Kid Pony Show action concludes

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

The dust is flying, the setting sun blazing behind the grandstand. A countrified version of the "William Tell Overture" is blaring in the background, coming close to being drowned out by the yells of parents and other audience members screaming "Hustle!" or "Go, go, go!"

The young cowgirl blocks it all from her mind and eyes the five white poles in the middle of the arena. Suddenly, she spurs her horse to life, and the two race as one to the end of the line of poles and then begin weaving tightly between each one.

As she wheels around the last one, she rises slightly out of her seat, left arm parallel to the horse's back and tightly gripping the reins, back straight and stiff as a board, face etched in concentration. After she crosses the finish line, the announcer calls out her time - 22.549 seconds - and she allows herself a slight grin.

Once she leaves the arena, her game face is gone and she is once again a typical 12-year-old, giggling with her best friend and talking about summer vacation.

Lindsay Tidwell was one of a number of contestants at last night's Kid Pony Show, the third and final night of this year's action. She competed in pole bending, barrel racing and goat undecorating, placing in two of the three events, as well as helping friend Kyle Zybach of Briscoe win the ribbon roping event.

She began rodeoing at age three on a stick horse. She has graduated to the real thing now, riding Baker in the barrels and goat events and 27-year-old Speck in the poles.

She credits her success to two things - her unusual riding posture and her best friend, Emily Curtis, 13.

The posture developed as a result of another favorite pastime - dancing. Her mother Cathy says she's taken ballet lessons for several years, and the discipline of the lessons has led to her rock-solid posture.

Lindsay says her riding posture "keeps the wind from slowing you down."

Besides the posture, Lindsay says what really helps her win is Emily. The luck began last year in Canadian.

Lindsay recalls that Emily had just bought a goat string. Lindsay kept the string in her pocket and ended up winning her event twice.

Last night, though, Emily forgot the string.

"She has me, though," Emily interjects. Lindsay giggles and nods.

Lindsay says she hopes to someday partner with Emily.

"She's just learning how to rope. If she learns, we'd be a good team-roping pair. She can heel good."

For now, though, Lindsay and Emily are content with being best friends. Emily even rode out with Lindsay for the awards ceremony and was there when her best friend accepted a third place award in pole bending and a second place award in goat undecorating.

Word still pending on federal disaster aid

Members of the Community Awareness and Emergency Response Committee learned Wednesday that there is still no word about federal funding to aid in recovering from the June 8 tornado.

Emergency Management Coordinator Ken Hall said that while he's not counting out the possibility of federal support, he's been seeking other avenues of relief.

Hall said he had visited with officials from the Federal Housing Administration who are putting together a package of relief that, while it doesn't go as far as a federal disaster declaration would, does offer some low-interest loans and other mechanisms to help people recover.

FHA officials also told Hall that the Small Business Administration could come in without a disaster declaration and make some loans with guidelines requiring that applicants meet the same criteria normally required for a loan.

Hall worries that some low income people suffering since the tornado may not qualify for those loans, but says that the FHA hopes to get to those people and offer help.

Hall also said that the Local Emergency Planning Committee had tentatively set next year's full-scale disaster drill - a tornado that strikes Lefors, McLean and Pampa with a number of incidents to test all aspects of emergency response.

This year's full-scale drill included a bombing and hostage situation.

LEPC members also have been working with officials in Lefors and McLean to update the emergency plan to include those jurisdictions, Hall said.

"Because of the efforts of people in these jurisdictions ... we've been able to get a plan together," he said.

Pampa Economic Development Corporation Executive Director Jack Ippel also spoke to the committee, which is made up of emergency responders from city and county governments and industries, ambulance personnel, law enforcement officers and the Red Cross.

Grandview-Hopkins board reviews budget

GRANDVIEW-HOPKINS - Members of the Grandview-Hopkins Independent School District Board of Education reviewed the 1995-96 budget at their Tuesday regular session meeting, according to Superintendent Norman Baxter.

