Damage, debris cleanup funded

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Pampa residents who suffered property damage in the June 8 tornado and were ineligible for any other aid may benefit from a grant the city received last week.

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs announced recently that the city will receive $350,000 to be split two ways.

About $210,000 will be used for housing rehabilitation according to the terms of the grant.

An additional $140,000 will be used to aid the city in disposal of the debris that has accumulated since the storm.

The monies come from the Texas Community Development Program.

The city originally applied for the grant to help in recovering the costs of debris disposal, but later discovered money might be available for residents as well.

"This grant will not only help the City of Pampa offset some expenses incurred during the disaster, but also help local citizens who are otherwise not eligible to receive any other type of assistance," Pampa/Gray County Emergency Management Director Ken Hall said Monday.

"I'm very pleased to hear that we received it," he added.

The contracts for the two grants will be presented to the city commission for approval at their next meeting, Sept. 26.

City Financial Director John Horst says that local officials are working out ways to distribute money to eligible homeowners.

"Disaster relief funds are only awarded following a disaster declaration from the governor. These funds are available for TCDFP eligible activities needed to address the damage caused by natural disasters such as tornadoes, hurricanes or heavy rainfall," said Larry Paul Manley, executive director of TDHCA.

Gov. George W. Bush declared the city and county state disaster areas in July.

The city of Liberty and Liberty County also received grant money for floods that struck the area in October 1994.

Awards from this program are provided to local governments for economic development, public facilities and housing projects principally benefiting persons of low to moderate income.

The Pampa tornado touched down at approximately 4:30 p.m. June 8, ravaging a strip about a mile long through an industrial park and into a residential area, with lesser damage occurring into the city past Central Park and northeast of Loop 171.

In all, 155 homes, 14 mobile homes, eight businesses, 49 industrial properties and nine properties northeast of Pampa were damaged at a total property loss of $9,601,190.

The city was denied money from the Federal Emergency Management Agency last month. Some residents have been accepted to receive Small Business Administration loans.

SBA officers are expected to remain in Pampa through the end of the week at the Pampa Economic Development Corp. offices.

Low tonight in low 50s, high tomorrow in upper 60s. See Page 2 for weather details.

Ag chair offers hybrid farm bill

By ROBERT GREENE
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee has crossbred a farm bill proposal that phases out traditional crop programs with one that keeps them intact.

The result might be agreement among Republicans on cutting $16.5 billion from government spending on agriculture over seven years.

The proposal released Monday by Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind., would offer one program for wheat and corn, another for cotton and rice.

Midwestern Democrats, including Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., offered a populist approach that doesn't touch cotton and rice, largely Southern crops that depend more heavily on government payments.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., has offered a proposal to deal with those two crops and peanuts.

The committee gets to work this week, as early as today, on coming up with its share of cuts needed to balance the budget.

Reductions in nutrition programs such as food stamps and school lunches would bring the total cuts over seven years to more than $48 billion.

The proposed cuts are higher for agriculture than the $13.4 billion originally suggested by budget writers, who seek to balance the budget by 2002. The cuts of $32.7 billion for nutrition are lower.

By offering a mixture of proposals, Lugar embraces parts of the "Freedom to Farm" act being debated this week in the House Agriculture Committee.

That proposal, by the committee Chairman Pat Roberts, R-Kan., would replace traditional crop subsidies with a fixed but declining payment.

The idea is to wean producers from crop payments, although some payments would remain at the end of seven years. Farmers would be free to plant whatever they wanted as long as they followed conservation rules.

Cotton and rice producers, who are concentrated in the South and receive heavy farm subsidy payments, objected. Cotton growers fear a sharp increase in cotton acreage. Rice millers and others fear a loss of rice acreage.

The Lugar proposal would increase the proportion of cotton and rice acres not eligible for subsidies to 35 percent, from the current 15 percent, as a way to save money.

A proposal by Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., chairman of the commodities subcommittee, took that route but offered only 25 percent as the proportion of unpaid acreage.

A similar bill in the House by Reps. Larry Combest, R-Texas, and Bill Emerson, R-Mo., would preserve traditional spending but increase unpaid acres to 30 percent.

Additional cuts in farm spending would come from the dairy program, export subsidies and promotion, and reform of the peanut and sugar programs. Acreage would be capped for the Wetlands Reserve Program, which seeks to retire environmentally sensitive land from production.

Senate Democrats, meanwhile, offered a bill embodying their previously announced proposal to save $4.2 billion in farm spending over seven years, the cut proposed by President Clinton.

The bill would use two levels of so-called marketing loans to support prices for corn, other feed grains and wheat, as well as soybeans and other oilseeds.

The first layer of loans would be based on the current congressionally set target price for corn, other feed grains and wheat.

Growers could repay the loans at less than face value if sales prices fall below the target prices. The first 22,000 bushels of feed grains or the first 15,400 bushels wheat would be covered.

The support would be higher for additional production. Soybeans would be covered by an existing high marketing loan for that crop.

The lawmakers said the proposal would protect family farmers and reduce payments to big producers. Payments would be strictly limited to $50,000 per producer.

Roberts bill is HR2195; Cochran bill is S1155; Combest-Emerson bill is HR2330.

Gingrich book deal target of new probe

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After interviewing 15 witnesses, the House ethics committee has "put the pieces together" on Speaker Newt Gingrich's book deal — and is beginning to interview potential candidates for an independent counsel.

Sources familiar with the committee inquiry, who would not be quoted by name, said the counsel interviews would begin today. However, the committee has not decided to hire an outside counsel, an issue that has triggered partisan disputes.

Gingrich, asked about the probe this morning, said, "I'm perfectly happy with the ethics committee making whatever decision they think is appropriate."

"I'm confident when they review it, they'll find we did everything exactly legally," Gingrich said on "CBS This Morning." He blamed the ongoing investigation on Democrats, saying they "are desperately and bitterly determined to find something."

Democrats on and off the committee have been demanding a counsel for months to investigate aspects of the speaker's book deal, and the college course he taught. Gingrich and several Republicans on the committee resisted hiring an outsider, although Chairman Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., has said she had an open mind on the issue.

The committee directed its staff in August to prepare memos on hiring a counsel and to prepare a preliminary list of possible candidates. The committee put off a decision until it finished its current round of interviews on the book deal.

The last witness, appearing Monday, was George Craig, chief executive officer of HarperCollins — the publisher of Gingrich's best-selling "To Renew America."

After the questioning was finished, senior committee

Democrat James McDermott, of Washington, said: "We now have as complete a picture as we will have on this issue. Now we will talk about it ourselves."

McDermott told reporters that as a result of the interviews, "We have put the pieces together in a way that can satisfactorily answer the questions we have on this issue."

Craig declined to speak with reporters as he left the committee room.

Gingrich has said he violated no rules, saw no need for an outside counsel, and blamed ethics complaints on embittered Democrats.

A complaint filed with the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct has alleged that Gingrich converted material from his nonprofit college course, which was financed with tax-deductible contributions, into his profit-making book.

The complaint, filed by former Democratic Rep. Ben Jones of Georgia, also contended there was a conflict of interest between Gingrich and media baron Rupert Murdoch, who owns HarperCollins. Before the book deal was negotiated late last year, Murdoch met with Gingrich to lobby the speaker-elect on foreign ownership rules for broadcast stations.

Jones also alleged that an auction among publishers for Gingrich's book was rigged so that HarperCollins would win and drive up the price. HarperCollins originally offered Gingrich a $4.5 million advance, later relinquished by the speaker after intense criticism. Gingrich now is paid royalties.

The college course, according to Jones, was really a fund-raising arm of GOPAC, the conservative Republican organization that Gingrich led until earlier this year.

The 15 witnesses have included Gingrich, Murdoch and two of his lobbyists, a Gingrich staffer, publishing executives, an outside publishing expert and the speaker's literary agent.

Countries reach accord on Holocaust survivor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. and German governments have reached an agreement on reparations for a 72-year-old U.S. citizen who survived Nazi concentration camps, officials say.

