Watson takes oath for Lefors council post

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

New Lefors City Council member Benny Watson was sworn in at the start of Monday night's regular session meeting of the council. Watson was elected Saturday in a special election to fill two seats on the council.

Velda Chadwick, also elected Saturday, was expected to be sworn in as soon as she signs an anti-bribery statement that the Texas Constitution requires be on file with the Secretary of State's office before the oath of office is administered.

Watson will fill the remainder of a two-year term begun in May by Leonard Cain, who recently resigned from the council. Chadwick will complete a term begun last May by Derl Boyd, who became mayor of the city after the resignation of J.W. Franks in June.

Council member Danny Gilbert was named mayor pro tem as well at the meeting.

In other business, the council agreed to table further discussion about providing a water tap for Artie Lee Carpenter. A water line, which ran through a dam on Carpenter's property, burst after heavy rains in early June washed out the dam.

The council agreed to reject a bid from G.W. James of $21,142 for seal coating of the city streets. They also agreed to take no action on a letter about a property bid.

Boyd read a letter from Gray County Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley that informed the town that its appraised value had dropped approximately $217,000 in the past year.

In other action, the council agreed to sign a resolution allowing Southwestern Public Service to provide a new industrial interruptible rate for businesses that use a minimum of one megawatt.

The rate will not affect anyone in town, SPS official Monte Joiner said, and the city's approval will aid his company in getting blanket coverage for their entire service area.

The council tabled discussion on a recycling service contract with Panhandle Regional Planning Commission until each of the council members had time to review the contract.

They also heard complaints from Van Criswell regarding both his water bill and the sewer department.

Criswell charged at the council's July meeting that his water bill was too high because the meter had not been repaired properly, and a washer was leaking on the city side. City Water Superintendent Mike Steele says the meter was checked and repaired properly.

After studying the average cost for Criswell's water bill and discovering that June's bill was $8 higher than average, the council agreed to credit his next bill for that amount.

Criswell also protested that he had received poor treatment from Steele regarding a report of leaking sewer water in a lot near his house. He said that he reported the problem twice to Steele and when nothing was done, he reported the problem to the Texas Department of Health.

He said that when Steele came to fix the problem, he "griped" about Criswell's call to the health department. Criswell also had his young daughter testify to that contention.

He said that the leak has been covered now, but no neutralizing chemical has been put on the property to counteract the effects of the sewer water.

Local bankers don't expect Fed to change interest rates soon

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

It seems unlikely that the Fed will tinker with interest rates at its meeting next week, but there is a chance things could change come September.

"I would say that things are about the same as the last several months," said Randy Watson with Boatmen's First of Pampa.

He said he doesn't look for any changes in the interest rates from the Federal Reserve, a view shared by other Pampa bankers as well as national economists.

"I don't look for any real reduction in August," said Larry Orman of Citizens Bank and Trust in Pampa.

Orman said things may change in September, however.

"There's a lot of 'ifs' in these numbers," Orman said of inventory and employment reports released by the government over the past couple of weeks.

"I wish I knew what the Fed was going to do," sighed Ben Shackelford of Pampa's National Bank of Commerce. "I don't think they'll change prime in September. There seems to be little inflation threat."

The employment reports issued earlier this month were relatively sluggish but continue to point to a soft landing.

Nationally, factory jobs and the work week were especially weak suggesting that the second quarter inventory correction may be spreading to the manufacturing sector. Moreover, raw industrial commodity prices fell further earlier this month, bringing the drop during the past six weeks to more than five percent.

The drop in sensitive commodity prices suggests that demand for basic manufacturing commodities is soft and that inventory investment in this sector is slowing. The recent slowdown in business lending reinforces the notion that inventory investment will drop further during the third quarter. In addition, July unit car sales fell more than six percent, suggesting consumer demand remains suspect.

Despite a modest 55,000 rise in July payroll jobs, a rise in July hours worked suggests that GDP growth should recover during the third quarter. While economists aren't putting much weight on the preliminary data, July hours worked are almost three percent above their second quarter average at an annual rate.

Wages increased 0.6 percent in July, pushing average hourly earnings up 3.2 percent during the past year. In the past, similar jumps in the first month of the quarter have been quickly reversed.

Initial unemployment claims plunged 51,000, suggesting some improvement in labor market conditions. Likewise, the index of leading indicators increased for the first time this year.

Moreover, new home sales climbed in June and big ticket consumer spending rose in both May and June. The rise in hours worked, tentative signs of a pick-up in important interest sensitive sectors of the economy, and higher wage inflation probably precludes a Fed move at its August meeting, but a September move remains reasonable.

The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meets Tuesday, Aug. 22, and again on Sept. 26.

"There seems to be as many negatives as positives," Watson said.

Showing signs of strength in the economy, the national purchasing manager's index rose in July, initial unemployment claims fell earlier this month, construction spending increased in June, consumer spending and income increased in June, new home sales increased in June, the index of leading indicators rose in June, factory shipments increased in June and bank loans rose in early August.

Weaknesses in the economy include a drop in business confidence in the second quarter, car and truck sales fell sharply in July, payroll employment increased a sluggish 55,000 in July (well below expectations), manufacturing employment fell 85,000 in July, the factory work week fell in July, the unemployment rate increased in July, factory orders fell in June and commodity prices generally fell in early August.

More scattered showers forecast for area

From AP and Staff Reports

Showers were spread out along the Gray and Roberts county line at mid-morning today as weather forecasters predicted more rain this afternoon and evening.

The forecast calls for scattered to widely scattered showers and thunderstorms over most areas of the state tonight and Wednesday recording some moisture late Monday.

Hemphill County officials reported just a shower in Canadian Monday evening.

"We got all the way from zero to 0.10 of an inch here in town," said Dan Cornett, Hemphill County Extension agent. "North of town, they got 1.9 inches. The clouds seemed to go across the northside of the county. The rest of the county didn't get much. It just kind of cooled things off."

At 10 a.m. today, it was raining in Miami.

"We got 1.5 inches north of town," said Ann Bryant with the Roberts County Sheriff's Office.

Lavesta Barber said they didn't get any rain at Allison.

Wheeler County Agent Don King said it just sprinkled in Wheeler. Amarillo reported 1.95 inches. Pampa reported 1.88 inches of rain.

Danny Nusser, Gray County Extension agent, said it rained less in the southern part of the county. He estimated 0.75 to an inch.

Flois Reed in Panhandle said her rain gauge showed a little less than an inch and a half, but then, she said, it also had a couple of bugs in it, too.

Jody Bradford, Carson County Extension agent, said rainfall amounts in the county ranged from a half inch near White Deer to about an inch in Panhandle.

The National Weather Service is predicting more rain for today and tonight in the Texas Panhandle and western Oklahoma.

The forecast for West Texas calls for precipitation in all areas except the southeast. It will be partly to mostly cloudy in West Texas.

North Texas will have partly cloudy skies and widely scattered afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms.

In South Texas, there is a chance of scattered showers and thunderstorms through tonight.

Boyd said that he told Steele to inspect the leak twice, but each time Steele said he couldn't find the problem. After the second trip to the site, Steele was met at his office by health department representatives, Boyd said.

After that, the leak was plugged, and the problem may cause a fine, Boyd said.

Council member J.C. Callaway moved that the city contact the Department of Health for a recommendation about any neutralizing chemicals or other further action needed in the matter. The council approved the motion unanimously.

Criswell has had a bid accepted by the council to buy the lot in question, which was tax-delinquent, but doesn't have final paperwork from the school or county to finalize the sale.

He also ran for the city council in Saturday's election.

