Pampa High School hosts exchange students from three continents

by Darlene Birkes
 special to The Pampa News

For the first time the AFS (American Field Service) exchange students to Pampa High School this year are from three continents - Asia, Europe, and South America. Pampela Rojas is the first student to PHS from Columbia, South America. She lives on a ranch near the town of Cucuta, located in the northern region with a population over one million people. Columbia, west of Venezuela, is bordered by the Caribbean Sea on the north and the Pacific ocean on the west. The country is known for the Andes mountain range and coastal regions.

Sonja Huber lives in a small Swiss town of Villmergen, with a population of 7,000 people and is located on the plans of northern Switzerland. In addition to the two Swiss languages, she can speak German and French.

The other European, Julian Rosello has dual citizenship with Italy and Germany. He lives with his parents and sister in Munich, Germany, which has a population of 1.3 million. Rosello is bilingual and his father is Italian, and his mother is German.

Toby Lam could have to make the greatest adjustment, coming from the metropolitan city of Hong Kong with a population of seven million people. Even though the city is comprised of many nationalities, each live in their own area and often speak their own language, Lam said. Different regions have concentrated ethnicity's. According to Lam, Hong Kong also offers a wide variety of forms of entertainment.

Lam is accustomed to walking everywhere he goes.

they are not safe on the crowded streets. The students all concluded they are about 15 minutes away from their schools. Lam walks to school while "Brook Phillips and the crew from TPI will be on hand to sign autographs, take pictures, answer questions and will be presenting a special trophy to the winner of the 'TPI Pro's Pick' judged by the guys from TPI themselves," Fenton Motors General Manager Harry Fisher said.

TPI is nationally recognized as one of the premier automotive restoration companies in the country, as well as the builders of the Pit Viper Mustangs and the RCR Series 3 Camaros. TPI will be bringing several examples of their award winning cars, according to Fisher, who owns a Series 3 himself. His car will also be on display at the event.

"They'll be on hand for the coming out party for Fenton Motors' very own example of the RCR Series 3 Camaro," Fisher said.

Fisher and Lance Fenton of Fenton Motors have supported the project from its inception and have purchased three of the earliest serial numbers available to the public.

TPI has partnered up with Richard Childress Racing (RCR) on the Series 3 project and will be bringing autographed racing memorabilia from all three RCR NASCAR drivers: Clint Bowyer of the Jack Daniels 07 car, Kevin Harvick of the Shell 29 car and Jeff Burton of the Cingular 31 car.

The eighth plague of Egypt or learning to live with insects

My cousin woke up with a cockroach on his face yesterday.

Not knowing the source of the itch, he gave the pest a sleep comatose swat. The bug returned with a bold vengeance and sat on his cheek.

My cousin, with whom I live, continued telling me this story even though he knows my disdain for bugs and how they have been one of my greatest struggles of Texas living so far.

"I could feel something crawling on my face. I didn't open my eyes and just swatted it off," he said.

I screamed, a genuine, disgusted, five-alarm, holy cow I am going to wake up with a roach on my face tomorrow, scream.

"I fell asleep and then opened my eyes and realized it was back," he continued. Another five-alarm scream from me.

"Then I realized I had been sleeping with my mouth open," he added.

Yep, that was the point in the story that a little piece of my soul died.

In Texas, there are bugs everywhere.

I hate bugs.

I am your garden variety bug coward. I genuinely hate them all: big ones, small ones, bugs that bite, bugs that fly, bugs that crawl, bugs that look like ladies, even bugs that dance. The hate hasn't been a real issue until recently.

Having made many trips to Amarillo in my lifetime, I sort of assumed that Pampa would have the same bug to people ratio. It probably does, but I had neglected to realize that my trips to Amarillo were mostly in the winter, the time when the bugs are dead or hibernating, dreaming of human blood.

The summer is a different reality.

I envy the bugs for their "seize the day" attitude. They have no shame. Flies flock to food, mosquitos bite helpless children, cockroaches nest on faces, and then bam! Just as quickly as they arrived, they are swimming dead in citronella candle wax. Even if their life span is short, I still wish it wasn't at all.

