Gramm introduces property rights bill

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

The state director for the state's senior senator spoke to a light turnout Tuesday afternoon concerning a property rights bill winding its way through the august legislative body.

Ed Hodges, state director for Sen. Phil Gramm, spoke Tuesday afternoon to a half dozen people who turned out at the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building to hear about Gramm's proposed Omnibus Property Rights Act of 1995.

The key point of the Senate bill, Hodges said, is the proposed compensation for taking, using or limiting the use of private property by the federal government.

"Over the last 20 years," Hodges said, "the federal government has taken property away without due and just compensation." The bill is particularly important now, Hodges said, because of the recent Sweet Home ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court which indicated Congress needed to take action to more closely delineate what the federal government can and cannot do with private property.

There are 63,000 pages of federal regulations limiting the use of private property, Hodges said, but not one page dealing with just compensation.

Among other things, Gramm's bill would require an economic analysis and appraisal before the government could limit the use of private property, Hodges said. Federal law now prohibits using economic considerations in determining practices involving private property usage.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, chaired by Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), will begin public hearings on the bill next week in Washington. The committee held its first field hearing July 3 in Hatch's home state of Utah. Eighty-six percent of Utah is owned or controlled by the federal government, Hodges said. Only about two percent of the state of Texas is considered public lands.

Hodges said he thinks the bill will come out of committee just before Labor Day and will be taken up by the full Senate immediately after the September holiday.

A similar bill has already passed the House of Representatives.

Objections to the bill, according to Hodges, include concerns about zoning practices, land usage and adding to the nation's deficit.

Opponents of the bill, Hodges said, indicate they are concerned about the possibility of paying polluters not to pollute. The hypothetical case most often cited would be a waste disposal company that could ask for compensation not to put toxic waste at a disposal site.

There is also a question of the land usage and whether the use is reasonable or a nuisance. Under Gramm's bill, the government would not be required to pay the property owner when the property is a nuisance, Hodges said.

Of the third objection, adding to the national deficit because of costs involved in paying private property owners for limitations on their property, Hodges said that the compensation would come out of the funding of the agency making the determination instead of the general fund, as is the case now.

"The agency is not being held accountable for its actions," Hodges said. "This brings cost-benefit analysis into the federal government."

AMT presents new contract option to county commission

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

American Medical Transport officials Tuesday presented a new contract option to county commissioners, an option they say will save the county money though individual rates will increase.

The option is the same as the one AMT officials presented to the city commission last week. The county and city are in a joint contract with the emergency medical service, each paying AMT a monthly subsidy.

AMT's Emergency Management Services Supervisor Carla Adams told county commissioners that the new contract option involves a floating subsidy scale based on call volume and revenue.

If the monthly billable revenue is less than $51,999, the subsidy would be $4,150, the highest possible under the plan. Currently, the subsidy is $4,360.

However, if the monthly billable revenue exceeds $52,000, the subsidy would lower as much as $400, down to $3,750 if the revenues go up to $55,000.

AMT has an enhanced billing system, Adams says, meaning less in expenditures and more in collection. That system allows for lower subsidies.

Another reason AMT can offer a lower subsidy agreement to both the city and county is a proposed rate increase.

"The Medicare profile has increased ... [and] we haven't kept pace with it," said Lon Robertson, AMT area manager.

Medicare allowable rates have risen, said Robertson and Adams, meaning that the system pays more on ambulance runs.

Robertson said that this would mean that AMT clients would have "less out of pocket" expenses even with the proposed rate increase.

Adams, who also works as the EMS director in Borger, says her contract with Hutchinson County is on the floating subsidy system.

Since 1992, rates for a mobile intensive care unit run and an advanced life support run have been $225. An additional $31 is tacked on if the run is an emergency, as well as another $31 if it is a night run. Also added on is $6 per mile while a patient is aboard the ambulance.

AMT officials presented commissioners with a contract option that raises MICU and ALS run prices to $238. Emergency rate and night run rate go up to $35, and the loaded mileage rate would rise to $6.25.

MICU runs are staffed by paramedics and offer intravenous units, cardiac treatment and other advanced capabilities. ALS runs are similar, but lack the cardiac care equipment.

County commissioners can also decide to adopt a similar contract as the one adopted in 1990. AMT officials told city commissioners last week that if the same contract is adopted, new rates can still be expected in about one year.

County commissioners agreed to have some idea of which contract option to accept by their first September meeting. The current contract expires Sept. 30.

Adams and Commissioner Jim Greene acknowledged that the county's adoption of either contract proposal hinges on city agreement.

Robertson, who worked in Pampa when the first contract was drawn up, suggested a committee with an AMT official, County Judge Richard Peet and City Manager Bob Eskridge.

Peet says he will meet with Eskridge to "hash this out even more deeply" by the commissioners' next meeting on Aug. 15.

Heavy rains turn deadly, young boy drowns in flood waters

Heavy rains turned deadly today as a three-year-old boy drowned today in flood waters near Chillicothe.

Authorities said today that apparently a family's car became trapped by flood waters one to three miles east of Chillicothe on U.S. 287 about 2 a.m. today. As the parents tried to rescue their children from the car, the boy was placed on the hood of the vehicle and swept away by the water.

Department of Public Safety officers in Childress said that divers were at the scene and a helicopter had been requested to help in the search at dawn today.

Hardeman County Sheriff's officers said the body was recovered about 8 a.m. today.

The southeastern Texas Panhandle and southwestern Oklahoma sustained heavy rains overnight. Rain is expected to continue today in the eastern panhandle while clearing is forecast for the central and western panhandle.

Lynn Ferrell, left, and Linda Starnes look over crime prevention literature available at a neighborhood party Tuesday observing the 12th annual National Night Out. The night, when neighbors are asked to spend the evening outside to get to know each other, is designed to heighten crime and drug prevention awareness and generate support and participation in local anti-crime efforts.

Neighborhood block parties send out anti-crime message

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

Three neighborhood block parties, the only ones of their type in the Panhandle, celebrated the 12th annual observance of National Night Out Tuesday, by getting neighbors together to learn about crime prevention and strengthen neighborhood ties.

Meeting at 2007 Williston, 908 S. Osborne and 2223 Chestnut, neighbors listened to Cpl. Donny Brown talk about crime prevention using the Protect Our Property program developed by the Texas Action Council on Thefts, Pampa Police Academy and the proposed Citizens on Patrol program.

"The best alarm system is a nosy neighbor," said Brown.

About 20 people gathered at the Osborne Street home of Beverly and Melvin Clark to learn about neighborhood block watch and crime prevention. While the Clarks' block is organized, some area residents came to learn more about the program.

"If we see somebody, what do we do?" asked Kenneth Banks, 739 E. Albert, who reported having lost $3,000 to $4,000 worth of tools in the last several years.

"Call us," replied Brown. "We'd rather go out on nothing than something."

Brown said to report suspicious activity, dial 669-5700.

Mrs. Clark, mother and grandmother of the Busby family killed New Year's Eve, 1993, told the group she attended the Pampa Police Academy to learn more about her children's case.

"Til my children were killed, I never would have dreamed of inviting you to a neighborhood party," she said.

Another attendee, C.R. Atchley commented, "Responsible people are gonna watch the neighbors anyway. That class of people, they won't."

On Chestnut, about 40 neighbors turned out for an multi-flavor ice cream party.

"We have never really had a lot of crime, but all the neighbors watch out ... on the whole we've been pretty fortunate," said block watch captain Linda Starnes.

Her block has gathered for at least five Neighborhood Watch parties over the years, she said.

"I think everybody cares about their neighbors," Starnes, who once served as a city wide coordinator for Neighborhood Watch, explained.

National Night Out is designed to heighten crime and drug prevention awareness, generate support and participation in local anti-crime efforts, strengthen neighborhood spirit and police/community relations and send an anti-crime message to criminals, according to information from Pampa Police Department.

Pampa was the only Panhandle city participating in the project.

"It's been a nice, steady rain," she said.

Venita Roland at Lake McClellan said today that they received about an inch of rain Tuesday and more than another half inch overnight.

"It's raining," she said about 10 a.m. today. "It's been raining pretty good."

She said the lake was up slightly, but McClellan Creek, which feeds the reservoir, had not started running yet.

"It usually takes about 24 hours," she said.

Commissioners OK variety of items

Gray County commissioners disposed of routine business Tuesday in the following actions:

- Authorized establishment of a $250 postage fund for the District Clerk's office.

- Approved reinstatement of longevity and vacation for Jeanine Augustine, who resigned from the Tax Assessor/Collector's Office for health reasons on March 1 and returned May 8. Employment and seniority issues will be addressed in the proposed policy manual, said County Judge Richard Peet.

- Authorized Gray County Sheriff's Office to buy a 1988 GMC Safari for use by Lt. Jesse Wallace for investigations. The van is priced at $4,900 and the money is in the budget, said Sheriff Randy Stubblefield.

- Authorized the Sheriff's Office to open a checking account for prisoners' money.

"The temptation is too great, not that we don't trust our employees but we don't want to put our employees in a position of having to defend themselves," said Chief Deputy Charlie Morris.

- County commissioners voted to buy an air conditioner for the White Deer Land Museum for $977. The unit is unusable by the museum, and commissioners plan to keep it in storage until it is needed.

- They asked Commissioner Jim Greene to do a cost-analysis of 12 tables and 100 chairs and gave him permission to accept the best deal. The tables and chairs would be stored at the annex. Furniture currently stored there is routinely moved back and forth to the bull barn, and Greene suggested buying new ones to cut down on the wear and tear caused by the moves.

- County Attorney Todd Alvey told commissioners that most of their concerns with state-mandated local fireworks policies had been corrected in the last legislative session. Alvey said that the county is now able to use a location designated by city officials as a public fireworks arena. Greene will discuss the policy with the city and try to set a place for next year's holiday.

