Dates scheduled for 2008 Kid Pony Show

By KERRI SMITH Managing Editor

The Top O' Texas Rodeo Association met Monday evening to finalize the dates for this year's Kid Pony Show and some changes were decided upon as well as the dates of Aug. 9 and 10.

According Rodeo to Association Office Manager Cindy Kemph, the name of annual event has been changed this year.

"The group decided to call the event the 'Top O'Texas Junior Rodeo and Kid Pony Show' because we thought that name better suited the older kids as well as the young ones," Kemph said. "Also, instead of cutting off the competitors at the age of 16, the association decided to extend the age to 18 so most of the high school students could compete as well."

Kemph said the younger children in groups 1 and 2 would compete on Aug. 10, which is a Sunday. The competition will begin around 3 p.m. On Saturday, Aug. 9, the other groups of kids will compete all day with the festivities starting around 8 a.m.

"We've redone a few events and have even added some new events this year," Kemph said. "Michael Craig is one of the committee members and he's doing everything he can to accommodate the requests and wishes of everyone

Accident knocks out power

Accident

An accident around 1:45 p.m. Wednesday knocked out power to multiple businesses on Highway 60 East.

According to Texas Department of Public Safety reports, Joshua Earl Cochran, 19, of White Deer, was traveling westbound on Highway 60. When he dropped his cell phone and reached down to pick it up, he lost control of his 1998 Dodge pickup. Cochran sheared off three utility poles and his vehicle came to rest on property owned by Sivals after it hit a fence next to Lick's Feed Store. No other vehicles were involved in the accident.

Skull of giant mastodon found in Texas up for auction

DALLAS (AP) — The skull of a four-tusked mastodon believed to be one of the largest in the nation is going up for auction Sunday.

A 40-inch long skull of the prehistoric elephant-like animal, found in 2004 in a gravel pit in La Grange, is up for sale after a small the artifact on display can no longer afford to keep it.

Heritage Auction Galleries expects the skull to fetch as much as $160,000 during its natural history auction. "We're trying to reach out to someone who would buy it, then reach out to a museum in Texas," Heritage spokesman David Herskowitz said.

The skull had been housed at the Mount Blanco Fossil Museum near West Texas museum that has kept "Lubbock. Joe Taylor, curator and founder of the museum, said he needs the money to pay back investors who financed the excavation of the skull after it was discovered.

GROUNDWATER CONSERVATION DISTRICT

Water district discusses management plan, rules

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

DUMAS -- A decade ago, Mesa Water wanted some sort of guarantee from the White Deer-based Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District that Mesa would be permitted to pump their water at some unspecified time in the future.

This week it was the City of Amarillo that was requesting similar guarantees from the Dumasbased North Plains Groundwater Conservation District. Amarillo has about 100,000 acres of water rights in Hartley County.

The city has indicated that they do not plan to pump water from there for a number of years, but at a public hearing on the North Plains Groundwater Conservation District's revised management plan this week, Amarillo Assistant City Manager Jarrett Atkinson told the North Plains board that Amarillo would like some protection of that water in storage and a guarantee that when the city does develop that field, it will be allowed to pump at the same rate as everyone else in the district.

The concern is that as the city tries to store the water for future use, the water will be drained 268,000 acre-feet per year. before the city has need of it.

Atkinson pointed to the district's database that reports Hartley County uses 303,838 acre-feet of water per year, but the district's data also shows that only 235,522 acre-feet of water are available for use, a deficit of 68,316 acre-feet per year.

With the North Plains district rules allowing for the withdrawal of two acre-feet per year, if Amarillo developed a well field in Hartley County, it could pump some 200,000 acre-feet per year, growing the deficit to over Amarillo has already filed a lawsuit against Premium Standards Farms, which has water rights next to Amarillo's, for over production.

At Tuesday's hearing here, Atkinson suggested a provisional permit to help protect Amarillo's water and guarantee access to the water at production levels equal to its neighbors.