Hugo Princz of Highland Park, N.J., and 10 other U.S. survivors of the death camps will share a $2.1 million settlement, said Mike Beson, a spokesman for Rep. Frank Pallone, D-N.J.

The 11 will divide the settlement based on a formula that gauges the severity of their suffering, their time as prisoners, their injuries and other indignities, Beson said today. The story was first reported in today's edition of The Baltimore Sun.

Only Princz, who has become prominent in his pursuit of reparations, was identified among the 11. The Privacy Act protects the other 10 survivors' identities from disclosure.

Beson said Princz will get a large share of the settlement because he spent more time in the camps, and also led the fight with Germany.

"It was in the interest of Germany to put this behind them," Beson said. "He got a very good settlement."

The agreement follows pressure from Princz's supporters to push lawmakers for a bill that would allow him to sue Germany in U.S. courts. A similar effort passed the House last year, but died in the Senate.

President Clinton and the State Department also raised the case in meetings with their German counterparts.

Princz had sued the German government, but an appeals court ruled the lawsuit could not proceed in U.S. courts. The U.S. Supreme Court declined this year to hear an appeal.

"A government-to-government agreement has been reached," Princz attorney William Marks said Monday.

Marks would not comment on the specifics of the agreement, including how much Princz will get. Christiane Hohmann, a spokeswoman for the German Embassy, said she could not comment on the case.

Princz, the son of a naturalized American father, was living with his family in Slovakia in 1942 when the Germans sent them to the Maidanek concentration camp because they were Jewish. He was his family's only survivor.

After 3 1/2 years that included work as a slave laborer at Auschwitz stacking corpses, Princz was liberated by U.S. soldiers who intercepted his train to Dachau.

The Germans denied Princz's 1955 request for reparations because he was neither a German citizen nor a refugee. Germany said that a U.S. citizen rescued by U.S. soldiers doesn't qualify for lifetime monthly payments made to displaced Europeans freed from the camps.

Somali warlord refuses to release hostages

By HAROUN HASSAN
Associated Press Writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somalia's most notorious warlord today refused to release more than 20 foreign hostages and there were fears the captives could be caught in a renewed civil war.

"He said no and he didn't give a reason," said Robert Vlazovski, vice consul at the Australian High Commission in Kenya, where three planes were on standby for the evacuation.

Three Australians are reported among 20 to 24 people being held under house arrest in relief compounds since forces of warlord Mohamed Farah Aidid attacked the southwestern Somali city of Baidoa on Sunday in a battle that killed 10 Somalis.

Vlazovski said there were reports that troops were massing in the Somali capital, Mogadishu, and near Baidoa some 130 miles away. It was unclear whose militiamen they were, he said, but rival warlord Ali Mahdi Mohamed threatened Monday to attack Baidoa unless Aidid's men withdrew within 48 hours.

The exact number of hostages was not known, but they were believed to include five Americans, two Frenchmen, one Italian, a Dutch citizen and staffers from Sudan, Rwanda and Kenya working for U.N. agencies, CARE International, World Vision, International Medical Corps and International Development and Rehabilitation Board, U.N. officials said.

Baidoa, a town of 300,000, was known as the "city of faith" during Somalia's devastating famine in 1992, when battling warlords destroyed the capital and looted international relief organizations after the 1991 ouster of dictator Mohammed Siad Barre.

While Mogadishu has been considered unsafe for aid workers since U.N. peacekeepers abandoned the country earlier this year, several relief groups have returned to work on food and health programs in Baidoa and other outlying Somali towns.

Aidid led a convoy of 25 to 30 trucks mounted with weapons to capture Baidoa, one of his biggest military moves since he was ousted from the area in 1993.

Making way for new ramp

City of Pampa employee Brian Davis digs into his work at Pampa Fire Station 1 Monday morning. Davis and other city employees are ripping out the old approach ramp to the station in anticipation of a new ramp that should be completed in the next two weeks. Firefighters will temporarily relocate equipment while construction takes place, temporarily causing a slight effect on response time.

Water council officials unveil drought management program

WESLACO (AP) — Watching for leaky pipes, reusing treated wastewater and teaching conservation methods are among the ideas included in a plan to help communities and farmers fight an ongoing drought and prevent another.

The Valley Water Policy & Management Council unveiled the plan on Monday. It emphasizes conservation for both municipal and agricultural water users.

"We are in a situation that really needs to be addressed," said Rio Grande watermaster John Hinojosa IV.

"The cities, the agricultural users — everyone is in this together. We all know that we need food on the table," Hinojosa said. "What we need to start thinking is what can we do to ensure that we have an adequate supply to meet our future needs, and the thing that comes to mind first is water conservation."

Texas has used all but 43 percent of its reserves in Falcon Lake and Amistad Reservoir, the two international reservoirs that supply water to the Lower Rio Grande Valley and northern Mexico, Hinojosa said.

Mexico's reserves have increased three percent since May, when officials there discontinued the agricultural use of water. But the amount still stands at a dismal 9.4 percent.

Officials said the situation on both sides of the border will only get worse as an ever-growing population places more demand on the water supply.

Last month, the Water Policy & Management Council launched a regional water conservation campaign aimed at municipal water suppliers and customers. More than 38,000 brochures outlining conservation methods were distributed to customers.

Besides that effort, the council plans to coordinate studies to evaluate alternative water sources for municipal and industrial uses.

Brownsville already has received state funding to examine whether water can be diverted from the Rio Grande, treated and stored underground for future use.

Another grant requested by the council would be used to study reusing treated wastewater from McAllen and Edinburg for drinking.

GOP set to reform environmental regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists had hoped the Senate would put the brakes on a Republican-led House attack on environmental protection, but if a major spending bill for the Interior Department is any indicator, the brakes aren't holding.

Earlier this year, Senate Democrats and a smattering of Republicans blocked a GOP effort to roll back health and environmental regulations after a sweeping regulatory reform bill rolled through the House. The Senate also brought to a halt House efforts to impose a moratorium on new environmental rules.

But on a string of other natural resource issues ranging from logging on public lands to protection of rare plants and animals and mining reform, the Senate appears set to adopt equally — or in some cases even more dramatic — changes than the House.

'The Juice' intends to call 'The Animal' to the stand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Juice" wants to call "The Animal" to the stand. In a twist bizarre even for the O.J. Simpson case, a Mafia informant seen socializing with Nicole Brown Simpson's sister emerged as a would-be defense witness to bust the credibility of a police detective who investigated Simpson.

Anthony "Tony the Animal" Fiato, whose undercover work for the government was credited with helping dismantle the Los Angeles-based mob known as the "Mickey Mouse Mafia," was one of an unlikely collection of case-ending defense witnesses named Monday.

Also in the lineup were Fiato's brother, Larry, who goes by "Larry Rome," lead Simpson case Detective Philip Vannatter, whom the defense wants to call today; a prosecutor in the mob case and several FBI agents.

Recycling Texans can come into financial windfall

AUSTIN (AP) — Now recycling is more than good for the environment. It can mean a financial windfall.

Texans who pledge to start or increase recycling have a chance to win prizes including a 1995 Jeep Wrangler and thousands of dollars in gift certificates.

A drawing is planned at the Capitol Nov. 15, which has been declared Texas Recycles Day by Gov. George W. Bush.

"You could win one of many great prizes... But you can't win if you don't make a pledge to recycle. And Texas will lose if you don't," says a pledge card brochure.

Up to 80 percent of the 20 million tons of garbage that goes to Texas landfills each year is potentially recyclable, said Chairman Barry McBee of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. Those on the Internet can go to <http://www.tnrcc.state.tx.us> for pledge information.

Pledge cards will be available at the State Fair of Texas in Dallas and at The Home Depot, which is donating a $3,000 gift certificate.

People also can call 1-800-64-TEXAS to enter, or make their own pledge cards and mail them to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. Those on the Internet can go to <http://www.tnrcc.state.tx.us> for pledge information.

Entries must be received by Nov. 14. The contest is open to adults who are at least 18.

WTAMU presents ReggaeFest

CANYON — West Texas A&M University's Student Activities and Multicultural Center will sponsor ReggaeFest from 3-7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 22, on Terrill Lawn. The event will feature music by "Local Hero," a band from Tulsa, Okla.