The board looked at increases in teachers' salaries as a result of Senate Bill 1 and increases in the amount of money to be spent to comply with wealth-equalization laws.

No action was taken to adopt the budget. That is expected to occur at the next meeting, says Baxter.

In other action, the board reclassified funds in the 1994-95 budget, approved Billy Baker from Borger as the auditor for the school, adopted a transfer policy for students entering the school district and approved a supplemental duties contract for Rene Ann Chavado so she could coach the pee-wee baseball team.

The board heard a report from Baxter on the district's investment pool, on an Option 4 agreement with Pampa ISD and a briefing on Senate Bill 1.

The board also had a second hearing on a transfer policy for students transferring out of the school district and learned that the 1995-96 school calendar is in compliance with new state guidelines.

In executive session, the school board heard a review on a pending appeal to the Texas Employment Commission on a former teacher who retired and later sought unemployment benefits.

Thornberry votes for projects in 13th District

WASHINGTON, D.C. - U.S. Rep. Mac Thornberry on Wednesday voted for an energy and water appropriations bill that includes $872,000 in funding for projects in the 13th Congressional District of Texas. The bill, H.R. 1905, passed by a vote of 400 to 27.

Key 13th District projects that received funding include:

- $110,000 for flood control at McGrath Creek in Wichita Falls, a Corps of Engineers project.

- $150,000 for development of an environmental monitoring and operating plan for the Red River Chloride Control project. Further construction on the Corps of Engineers project has been placed on hold pending resolution of environmental concerns.

• $12,000 for the Estelline Springs chloride retention project.

- $570,000 for the Lake Meredith salinity project to remove salt from municipal water supplies in several West Texas cities.

• $30,000 for a Corps of Engineers project to study flooding problems in the Brazos River basin.

The bill provides $18.7 billion in funding for energy and water projects for FY 1996, about $1.6 billion less than FY 1995 and $2 billion less than President Clinton's budget request.

Low tonight near 70, high tomorrow in mid 90s. See Page 2 for weather details.

PAMPA - A relay activated during construction at a Southwestern Public Service substation caused a loss of power to about 2,500 electrical customers Wednesday, said local manager Ernest Ramirez.

Electrical service was interrupted from 12:58 to 1:20 p.m., Ramirez said.

Earlier Wednesday, an overloaded transformer at the Rufe Jordan Prison Unit activated a fuse which shut off power in the wee hours of the morning, Ramirez said.

The power outage Wednesday morning may have been at least partly heat related, Ramirez said; however, the afternoon outage was only construction related.

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) - A 22-year-old American died after being gored today in the famed San Fermin bull run, the first death in the festival in 15 years.

Matthew Peter Tassio, of suburban Chicago, died of cardiac arrest at Navarra Hospital shortly after one of six fighting bulls gored him in the abdomen.

Injuries are frequent in the bull runs, held each morning during the eight-day festival in honor of Pamplona's patron saint. But Tassio's death is the first since 1980, when two Spaniards were gored during the frenetic 825-yard sprint down cobbled streets from the corral to the bullring.

There have been 12 fatal gorings since 1924.

Pamplona has been hosting the San Fermin festival since 1591, but the bull runs became world famous as a result of Ernest Hemingway's 1926 novel The Sun Also Rises.

Thousands of foreign visitors swell the streets of Pamplona during the festival, which also includes bull-fights and all-night parties. The festival ends Friday.

At least 27 people have been injured in this year's bull runs, including five Americans.

Tassio's family requested that his hometown not be named, said a spokesman for the U.S. consulate in the northern city of Bilbao.

AUSTIN (AP) - No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $4 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 12, 19, 20, 21, 43 and 49.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $10 million.

Mid-section of U.S. swelters in heat wave

By The Associated Press

A heat wave that has baked the Plains for five straight days derailed a train, drove homeless people indoors and melted a 56-year-old record high.

