Salazar, Riley named Anderson Scholars

By MARILYN POWERS
 The Pampa News

Graduating Pampa High School seniors Lidia Salazar and Lindsey Nicole Riley are this year's Anderson Scholars and have each won an Anderson Foundation Scholarship, according to Eugene Anderson, president of the Eugene and Daniela Anderson Scholarship Foundation.

The announcement of Salazar and Riley being named Anderson Scholars and being awarded the scholarships was made at Tuesday evening's PHS Honors Banquet, held at Pampa Country Club.

Salazar was awarded a four-year scholarship of $20,000. The daughter of Agapito and Ema Salazar of Pampa, she plans to attend Texas Tech University at Lubbock and study education.

Salazar is ranked eighth academically of 236 students in the PHS graduating class of 2008. She was born in Mexico, but is a permanent resident of the U.S. She is fluent in Spanish and, although English is her second language, received the outstanding student English award as a junior. She teaches Spanish to children at Wilson Elementary School.

She is currently president of the PHS Spanish Club and as a junior was the club's vice president. She has been elected to the National Honor Society and is a member of Students Against Destructive

Local pharmacies will accept new discount drug cards

By MARILYN POWERS
 The Pampa News

Free prescription drug discount cards are now being made available to Gray County residents under a program sponsored by the National Association of Counties.

Gray County Commissioners approved the drug discount card program at their Feb. 1 meeting. The cards offer average savings of 20 percent off the retail price of commonly prescribed drugs.

The cards may be used by all county residents, regardless of age, income or existing health coverage, and they are accepted at all of the pharmacies in the county, said Precinct 2 Commissioner Gerald Wright. A national network of more than 57,000 participating retail pharmacies also will honor the prescription discount card.

"Gray County is proud to be one of the counties nationwide participating with NACo," Wright said. "The NACo prescription discount card offers significant savings for the uninsured and underinsured residents of our county, and even those fortunate to have prescription coverage can use the card to save money on drugs that are not covered by their health plan. Residents do not have to be Medicare beneficiaries to be eligible for this program."

There is no cost to county taxpayers for NACo and Gray County to make the cards available to county residents.

Cards will be available at all pharmacies in the county, as well as the county treasurer's and judge's offices in the courthouse and at physicians' offices within the county. County residents may call toll-free 1-877-321-2652 or visit naco.advancex.com for assistance with the program.

"Using the NACo prescription discount card is easy," Wright said. "Simply present it at a participating pharmacy. There is no enrollment form, no membership fee and no restrictions or limits on frequency of use. Cardholders and their family members may use the card any time their prescriptions are not covered by insurance."

Life is a bed of geraniums

Pat Johnson of Pampa submitted this colorful photo with the following description: "These baby birds are in a nest in a hanging basket on my front porch. I first noticed the nest several weeks ago with five little blue eggs. I have been watching it ever since and they hatched out last week. They are beginning to get feathers now so will probably get flying lessons from the mother bird soon."

PHS Honor Grads recognized

Twenty-four members of the Pampa High School Class of 2008 have earned the rank of honor graduate, according to Superintendent Barry Haenisch and High School Principal Danny Seabourn.

Three students carry the added distinction of Superintendent Scholar.

Kristen Dunn is valedictorian of her graduating class, and Kayla Mendoza is salutatorian.

To qualify as an honor graduate, a student is required to place in the top 10 percent of the grad-

Another take on human tragedy, suffering ...

I do not endure suffering gracefully. Suffering — whether my own or others — reminds me of my human frailty. It makes me feel weak and helpless. Suffering brings me to the full realization that little in life is actually under my control.

We in America are so blessed, even those of us at the bottom of the economic ladder. More and more I fear we are turning into a nation of people who have lost touch with the reality of our blessings. We feel entitled to happiness, to comfort. We seem to regard tragedy as something from which we should be immune.

It is not that tragedy does not strike here. No place on earth is isolated from the powers of chaos or the darkness of evildoers — not even America. However, in America tragedy is often met with outrage. While outrage can fuel positive change and bring forth positive results, the blame-game often ensues with the hew-and-cry for restitution soon to follow — restitution or more laws to foil what cannot be prevented ... tragedy, human suffering. It is, indeed, a vicious cycle.

