agencies, institutions and organizations show negative balances.

The American Ballet Theatre in New York City may be the exception. Its annual budget includes $350,000 for shoes — that's $7,500 per ballerina.

It's "point"less, I guess, to suggest that they take old shoes to the cobbler. When "pointy-toed" shoes are gone, they're gone. ...

Our nation cries out for feel good stories, and, God be thanked, they're still around. Maybe we should all look harder for larger than life figures.

Often, unlikely heroes step forward. Consider Neil Sauter, a 24-year-old Michigander who was saluted for completing an 830-mile walk. Earlier this summer, he walked across Michigan's Upper and Lower peninsulas.

Oh, I failed to mention that this cerebral palsy victim made the walk on stilts. And that he raised $16,000 for United Cerebral Palsy of Michigan. ...

Two recent accidents in Texas and New York that typically would have resulted in obituaries had happy endings. Near Fort Worth, a man survived a 40-foot fall into a hole at a gas field drilling site, and in Manhattan, a 12-year-old girl survived a 14-story fall down a chimney.

Firefighter Derek Izzo was lowered into the hole to rescue the "wedged" victim. Sporting a barn door-wide smile when it was clear that the victim had been spared serious injury, he was asked if he drew the assignment because he had the most experience. "Nope, the least seniority," he answered.

Authorities in New York said that the youngster lucked out because of the make-up of the final two feet in her 180-foot fall: soot and ashes. Sudden stops rarely are so cushioned. ...

I fully expect to find some new heroes at in-service programs of several public schools where I'm committing speeches during the next couple of weeks.

My memory floods at thoughts of long-ago heroes at school. Does yours?

And their jobs grow tougher with each passing year. ...

Russia's new clout by driving a wedge between the U.S. and Europe over the issue of NATO membership for Ukraine and Georgia. The Europeans, who depend on Russian natural gas, punted membership for those Russian border states into the future. Now, having masterminded Russia's invasion of Georgia, Mr. Putin is making clear that Russia will not allow itself to be surrounded by an alliance founded to contain Moscow.

To be clear, Russia's invasion of Georgia is deplorable, and we support every effort to make Moscow pay a diplomatic and economic price for its belligerence. But this is also a moment for the Western alliance to reflect soberly on the wisdom of its NATO expansion strategy, which has to this point been largely cost-free. We're now dealing with a Russia that can say no.

On June 28, 1914, a Bosnian assassin murdered the heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne in Sarajevo. Because of a complex set of alliances among Eurasian powers, the shooting set into motion a chain reaction that began World War I. By the time the shooting stopped four years later, 20 million were dead, half of them civilians.

Despite American warnings, Georgian President Mikheil Saakashvili rashly attacked South Ossetia, giving Russia an excuse to invade. Were Georgia in NATO, treaty obligations would likely have made this local dispute an event that either shattered the alliance or a fuse that ignited World War III.

Georgia's fight with Russia is not our fight, nor should it be. Russia has drawn a line in the sand, right in its own back yard. We would be prudent not to cross it. URL: <http://www.dallasnews.com>

Local youth ministry to kick off weekly schedule with back-to-school program

By Miranda G. Bailey
 Special to The News

This Wednesday night will mark the return of the Trinity Fellowship Collision Youth Ministry's weekly services with a special "Back to School" program for any interested junior high or high school students in town.

"The summer was nothing but a blur of all-nighters, lake trips, camp, and our first and, officially annual, area-wide Collide Youth Conferences," said youth pastor C.J. Frazier. "With the break, our leaders and students had we are geared up and excited for the new year of Collision."

The doors will open at 6:15 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 27 at the Collision facility behind KFC on North Hobart. Sixth through 12th grade students are invited to come to the event; however, starting the following week, two services will be offered — one for junior high students at 7 p.m., and a later service at 8:30 p.m. for high school students. The new schedule will begin in two weeks on Wednesday, Sept. 3.

"We are wanting to get our two services running smoothly, allowing for a time of worship in each each age category that is relevant and conducive for the young people attending," Frazier said.

Frazier said he wants to continue with the group's goal of making Collision a community group by inviting other youth ministries to join forces and make a difference.

"We are wanting to really put a lot of our focus on our REACH (Responsible Effort and Community Help) program in the community. We have recently had a taste of the blessings that come with serving others and so we're very excited to get out and take part in serving the community we live in," Frazier said.

He also said he will be organizing more youth concerts this year on a regular basis.

"We just want to create an environment where young people can just hang out, listen to music and enjoy the company of other young people in a safe and clean environment."

Until then, Frazier wants to invite students to come and check out the Collision ministry.

"If any student attended our last back-to-school event, they can tell you that it was certainly a night to remember. That being said, we are looking forward to this back-to-school event to see if we can top the fun and excitement our students had last year. I would love to tell you what is going to happen, but that would ruin the surprise. So you just need to come and see for yourself!" he said.

Cartoonist sets date to start 'over' with new material

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Calling the next phase of her comic strips "new-runs," cartoonist Lynn Johnston will start her cartoon "For Better or For Worse" over again beginning Sept. 1. Using new comic strips drawn in the style she used 29 years ago when the Patterson family first appeared on comic pages, Johnston will begin their story from the beginning, with the goal of eventually blending at least half of the classic original strips with new material.

Johnston explains her approach and talks about why changes in her personal life led her to back off from earlier plans to retire on a video posted on YouTube.com.

"Everything in September is new," said Johnston, "the punch lines, the drawing, all are new. The only thing retro is the way I'm drawing everything. I want it to flow into the classic material seamlessly."

"This first year, the ratio of old to new will be at least 50/50," Johnston said. "I want this to be the best thing I've ever done, and I'm having so much fun drawing Lizzie as a baby again and revisiting all the characters."

"For a generation of new readers unfamiliar with 'For Better or For Worse,' it's a chance to begin an exciting journey; for current fans, it's a chance to relive their favorite episodes," said Lee Salem, president and editor of Universal Press Syndicate, Johnston's syndicate.

Johnston will select material from her collection of almost 10,000 archival strips to help retell the Patterson family's story as her longtime fans remember it, pausing in spots to update references that seem confusing or even to flesh out characters she didn't explore in the first telling.

One such episode is the adoption of Farley, the Patterson's beloved dog. That will come in October.

For the past year, Johnston's strip has been a blend of new and old storylines.

"At first I thought that I could segue back and forth from today to yesterday, but that became very confusing. Some people really enjoyed it and some just wanted us to get on with the story," she says.

Johnston will select material from her collection of almost 10,000 archival strips to help retell the Patterson family's story as her longtime fans remember it, pausing in spots to update references that seem confusing or even to flesh out characters she didn't explore in the first telling.

"I'm starting right at the very beginning — when Elizabeth was a little crawling baby and couldn't say too much, and Michael was in kindergarten," she adds. "I'm a better storyteller now, and I want to ... improve the storyline or take a piece of art and make it better. What a luxury to change, fix and to augment. I'm such a perfectionist; I want to put my hands on it and have it tweaked here and there."