- The commission gave its permission to museum curator Anne Davidson to dispose of surplus museum items, including material not fit for display.

- Susan Winborne, a member of the Celebration of Lights committee, reported to the commissioners on the organization's request that the county pay to string lights on the court house. The city will pay for the decoration of City Hall and the fire department, and Winborne suggested that commissioners cooperate with city officials and buy lights in bulk. Commissioners agreed to spend up to $1,000 for the project.

- They also agreed to renew a contract with the state attorney general's office for collection of child support from "deadbeat" parents, agreed to a request from the city for the sale of delinquent tax property at 540 Elm for $100 and agreed to pay $11,700 to the contractor of the Holland Wing addition at the White Deer Land Museum.

- Judge Richard Peet explained to the commissioners Hoechst Celanese's request to close off the Mills, Holloman and Original Kingsmill subdivisions.

He said that he would contact the company's attorney to determine who should pay the cost of publishing public notices, as well as determining the exact locations the company wants to close off.

The area includes the old Cabot Camp and Kingsmill locations.

County considers reappraisals after tornado

County commissioners are pushing ahead for a reappraisal of property destroyed or damaged by the June 8 tornado, despite claims from Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley that it wouldn't have a tremendous impact.

"I know a few people that this would make a whole heck of a lot of difference for," Commissioner Jim Greene said at Tuesday's special meeting of the commissioners' court.

A reappraisal of the area must be requested the taxing entities, in this case the county, the city and/or the school district.

Whichever entity requests a reappraisal must absorb the costs for the service, estimated to be between $3,500 and $5,000.

If all three request the service, the cost is pro-rated between the entities, so that, for example, county coffers fund the reappraisal of county taxable property.

County constituents have asked commissioners to seek a reappraisal as a tax relief on property severely damaged or destroyed in the June storm.

Those people whose property was destroyed in the tornado are still paying taxes based on the appraised value of the property as of Jan. 1, even if the property is now nothing more than an empty lot where a house once stood.

School district and city officials haven't made a request for a reappraisal, County Judge Richard Peet told the commissioners.

Commissioner Joe Wheeley made a motion to take no action at that meeting on the request until Peet can ask the city and school district to join in on a request.

The motion was altered to give Peet the authority to request the reappraisal if the other two entities agree to join in.

Greene said that if those entities don't agree to the request, the commission will then discuss the possibility of making the request alone.

Clinton pledges to veto arms embargo bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Locked in a foreign policy showdown with Congress, President Clinton is pledging to veto a bill lifting the Bosnian arms embargo, but he must scramble to find enough votes to make it stick.

In a harsh rejection of the president's Yugoslavia policy, the House voted Tuesday, 298-128, to lift the arms embargo so the Muslim-led government can better defend itself. The Senate last week approved the bill, 69-29.

Both margins were large enough to override a Clinton veto, but the White House claimed Clinton was chipping away at the margin. Officials identified several bill supporters who were likely to sustain a veto when it comes.

"What we'll be doing is to set up the best possible defense of the president's veto," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said.

Clinton's main veto argument: Lifting the embargo would prompt allies to withdraw their U.N. soldiers with help from the United States, putting 25,000 American ground troops in the line of fire.

Cattle trade shows active sales in Panhandle

Almost 50,000 head of cattle were confirmed sold as of 11 a.m. today, according to the USDA Market News Service.

Trade was active in the Panhandle area today, the news service reported, with 48,100 head confirmed sold. Slaughter steers and heifers were a dollar higher. Feedlots reported good inquiry from buyers.

Sales were reported on 36,300 slaughter steers and 11,800 heifers. That brings to 92,100 head confirmed for the week which includes 8,300 head of formulated cattle and 300 head of previously contracted cattle.

Slaughter steers, Select and Choice 2-3, 1100 to 1200 pounds were 64.00. Select and few Choice 2-3, 1000 to 1100 pounds, were 63.00 to 63.50. Pen Select and Choice 1-3, 1200 pound Holsteins were 58.00.

'Lord of the skies' new king of Mexican drug trafficking

MEXICO CITY (AP) — With one major drug trafficker contemplating surrender and others on the run, the man known as "Lord of the Skies" has quickly become Mexico's top cocaine smuggler, experts say.

Since taking over the leadership of the Juarez cartel in 1993, Amado Carrillo has built a sophisticated and efficient drug-smuggling empire resembling Colombia's Cali cartel, the world's largest narcotics operation.

"We look at Amado as No. 1," said a U.S. official, on condition he not be identified further. "He moves multiple tons of cocaine a month, perhaps four times as much as anyone else."

Peter Lupsha, an expert in Mexican drug trafficking from the University of New Mexico, said in a recent academic article that Carrillo's organization had become the primary competitor of the Gulf cartel and predicted a potential "bloody conflict" between the two.

For the United States, Carrillo's success and his close partnership with the Cali cartel could mean a more efficient organization of the forces responsible for importing cocaine into the country, the U.S. official said.

Authorities estimate about 70 percent of all cocaine entering the United States comes through Mexico.

Dubbed the "Lord of the Skies" by the Mexican press, Carrillo is believed responsible for introducing the use of modified passenger jets to transport tons of cocaine into Mexico from Colombia.

Authorities also note a sophistication in Carrillo's organization, which is based in Guadalajara and Ciudad Juarez. They attribute the expertise to his strong relationship with one of the Cali cartel's most powerful leaders, Miguel Rodriguez Orejuela. The Cali cartel is noted for its cool, professional way of doing business.

Carrillo has risen rapidly in the multibillion dollar drug business since assuming leadership of the Juarez cartel in April 1993 when the former leader, flamboyant one-time Mexican drug agent Rafael Aguilar Guajardo, was gunned down in Cancun.

Now 39, Carrillo had the advantage of growing up in the business. His uncle is smuggler Ernesto Fonseca Carrillo, who was jailed in the 1985 slaying of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena.

He also had the advantage of taking power when his rivals were beginning their slide.

Shortly after Carrillo took power, arrest warrants were issued for Tijuana drug lords Ramon and Benjamin Arellano Felix for their alleged role in the slaying of a Roman Catholic cardinal. Later, the FBI placed Juan Garcia Abrego, leader of the Gulf cartel, on its "10 Most Wanted" list.

Genesis House honors Hupp for service

"I can speak for myself that we are going to miss you a tremendous amount," Sharon Braddock, director of Genesis House, told Ray Hupp, a retiring Genesis House board member.

"Thirteen years is a long commitment," said Braddock about Hupp's service to Genesis House. "I served on various boards and I think it provides an extremely worthwhile service," said Hupp, a 13-year board member.

Hupp is retiring to allow others on the board who want to serve.

"You need new blood on any board," he said. Hupp first got involved with Genesis House after he was asked to become a board member.

During his tenor, the Genesis House acquired new girls' and boys' homes and a recreation center. Hupp served as president of the board from 1991-95.

He feels the Genesis House is an asset in helping young people learn to become productive, positive adults in society.

"It turned around the lives of hundreds and hundreds of kids," said Hupp about Genesis House. "The tough-love philosophy has produced an outstanding success rate."

"From what I understand from other board members, he's been very instrumental in getting a lot of the things accomplished that they set out to do like the new homes," Braddock said. "I think we are going to feel a tremendous loss."

Even though he plans to retire from the board, he expects remain active with Genesis House in other ways.

API announces scholarship recipients

The Panhandle Chapter of the Mid Continent Division of the American Petroleum Institute awarded $10,400 in college tuition grants to 13 Panhandle area students. The students, relatives of active API members, are awarded the scholarships on the basis of need and academic achievement.

Scholarship recipients are Lucretia Lindsey, Robert Chad Hogan, Brandon Wood, Cade Phillips, Nathan Yowell, Tamara Dreher and Jeremy Ferrell, all of Pampa; Cody Pittman, Amy Carr and Amy Hunt from Canadian; Jimmie Don Stanton of White Deer; and Jodi Lea Lunsford and Misty Barton of Miami.

To receive the scholarship awards, the recipients must enter college in the fall semester as a full time student and remain in good standing throughout the school year. Since 1990, the Panhandle Chapter has awarded approximately $75,000 in tuition grants.

Proceeds from an annual golf tournament at Pampa Country Club are used for the scholarships.

API is a nonprofit organization and consists of professionals engaged in all aspects of exploration, production and marketing of oil and gas. The Panhandle Chapter maintains Railroad Commission records for public use on the second floor of the Pampa Community Building.

These records date from the early years of exploration and production in the Panhandle.

The organization has over 400 members from throughout the Panhandle. Monthly membership meetings are held in Pampa and include dinner and presentations on industry related topics and current affairs. Membership is open to anyone involved in any aspect of the oil and gas industry. A shrimp boil and membership drive are set for September.

State education report results in good news and bad news

DALLAS (AP) — The latest results from the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills had some good news and bad news about the state's public schools systems.

Texas has more low-performing campuses than last year and more that are doing better, according to the annual TAAS rankings system, which was toughened in the past year.

A report sent Tuesday to state education officials and key legislators showed that 38 school districts and 265 campuses across the state have been rated low-performing because of high dropout rates or poor scores on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills.

A year ago, three districts and 54 campuses received the lowest ranking that can be given under the state's accountability ratings for public schools.

However, 245 schools earned "exemplary" status, the highest available. Another 982 were ranked as "recognized," the next-highest, and 4,246 were rated "acceptable." Ratings were pending or delayed for 398 schools, and 93 were not rated because their student bodies were below testing age.

Last year, there were 67 exemplary and 516 recognized schools in the state, as well as six exemplary and 54 recognized districts.

Among the state's 1,045 school districts, 14 were rated exemplary this year and 137 were recognized. Last year, there were six exemplary and 54 recognized districts.