I knew I was in trouble large brown bug (I can't name it because there aren't many bugs in Colorado Springs) come running out with my chair. He had beat me to seizing the day. Risking serious embarrassment at my new job, I withheld my normal cry/scream/squeal/run combo that I normally perform on the sight of bugs, and instead chose to be the bigger man and pretend I had something to do and left the area.

Every day since then, I have been "bugged" by the enemy. I have had many firsts since moving to Pampa and most have been enjoyable, or at the least memorable. I saw my first possum and was very pleased with the cuddle appeal they have. I went to my first rodeo and lost a flip-flop in the manure mixed mud (I laughed a lot.). A not as enjoyable first for me was a grasshopper.

How they ever chose a grasshopper to be the good-willed conscience of Pinocchio is beyond me. They are large, gross looking creatures that probably crunch if you step on them. I know they won't hurt me. They hop on grass and eat it too, not posing much of a threat. Still, they ruin my day if I see them. Is it rational? No. But neither is my incredibly serious fear of worms. I would rather bathe in rodeo manure mixed mud nightly than hold a worm. I hate them.

My sister just visited Pampa, and she reminded me how much my mom would enjoy the sound of the crickets chirping at night—a true sign of Texas. I'm OK with it, but some nights I feel like the crickets are just reminding me that bugs are just as present in Texas as they were during the eighth plague of Egypt. They were here before me, and they will be here long after and I better "cow-boy up" and deal with it.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Sept. 8, the 252nd day of 2008. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 8, 1900, Galveston, Texas, was struck by a hurricane that killed an estimated 8,000 people.

On this date:

In 1565, a Spanish expedition established the first permanent European settlement in North America at present-day St. Augustine, Fla.

In 1664, the Dutch surrendered New Amsterdam to the British, who renamed it New York.

In 1930, the comic strip "Blondie," created by Chic Young, was first published.

'That pestilent cosmetic, rhetoric.'

— T.H. Huxley
English biologist and author (1825-1895)

In 1934, 134 people lost their lives in a fire aboard the liner Morro Castle off the New Jersey coast.

In 1941, the 900-day Siege of Leningrad by German forces began during World War II.

In 1951, a peace treaty with Japan was signed by 49 nations in San Francisco.

In 1974, President Ford granted an unconditional pardon to former President Nixon.

In 1975, Boston's public schools began court-ordered citywide busing to achieve racial desegregation amid scattered incidents of violence.

In 1988, two nuclear-missile rocket motors were destroyed at an army ammunition plant in Karnack, Texas; they were the first U.S. weapons to be eliminated under an arms reduction treaty with the Soviet Union.

In 1994, a USAir Boeing 737 crashed into a ravine as it was approaching Pittsburgh International Airport, killing all 132 people on board.

Ten years ago: Mark McGwire of the St. Louis Cardinals broke major league baseball's record for home runs in a single season, hitting number 62 off Chicago Cubs pitcher Steve Trachsel and eclipsing the 37-year-old record held by Roger Maris.

Five years ago: The Recording Industry Association of America, the music industry's largest trade group, filed 261 copyright lawsuits across the country against Internet users for trading songs online. Nazi-era filmmaker Leni Riefenstahl died in Poeking, Germany, at age 101.

One year ago: Sheriff's deputies in Logan County, W. Va., rescued Megan Williams, a 20-year-old black woman, from a house in Big Creek, where she'd endured what authorities described as days of torture. (Six whites later pleaded guilty to various charges; a seventh is awaiting trial.) Top-ranked Justine Henin overwhelmed Svetlana Kuznetsova 6-1, 6-3 to win her second U.S. Open women's title and seventh Grand Slam championship.

Time to quit before I outstay my welcome

Years ago, the first time I saw my friend Brother Dave Gardner after he had survived a plane crash, the comedian smiled and said, "The devil like to got me." That's a good explanation for my last trip to the hospital.

I've been running a footnote with piled-up years and bad living habits, and they have pulled even and will soon be ahead. I know it may not seem to normal people that writing three columns a week requires any hard work, but it does require energy to do the research and an alertness of the mind that I can no longer muster. Hence, this will be my last column.

It's been a difficult decision to make. In one sense, I'm not sure there is even a Charley Reese without the column, but I would rather quit now than to reach a point where the editors and readers know that I should quit. Those of you who have read my column have made me a sort of guest in your home, and I don't want to overstay my welcome.