Johnston says that a change in her marital status changed her mind about retiring completely.

"At this time in my life, I thought I would be on a cruise ship to Panama or the Mediterranean, retired with my Tilley hats, my sneakers. But I'm a single lady now, and I want to keep working," she says. "Because I don't have to work 365 days of new material into a year, I can still take some time off to paint and travel."

"I'm considering this a renewal, not a retirement," she adds.

Over the years, not only did her characters age in real time in the strip, but Johnston's art style changed, too.

"When I first started the strip, the comic's style was fast and loose, probably because I was so busy and I had to get it out fast," she says. "It had a happy freedom to it. What I'm experiencing now by redrawing, it's almost like I'm drawing portraits. I'm changing John's jaw. And over the years, Elly's nose grew up to the size of a potato. Now, I'm drawing it smaller again, the way it was when I first started to draw. There is a huge difference between the earlier and the later styles."

"For Better or For Worse" has been syndicated since December 1979. In 1985, Johnston became the first woman to receive the Reuben Award for Cartoonist of the Year from the National Cartoonists Society. She has also received the Order of Canada and claims a star on Canada's Walk of Fame. This summer, Johnston was inducted into the "Giants of the North" — the Canadian Cartoonists' Hall of Fame. She lives in Ontario.

"For Better or For Worse" now appears in more than 2,000 papers around the world. Read by people of all ages, the award-winning comic strip deals honestly with both the lighthearted and the serious, and has effectively brought families together for laughter, tears and dialogue. Johnston has produced 46 books about her strip, and her strip has been adapted into six animated television specials and a popular animated series.

Jump in US measles cases linked to vaccine fears, health officials say

ATLANTA (AP) — Measles cases in the U.S. are at the highest level in more than a decade, with nearly half of those involving children whose parents rejected vaccination, health officials reported recently.

Worried doctors are troubled by the trend fueled by unfounded fears that vaccines may cause autism. The number of cases is still small, just 131, but that's only for the first seven months of the year. There were only 42 cases for all of last year.

"We're seeing a lot more spread. That is concerning to us," said Dr. Jane Seward, of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Pediatricians are frustrated, saying they are having to spend more time convincing parents the shot is safe.

"This year, we certainly have had parents asking more questions," said Dr. Ari Brown, an Austin, Texas, physician who is a spokeswoman for the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The CDC's review found that a number of cases involved home-schooled children not required to get the vaccines. Others can avoid vaccination by seeking exemptions, such as for religious reasons.

Measles, best known for a red skin rash, is a potentially deadly, highly infectious virus that spreads through contact with a sneezing, coughing, infected person.

It is no longer endemic to the United States, but every year cases enter the country through foreign visitors or Americans returning from abroad. Measles epidemics have exploded in Israel, Switzerland and some other countries. But high U.S. childhood vaccination rates have prevented major outbreaks here.

In a typical year, only one outbreak occurs in the United States, infecting perhaps 10 to 20 people. So far this year through July 30 the country has seen seven outbreaks, including one in Illinois with 30 cases, said Seward, of the CDC's Division of Viral Diseases.

None of the 131 patients died, but 15 were hospitalized.

Childhood measles vaccination rates have stayed above 92 percent, according to 2006 data. However, the recent outbreaks suggest potential pockets of unvaccinated children are forming. Health officials worry that vaccination rates have begun to fall — something that won't show up in the data for a couple of years.

The vaccine is considered highly effective but not perfect; 11 of this year's cases had at least one dose of the vaccine.

Of this year's total, 122 were unvaccinated or had unknown vaccination status. Some were unvaccinated because the children were under age 1 — too young to get their first measles shot.

In 63 of those cases — almost all of them 19 or under — the patient or their parents refused the shots for philosophical or religious reasons, the CDC reported.

In Washington state, an outbreak was traced to a church conference, including

Potential wheat disease outbreak affects High Plains producers

by Kay Ledbetter
Extension News

AMARILLO — Recent rains have set the High Plains up for a potential disaster if wheat producers do not take time to destroy volunteer wheat before the drilled wheat begins to come up, said Texas A&M AgriLife experts.

Dr. Charlie Rush, Texas AgriLife Research plant pathologist, said the wheat curl mite, which transmits wheat streak mosaic and other viruses, over-summers on the volunteer wheat.

Populations can build up to extremely high levels and that can serve as a point source for infestation of the new wheat that is being planted this month and into September.

"When this happens, you end up getting an early fall infection of wheat streak, which is devastating to the wheat crop," Rush said. "Neither the mite nor the disease can be treated, so the producer can't fix the situation once it occurs."

This infection can be minimized or even avoided if producers will go out in a timely manner and get rid of any volunteer wheat, he said. It will also help to plant as late as possible.

"So many people did not do that last year, and that was one of the things that set up the disastrous wheat year last year," Rush said.

He said he has data to show that in spite of the drought, dryland fields planted later that were not infected by wheat streak did well.