Houston cashes in on California's loss

HOUSTON (AP) — The Greater Houston Convention and Visitors Bureau is hoping to cash in on minority conventions worth millions of dollars that have canceled or could cancel bookings in California.

Minority organizations have said they will cancel meetings to protest California Gov. Pete Wilson's executive order to abolish all state affirmative action programs.

But California's loss may be Houston's gain.

Houston, along with Seattle, is vying for the 1996 convention of the National Urban League, one of the country's most influential black civil rights groups. Its 1996 national convention was to be held in Los Angeles.

Dennis Edwards, the associate director of sales for the Houston Convention and Visitors Bureau, said the group is expected to bring between 15,000 and 20,000 delegates.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Token release means nothing

As with the communist regime of Vietnam, the socialist-military junta of Burma needs money. So the junta wants to tap the taxpayers of the United States and other developed countries. But as with Vietnam's regime, there's a problem: The Burmese junta has splattered all over it the blood of its own massacred and oppressed citizens. Nor is it making any significant progress toward reform.

Recently, the junta released from house arrest Aung San Suu Kyi, who was elected president of Burma in 1990 and won the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize. No one should mistake it for much more than a single step forward. Her release is part of an expensive and well orchestrated publicity campaign the junta is conducting in America.

In her 1991 book, Freedom from Fear, Aung San Suu Kyi announced the conditions for peace in Burma: "That the one-party system should be dismantled... that a multi-party system of government should be established... The people want freedom."

Insisted Frank Thuang Oo, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Federation of Human Rights and Democracy in Burma: "This release is not good enough. As believers in democracy, we never trust this military dictatorship. They can take anybody into jail without due process of law."

Announced U Hla Schwe, the federation's general secretary: "Nothing has changed in Burma. The illegal military government, the news media and the suppression of freedom of thought, religion and expression - as well as cruel, inhuman, degrading treatment and punishment or torture - remain as before. The people of Burma remain uninformed about the heartening political changes taking place around the world."

In 1988, the junta massacred thousands of people demonstrating peacefully in Rangoon. Because America and Britain helped Burmese drive out the Japanese occupation army in 1945, Burmese always have loved America. In 1988, the demonstrators waved the Stars and Stripes and looked to the United States as a model of freedom.

The junta itself dates to 1962, when Gen. Ne Win seized power in a coup against a democratic government. Although officially "retired," Ne Win today rules behind the scenes (much the way Deng Xiaoping does in Communist China). The junta goes by the ominous title of the State Law and Order Restoration Council. SLORC is made up of Gen. Kyaw Win, Maj. Gen. Hla Maung.

Ne Win now is 86. After his much anticipated death, a power struggle probably will begin among the three generals of the junta. That could be a time for reform - a time of turning away from Ne Win's no win policies.

As things now stand, the United States conducts partial relations with Burma. The junta's ambassador is in Washington, but no U.S. ambassador is in Rangoon. Despite the release of Aung San Suu Kyi, the U.S. government should not normalize relations with Burma.

Berry's World

"That's the third time. Do you have BUNS OF STEEL?"

Morality could be contagious

For months, the Dallas County Commissioners Court has taken a drubbing on television and in the public prints. Oh, those awful men - mistreating drug users and, as we nowadays say, the "sexually active."

The commissioners have stopped letting health workers distribute condoms and needle-sterilization kits for drug users. Outside volunteers may distribute donated condoms "in a clinical setting." That's as far as it goes. The commissioners also have banned "disgusting and vile" materials used supposedly to educate the clients of these programs.

All of which seems to equate, in the critics' minds, with blue nosed Puritanism and yahoo stupidity. Last spring, some local doctors unsuccessfully lobbied the Texas legislature for a law that would allow recall of county commissioners. There has been loud talk of governmental fund cutoffs.

The commissioners' conservative majority (Jim Jackson, Kenneth Mayfield and Mike Cantrell), unfazed so far, threatens to set an inspirational example for local governments around the country as national power devolves from the center to the periphery. No governmental body is likely to spur the moral revival America yearns for, but intestinal fortitude such as the Dallas commissioners' display won't slow it down.

The principle for which the commissioners have been sticking up is: Government, armed with the taxpayers' money, shouldn't do right by doing wrong.

Society's fascination with barriers and shields and safeguards against sexually transmitted diseases is understandable at one level - a very low one. If people are "going to do it anyway" - shoot up, sexually activate themselves, whatever - use of a condom is preferable to non-use. This, although condoms aren't notoriously reliable. "The inescapable fact," writes Dr. Joe S. McIlhenny Jr. in Safe Sex, "is that during one act of intercourse, condoms may protect against (sexually transmitted diseases), but for frequent, repeated acts of intercourse over a period of months or years, they will not."

William Murchison

Then there's the larger question of what it is that we hope to prevent - the symptoms (AIDS, gonorrhea, pregnancy, etc.) or the cause (reckless, amoral personal behavior)?

Look, folks, we didn't have these problems 25 years ago. What we had, in spite of the counter-culture, was people who behaved with infinitely better judgment than we take for granted today. Twenty-five years before that, things were still better and safer.

One reason for this could be that our social structures, including government, inhibited the worst varieties of what might be called personal expression. No to fornication, no to drugs, was what society said with some unanimity.

What's the message today? No to fornication - but if you think we're a little too old fashioned about all that, here's a condom. No to drugs - but if you'd rather shoot up than take our advice, at least let us sterilize your needles for you. Thus, the state is drawn into immorality as an active collaborator - if not indeed as a kind of tempter.

Immorality? Temptation? Golly-gee, what old timey concepts! And what an old timey commissioner court, insisting that the necessarily limited resources of government be used not to underwrite bad habits but, rather, to break them. The commissioners' notion is that government, if it's going to promote anything in the sexual realm, should promote abstinence from bad and destructive behavior. Who says we can't go back to the way things were 50 or 100 years ago, when the concepts of sex and responsibility were more closely conjoined? In any case, we won't get there unless we try.

More leadership isn't what we have lately come to expect of elected bodies. The Dallas Commissioners Court startles and stupefies in that moral leadership is exactly what it has in mind.

Sound morality equals sound public policy, the Dallas commissioners are persuaded. They're right. The cultural virus they are incubating deserves to spread - everywhere.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 2, the 214th day of 1995. There are 151 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: Fifty years ago, on Aug. 2, 1945, President Truman, Soviet leader Josef Stalin and the new British prime minister, Clement Attlee, concluded the Allied conference at Potsdam.

On this date: In 1776, members of the Continental Congress began attaching their signatures to the Declaration of Independence.

In 1830, Charles X, the last Bourbon king of France, abdicated. In 1876, frontiersman "Wild Bill" Hickok was shot from behind and killed while playing poker at a saloon in Deadwood, S.D.

In 1923, the 29th president of the United States, Warren G. Harding, died in San Francisco.

In 1939, President Roosevelt signed the Hatch Act, which prohibited civil service employees from taking an active part in political campaigns.

Running the affirmative action gamut

President Clinton has issued a ringing endorsement of the status quo on affirmative action - and the editorial pages are swooning with delight. "At last," goes the praise, "the president has stood up for something he believes in."

Perhaps. But simple political arithmetic would yield the same result. No Democrat can be nominated (or renominated) for president who does not embrace affirmative action. The last several Democratic conventions have been virtual peans to "diversity." Large percentages of Democratic delegates are African-American, women or government employees. To that constituency, a rejection of affirmative action would be akin to a candidate for pope eschewing the trinity.

For Republicans, the picture is mixed. On one side are the intellectuals and the majority of voters who believe that affirmative action is simply unjust, counterproductive and divisive. On the other are people like Jack Kemp who see any Republican talk about reforming affirmative action as thinly disguised race baiting. And in the middle are people like Newt Gingrich, who agree with most Republicans about the injustice of affirmative action but also have their eyes on electoral success and are looking at the African-American voter hungrily. How will it look to African-American voters, Gingrich and others are asking, if one of the first things the new Republican majority does is junk affirmative action?

I think my friend and one time employer Jack Kemp (who is a prince among men, incidentally) is much too hard on his fellow Republicans. Perhaps there are some crass Republicans who hope to use affirmative action as a "wedge" issue, driving white voters to the polls in droves to vote Republican out of racial animosity. But I do not believe that most Republicans feel that way. Most Republicans - like the millions who tell pollsters they'd love to vote for Colin Powell for president - are not racists, and neither are they racially insensitive. They simply find it impossible to support a system of institutionalized preferences in jobs, contracts and college admissions based on group membership.

The term affirmative action was first understood to mean outreach efforts to provide opportunities to blacks, but that interpretation quickly yielded to the concept of "goals and timetables," bureaucraticese for quotas. Set-asides became a fixture of government contracts - ensuring that some percentage of government work went to favored groups, regardless of merit.

And regardless of need. Somewhere along the line, affirmative action went on auto-pilot, and set-asides became the norm even in situations where it was clear that no victims of discrimination could be found. A case in point was the policy of the Federal Communications Commission to award licenses for frequencies on the spectrum to firms owned by women and minorities over white men. This, despite the fact that all of the companies competing for the license were worth millions.

The Supreme Court ruled that affirmative action could be required even in the absence of any evidence of a history of discrimination by a company or university. The court further ruled that the test for whether discrimination had taken place would be a simple comparison of the number of minorities hired by the firm vs. the percentage of that minority living in the surrounding community. Further, any test minorities flunked more often than whites was held to be an invalid form of discrimination.

Critics like Thomas Sowell have long observed that affirmative action often serves to benefit people who have suffered no discrimination and to punish people who have practiced none. It has also created an appetite for tribalism that threatens to upend our nation's traditional faith in individualism. For in the wake of African-Americans have come the women, and in the wake of the women have come the Native Americans, and in their wake have come the disabled, and in their wake have come the homosexuals. It is affirmative action that has created the culture of victimhood that many find so distasteful about late 20th century Americans.