"I'm surprised, but they still want their coffee hot," said Joni Flemming, manager of the M J Java Coffee House and Cafe in Omaha, Neb.

Several states reported cases of heat-induced illness and the wave was moving eastward today.

At least two heat-related deaths were reported: a roofer pouring tar in Texas and a man in Omaha whose cancer death was hastened by heat stroke.

In southwest Iowa, about 1,200 cattle have died this week. Volunteer firefighters were trying to keep the livestock cool by hosing them down.

"At first the cattle stayed away from the spraying water, but pretty soon they figured it out and walked right up," Crawford County Sheriff Thomas Hogan said. "I think if they could write a thank-you note they would have, because they were hurting."

Officials estimated a little over a $1 million loss of livestock.

Railroad officials blamed the heat for a train derailment that blocked an intersection north of Nebraska City in southeast Nebraska for about an hour. No one was injured when 15 cars on a 98-car Union Pacific train derailed Wednesday.

Union Pacific spokesman John Bromley said that the rail "kinks" or buckles when it gets too hot. The unofficial temperature was 112 degrees in Nebraska City.

Rail crews worked today to clear the tracks, which the railroad expected to have open tonight. Bromley estimated the damage at $132,000.

The mother of a 2-month-old girl who Rogers County authorities say was left in a hot car for more than an hour faces a charge of injury to a child.

In a brief court appearance Wednesday, Marcia Lynn Ratliff, a 21-year-old Indianapolis woman traveling en route to Texas, said she left the baby to go into a store only about 15 minutes. The baby was listed in fair condition today at a Tulsa hospital.

Temperatures climbed past 100 at almost every weather reporting station in Colorado, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska on Wednesday, with Salina, Kan., reaching 111 degrees.

It reached a record high of 108 degrees in Sioux City, Iowa. The old record of 104 was set in 1939 and tied in 1957.

Sioux Falls, S.D., hit a record high of 107 degrees, breaking the record of 103 set in 1939 and tied in 1974.

In Omaha, the high hit 109, the highest temperature recorded since July 21, 1974, when it reached 110. The record high for Omaha was 114 degrees on July 25, 1936.

"It's just too hot to breathe," Flemming said.

It was so hot in Kansas that Jim Russell was able to conduct his own little science experiment.

"I can unequivocally say, it's hot enough today in Salina, Kansas, to fry an egg on the sidewalk," proclaimed Russell, director of institutional advancement at Kansas State University-Salina.

Forecasters blamed the sweltering weather on an enormous high-pressure system over Kansas and Nebraska that shunted the jet stream north, making a big chunk of the central United States feel like the desert Southwest.

Two lawsuits dropped in Miami bank case

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS News Editor

Two lawsuits, which stemmed from a 1992 Roberts County indictment dismissed a month after it was returned, have been dropped.

In a convoluted set of events which ended with the motions for non suit in May, lawsuits cross-filed by the First State Bank of Miami and Assistant District Attorney Tracey Jennings have been resolved, though there remains a lawsuit pending against the bank by the man whose voided indictment started the process.

Bank president Bill Beall and Jennings declined comment.

Court records show on Sept. 29, 1994, the bank and directors - David Locke, Donald Jenkins and Beall, all of Miami, then-directors Keith Locke and Ronnie Gill of Miami and Doyle Smith of Pampa - sued Jennings for damages alleging she negligently caused the indictment of G.M. Walls two years earlier based on a transaction with the bank's Employee Profit Sharing Trust.

In Jennings' counter suit, she claims Beall, bank president, vice principal and trustee of the trust, contacted her and initiated the conduct designed to cause her to present a criminal case against Walls to a Roberts County grand jury.

However, a month after Walls' indictment on Oct. 29, 1992, a motion to dismiss the indictment, which alleges Walls sold a secured 1985 GMC Suburban worth over $10,000 with the intent to keep the proceeds, was signed by District Judge Kent Sims. The indictment is marked "insufficient evidence."