The concern with the North Plains management plan appears to revolve around the depletion See WATER, Page 8 Firestyles For Life... Your home is a reflection of your personal style. Why shouldn't your hearth appliance be the same?

Wood Heats Like No Other Fuel... Wood is nature's renewable resource. A natural fuel that burns like no other. A wood fire is cozy - the radiant and convective heat from your Avalon wood stove or insert warms body and soul.

Environmentally Responsible... An open fireplace or antique stove may conjure fond memories, but they actually create pollution and yield very low energy efficiency. In contrast, our Avalon wood burning appliances are EPA certified and produce virtually no visible smoke or creosote.

Renewable Energy... When fossil fuels like heating oil are burned, carbon dioxide - the gas responsible for the greenhouse effect - is released into the atmosphere. But when wood is burned, it's part of a natural cycle: A tree absorbs carbon dioxide as it grows. When a tree falls into decay or is burned as firewood, the carbon dioxide is released and gets absorbed again by other young trees. By practicing sustainable wood energy use and keeping our forests healthy, this cycle can be maintained virtually forever!

Energy Independence... Heating with wood offers independence from the rising costs of the utility companies. Even when your power goes out and all other conventional

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

n Jan. 6

Houston Chronicle on bogus insurance reform:

In response to pleas by consumers to reduce Texas homeowner insurance costs that lead the nation, state lawmakers passed reform legislation in 2003. Unfortunately, the so-called reform has primarily benefited insurance companies rather than their customers.

While the result has been a lowering of insurance policy payout averages by two-thirds, insurance premiums have remained high, leading to windfall profits for insurance companies.

Statistics compiled by the Office of Public Insurance Counsel show that while the average cost of home insurance premiums has remained above $1,200, the average loss claimed on a policy has nose-dived from just below that level to $400 at the start of 2007.

As it had before the legislation was passed, Texas still leads the nation in homeowners insurance costs, with Louisiana and Florida next in line. As Chronicle business columnist Loren Steffy observed, "Think about that. Texas' rates were higher than those of Florida, a state surrounded by tidewater on three sides and the perennial stomping ground of hurricanes."

No other state broke the $1,000 barrier, not even California, prone to fires, quakes and mud slides. Although the standard rationale by insurance compa-

only take a few minutes instead of hours. Disadvantage: If you ever need to restore the information, you must first restore the last full backup and then restore each incremental backup in order. These days, most companies (and individuals, for that matter) choose full backups.

Now, what should you back up? I know that sounds like a silly question, but you'd be surprised how little thought people give to this crucial point. Should you backup your entire hard drive? Last month the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas sent a customer survey to state legislators with a cover letter claiming it showed reform had created a more competitive market and declining rates for homeowners. Yet the survey itself indicated 53 percent of respondents said new policy prices were either higher than a year ago or had stayed the same.

For renewals, the figure was more than 72 percent. And the survey did not

Guiliani pinning hopes for nomination on victory in Florida

NEW YORK (AP) Republican Rudy Giuliani challenged political convention in shrugging off early primaries while staking his presidential candidacy on delegate rich, later-voting states, a strategy that could be a colossal failure or a masterful calculation.

The former New York mayor is suffering from money woes and hasn't won a single primary. Other Republicans have been gobbling up delegates and national media attention, but Giuliani has won one key bet he placed long ago: Even after the first few contests, there would be no clear front-

> Mitt Romney, who won Michigan primary the Tuesday, leads the delegate race with 42, followed by Mike Huckabee with 32 and John McCain with 13. It takes 1,191 to win the nomination.

Giuliani did not always pin his hopes on Florida. Initially, his campaign plan was multi-pronged, until he decided to abandon efforts in early voting Iowa and New Hampshire. His strategists originally thought he had a good shot at winning an early state or two, and at one point he gained ground in New Hampshire - spending a chunk of cash there – and was also a leader in South Carolina polls.

But the strategy changed along the way and now rests entirely on Florida. As Giuliani put it to reporters this week in Pompano Beach, Fla., there's no time to second-guess whether it was the right way to go.