Does racism and discrimination still exist? Sure. But the remedy is not and cannot be group entitlements. It is not just. It is not helpful. And it is doing a great deal to subvert the goal President Clinton proclaimed as his own - "to bring our country together."

How quotas have finally been 'politicized'

It is true: Affirmative action, a.k.a. quotas, has now become "politicized." That's good news.

President Clinton says he's for affirmative action, although he promotes classic Clintonesque to go with it. Gov. Pete Wilson of California is against it and says Clinton is fooling us. Rev. Jesse Jackson says Wilson is "the Susan Smith of American politics." Jack Kemp says Republicans shouldn't run against affirmative action without offering something affirmative in its place. Majority Leader Bob Dole says do away with all federal aspects of affirmative action. Speaker Newt Gingrich says Republicans will come up with an affirmative plan before cutting affirmative action.

Wilson says Jackson is running for president, too. Kemp thinks Dole is moving in the right direction because he is also talking affirmatively. Clinton, politicizing, says we shouldn't play politics with it.

Why not? Politics is where this ought to be. One reason Americans are so angry about what affirmative action has become is that it came about without serious political debate. The vast majority of practices called "affirmative action" were never voted on by elected officials. Most were established by court orders, guidelines, regulations and political pressure far from public view. Moreover, the issue was kept out of frontal debate in presidential elections lest anyone be accused of "playing the race card."

There is a healthy aspect to the current debate: Everyone agrees it's bad to "divide America." Proponents say opponents are dividing America. Opponents say affirmative action is dividing America.

Ben Wattenberg

It is also clear where affirmative-action-as-now-practiced is going - away. The Supreme Court has ruled several times to limit the extent of affirmative action. Those rulings were greeted with grief by the quocrats. But in the aftermath of Wilson's action to halt selection by race and gender at the University of California, the same quocrats find that the court did well. Jackson now promotes the idea of "strict scrutiny" before any affirmative action is committed, and says he's only in favor of race being a factor, not the factor in selection procedures.

Even the strange speech of President Clinton showed which way the wind is blowing. He said affirmative action has been good for America. He grew emotional as he truthfully stressed that he's always opposed racism, from his early Southern childhood (conveniently skipping over the fact that as a young man he worked and campaigned for segregationist Sen. William Fulbright).

But he said what he would not "allow" in federal affirmative action: (1) quotas in theory or practice, (2) illegal discrimination, including reverse discrimination, (3) preference for those who are not qualified. He also supported a shut-down of programs that have not succeeded. Now, that's pretty close to what opponents of affirmative action have been saying. They believe that affirmative-action-as-now-practiced yields all that.

Fast forward to the fall of 1996. Clinton is running for reelection. He is being clobbered about his previously stated pro-affirmative action view. He has two choices. He can say, "We have found only a few cases of abuse." Or he can say, "I've rooted out more abuse of affirmative action than any president in history." His opponents, of course, will note that Clinton also established more quotas than any president in history.

Certain facts will surface. Women now make up more than half of the college student population and get better grades than men. SAT scores for blacks have been climbing. Plans will surface: Republicans will say that inner city poverty is exacerbated by federal law, particularly welfare. Democrats will say it is heartless to cut welfare. Republicans are now reforming Clinton's "100,000 cops" crime bill to get the cops into the inner city, where crime is highest. They will say that Clinton appoints pro-quota Supreme Court justices. Democrats will say that Republicans don't have clean hands on the issue of civil rights.

One of the tragedies of the racial problems in America is that the issue has been kept out of the hurly-burly of presidential politics. It belongs there, because in America that's where we sort things out.

No single illness afflicting ailing veterans, Pentagon says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of more than 10,000 veterans and family members suffering post-Gulf War medical problems found no evidence of any unique disease or disorder, the Pentagon's top medical official said Tuesday.

The study turned up instances of back pain, headache, alcoholism, depression and other ailments, but no mystery illness stemming from the desert war.

"We do not find a single or unique illness responsible for a large or even significant proportion ... of illness," said Dr. Stephen Joseph, assistant secretary of defense for health. "Rather, what we find are multiple illnesses with overlapping symptoms and causes."

The study involved thorough medical examinations of 10,020 veterans and family members who had complained of one or more of a variety of symptoms. Nearly 700,000 service members served in the Gulf War.

While earlier Pentagon examinations of a smaller pool of veterans turned up similar results, Tuesday's announcement marked the first categorical rejection by the Defense Department of the existence of an unknown malady stemming from the 1990-1991 desert war.

Concern about the existence of a disease arose when hundreds of Gulf War veterans complained about a variety of ailments from fatigue and headaches to muscle and skeletal disorders.

Speculation focused on the possibility that Iraq had, contrary to military reports, unleashed chemical or biological weapons on the allied forces. Another theory was that insecticides or inoculations administered by the military carried unexpected side effects or reacted with one another to create adverse symptoms.

Of those veterans and family members who complained of illness, all but 11 percent were diagnosed with some sort of disease or symptom. And Joseph said it was likely that many of the illnesses, particularly stress-related ailments, stemmed from service in the gulf.

But such ailments would have been expected of any returning group of war veterans. The key conclusion, Joseph said, was that the Defense Department researchers found "not a single mystery illness or unique Gulf War illness but rather a combination of symptoms and illnesses ... that you would particularly expect to find in a population that was exposed to the kinds of stresses that people were exposed to in the Gulf."

While Joseph said some of the patients are seriously ill, 81 percent of those participating in the survey had missed no work in the previous three months and only 7 percent had missed a week or more in that period.

The largest single category of ailment was listed as "psychological conditions," representing 19 percent of those surveyed. A few of the patients are seriously afflicted but most cases are what Joseph described as "garden variety psychological symptoms and conditions that you find in an outpatient department."

Psychological ailments included tension headaches, stress-related anxiety, depression and post-traumatic stress disorder. Other ailments included joint pain, arthritis, backache, maladies of the respiratory, nervous and digestive systems, skin disease and circulatory problems.

Not all involved in the Gulf War disease issue were ready to accept the Pentagon's conclusion.

"The majority of this group has acquired chemical allergies and intolerances," said Richard Haines of Gulf Veterans International, a group based in New Albany, Ind. He said he based his conclusion on "interviewing just hundreds of them."

The ailments, he said, come from exposure to a variety of toxins in the Persian Gulf including burning oil, an anti-nerve agent pill and pesticides.

Defiant settlers stay on hill

DAGAN HILL, West Bank (AP) — Defiant Jewish settlers evaded military roadblocks Tuesday and planted an Israeli flag atop a West Bank hill they were evicted from a day earlier.

About 200 people gathered atop Dagan Hill as dusk fell and recited evening prayers. When police surrounded the hill south of Jerusalem, which has been designated a closed military area, the settlers agreed to leave but said they would be back Wednesday.

"This is going to continue every day, probably in more than one place," said David Waldman of the Kiryat Arba settlement.

Settler spokesman Aharon Domb said, 150 more settlers were gathered on nearby Tamar Hill.

About 600 settlers were dragged off the hill on Monday by Israeli police and soldiers. Many then moved to another hill north of Jerusalem, and were forced off again Tuesday morning.

The army "doesn't have enough strength to clear this place constantly on a day-to-day basis," said Pesach Avraham of Kiryat Arba. "We are here and here to stay."

The escalating settler protests come as Israel negotiates with the PLO to withdraw troops and turn over towns in the West Bank to the Palestinians.

While the protests are winning the settlers media attention and provoking debate over the use of Israeli soldiers in confrontations with Jews, they seem unlikely to sway the government.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin called the settlers' actions "ridiculous provocations" and said they would be "dealt with in accordance with the law."

Earlier Tuesday, hundreds of police and soldiers tore down tents and flimsy huts atop Artis Hill, north of Jerusalem, and dragged away struggling adults and children.

"We'll return," said settler Meir Gross. "This isn't a land dispute, but a struggle for our roots and our existence as a nation."

By midday, troops had cleared the site and surrounded it to block settlers from returning.

Police briefly detained about 100 people, including settler leader Pinchas Wallerstein. The settlers cheered each time one of their ranks was carried off by police and piled stones, pipes and plywood in the road to block the buses carrying the detainees.

"Not only will we see scenes like this every day, but they will escalate," said Benny Eilon, a settler leader, before troops removed him from the hill.

"We are not looking for sympathy. We need for the country to understand how grave the situation is. The country, the people, are being divided into two."

Settlers insist that plans to turn parts of the West Bank over to Palestinian control endangers their security and violates their biblical claim to the land. They said they will continue their protests until negotiations with the PLO are stopped.

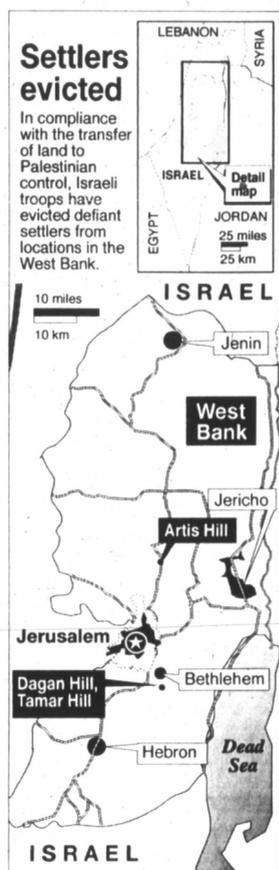

An editorial in the Haaretz newspaper Tuesday said the prevailing opinion in Israel is that the noisy protests are in vain.

"The settlers don't have the strength to force the government to change its political line, and the placing of a few huts on another hill will not achieve this aim," the editorial said.

The Maariv newspaper sympathized with the security concerns of the West Bank's 140,000 settlers. It said that if forced to choose, the Israeli public would side with the army and government.