I don't intend to croak, but that's not something we can control. I have some tidying up to do. One of the things I have to do is to say a heartfelt thanks to the readers and to the editors. I've stirred my share of controversy, and the easiest solution to controversy is to simply drop the column.

I greatly admire those editors who stuck with me. I deeply appreciate the loyalty of my readers. The sales reps and the staff at King Features are the best in the business. I feel honored to have been associated with them. To them, freedom of the press is not a slogan.

I've had a good run. In 1955, when I started as a reporter, newspaper city rooms were full of tobacco smoke, alcoholics, gluepots, steel rulers, copy pencils and typewriters. There was a lot of profanity and an occasional fistfight. Editors excelled in sarcasm. But they taught me how to write clear sentences. One afternoon when I reported in, I asked an editor if he would like to get a cup of coffee. He glared at me and said, "Reese, I just spent $15 getting a buzz on, and I ain't about to ruin it with a (expletive) 10-cent cup of coffee."

Today's newsrooms look more like insurance offices. Computer keyboards don't make much noise. If the reporters smoke anything at all, it's not tobacco. Instead of greasy grills, most newspapers have salad bars. I'm sure H.L. Mencken would have seen salad bars as a sure sign of decline.

John McCain can have the last laugh, since I've said several times that he's too old to be the president. He is, even if he is more durable than I am. There are some who will celebrate my going, and it galls me to give them that pleasure. I was never ambitious, but I've always been competitive and pugnacious.

At any rate, it's a great time to be an American. George W. Bush, who turned out to be a gift to comedians but a blunderer of the first order, will soon be out of office. It is historic and a good sign that a black man, Barack Obama, can win the nomination of a major party. When I started in the business, the South was still segregated, and blacks were invisible both as employees and as subjects of news stories, with the exception of crime stories.

The great advantage of a free society is the capacity to self-correct itself. You'd think dictators would have figured that out, but if they are not paranoid when they seize power, they become so trying to hang on to power.

Well, enough random thoughts. My goal as a columnist has always been to stimulate and, if necessary, provoke people into thinking for themselves. If we fail to do that, a free society won't last. I wish you all a fond farewell.

Texas Thoughts

The Dallas Morning News on the presidential candidates and immigration reform:

Barely a year ago, illegal immigration was Topic A on America's agenda. It turned CNN's Lou Dobbs into a household name. This newspaper, recognizing the issue's importance, selected the illegal immigrant as our Texan of the Year not because we approved of illegal immigration but because of the huge political and social impact the phenomenon was having on our state.

Boy, did we touch a nerve. So imagine our outrage that neither Republicans nor Democrats addressed it substantively during their recent national conventions. It was as if Barack Obama and John McCain regarded the entire topic as radioactive. When it comes to answers, the two men running for president either have no new ideas or are too afraid to venture forth with them publicly.

American voters must not allow a leadership vacuum to persist on a problem of this magnitude.

Mr. McCain, trying hard not to offend his conservative base, says he would not vote for the comprehensive immigration reform bill that he himself introduced in the Senate. Mr. Obama has committed only to deal with illegal immigration sometime before the end of his first term. Instead of debating solutions before the voting public, they are punting this as far down the road and away from the elections as they can.

Frustrated state and local governments feel they have no choice but to take unilateral action. The city of Farmers Branch on Saturday plans to begin enforcing a new law requiring apartment or house renters to obtain a $5 license that will enable the city to verify their legal U.S. residency. Irving's

Police Department continues to participate in the federal Criminal Alien Program.

Several studies are underway in the Texas Legislature to determine how the state can enact its own enforcement measures. Tyler Republican Rep. Leo Berman promises to spearhead 20 to 30 bills on illegal immigration. The states of Arizona and Oklahoma already are seizing the initiative to ban illegal immigrants from the workplace, sparking retaliatory proposals.