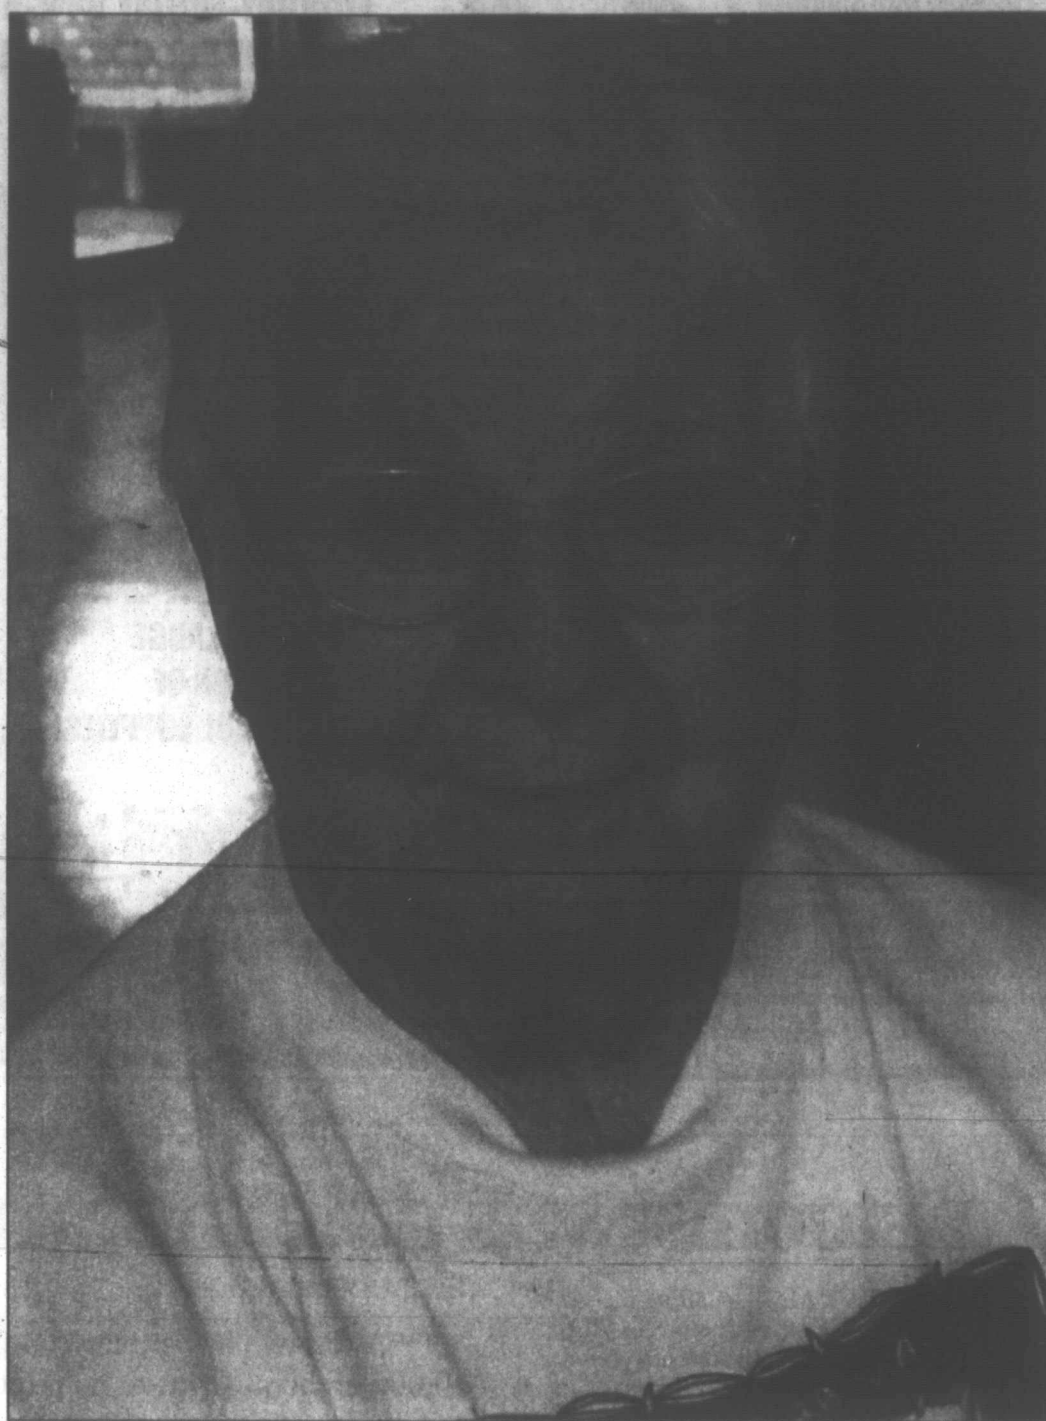

"Everybody had drought, but the fields infected by wheat streak were much, much worse at harvest time," he said. "Even some irrigated producers had significant losses because of it and the combination of other diseases."

"We know there is not much you can do about CRP (Conservation Reserve Program) grasses, but there is something to do about the volunteer wheat," he said. "If you have a strip of volunteer wheat in the ditch around your field, I would get rid of it there, too."

Rush said it was so dry for so long, from harvest up until July, and many acres of wheat were abandoned. Then the rains came and a lot of that grain that didn't get harvested will start coming up.

Also, he said, the concern is that dryland farmers will start planting as soon as possible to take advantage of the moisture. So there will be no disconnect between the volunteer wheat (wheat seed 16 school-aged children who were not vaccinated. Eleven of those kids were home schooled and not subject to vaccination rules in public schools. It's unclear why the parents rejected the vaccine.

The Illinois outbreak — triggered by a teenager who had traveled to Italy — included 25 home-schooled children, according to the CDC report.

The nation once routinely saw hundreds of thousands of measles cases each year, and hundreds of deaths. But immunization campaigns were credited with dramatically reducing the numbers. The last time health officials saw this many cases was 1997, when 138 were reported.

The Academy of Pediatrics has made educating parents about the safety of vaccines one of its top priorities this year. That's partly because busy doctors have grown frustrated by the amount of time they're spending answering parents' questions about things they read on the Internet or heard from TV talk shows.

In June, the CDC interviewed 33 physicians in Austin, suburban Seattle and Hollywood, Fla., about childhood vaccinations. Several complained about patient backlogs caused by parents stirred up by information of dubious scientific merit, according to the CDC report.

Questions commonly center on autism and the fear that it can be caused by the measles shots or by a mercury-based preservative that used to be in most vaccines. Health officials say there is no good scientific proof either is a cause. Also, since 2001, the preservative has been removed from shots recommended for young children, and it was never in the measles-mumps-rubella combination vaccine. It can still be found in some flu shots.

Brown said she wrote a 16-page, single-spaced document for parents that explains childhood vaccinations and why doctors do not believe they cause autism. She began handing it out this spring, and thinks it's been a help to parents and a time-saver for her.

"People want that level of information," she said.

At least one outbreak this year of another preventable disease was blamed on lack of immunizations. At least 17 children were sick with whooping cough at a private school in the San Francisco Bay area, and 13 were not vaccinated against the disease, which can be fatal to children.

Associated Press writer Marcus Wohlsen in San Francisco contributed to this story.

Officials planning tower dedication

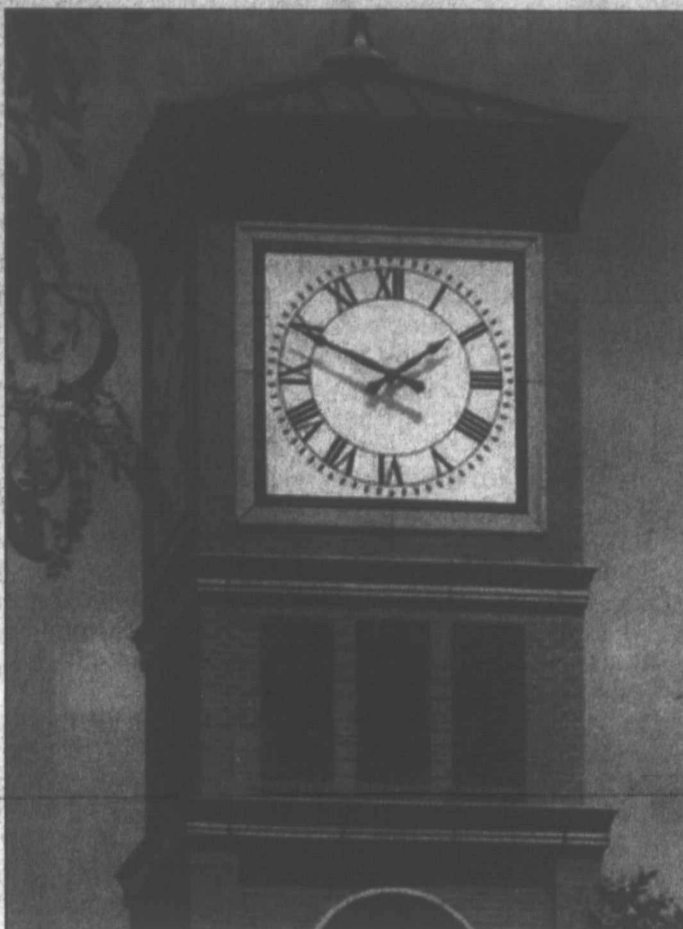

CANYON — The Hayward Spirit Tower, a skyscraping timepiece that marks the north entrance to West Texas A&M University's Pedestrian Mall, will be dedicated in a special ceremony at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 26 on the WTAMU campus.