"ReggaeFest will be a great opportunity for people to come out to support campus organizations, mingle with the student body, have a little fun and hear some great reggae music," Veronica Gallegos, a junior English major from Hereford and student consultant for the Multicultural Center, said.

Admission is free, but small change will be needed for the booths and games. The carnival will serve as a fundraiser for student organizations.

The event is open to the public. For more information, contact the Office of Student Activities at (806) 656-2313 or the Multicultural Center at 656-2970.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenant commandment.

Senator is an old-fashioned jerk

Let me suggest, gentle reader, how society would have dealt with Bob Packwood back in the good old days. On learning of Packwood's exploits against one of their flesh and blood, the male family members would have foregathered in the parlor. After minimal conversation, they would have saddled up and paid an unannounced call on the senator.

"Senator," their spokesman would have said, solemn as a minister on Sunday, "our sister told us about you, Senator, you show your face around her again, you step out of line just the least bit, and ..." There might have occurred at this juncture the eloquent brandishing of a horsewhip or knob-headed cane. Silently, the visitors would have taken their leave. Senatorial deprecations against one woman, at all events, would likely have ceased.

I say all this not to commend extracurricular justice but to underline how the moral climate of the country has changed so as to accommodate - more often than to punish - the Bob Packwoods.

Packwood's fiercest accusers make him out to be just a typical man. The heck he is. The senator is a jerk - a cad, in good-old-days parlance. Of course, we don't speak in those quaint terms any more, the old norms concerning cad-dom having evaporated. In consequence of this, we get Bob Packwood, public servant and pawer of women. And Teddy Kennedy, one might add for the sake of bipartisanship.

No, the senators are not gentlemen. And does anybody care? Seemingly not. You wouldn't exactly call this an age devoted to the maintenance of codes such as gentlemen and ladies used to impose on themselves.

In counterculture America, gentlemen turned into mere men and ladies into mere women. Gentlemen and ladies have moral and spiritual rights as members of a civilized community; men and women have only political rights - a deeply inferior species.

Packwood's repeated offenses against women were political. He violated women's constitutional status as co-equals. Under the older, better dispensation, he would have been seen to insult their station as co-creators of life under the providence of God.

Co- what? The jerk from Oregon didn't spend long on such old-fashioned categories. Even before Roe vs. Wade, as he boasted in his valedictory, he unsuccessfully introduced legislation asserting a federal right to abortion.

The jerk from Oregon was a prize specimen of Liberated Man. He cultivated the pose of sensitivity. Always, his ears were open to women's political claims - as long as those claims remained political and not moral.

Was Packwood the cad a prize hypocrite? It depends on what you mean by hypocrisy. Bless his heart, he did prize women - as soulless political cogs, as voting units. Did that preclude his violating their spiritual dignity, their moral rights? Under the old dispensation, it would have. Which is why the victims' brothers would have come calling on him.

Wouldn't they have trembled at his power and prestige? Hardly. The older dispensation was less impressed than ours is with politics - a largely debased profession useful mainly in keeping the streets repaired and crooks locked up.

Today's politicians consider themselves demigods - if yesterday's were more modest, it was because we asked less of the political class than is customary today.

The reason political dignity eclipses spiritual dignity is that we've placed politics, rather than religion, at the center of modern affairs. How are you going to breed Christian gentlemen, please, in an environment where the giver of all good gifts is government? Let's just say it's not easy.

Bob Packwood is a modernist of purest essence: Worse yet, as his recorded "diaries" make plain, he's a modernist politician. His type isn't going to respect anyone's spiritual worth, inasmuch as "spiritual worth" to the Packwood type is rhetorical gas. That's where male relatives used to come in handy - but, of course, we're glad those barbaric days are over. I mean, aren't we?

Post Cold War missile-defense

The Democratic Clinton administration now faces a Republican-majority Congress that - while nowhere near so revolutionary (or "extreme") as supporters and critics alike have proclaimed - has fundamental policy disagreements with the administration. The defining moments of the administration thus become those issues on which the president is willing to go to the mat with Congress.

It seems more than a little strange that one of those issues should be moves toward actually building a missile-defense system in the post-Cold War world.

Before the Senate left for its August recess, a 51-49 majority beat back a Democratic effort to remove language in a 1996 defense spending bill that speeds up the process. It orders the Pentagon to start building a multiple-site national missile-defense system by 2003 and declares that such steps are allowable under the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The administration, including Defense Secretary William Perry, is in a dither, saying the bill could lead to an abrogation of that treaty, implying this would be a calamity.

In the world that is shaping up in the wake of the death of communism and the end of an essentially bipolar power confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union, it would seem only sensible that an American missile-defense system should at least get serious consideration. A large number of Third World dictators have nuclear missiles or access to them, and the number is likely to increase.

It might not be long before quasi-independent terrorist groups have nuclear missiles. Such groups or governments could well have fewer inhibitions than the old Soviet Union did about launching such missiles toward U.S. territory.

Given such circumstances, why shouldn't we have a system - whether ground-based, a satellite-based "star wars" capability or a combination capable of stopping nuclear missiles before they hit U.S. soil?

To be sure, no system is likely to provide 100% assurance of safety. But a system that reduced the likelihood that missiles targeted on the United States would get through even marginally would serve as a significant deterrent against launching them at all. Such a system would be the very essence of a non-provocative, defensive system.

Failure to build such a system (if it is technologically feasible) will leave the United States with limited options when bad actors start acting badly overseas. We could promise massive retaliation if anybody hits the United States multiplying the worldwide destruction - or threaten to send American troops when trouble spots start to heat up or foreign dictators act aggressively.

A missile-defense system wouldn't be a magic bullet. But it's worth at least enough research and preliminary development to determine if it's feasible, rather than the knee-jerk dismissal the Clinton administration has given the idea. Concern about a treaty negotiated with a regime the Russians have since rejected decisively should not trump moves toward creating a defense that actually defends rather than merely threatening reprisals.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, Sept. 19, the 262nd day of 1995. There are 103 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Sept. 19, 1796, President Washington's farewell address was published. In it, America's first chief executive advised, "Observe good faith and justice toward all nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all."
On this date:

In 1777, during the Revolutionary War, American soldiers won the first Battle of Saratoga over the British.

In 1881, the 20th president of the United States, James A. Garfield, died of wounds inflicted by an assassin 11 weeks earlier.

In 1934, Bruno Hauptmann was arrested in New York and charged with the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh infant.

In 1959, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev reacted angrily during a visit to Los Angeles upon being told that, for security reasons, he would not be allowed to visit Disneyland.

Dubious nature of the United Nations

Charley Reese

The United Nations is doing to the Serbs what criminals do to victims: using force to get what it wants. People concerned about children might do well to complain about U.N. violence rather than the make-believe violence in entertainment.

More importantly, Americans ought to observe carefully so they can be disabused of the notion that the United Nations is some sort of benign "peacekeeper."

The United Nations is a government, and like any other, it uses force. It is an unelected government run by unaccountable international bureaucrats. When it pleases, it claims jurisdiction over the sovereign territory - and citizens - of all nations.

The only way the United Nations can become stronger is for sovereign nations, including us, to become weaker. Sovereign is just a 50-cent word that means independent. To put it plainly, the United Nations can only become stronger by colonializing other nations.

Thus, Americans - if they value their independence, their Constitution, their ideals of self-government and democracy - must oppose any strengthening of the United Nations and in fact ought to seek U.S. withdrawal from the organization.

Americans have a right to do that. Besides, American taxpayers pay 25% of the whole U.N. budget and an even higher percentage of so-called peace-keeping operations.

U.N. bureaucrats are already talking about global taxes (talk about taxation without representation) as well as a permanent U.N. army. This is not the fantasy of American right-wingers; it is the ideas put forth by the current U.N. secretary general.

Moreover, American presidents have abused the United Nations, using it as means to get around the American Constitution. One of my own personal heroes, Harry Truman, did it, sending Americans to war in Korea without a declaration of war by Congress and under the command of the United Nations.