Walls filed suit against the bank and Keith Locke, Jenkins, Gill, Smith, and Beall on Dec. 4, 1992 - director David Locke was added later - alleging malicious prosecution, saying the defendants caused false and/or incomplete information to be given to Jennings, resulting in Walls' indictment, court records show.

In the Walls vs. the bank conflict, a motion for summary judgment on behalf of the bank and its directors was granted March 15, 1994, by District Judge Lee Waters. The decision was overturned by the Seventh Court of Appeals May 30.

On May 8, Judge David McCoy of the 100th Judicial District signed a motion for non suit instituted by the bank and directors. On May 30, he signed a similar motion filed by Jennings dropping her suit against the bank and directors.

McCoy replaced Judge Waters, who recused himself in November, 1994, from any participation in the cross-filed cases. Waters continues as judge for the lawsuit between Walls and the bank.

Shuttle off to deliver communications satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Space shuttle Discovery blasted off today on a mission to loft a communications satellite, soaring through thin clouds more than a month late because of damage caused by woodpeckers.

Discovery and its crew of five roared from the seaside pad at 9:42 a.m. Less than nine minutes later, they were safe in orbit.

It's the shortest gap ever between NASA manned missions. The shuttle Atlantis returned Friday from Russia's space station.

NASA briefly held the countdown at the 31-second mark because of a bad radio signal, delaying liftoff nearly a minute.

Discovery was supposed to blast off June 8 with the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, which replaces a satellite lost in the Challenger disaster. A pair of woodpeckers drilled scores of holes into the insulating foam on the shuttle fuel tank, forcing NASA to send the spaceship back to the hangar for repairs.

It's the only instance in 34 years of U.S. human space flight that animals delayed a launch.

Commander Terence "Tom" Henricks couldn't resist a topical comment shortly after reaching orbit. "No debris" on the cockpit windows, he told Mission Control - "especially no feathers."

"We're extremely happy, of course, that we didn't have to fight any more birds along the way," shuttle manager Loren Shriver said. "One encounter like that is enough."

The mission claims a few other firsts: first flight of a new, improved type of engine, first flight managed by a new Mission Control Center, and more Ohioans on a space crew than ever before.

Only one of Discovery's three main engines is the new model, intended to increase flight safety. And the new, sleek Mission Control Center, filled with small yet powerful and easy-to-replace computers, takes charge following the satellite release.

Four of Discovery's five astronauts are from Ohio.

Henricks waved a buckeye nut from Ohio, the Buckeye State, on his way to the launch pad this morning. Back in his hometown of Woodville, a dozen residents watched the launch around a TV at Faye's Whippy Dip restaurant, where clippings about Henricks cover the walls.

Society may not be able to afford second Alamo dig

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A futile dig for a well under the Alamo has triggered a controversy that has stalled plans to begin a second hunt for history. The pricetag of the first dig is being questioned by the Tesoro del Alamo preservation society, which refuses to finish paying St. Mary's University until it receives a list of expenses.

Frank Buschbacher, Tesoro's project director, expected the dig to cost $42,000, but the university's bill is 30 percent higher than that - nearly $55,000. St. Mary's, in turn, has halted its analysis of Spanish-Colonial and Mission Indian artifacts uncovered during the just-completed excavation. Mark Denton, project reviewer for the Department of Antiquities Protection that oversees permits for the state commission said the stalemate has jeopardized plans for another dig. "This is exactly the kind of thing that we didn't want to happen," he said. Denton also said the permit allowing St. Mary's to begin plans to search for the next dig site will be suspended until the financial differences are resolved.

Actual Apollo 13 Spacecraft May Be Heading Home
HOUSTON (AP) — Houston, we have a problem.

Apparently the only remaining piece of the Apollo 13 spacecraft featured in the hit movie about the ill-fated mission isn't being properly maintained at a France space museum.