WTAMU faculty, staff and students will join with community members and guests at the University's newest landmark to dedicate the clock tower and honor its benefactors, Jack and Helene Hayward. Speakers for the event include Jack Hayward; Amy Thompson, president of WTAMU's Student Government; Dr. J. Patrick O'Brien, University president; and WTAMU alum Rep. John Smithee. The WTAMU marching band will play, and there will be a special unveiling ceremony. The event will close with the clock's noon-time rendition of the University Fight Song, "On, On Buffaloes."

The Hayward Spirit Tower is both the brainchild and gift of the Haywards, who both hold advanced degrees from WTAMU.

"The Haywards came to us with an idea for a clock tower similar to what other universities have on their campuses," Gary Barnes, vice president for business and finance, said. "The Hayward Spirit Tower is an impressive icon that will mark the center of campus activities and be a source of great pride for our students and the University community."

Construction of the Hayward Spirit Tower began in February. The completed timepiece is electronically programmed to play the Hayward's requested Westminster Chimes on the hour and the University Fight Song at noon each day. The tower features four internally illuminated clock faces that measure approximately seven feet in diameter with a base that measures 15 feet by 15 feet. The Hayward Spirit Tower stands taller than Old Main and the nearby four-story Classroom Center to make it a very visible presence on the WTAMU campus.

West Texas A&M University officials will conduct a dedication ceremony for Hayward Spirit Tower at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 26 at the university campus.

The Hayward Spirit Tower also is depicted in the WTAMU 2008 edition of the Centennial Countdown Christmas ornament series. The three-dimensional brass ornament will be available for purchase at the University Bookstore immediately following the dedication ceremony.

CANYON — New Mexico's church architecture will be featured in the photographic essay "Arquitectura Sagrada: New Mexico Village Churches" Aug. 25-Oct. 23 in the first floor exhibit area of Cornette Library at West Texas A&M University.

The display is the latest photo essay by Amarillo photographer Jim Jordan. The exhibit consists of several 8 x 10 color photographs depicting New Mexico's vernacular church architecture.

Jordan is a frequent exhibitor in museums and galleries in the South Plains and Texas Panhandle. His work has been exhibited at the Buddy Holly Center in Lubbock, the Lubbock Fine Arts Center, the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle and the Amarillo Botanical Gardens. Jordan's work also has been exhibited at the University of Texas at Austin and throughout Germany.

Jordan grew up in the Texas Panhandle and was initially a musician and earned his associate's degree in music at Amarillo College. He worked for the City of Amarillo in the Water Reclamation Department for 33 years before retiring in 1988.

He has long pursued avocational interests in the arts and has been very active in the artistic and civic affairs of the Amarillo area.

Jordan has served as the president of the Amarillo Museum of Art, Amarillo Opera, Chamber Music Amarillo, Catholic Family Services, International Club and the Amarillo-Panhandle Humane Society. He also has served on the board of the Opportunity School and as director of the Southern Light Gallery at the Amarillo College campus.

For more information about the exhibit or Cornette Library's first floor exhibition area, call Shawna Kennedy-Witthar at 806-651-2227.

Food and Fun on Tap for Freshman Cookout with the President

CANYON — Freshmen at West Texas A&M University will gather for food, fun and flicks during the Freshman Cookout with the President beginning at 5 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 26 at the Virgil Henson Activities Center (AC).

An estimated 500 freshmen will gather at the AC and walk as a group to the President's Home for the event. Festivities will begin at 5:30 p.m. at the President's Home with a formal welcome from Dr. J. Patrick O'Brien, University president. The students also will get the opportunity to visit with Amy Thompson, WTAMU's student government president, and Dr. Russell Lowery-Hart, associate vice president for academic affairs.

WTAMU's radio station, KWTS 91.1 will be on hand to provide music for the evening. A movie on the lawn will start at 6:30 p.m., and students also will get to meet the University mascot when Jack the buffalo makes an appearance.

Freshman Cookout with the President is just one of several events planned to engage first-year students as part of the University's Quality Enhancement Plan. Events such as the cookout, Discover WT, New Student Orientation, Buff Branding, Readership WT and Freshman Convocation are designed to connect the students more fully to the University community to help ensure academic success.

"The Freshman Cookout with the President has emerged as an exciting and important WT tradition helping students embrace their new home and start their new academic journey," Lowery-Hart said.

Information about the cookout can be found through WTAMU's network on Facebook or by calling Wes Condray at 806-651-2042.

WTAMU Nursing Chapter to Present Workshop on Code 99 Emergencies

CANYON, Texas—West Texas A&M University's Delta Delta chapter of Sigma Theta Tau will explore the family's role in medical emergencies at a nursing workshop from 10 a.m.-noon for Session I and noon-2 p.m. for Session II on Saturday, Aug. 30 at the Amarillo Civic Center Regency Room.

The workshop, "Code 99: Is it a Family Affair," will feature John Sappington, RN, RRT, CEN, CFRN, as its featured speaker. He will present evidence based on practice on the presence of families in Code 99 scenarios. Code 99 is the term used by medical personnel to initiate a quick response to emergencies requiring CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation).

An exhibitor's area will be available before and after each session to showcase area employers, conference sponsors and colleges.

The workshop is open to medical professionals and their affiliates throughout the Panhandle area. The event is free, but a $10 fee is required for those seeking CEU's. For more information, call Debbie Cassida, WTAMU instructor of nursing, at 806-651-2659.

sprouting from previous years) and the new emerging crop, and that sets up the infection situation.

Dr. Brent Bean, Texas AgriLife Extension Service agronomist, said although there are a few varieties with some resistance to wheat streak mosaic that producers could plant, none of the varieties are immune from the disease. It is critical producers do what they can to reduce those populations of that over-summering host, Bean said.

"Once you are infected in the early fall and the virus gets a chance to get established, the virus is not going to go away and will likely only get worse," Rush said.

Bean said the weather conditions later on will play a large role of how severe the infection is and how widespread it becomes in a given field.

"Any inputs to fall-infected wheat need to be carefully considered once you know you have an infection," he said.

Rush said a producer irrigating wheat at 50 percent to 100 percent of the evapotranspiration rate could lose up $350 to $450 per acre (including inputs) if the crop ends up becoming infected early with wheat streak.