If the presidential candidates are foolish enough to think illegal immigration isn't on voters' minds, they'd better think again. State and local lawmakers recognize voters' outrage. They're acting because lawmakers neither see "change we can believe in" nor "maverick courage" when it comes to progress on comprehensive immigration reform.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have been in a long-distance relationship with my girlfriend, "Elli," for two years. We haven't seen each other for almost six months, and now she has decided she wants time apart. Our relationship was suffering during my last year of graduate school because I wasn't able to give Elli the time she deserved. Now I have graduated and have a job that gives me more time to dedicate to her. She decided when I relocated that she would not move to the city with me. She says she wants to keep me in her life, but she "needs space" to find herself. We schedule chats on the phone and try to avoid discussing the status of our relationship, but we usually end up arguing and crying. I suggested visiting her now that I can afford to, so we can talk through our differences in person, but Elli says it would be too much for her to bear. She says she loves me and that she's doing this for the good of both of us. I miss her terribly. I think about her constantly, but I don't want to smother her and have her resent me. Is there more going on here than meets the eye? -- OUT IN THE COLD IN D.C.

DEAR OUT IN THE COLD: Yes, there probably is. When someone you haven't seen in six months tells you that you need more time apart, it means that she isn't as committed to having a relationship as you are. She may love you, but the question is, is she still IN love with you? The next time you chat, ask her that. Please realize that when someone says seeing you would be too much to bear, it sends a strong message -- regardless of whether or not it's the one you want to hear.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about a change I have seen in church. I accept the loud guitar music and informal settings, although I do miss the traditional hymns and formal altars. What I cannot get used to is the forced "friendly" greeting and handshaking. I attend church to meditate and worship with my family. I do not go to shake hands with strangers and give them a greeting dictated by a pastor. I like people. I am naturally caring, outgoing and friendly. However, I believe that a greeting or handshake should come from my own heart. I have mentioned this to friends and family from all faiths, ages and walks of life. None of them like this scheduled "greeting" either. Many say they head for the restroom at that time, turn their backs or just shake hands with the people they came with, come to church late to avoid it, or don't come at all. Others feel the practice is unsanitary. I suggest that church leaders take an anonymous poll and ask how many in their congregations agree with me. What do you think, Abby? -- MINISTER'S DAUGHTER, CAYUCOS, CALIF.

DEAR DAUGHTER: Thank you for asking my opinion. Here it is: Something is wrong in our fragmented society if, for one moment in a house of God, people cannot find it in their hearts to reach out and make sure that everyone feels included and welcome. And for those who fear it is unsanitary -- bring small bottles of hand sanitizer.

PHS swim team welcomes new coach

By Kathy White

Edward Garvin is the new coach of the Pampa High School swimming and diving team.

Garvin, who swam for Amarillo High School under the direction of Coach Tim Estes, is in his second year of teaching at PHS.

Garvin is beginning his swim-coaching career with "a strong team and high hopes." With a team of about 30, Garvin said his first goal is to win Pampa's tenth straight district swimming championship. He also had hopes to win the regional championship. Garvin also hopes to take some of the members on the team to the state meet in Austin.

"The kids look really good," Garvin explained. "We are going to work on some good technique and stroke correction. And, we are going to work on shaving some time off."

Colby Dennis, Ana Sacedo, Tonya Kiper, Cole Guyer, Abby West and Dustin Need lead the team as returning seniors. Four juniors and seven sophomores return to the team, which is rounded out by the addition of two new sophomore swimmers and nine freshmen.

The team is beginning the year with optimism, according to West, the team captain.

"The freshmen look promising. I think the guys relay will go to state," she said.

Second team captain Guyer agreed with West.

"Our chances are pretty good this year, especially with the guys 400-free relay team."

As a whole, the team seems to have a positive outlook on the year ahead.

"It's going to be a good year. We're going to work hard and tear it up," Neef said.

Garvin's experience as a swimmer for AHS has helped him, realize the unique challenge in finding and participating in meets within a 300-mile range. PHS is challenged because the district has access to a small number of swimming facilities large enough to accommodate swim meets.

This requires the team to travel far distances to "gain the critical experience" needed before competing at regional and state meets, Garvin explained.

The Pescos Invitational is one of the best meets for the PHS team because of its size and the opportunity it affords for the team to swim against "high quality competitors."

In an effort to raise funds for the travel expenses to attend these swimming competitions, the team begins their annual cookie dough sales today, Sept. 8. The sale will run through Sept. 27. Anyone wanting to buy cookie dough can contact any swimmer or Deana Scheep at 662-0463 or Melissa Gordon at 663-2193.

Garvin will be training the seven middle school swimmers and divers as well as the high school team. With the help of his assistant, Tammy Henthorn, the students will be able to compete with distances as far as Andrews, Odessa and Pecos.