"If it has to decide between obeying the law and anarchy it will prefer obeying the law," it said.

Bank towns to the Palestinians is more complex than the initial deal establishing autonomy in the Gaza Strip and Jericho because so many more Jewish settlers live in the West Bank. There are only 5,000 settlers in the Gaza Strip.

Many questions remain about fat melting drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — How much would you pay for a drug that melted fat, calmed a savage appetite and replaced dimpled sag with youthful lean? What's it worth to shrink from a size 18 to a 6, from a 52-inch belt to a svelte 34, without ever breaking a sweat?

The answer: A great deal. A very great deal.

Experts in the field say that in America, the sky is the limit. People deplore fat bodies, particularly their own. This is in "This one is going to be astronomical," said one obesity specialist.

Phones started ringing in fat clinics all over the country last week after three studies published in the journal Science reported that injections of a protein called leptin caused abnormally fat mice to lose up to 30 percent of their weight within weeks. The rodents also ate less and exercised more.

When Amgen Inc., a California pharmaceutical firm that bought rights to the protein, said it would be tested on humans in about a year, volunteers quickly fell in line.

"We've recorded more than a thousand calls from people asking to get into the study," said Amgen spokeswoman Lynne Connell.

So many people were calling Amgen that the company installed a special phone line. The same thing happened at Rockefeller University, where Howard Hughes Institute researcher Jeffrey M. Friedman first cloned the OB gene that makes leptin and then isolated the protein itself.

"It's still very, very early (in the research)," said Marion Glick, a Rockefeller spokeswoman. "We're not trying to recruit patients. But I think it's clear that people would really love to have something that works."

Connell said Amgen has yet to prove the safety of the protein, much less put a price on its eventual use.

But others in the fat industry are already talking about it.

"The potential is astronomical," said Dr. Arthur Frank, medical director of a George Washington University obesity treatment center that has been swamped with calls from eager heavyweights. "How much would they be willing to pay? You can almost pick a number."

"The sky is the limit," said Adam Drownowski, a professor of psychiatry who treats eating disorders at the University of Michigan. "People have been looking for a magic bullet for obesity. And you can bet it is going to be very expensive."

About a third of Americans are overweight. They spend $30 billion a year to sweat, strain and starve in an unending, relentless pursuit of the body lean. Whole industries are built around the U.S. obsession to assassinate unwanted fat cells.

Parents argue over serial killer's remains

PORTAGE, Wis. (AP) — Serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer's remains are locked in a morgue more than eight months after his death while his parents debate whether to let scientists study his brain.

Dahmer's mother, Joyce Flint, wants the brain examined to determine whether biological factors influenced her son's actions, Columbia County coroner Keith Epps said Tuesday.

His father, Lionel Dahmer, objects, wishing to put "the whole thing behind him," Epps said.

After police found body parts in Dahmer's Milwaukee apartment in 1991, he admitted killing 17 young men and boys, mutilating and sometimes cannibalizing his victims.

The dispute between Dahmer's parents, who divorced in the late 1970s, began soon after Dahmer was beaten to death by an inmate in Columbia Correctional Institution in November, Epps said.

Epps doubts anything could be learned from studying the brain. However, scientists at Fresno State University in California want to take a look at it, said Stephen Eisenberg, an attorney representing Dahmer's estate.

The brain is preserved in formaldehyde in the Dane County medical examiner's office in Madison.

Mom delivers at 33,000 feet with attendant's help

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — With the help of an off-duty flight attendant, Bruce and Julie Tu's new son entered the world about 33,000 feet in the air.

The baby arrived two weeks early, during a Southwest Airlines flight Tuesday from Kansas City, Mo., to Phoenix, Ariz., said airline spokeswoman Terry Eisenbart. The Tus were making their return trip to San Francisco after a vacation to Chicago.

The plane was rerouted to Albuquerque when Mrs. Tu went into labor over Las Vegas, N.M., and 102 passengers were moved to give her room to deliver the 6-pound, 7-ounce boy.

The baby's head was showing by the time flight attendant Judy Gonzalez began assisting with the delivery. Nobody on board had responded to a call for doctors or nurses.

"I didn't do much," Mrs. Gonzales said. "I just encouraged her to push. It was a very easy delivery. It was very exciting. Very beautiful."

Pain may be eliminated for millions

(SPECIAL)—The Federal Government has approved a drug that is exciting researchers in the treatment of pain. The material has been formulated into a new product known as "Arthur Itis..." and is being called a "Medical Miracle" by some, in the treatment of debilitating conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, painful muscle aches, joint aches, simple backache, bruises, and more. Although the mechanism of action is unclear, experiments indicate that Arthur Itis... relieves pain by first selectively attracting, and then destroying the messenger chemical which carries pain sensations to the brain, thus eliminating pain in the affected area. Arthur Itis... is an odorless, greaseless, non-staining cream and is available immediately without a prescription and is guaranteed to work.

FAA to buy new computers for control centers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five air traffic control centers plagued by computer failure will be getting new equipment — but not for a couple of years.

The Federal Aviation Administration announced Tuesday that it will spend $65 million to upgrade the computers in the Chicago, Dallas-Fort Worth, Washington, Cleveland and New York areas.

But developing computer programs and purchasing the equipment could delay installation of the new units until late 1997, FAA Administrator David R. Hinson said. He said the agency will try to shorten the process.

Meanwhile, the agency will increase training for controllers in dealing with computer problems and operating backup systems, said Monte Belger, assistant administrator for air traffic services.

Barry Krasner, president of the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, an employee union, called the move "a good first step" but said 1997 is too long to wait.

"Currently controllers are holding the world's largest air traffic control system together on a shoestring ... we urge the FAA to speed up this process," he said.

The schedule calls for the new systems to go into Chicago in October 1997, followed by Dallas-Fort Worth in November and Washington in December. Cleveland would follow in January 1998 and New York a month later.

The five centers have had 20 computer failures in the last four months, some lasting only moments, others as long as a day and a half. Each time it takes longer to restore service, Hinson said.

The new IBM 9121 computers will be an interim measure to keep operations going smoothly until the planned complete overhaul of all 20 of the nation's air traffic control centers. That national upgrade is scheduled to begin in late 1998, but the program has been plagued by delays.

The interim computers would be expected to serve at least a year in each of the five centers and then could be used as backups or for other FAA tasks.

Complaints received by UT lead to Internet task force

AUSTIN (AP) — Access to the Internet provided by the University of Texas at Austin will be examined by a new task force as a result of recent complaints received by the school.

The university allows students and faculty to pay a fee and use the university computer system to create personal home pages on the World Wide Web, a part of the Internet.

Home pages generally provide information and a place to communicate electronically on myriad topics.

The university's practice, however, has drawn some fire as a result of a few of the home pages' subject matter, according to university officials.

For example, a page containing sentiments sympathetic to white supremacy popped up in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing.

"We have allowed people to express their own thoughts," said Patricia Ohlendorf, vice provost and counsel to the president.

Woman's Home Was Not Where Man's Heart Was

DEAR ABBY: I am a 40-year-old woman in love with a 54-year-old married man. (I'll call him Gerald.) He wasn't married when I fell in love with him.

Gerald and I worked together for several years and became friends. After his divorce three years ago, he was having a hard time financially, so I invited him to move in with me and my adult son. Over the course of the next two years, Gerald helped more and more with the living expenses and took over the rent, cable TV, utility bills, etc.

Abby, we started out as friends, but eventually I fell very much in love with Gerald.

Last fall he told me that he was moving out because he had met someone at work and wanted to marry her! She is pretty, talented and closer to his age. Six months later they were married. My heart is broken.

Holidays are so lonely for me now — I miss him. All I want is for Gerald's marriage to end and for him to come back to me. I know he would come back if his marriage broke up because he is not the kind of man who can live alone. I still leave messages on his answering machine at work so he won't forget about me.

My friends tell me it's a lost cause; that if he were ever going to fall in love with me, he would have when we lived together. I'm still outraged and hurt that he is with someone else. What can I do to either get him back, or get over him?

WANTING HIM
IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR WANTING: Your friends are right. If the "magic" were there, Gerald would have fallen in love with you some time ago. By clinging to this unrealistic wish, you are only causing yourself more pain.

Stop calling his office. Get rid of any souvenirs, gifts or pictures that remind you of him. Keep busy and make new friends. Attend parties and develop new interests. The more you involve yourself in a new life, the less time you'll have to brood. Eventually, time will help you get over him, and the new activities will provide you with an opportunity to meet someone who is free to fall in love with you. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Over the years, you have held that all children should be treated equally when it comes to leaving them an inheritance.

I disagree. I would be inclined to be more generous to one who needed financial aid at the time.

I have one daughter who had cancer and needed a lot of financial help over a period of several years. (Thank God, she recovered.) My other children understood, and never questioned the fact that I did more for her than I did for the others.

It's not possible to treat all grown children equally. Some are more ambitious, talented or luckier than their siblings. It makes more sense to help the child who needs it most at the time — regardless.

FAIR IS FAIR IN PRINCETON, N.J.

DEAR FAIR IS FAIR: I agree that because life does not always present equal challenges to siblings, the amount of help each needs may not be identical. Your daughter's situation illustrates that.

However, when there is a disparity in the division of property between siblings after the parents are gone, it can affect their feelings toward each other for the rest of their lives. And that is why I recommend equality.