"You can't go back into the past," he said. "This is the strategy we chose; this is the one'we're going to use. We believe in it; we believe it's going to work."

The next day, a new poll showed his Florida lead had evaporated, and nationwide surveys show he has slipped from the front-runner place he once held. Top campaign staffers are going without paychecks this month to use every dollar they can in the state.

Giuliani will be campaigning nearly every day in Florida until Jan. 29, while his opponents still have to get through contests in South Carolina and Nevada.

Commentary from 400 prominent scientists from around the world, which was included in a U.S. Senate Environment and Public Works Committee report released last week, warns of a religious-like belief in global warming in the scientific community

Pat Michaels, senior fellow in environmental studies at the libertarian Cato Institute and research professor of environmental science on leave from the University of Virginia, said the sheer number of internationally acclaimed scientists included in the report makes it hard to dismiss. "They found an astounding amount of people who are in agreement," Michaels told Cybercast News Service. "These are not just creation scientists. These are huge names. There are too many people for these to be agenda-driven statements. Scientists are just getting tired of exaggeration on this issue. Global warming has become a religious crusade.'

came on. Data, on the other hand, is only replaceable by typing it in again. Not a pleasant thought! On most computers, programs (including the operating system), comprise over 80 percent of the space. Save yourself some time, and only back up the data.

Next topic: What should you store your backups on? Should it be diskettes, CDs, tapes? It really depends on the size and frequency of your backups. For the home, I usually recommend CDs. Holding 650 megabytes, most people can store their most important information without having to use more than one. Businesses will typically use a tape (looks like a music cassette). Tapes can store gigabytes (even terabytes) of information, depending on the brand you buy. For large storage needs, choose tape. Floppy diskettes, in my opinion, are useless. Not only are they small (1.44 megabytes per disk), they are incredibly unreliable.

One human hair or a piece of dust can ruin them. Even sitting on a shelf will lead to eventual magnetic degradation

At this point, I should bring up the topic of networks. Remember, from earlier columns, that a network is simply a group of computers connected together so that they can share information. Most of this information is stored on a special computer called a server. This machine usually sits in a closet somewhere, humming away 24 hours a day, seven days a week, divvying out information whenever a PC needs it. All of a company's most important data is stored on the server. Backing up is simple. Since all of the data is on one machine (the server), the local computer guy only has to back up one machine, instead of every PC in the office. My whole point in bringing this up is to further push the value of networking your business. Finally, make sure your backup procedures include "offsite storage" of your backup media. Putting your backup disks or tapes on top of the computer itself invalidates the backup itself. If your office burns to the ground, you lose the computer AND your backups. Make sure that your backups are stored in another room, preferably another building.

A new option is making this consideration even easier - Internet backups. Here's how it works. Every night, after everyone has left, your computer (or server) connects to the Internet. All of your company's information is compressed into an encrypted "suitcase" and transferred to another server somewhere. This method guarantees offsite storage and is quickly becoming the preferred way of making human-free backups. The specifics of and requirements of backing up online are too numerous to list here, so drop me a line if you'd like to know more.

Business owners, remember: Your information is an asset, just like your copier and other high-priced equipment. Having a backup program is like taking out an insurance policy. You hope you never have to use it, but if tragedy strikes, you'll be singing it's praises. See you in Cyberspace!