Garvin said that middle school is an "integral part" of the training required to have a successful swimming program at the high school level.

Parker shows no effects of injury in 3-TD opener

PITTSBURGH — Despite leading the NFL in rushing yardage through 14 weeks before his 2007 season ended due to a broken right leg, Willie Parker scored only two touchdowns last season.

The Pittsburgh Steelers' Pro Bowl running back eclipsed that in less than three quarters of work Sunday.

Parker had a career-high three touchdowns while rushing for 138 yards on 25 carries in Pittsburgh's 38-17 win over the Houston Texans, the Steelers' sixth consecutive victory in an opener.

"Last year, I wanted to do more, and being a goal-line back, that's part of being a running back, finishing off the drive," he said.

Parker had 1,316 yards last season before breaking his leg early in a Dec. 20 game at St. Louis. Without him, the Steelers lost their season-ending game at Baltimore and their wild-card playoff game against Jacksonville.

With his game based on speed, questions lingered about whether Parker could return to his previous form. The Steelers drafted a running back, Rashard Mendenhall, in the first round this spring.

"I just wanted to get back out there and play," Parker said. "It seems like it's been a long time coming. It seems like I have been waiting forever. I know I was only out one or two games last year, but it seemed like the whole season. I've been working and training hard."

Parker rushed for more than 4,000 yards and scored 23 touchdowns in the past three seasons, despite not being drafted out of North Carolina, where he was a backup most of his college career. His performance Sunday was the 22nd 100-yard game of his career and the fourth-highest game output of his career. Pittsburgh is 19-3 when Parker rushes for at least 100 yards.

"Willie Parker looked like we expected him to look," coach Mike Tomlin said.

BIG-PLAY DEFENSE: Though the Steelers led the league in total defense last season, big plays often were missing. They had relatively low totals of 36 sacks and 11 interceptions, and creating more of those types of plays was a point of emphasis during training camp.

The defense responded against Houston with two interceptions, a fumble and five sacks.

"We came out and got after the run," defensive end Aaron Smith said. "Then we forced them into the passing game. After that, we can get you with our pass rush. That's what we're really trying to do — stop the run and get after the quarterback."

Owens may lead Browns

Cleveland 28-10

CLEVELAND — Terrell Owens dropped the ball near the goal line and one of the NFL's top showmen began his first choreographed touchdown celebration of the season.

He shook one leg, then the other as if he was an Olympic sprinter. Dallas star then pretended to get into the starting blocks to perhaps face Usain Bolt in the 100 meters.

On your mark, get set ... the Cowboys are off.

Given plenty of time to throw, Tony Romo passed for 320 yards and a 35-yard touchdown pass to Owens, and Marion Barber scored on a pair of 1-yard runs before leaving with bruised ribs as the Cowboys opened a season they expect to end with a Super Bowl title by overwhelming the out-of-sync Cleveland Browns 28-10 on Sunday.

Dallas dominated on the field and on the stat sheet with a performance one would expect in late October or November, not on the first weekend in September, when teams are typically working out some of the summer's kinks.

"It wasn't easy. We did some things well," Romo said. "We went out there and executed."

Romo finished 24-of-32 and again showed his toughness by shaking off a hit by Browns linebacker Willie McGinest that opened a nasty gash on the chiseled chin of pop star Jessica Simpson's favorite quarterback. Romo needed several stitches and Barber, too, got some extra postgame medical attention.

X-rays on his ribs were negative and the Cowboys are hoping Barber, who ran for 80 yards on 16 tries before getting hurt in the third quarter, will be able to play when Dallas hosts NFC East rival Philadelphia a week from Monday.

Coming off a 13-win season, which ended with a bitterly disappointing playoff loss at home to the New York Giants, the Cowboys lived up to all their preseason hype with a solid performance on both sides of the ball. Their offense racked up nearly 500 yards, controlled the clock and strung together four long touchdown drives.

The defense held one of the AFC's most potent offenses to 205 yards, except for some silly penalties, the star-studded 'Boys, whose training camp was profiled on HBO's "Hard Knocks," had a knockout debut.

"We're ready," said Owens, who finished with five catches for 87 yards. "Training camp and all that stuff is over with. The season is here and this was a great start."