Another museum in Hutchison, Kan., is ready to make amends. Officials at the Kansas Cosmosphere and Space Center expect to get the command module Odyssey next month, and they've promised to restore it with their own money.

"We have wanted to get it for a long time," said Norma Housewright, executive assistant at the Kansas center.

"It was not being maintained like it should be and was showing signs of rust and corrosion. ... This is a very historic spacecraft that really needs to be on display in America," she added.

Public School Officials Say Employees Stole Money

EL PASO (AP) — Two dozen El Paso Independent School District employees are accused of stealing between $50,000 and $100,000 by charging the district for labor never done and parts never delivered.

The 24 unnamed workers and one businessman are charged with the felony of engaging in organized crime by securing the execution of a document by deception.

All but three had been arrested as of Wednesday night, police spokesman Sgt. Bill Pfeil said.

"This is an ongoing investigation," said District Attorney Jaime Esparza, adding that more workers and other businesses are being targeted.

The employees worked in the district's kitchen maintenance and heating, ventilating and air-conditioning sections. School officials said all are low-ranking employees.

El Paso district Superintendent Stan Paz said the employees charged in the case had authority to spend up to $300 at a time for supplies without approval from a supervisor.

Killer bees sting two horses to death, injure a third

PHOENIX (AP) — Thousands of swarming wild bees killed two horses with their stings and left a third seriously injured.

"They just snapped," said exterminator Brian Kirkland, who arrived Tuesday to find about 20,000 buzzing bees at the corral. No human injury was reported.

"They basically got angry, stung everything" in sight and took off."

It was unknown if the bees, which had taken over about five empty hives stored nearby, were the so called killer bees that are more aggressive than the domestic variety. Killer bees can be found in much of Arizona.

The attack began shortly after a farrier arrived to shoe the horses.

The farrier called for help from a neighbor's home.

The bees stung the horses hundreds of times, said Mike Reay of the Phoenix Fire Department.

"The horses were thrashing about in the corrals and were pretty much out of their minds," Reay said.

Bureau official suspended for alleged document coverup in connection with standoff

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior FBI official has been suspended over missing records during an investigation into allegations the bureau covered up responsibility for a deadly 1992 standoff in Idaho, a senior Justice Department official says.

Congressional committees have been briefed about the suspension, two department officials said. Two House subcommittees are preparing to hold joint hearings on the FBI's role in the Idaho case and in a tear gas assault that ended a 1993 standoff with the Branch Davidian cult near Waco, Texas.

The FBI official was identified in today's editions of The Washington Post as E. Michael Kahoe. He was suspended as a result of a Justice Department internal watchdog unit's findings about missing FBI records of the August 1992 Idaho standoff, according to a senior Justice official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The Post said Kahoe, head of the FBI field office in Jacksonville, Fla., was a section chief in the criminal investigative division at FBI headquarters at the time of the Idaho standoff.

A top FBI official triggered the probe by alleging the FBI covered up approval of a much criticized "shoot on sight" directive from Larry Potts, who since has been promoted to be deputy to FBI Director Louis Freeh.

Begun in early May, the investigation by the department's Office of Professional Responsibility is far from finished, three officials said. But one Justice official said it already had generated "pretty serious concern" about why some records are missing — enough to warrant the suspension — "although that doesn't mean there is a final conclusion."

In an unusual statement late Wednesday that made no mention of the suspension and disclosed nothing new about Justice's investigation, Freeh expressed full support for the investigation led by Michael Shaheen Jr. and noted that FBI agents are assisting Shaheen.

"If there is any wrongdoing by FBI employees uncovered by the new investigation, it will result in firm FBI action," Freeh promised, pointing out that he already has disciplined 12 FBI employees in the Idaho incident.

Justice officials said Freeh's statement was limited by Privacy Act restrictions on the discussion of personnel matters.

The Justice investigation was begun after the FBI's former Salt Lake City chief, Eugene Glenn, alleged in a letter to Shaheen that the bureau's own investigation of the Idaho incident was designed to protect Potts.