Dr. Ron French, AgriLife Extension plant pathologist in Amarillo, and Bean have given numerous talks at wheat field days, grower meetings, AgriLife Extension agent trainings, agricultural industry talks and other speaking events about this subject.

"You can't remind producers too many times how important this simple wheat disease management practice can be to their bottom line," French said.

"Although volunteer wheat is the most favorable host for the wheat curl mite, we cannot rule out barley, corn, triticale, rye and other grasses or grassy weeds," he said. "These crops also can potentially serve as a 'green bridge' for the wheat curl mite to survive from one season to another."

Volunteer wheat and grass weeds should be taken care of at least 21 days prior to planting by using tillage, a burn-down herbicide, minimum tillage or mowing, French said.

"Current insecticide treatments do not effectively manage the mites," he said. "Therefore, destroying the host plants for the wheat curl mite is the action to take until plant breeders can come up with good resistant varieties against these viruses."

The other options are to delay plantings, especially if wheat fields are close to Conservation Reserve Program fields, or plant after the first frost, French said.

The much-needed moisture received provides the setup for a really good wheat season, Rush said.

"It would be a shame to let this good start turn into a disaster because farmers failed to take care of something they could easily control," he said.

the 15th Annual Panhandle Area Mathematics and Science Conference

"ABCs of Accountability for Math and Science" on Saturday, Sept. 20 from 8 a.m.-4 p.m. at West Texas A&M University.

The conference is the largest regional mathematics and science conference in the state and gives area instructors an opportunity to learn from master teachers and presenters. More than 500 mathematics and science teachers from the Panhandle, South Plains, Eastern New Mexico and surrounding areas are expected to participate in the day's activities.

"The Panhandle Area Math and Science Conference provides a platform for presenters to share new and innovative ideas as well as tried-and-true strategies to engage K-12 students," Dr. Ashley Campbell, assistant professor of education and conference co-chair, said. "The one-day event has something for everyone - from the preservice teacher to the veteran teacher with years of experience."

Registration starts at 8 a.m. in the Agriculture and Natural Sciences Building (ANS). Sessions begin at 9 a.m. and will focus on math and science for elementary, middle school and high school teachers. Sessions will be held in the Old Main Administration Building, ANS and the Hastings Electronic Learning Center. Professional development hours will be available for those attending.

Teachers will participate in four different sessions focusing on math and science TAKS preparation; hands-on learning for students; and strategies for teaching all students math and science.

Education vendors, publishers and special exhibitors will be set up in the ANS atrium for teachers to see the new textbooks and various other resources available. Vendor space is available through Sept. 10. To set up an exhibit, contact Campbell at 806-651-2906.

Early registration is $20 per person. Full-time undergraduate university and junior college students may attend free but will not receive lunch. For students wanting to attend the luncheon, the cost is $10. Online registration and mail-in registration are available through Sept. 12. Registration also will be available at the door the day of the conference for $30 per person.

For more information about the conference and registration, visit www.wtamu.edu/pmsc or contact Campbell at acampbell@wtamu.edu or Gilbert Antunez, co-chair, at gantunez@wtamu.edu.

Carson County museum receives IMLS resources

PANHANDLE — Treasured objects and artifacts held by Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle will be preserved for future generations thanks to the help of "IMLS Connecting to Collections Bookshelf," a core set of conservation books, DVDs and online resources donated by the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS), the primary source of federal funding of the nation's museums and libraries.

IMLS and its cooperater, the American Association for State and Local History, a news release from the museum reports, will award a total of 3,000 free sets of the IMLS Bookshelf by the end of 2009.

"The Square House

Museum has an outstanding collection, rivaling that of many larger institutions," Museum Director Viola Moore said. "As one of the older museums in the region, the Square House is facing the aging of many of its artifacts, especially those that have been on display for extended periods. These resources will help the board and staff to establish an improved maintenance program for the collection and preserve these lovely items for future generations."

The museum was awarded the IMLS Bookshelf after participating in an application process. According to the news release, the Bookshelf focuses on collections typically found in history or art museums or contained within special collections of libraries with an added selection of texts for zoos, aquaria, public gardens and nature centers. Resources focus on the philosophy and ethics of collecting; collections management and planning; emergency preparedness; and culturally specific conservation issues.

"We are very pleased to announce the recipients of the IMLS Bookshelf in the second round of competition," Anne-Imelda Radice, director of IMLS said. "These libraries, museums and archives are in the forefront of our call to action on behalf of America's collections."

The Bookshelf is part of a larger conservation initiative launched in 2006 called "Connecting to Collections: A Call to Action." For more information about this initiative, visit www.imls.gov/collections on the World Wide Web.

Bolt, Jamaica smash world record in 400 relay

BEIJING (AP) — In yet another mind-boggling display of speed, Usain Bolt set another world record and won another Olympic gold medal, and this time he shared the glory with his Jamaican teammates.

Bolt and Asafa Powell blew away the field over the last two legs of the 400-meter relay Friday night, leading Jamaica around the track in 37.10 seconds to break the 16-year-old world record by 0.3 second.

Bolt is now 3-for-3 in these Olympic sprints — as in three gold medals and three world records.

The bonus is that he got to bring Powell along for the ride. Powell held the world record in the 100-meter dash for about three years before Bolt broke it in May, but he is also well known for his history of poor performances in the biggest meets.

In this one, he got to do the honors, running the anchor leg, taking a clean handoff from Bolt and crossing the line almost a full second ahead of Trinidad and Tobago's Richard Thompson to secure his first Olympic medal. The official margin of victory, 0.96, was the biggest in the Olympics since 1936.

Japan finished third. The United States didn't qualify after dropping the baton in qualifying.

America's absence from this race because of the baton mishap eliminated any real competition for the Jamaicans. But even had Tyson Gay and Co. been on the track, it's hard to imagine anyone beating a team with Bolt and Powell.

The record beats a mark first set by an American team featuring Carl Lewis and Leroy Burrell at the Barcelona Olympics in 1992 and tied at the world championships a year later.

It was still a race after Nesta Carter and Michael Frater completed the first two legs. But moments after Frater handed off to Bolt, the race became a rout. And when Bolt handed off to Powell, Powell's quest became very much like Bolt's was two nights previous in the 200 — not simply to win, but to own a slice of history. Just like Bolt did when he ran 19.30 in the 200 to break Michael Johnson's record, Powell ran hard, all the way through the finish, dipping his chest at the line.

The 37.10 came up and Powell was greeted by Bolt. They hugged and found some Jamaican flags to wear around their shoulders as the familiar reggae music filled the Bird's Nest.

While Bolt finished a perfect Olympics with the relay, the Jamaican women fell one race short of only the second 6-for-6 sweep by any country in Olympic sprint history — and only because they beat themselves.

Sherone Simpson and Kerron Stewart botched the handoff between the second and third legs and Jamaica didn't finish the race won by Russia. Still, nobody beat the Jamaicans in any sprint they finished at these games.

Counting a gold in the women's 400 hurdles, Jamaica has six gold medals with one day left. That's one more than the United States, which won its fifth when Bryan Clay wrapped up the decathlon title moments before the men's relay.