Jason Witten added six catches for 96 yards, Patrick Crayton had six for 82 and the Cowboys moved the ball on Cleveland's defense as if they were facing their scout team.

When they didn't have the ball, the Browns missed tackles. When they had it, they dropped passes, looked confused and had technical difficulties.

Cleveland quarterback Derek Anderson, who finished 11-of-24 for 114 yards, revealed that the headset in his helmet failed in the red zone — a problem that the team thought it had corrected in exhibition play.

"The battery on the stupid headset went out and we had to call time," Anderson said. "It happened two or three times in the red zone. You hate to waste a timeout on those things, but we had to do it."

Cleveland's only TD came on Anderson's 2-yard pass to Kellen Winslow in the second quarter. Anderson never got into a rhythm with wide receiver Braylen Edwards, who had only two catches and dropped at least two, including one in the first quarter on what would have been a TD.

Edwards missed three exhibition games with a cut foot and said the time off hurt his timing.

"We weren't ready," he said. "We were not on the same page. I don't think anyone was. We just didn't play good football. It was everybody, D.A., myself, everybody."

On top of a strong performance on both sides of the ball, the Cowboys also got their first look at Adam "Pacman" Jones, the cornerback/punt returner, who was recently reinstated after serving a 17-month suspension and played his first game since Dec. 31, 2006, for Tennessee.

Jones, who's been arrested six times since joining the league, was called for interference in the end zone to set up Cleveland's only TD and muffed a punt he recovered.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Sept. 9, 2008:

You are far more together than you've been for many years, though responsibilities weigh heavily on your life and year. You also might be ready to walk a new path and become far more creative and dynamic. Watch an innate tendency that emerges to go to excess; it sometimes causes you to risk way beyond your limits. If you let go and indulge in this behavior, you could discover that you are in trouble. If you are single, you have a revolving door of suitors. Choosing the right person could take time, patience and talent. If you are attached, you add the quality of romance once more into your relationship. Some will add to their family; others will just go out on old-fashioned dates! CAPRICORN evokes your imagination. Together you find answers.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)  Opportunities strike left and right, leaving you questioning which way to go. You might want to rethink an issue or do something quite differently. With so much coming at you from left field, you can scarcely stop. Tonight: A must appearance. Others follow your lead.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)  Reach out for someone at a distance. You also might want to get more information. The problem is sorting through the amount of information you are getting. You might need a break. Someone pushes hard for you to agree. Tonight: Let your mind wander and find different solutions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)  If you differ with someone, it is OK, but the real issue is how you present the situation. There are many, many different ways to proceed; which one you choose is a question of preference. Tonight: Note that you are not locked into anything.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)  Others dominate, but do not even think that you have reached a dead end. There are so many possibilities that you could be surprised. Listen to news with a touch of skepticism. There are many paths to the same goal. Tonight: Listen to suggestions. Others express a strong preference.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)  Follow through on what you know works for you. You could be overwhelmed by the many possibilities that head your way. Do not spend money before you get it. Use care and insight. Ultimately, you will be a happier Lion. Tonight: Relax.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)  Where others jam up, you flow. You find answers where others cannot. Your smiling ways draw solutions nearly as much as an innate ingenuity. A serious approach will push someone away — count on it. Tonight: Romp away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)  Your easygoing manner works and makes others feel as if they are part of your family. You finally establish a better sense of self and what is expected of others. Consider working from home more often if you can. Tonight: Happy at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)  Keep expressing yourself and common interests. How you deal with someone could greatly change because of an important conversation. Be aware of how much you offer. Think positively. Tonight: Hang out if possible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)  Your abilities to make a difference and possibly go in a new direction earmark your decisions. Finances, as you understand, make the world go around, especially right now. Tonight: Be realistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)  Understanding that you are unstoppable could be more important than you realize. Listen to what is shared, and be honest about the impact you want to have, as well as what might be appropriate. Tonight: All smiles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)  You might want to try something different or approach a situation differently. You could be taken aback by another's insistence to have his or her way. Be careful, as you could rupture this situation permanently. Tonight: Take some much-needed personal time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)  Friends surround you, opening doors and making the impossible possible. What will happen is, if you hesitate, you could hit a problem out of the blue. You are best off working with friends. Schedule meetings. Tonight: Where the action is.