Glenn was the bureau's field commander during the 1992 standoff with white separatist Randy Weaver. Weaver's unarmed wife, Vicki, was shot and killed by an FBI sniper. A deputy U.S. marshal and Weaver's 14-year-old son had been killed earlier.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Balancing racial gerrymandering

It is not yet clear, and it might not be until other cases are brought forward, whether the U.S. Supreme Court has mandated a giant step away from racial gerrymandering or just a small step back from some of the more extreme versions of the practice. Even a small step away from the kind of overt race consciousness that has become such a big factor in redrawing legislative districts, however, is a welcome development.

As the court acknowledged, it is probably impossible and perhaps unwise to try to eliminate any thoughts about race from intruding into the process of changing legislative districts after the decennial census. Along with other factors - including compactness, contiguity, lumping together communities of shared interests, and creating districts with the potential for competitive electoral contests - race and ethnicity are bound to be taken into account by people doing the difficult and politically charged chore of redistricting.

But the court - or at least a 5-4 majority of the court - decided that the 11th Congressional District of Georgia, which loops and swoops for 250 miles to engulf as many black majority towns as possible, was created for the primary purpose of making the election of a black member of Congress a virtual certainty. When race is the "predominant factor motivating the legislature's decision," wrote Justice Anthony Kennedy, that violates other people's rights and becomes unconstitutional.

So race-based redistricting is unconstitutional? Well, not always. On the same day, the court upheld without comment California's latest redistricting plan. That plan included several districts in which the desire to create effective black or Hispanic majority seats was at least a contributing - if not necessarily the "predominant" - factor in drawing the lines.

So instead of a firm, constitutionally rooted principle, the Supreme Court, as is so often the case, seems to be making decisions based on policy preferences.

The court's preferences in this case - that you can't get away from racial considerations entirely in America, but that there's something unhealthy and potentially divisive about putting race in such a central position, that the assumption that skin color is the most important factor in political representation can be corrosive - are sound enough. But a word such as "predominant" doesn't give policy makers reliable guidelines and could invite more extensive litigation.

In terms of a more important factor the court didn't discuss - creating competitive districts that could go either way rather than being a lock for one party or the others - this decision could be helpful. One of the side effects of the push to create "majority minority" districts in the South in recent years has been to make most of the other congressional districts in Southern states safe Republican seats. Deemphasizing race, interestingly enough, could make Republican domination in the South a little less secure.

Whatever the outcome and whatever the reasons, applying some brakes to the tendency to make race the most important factor in politics is welcome. We might never have a color blind society, but it's better to try to move in that direction than to keep pushing for more explicitly race conscious policies.

Berry's World

"Wanna see some obscenity in cyberspace?"

Stopping high octane lawbreaking

Americans are not slaves to consistency. In recent years, they have come to view drunken driving as a moral outrage, but they continue to regard fast driving as such good, clean fun that it amounts to a national birthright.

That helps explain why the Senate, ringing with eloquent defenses of state sovereignty, voted last month to scrap the national maximum speed limit of 55 mph (65 on some rural interstates). In fact, the 55 mph law is unpopular less because it usurps the sovereign right of states to set their own speed limits than because it usurps the sovereign right of motorists to go as fast as they darn well please.

And the Senate, while congratulating itself for curbing Washington's intrusion into matters of speed, didn't hesitate to expand its intrusion into matters of - yes - alcohol. It elected to withhold federal highway money from any state that doesn't adopt a "zero tolerance" policy for minors who drink and drive. At times like this, a cynic might wonder if principles of federalism are really what motivates senators.

Opponents predict a new wave of highway carnage if the House goes along with the change and most states raise their speed limits. Those on the other side say the fears are unwarranted, since no one obeys the existing maximum anyway and most highways are engineered to handle greater speeds. With a higher limit, says Bob Morrow, a spokesman for the National Motorists Association, "we'd have 85 to 90 percent compliance instead of the 5 or 10 percent we have now."