Discussion was tabled on a policy for delinquent utilities listings after the matter was brought up in Boyd's mayor's report. Boyd wanted the council to reconsider the deadlines in the policy.

In other action taken during Boyd's report, the council agreed to buy 1,000 stamped envelopes from the local post office for $302 when they run out of the envelope supply they currently have.

Also in the report time, the council agreed to purchase one grease pump for the sewer system for $1,500.

After discussion that seemed to confuse most of the council and the audience present, council members voted to have part-time employee Vicky Elkins, who works with City Secretary Phyllis Crutcher, work an extra hour each day that she works in the City Hall.

The City Hall is closed from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., allowing Crutcher 30 minutes for lunch and an hour to run city errands. Elkins will be allowed only the half-hour lunch time when she works with Crutcher for four days of each month on utilities billings.

The council retired into executive session for almost one hour to discuss unspecified employee matters. When they returned to open session, they voted to require all full-time city employees turn in a vacation schedule at the first of each calendar year. Any changes to that schedule would have to be approved by the mayor to prevent more than two full-time employees taking off at the same time.

The policy would not change existing policies on sick days, emergency leave or half-days.

Passing Bermuda, Hurricane Felix heads for U.S. East Coast

By PAUL EGAN
Associated Press Writer

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Hurricane Felix spared Bermuda the brunt of its wrath and hurtled past the island at full force en route to the United States today. Authorities ordered two North Carolina islands evacuated.

It wasn't clear if or when Felix would make landfall along the U.S. East Coast, where the storm produced strong surf and closed some beaches as far north as New York.

A hurricane watch was issued along the mid-Atlantic coast from South Carolina to Delaware this morning, the National Hurricane Center in Miami said. A flood warning already was in effect for the North Carolina coast.

High waves from a raging sea pounded the south shores of Bermuda late Monday, knocking yachts loose from their moorings and battering oceanfront hotels.

Bermudians boarded up their oceanfront homes in driving rain and fled inland to wait out Felix, an especially wide hurricane with top wind speeds approaching 85 mph.

The storm washed out part of the causeway linking the island on which the international airport is located with the rest of Bermuda, police spokeswoman Sgt. Andrea Browne said.

Thousands of residents were without electricity. Only one of two local radio stations was operating, and cable television was knocked out for a short time.

"It's chaos!" said Evelyn Carreiro, front desk supervisor at the Hamilton Princess Hotel, where rooms quickly filled with coastal residents.

The hurricane jeopardized today's referendum on independence from Britain. Voting was not formally postponed, but elections officers at all 20 polling stations were expected to delay it at least until Wednesday.

While Felix's center was closest to Bermuda at 5 p.m. EDT Monday — about 75 miles south-southwest — rough weather lasted into this morning. At 8 a.m. EDT today, Felix was about 500 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., and moving northwest near 14 mph. The hurricane was packing maximum sustained winds of 80 mph and little change in strength was expected during the day.

Riptides caused by Felix killed two people and left one missing in North Carolina, and one person drowned in rough surf in Virginia. Beaches from the Outer Banks to Long Island, New York, were closed to swimmers.

Thousands of residents and visitors on Hatteras and Ocracoke islands just off North Carolina were ordered to evacuate this morning. Ocracoke is accessible only by boat, and ferry runs are halted when seas and winds get too strong. Only one flood-prone road connects Hatteras with the mainland.

"By law, we cannot physically force anyone to leave," Dare County spokesman Charlie Hartig said of the Hatteras evacuation. "We hope the word 'mandatory' connotes a certain severity to what we're talking about. We hope people will heed the warning and leave as soon as possible."

In Norfolk, Va., the Navy was preparing to send dozens of its ships out to sea to avoid damaging the base's piers if the storm hit.

Although it had been downgraded to a Category One hurricane from Category Three on a scale of one to five, Felix's size still presented a major threat, said Bill Frederick, a hurricane specialist at the Miami center.

He said hurricane-force winds extended out about 115 miles from the storm's center, with tropical storm-force winds — from 39 mph to 73 mph — 300 miles out. A typical hurricane packs winds of only about 20 mph 300 miles from its eye.

In Bermuda, damage was reported at Mermaid Beach, Pink Beach and Elbow Beach hotels along the vulnerable south shore, although police said no one had been injured. Many trees were downed, houses had lost their shutters and sea walls were under water.

"The businesses are closed, the ferries shut down, the buses aren't working, and the cable TV is out," said Mike Norton, 38, a tourist from Pittsburgh.

Health officials fight canine rabies outbreak

PLEASANTON (AP) — State health and wildlife officials began reinforcing a barrier of wild animal vaccination attempting to control a strain of canine rabies that is rapidly spreading through South Texas.

Health officials say, that left unchecked, the disease could spread north among wild canines all the way to San Antonio.

Flying in a small Texas Animal Damage Control helicopter, health officials began dropping 25,000 matchbook-sized baits containing an experimental oral rabies vaccine over 250 square miles in Atascosa County.

Atascosa county, 35 miles south of San Antonio, was identified as a hot spot when three rabid coyotes were reported in recent weeks, said Dr. Gayne Fearneyhough, who heads the oral vaccine program for the Texas Department of Health.

"The pilot is experienced in wildlife movement, so what we've told him is, you fly like you're looking for coyotes and we'll drop baits along that terrain," Fearneyhough said.

Fearneyhough said he hoped to finish dropping the baits by Wednesday.

Man executed for 1986 slaying of ex-girlfriend

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison inmate Vernon Sattiewhite was executed early today for abducting and fatally shooting his ex-girlfriend nearly a decade ago in San Antonio.

Sattiewhite's execution, the 13th this year in Texas, came after courts rejected 11th-hour appeals from his attorneys that he was retarded and incompetent and should not be put to death.

"I just hope Mrs. Fields is happy now," said Sattiewhite, 39, referring to his victim's mother in a brief final statement.

He also thanked his attorney for taking his case and for attending the execution.

"I would just like to ask him: Why?" Mrs. Fields said. "I don't want to hear about how he loved her. That's a bunch of bull crap."

Industrial production up 0.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industrial production edged up 0.1 percent in July, the first advance in five months as utility usage during the month's heat wave offset a drop in manufacturing activity.

The Federal Reserve said today that output in June, initially believed to have risen 0.1 percent, actually fell 0.1 percent after being unchanged in May. It had declined 0.6 percent in April and 0.1 percent in March.

The Fed said factory production dropped 0.2 percent in July, the sixth month without a gain, although it was flat in March. Utility output, however, jumped 3.6 percent due to abnormally hot temperatures.

The manufacturing sector slowed dramatically earlier this year. Factory orders fell in June for the fourth time in five months.

Analysts had expected a decline in industrial production last month after the government reported earlier this month that manufacturing employment fell by 85,000 in July and the total workweek slipped by 12 minutes.

The central bank's report also showed little sign of inflationary pressures. It said industries were operating at 83.4 percent of capacity in July, down from 83.6 percent in June and the lowest since utilization stood at 83.2 percent in February 1994.

Although the current rate remains relatively high, it shows that industry still has room to expand without creating serious bottlenecks and price pressures.

The Fed said the drop in manufacturing output was led by a 3.2 percent drop in production of motor vehicles and parts, although output of many other industries also decreased significantly.

Coalition promotes I-35 corridor in Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma officials have given a big sendoff to a bus tour promoting Interstate 35 as a major trade route between Canada and Mexico.

Gov. Frank Keating welcomed the group Monday on the south steps of the Oklahoma Capitol, calling the tour historic. He said the corridor plan made economic sense and would further his goal of creating wealth and jobs in Oklahoma.