The United States, meanwhile, went 0-for-6 in sprints for the first time ever. The women's team also dropped the baton in qualifying.

In other action, Tirunesh Dibaba of Ethiopia completed an unprecedented women's distance double by adding the 5,000 meters to her 10K victory.

In the long jump, Maurren Higa Maggi of Brazil won with a leap of 23 feet, 1 1/4 inches (7.04 meters). The silver medal went to Tatyana Lebedeva of Russia and the bronze to Blessing Okagbare of Nigeria, who only got into the final when Ukraine's Lyudmila Blonska was kicked out of the Olympics for doping.

"I could not believe that I was out, and when I heard last night I was in the final, it was my time," Okagbare said.

Before the long jump, Blonska won silver in the heptathlon. Her removal gives that to American Hyleas Fountain, with Russia's Tatiana Chernova moving from fourth to bronze.

Local athletes Hunt, Killgo spend two months with Woodward Travelers

Braden Hunt and Mitchell Killgo, friends and Pampa High School athletes, recently completed a two month stint with the Woodward Travelers American Legion Baseball Team based in Woodward, Oklahoma. The pair had to go through a series of three try-outs that started in April. There were over 40 players that tried out and only the top 18 were selected for the team.

"It was just batting practice, infield and outfield and things like that," Killgo said of the try-outs. "It was pretty easy."

Practices for the boys started at the end of April in preparations for the games which started at the end of May. The season continued through July 20, ending with the Oklahoma State Tournament. The pair played in over 65 games during that time span, which included games in Oklahoma, Dodge City, Burkburnett, Texas and Wichita, Kansas. They stayed with a host family while in Woodward and only rarely had a chance to come back to Pampa.

"It was twenty minutes away from where we practiced and sometimes there were eight kids there," Killgo said.

Killgo roamed center field for the Travelers and led the team by hitting 12 home runs, including four home runs at the state tournament. He batted .382 for the year, made 33 singles, 15 doubles and led the team with five triples. His slugging percentage was a team high of .741 and his on-base percentage was .483. His fielding percentage in center field was .971. Killgo also drove in 49 home runs and was named the state tournament most valuable player, receiving a plaque in honor of his accomplishments.

Hunt, meanwhile, did a little bit of everything for the team ... from pitching to playing each infield position.

He hit seven home runs for the year, including three at the state tournament. Hunt's highlight was throwing three no-hitters for the team, including a no-hitter at the state tournament in an elimination game against Bartlesville (which Woodward won by a score of 8-0). He also pitched no-hitters in his first two starts of the year against Edmond Santa Fe and Bartlesville. Hunt batted .349 for the year and was second on the team in RBI's with 54. He made 39 singles, led the team with 17 doubles and three triples. His slugging percentage was .582 and his on-base percentage was .433. He pitched 43 innings with a record of 4-2 and one save. His ERA for the year was 4.23. In all, he struck out 35 opponents and they only batted .236 against him for the year.

"It was a weird feeling, especially the last game," Hunt said. "It was like I wasn't even running on the bases."

At the nine team state tournament in Pryor, Oklahoma, the Woodward team lost their first round game and then battled back by winning six straight games to earn the double AA American Legion State Championship. Hunt hit a home run in the last four games of the tournament and Hunt hit a home run in the last three games.

In the championship game, Woodward was trailing Pryor by a score of 1-0 in the top of the sixth inning. With one out, Hunt lined the first pitch he saw well over the left field fence for a game tying home run. That set the scene for the pivotal seventh inning. Killgo lead the inning off with a long home run over the right field fence that gave Woodward a 2-1 lead. Woodward would hold in the bottom of the seventh to win the state championship.

"That was really exciting," Killgo said. "We got a state ring. It's not here yet but it's coming."

Hunt and Killgo will both be juniors next year and have been friends since they started playing T-ball together at age five. They have played on numerous Optimist Club All-Star teams together and also on several travel teams ... including a stint with the Amarillo Bombers when they were 13. Both young men were named honorable mention 3-4A all district this year while playing for the Harvesters.

Both recently participated in football two-a-days and are preparing for this year's Harvester football season. The two boys also plan on playing again in Woodward next summer. They both expressed their wishes to thank everyone for their thoughts and prayers and for purchasing raffle tickets to help pay their way this summer.

US beats Argentina, go for gold Sunday

BEIJING (AP) — The U.S. Olympic men's basketball team has advanced to its first major gold-medal game in eight years after a 101-81 victory against Argentina.

The United States will play Spain, which it beat by 37 points in pool play, on Sunday in the championship game. The Americans haven't won gold since the 2000 Sydney Games.

Carmelo Anthony scored 21 points Friday for the U.S. team. LeBron James added 15, 13 in the second half.

Argentina, the 2004 Olympic gold medalists, lost leading scorer Manu Ginobili, of the San Antonio Spurs, to an ankle injury in the first quarter. Luis Scola scored 26 points for the Argentinians, who will face Lithuania on Sunday for the bronze.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Aug. 25, 2008:
 This year, you might discover that you could be multifaceted or more changeable than you realize. Your public presentation could be more important than you realize. Head in a new direction, if you have been wanting to. The idea of blazing a new trail might appear spontaneously. You meet people with ease, as you will be more visible than you have been in years. Be careful about mixing work and pleasure! If you are attached, the two of you might need to do more together. You will bond on a deeper level as a result. GEMINI pushes you into the limelight.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 ★★★★★ You might want to rethink a decision that involves feelings and communication. Your creativity comes forward, and you see life from a different or easier point of view. Do not back off; rather, be aware of the sensitivities of a child or loved one. Tonight: Chat up a storm.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 ★★★ Be careful with expenditures. You might be having a hard time coming to a decision. Investigate options that could impact your direction. Know that you do not need to determine which course to take just yet. You could be overwhelmed by what is happening. Tonight: Your treat.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 ★★★★★ Your smile is a winner. You seem determined and sure of yourself.

Others respond. You discover whether you feel threatened by the level of your response. Understand rather than judge. Tonight: All smiles.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 ★★★ Vanish and assume a low profile if need be. Understanding grows if you listen rather than react. You might be surprised by the realization you can achieve. Anything becomes possible. Tonight: Take your time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 ★★★★★ Reach out to others if presented with the unexpected or a difficult situation. Listen to feedback that comes from a meeting or a group of people. Your creativity emerges in dealing with a problem, making you a sure-fire winner. Tonight: Zoom in and make what you want happen.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 ★★★★★ You are called to respond. You might feel pushed to the max when dealing with a child or loved one. You might need to rethink a decision that tosses the status quo into chaos. You like a steady and even approach. Tonight: As late as necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 ★★★★★ You might learn more than you think. Your ability to read between the lines proves to be most helpful, especially as someone cannot be clear, no matter what. Try to stay on top of your game. Tonight: Follow a wild idea.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
 ★★★★★ You might want to consider taking a very different approach, as the last one might not have been the success you'd desired. Knowing when to take action or perhaps do something very different could be important. Tonight: Togetherness works.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
 ★★★★★ Defer to others. See what they really offer. Your ability to answer to others and get ahead of possibilities could be more important than you realize. You see a situation from a very different perspective. Start sharing. Tonight: A tête-à-tête talk

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 ★★★★★ Easy does it, knowing and establishing your limits. You could be too tired for your own good. Take a much-needed break. A boss overdoes it and goes overboard, not necessarily in a good way. Tonight: Do for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 ★★★★★ Your creativity comes through in whatever area you focus on. If you are single and open, in this type of mood, someone could find you very attractive. If attached, the love temperatures soar. You could be frustrated with communication. Tonight: Forget what night of the week it is, just enjoy living.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 ★★★★★ You need to be anchored and direct with a family member. Your instincts serve you well. Your energy could be off, and your nerves are shot. Verify your feelings before acting on them. Make it OK to be distracted. Tonight: At home.