If the current speed limit is today's version of Prohibition, being unrealistic and unenforceable, then it makes some sense to raise it to a level that would promote general compliance. But if we are going to raise it to promote compliance, it also makes sense to take steps to see that the higher speed limit of 65 or 70 actually means that people will drive 65 or 70, not 75 or 80. Otherwise, we will simply have higher-octane lawbreaking. So the states that raise their speed limits ought to follow that measure with a simple step to show they are not fostering faster speeding: banning radar detectors.

Radar detectors have no purpose but to facilitate evasion of the law. They are the moral equivalent of a pill to let drivers beat breathalyzer tests. By promoting excessive speed, they undoubtedly increase the frequency and severity of highway accidents.

But hardly anyone seems to worry about the lives lost. Only one state, Virginia, forbids the possession of radar detectors in ordinary cars. Connecticut, which had a ban, repealed it three years ago. Politicians who brag about their devotion to law and order tamely accept the sale and use of a machine conceived purely to help lawbreakers as they endanger public safety.

Our permissive policy is not the norm in the industrialized world. Fourteen of 21 countries surveyed by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety ban these devices - with violations punishable by fines up to $3,120, confiscation of the radar detector and, in France, forfeiture of the car.

Some progress has been made here. In 1993, the federal government outlawed radar detectors in commercial trucks and buses involved in interstate commerce. Illinois and New York have banned them in all big trucks.

Why don't we extend this perfectly rational policy to all vehicles? It makes a great deal of sense to let states set their own speed limits, and it may even make sense for them to set higher ones. But it makes no sense at all to let each individual driver set his own personal speed limit, which is what radar detectors encourage. If speed limits at any level are justified, radar detectors are not.

The radar detector lobby can't very well argue against speed limits, since manufacturers would go broke without them. Instead, it proffers a host of howlingly fraudulent excuses. For example: Radar detectors help drivers monitor their speed (ever heard of speedometers?); they help police by inducing drivers to slow down in radar zones (and harm police by inducing them to speed up again as soon as they're past the trap); they protect motorists against erroneous radar readings (if radar mistakenly nabs people who aren't speeding, then driving at the speed limit is no protection, is it?).

There is no good excuse for radar detectors, but politicians can see there is a demand for them, from the legions of drivers who think speed limits are made to be broken. Americans outgrow their tolerance of drunken driving and may someday outgrow their indulgence of fast driving, but probably not anytime soon.

'Surfing the net' is a passing fancy

Charley Reese

My newspaper has gotten into cyberspace, so, of necessity, have I. Cyberzoo might be a better name for it.

I have approached computers the same way the CIA approaches the release of information - on a need-to-know basis. I have tried diligently not to learn anything I don't need to know. I try to learn only what I need to know to do what I have to do.

Consequently, I have no CD-ROM drive on my personal computer. I can't imagine anyone wishing to irradiate themselves unnecessarily by reading Shakespeare on a computer screen. As for reference material, it is just as easy to walk over to the bookshelf and flip to the index as it is to boot the computer, insert the disk, and start a search.

Books may be a little bulky, but they are still handy-dandy information storage devices. Furthermore, you don't have to worry about magnets and power surges. Neither hurts a book.

Mind you, I am not anti computer. Anybody who has written a book on a manual typewriter and who is too poor to hire a secretary can only view word processing software and a computer as a great blessing.

Usually, when you hear some writer croon about his beloved manual typewriter or his legal pad and fountain pen, it is some rich dude who has a secretary to do the drudge work. Everyone knows that an attractive secretary who can actually type beats a stupid machine 50 ways to Sunday, but secretaries, even those who can't type, are a luxury too expensive for us poorer scribes.

And computers are stupid machines. A writer may produce a novel or a play using a computer but no computer is ever going to produce a writer - or a scientist or a mathematician or accountant or anything else except perhaps a nearsighted lonely person with poor posture and a big phone bill.