About a dozen people protested the plan as the I.H. 35 Corridor Coalition arrived from Kansas City.

"Don't Pay Texas Dollars to Make Your Transportation Policy in Oklahoma," read one sign.

Another read, "$150,000 in Oklahoma Tax Dollars for 130,000 Lb. Trucks."

The $150,000 referred to was an appropriation from the Oklahoma Legislature in support of the corridor.

Paul Douglass of Midwest City, a member of the United We Stand organization begun by the Texan Ross Perot, said the protesters believe Oklahoma will lose if the corridor is built because of the wear and tear on state roads by huge trucks bound from Mexico to Canada.

State Sen. Keith Leftwich, D-Oklahoma City, welcomed the group, saying Oklahoma's support for the project is bipartisan. Leftwich said some original opponents of the North American Trade Agreement, including Sen. Jim Inhofe, R-Tulsa, support the corridor idea so NAFTA can reach its potential.

Leftwich said change is inevitable, like it or not, if the United States wants to compete in a global economy. He said the choice for Oklahoma is whether to be "a hammer or a nail" in the process.

Neal McCaleb, Oklahoma transportation secretary, said he recognized the corridor would bring increased truck traffic, but "our objective is the meet those opportunities and challenges" rather than to close the door on them.

Air Force wants to be smoke-free

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A $1.9 million program to help recruits stop smoking is the first step in what a U.S. Air Force officer says could result in a "smoke-free" Air Force.

The program is funded by the National Institutes of Health. If it proves successful, it could be used by other branches of the military.

Starting Monday, every new recruit, as part of basic training, will undergo a 90-minute smoking-cessation program as part of basic training.

Recruits are already banned from smoking during basic training, which lasts for six weeks.

"There's no way they're getting cigarettes (in basic training)," said Dr. Robert Klesges, professor of psychology at the University of Memphis, who set up the program.

"There's simply no way. Cigarette smoking is considered contraband. If they're caught or even have cigarette smoke on their breath, they have to repeat basic training."

Because all Air Force recruits go through basic training at Lackland, the study could reach 35,000 trainees.

Capt. Keith Haddock, director of clinical programs at Lackland's Wilford Hall Medical Center, said a survey revealed that 28 percent of all new recruits were smokers, but after one year of duty, the figure had risen to 41 percent.

"The Air Force watches closely the number of people that smoke. One thing the Air Force wants is a healthy, fit force."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Little fish versus much bigger fish

The most fascinating aspect of the Senate Whitewater hearings is the disparity between what major players and underlings say about what happened after the death of former White House deputy counsel Vincent Foster.

Margaret Williams, Hillary Rodham Clinton's chief of staff, denies that she moved boxes of files out of Mr. Foster's office, and says she's passed a lie-detector test. But a Secret Service agent says he saw her doing it. And a former White House intern, Tom Castleton, a 1993 Harvard graduate, says he helped her move them to the living quarters.

One should hold open the possibility that these and other discrepancies are due to honest differences in what people remember about a time when people were grief-stricken, confused, and not sure what should have been done.

But it's also important to remember who might have a motive for, er, remembering conveniently. The top officials were in charge, and strong suggestions have been raised that they tampered with evidence or interfered with an investigation. The lower-level people have much less to gain or perhaps more to lose by lying or telling the truth, indeed, it's more likely they would suffer from truth that embarrassed higherups.

That doesn't prove the higher-ups are lying. But it's useful to consider who has a motive to do so.

Medicare crisis and its lessons

Medicare just celebrated its 30th birthday, but it looks frail and decrepit beyond its years. So Democrats and Republicans, forced to address its problems, are engaged in a spirited debate over which party is more likely to let Grandma rot in the gutter. The argument may be the most entertaining spectacle this side of a tractor pull, but we should not let it divert us from Medicare's valuable lessons about the defects of the modern welfare state.

Medicare, like its older sibling, Social Security, was born during a period of bulletproof confidence in the government's ability to solve persistent social problems through liberal applications of money. Just as Social Security was the centerpiece of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, this was the pinnacle of Lyndon Johnson's Great Society. "No longer will older Americans be denied the healing power of modern medicine," Johnson promised.

Today's liberals continue to defend Medicare as if it were the last beer in the cooler. "It is a compact across generations," said Hillary Clinton at a 30th anniversary event last month. "Parents ought to be able to save for their children's college and protect their parents' health. And Medicare means they can." Ted Kennedy, taking a slightly less elevated tone, appeared at another anniversary gathering to tell Republicans, "Keep your tax-cutting, greedy hands off our Medicare."

They portray Medicare as a smashing success. But by one crucial measure, it is a failure: Congress would never have created Medicare had anyone known what the bill would be. At the outset, it was supposed to cost a grand total of $37 billion a year by 1990. As it turned out, the actual outlays that year came to $67 billion. Today, Medicare is the biggest entitlement program in the budget except Social Security, paying out $176 billion this year and growing fast.

Stephen Chapman

That's why it faces an acute financial crisis. Barring drastic action, the hospital insurance trust fund is expected to run dry by 2002. Thanks to rising medical costs and lengthening life expectancies, costs will continue upward in the next century and will have to be paid somehow.

Peter Ferrara of the National Center for Policy Analysis estimates that keeping the program solvent will mean raising the Medicare payroll tax somewhere between 250% and 600%. That will mean a heavier tax load for most workers but a lighter one for some: those whose jobs will be destroyed by the increase.

Medicare levies have spiraled upward at a rate that would make any corporate price-gouger green with envy. In 1968, the most any individual worker had to pay was $94. By 1980, it was $772, and by 1990, it was $1,488 - a 1,500% jump in 22 years. Meanwhile, contrary to what you might expect, spending has gotten less generous as the federal government has tried various cost-control schemes.

The paradox is no accident. In the early years of Medicare, there were lots of people paying in and not many people getting benefits, which meant everyone had it easy. But, as the number of beneficiaries grew much faster than the number of tax-payors, a financial squeeze set in.

Pyramid schemes, of which Medicare is one, always develop such problems sooner or later. But the latecomers to this game get testy when told they will have to settle for much less than they expected when they were suckered in.

The creation of Medicare had another predictable side effect: health-care inflation. With the federal government cheerfully paying all the bills, neither patients nor doctors had any interest in skimping on office visits, lab tests or hospital stays, so it was off to the races.

In the 20 years preceding the creation of Medicare, notes economist and Nobel Laureate Milton Friedman, the average cost of a day in the hospital rose threefold, but in the 20 years after, it rose eightfold. "Yet, improvements in health and hospital care do not appear to have proceeded more rapidly after 1965 than before," he writes. We all feel the impact, not only in higher Medicare taxes but in higher prices for every medical procedure.

Several useful lessons emerge from all these numbers. One is that it is far easier to create government entitlements than it is to curb them, which means that every expansion should be viewed with trepidation as permanent and irreversible. Another is that anything the government undertakes will cost far more than anyone imagines. A final one is that broad social welfare schemes will cause unexpected harms that may equal or even exceed their benefits.

Hillary Clinton, her husband and Ted Kennedy think of Medicare as a great victory. But if they want to understand the failure of national health insurance last year, they ought to consider the possibility that Americans looked at Medicare and decided that another such victory was more than we could bear.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, August 15, the 227th day of 1995. There are 138 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Aug. 15, 1945, 50 years ago, was proclaimed V-J Day by the Allies, a day after Japan agreed to surrender unconditionally. In a recorded radio message, Emperor Hirohito called upon the Japanese people to "bear the unbearable" and lay down their arms. In the United States, V-J Day coincided with the end of rationing of gasoline and canned goods.