American forces in Korea are still under U.N. command. George Bush used the United Nations as a cover to go to war against Iraq. Both the Bush and Clinton administrations have used the United Nations as an excuse to maintain sanctions on Iraq.

I know that most Americans consider Iraq and Serbia to be villains. I would just remind you that if you allow people to lynch and abuse people you don't like, the same mob will eventually turn on you.

We should oppose U.N. violations of other nations' sovereignty for the sake of our own sovereignty. How would you, as an American, like it if in the future some U.N. government imposed economic sanctions on you, told you what kind of defense force you could have, and backed Mexico's claim to California and Arizona?

We are one nation among many, 260 million out of 4.5 billion people. Anyone who thinks the United States will always have the upper hand in the United Nations is foolish. Germany and Japan both want seats on the Security Council (the actual governing body), and there are already plans underway to amend the charter, perhaps eliminating the veto.

It is always better to kill a cobra before it grows up. It is always better to get out of quicksand before it reaches your chin. The only hope for peace in the long run is for a world of independent nations which respect each other's sovereignty. A world run by an international government would be a world constantly at war.

The purely charitable aspects of the United Nations can be retained. You can have a world health organization, a world environmental organization and a world organization dedicated to the welfare of children, all without a U.N. government with the power to make war on nations or people who don't do its bidding. Independent nations can cooperate based on reason and persuasion. You don't need an international hired gun.

But the bottom line is that the United Nations is incompatible with an independent United States whose people are governed only by their elected representatives and their own Constitution.

Thought for today

"People love the unvarnished truth if it's about others, and hate it when it's about themselves."

Warren Rogers, author, editor

Berry's World

Republicans have made a nice political career by mocking the only booming liberal Democratic growth industry there is: victimhood. Liberals say that the nastiness, unfairness and guilt of American society hurts blacks, Latinos, consumers, gays, women, the handicapped, welfare recipients, people who use the national parks, bald people, criminals and students who won't study.

The biggest Democratic guilt trip of all deals with the largest group of victims, workers. We have been told that middle class workers are making no progress, that wages have gone down, that wages are stagnant, that jobs are being shipped overseas, that free trade is a disaster, that unskilled workers are suffering, that young workers can't afford houses, that the rich get richer and the poor get poorer and that it's not like it was in the good old days of the 1950s and 1960s.

Conservatives have properly scorned the you-owe-me-pay-up remedies that liberals propose for the victims they have enshrined. That's been good conservative politics. A majority of voters believe that most Americans can and should shape their own destinies.

But now, as the 1996 election looms, you can hear some GOP presidential candidates sound like copycat whiners on the biggest victim issue. They, too, are saying that wages are stagnant, that the middle class is going nowhere, that there is pain for workers as far as the eye can see.

There are some tactical reasons for such a maneuver. But it works against economic reality and contains a built-in boomerang.
President Clinton is now well into his third year of his presidency. He promised to focus on the economy with a laser beam, and that would fix whatever was wrong. So, if there are still economic problems - there always are - why shouldn't Republicans join the demagogic dialogue, and blame Clinton and the Democrats?

Moreover, most Republicans have their own economic agenda. They know that Americans believe that if it ain't broke, don't fix it. (Of course, their remedies are different from the Democratic ones, but they are still predicated on a broken economy.)

Trouble is, the economy isn't broken, hasn't been broken, and shows no signs of breaking soon. The biggest part of the statistical case for wages going down is based on money earnings. But in recent decades American workers have been taking their pay increases through non-cash items like health care, pension plans and insurance. The measures of total compensation show a sturdy increase. So do the decennial census data for mean and median household and family income. Per capita income has almost doubled in three decades.

Homes have gotten larger and easier to afford (according to Harvard's Joint Center for Housing Studies). Home ownership rates are at all-time highs. The Americans living in those homes are much more likely to have air conditioning, garages, additional bathrooms, washers, dryers, stereos, microwaves, ceiling fans, VCRs, cable wiring, color television sets and electronic garage-door openers (from a list offered by Karl Zinsmeister in The American Enterprise magazine). Believe me, that's not a picture of American life in the 1950s.

There are surely Americans who are not doing well, and some states and communities that have suffered the economic vicissitudes with particular severity. But there is full employment. America is the world's biggest exporter. America is the richest nation in the world, ever.

Is there truth to the much-sold notion that the rich are getting richer while the poor get poorer? There has indeed been some real splitting apart in the inequality of the income distribution. But its principle cause has not been a flaw in the economic structure. It comes from the social side - a stunning surge in the numbers of female headed families.

Now, I would not suggest that Republicans run on a platform of "workers never had it so good." There are too many others thing wrong in America now to sell that one on the hustings. But paying lip service to liberal victimology poses a bigger problem for Republicans. Voters might believe them. If they believe that economic victimization is real and pervasive, they can vote for the folks who specialize in giving stuff to victims: Democrats.

D.C. Davis family closely linked to Gray County history

David Crockett Davis, born in 1854 at Joplin, Mo., was working as a carpenter in Whitt, Parker County, Texas, in 1884 when he married Fannie Abbott who was born in Bosque County in 1867. They moved to Dodge City, Kan., where D.C. was in the cattle business. Their son, Clade, was born at Dodge City in 1886.

One year later they traveled by covered wagon to Mobeetie where D.C. worked as a carpenter and cut wood to make caskets for government use at Fort Elliott. Clem was born at Mobeetie in 1890.

D.C. filed on land on the North Fork of Red River about ten miles east of Lefors. He paid for the land by hunting and raising horses. He and his father, Almarion Davis, had a spread of 22 sections of ranch land. They had a two room sod house and a dug-out. Mel was born near North Fork in 1891 and Maye in 1893.

Taking family cowhands, the D.C. Davis family went in covered wagons to buy cattle in Cheyenne, Okla., and stayed there for several months. Anglus Barton was born at Cheyenne in 1894.

David Crockett, Jr. was born at Miami in 1898. Since the only transportation was by wagon or horseback, D.C. stayed at North Fork to care for the family while Fannie was in Miami. Later, the seventh child, Fannie, was still-born.

Maye Davis Skaggs wrote that church services at North Fork were camp meetings under grape arbors. About eight or ten families came in covered wagons with chuck boxes. Water was obtained from springs that flowed out of the rocks beside the river. Food was cooked over open fires and people used kerosene lanterns to light their way around the campground.

In the early 1900s, D.C. and his father sold their land to Tom Bates and bought four sections up on the plains and eight sections of farm land. They broke-out sod land and planted wheat, corn and other crops.

The D.C. Davis family was living on their farm about 12 miles east of Pampa in 1906 when the first two carloads of wheat left Pampa in boxcars. The wheat was raised on the Davis farm which was later the site of the Pampa Army Air Force Base and is now the location of Moody Farms.

In 1907 D.C. Davis and his brother, Alexander Ellison Davis, built a lumber yard near the 100 block of N. Frost in Pampa. At that time, lumber used for building purposes had to be shipped in from other places because there was no suitable lumber on the High Plains. This was the reason that many of the early settlers of Gray County lived at first in dug-outs.

The Davis men were talented carpenters and many of the early homes in Pampa were built by Walter E. Davis and Lester Davis, son and grandson of A.E. Davis. Lou Ollie Davis, sister of A.E. and D.C.

Davis, married George Henry Saunders, the first county judge of Gray County.

Clade Davis, son of D.C. and Fannie Davis, was a pupil at the school in Lefors for its second year when there were only 14 pupils. The school was a small one room building set on poles to keep it above water at all times. Cottonwood, chinaberry, hackberry and walnut trees furnished shade and limbs for swings. Drinking water was dipped from the river.

A.B. Davis attended Highwindy school when it was moved to its last location as a school and was known as the Davis School. It was first on the northwest corner of Block M2, Sect. 145, but later moved a mile south to the northwest corner of Block M2, Sect. 146. This last location was across the road from the Davis house. The last year school was conducted there was 1928-1929.

When A. B. attended that school, J.A. Paris was the teacher. Pupils were permitted to study in an arbor outside the building until time for them to recite their lessons. School was held only during the summer months because there was no wood for heating in the winter.