Horoscope

Your Birthday

Thursday, Aug. 3, 1995

You might be more fortunate than usual in fulfilling your material expectations in the year ahead. Avoid being wasteful or extravagant, however.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard against inclinations to do things that go against your better judgment. Avoid turning potential successes into failures. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who helped you in the past, but who you failed to acknowledge might put obstacles in your path today. Profit from this lesson.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try not to be stingy with your friends today, but also make sure that your expenses aren't greater than theirs on group activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Personal gains are possible today, but your achievements might exact a price. Make sure your rewards are greater than your entry fees.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something important to you today might not be of equal concern to your associates. You shouldn't count on them to do what you should do yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Luck will be on your side today at the very times you think you need it least. You mustn't take your good fortune for granted, though.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) When negotiating an arrangement today, think everything out down to the last detail. If you don't, small burrs under your saddle could get you thrown off.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not volunteer to take on an assignment you're not qualified to handle just to impress authorities today. Do not let your ego part you into a corner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will fare better in the long run if you don't take yourself too seriously today. Regardless of the hand you're dealt, be a good winner or a gracious loser.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) By putting yourself in the other guy's shoes today, you can enhance the benefits from your personal relationships.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) For your plans to be effective today, they must not be implemented in a piecemeal manner. Maintain the vision of the big picture at all times.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your best possibilities for financial gain could be through usual channels today. Losses are more likely when gambling on the unknown.

SHOOTING

PAMPA — Members of the Pampa Rifle and Pistol Club competed in the Texas State Hunter's Pistol Championships held in Lubbock July 15 and 16. Finals results were released compiled this week.

Kresha McAdoo was the Women's Champion and third AAA. McAdoo's score of 51 out of 60 set a new women's national record.

Smallbore (.22) winners included: Rick Redd, State Champion; Kresha McAdoo, Women's Champion and third AAA; Larry Nunamaker, second AA; Chuck Tanner, fourth AAA; Smallbore open sight winners were: Larry Nunamaker, first AAA and Bill Morris, third A.

Hunter's pistol (centerfire) winners were: Rick Redd, second overall; Larry Nunamaker, fourth AAA; Chuck Tanner, second AA.

Hunter's Pistol Open Sight winners included: Bill Morris, first AA and Kresha McAdoo, second A.

The team of Larry Nunamaker, Kresha McAdoo and Rick Redd won both Smallbore and Hunter's Pistol Championships.

All 5 competitors won Governor's Twenty awards and spots on the NRA Pistol teams.

Donna Nunamaker was nominated for Hunter's Pistol Silhouette State Match Director for Texas State Rifle Association for 1996-1997.

If elected, the State Championships will be held in Pampa in 1997.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden's agent says the drug-troubled former Cy Young winner is ready to return to baseball, and hopes the commissioner's office agrees.

Bill Goodstein said his client might apply later this week to have his latest drug-related suspension lifted in hopes of pitching in the major leagues before the month ends.

Meanwhile, Darryl Strawberry's return to New York appeared closer, with a club executive saying the slugger could join the Yankees by this weekend.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners apparently have hired a business and marketing executive who will have the title of president of major league baseball, according to a published report today.

The New York Times cited sources in and out of baseball as saying Arlen Kantarian will get the positio. Kantarian is the chief operating officer of entertainment and marketing at Radio City Music Hall.

"We're restructuring the marketing department and we're going to be aggressive in the whole marketing area," Selig told the newspaper. "There have been no final decisions made. We're not ready to announce anything."

Baseball has no plans to hire a commissioner until its labor problems are resolved, The Times said.

TENNIS

LONDON (AP) — One week after pushing for a new improved men's tour, the International Tennis Federation backed out of its plans.

The ITF said recent negative and incorrect public debate forced it to cancel negotiations with an organization interested in promoting the tour, believed to be linked with media tycoon Rupert Murdoch.

The proposed tour would have provided more events down to satellite level, reduced administration fees for participating tournaments, and significantly increased prize money at the top level.

Cowboy's defensive coach worries about his debut

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas Cowboys defensive coordinator Dave Campo will be under the microscope from the first regular season game.

It will come on Monday Night Football in the Meadowlands against the New York Giants on Labor Day, Sept. 4.

If the Cowboys defense plays poorly, Campo knows who will catch the flak.

"I know what happened to Butch Davis in his debut and if we have a bad night on defense I'll get the blame like he did," Campo said Tuesday.

Hurricanes after molding Dallas into one of the top defensive teams in the NFL. Davis did so after Dave Wannstedt vacated Valley Ranch to become head coach of the Chicago Bears. Wannstedt's Cowboys were the No. 1-rated defense in the NFL.

Davis had a disastrous debut. It was on a Monday night that the Washington Redskins tore the Dallas defense apart in a 35-16 victory in 1993.

The critics said Davis wasn't a worthy successor to Wannstedt but he proved them wrong. It wasn't easy.

"It's a tough way to break-in under the national spotlight," Campo laughed. "But you have to start somewhere. It might as well be with everybody in the nation watching."

Campo is short, wears glasses, and has the bookish looks of someone who works with computer chips instead of coaching football players. But make no mistake how he teaches the violent game.

His philosophy is attack. His secondary played close, tough coverage. His overall defense will be the same.

"I'm not afraid to gamble to stop a drive," is the way he puts it. "The way the game is being played now you have to put more pressure on teams. Because of the shorter kickoffs, there are shorter drives. You have to be aggressive to make teams take the long, hard way to score."

Campo has players on his team that fit his aggressive style such as defensive end Charles Haley, cornerback Kevin Smith and safety Darren Woodson.

"Charles will be a big leader for us this year," Campo said. "We need for Robert Jones to take control at middle linebacker. We'll miss James Washington at safety (signed a contract with the Redskins) but we think Brock Marion will do a good job replacing him."

The Cowboys were ranked No. 1 in pass defense last year under Campo.

Now, he moves from the sidelines to the press box, a trek he makes with regrets.

"I'll have to be in the press box," he said. "I enjoy the sidelines but you can't be as productive down there. I learned from Dave and Butch who moved to the press box that you have to be there to get into the game mentally."

Campo said "you just have to be able to divorce yourself from the emotion of the sidelines."

It will be easier said than done for the fiery Campo to stay unemotional. He knows he'll have to keep his head when the Giants and Cowboys play in September.

If the Giants offense has a big night, he'll expect the critics to be calling his name.

"I relish the challenge," Campo said. "I've worked a long time for this."

North exploits South's miscues

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Marc Broyles churned out 86 yards, including a 1-yard touchdown, and Kyle Allamon added a 52-yard fumble return for another score, carrying the North to a 21-7 victory over the South in Tuesday night's all-star game.

Broyles' touchdown capped the North's stretch of nine points in a 47-second span of the third-quarter that turned a 7-3 halftime deficit into a 9-7 lead.

With 3:36 left in the game, Allamon picked up Fred Smith's second fumbled kick of the half and, with help from several blockers, he sprinted untouched down the sideline for his touchdown.

Montae Reagor wrapped up the North's first all-star victory since 1991 by tackling South quarterback Michael Bishop in the end zone for a safety with 2:14 left.

Mistakes like that plagued both teams.

There were 12 fumbles in the game, which was played during intermittent rain, including two by the North inside the South 15. The North also threw interceptions at the South 20 and another in the South end zone.

But it was fumbles on consecutive possessions by the South that decided the game midway through the third quarter.

The first came after the North lost a fumble at the South 10. On the South's first snap, quarterback Jay Rodgers was drilled by Phillip Littlejohn and the North recovered at the 5.

NCAA punishes Crimson Tide

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama's football program was penalized by the NCAA today, being banned from playing in a bowl game after the upcoming season and deprived of 10 scholarships, according to a published report.

The Tuscaloosa News reported the penalties as the school was preparing a news conference to make the announcement.

These would be the first sanctions ever imposed by the NCAA on Alabama, winner of six national titles.

The NCAA earlier cited Alabama for failure to disclose promptly that a star player had signed with an agent and then continued playing for Alabama, and for improper loans to a player.

"Am I anxious to get it behind us? I am. Has it been a distraction? It has," coach Gene Stallings said. "What I do not want it to be is an excuse for us to play poorly."

The investigation began three years ago with Gene Jelks' pay-for-play allegations and eventually uncovered improper loans to Jelks and mishandling of Antonio Langham's signing with an agent.

Jelks' accusations that he received money and gifts to sign with Alabama in 1985 did not hold up during the probe. Loans Jelks received from August 1989 to May 1990 showed up in an NCAA letter of inquiry in September 1994.

The NCAA also found out that Langham, a top defensive back, signed with a sports agent on Jan. 2, 1993, the morning after the Crimson Tide won the national championship by beating Miami in the Sugar Bowl.

He mentioned the meeting to Stallings, then was allowed to play 11 games before being declared ineligible. Alabama was 8-2-1 in those games.

Langham sat out the Southeastern Conference championship game, a 28-13 loss to Florida, and the Gator Bowl, in which Alabama beat North Carolina 24-10.

Alabama has faced a series of ominous signs from the NCAA, including rejection of the school's proposal of a loss of four scholarships as a penalty, and a request for athletic officials to appear in person before the Committee on Infractions.

According to correspondence between the NCAA and Alabama, Langham mentioned something to Stallings about signing with an agent three days after the meeting. Stallings then told Athletic Director Hootie Ingram about it, but Langham continued to play anyway.

The NCAA accused Alabama of a "lack of appropriate institutional control" in the Langham case. Stallings was admonished by university president Roger Sayers for not having a better grasp of NCAA rules.

A's drop Rangers in extra innings

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Jason Giambi made it interesting, Geronimo Berroa made it even and Mike Aldrete made the difference.

The three all had a hand in reversing the Oakland Athletics' fortunes in extra innings, delivering consecutive two-out hits in a three-run 11th to beat the Texas Rangers 4-3 Tuesday night.

It was the first time Oakland had come away with a victory in nine extra-inning games this year.

"In the heat of the game, you're not thinking about that. We were just trying to figure out a way to win," said Aldrete, whose single produced the winning run. "Hopefully, this is a start of a new streak."

The Athletics entered the 11th down 3-1 after Luis Ortiz hit a two-run triple off Carlos Reyes.