On this date:

In 1057, Macbeth, the King of Scotland, was slain by the son of King Duncan.

In 1769, Napoleon Bonaparte was born on the island of Corsica.

In 1888, T.E. Lawrence, the British soldier who gained fame as "Lawrence of Arabia," was born in Tremadoc, Wales.

In 1935, humorist Will Rogers and aviator Wiley Post were killed when their airplane crashed near Point Barrow, Alaska.

Clinton's shrug and smile diplomacy

Charley Reese

The communist thug government of China is spitting in Bill Clinton's face, and he's calling it dew.

Since the Kennedy administration, during which the United States started going downhill, it's been tough to pick the most disgraceful act of various postwar administrations, but this groveling before China is among the Top Five.

How bad is the Chinese government? Let's suppose someone murdered every man, woman and child in the states of Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Imagine that vast stretch of land lying empty of all living human beings. As if in a Stephen King novel, you could drive from New Jersey to Maine, from New York to the western border of Ohio, and not once ever see a single living human being only gigantic stacks of millions of rotting corpses.

Well, that's how many people the communist thug government of China has murdered since 1949. It has murdered the equivalent of the combined populations of those states, around 60 million.

Yet Clinton, who refuses to lift a cruel economic embargo which is killing innocents in Iraq, on the grounds that he doesn't approve of the human rights record of Saddam Hussein, has licked the boots of the Chinese communist thugs. Compared to the Chinese government, Saddam Hussein's government is benign and enlightened.

The Chinese communists can massacre students, they can operate slave labor camps, they can commit genocide in Tibet, they can arrest American citizens, they can arrest American diplomats, they can publicly insult the United States and lecture us on whom we may or may not allow to visit this country, and Clinton just shrugs and smiles his lopsided smile. Secretary of State Warren Christopher recently met with the communist thug government in China. He has admitted that he knew at the time that two Air Force officers assigned to our embassy were missing but says he didn't know they were in a Chinese jail. He might have if he had asked his hosts.

It takes more than a large gross domestic product and hot-air speeches to be a great country. America was a great country long before it had a large GDP. It was not considered great because it was rich. It was considered great because it was good, because it stood for human rights and for human liberty.

Clinton grovels before Chinese tyrants, of course, because his Wall Street friends tell him to.

The relationship with China began during the Nixon administration and at the behest of the Eastern financial circles who saw money making opportunities.

It's only when you realize how much political influence this wealthy establishment has - and how amoral the establishment is - that the crazy foreign policy of the United States in the postwar era begins to make sense.

The American government's interest in human rights is turned on and off like a light switch by the monied interests. The government decries human rights abuse in Iraq. If the embargo were lifted, Iraqi oil would drive the world price down and profits with it. But it has no interest in human rights in Saudi Arabia or Kuwait, where the monied interests have contracts.

And certainly not in China, with its vast storehouse of cheap, slave or semi-slave labor, which can make, at little cost, American financed products sold at high prices. "Never let the welfare of human beings get in the way of profits" is the motto of this elite crowd.

Some morally disadvantaged Americans cannot tell the difference between a market economy and a tyrannical government. In the first place, China has no market economy. In the second, China's acceptance of foreign investment does not make it less murderous. It will, however, make it a more powerful tyranny.

Spear Foundation: Curing America's woes

If you can believe the headlines, America's funk grows ever deeper. Many of you think we've "gone off on the wrong track," you don't trust government, you think the political process is bankrupt, you are cynical about finding solutions.

Well, we at the Spear Foundation, a sprightly little think tank that's always looking for answers, are not as pessimistic as you are. We think America can be fixed, and we have come up with some specific ideas. Our honorable competition - the Heritage Foundation, the Cato Institute, the Brookings Institution - tend to offer complicated and sometimes doctrinaire solutions. The SF leans to pragmatism and simplicity. We are like comfort food, old shoes and dogs. We are there for you.

Here are just a few things the SF research team believes could be done to put America back on the right track:

- Enclose Washington. You probably don't realize this, but America is losing the Mall War. You think the Mall of America in Minnesota, with all its stores and food courts and Camp Snoopy amusement park, is the world's largest? Guess again. The West Edmonton Mall in Canada, with an artificial ocean and bungee-jumping tower, wears the crown. We have to do something about this. SF's answer: Cover the capital city. We'd have the world's largest enclosed mall, the world's largest collection of enclosed museums, and the world's largest enclosed circus. Of course, we'd have to install a state-of-the-art venting system to get rid of the hot air.

Joseph Spear

- Privatize the Speakership. This would be entirely in keeping with Newt's notions of governing and save the taxpayers a bundle in salary and benefits. With Newt's book contract and his dedication to the National Rifle Association's agenda, we're halfway there already. We have a Blockbuster Bowl and a U.S. Air Arena. Why not a Rupert Murdoch or NRA Speaker?

- Send Kato to Congress. The nation's most famous VHG (Vapid House Guest) can't seem to find a calling that befits his fame. He has done movies and written a book. He's got a publicity agent, groupies, a fan club. Yes, hundreds of Katoheads around the world have forked over $10 and are now the proud recipients of a monthly "Kato Gram" from His Mouseship. There's really only one distinction left worthy of our Kato. He must be elected to Congress, where he could join with Sonny Bono to create a Bonehead Caucus and to assist so many others of similar talents in the management of our nation.

- Clothe Miss America. She's been parading around in a swimsuit for 75 years, and it's darn time we put a stop to it. The pageant's organizers are planning to conduct a phone poll on the swimsuit question during this year's show. It only costs 50 cents to call, and we at SF hope all of America will take advantage of this bargain. Let's have an overcoat competition. Let's see her in raingear. But for heaven's sake, no swimsuits! We have to think about all the innocent Iranian mullahs who are previewing this scandalous spectacle to judge whether their flocks dare be exposed to it.

- Investigate Nutgate. According to news reports those liberal ice cream guys, Ben & Jerry, have been serving mislabeled nuts. The nuts used in B&J's Rainforest Crunch ice cream were alleged to have come from a "nut-shelling cooperative" formed by "Brazilian forest peoples." But it turns out that 95% of them actually come from agribusiness.

We have heard, but cannot verify, that Parson Pat Robertson and the Rev. Jerry Falwell are working on videotapes that will link Hillary Clinton and Vincent Foster to this scandal. Meantime, it screams for a congressional investigation. Now that the House Republicans have gotten to the bottom of the Waco conspiracy and come out foursquare against law enforcement and endorsed the inalienable right of any nut who calls himself a messiah to horde howitzers, maybe they can look into this one.

Dad doesn't hide being the family cook

By MIA B. MOODY
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO (AP) — When Bill Pack was growing up, the household secret was that his father was a good cook. Today Pack is the family cook, but he doesn't try to hide it.

"That was a different era," he said. "It doesn't bother me that people know I'm a good cook, but some don't believe me because I look more like a linebacker."

Pack, who is known as Les Parker on the radio station 102.5-FM, The Bear, said his parents were both good cooks, but he didn't learn his techniques from them.

"I never helped them cook because we didn't have a lot of money so if you messed something up, you couldn't run to the store to replace it," he said.

Pack said he didn't start experimenting until he moved out of the house at age 18. "Since I liked to eat, I started buying stuff at the grocery store and experimenting," he said. "I can't tell you how much I've thrown away."

Mike Snuffer, a KCEN-TV news director, is another father who does much of the cooking for his family. While Pack is an experimenter, Snuffer sticks to the basics.

"I can take a bland can of peas and turn them into a gourmet dish with just a few spices," he said.

Snuffer, who started cooking when he was in middle school, said it was out of necessity when his mother started working full time.