A.B. said that some former slaves came to the Panhandle with D.C. and Fannie Davis. One of them was a woman who taught the Davis boys to smoke a "peace pipe." Tobacco was hauled in barrels and the Bull Durham was packed in gunny sacks. Before his death in 1991, A.B. Davis was a valuable source of information concerning the history of Gray County.

Mel Davis was a rancher and farmer on land bought by his father (Sections 8, 9, 12 and 13 of Block 1 of the Alexander, Crain, Harris and Brooks Survey). After the oil industry began to boom in 1929 and 1930, the Mel Davis lease was listed among those most productive. Mel Davis and J.M. Shaw are credited with having developed the town-site of Lefors and adjacent lands after the discovery of oil and gas. Mel helped to obtain the right-of-way for the Fort Worth and Denver Railroad built through Lefors in 1932. The first train on the new line gave free rides to Childress and back. Mel secured the land for the Mel B. Davis Girl Scout Camp. He died Aug. 18, 1946.

On Aug. 7, 1918, Melvin B. Davis married Vera Anne Sloan, daughter of Charles P. and Tallulah Sloan. As a little girl, Vera could play the organ when her feet barely touched the pedals. On Sunday evenings, she would stroll with Miss Clara Deen (the schoolteacher) to a home where people would gather to sing sacred songs and then play hoe-downs. Vera played the organ while Tallulah Sloan and Clara Deen played violins.

Vera was a tireless worker when the White Deer Land Museum was being developed and gave much of her time and talents in helping to prepare and display many of the exhibits. After her death Jan. 1, 1972, her family and friends paid tribute to her memory by establishing a memorial and tribute fund at the museum.

Mel and Vera Davis were the parents of Billy Boyd Davis of Pampa and Doris Anne Rinehart of Lamar, Colo. Billy B. Davis, who followed his father and grandfather in ranching near Lefors, was a board member of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association in 1958. He helped to organize the Calf Scramble which was made a featured attraction.

Billy B. and Nancy Davis are the parents of James Boyd Davis and Robert Alan Davis of Tucson, Ariz. James Boyd "Jim" and Pernie Fallon Davis live in a Santa Fe-style house on their ranch six miles north of Alanreed. They are engaged in agribusiness and are raising Chiangus (key-Angus) cattle in an area where four generations of Davises have ranches.

Retirees Delivered Themselves From Litany of Aches and Pains

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed "Worried About Mom in Washington," whose mother had sold her home and moved into a retirement center where the residents kept harping about their aches and pains, prompted me to write my first letter to you.

For the 18 years my husband was retired, we heard nothing but "sick talk" at the senior center where we occasionally attended potluck luncheons.

We tried to introduce another subject. These people just sat there, not listening, but waiting for us to stop talking so they could go back to complaining about their aches and pains, and finally about funerals and cemeteries. We found it so depressing, we just gave up. Surely there must be more to retirement than the constant harping on aches, pains and death.

If there was one thing I learned at the senior center, it was never to ask, "How are you?"

A POSITIVE 81-YEAR-OLD LADY, EUGENE, ORE.

HEAR POSITIVE: I'm sorry your experience was negative. However, not all seniors in retirement centers are preoccupied with failing health and death. Read on for an example:

DEAR ABBY: I, too, live in a retirement center. There are not only well people here, but also those who require assistance with dressing, showering, pill-taking, etc., as well as those who require total care.

If you don't like wheelchairs or walkers in your hallways and lobbies, don't move into such a place — choose a small condominium.

I am 82 years old, still drive, and volunteer all over the place. Most mornings, I go to the dining room and help fold napkins, work at the sundry shop, play cards, games, do puzzles — anything I can volunteer for. I also crochet afghans and donate them. I, too, ache with osteoporosis and arthritis, but I don't sit around grouching about it. I keep busy!

Finally, don't wait for people to speak to you — be the first to say hello.

RETIREE AT A RETIREMENT VILLAGE, CAPE CORAL, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I am a psychotherapist, and much of my work involves traumatic death and injury counseling. I am becoming increasingly aware of trauma experienced by friends and co-workers who, when they phone the family to express sympathy and support, get an answering machine with the recorded voice of the deceased.

Abby, please suggest that families immediately record a new message advising callers of the recent loss, and expressing appreciation for the call. The family can save the original tape if they wish, but a new tape for callers would eliminate confusion, and spare feelings.

ROBERT R. LABERGE, PH.D., REDWOOD CITY, CALIF.

DEAR DR. LABERGE: I appreciate the suggestion. Suddenly hearing the recorded voice of the deceased can affect people in a variety of ways. Some may be comforted; others may be saddened, or even traumatized.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

BASEBALL

SEATTLE (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. has been offered $12 million to play one season for an undisclosed Japanese team and endorse the sponsoring company's products, according to the Seattle center fielder's agent.

Griffey's Mariners contract expires in 1997 and both sides are working on a contract extension. Griffey hopes to stay in Seattle, where the Mariners are making their first bid for postseason play.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jay Buhner of the Seattle Mariners and Ken Caminiti of the San Diego Padres were the players of the week in their leagues.

Buhner won American League honors with 14 RBIs, five homers and a .375 batting average last week.

Caminiti won the NL award after hitting four homers and batting .542.

NEW YORK (AP) — A coin flip gave Colorado home-field advantage against Los Angeles in a one-game playoff for the National League West title Oct. 2 if the teams are tied at the end of the regular season.

In coin flips to determine home sites in the AL West if tie-breaker playoff games are needed, it would be: California at Seattle; Texas at California; or Texas at Seattle.

In the event of a two-way tie for the AL wild-card berth, it would be: Seattle at California; New York, Kansas City or Oakland; or Texas at Seattle.

OLYMPICS

ATLANTA (AP) — In the race for tickets to the 1996 Olympics, most folks will have to settle for the silver or bronze medal.

Fewer than half of those who sent in mail orders for tickets to the Atlanta Games will get their first choice, organizers said.

Most of those who ordered tickets will get something. Organizers, who had urged people to list second and third preferences for each seat ordered, said about 87 percent of the ticket orders received so far were filled. But only about 47 percent received one or more of their first choices.

TENNIS

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The father of tennis star Steffi Graf will remain in jail on tax evasion charges after losing his appeal.

Graf, in prison since Aug. 3, had offered $10.3 million in bond in a 22-page appeal. His request for the quashing of a warrant that ordered his arrest and called him a risk for flight to avoid prosecution was rejected by a magistrate in Mannheim.

Steffi Graf has won the French Open, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open with the case hanging over her head.

MOSCOW (AP) — Unseeded Nanne Dahlman of Finland upset No. 5 seed Silvia Farina of Italy 7-6 (7-2), 6-1 in the opening round of the Moscow Ladies' Open indoor tournament at Olympic Stadium.

No. 3 Sabine Appelmans, No. 6 Asa Carlsson, and seventh-seeded Yelena Makarova also advanced.

Cowboys refused to lose against Vikings

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — Buffeted by fumbles, dropped passes, a missed extra point and a blown chip-shot field goal, somehow the Dallas Cowboys managed to win a game they should have lost.

Quarterback Troy Aikman stood in a somber locker room Monday and explained how the Cowboys overcame a slick ball, crowd noise and enough errors for a month of games.

"We have players on this team who refuse to lose no matter what's happened," Aikman said. "We've grown accustomed to winning and this is a team that goes down fighting."

Although the offense struggled through a mess of mistakes, Dallas beat the Minnesota Vikings 23-17 on Emmitt Smith's 31-yard touchdown run in overtime Sunday night.

Aikman botched a two-minute drill at the end of the first half when he let time run out. He also lost the ball on a fumbled snap.

Smith lost the ball on a fumble and Michael Irvin, Daryl Johnston and Jay Novacek all dropped passes.

"We didn't play like the Cowboys are supposed to play but give us credit, we pulled it out," said Smith, who had 150 yards rushing.

Chris Boniol was guilty of the placekicking failures. He hooked the extra point and shanked the field goal both wide of their marks.

"It's a good thing we won," Boniol said. "I would have had a big monkey on my back if we didn't."