DEAR ABBY: I feel like I'm all alone. My daughter's father was recently murdered, and I can't seem to get over it. Even though we hadn't been close for months before his passing, he was all I have known since I was 13. I'm trying to move on, but it's so hard. I don't know how to help my daughter with her issues because I'm still grieving for my own father, who was killed in Baghdad several years ago. Am I a bad mother for not talking to her enough about it? Frankly, I try to avoid the subject every chance I get. But it's eating me up inside, and I can't stop crying. How will I ever move on to another relationship when I can't even get past the last one? How can I help my child when I feel like I can't even help myself? -- DESPERATE FOR HELP IN NEW YORK

DEAR DESPERATE FOR HELP: Please accept my deepest sympathy for the double loss in your life -- the death of your father and the tragedy that befell your daughter's father. If you are going to heal vourself and your girl, it is imperative that you find help for both of you. She needs to talk about her feelings so she can deal with them -- and so do you. Avoiding the subject, painful as it is, doesn't work, as you are finding out. I recommend that you find a grief-support group for you and for your daughter, a safe place in which to share your feelings of loss, pain and possibly anger. An excellent place to start would be to ask your clergyperson. Please don't put it off because help is available.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 25 and my boyfriend, "Dave," is 32. I love him dearly. He's my best friend, and I know we cherish each other, but I always feel like I'm No. 2, 3 or 4 in his life. Dave has a 4-year-old son and is occupied with the boy three nights a week. On those nights I am not welcome. There are no phone calls, and I feel alienated and lonely. Also, he stays in a job he claims he hates because he can't afford to miss one payment to his estranged wife. Dave refuses to get a divorce because it's expensive, and he is afraid that she will abuse him financially. Yet he gives her extra money on a regular basis despite his 50/50 custody (at present), and he's often broke because of some demand or another she had made. She has a great job as a nurse, but I know very little about her situation so I can't judge her. I am frustrated. When I try to discuss it, Dave tells me he's sorry, "things will change" and eventually I'll be able to share his life with him and his son. But it's been more than a year, and nothing has changed. Should I hold on? This is driving me crazy. - LOSING PATIENCE IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR LOSING PATIENCE: Your boyfriend appears to be a conscientious parent, but he is married and not available for what you want. He may be satisfied with the status quo, which is why he has made no move to divorce or to further include you. Dave is not your "best friend." Best friends discuss their problems and work out compromises. Please consider moving on, because if you allow this situation to drag on another year or two or three -- and I suspect it will -- you'd have to be crazy.

Kelley, 19, fought in the 141 lb. weight division, and will continue next month at Dallas as he competes at the state level.

Boxing club owner Mark Ambriz said, "I'm really proud of these boys. They worked hard to get to this point, and [Russell] will continue to work hard as the time for his competition at the state level gets nearer."

Kelley will continue to train over the next month for the state competition, and the other members of the club will continue to train and prepare for more upcoming tournaments and competi-

Lady Buffs down Rambelles in LSC South opener

CANYON, Texas - One streak continued and one came to an end on Wednesday night as the No. 22 West Texas A&M women's basketball team extended its home winning streak to 39 games and snapped the run of 10 straight victories by Angelo State by handing the Rambelles a 74-53 defeat at the First United Bank Center.

With the victory, WT improves to 11-3 on the season and 1-0 in Lone Star . Conference play while ASU falls to 13-3 overall, 0-1 in LSC South action.

The early portion of the game was tight as two of the top teams in the LSC South battled neck and neck; the game featured three lead changes and five ties in the first seven minutes of play.

Following the back-and-forth pace the clock expired to send the Lady of the first few minutes, WT began to take control. A jumper in the paint by freshman Megan McLain at the 6:20 mark gave the Lady Buffs a sevenpoint advantage, 21-14, and a timeout from ASU's Sally Walling Brooks.

The Rambelles answered out of the break with a three-point field goal by Lindsey Leatherman and after the two teams traded a pair of scores on the next few possessions, the Lady Buffs were left with a four-point advantage, 23-19, with 4:53 to play.

WT rallied to end the first half on a 13-6 run as McLain put an exclamation point on the end of the period by connecting on a medium range jumper as Buffs to the intermission with a 36-25 advantage.

In addition to McLain, who finished the first half with eight points on a 4of-4 mark from the floor, junior Courtney Lee was active during the half, connecting on 5-of-8 first half shot attempts to lead all scorers at the break with 10 points. Sophomore Holly Issaes made her fifth start of the season and dished out four assists during the game's opening 20 minutes.