"When I got home from school, she wasn't home yet and I didn't want to wait. So I learned how to do my own thing," he said.

Today he picks up his techniques from watching cooking shows on television. His wife, Carol, said he's not artistic, but he gets the job done.

"Unless he cooks, the kids and I usually eat beans and weenies or something out of a box such as scalloped potatoes or rice," she said. "And if we're both feeling lazy, it's Domino's Pizza."

Like the rest of America, both Pack and Snuffer have jumped on the health food band wagon. Snuffer said he usually sticks to vegetables and white meats.

"I like chicken because it is cheap, easy and quick," he said.

Pack said he used to fry most of his meats, but now he prefers to broil. What's the secret to his success? He's not telling.

He claims he doesn't know what goes into about 95 percent of his dishes. "I just reach up into the cabinet and dump different seasonings into the mix," he said.

The one thing all his dishes have in common is lots of spice.

To make my bread pudding, he jokes, "you need six eggs, six cups of sugar and a bottle of Maalox to counteract the cinnamon and nutmeg that are sure to upset your stomach."

His wife, Vickie, who works the night shift at M&M Mars, said his experimentation has paid off.

"Our two children like his cooking much better than mine," she said.

Bill Pack whips up some stir-fry for his wife, Vickie, and daughter, Erin, at his Robinson home, enjoying his role as a family cook.

PACK FAMILY FAVORITES

Bill Pack loves cooking for his family and his family loves eating the dishes he prepares. He shared some recipes for Pack family favorites:

STIR FRY

- 1/2 pound of chicken breast or beef
- 3 stalks celery
- 3 carrots
- 1 stalk broccoli
- 1 zucchini
- 1 medium onion, coarsely chopped
- 1 bell pepper
- 1 small can water chestnuts
- 1 clove garlic, finely minced
- 1 tablespoon oil
- Worcestershire sauce and white white worcestershire sauce

Combine onion with oil and garlic; add to wok. Cut meat into 1/2-by-1-inch strips, place in wok. Add about 2 tablespoons of each type of worcestershire sauce and allow meat to marinate.

While meat is marinating, cut up vegetables and set aside.

Turn burner on stove to its highest setting and cook meat, stirring until it has a done appearance (you will have to add about 4 ounces of water while cooking).

Add vegetables at this point to the sides of the wok and allow to steam, making a well in the center of the wok with ingredients on the sides of the wok. Add 4 more ounces of water and cover with lid. Allow vegetables to steam for 7 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Serve over rice.

BREAD PUDDING NEW ORLEANS STYLE

- Stale at least 1 1/2 loaves of bread
- 6 eggs
- 6 cups sugar
- 1 cup milk
- 3 fresh peaches or 2 cans (16 ounces each) peaches
- 2 tablespoons cinnamon
- 2 teaspoons nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon vanilla extract
- Orange Sauce

In a 9-by-13-by-2 inch pan (preferably Pyrex) break bread into approximately 1/4-inch cubes.

In a large mixing bowl combine the eggs, milk, sugar, 1 tablespoon of ground cinnamon and 1 tablespoon of vanilla, mix by hand with fork until ingredients are consistent.

Add fruit. If fresh, chop peaches into 1/2-inch squares and dump them in juice and all, stir and pour over bread and stir until consistent.

Dust the top of this mixture lightly with cinnamon and nutmeg (light on the nutmeg, just enough to let your guest know you had it in the room).

Place this pan in the oven at 350 degrees for about 45 minutes (until the mixture is as consistent as a very moist cake. Do not overcook if the pudding quits bubbling you are in trouble. Pour Orange Sauce over pudding while it is still steaming).

Orange Sauce: Pour 8 ounces powdered sugar into a small mixing bowl. Add 1 tablespoon vanilla extract and 1 teaspoon orange extract. Mix with milk until this has the consistency of pancake syrup. Warm in the microwave.

States demand tougher rules against 'slamming'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Muriel Keiper didn't know her long-distance company had been changed until she got a call from AT&T asking why she switched carriers. Eventually she was reconnected, but only after much aggravation and intervention by state regulators.

Keiper's experience and thousands more like it prompted 25 states to ask federal regulators Monday to give Americans greater protections from a growing problem: switching customers' long-distance companies without their knowledge.

The Federal Communications Commission in June issued stricter rules against the practice, known as "slamming," but the states said in a petition to the agency that the rules don't go far enough.

"You don't realize what can happen without your knowledge," says Keiper, a Connecticut resident. "It's kind of frightening."

After tracking it down herself, Keiper found that her service had been switched to Pantel Communications in DeKalb, Ill.

May Arreguin, a Pantel customer service supervisor, said Keiper signed a sweepstakes form authorizing the switch. Keiper said she did not sign such a form.

One of the most important changes the states are seeking is for the FCC to make companies carrying out the unauthorized switch liable for long-distance charges — not the consumer. That means the local phone company would remove the unauthorized charge from the consumer's bill and charge it to the slammer.

Keiper said she hasn't received the phone bill that would include Pantel's charges for long-distance calls. Typically those rates are higher than those of the Big Three long-distance companies — AT&T, MCI and Sprint.

Under the FCC's current rules, a person whose service has been switched must pay the unauthorized company for long-distance calls, but only at the rate that his or her preferred long-distance company would have charged.

"We left open the question of whether we should go further with regard to consumer liability, and we will certainly look at whatever the attorneys general have to say," said Kathleen Hallman, chief of the FCC's Common Carrier Bureau.

Slamming is the largest source of complaints at the FCC, accounting for more than 700 a month.

The states also want the FCC to require that promotional materials sent to prospective customers be separate from documents that would authorize a change in long-distance service.

FDA approves baboon injection in AIDS research

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has approved an experiment to inject baboon bone marrow cells into an AIDS patient to see whether they help rebuild his immune system.

Researchers are awaiting final safety clearance from a hospital, and expect to perform the experiment in October, said Dr. Steven Deeks of the University of California, San Francisco, who will perform the operation.

HIV, the AIDS virus, destroys the body's immune system so patients can not fight off infections.

Bone marrow contains stem cells that manufacture the body's blood cells, including immune cells. The theory is that baboon stem cells — which do not get infected with HIV — might help repopulate a human's blood with immune cells.

An FDA advisory committee last month warned that the operation probably would kill the recipient and must be carefully controlled to ensure that diseases baboons carry don't spread to humans. But the committee recommended going ahead to prove whether baboons hold a key to fighting AIDS.

A leading candidate for the experiment is Jeff Getty of San Francisco, who made headlines accusing the FDA of delaying the study. Researchers sought FDA approval of the trial in June, and the agency added safety precautions before quietly approving it on Aug. 4.

No time to get to the bank? Try the Bankmobile

URBANA, Md. (AP) — A vehicle stocked with tellers, computers and an ATM machine is giving new meaning to the word bankroll.

The Express Bank, which resembles an oversized Winnebago, is rolling down the highways of central Maryland, stopping at fairs, baseball games and commuter parking lots.

Operated by Farmers and Mechanics National Bank of Frederick, the mobile bank is powered by a generator and has cellular service that provides telephone and computer hookups.

Inside, computers and printers are strapped to tables. Alarms and video security systems make it as secure as a regular branch, bank officials say. It even has a bathroom and a hydraulic lift for the handicapped.

Customers can use an automatic teller machine built into its side, or send their deposit or withdrawal slips through a vacuum tube, just as they would at a drive-through branch.

They also can bank in air-conditioned comfort — services inside the fully carpeted vehicle include check cashing, bill paying, fund transfers, trusts and investments. Bankmobile employees also can process mortgages and handle commercial and personal loans.