Aikman said the Cowboys shouldn't be so hang dog over the outcome. But there were few smiles at Valley Ranch.

"We should be happy we won," Aikman said. "We did the things we had to do. We were fortunate. But we accomplished our ultimate goal. Maybe it was good it happened. It can serve as a severe wakeup call. We've had games like this in the past."

In fact, the Cowboys lost their third game of the season last year to Detroit.

"This is our best start (3-0) since 1992," Aikman said. "We usually have an early season glitch. But this time we pulled it out."

Asked if the Cowboys were distracted by the Deion Sanders doings last week, Aikman laughed. "Well, it was a busy week," he said. "But we're accustomed to distractions around here. Sometimes things are happening around here and the team doesn't even know it or pay attention to it."

Aikman said the Metrodome crowd kept his offensive linemen from hearing his signals.

"They we're trying to read my lips and that's not a good deal," Aikman said. "Also, for some reason the ball was a little slick and I had trouble getting a good grip on it."

The trip to Minnesota got off to a bad start when the Cowboys plane had to sit on the runway for two hours because of a mechanical problem.

Then Aikman's own personal routine was broken.

Usually, backup quarterback Jason Garrett pulls on Aikman's jersey before a game. However, Aikman couldn't find Garrett in the locker room.

"It's the only thing I'm superstitious about and I couldn't find Jason," Aikman said. "I'm blaming him for what happened."

Whatever spell the Cowboys were under, they emerged just in time.

"Sometimes you have to go through a game like this to see what you're made of," said offensive tackle Mark Tuinei, who threw the clearing block on the winning touchdown run.

The Cowboys added a player to the roster on Monday as guard Derek Kennard reported to duty. He had quit the team in training camp but changed his mind and will be on the second team.

They also lost a player. Starting offensive tackle Erik Williams will miss the next two to three weeks because of a strained left calf muscle suffered in the Sunday night game.

Service shot

Pampa's Jane Brown serves a shot during the Lady Harvesters' District 1-4A volleyball match with Hereford on Saturday at McNeely Fieldhouse. The Lady Harvesters (1-1 in district play), play at Canyon tonight with matches starting at 6. Pampa is 1-1 in district play while Canyon is 2-0.

Timely passing attack saved the Sandies

PAMPA — It was a good thing Amarillo High had a passing attack and Detrick Johnson in last week's 7-6 squeaker over Pampa. With Pampa's defense completely throttling the Sandies' ground game, Johnson turned out to be the only offensive weapon AHS had.

The 6-2, 198-pound Johnson caught 8 passes for 171 yards, including the 80-yard TD catch that tied the score in the second quarter. Bryan Kennedy's extra-point kick proved to be the difference.

With several players going both ways, Pampa's defense against Amarillo High's rushing attack couldn't have been much better. AHS, which basically uses a two-platoon system, was held to 17 yards on the ground, including a minus two in the first half.

"It was clearly an outstanding game for our defense," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier. "We had three or four guys going both ways and they were getting tired. While they were out on the field, their No. 88 (Detrick Johnson) was resting on the sidelines. However, I don't want to discredit Amarillo High. They have a fine football team."

Leading Pampa's defense were tackle Donnie Middleton, end Devin Lemons and middle linebacker Floyd White. Middleton collected 10 tackles, including three quarterback sacks, while Lemons, who plays both ways, had 10 tackles and a quarterback sack. White turned in 13 tackles.

Lemons, a 6-3, 200-pound junior, scored Pampa's touchdown on a 44-yard pass from Clint Curtis in the second quarter.

The Harvesters, who had 134 yards on the ground, were led by Matt Archibald's 56 yards on 13 carries.

The Harris Rating System had Amarillo High ranked No. 40 in Class 5A going into the game and the Sandies were favored by 7 points. After opening the season with a 14-8 win over Garden City, Kan., the Harvesters were ranked No. 36 in Class 4A.

Pampa visits winless Plainview (0-3) this Friday night with the game starting at 7:30.

WHITE DEER — Maybe all White Deer needs is to go visiting on Friday night.

After dropping a pair of defensive struggles on the home turf, the White Deer Bucks go on the road for the first time this season in an effort to win their first game.

The Bucks go to Stratford this Friday night with the kickoff set for 7:30.

Highland Park rallied in the fourth quarter to beat the Bucks, 12-8, last week.

A 2-yard TD run by Ricky Captain, followed by the two-point conversion by Chris Mize, had given the Bucks an 8-6 lead in the third quarter.

Highland Park bounced back to score the winning touchdown on a 4-yard run by quarterback James Rodriguez in the fourth quarter.

Captain led White Deer rushers with 109 yards on 25 carries. For the game, the Bucks had 153 total yards. Highland Park had 228. Highland Park also led in first downs, 18-11.

Mistakes may have kept the Bucks from winning the game. The Bucks committed four turnovers while Highland Park had two.

The Bucks had lost their 1995 opener to Vega, 13-9.

Stratford is also 0-2, falling to Dalhart, 28-14, last week.

White Deer's fourth game of the season will be homecoming, Sept. 29 against Clarendon. After that encounter, the Bucks' next three games will be on the road.

The District 1-1A opener is Oct. 13 at Shamrock.

Dolphins down Steelers

MIAMI (AP) — While Dan Marino was merely bruised, the Pittsburgh Steelers were beaten.

The Miami Dolphins forced five turnovers and dominated Pittsburgh 23-10 Monday night, even though linebacker Greg Lloyd made good on a pledge and knocked Marino out of the game late in the third quarter.

Marino bruised his chest and could have returned to the game if needed. Instead, he watched from the sideline in uniform as the unbeaten Dolphins closed out their third consecutive victory.

"I'm going to be fine," Marino said. "I really just got the wind knocked out of me bad."

He had been warned; Lloyd spoke last week of trying to knock Marino "into next week."

"I don't think he quite got knocked into next week," Dolphins linebacker Bryan Cox said. "But I think he's at about Saturday now."

Before departing, Marino threw a 28-yard touchdown pass to Terry Kirby. Bernie Parmalee scored on a 2-yard run, and Pete Stoyanovich kicked three field goals.

Pittsburgh fell to 2-1 when a rally in the final period fell short. Third-string quarterback Jim Miller threw a 27-yard touchdown pass to Ernie Mills with eight minutes left, and the Steelers reached Miami's 8-yard line with four minutes to go before J.B. Brown's fourth-down interception ended the threat.

The Dolphins had two other interceptions and recovered two fumbles.

"Every turnover was very big," Pittsburgh coach Bill Cowher said. "They are hard to overcome when you play a good team."

Miami has outscored its three opponents 95-27, and the defense has allowed just two touchdowns while totaling 14 takeaways.

"For the first time since I've been here," Cox said, "I think we've got more talent on defense than on offense."

But despite the domination by Miami, Lloyd's tackle was the defensive play that everyone talked about after the game.

Most of the Dolphins declined to accuse him of a dirty hit, and no penalty was called, but receiver Irving Fryar wondered about the linebacker's intent.

"He followed through possibly harder than he should have," Fryar said, "but the referee didn't call it."

The loss dropped Pampa to 4-4 overall and 0-2 in district play.

"We gave an improved effort from our match with Dumas, but our seniors are going to have to do a better job still of leading by example in their play," said PHS coach Larry Wheeler.

Mariners' Johnson overpowers Rangers

SEATTLE (AP) — In Randy Johnson, the Seattle Mariners could have the AL Cy Young Award winner. His pitching could be taking the team to its first playoff berth.

The Texas Rangers, trying to stay in the league's wild-card race, got a look at Johnson in one of the season's biggest games Monday night. Johnson (15-2) was at his overpowering best for Seattle.

The 6-foot-10 left-hander allowed only three hits in eight innings, striking out 10, as the Mariners defeated Texas for the sixth time in seven games. The Mariners are 24-3 in games in which Johnson has started this year.

"He's pitched awfully, awfully well all year," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said after Johnson's 8-1 victory. "Certainly, I'm prejudiced because I manage him, but he's been dominating all year."