In a newsletter received recently here at The News, Dr. Johnny Funderburg of First Baptist Church wrote a thought-provoking piece I felt moved to include, verbatim, in this column. The article speaks somewhat of our attitudes on this subject from a Christian-perspective.

"Pastoral Ponderings" ... by Johnny Funderburg

A rather solemn, soul-searching question was found in the car of Matthew Murray as a letter addressed to God. Murray, the young man who shot and killed two people at a Youth With a Mission training center, was himself killed by a security guard at New Life Church in Colorado Springs, Colo., last December.

The letter to God that was recovered after the event asked one question: "Why didn't any changes occur or any love or help come when I accepted You as Lord and Savior?"

The article that carried this statement gave no other information on this young man, his circumstances, background, or family history. Yet, we can guess that he must have been a very disturbed, depressed, hurting soul.

And his question belies a couple of undercurrent themes that are troubling: 1) First, his question tells of a self-absorbed foundation. For one to believe that God's salvation is supposed to answer all our questions, calm all our fears, or solve all our problems speaks to one of the major problems of Christianity today: There is a selfishness at the core of our spiritual lives.

Understand, we come to God because we need His Grace to save our souls, not for our worldly pleasures. Jesus' death satisfied the Father's wrath against us. Salvation blesses us because it takes away God's judgment that would send us to an eternal hell.

Have you ever seen a day in which Christians are employing such self-centered demands as we are today? Church is a demand for entertainment. Programs are a demand for recreation. New concepts and ideas must be so inwardly focused that we are losing our outward thrust. We have become so bent on pleasing ourselves or one another that we have left out what it is to please God.

Surely this young man had been told that, "Trusting God would make him happy. It would meet all his needs. God would answer all his problems." And the young man was so self-centered that he became disillusioned.

2) Secondly, our faith must be applied before it can impact our lives. Sure, we can walk in peace. Yes, we can have joy. But it only happens when we surrender our lives to Him, when our dreams become His dreams, our goals, His goals.

To use God manipulatively — to expect Him to bless our fleshly goals and sinful desires is an exercise in futility. God will never honor us nor bless us until we humble ourselves and submit to His ways and we die to self to be made alive in Him.

What you need to know about GPS ...

In most men's minds, the only thing worse than asking someone for directions is asking, "Where am I?" There's a sense of security in knowing where you are at all times; which helps to explain the explosive popularity of a little device called a GPS receiver.

Short for "Global Positioning System," GPS represents a series of satellites orbiting 12,000 miles above the Earth that allow you to pinpoint your location to within a few meters. But, I'm getting ahead of myself. Let's start at the beginning.

History
In the latter days of the arms race, the targeting of ICBMs became such a fine art that they could be expected to land right on an enemy's missile silos. Such a direct hit would destroy the silo and any missile in it. The ability to take out your opponent's missiles had a profound effect on the balance of power.

But you could only expect to hit a silo if you knew exactly where you were launching from. That's not hard if your missiles are on land, as most of them were in the Soviet Union. But most of the U.S. nuclear arsenal was at sea on subs. To maintain the balance of power, the U.S. had to come up with a way to allow those subs to surface and fix their exact position in a matter of minutes anywhere in the world. ... Hello GPS! (Excerpted from Trimble (<http://www.trimble.com>).

Eric Spellmann
Columnist

During that time, the federal government was nervous about enemy use of the system. So they purposely encrypted the satellite signals, preventing accurate measurements from all but only a few specially equipped military receivers. That encryption was removed on May 1, 2000, allowing anyone to use GPS with pinpoint precision.

How Does it Work?
As I mentioned before, the Global Positioning System is a series of satellites (24 to be exact: 21 working and three spares). They were positioned in such a way, that from any point on Earth, you have four satellites above the horizon at all times.

Without going into some serious geometry, just take my word that it takes three satellites to pinpoint your location on earth. By using measurements from the fourth satellite, your receiver can give an accurate altitude measurement.

Each satellite has an onboard atomic clock (the most accurate way of measuring precise time). These satellites are constantly broadcasting a signal using that clock as a reference. Your GPS receiver finds the three closest satellites, locks onto them, and then measures the time it takes to receive their signals. With some complex triangulation-based math, the receiver determines the exact distance from each satellite to itself, and, therefore, is able to pinpoint your location in longitude and latitude.