Labor Department seeks $5 million in back pay from clothing manufacturers involved in Los Angeles sweatshop probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is seeking $5 million from clothing makers linked to a Los Angeles sweatshop where Thai laborers allegedly were threatened with rape or death if they stopped churning out garments for major retail stores — from Mervyn's to Neiman Marcus.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich today named 14 manufacturers and 18 retailers involved, releasing a who's who list of stores that apparently benefited from the "contract shop," where more than 60 workers toiled up to 22 hours a day in an apartment compound surrounded by razor wire to repay the cost of coming to America.

"It is clear from our investigation that this merchandise found its way on to the racks and shelves of some of this nation's most prominent retailers," Reich said in a statement.

Reich said investigators were "appalled at the sight" of the "slave labor" sweatshop. "Many of us continue to shake our heads in shock and disbelief that this could happen in this country in the 1990s. ... The retail clothing industry is also shocked."

Most of the manufacturers and retailers named by Reich have denied knowledge of the sweatshop, department spokesman Scott Sutherland said.

"Almost all of the manufacturers that we contacted — the ones who didn't say 'call my attorney' — said they understood the problem and 'you won't get a fight out of me,'" Sutherland said.

Many of the illegal immigrants working in the squalid El Monte shop just east of Los Angeles had been employed there for as long as seven years, working day and night for $1.60 an hour. Several workers told federal investigators they weren't allowed to leave the compound even after they repaid the cost of being transported from Thailand.

"The workers were threatened with rape or murder if they tried to flee the compound," the Labor Department said.

Last week, federal agents raided the sweatshop and charged six Thai nationals suspected of running the operation with harboring illegal immigrants. Two others were charged with smuggling immigrants.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The Labor Department plans to ask the manufacturers to "accept responsibility for a share of the $5 million in wages owed to the Thai workers" under a 40-year-old "hot goods" provision in the Fair Labor Standards Act. The manufacturers who got clothing through the sweatshop are liable, but not the retailers, Sutherland said.

"We expect most will voluntarily comply with this request" for back pay, Reich said.

"The significance of these back wages goes beyond this case," he added. "When these contractors stoop to hiring illegal workers held in bondage, they also steal wages from the pockets of working Americans."

The manufacturers named by Reich are: F40 California Inc., Tomato Inc., L.F. Sportswear, Ms. Tops of California, Balmara Inc., New Boys Inc./Voltage Inc., Point Zero, Excuses Sportswear, Paragraff Clothing Co., Bermo Enterprises, A&M Casuals, US Boys, B.U.M. International and Diane Samandi (the "Jonquil" label).

Telephone calls made Monday night by the Associated Press went unanswered, and some manufacturers weren't listed or had disconnected numbers.

The retailers named are: Foley's Petites, Macy's West, Meier & Frank, Robinson's May, Hecht's, Filene's, Kaufman's, Neiman Marcus, Dayton Hudson, Mervyn's, Broadway, Rich's, Speciality Retailers Inc., Montgomery Ward, Sears, Fred Meyer, Venture and Lerner.

Dad Without His Kids Takes No Pleasure in Father's Day

DEAR ABBY: I was so moved, and felt such appreciation for your Father's Day column. I would like to acknowledge what a valuable message it carried. You said:

"A 21-gun salute to the divorced father who has never uttered an unkind word about the mother of his children (at least to the children) and who has always been Johnny-on-the-spot with the support check."

Abby, those words brought tears to my eyes as I sat quietly reflecting on the seventh year I have celebrated Father's Day without my children. It struck me as amazingly sad that in seven years of being there for my children — and always providing child support — I've never received a thank-you. My morale has been worn down over the years by the stereotyping of divorced fathers as "deadbeat dads" — a particularly cruel label.

Abby, if I never get a "thanks," I'll survive. Reading the public thanks in your column for a principle I've upheld not only for the sake of my children, but for the sake of fathers and children everywhere, is a powerful remedy for the sadness I have carried. For any recipient of support out there who has thought of saying "thanks," but never did — I'd bet it wouldn't hurt.

May I offer a sincere "you're welcome" from a loving, supportive dad?

THOMAS MULDER,

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR THOMAS: You may — and thank you for the thank-you. How sad that those unsung heroes — divorced dads who never miss a payment — are all too often unappreciated. It would be so easy to just walk away and not fulfill the responsibilities to their children. Yet you, and many like you, sacrifice to see that your children are fed, clothed and educated. You are to be commended for loving your children enough to be a responsible father.

DEAR ABBY: The letter you printed about not sending gifts in boxes from fancy, high-priced stores reminded me of how my husband surprised me with my engagement ring.

For Valentine's Day he gave me a box of what appeared to be Godiva chocolates. I was so excited! (I adore chocolate.) I opened the box and found a diamond engagement ring nestled among the chocolates!

It was the best surprise I ever had. I still have the box.

D. LANGELL,
GEORGETOWN, MASS.

DEAR D. LANGELL: Carats and chocolates — what a winning combination! Nutritionists may frown on it, but romantics and chocoholics can appreciate your husband's creativity. (Myself included!)

DEAR ABBY: You should have told "Disappointed Dad" (who caught his 17-year-old daughter frolicking semi-nude in the swimming pool with boys) to buy his daughter a convertible. Then she could go around with her "top" down all the time without a hassle!

'Big E' returns to Cowboys training camp

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Big E's back. That was the battle cry at Dallas Cowboys training camp Monday as former All-Pro offensive tackle Erik Williams worked out with the team for the first time since an October car accident. Williams, donning a brace on his right knee, participated in one-on-one blocking drills. He sat out of the more intensive seven-on-seven drills and left practice early, refusing to talk with the media. But he was back, and that's all that mattered to his coaches and teammates. "Thank God," said fellow lineman Nate Newton, who chauffeured Williams onto the field in his golf cart, proclaiming, "The Big E's back! The Big E's back!" "He's our spiritual leader. He's the type of guy that turns up the intensity."

Offensive line coach Hudson Houck said, "It's one of your family members coming back into the fold." The 6-foot-6, 322-pound Williams has been sidelined since Oct. 24, when he tore the ligaments in his right knee in a one-car accident. He underwent reconstructive surgery Oct. 31 and has been working his way back since. His progress has been remarkable. Williams had been projected to return in October. Now coach Barry Switzer is aiming for the Sept. 4 season opener against the New York Giants. Switzer said Williams is likely to see some action in at least one of the Cowboys' two remaining preseason games. "We're going to bring him along slow, but obviously we're going to play him in a preseason game," Switzer said. "We just can't throw him out there in a regular-season game. We've got to see what he can do."

"It's going to be tentative for a while. He's conscious of it (the injury)," Switzer said. "When you're healthy you don't have those problems, you don't think about your wheels. But he's had a wheel that's gone flat on him. He's had to pump it up and play on it now. "With the type injury he had, I think this is amazing he's gotten back this quickly." The return of Williams to the starting lineup will be a relief to the Cowboys, who have been concerned about the depth and ability of its current line. Unsure of guard Ron Stone's talents, the Cowboys two weeks ago signed an over-weight Derek Kennard, who announced his retirement after one practice, citing pain in his hip. When Williams comes back, Stone moves to backup and Larry Allen, who has been filling in for Williams at right tackle, shifts back to his natural right guard position.