"There aren't any other starting pitchers in this league who have pitched as well as he has."

Leading a four-team wild-card battle, the Mariners — winners of five of six and eight of 10 — woke up today only two games behind California in the AL West race.

It's the closest Seattle has been to first place since trailing Texas by 2 1/2 games June 11. The slumping Angels lost to Oakland 4-0 Monday night.

"We've noticed it's gotten a little closer," Piniella said. "If we do well in the race that we're focused on, good things can happen in the other race. Let's leave it at that."

But the main focus of the Mariners will be winning the wild card, Piniella said.

"I'll talk about California when we play them next week," he said, referring to Sept. 26-27 games in the Kingdome with the Angels.

In the league's wild-card battle, it's Seattle by one game over the New York Yankees, with Kansas City 1 1/2 back and Texas two behind. Seattle, California, the Yankees and Texas all have 11 games left, while Kansas City has 12 games remaining. The Mariners and the Rangers play each other six more times, including tonight when Seattle's Chris Bosio (10-8) goes against Kevin Gross (8-15).

Rangers manager Johnny Oates wasn't making any concessions speeches after the defeat. It's way too early for that, he said.

"It's one game," he said. "We win tomorrow and we're right back to square one."

Johnson was upset with himself for his throwing error in the first inning that allowed Otis Nixon to score after he stole third base.

"Bobby Witt's been pitching real well," he said. "You never know in a type of game like this. One run can be the difference."

He didn't have to worry. Ahead 3-1, the Mariners got a three-run homer from Mike Blowers, his 22nd, in the third inning and a two-run homer from Edgar Martinez, the league's top hitter, in the seventh off Danny Darwin.

NBA returns to business

By MIKE FLAM
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The expected flurry of trades didn't happen when the NBA returned to business after a 2 1/2-month lockout. That doesn't mean it won't happen — soon.

Only two trades were made Monday when the league formally resumed operations at noon EDT, allowing teams to make deals for the first time since the start of the July 1 lockout.

Owners approved the six-year collective bargaining agreement by a 24-5 vote Friday, paving the way for the season's preparations to begin.

The league's general managers began working the phones again, negotiating with free agents and dealing with their own disgruntled players.

The expansion Toronto Raptors and Golden State Warriors were the first teams to do business, completing a six-player deal that appeared to be negotiated in June.

The Raptors traded B.J. Armstrong, their first pick in the expansion draft, to Golden State for two players and the rights to three 1995 second-round draft picks.

Toronto, which begins play this season, obtained centers Victor Alexander and Carlos Rogers, and the rights to forwards Dwayne Whitfield, Martin Lewis and Michael McDonald.

"Five for one is a good deal any way you look at it, and we got some talented players, too," Toronto coach Brendan Malone said.

Monday, the Sacramento Kings traded center Frank Brickowski to the Seattle SuperSonics for guard Sarunas Marciulionis and forward Byron Houston. All three were traded last offseason as well.

Detroit is reportedly set to trade the rights to first-round pick Randolph Childress to Portland for forward Otis Thorpe, and Trail Blazers guard Rod Strickland may also be headed out of Portland.

Also possibly in the works is a deal that would send Brian Williams from Denver to the Los Angeles Clippers, completing a draft-day deal that involved rookie Antonio McDyess and Nuggets veteran Rodney Rogers.

The New York Knicks' first order of business was to begin negotiations with free-agent forward Anthony Mason, winner of last season's Sixth Man Award.

"I think this is the number one priority. It certainly is the most pressing issue right now," a Knicks spokesman said. "We just both want to get it done as quickly as possible to our mutual satisfaction."

While the New Jersey Nets added two assistant coaches, of greater import is the status of Derrick Coleman. The agent for the star forward said Coleman wants to be traded and the team's owners will discuss the matter this week.

The new assistants are Stan Albeck, who coached the Nets from 1983-85, and Clifford Ray, who was head coach Butch Beard's teammate on the NBA champion Warriors in 1975.

Kevin McHale, the Minnesota Timberwolves' vice president of basketball operations, hopes to have No. 1 draft choice Kevin Garnett signed as soon as next week, thanks to the rookie salary cap in the new labor agreement.

Garnett, trying to jump from high school to the pros, is to play Joe Smith, Golden State's No. 1 pick, Saturday in a one-on-one game on the undercard of the Shaquille O'Neal-Hakeem Olajuwon promotional matchup in Atlantic City, N.J.

"It'll give him a sense that you're not in Kansas anymore," McHale said of Garnett's game against Smith.

The league also confirmed the McDonald's Championship will take place as scheduled.

The first tournament pitting champions from the world's top basketball leagues will take place Oct. 19-21 in London. The six-team event features the Houston Rockets (NBA), Sheffield (England), Real Madrid (Spanish, European champion) Buckler Bologna (Italy), Maccabi Tel Aviv (Israel) and the yet to be determined Australian champion.

"Hakeem is arriving in London on Tuesday to help us gear up our promotions," NBA European spokesman Ray Lalonde said. "It's been difficult to promote an event when you're not sure the event will take place."

Astros stay alive without Bagwell

By The Associated Press

In July, the Houston Astros had a comfortable lead in the NL wild-card race. In August, an injury to Jeff Bagwell and an 11-game losing streak nearly buried any postseason thoughts.

Now, the Astros have won four in a row and are just one game behind the Los Angeles Dodgers in the run for the fourth playoff berth.

"We feel good about the way we're playing right now," third baseman Dave Magadan said Monday night after the Astros' 3-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs. "We're in the wild-card race, but it's important that we've got to win 12 of 13 games to get in."

"We just want to play the best we can and get in. It doesn't matter how you get in as long as you get in."

If the Astros do get in, rookie pitcher Donne Wall will be among those to thank. The MVP of the Pacific Coast League improved to 2-1 in his September callup with 7 2-3 strong innings against the Cubs.

He allowed six hits and struck out seven without a walk. The only run he allowed was Mark Grace's 14th homer in the fourth inning.

"Donne pitched an outstanding game," Astros manager Terry Collins said. "He made one bad pitch, and when you do that to good hitters, that's what they can do."

In other NL games Monday night, it was Philadelphia 13, Florida 10; Cincinnati 7, Montreal 4; St. Louis 4, Pittsburgh 2; Atlanta 7, New York 1; and Colorado 5, San Diego 1.

Wall had a rough outing in his debut, losing to Cincinnati the day after his wife gave birth to their first child and the day after a brawl-filled game between the Reds and Astros. Since then, he has beaten New York and the Cubs.

"It was a big game for us and a big game for Donne,"

Magadan said. "I'm sure Donne has felt that he was a major league caliber pitcher for a long time, and now he's getting to prove it."

Magadan's run-scoring single in the first started the Astros' scoring, and they added runs in the second and fifth, the latter on an RBI single by Derrick May.

The Cubs are 5 1/2 games behind the Dodgers.

"Houston is our only focus," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said. "Houston is ahead of us and we're scheduled to play them a lot. We're only focused on catching them, and then we'll take anything else we can get after that."

Phillies 13, Marlins 10

Charlie Hayes had three hits and two RBIs and Tom Marsh had his first four-hit game for Philadelphia, but Florida's Gary Sheffield was the hitting star with two homers and a career-high seven RBIs. His three-run homer in the sixth was his eighth consecutive hit over two games, a club record. Since coming off the disabled list on Sept. 1, Sheffield has nine homers and 24 RBIs in 15 games.

Visiting Florida tied an NL record by using eight pitchers in a nine-inning game.

The Phillies trailed 9-6 when they scored six runs off four pitchers in the sixth. Hayes' two-run double drove in the first two and Kevin Flora's run-scoring double closed the inning.

Reds 7, Expos 4

Pete Schourek joined Atlanta's Greg Maddux as baseball's only 17-game winners, and he did it with his bat as well. Schourek (17-7) had two doubles, one of which started the two-run rally in the fifth that gave Cincinnati a 4-3 lead.

The Reds snapped a three-game losing streak and won for the fourth time in 11 games. They trimmed their magic number by three to clinch the NL Central.