So, how accurate is it? Before the government turned off its encryption, GPS receivers were accurate to within a hundred feet. Using radio towers for correction, most GPS receivers could narrow that range down a little. Without the encryption, most consumer-targeted GPS units are accurate to within 15 meters. Believe it or not, with the right equipment, you can pinpoint your location anywhere on the planet to within one centimeter!

The Many Uses of GPS
As the price of GPS receivers drop, more and more people are taking advantage of them. Hikers, boaters, and other sports enthusiasts are using receivers to prevent getting lost. Most units have the ability to set "waypoints." For example, when you start a hike, you can set the "beginning point" on your system. At every point you change directions, you can hit a button to set a "waypoint." While you walk, the receiver is continuously updating your distance from each waypoint. That way, you can use the GPS to find your way back. Pretty neat, eh?

Large companies are installing GPS units in their fleets of vehicles. Each vehicle transmits their current location via radio back to "home base." For instance, a cab company could easily see which cab was closest to a calling customer. Trucking companies can calculate delivery times within minutes by knowing exactly where their vehicles are at all times. Finally, security companies are installing these small receivers (along with equally small transmitters) into expensive cars and into children's watches, providing instant location-verification (think car-jackings and kidnappings).

So now that you're all excited about the possibilities of GPS, where can you buy a receiver, and how much should you pay? Find out next week! Until then, I'll ... See you in Cyberspace!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Justice has no price ...

Dear Editor,
Re: Calvin Lacy's "Letter to the editor."
— I have never heard of anyone putting money or press coverage above bringing justice in a close-knit community before.

Thank goodness neither has our district attorney. She has a delicate situation and knows what she has to do to bring justice and a peace of mind to family members and our small community — not for personal gain.

Please! Did you ever stop to think of the magnitude this has had on a precious child? I just hope your family can sleep better at night knowing how you feel. Especially if it had been them. Mr. King will never get what he deserves in either state.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, May 8, the 129th day of 2008. There are 237 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On May 8, 1945, President Truman announced in a radio address that World War II had ended in Europe.

On this date:
In 1541, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto reached the Mississippi River.
In 1794, Antoine Lavoisier, the father of modern chemistry, was executed on the guillotine during France's Reign of Terror.
In 1846, the first major battle of the Mexican-American War was fought at Palo Alto, Texas; U.S. forces led by General Zachary Taylor were able to beat back the invading Mexican forces.

In 1884, the 33rd president of the United States, Harry S. Truman, was born near Lamar, Mo.
In 1958, Vice President Richard Nixon was shoved, stoned, booed and spat upon by anti-American protesters in Lima, Peru.

Salazar is a member of the PHS Concert Choir and has received an outstanding singer award of the Mixed Choir. Her extracurricular activities include volunteer work at the Special Olympics, St. Vincent's Church, Tralee Crisis Center and the Fish Camp. She works part-time at Consuelo's Restaurant.

"She is a pleasure to teach," one of her teachers commented in a press release. "I am confident that Lidia will do well in college and will make a positive contribution to society as an adult."

Salazar said that her goal is "to become a teacher and help others by teaching tomorrow's leaders."

Riley was awarded a four-year scholarship of $28,000. She plans to attend Abilene Christian University and study early childhood education.

Riley is ranked 13th academically of the 236 students in the PHS graduating class of 2008. She has received academic awards in geography, English and Spanish.

"She has overcome considerable personal difficulties to achieve this distinction," said Pampa Independent School District Superintendent Barry Haensch, who announced the Anderson Scholars at the banquet. "She has been fortunate to be taken in by an aunt and uncle with whom she lives, although she is financially self-supporting."

In addition to attending PHS, Riley holds two part-time jobs, one at United Supermarket and one at St. Matthew's Day School. She is a member of the Concert Choir and the PHS golf team. In the past, she has participated in track and worked on the yearbook. She has helped children with special needs and helped tutor and entertain children at Vacation Bible School.