Houck said Williams' return date will depend more on his head than his knee. "It's a strong knee. I think it's just a matter of overcoming the psychological part of having people falling on him, having people around his feet," Houck said. Williams also must overcome his off-the-field troubles. In December, he was sentenced to two years' probation on a misdemeanor drunken-driving charge in connection with the October accident. And in June, a Collin County grand jury cleared Williams of sexual assault charges brought by a 17-year-old former topless dancer. Before the accident, Williams was considered the best at his position. Houck says he will be again. "Erik will be a better football player sometime through this year than he ever was before," Houck said. "At one time he was the best, and he'll be back to that very soon."

Lefors, Miami to meet in preseason scrimmage

LEFORS — Six-man teams Lefors and Miami will have a preseason tuneup at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 25 at Lefors. The scrimmage between the two schools precedes the season opener on Sept. 8 when Miami hosts Follett and Lefors welcomes Silverton. Miami and Lefors meet in District I play Nov. 3 at Miami. Lefors could improve on its 7-3 record of a year ago or at least equal it with the return of two starters on offense and three on defense. Tommy Green returns at running back and Keith Franks at quarterback. Both Green and Franks, along with Craig Gifford, are back as defensive starters. "We've got 15 players out and some pretty good experience back," said Lefors coach Ronny Miller. "We've got some others back who saw some playing time last year, so that's going to help us." At Miami, coach Sam Browning returns three starters from a 5-4 team. The Warriors attack will be built around quarterback Steven Browning, end Jared Neighbors and running back Jammy Murray. "We're going to be rebuilding. We've got 16 out and that's about what we thought we would have," Browning said. Area football schedules

Browns blast Bears

By CHUCK MELVIN AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie Eric Zeier is playing it cool, saying all the right things, refusing to ruffle any feathers. He's not about to suggest that he's after Vinny Testaverde's job. "Vinny is the No. 1 guy here. He has absolutely earned that spot," Zeier said Monday night after he directed a 35-point first half that vaulted the Cleveland Browns past the Chicago Bears 55-13. In two games — one against the New York Giants' scrubs in the fourth quarter a week ago, and one against the Bears' first team — Zeier has gone 22-for-27 for 277 yards and two touchdowns, without an interception. He also scrambled for a 7-yard score Monday night, diving acrobatically for the right pylon to complete the run. He completed the last 13 passes he attempted, going 14-for-16 for 158 yards in his first start in place of the ailing Testaverde. Testaverde was to be discharged from the hospital today after undergoing treatment for an infection in his leg. "I think Eric did a nice job," coach Bill Belichick said. "He played behind the line, and the way we were running the ball, it didn't really take much." Belichick emphasized that Testaverde remains the starter, and the coach wouldn't be drawn into a discussion of whether Zeier was ahead of free-agent pickup Jim McMahon for the No. 2 job. McMahon has only been in camp for a week and did not play. "I don't make those decisions," Zeier said. "I still think I have a long way to go and I still have a lot of things to do. My goal here is to get better every time I step on the field."

Cleveland's time," coach Dave Wannstedt said. "There wasn't really any one area that we showed any progress in, and that is very disappointing to me. The only reason for mistakes like six turnovers and all those penalties is simply a lack of concentration. We weren't into it tonight." Neither Walsh nor Erik Kramer looked sharp in the contest for the Bears' starting job, although Kramer had the statistical edge. He was 6-for-10 for 80 yards with one touchdown and one interception, to Walsh's 4-for-13 for 54 yards with one touchdown and two interceptions. "It was up and down," Kramer said. "I had one bad decision on the interception. We struggled as a team. We know we're capable of playing much better." Rashaan Salaam, the Bears' first-round pick, gained 60 yards on his first 14 carries of the preseason, all in the second half. "Hopefully I can do some things I did tonight against a first-team defense instead of a third team," he said. "The defense (in the NFL) is a lot faster, and the holes close up a lot, lot quicker. You don't have much time to dance around in the backfield. You've got to hit it and go." Cowboys All-Pro offensive tackle Erik Williams, feared lost for half a season, worked out Monday for the first time since an October car accident. The 6-foot-6, 322-pound lineman, with a brace on his right knee, participated in 1-on-1 passing drills. He sat out of the more intensive 7-on-7 drills and left practice early. "Thank God," said fellow lineman Nate Newton, who chauffeured Williams onto the field in a golf cart, proclaiming, "The Big E's back! The Big E's back!" Dallas coach Barry Switzer said Williams is likely to see action in at least one of the two remaining exhibition games. Redskins Former Colorado receiver Michael Westbrook, selected fourth overall in the April draft, arrived in Washington late Monday to end his 26-day hold-out. Westbrook's agent, Steve Zucker, said the deal was almost done after a weekend of negotiations with Washington general manager Charley Casserly. "We're just working on a few things now," Zucker said. "If all goes well, I think we'll have something to say (Tuesday)." Westbrook and Florida State defensive end Derrick Alexander, are the only unsigned first-round picks. Alexander was selected 11th by Minnesota. "I apologize for wasting

Odd couple make double trouble in Dodge

DODGE CITY, Kan. — They could be characterized as one of rodeo's oddest team roping tandems and one of them is gunning for a Texas Panhandle roping. Doyle Gellerman of Nampa, Idaho, is 43 years old. His partner Britt Bockius of Claremore, Okla., is 21, and named his horse "Snoop" not after the Charles Schultz cartoon, but after the recently jailed rap star Snoop Doggy Dog. When Gellerman won his world title (with Walt Woodard in 1981), 16.7 seconds - eight-tenths of a second faster than the runner-up team of Denton Payne and Brent Lockett. Gellerman and Bockius have each earned $43,260 this year. Bockius is ranked first in the Crown Royal world team roping heeling standings. Gellerman trails leader Steve Purcella of Hereford in the heading standings by $3,329. "I can't help but feel good about where we're sitting right now," Gellerman said. "We're just there in that top group. Everybody's been winning, so if we can just stay right with them it's (the world championship) going to come down to the last 10 steers of the year." Those steers will be running at the National Finals Rodeo, professional rodeo's world championship event. The best rodeo athletes in the world will compete for world championships and about $3 million in prize money this December in Las Vegas. Other winners at the Dodge City Roundup were Jeffrey

Mantle's funeral is today

By STEFANI G. KOPENEC Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Teammates who last week said their good-byes to Mickey Mantle are back to carry his casket.

Mantle's survivors — his wife,

Merlyn, and three of his four sons — want privacy, but yielded to Mantle's popularity and arranged a public funeral today. Thousands were expected at Lovers Lane United Methodist Church, where he supported a program for runaways and homeless youth.

"They know that Mickey was a shared personality," said Mantle's longtime friend and attorney, Roy True of Dallas.

Former New York Yankees Whitey Ford, Bill "Moose" Skowron, Hank Bauer, Bobby Murcer, Yogi Berra and Johnny Blanchard were pallbearers for the hard-hitting center fielder who died Sunday of liver cancer at age 63.

Blanchard, Ford, Skowron and Bauer all visited Mantle in the hospital last week.

Called upon to officiate at the funeral was Bobby Richardson, another Yankees teammate and now a lay minister whose counsel helped ease Mantle's final hours.

Two other well-known personalities were part of the funeral: NBC broadcaster Bob Costas planned to deliver the eulogy and country singer Roy Clark was to sing, "Yesterday When I Was Young."

The family scheduled a private wake during the morning, to be followed by the 2 p.m. CDT public service.

True said Mantle would be laid to rest in a crypt at Sparkman-Hillcrest Funeral Home, near his son Billy, who suffered a heart attack and died last year at the age of 36.

The Mantles hoped the public service wouldn't turn into a spectacle "because Mickey never did like those kinds of things," True said.

American League president Gene Budig, former league president Bobby Brown and Donald Marr, president of the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., confirmed Monday that they would attend the funeral.