Finding the right dog for you may be just a click away.

Dog adoption is life-changing

(NAPSA) — There's good news, bad news and better news about pets.

The good news: A recent report by the American Veterinary Medical Association found that about 63 percent of all households in the United States have a pet.

The bad news: 5 to 7 million companion animals enter animal shelters nationwide every year and about 3 to 4 million are euthanized.

The better news: One solution to reduce the number of pet deaths is adoption.

Adopting a dog is a life-changing event. Dogs need lots of time and attention, requiring owners to be there every day. Therefore, it's critical to find out whether you're actually ready for a dog or would be happier with a goldfish instead.

"Making sure people are fully prepared to adopt a dog means a happier home and longer life for the dog," said dog expert Trevor Wright. "Taking the time to thoughtfully consider if you are ready can reduce the number of abandoned and neglected pets."

Here are a few things to consider when adopting a dog:

1. Are your children ready? Babies and toddlers can't be trained as easily as dogs, which is why many experts recommend waiting until children are at least 8 years old before bringing a canine into the mix. If you're set on getting a dog and have small children in the house, consider adopting an easygoing adult dog who'll need less attention than a growing puppy.

2. Is the decision to adopt unanimous? Dogs shed, bark and can be messy. Unless the whole household is fond of your dog, it's easy for resentment to build. It also makes it hard to set and enforce house rules, such as whether the dog can join you on the couch.

3. Consider the costs. On average, expect to spend about $800 during the first year of your dog's life. If you live in a city where vet costs are higher, work full-time and need backup care, and want to give him at least a few treats, it can easily climb to $1,200 to $1,800 annually.

4. No yard? No problem. Some people believe a fenced-in yard is critical to having a dog. In fact, a yard can become an excuse for not walking or exercising your dog daily. Dogs spending most of their time in the backyard miss out on meeting other dogs and people, which keeps them happy and well socialized.

Wright's company, DogTime, an online pet network, has created powerful tools in the fight against abandoned and neglected dogs. "Are You Ready?" is an online quiz to determine if you are ready to bring a dog into your home. After answering multiple-choice questions, you can link to "DogFinder MatchUp" to help determine what kind of dog is right for you based on your personality.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Aug. 24, 2008
 Dodge negativity, perhaps turning it into responsibility. This year, you carry a lot of weight, but you also assume much responsibility. You can handle it. Clearly, you are on top of your game. Still, you feel sometimes that you have had enough. Keep up the spirit. Curb a tendency to go overboard when feeling out of sorts. If you are single and if you have not met someone special this past year, you still might. This person could light up your life. If you are attached, add more of the romance back in. Redo a first date. Go out more often. GEMINI can push you into the limelight.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have:
 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 ★★★★★ Reach out for others, staying in touch with even those at a distance. Examine news with a touch of cynicism, but don't let thoughts mar a fun outing with family and/or friends. Relax at a movie or go to a baseball game. Tonight: Wind down.

This Week: Monday and Thursday, you sparkle. Do we need to discuss the rest of the week?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 ★★★ Expenses easily could whirl out of control. You want to say "no"; if feeling insecure, you might want to bolster your ego in another manner. Talk through negative feelings with a loved one. Tonight: Accept and then enjoy.

This Week: Tuesday, move on a project or a matter that's close to your heart. Timing works.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 ★★★★★ In between energy and enthusiasm, you could feel dragged down. If you want to take off for the day, do. You need a different setting to recharge your batteries. Listen to news, but withhold judgments until you feel better. Tonight: Decide what is best for you.

This Week: Speak your mind on Monday, knowing that it might take a while for everyone to meet you halfway.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 ★★★ Break past a problem and get some perspective. Sometimes, doing nothing or distracting yourself can be healthy. But also, too much focus is negative and does not resolve a problem. Tonight: Get extra sleep.

This Week: On Tuesday, you feel your Wheaties. Move now. Use the next few days.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 ★★★★★ Once more, you are reminded that although you can control your own responses, you have no control over others. You might feel a lack of energy or unusual fatigue. Avoid commitments other than getting together with friends.

This Week: You could be out of sorts a good part of the week. On Thursday, you feel more like it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 ★★★★★ A sense of not being able to attain your goals marks your reactions and mood. Pull back and understand what is happening. How can you recharge your batteries and clear your mind? Make choices accordingly. Tonight: Check in on an older relative.

This Week: On Tuesday and Wednesday, you are a force to be dealt with.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
 ★★★★★ Reach out for others, with less judgment. If you can put your feelings aside, especially if negative, you will recharge. Hear what others say more openly. Mentally opening up to new vistas casts a new view on life. Tonight: Put on a favorite piece of music.

This Week: Success might be looming on the horizon. It will take a lot of behind-the-scenes negotiation to make it real.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
 ★★★★★ A friend could be difficult, or an older friend might need a lot of attention. One-on-one relating takes you to a new perspective and allows greater give-and-take. Understand what others need, yet at the same time honor your own desires. Tonight: Talk over a dinner.

This Week: Reach out for someone behind the scenes. You get important

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
 ★★★★★ Others could challenge what you thought was a sure-bet idea. If you are responding in a depressed manner, do not be surprised. Listen to feedback, but don't take comments personally. Tonight: Say "yes."

This Week: You zero in on what needs to happen. A talk is inevitable.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 ★★★★★ Listen to what is being said between the lines. Let your imagination rock and roll. Do not come to any conclusive decisions; you might decide another course could be easier. Tonight: Don't push a key matter.

This Week: Get as much done as you can on Monday. The rest of the week is spent networking. You do it well too!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 ★★★★★ Your creativity bubbles up. A wild idea that seems great to you might be difficult to sell to an important friend or loved one. Let go of trying to convince this person that you are right. Accept differences rather than fight them. Tonight: So what if it is Monday tomorrow?

This Week: Your spirited personality triggers a lot — maybe too much — this week. Careful.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
 ★★★★★ Listen to your instincts with a child or loved one. Your sense of direction intrigues many. Clarifying to help others understand your perspective could be impossible. You have the words, but others might not be ready to hear. Tonight: Visit with family.