"Lindsey has overcome many hardships and trials to create opportunities for a successful future," one of her teachers said. "She has refused to allow herself to become a victim, embittered by her circumstances. Rather, she has worked hard, inside and outside of school, to create the change for a bright future."

Riley wants to teach young children when she graduates from college. The Eugene and Daniela Anderson Scholarship Foundation was established in 2000 to assist PHS students to obtain higher education. Since that time, the Foundation has awarded 31 scholarships with total value of over $500,000.

Anderson Scholarship recipients who are graduating from college this year include Shawn Goodin with a degree in civil engineering from West Point Military Academy, Rebecca Nolte from Texas Tech University with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English and a minor in psychology, and Joy Zhang from Texas Tech with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree in accounting. Zhang is graduating from college after three years and is planning to go to graduate business school.

Anderson Scholars from Pampa High School who are still pursuing their studies are Ben Briscoe, who is studying journalism at Southern Methodist University; Zach Edens, computer science, and Michael Foreman, biomedical science, both at Texas A&M University; Aaron Pepper, journalism, Northwestern University; Landon McNeely, biology, Baylor University; Monica Johnson, psychology, University of North Texas; and at Texas Tech University: Rachel Parker, English; Taylor Reeves, history and political science; and Urvis Trivedi, pre-medical.

Information about AFS scholarships may be obtained at the PHS student counselors office.

Anderson is a 1956 graduate of Pampa High School. He is a 1961 graduate of the University of Texas, where he received a Bachelor of Science degree in chemical engineering, and a 1963 graduate of Harvard University, where he received a Masters in Business Administration degree.

In his business career, he held several senior international management positions. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Anderson of Amarillo. He and his wife, Daniela, reside in London, England; Port La Galere, France; and Auckland, New Zealand.

PHS students who wish to become Anderson Scholars and benefit from the Anderson Scholarship Foundation must achieve high academic standards, contribute positively to their school and community, and demonstrate financial need, according to Anderson.

The discount card program is administered by Caremark Rx, Inc. Caremark absorbs any costs incurred by pharmacies which participate in the discount card program.

"The Federal government has failed to come up with a health care plan to address issues like this," Wright said. "Also, the state hasn't come up with a program to help people with medical care and to get their prescriptions filled. Between the federal and state governments not doing anything about it, it's left up to the counties to try to provide help. This is one way Gray County is trying to help the people who are not insured."

Delta Air Lines, American boost fuel charge by $20

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of the three biggest U.S. carriers said Thursday they have again raised ticket prices, this time by $20 roundtrip, to recoup rapidly rising fuel costs.

The increases by Delta Air Lines and American Airlines affect the carriers' fuel surcharges, which now total $130 roundtrip on many flights. That means passengers on some cheap flights could be paying more in fees and taxes than for the airfare itself.

Delta Air Lines Inc. initiated the increase, which applies to most domestic routes. It is the Atlanta-based carrier's second hike in just over a week. The previous increase was quickly matched by competitors.

"This is obviously a result of the current market, and fares have to reflect the cost of doing business," spokeswoman Betsy Talton said.

Tim Smith, a spokesman for AMR Corp.'s American Airlines, said the Fort Worth, Texas-based carrier matched the increase on most routes.

Airlines have been racing to hike airfares, tack on surcharges, and charge for amenities such as extra bags and legroom as they struggle to cope with soaring energy prices. Many airlines now count fuel as their biggest cost.

The price of jet fuel, like gasoline, has risen rapidly along with the price of crude. A gallon on the spot market in New York was selling for $3.57 as recently as Tuesday, according to the Energy Information Administration. That is up about 78 percent from this time last year.

At the same time, carriers are cutting back on flights to reduce costs and maintain their pricing power as the economy slows. Even so, analysts expect many large carriers to post large losses this year.

"I would say to my CEOs: fasten your seat belts, tougher times are coming," Giovanni Bisignani, director general and chief executive of the International Air Transport Association trade group, said in an interview.

Rick Seaney, chief executive of airfare research site FareCompare.com, said the increases mean that fees and taxes together now cost more than the actual base fare on several short-haul flights.

"With a backdrop of a slowing economy, I continue to look for a tipping point where domestic air travelers begin to significantly push back on record high airline ticket prices. At best the jury is still out," Seaney said in an e-mail.