After halftime, it was a familiar face who stepped up for the Lady Buffs as junior Emily Brister exploded for 11 points despite coming out of the game with 6:44 to play.

Cooper's buzzer beater lifts Buffs to 71-68 win over ASU

CANYON, Texas - Tyler Cooper's three-point field goal with two seconds to play proved to be the game-winner in the Buffs' physical, hard-fought Lone Star Conference South Division opening 71-68 victory over Angelo State at the First United Bank Center Wednesday night.

West Texas A&M improved to 11-5 and 1-0 in LSC South play with the victory in the game, which featured 12 lead changes and 15 ties. Angelo State, meanwhile, falls to 11-5 and 0-1 in conference play.

For the game, the Buffs shot a solid 48.3 percent from the floor and were led in scoring by Robert Lee for the fifth straight game. The Fort Worth, Texas, native collected his first doubledouble of the season with 21 points and 11 rebounds. Two WT post players were also impressive on the night as Andre Hill produced 14 points on 7-of-8 shooting from the floor and added eight boards, while Chris Hinz produced 13 points.

Early in the contest, the Buffs got off to a sluggish start, with the Rams jumping out to an 11-4 advantage and WT 33-27 advantage.

only able to get on the board on a pair of Hinz baskets.

WT did not stay down long, however, as senior Andre Hill shook loose for a pair of scores on the low block followed by a three-point field goal by Pierre Barlow at the 12:45 mark that knotted the game at 11-11.

Robert Lee gave the Buffs their first lead as he converted a lay-up while being fouled at the 12:05 mark; after missing the ensuing free throw, Lee grabbed his own rebound and sank a short jumper to put WT up 15-14

After Angelo State had to battle back to take a 27-25 lead, it was Barlow who again put the Buffs ahead, draining his second long range shot of the half with 2:22 to play in the period. Lee continued the WT surge as after an ASU turnover, he connected on his second three-pointer of the half to extended the home lead to 31-27.

In the closing second of the half, the Rams rushed down the court for one final attempt but a huge block by Hill gave the Buffs even more momentum and sent them to the locker room with a HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Jan. 18, 2008

Bellevue East High School both scored 36 on the college entrance exam, though Ross DeVol needed three tries. One of his earlier tries netted a 35.

The 18-year-old brothers have maintained straight-As through high school, and both are in the running for class valedictorian.

"We're pretty competitive." Ross DeVol said.

The twins have already won household bragging rights. Their older brother, John, earned a 33 the first time he took the ACT and didn't try again.

Ross DeVol said he wants to become a doctor or a psychiatrist. Brian DeVol has said he wants to become an actuary.

The DeVols are only the third pair of students in the past decade to earn perfect scores in the same year and share the same address, ACT spokeswoman Kristin Crouse said. Crouse couldn't say whether the others were twins.

About one out of every 4,000 graduates who took the ACT last year scored a 36. The average score in Nebraska was 22.1, and the national average was 21.2.

Department of Transportation executives were in Carthage Wednesday night in far East Texas for the second stop in a monthlong series of public town hall meetings to discuss the Trans Texas Corridor, a proposed network of superhighway toll roads, and other transportation issues.

About 100 people attended the session at the Texas Country Music Hall of Fame where a panel of officials - like they did at the initial session the previous night in Texarkana fielded questions about toll roads versus free roads, timetables for construction, property acquisition and the absence of traditional money sources to pay for new roads.

"I'm kind of scared tolled.

ability of money to build ways built in Texas, I don't see any way except if it's going to be a toll road."

Much of the discussion was about Interstate 69, a long-sought north-south superhighway through East Texas and into follow route of U.S. 59. The series to go. "Let me say, the best chance of building I-69 is as a toll road," said Phil Russell, an assistant executive director of the transportation agency.

He assured people, however, that existing roads, like U.S. 59, would not be Transportation where we are now," Center department officials also

"We're going to do the very best job we can do to keep those in tip-top shape," Russell said.