Mike Bordick began the rally with a leadoff single, and Brent Gates singled one out later. After Danny Tartabull was caught looking at a third strike, Giambi singled to pull Oakland within a run.

Jeff Russell relieved Matt Whiteside (3-4) and gave up a game-tying single to Berroa.

Aldrete, inserted into the lineup minutes before gametime when Stan Javier had to take a seat because of a sore neck, won it with another RBI single.

"You walk up to a guy two minutes before the game and say, 'You're playing.' And he gives you good at bats," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "He's a real pro."

"That's what I strive to be," Aldrete said. "I realize I'm not the guy who can throw the whole team on my back and carry them, but I can carry my own weight."

Reyes (1-2) gave up the triple to Ortiz, but came back to get two outs in the 11th to pick up his first big league victory.

"I don't know whether to be happy or mad," Reyes said. "I gave up all those runs. It's a funny game."

For the Rangers, it was their 13th loss in 15 games.

"The Texas Rangers got that loss, not Jeff Russell," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "Whiteside pitched well. They got a dribbler and a fly, and then he got a pitch up."

"We've been battling adversity from the get-go," Texas' Will Clark said. "Every team goes through it, but we've been battling it all year. A lot of action happened late because both starting pitchers were in a groove."

Oilers may face more cuts under salary cap

By The Associated Press

When the Houston Oilers bumped up against the NFL salary cap, it was third-string quarterback Bucky Richardson who had to go. Guard John Flannery could be next.

"It's like monopoly, you only have so much money," Oilers offensive coordinator Jerry Rhome said. "When you run out, you have to get rid of people."

Richardson, a favorite in Texas, was waived by the Oilers on Tuesday to make room under the team's cap for rookie running back Rodney Thomas. Ironically, both Thomas and Richardson are from Texas A&M.

"This has nothing to do with ability, it's all starts with money and the salary cap," Richardson said. "They've already told me they want me back."

Chris Chandler is the Oilers starting quarterback and Will Furrer is now the backup at the NFL's $178,000 minimum salary. Steve McNair, the Oilers' No. 1 draft pick who signed a seven-year pact worth $28.5 million, is No. 3.

Speculation continued that Flannery and his $900,000 salary could be the next to go to make room for All-Pro center Bruce Matthews, who has agreed to a four-year, $10.4 million deal.

"They've told me it's not a matter of performance, it's a matter of money," Flannery said. "That helps me to deal with it. If it happens, it doesn't mean my career is over. It's just over with the Oilers."

Packers

Green Bay wide receiver Mark Ingram says his 11-day absence from training camp was due to poor communication with Packers general manager Ron Wolf.

"We had a couple of phone conversations," said Ingram, who also skipped the mandatory post-draft minicamp and the voluntary June minicamp. "I told him what was on my mind and he told me what was on his mind. After a few more conversations, we went further into detail and we ironed them out."

NFL Roundup

"I always wanted to be here. Missing camp isn't something you want to do, but I have to do what's best for my family and Ron has to do what's best for the Green Bay organization."

Rams

Day-long rain forced the Rams to move their practice indoors. The workout also was shortened due to a lack of space.

Coach Rich Brooks said the Rams talked Tuesday to Lamont Smith, the agent for holdout running back Jerome Bettis. Bettis has run up $48,000 in fines at $4,000 a day since July 21, the day of the first full-squad workout.

"All I know is that there has been some communication," Brooks said. "He's still got a three-year contract and we're figuring that that's what ought to be honored."

Patriots

New England will be without linebacker Vincent Brown for at least two weeks as the result of arthroscopic knee surgery.

"The operation was performed at 11:45 yesterday morning and he was in my office at 5:30 in the afternoon. He walked in," Patriots coach Bill Parcells said Tuesday.

New England has lost three inside linebackers in the first two weeks of training camp — Brown; Todd Collins, who retired; and Andre Bowden, who broke his leg. That leaves second-year man Marty Moore and rookie Ted Johnson, this year's second-round draft pick.

Mantle begins treatment

DALLAS (AP) — Mickey Mantle's doctors plan an aggressive treatment to battle the spread of cancer, which moved into his lungs from his diseased liver that was removed in June.

The 63-year-old Hall of Fame slugger, whose liver was ravaged by hard drinking, hepatitis and cancer, underwent a full-body scan three days before the transplant to see if the cancer had spread. At the time of the transplant, doctors said he would not live more than a few weeks without a new liver.

"If we had found any evidence of cancer outside the liver before we did the transplant, we would have backed out," Dr. Robert Goldstein, Mantle's transplant surgeon, said Tuesday.

Mantle's gastroenterologist, Dr. Daniel DeMarco, said doctors suspect the cancer was in the lung before Mantle's June 8 transplant, but was so small it was undetectable.

Mantle's doctors said they will push chemotherapy, a treatment the ballplayer began the day of his operation. No additional surgery is planned.

"If he had a liver that wasn't working very well, it would be a different situation in that we could not use as much of the chemotherapy as we'd like," Goldstein said. "But now with him doing as well as he is from the transplant standpoint, we have a fighting chance."

However, DeMarco said the "chances are real" that the cancer might spread to other organs.

"At the same time, we're giving him systemic chemotherapy so if it is present, I hope we're having an effect against it," he said.

Mickey Mantle's latest battle

Mickey Mantle, who received a liver transplant June 8, has now been diagnosed with lung cancer. Mantle has been undergoing a series of chemotherapy treatment.

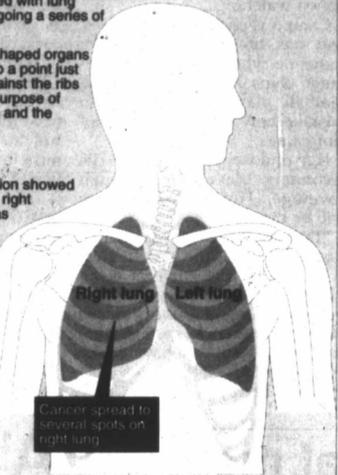

THE LUNGS are paired, cone-shaped organs extending from the diaphragm to a point just above the clavicles. They lie against the ribs in front and back. The primary purpose of the lung is the uptake of oxygen and the elimination of carbon dioxide.

DIAGNOSIS

Doctors said a recent examination showed several cancerous spots on his right lung. The cancer apparently was very small and undetectable when Mantle received his liver transplant.

TREATMENT

Mantle is receiving "aggressive" chemotherapy treatment. Chemotherapy works by aiming intense doses of chemicals at cancerous cells in an effort to kill them. Normal tissue is inevitably harmed as well, causing nausea and hair loss.

Source: American Cancer Society, Complete Home Medical AP/The Pampa News

Mantle's cancer is a potentially aggressive form known as a hepatoma. It can easily recur in his new liver or migrate to the lungs or bones because even after a transplant, cancerous cells can remain in a recipient's bloodstream and lymphatic system, doctors said.

Doctors wouldn't predict Mantle's chances for survival as they had after the initial transplant, when they listed his five-year survival expectancy rate at about 60 percent.

"It's very early and we're still taking it day by day," Goldstein said. "We are still hopeful that this will respond to therapy."

Mantle underwent routine checkups after the operation, and about two weeks ago several aggressive cancer spots showed up on his right lung, doctors said.

A wan-looking Mantle, wearing a cap and golf shirt, disclosed the cancer in a statement videotaped Friday. He thanked fans for their support and added, "If you'd like to do something really great, be a donor."

Mantle, who lives in Dallas, replaced Joe DiMaggio as the Yankees' center fielder in 1951. He retired in 1968 with 536 home runs.

His career was sidetracked by many injuries. Doctors speculated Mantle contracted hepatitis from blood transfusions he received during operations he underwent while a player.

Buccaneer's Harper happy in Florida

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Money and the opportunity to play closer to home were only part of the lure for Alvin Harper.

An important component of a team that won two Super Bowl titles and figured to contend for more in Dallas, the speedy receiver left the Cowboys after last season and signed a four-year, $10.66 million contract with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

While some people joke the fifth-year pro went from the penthouse to the outhouse of the NFL, Harper envisions himself prospering in a Bucs uniform.

"I saw an opportunity for me to come here and make a lot more plays than I did in Dallas, catch more passes and be a part of something special when Tampa Bay starts winning," he said. "I want people to say, 'He had a major part in that.'"

Leaving Dallas was inevitable. The Cowboys were not in a position to re-sign Harper, an unrestricted free agent last winter, because of the salary cap.

He was the 12th highest paid player in Dallas in 1994, earning $868,000, and the Bucs outbid the New York Jets, Arizona Cardinals, Kansas City Chiefs, Houston Oilers and Washington Redskins to sign him in March.

"I'd have been crazy to stay there, although the Cowboys are a great team to be with," said Harper, who received a $3 million signing bonus and the chance to continue his career near his hometown of Frostproof, Fla.

"I'm not going to lie. The money is good and was a factor. The Cowboys just didn't have enough to offer," he added. "But I liked the situation here, too, and the thought of catching more passes and making things happen."

In four seasons with Dallas, Harper established himself as one of the best deep threats in the league. He's averaged 20 yards per regular-season catch during his career (124 receptions, 2,486 yards, 18 touchdowns), and his 27.3 post-season average is the best in NFL history.

Despite those impressive statistics, Harper never emerged from the shadows of other offensive stars like Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith and Michael Irvin in Dallas.

He had 33 receptions for 821 yards (a league-leading 24.9 per catch) and eight TDs in 1994, but the best numbers of his career didn't add up to a trip to the Pro Bowl.

For Tampa Bay, Harper is the big-play receiver the Bucs have never had. Lawrence Dawsey was the team's leading receiver a year ago with 46 catches for 673 yards and one TD, while Charles Wilson (31 receptions, 652 yards, six TDs) was the club's best deep threat.