Delta shares rose 11 cents to $7.78 in morning trading. AMR shares rose 8 cents to $8.65.

Gov. Richardson: Border more secure

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson said Wednesday that he has seen an improvement in security along the U.S.-Mexico border.

Problems remain, but increased policing by state and federal authorities has significantly helped, said Richardson, a former U.N. ambassador and former Democratic presidential candidate.

"In my opinion, there has been a dramatic improvement in the last two months," Richardson told reporters in the Mexican border state of Chihuahua, across from New Mexico, where he met with Chihuahua Gov. Jesus Reyes Baeza.

Richardson said he would ask U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Tony Garza to reevaluate a travel alert, issued by the U.S. State Department in April, that warned U.S. citizens of rising violence in northern Mexico but stopped short of suggesting that Americans avoid traveling in the region.

Congratulations to a 2008 Senior!

District's first technology director retires

By MIRANDA BAILEY
Special to The News

When Lee Carter began his career in education in 1975 as a math and physics teacher at Pampa High School, he had to wear a tie to set himself apart from his students. Thirty-three years later both his education career and personal life have taken a number of turns, but he has still managed to set himself apart — whether he knows it or not.

As Pampa ISD's first technology director, and one of, if not the first district-appointed technology director in Region 16, Carter helped Pampa educators usher in the new world of computers, changing the landscape of local classrooms forever.

It was his love of math, science and all-things-electronic that landed him on the technology side of education. Carter got his own first computer, a Commodore Vic-20, for his anniversary in 1983.

"Eighty-three dollars is how much that thing was," he said. "It didn't have the ability to save. It was gone when you turned it off."

Tinkering at home with his new "toy," he began to introduce himself to computers.

According to Carter, that first computer he bought came with a magazine which he would use to get and type codes into the machine, programming the machine to complete basic data functions, like sorting lists alphabetically, or to create simple images which printed out in X's.

"The first program I bought was a word processor, and it took 6 1/2-minutes to load the program," he said.

In 1984, he began teaching new sections of a Computer Math course at the high school that had first started in 1978. Teaching this course gave him the reputation as the computer guy on campus. Naturally, people would ask him for computer advice.

"It was one of those deals where I was a computer nut, and people were getting Apple II's back in the 80s," which soon led him to the position where he spent most of career, Carter said.

At first, he went around on his conference period at the high school, or at lunch or before and after school, helping teachers who had ordered computers for their classrooms. From there, things snowballed. In 1986, Carter was hired as the full-time technology director for Pampa ISD.

"And I think I was the first formally named technology director in Region 16," he said.

Carter with 10 and a half month old daughter, Kristi, in 1979.

In between teaching and technology, he got his master's in education and was a Lamar principal for a year. But his heart was in technology training, along with his many other hobbies and interests including martial arts, photography, knife-making, woodworking, and ... hair-braiding.

"After we had the girls I made the decision to be very involved in their lives," Carter explained, even going so far as learning to braid his young daughters' hair. Wife Sharon, also a Pampa ISD teacher, and their daughters Kristi, currently a police officer for Arlington P.D., and Stacie, an exercise and sports science Texas Tech graduate, are a great source of pride and have been a huge support for Carter — particularly when death came knocking at his door — twice.

"When I was 15, my dad died of a heart attack at 44, and after he died, I thought that I wouldn't let that happen to me," Carter recalled. So, unlike his father, he exercised daily, took care of himself in every way that he could ... which is what he told a foreign exchange student in 1995 as they stopped to walk during a neighborhood jog.

"I don't even want to consider dying till I'm at least 100," he told the student as they approached his doorstep. It was at that moment that he fell down dead. His heart stopped for 6 1/2-minutes and he was in a coma for 15 hours before he awoke to short-term memory loss for the next 10 days. Soon after, he had a triple bypass on his 44th birthday, but says he doesn't really remember anything of the whole event — unlike his next heart attack nine years later.

In 2004, Carter had a major neck surgery followed by a heart attack five days later. He says he does remember experiencing something supernatural.

"Everything I saw was impossible. I don't remember what I saw, exactly except that I knew it was impossible to see what I was seeing."