The visiting Expos also tied the NL record by using eight pitchers, but lost for the fourth straight time to fall 10 games under .500 (61-71) for the first time since 1991.

Cardinals 4, Pirates 2

At Pittsburgh, Donovan Osborne, who went 16 starts and two years between victories, won his third consecutive start. Osborne (3-6) went from Aug. 18, 1993 to Sept. 8 without a victory, losing seven decisions in those starts.

Donovan missed all last season after undergoing reconstructive surgery on his shoulder and spent nearly two months on the disabled list this year because of a sore left elbow.

Pirates starter Esteban Loaiza (8-9) lost his fourth consecutive start. He is 0-3 with a 10.22 ERA in three starts against the Cardinals this year.

Braves 7, Mets 1

Steve Avery ended a four-game losing streak with a four-hitter. Avery (7-13), who was 2-8 since July 26, walked two and struck out eight in his third complete game.

The win was Atlanta's fifth straight and snapped the visiting Mets' five-game winning streak.

Chipper Jones broke out of a 0-for-14 slump with a run-scoring single in the six-run third off Bobby Jones (9-9) and added a solo homer — his 21st — in the fifth off Pete Walker.

Rockies 5, Padres 1

Kevin Ritz allowed three hits over 7 2-3 innings at San Diego to break a five-game losing streak, and Colorado increased its lead in the NL west to 1 1/2 games over idle Los Angeles.

Ritz (10-10), who last won on July 28 at Montreal, struck out five and walked one. The only run he allowed was in the eighth when Archi Cianfrocco reached on an error and scored on Brad Ausmus' double.

The Rockies scored twice in the fourth on an RBI double by Vinny Castilla and Eric Young's run-scoring single and added one in the fifth on Larry Walker's 33rd homer.

Harlingen to close track in October

HARLINGEN (AP) — The popularity of the state lottery and a decision last week that prevents the televising of horse races will force the closing of Valley Greyhound Park on Oct. 1, a track official says.

General Manager Bill McLaughlin said Monday that officials have been preparing to go out of business since last spring. Live greyhound racing ended two weeks ago.

In May, the Texas Legislature killed an off-track betting proposal sought by track officials and their supporters as a way to revive parimutuel betting and compete with the state lottery.

The lottery's popularity and convenience throughout the Lower Rio Grande Valley played a role in killing the track's business, McLaughlin said.

He said the track's losses, which started about three years ago, now total about $5 million.

"We were hopeful when we first opened (November 1990)," McLaughlin said. "I think that you can trace the beginning of the decline of our numbers to May 1992, the inception of the lottery."

City leaders were prepared for the shutdown announcement after the defeat of the horse racing simulcast proposal last week.

Harlingen Mayor Bill Card said. "That leaves us in a position of trying to scurry around and see what can be done to keep the facility open beyond Oct. 1," Card said. "We are aware that there are others that are interested in the racetrack."

Ladbroke Racing Corp., which owns the track, is holding talks with city officials about what to do with the 80,000-square-foot facility after business ends, McLaughlin said.

"The last thing we want to do is board up this facility," he said. "As far as being for sale, I'm sure there will be some suitors coming our way."

Campus station receives top recognition status

CANYON — KWTS-FM 91.1, West Texas A&M University's campus radio station, was selected as one of the top ten college radio stations in the country and a finalist in the community service category by the National Association of College Broadcasters (NACB) recently. "The students have worked very hard and they deserve this recognition," Leigh Browning, faculty advisor for the station and director of mass communications, said. The finalists were chosen based on achievement and a demonstration of excellence or development in content, creativity, production, presentation, information and relevance to the audience. KWTS-91.1 is among the top five finalists. "This is the first year we even applied for anything," Browning said. "To be a finalist is unbelievable." KWTS-FM 91.1 was chosen a finalist in community service based on their AIDS awareness event, "Ribbon-Fest." The event was held last April to raise awareness and money for the Panhandle AIDS Support Organization (PASO). "Ribbon-Fest," an all-day music festival, raised more than $3,000 for PASO and informed the students and general public about the immediate threat of AIDS. The winner of the community service category will be announced Nov. 18 at the NACB National meeting. "I anticipate the station will continue to be recognized nationally and locally," she said. The station will continue sponsoring "Ribbon-Fest." The event is scheduled for April 1996. "We appreciate all the support we get from WTAMU," Browning said. "We could not have gotten this award without a lot of University and community support." Chad Cockrum, a senior mass communications major from Monahans and the station manager, said the recognition and the award has boosted the level of enthusiasm at the station. "The staff is very excited and we are trying even harder to receive the honor of radio station of the year in 1996," Cockrum said. For more information, contact Browning at (806) 656-2412.

World briefs Unabomber text published, Feds hope capture shortly

Brazil AIDS ads: Out goes Braulio, in comes Bimbo

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The controversial government AIDS awareness campaign that angered hundreds of Brazilian men named Braulio has a solution: Give another name to the sensitive part in question. The name of a man's penis — called "Braulio" in radio and TV spots withdrawn from the air Saturday by Health Minister Adib Jatene — will be substituted with new ads to air this week. In Brazil, "Bimbo" is a nickname sometimes given to pets, similar to "Spot" in the United States. "Xara" is the word for someone who has the same name as yourself. "We learned our lesson the hard way," said Lair Guerra de Macedo, coordinator of the Health Ministry's AIDS Prevention Program. "We can't use anyone's real name. We had thought that men named Braulio would be proud their name was used for the male sexual organ. We thought they'd feel like heroes," he told the Rio daily O Globo on Monday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Post and The New York Times cited "public safety reasons" in their extraordinary agreement to publish in today's editions of the Post the so-called Unabomber's 35,000-word manifesto. The bomber had said in June he would kill again unless the Post or the Times printed his densely written treatise within three months. The deadline is Sunday. The Justice Department hopes the publication finally will lead investigators to the man whose 16 mail bombs have killed three and injured 23 others since 1978. The newspapers said their decision to print the manifesto, which calls for worldwide revolution against modern industrial society, followed a meeting with Attorney General Janet Reno. A Justice Department spokeswoman said Reno and FBI officials recommended publishing the full manuscript because investigators were encouraged by the leads generated from earlier-published excerpts.

Sulzberger Jr. acknowledged the risk and said any decision on printing future works by the Unabomber would depend on his abstinence from violence. "It's difficult to put complete faith in the word of someone with the record of violence that the Unabomber has," Sulzberger said of the decision to publish the document under threat of continued terrorism. "But the best advice available, from the FBI and others, is that the Unabomber may well not bomb again if his material is published. ... I'm convinced we're making the right choice between bad options," he told the Times. An FBI task force heading the Unabomber investigation planned a news conference today in San Francisco. The Unabomber is suspected to operate out of northern California.

Ambassador, top commander apologize to rape victim

TOKYO (AP) — Trying to cool widespread public anger against the U.S. military here, the American ambassador to Tokyo and the top U.S. commander in Japan apologized today for the rape of a schoolgirl, allegedly committed by three U.S. servicemen. The attack against a 12-year-old Okinawan girl earlier this month has received heavy national news coverage — and has set off renewed calls to scrap an agreement that grants special legal status to U.S. military personnel in Japan. In the apology, U.S. Ambassador Walter Mondale and Lt. Gen. Richard B. Meyers expressed their "sincere apologies for the suffering this crime has brought to the child, her family and the people of Okinawa Prefecture."

In a statement, Sulzberger and Post publisher Donald E. Graham said they made the joint decision to print the massive manifesto "for public safety reasons" after lengthy deliberations. The Times and the Post had published excerpts of the manifesto on Aug. 2. The full text was printed in today's Post, which unlike the Times, has the mechanical ability to distribute a special section in all copies of its daily paper, the publishers' statement said. The Times shared the $30,000-$40,000 cost of the eight-page special section. One media expert said he was stunned by what he called the "unprecedented" publication. "That's just one of the most inviolate rules of American journalism, that when you have a paper the responsibilities are grave and great and no one — not the government, law enforcement, local prosecutors — no one should dictate what you cover," said William Serrin, chairman of New York University's journalism department and a former Times reporter. Times publisher Arthur