Still, skeptics wonder how effective Harper will be this season with an inexperienced quarterback running the Tampa Bay offense. He and second-year pro Trent Dilfer have spent extra time together during training camp, trying to get acclimated to one another.

"He's a raw talent right now, but the more and more repetitions he gets in practice, the better and better he's getting," Harper said. "He's starting to learn how to throw the ball — how hard to throw it, how soft to throw it and who to throw it to."

Traded player Kite: Master of three events does good deed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Andy Benes left San Diego $10,000 lighter on Tuesday, and Padres officials couldn't be happier or more surprised.

Benes, traded to the Seattle Mariners on Monday night, cleaned out his locker on Tuesday, then went upstairs and dropped off his contribution for a scholarship program the Padres started this year.

"Yes it's true that the players had committed, but who would have begrudged him for walking away without doing so?" said Charles Steinberg, the Padres' vice president for public affairs.

"He didn't have to do it, and the check wasn't written in advance. That's a guy whose personal character should mean more to the people of San Diego than what he did on the mound."

New owners John Moores and Larry Lucchino will match each player's donation, meaning that Benes' contribution will lead to four $5,000 college scholarships for San Diego area students. The Padres hope to fund 25 such scholarships a year.

"When we say we wish Andy the best, we really mean it," Steinberg said.

"We love the trade for the Padres, but we fully, fully respect Andy's decency as a human being."

"It makes believing in ballplayers worthwhile."

Benes, whose relationship with San Diego's front office wasn't always smooth, was 69-75 in six seasons with San Diego. He was traded for pitcher Ron Villone

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.

— Wisconsin isn't known as a breeding ground for great rodeo athletes, but the next incarnation of the legendary Bill Linderman may come from the dairy state, according to Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association officials here.

Chuck Kite of Montfort, Wis., ranked 22nd in the PRCA's world all-around standings, has earned a total of $19,376 this season in three events: bareback riding, saddle bronc riding and steer wrestling.

Steer wrestling is Kite's weakest event - he's only earned $939 competing as a bulldogger - but if the cowboy earns just another $61 in steer wrestling, Kite will become eligible for the prestigious Linderman Award, said

PRCA

Steve Fleming with the PRCA.

The Linderman is named after Bill Linderman, who won world titles in saddle bronc riding and steer wrestling in 1950. It is awarded annually to the cowboy who wins the most money in three separate events. The catch is that the cowboy must win at least $1,000 in roughstock competition and another $1,000 in timed events to qualify.

Past world all-around champions Lewis Field, Phil Lyne and Benny Reynolds have been among those to win the Linderman.

Last year, no contestant qualified for the award - the first time since the award's inception in 1966.

Angles take seventh straight

By The Associated Press

The California Angels are in such a groove, not even the formidable presence of Randy Johnson rattles them.

The Angels won their seventh straight game Tuesday night, beating Johnson and the Seattle Mariners 7-2. It was only Johnson's second loss this year, and it came against a team he had beaten six times in a row.

California starter Brian Anderson (6-2) won his fifth straight start as the Angels stretched their AL West lead to 11 games over the skidding Texas Rangers.

"With the lead they have and the way they're playing," Seattle's Mike Blowers said, "it looks like they're going to win the West unless they just fall on their faces, which I don't expect them to do."

The Rangers are the ones falling flat. A 4-3 loss to Oakland after they took a 3-1 lead in the top of the 11th was their 13th in 15 games.

In other AL games, it was Minnesota over Cleveland 6-5, Boston over Detroit 13-3, Toronto over Baltimore 12-10, New York over Milwaukee 7-5 and Chicago over Kansas City 4-3.

Tim Salmon and Greg Myers each drove in two runs for the Angels, and Salmon had three hits to end a 1-for-19 stretch against Johnson (11-2).

Salmon hit his 21st homer in the first and added an RBI single in the fifth to give California a 3-1 lead.

Construction spending rises slightly for June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending rose 0.9 percent in June, the largest advance in nearly a year despite the sixth straight monthly decline in residential outlays.

Analysts said that spending in the interest-sensitive residential sector should rebound in the second half of 1995 with cheaper mortgage rates luring buyers back into the market.

"We look for construction spending, and more specifically spending on residential construction, in the ensuing months to post a moderate bounce back as lower interest rates act as a catalyst for growth in the housing sector," said economists Elliott Platt and John Bailey of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp.

Spending on residential, non-residential and government projects totaled $520.4 billion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate in June, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

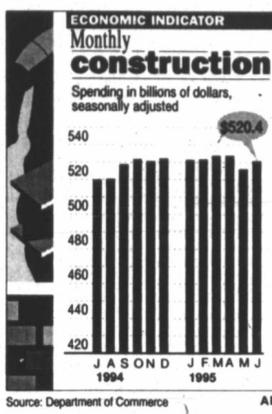

The 0.9 percent gain was the largest since a 1.6 percent advance in September 1994. It recouped much of the 1.5 percent loss in May, the biggest decline since a similar 1.5 percent decline in May 1991.

Construction spending in June was 2.9 percent above that of a year ago.

The June advance was confined to nonresidential and public outlays. Residential spending fell 0.8 percent to $230.2 billion, the sixth straight decline.

The value of single-family construction also fell for a sixth consecutive month, down 1.4 percent.

Single-family construction slowed considerably during the first half of the year as high mortgage rates curbed consumer buying and caused a backlog of unsold homes.

But 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 7.53 percent in June, down from more than 9 percent in January, meaning a savings of more than $100 a month in the cost of a $100,000 loan. Analysts said that should trigger a modest increase in sales, which in turn should translate into renewed construction.

Often-volatile spending on multifamily homes also fell in June, down 0.5 percent after a 1.6 percent advance in May.

The decline in the residential sector offset gains in the nonresidential and government sectors.

Nonresidential outlays jumped 3.5 percent to $110.1 billion, including advances of 13 percent for hotels and motels and 10.2 percent for other commercial projects such as shopping centers.

Fender endorses picante sauce

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — With his spicy, "King of Tex-Mex" picante sauce having recently appeared in Southwest grocery stores, Freddy Fender will debut his Mexican-style cheeses this week.

Continuing a long tradition of country music stars who have endorsed food and other consumer products, the San Benito native hopes his sauce and cheeses will be hot stuff.

"My label is struggling to get into the market, but as soon as I can afford to get it on TV, it's going to take off," Fender said during a recent interview in San Antonio. "I think we have a great thing going."

His picante sauce, "Freddy Fender's King of Tex-Mex," appeared on the shelves of H-E-B stores and Coastal Maverick Markets in South Texas, Furr's in New Mexico and Albertson's in Arizona.

World briefs

China expels two American officers

BEIJING (AP) — China expelled two U.S. Air Force officers today after accusing them of illegally gathering military intelligence.

The expulsions came as relations have sunk to their worst point since China's 1989 crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in Tiananmen Square.

The expulsions were reported by the official Xinhua News Agency.

The two officers "sneaked into a number of restricted military zones in China's southeast coastal areas and illegally acquired military intelligence by photographing and videotaping."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Shen Guofang was quoted as saying.

The two officers were identified as Joseph Wei Chan, Air Force liaison officer, and Dwayne Howard Florenzie, assistant Air Force liaison officer. Both are based at the U.S. consulate in Hong Kong, Xinhua said.

China's state security authorities gave the two men 24 hours to leave the country.

Doctors say chances for girl's survival slim

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Doctors struggling to save a 6-year-old girl with a giant, cancerous tumor swelling her belly, today gave her only a 10 percent chance of survival.

Olivia Pilhar has been on a respirator since Monday because her right lung was inflamed and no longer fully functional.

A small tumor discovered on her kidney May 18 grew to almost fill her abdominal cavity while her parents refused to let doctors treat Olivia. It has now largely displaced her organs.

Doctors began chemotherapy Saturday against her parents' wishes after experts determined the girl could die if not treated. They are also using radiation to try to shrink the tumor, but it is too early to tell if the treatment is working, doctors said.

The tumor has been growing at a rate of a half inch a day, said Dr. Franz Waldhauser, deputy director of the university clinic for pediatricians at Vienna General Hospital, where Olivia is in intensive care.

Client claims she was sexually assaulted by therapist

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A woman suffering from depression and suicidal thoughts felt she could trust the clinical practitioner she had been seeing twice a week for two years.

But during a routine, 1993 counseling session with Steven Smykay, during which she was hypnotized, Iris Lee Carneiro remembered waking up about an hour later on the floor and realized something was wrong.

Her clothes and her undergarments were out of place, she said. Unsure what had happened, she said she panicked, grabbed her purse and left.

Carneiro alleges that Smykay, who is still practicing, used an electric vibrator to sexually assault her while she was under hypnosis.

A grand jury last week indicted Smykay on a sexual assault charge. His case is pending.

Smykay, a licensed social work clinical practitioner since 1989, denies the charges against him. He dismissed Carneiro's claims, saying she was a disturbed woman who often asked him to join her for sex in her home.

"It's more complicated than it looks," he said. "But how do you defend yourself against allegations when it's a private session?"

Smykay also faces the possibility of losing his clinical social work license.

A proposal to revoke or suspend his license is pending before the Texas State Board of Social Worker Examiners, said Donald Jansky, staff attorney for the Texas Department of Health.

Smykay is appealing the proposal. A hearing has been set for Aug. 21.

In August 1992, another client accused Smykay, owner of Comprehensive Counseling Inc. in San Antonio, of fondling her breasts during a session where she was hypnotized.

The case was dismissed after prosecutors determined there was insufficient evidence.

In December 1993, a Bexar County jury convicted Smykay of public lewdness for having uninvited sexual contact with another female client who had been sent to Smykay for counseling after testing positive for drugs.

Smykay was sentenced to 90 days in jail and one year probation. He was ordered to pay a $500 fine and complete counseling for sexual problems.

He appealed the conviction and the guilty verdict was reversed.