> which also could be a leg of the gigantic TTC.

"There's some folks out there that have their minds made up about things and we just want to provide the information we have," said Steve Simmons, deputy executive director of the transportation department.

While some have embraced the project as improper. "I'm one of the few here that don't believe we need this highway," said James Mason, of Carthage. He owns property on either side of U.S. 59 and worried he'd have a six-mile trip to get from one side of the road to his property on the other side if the new road is a limited access highway. "That's not going to work," he said. Agency officials said they would work with landowners and build grade separations or other methods to alleviate such ргоproblems. The same concerns were voiced during construction of interstate highways in the 1960s, Simmons said.

> "I like the format and I'm glad they're doing this," said Hank Gilbert, of Tyler. "But they still have some facts wrong and they're still not telling the whole story. They're not being 100 percent truthful. It's kind of fishy. There's a hidden agenda they're not talking about."

allowable of two acre-feet per acres per year as opposed to one acre foot per acre for the neighboring Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District, and North Plains' use of a three year time period in which six acre-feet of water could be drawn out of the ground.

While that is a two acre-foot per year average, a landowner could produce six acre-feet in one year and none the following two years. Such heavy pumping could impact that landowner's neighbors. There has already been a situation where a lessee has over produced and the landowner may not be able to pump any water for the next two years.

The North Plains Groundwater Conservation District has accepted the regional water plan's 50-50 goal to have 50 percent of the groundwater in the district still in storage at the end of 50 years, but related to that is a rate of decline. Neighboring water districts have set a 1.25 percent decline rate as a maximum.

Danny Krienke of Perryton, the North Plains board president, suggested during discussions that 1.5 percent decline rate might be appropriate for his district. He also suggested dividing the district into two four county management areas.

The western counties, which are heavily irrigated, use much more ground water while the eastern counties are mostly rangeland.

Dallam, Hartley, Moore and Sherman Counties have a decline rate of 1.45 percent. Hansford, Hutchinson, Lipscomb and Ochiltree Counties have a decline rate of 0.41 percent.

Krienke said that 90 percent of the use of water in the North Plains district was for agriculture, but he noted that 90 percent of the water in Roberts County, part of the Panhandle Groundwater mitted to municipal use, primarily Mesa, the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority and the City of Amarillo.

Following Tuesday's hearing, a representative of Mesa expressed a concern that the district appeared to be tilting in favor of the corn farmers in the western part of the North Plains district. Mesa has water rights in Lipcomb County.

During their meeting following the public hearing, Krienke announced that any decision on adopting the revised water management plan would be tabled until the district's February meeting.

At a time when new record lows are being set at Lake Meredith, the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority's traditional primary source of water for its 11 member cities (including Pampa), Pampa City Manager John Horst said that groundwater will play an increasingly important part in the city's and area's water plans.

While decisions made in Dumas may seem far away from North Pampa, Plains Groundwater Conservation District's actions impact the entire panhandle through the Regional Water Plan and because the water with which they are concerned comes from the giant Ogallala Aquifer that also provides water for Pampa and the rest of the panhandle.

AP EXCLUSIVE FDA declaring OTC cold remedies too risky for tots

By LAURAN NEERGAARD AP Medical Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Parents may be left with only love and lots of liquid to give their sniffling babies and toddlers now that the government is declaring over-the-counter cough and cold medicines too risky for tots.

The Food and Drug Administration was issuing that warning Thursday to parents of children under 2.

It's a move expected for months: Drug companies last October quit selling dozens of versions of nonprescription cold remedies targeted specifically to babies and toddlers. That month, the FDA's scientific advisers also voted that the drugs don't work in small children and shouldn't be used in preschoolers, either - anyone under age 6.

The FDA still hasn't decided if OTC decongestants, antihistamines and cough suppressants are appropriate for older children, officials told The Associated Press. Expect a decision on that by spring, the deadline necessary to notify manufacturers before they begin production for next fall's cold season.