These experiences, say Carter, have changed his priorities and the way he sees things.

"That really changed my outlook on life. I really consider those two times that I died the two biggest blessings of my life ... I'm getting to see things my father never got to see," he said.

Carter lives in Amarillo now. Closer to his mother and sister. He recently took over a technology position in the City of Amarillo's Library Department, where he hopes to work another five to 10 years doing what he loves: Training people in technology.

"I'm the eternal optimist," Carter concluded. "I always think things will turn out right. It may not always be what you want, but if it's what God wants, then it's right."

Sports

Special Olympics track team competes in Boys Ranch meet

Members of Pampa's Special Olympic track team competed in the Boys Ranch Regional track meet recently.

"This weekend is always a favorite with our track athletes. We made our first stop at CiCi's Pizza on Friday evening, then off to the hotel for the night," Coach Helen Robinson said. "On Saturday we are up early having a great breakfast at the hotel and off to Boys Ranch. After all track events and awards we stop at the souvenir store for our favorite ice cream treats."

Results are as follows: Ashley Abbe placed second in third team relay, second in 100 meter dash and first in running long jump. Liberty Bloxum placed fourth in first team relay, first in 100 meter dash and second in shot put. Cyndal Boyd placed first in 25 meter wheel chair and first in softball throw. Chase Cook placed third in second team relay, first in 100 meter dash and second in running long jump. HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, May 8, 2008:

You communicate often. You might not be responsible for how others hear your words. On the other hand, you will learn and develop new ways of communicating that will allow you to confirm what you have said as well as allow the other person — whomever it might be — to echo what he or she has heard. You will see your relationship evolve to a new plateau if you are willing to listen, share and not always be right. Your creativity will bubble forth, though for some this energy will manifest through a child. If you are single, a very serious romance could enter your life. If you are attached, you will be negotiating a more serious commitment, perhaps a new addition to the family. CANCER loves sharing with you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Pressure builds quickly. You cannot seem to juggle all the various interests, no matter how hard you try. Knowing that, choose your priorities. Start at this point, and you might avoid frustration. Family and domestic matters gain in importance. Tonight: Happy at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Speak your mind if you want to, but know that there will be ramifications no matter which way you go. Communication will open up the more willing you are to discuss a problem. Clear the air. Romance builds. Tonight: Tell it like it is.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Push comes to shove. How will you handle the problem? It is up to you to make the right call. Investigate your options with an eye to growth and change. Investments in property could be slow to come to fruition. Tonight: Easy does it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Don't let someone's determination upset you. Knowing what you want could be important. Avoid a power play no matter what. It is as simple as the word "no." Communication will flourish once you relax. Tonight: Say yes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Step back and think. You don't need to get involved in a brouhaha. Walk away if possible. Your instincts carry you through in a money matter. Listen to news with an eye to positive change. Your inner voice plays a big role. Tonight: Get some extra sleep.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You cannot determine what you want, no matter which way you turn. Investigate without feeling as if you must make a decision. You'll move in the right direction once you ascertain all the information. Focus and priorities carry you through. Tonight: Aim high.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Take a must show and use it to your benefit. You might need more personal time, but right now you cannot get it. Listen to feedback that heads in your direction. Your instincts will lead you once you devour news. Tonight: In the limelight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You might want to reverse gears and start down a new path. Your willingness to transform your style might shock some, but it separates you from many. Reach out for someone who has a different attitude. Tonight: Watch a movie.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Work with one person directly. Your ability to read between the lines lets you realize what is happening. Convincing others might depend on one person. He or she impacts others differently. Tonight: Team up with someone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You might be much harder or difficult to deal with than others realize. Your ability to get to the bottom of a problem earmarks your behavior. Look to positive change through discussion. You see life in a new light. Tonight: Sort through suggestions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Emphasize what you can accomplish. Though you might be involved with mental shenanigans, you would be best off to let go of some of your wilder ideas. Work with someone directly. One-on-one relating flourishes. Tonight: Squeeze in some exercise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Add more creativity and fun into your life. Withdraw from someone who always wants to do something his or her way. Understand what might be happening with this person. A partner has a fun suggestion; go with it. Tonight: Enjoy as if there is no tomorrow.