This Week: You come into your own, dealing creatively with work and life in general.

Harvesters will "earn the right to win"

by Bob Ericson

"Wins are never guaranteed" said Harvester Head Coach Andy Cavalier, "All games this season will be a dog fight."

In fact, the motto for the football team this year is "Earn The Right To Win".

"If the coaches and players prepare and work hard they will have done everything they could to earn a win," said the coach.

Cavalier sees the upcoming season as "challenging" and was candid about the Harvesters' opponents.

"Our district will lose Hereford and gain Canyon High School. Because of a realignment in 5A, we lose our Amarillo High game, therefore we will begin the season with Borger at Borger (tonight)."

The prospect for a great game against an old rival is an exciting one.

"This game is a big rivalry and deep in tradition," he said, while wearing a Beat Borger ball cap. "We have been talking about this game since off season."

The Harvesters will then play at home against a "much improved" Lubbock Estacado team. Pampa will then travel to a new opponent - Big Spring.

"Big Spring has a very good ball club and will be a difficult opponent," Cavalier said.

After Big Spring the local team will take on Perryton on the opponent's home turf.

"Since the game with Perryton was added to the schedule several years ago, the home team has won every contest," he noted. "I hope we can break that cycle this year".

There will be an open week following Perryton.

Pampa will be on its home field to face Plainview for Homecoming. Plainview is coming off a 1-9 season last year. Coach Cavalier expects a big and loud group to travel with Plainview.

The district opener will be against defending district champion Randall at Harvester Field.

"Randall lost a lot of players from last year, but have a lot of good players coming up from JV," the coach said.

Pampa will travel to Canyon to take on a new district opponent in the Eagles.

"Canyon is coming off a great season last year and has a good number of returning lettermen," Cavalier said.

The Dumas Demons are next on the list for Pampa. Dumas "always plays Pampa tough and this year will not be any different," according to Cavalier.

The Harvesters will play the Caprock Longhorns next. Caprock is a much improved team and will be looking for a winning season.

According to Cavalier, "Caprock continues to improve each year and this year could be the year they surprise a lot of people."

Pampa will close district play out against Palo Duro. "Palo Duro has a lot of good players coming up from JV," Cavalier said. "All our games this year are on Friday and at 7:30 p.m. except for Palo Duro at 4:30 p.m. due to a double-header at Dick Bivins.

"Playing all games on Friday helps with planning and preparation".

The Harvesters will run a 3-4 defense this year.

"That means we will have three defensive linemen and four linebackers with four secondary defenders," the coach explained. "We will use the linemen along with the linebackers to pressure the quarterback."

The team will field more size this year across the board. In order to keep fresh legs in the game at all times, Coach Cavalier will rotate defensive linemen to allow them some rest.

"The men in the trenches are what make things work," he said. "Many hours in the off season have been invested in these young men to make the team stronger and better. The focus will be on tempo control and that can only happen if we control the line of scrimmage."

Some of the young men on the defensive and offensive line include seniors Gage Carruth, Coby Smith, Luis Cruz, Daniel Kirkland, Justin

Groom wants to make some noise

by Bob Ericson

Coach Joe Riley is in his first year leading the Groom Tigers and he likes what he sees.

"I'm real proud of the work ethic of my kids," said Riley. "They have busted their rears for me. We have excellent numbers in our junior high and our future looks very bright."

Groom will field a team of 13 this year, including two lettermen on each side of the ball.

"Lefors will be the strongest team in the district," the coach predicted. "The rest of the district is pretty even after Lefors."

McLean Tigers in rebuilding year

by Bob Ericson

The McLean Tigers are in a rebuilding year.

"We are very young this year," said Coach Blaze Herring. "We graduated five off of the offense and five off the defense".

Still, he added, Coach stated, "we will be better in week nine than we are in week one."

Herring said the team's chemistry is good and he is looking to some experienced upper classment to step up to leadership positions.

"We have low numbers of about 14 in a tough district with Valley, Follett and Happy," the coach noted. "Both Valley and Follett are in the top ten state rankings this year."

All three of these schools usually suit up 20-30 kids.

"Our challenge this year will be to gel as a team and for the young players to understand the calls on both offense and defense," Herring said, adding "I expect our team to upset one of the favorites this year, maybe Follett at the end of the season."

The Tiger's motto for this year is "Ordinary people can do extraordinary things."

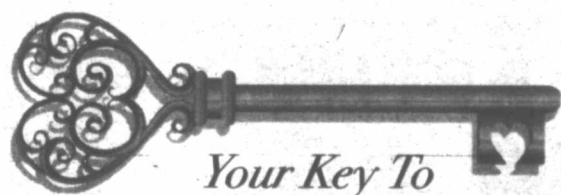

Said the coach, "Ordinary players when working as a team can do extraordinary things. We may play teams that are bigger and faster than we are but if we play as a team we can come out with a victory."

tight end and has four to five wide receivers.

"We want to be able to run our offense as fast or as slow as we want."

This offense will attempt to control the tempo as much as possible with a no huddle.

The coach also emphasized that the Harvesters will run more this year and that run blocking will be have a greater focus "The lineman are the lifeblood of the offense," Cavalier stated. "I want to have a better balance of run and pass this year."

In the quarterback spot will be junior Alex Clendenning. Alex will take over for senior Casey Trimble who will assist on the sidelines this year due to an injury. Garrett Ericson will backup Clendenning this year at the quarterback position. Receivers for the Harvesters include seniors Heath Skinner, John Luke Covalt, Madison Wilson, and Tyler Jones. Junior receivers include Corbin Clifton, and Mitchell Kilgo. Running backs for the Pampa Harvesters will include junior Nathan Webb and sophomore Trent Carter as well as Salazar, Funderburg and Wilson. Webb and Carter will also play at linebacker. Many of the defensive linemen mentioned above will be playing on the offensive side of the ball as well.

"I want as many of these key players to be involved in the game with as little rest as possible," said the coach.

The Pampa Harvesters will be coached Andy Cavalier, Byron May, Chad Dunnam,

Lefors Pirates have strong base with returning seniors

by Bob Ericson

"We have a good group of seniors this year," said Coach Joey Czubinski, "A strong senior class with four returning starters. Along with two juniors, they make up a good starting six."

Coach Ski said his Pirates are fighting the same problem as other teams in the area.

"If all players were in pads, we would have 14," He said. "We are going into the first game against Hedley with 11."

The coach characterized his training camp as brutal.

"I was pretty rough on them, knowing a lot of them would have to go both ways," he explained.

As far as the district schedule goes, he thinks the team matches up well with the rest of the district.

His biggest concern, he said, is that his players "get a big head over a win or two" and he reminds them that they are "only as good as your last game."

The coach expects his team's toughest competition to be Samnorwood, followed by Groom and Miami.

"The season," he said, "is won in October and November."

He added: "I want all the fans to come out and support our team. It makes these boys feel good to see a full house at game time. Cheer for these guys when we win and when we lose. Always be positive."