For now, FDA's first official ruling focuses on youngsters under 2, warning that "serious and potentially life-threatening side effects can occur."

FDA is worried that parents haven't gotten that message despite all the publicity last fall. They may still have infant-targeted drugs at home, or they may buy drugs meant for older children to give to tots instead, said Dr. Charles Ganley, FDA's nonprescription drugs chief.

"We still have a concern," Ganley said. "It falls out of people's consciousness. We're still in the middle of cold season right now."

Ganley was particularly struck by recent surveys that suggest many parents don't believe OTC remedies could pose a problem, especially if they've given them to an older child without harm.

Thursday's move is a good first step, said Dr. Joshua Sharfstein, Baltimore's health commissioner. He petitioned the FDA last year to end use of nonprescription cold remedies by children under 6, a move backed by the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The reason: There's no evidence that these oral drugs actually ease cold symptoms in children so young - some studies

'....If there's really no evidence of benefit, you don't want to risk the rare problem. Then vou're left with tragedy that you can't justify."

suggest they do no good at all. And while serious side effects are fairly rare, they do occur. Indeed, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention last year reported that more than 1,500 babies and toddlers wound up in emergency rooms over a two-year period because of the drugs.

"It's one thing if you're curing cancer, but we're talking about a self-limitillness," ing said Sharfstein. "If there's really no evidence of benefit, you don't want to risk the rare problem. Then you're left with tragedy that you can't justify."

Specialists are back to recommending old-fashioned steps, such as plenty of fluids and rest, saline drops to loosen stuffy noses, and humidifiers while sleeping.

Why is this an issue now? Child versions of cold remedies came on the market decades ago, when scientists thought that what worked in adults would automatically work in children. Scientists today know that is not always the case.

In fact, FDA never formally allowed infant-targeted cold remedies in the first place; Ganley said they evolved through a legal loophole.

But the FDA is investigating an even bigger question: Are OTC cold remedies safe and effective for children under 12? The agency's advisers last fall called for no use just by the under-6 crowd, but did recommend more research to determine the medicines' effects in children overall.

One man arrested, multiple others sought in slaying of two policemen

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Police arrested one man in the apparent ambush slaying of two officers at a crimeridden apartment complex, and were still looking Thursday for other suspects, authorities said.

Herbie Deshawn Durham, 32, was charged with two murder of counts Wednesday night after a that search massive involved SWAT teams, police dogs and a helicopter.

"We have a significant amount of evidence ... he deserves every label that we're putting on him," DeKalb County Police Chief Terrell Bolton said. "For those out there who are still remaining, yeah, we're coming after you too. Your time on the street is not long. We're going to bring you into justice."

Officers Ricky Bryant Jr., 26, and Eric Barker, 33, were moonlighting as security guards at the complex and investigating a suspi- nounced dead at a hospital.

cious person when they were gunned down, police said.

"They never had a chance," Bolton said.

One witness told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution the officers appeared to be frisking someone right before the shooting early Wednesday.

Derrick Murchison, 38, told the newspaper he looked out his window into a parking lot and saw that both officers had pulled up in their personal vehicles.

"They had asked the dude for his license ... I looked out and he was on the hood like this," he said, demonstrating that the man was standing with his hands on top of the car.

Murchison said he went back to playing a video you." game, but then his girlfriend heard shots and he pushed her away from the window.

One officer died at the scene; the other was pro-

Witnesses reported seeing two males running from the scene, police said.

Officer Jonathan Ware, a police spokesman, said authorities were searching for "more than one" other suspect. He said he could not be specific.

Ware did not have details on what led to Durham's arrest, other than "hard police work." He said authorities had received cooperation from the public, including residents of the apartment complex, but could not say whether a $55,000 reward had led to the arrest.

Bolton had urged the gunmen to surrender: "If I were you, I'd turn myself in. The sun's coming up. Before sundown, we're gonna find

It was not immediately clear whether Durham had an attorney. Ware said Durham had a misdemeanor record, but could not be more specific.