The sanctuary at the church seats 1,500, but church spokeswoman Gayle Baxley said two other areas were set up with a video feed to handle the overflow of mourners.

A special area was roped off in the sanctuary for Yankees teammates and other ballplayers and dignitaries.

Mantle, who received a liver transplant June 8, died at Baylor University Medical Center in his sleep with his wife and son, David, at his side. He is also survived by sons Mickey Jr. and Danny.

Hall of famer Mickey Mantle, at age 19, swings a bat in this 1951 picture. He died Sunday of liver cancer at age 63.

Governor Bush says he may be active nationally in supporting Mexico

AUSTIN (AP) — Mexico has an ally in Gov. George W. Bush. Bush said he would involve himself in the high-profile fray of national political campaigning to "speak out strongly" against any presidential candidate who bashes Mexico.

"I will speak out strongly at the convention and any chance I get if the Republican Party chooses to bash Mexico. I will use the bully pulpit of the second largest state in the United States to defend what is right," said Bush, a Republican.

"It is easy for some to pick on our friends to the south, to use their campaign platforms and pick out a group of people and campaign against them," he said.

Bush, who has said he would avoid high-profile national politics to concentrate on Texas, said at a news conference Monday that political and trade relations with Mexico are vital to Texas' future. While Bush said his comments were "just a warning signal" in anticipation of tactics that could come up in the 1996 presidential campaign, he later spoke out strongly against what he called "the isolationist policies" of Republican presidential candidate Pat Buchanan.

Bush has said he supports the candidacy of Texas Sen. Phil Gramm.

Buchanan was one of 10 GOP candidates who spoke in Dallas last weekend to a conference of about 3,000 members of United We Stand America, the political organization started by Dallas billionaire Ross Perot.

The crowd seemed receptive to Buchanan's attacks on the North American Free Trade Agreement, illegal immigration, affirmative action and Washington insiders.

"When I get to the White House, NAFTA will be canceled, and there will be no more $50 billion bailouts associated with it anywhere in the world, or subsidies," Buchanan said Saturday.

He also endorsed the building of a security fence along sections of the border to halt illegal immigration.

Bush said he thought such heavy-handed tactics were misguided.

"I think it's a huge mistake to try to put up a wall between Texas and Mexico. I think it's shortsighted public policy," he said.

He said most Mexicans cross the border to work to support their families and to escape the low wages of their country. He added that the United States needed to work to end the disparity in wages between the countries by encouraging Mexico to develop a middle class.

"The way to encourage Mexico to develop a middle class is to be a strong ally and partner with Mexico, sharing capital and capitalism across our border," he said.

Buchanan framed his response Monday not in terms of trade but of defense.

"I have a great deal of admiration and respect for the governor, but I think he is mistaken here," Buchanan said.

"The defense and protection of America's southern border is the duty of the federal, not the state, government. It is a duty that is written into the constitution itself, to defend the states against foreign invasion," he said.

"And when more than a million illegal aliens are apprehended now every year crossing our border, the United States is undergoing an invasion," he said.

Perot says he doesn't want 'hitch in hell' but may run again in presidential races

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot dangled the prospect of another presidential run this weekend as he demanded Congress act quickly on budget and political reforms, but offered supporters little guidance as they waged a spirited debate over how to best use their ballot clout.

Closing his three-day United We Stand America conference on Sunday, Perot referred to the presidency as a "hitch in hell" because of constant political attacks and said he had little zeal for another independent campaign. But he would not rule out a 1996 bid, and suggested he might have no choice if Washington ignored the wishes of his loyalists.

In a closing pep talk, Perot told his supporters he "would be nothing without you." But his speech was silent on the debate raging within their ranks: how Perot personally and the United We Stand organization could have the greatest influence on Congress, the 1996 election cycle and the growing independent political movement.

In the short term, Perot said his organization would demand fast congressional action on an array of priorities, from tough campaign finance and lobbying restrictions to term limits and the balanced budget amendment. "No more gifts, no more cash, no more junkets, no more meals — no more nothing," Perot said to cheers.

Looking down the road, he said conference participants wanted Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security made more efficient, a simpler tax system and a law requiring voters to approve proposed federal tax hikes.

"There is a consensus that we have to do this," Perot said. "Now we have to have the courage and the will to do this."

Deeply skeptical of the promises made by Democratic and Republican leaders in two marathon days of speechmaking here, some Perot loyalists made the case during a day of workshops that he was the only hope if Washington is to clean up its politics and put the country's fiscal house in order.

H. Ross Perot dangles the prospect of another run for the president at the conclusion of his United We Stand America conference in Dallas over the weekend.

"Ross Perot is still the only one that I feel that I trust to bring the good people of both parties together and do what is good for America," said Barbara Foster, a Connecticut homemaker.

Others, however, believe United We Stand's power — and Perot's influence — are greater if he does not run.

"I just think it makes sense for us to be a swing group that has the power to scare both parties, so that they get things done," said Deborah Lehmann, a hardware store owner and United We Stand activist in southern California.

Perot said anew Sunday that he favored this course.

Appearing on NBC's Meet the Press, Perot said being president was his "worst nightmare" but that if he ruled out a 1996 run this early, "the odds we will get these reforms are zero." To guarantee he will stay on the sidelines, Perot said of the two major parties, "They've got to stand, deliver, and do these things."

In a brief interview, Perot said he had no timetable for deciding. "There is no urgency," he said.

Russ Verney, the national United We Stand executive director, said a decision on an independent run could wait until late spring 1996. If Perot wanted to run as the candidate of a new national party, he would have to act sooner because of ballot deadlines. But Perot said he has no interest in that approach.

There was, however, considerable interest among the Perot loyalists in launching third parties in their states.

Tom Blomquist, a leader in the infant New Jersey Conservative Party, said Perot supporters from 12 additional states had pledged to form third parties. For now, these efforts will proceed independently and focus on state races, "but if we are successful in a good number, then we can meet and figure out how to convert it into a national party."

Speaking for many of the those at the Dallas meeting, Blomquist said he wasn't swayed by the bipartisan parade of congressional leaders. "There are the people who screwed up the second half of the 20th century," he said. "Why would we trust them to lead us into the 21st?"

The conference did not draw as many United We Stand members as Perot had hoped, perhaps 3,500 at its peak instead of the 8,500 anticipated. But most of those who did come sat intently through 12-hour days of presentations from the party leaders and policy experts, and called the conference a huge success they hoped to repeat.

ACS to have Life After Loss Seminar series

AMARILLO — The American Cancer Society will hold a Life After Loss Seminar during September at the American Cancer Society office in Amarillo. Sessions will be held on consecutive Monday evenings, Sept. 5, 12, 19 and 26 from 5:30-6:30 p.m.

The American Cancer Society offers this seminar and support group, without charge, to anyone who has experienced the death of a loved one within the past two years, regardless of the cause of the loved one's death.

Dealing with the death of a loved one is one of life's most difficult and stressful experiences, ACS officials say. Often people feel lonely and confused because friends and family expect them to be over the death, yet their grieving continues. People may feel angry, guilty, or depressed.

Many people find it helps to meet with others who understand. That includes others who are dealing with the death of a loved one, and professional counselors experienced in helping people work through their grief.

In the safe and supportive atmosphere of a small group, Life

After Loss offers the opportunity to talk about experiences and hear from others in similar circumstances, ACS officials say. Participants can begin to understand the grief process, their emotions, and how to deal with them. They can get ideas that may help them day-to-day, week-to-week, and long term.

The American Cancer Society offers Life After Loss as a community service, at no charge to participants. For more information and to register for this program, contact the American Cancer Society at (806) 353-4306.