Information is highly overrated and to some extent both information and computers have become somewhat of a fad. It's OK to retrieve information if someone has information that you need, but mindless chitchat is mindless chitchat whether it's conducted over a beer or a modem. Retrieving information you don't need just for the sake of retrieving information makes no more sense than subscribing to 50 magazines you don't read. Playing a computer game is no different than playing a pinball machine.

Personal computers right now are sort of like television in the early 1950s. They are a still novelty to many people. After a while, however, like television, they will become familiar and people will only use them when they need them.

Of course, to some people who love technology they are an end in themselves. Such folks remind me of radio ham operators who seem to talk primarily about each other's equipment and who go to meetings and conventions to look at and talk about equipment. I don't knock that but personally I'm not one to communicate in general unless I have something in particular to say.

Electronic mail - or e-mail as we experts like to say - is handy. You can write a letter and send it practically instantly to someone else provided they also have a computer, modem and the right software. I'm not one of those guys who likes to bash the post office - I think they do a good job given their circumstances - but e-mail is certainly faster and no postal worker has to get wet or dog bit delivering your letter.

The two big trends in cyberspace right now are private businesses trying to figure out how they can make money in there and the government trying to figure out how it can mess things up by censoring content, spying on people, and taxing the users.

I don't mind really because I'd rather read a book or watch squirrels than "surf the net." Using the Internet - for the moment, anyway - is one of those things I don't need to know. I'm looking forward to the day when they are lots more things I don't need to know.

Is Republican Morris the new Gergen?

There is something ritual, and weird, about the ascendance of a Republican (!) pollster, Richard Morris, to elevated status in the Clinton White House.

Make no mistake about it, it has happened. After all, there was the headline in the Washington Post: "Republican Advisor Stages Quiet White House Coup." At the very end of the story was this astonishing news: "One former Democratic elected official with close ties to the Clintons said the first lady as well as the president were concerned that the advice he (Clinton) was getting was 'too hidebound Democrat.' His influential aides are either liberal Democrats such as (Harold) Ickes or what the official called 'congressional Democrats,' such as George Stephanopoulos. Morris, with his career advising Republicans, brings 'new thinking more consistent with where the country is,' said the former official."

Whoa! Who appointed those people the Clintons think are "too hidebound Democrat"? Well, truth be told, it was "the first lady as well as the president" who picked the whole current Johnny-One-Note liberal government, sparked by a special interest all star team of civil rights, environmentalist, feminist, poverty, consumerist, and peace activists. And are we to believe that the Clintons believe that Republicans (!) have "new thinking more consistent with where the country is"? Then why do the Clintons keep scolding Republicans for advocating nasty things, like waging war on children? Do the Clintons think voters believe in terrible things like that?

Yes, it's ritual time in Clintonland again. The heralded "move to the center," or "move to the right," is back. Clinton promised it during his 1992 campaign. In a more recent incarnation (mid-1993), it involved the appointment as White House counselor of David Gergen, who had worked for Republican presidents. At the time, the Washington Post reported that: "Gergen will be part of a five-person senior circle, including the president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, (Chief of Staff Thomas) McCarty and Vice President Gore..."

Moreover, "A senior White House official said that the hiring of Gergen '... is not targeted at George (Stephanopoulos); it is targeted at the idea that we need some adults here. We are concerned about this rap... that the operation is too young, too inexperienced, a little too cocky.'"

Within a matter of days, Gergen, the adult, was being undermined by those young, cocky, inexperienced White House aides, as well as by liberal adults, mostly programmed and fine tuned by left-wing special interest groups and activist liberal Democratic members of Congress. After a while, with his influence eroded, corroded and railroaded, Gergen left.

Is Morris just Gergen redux? The same ritual is apparent. It is being said that Morris is already under sharp attack by the demoralized White House staff, who call Morris "the flavor of the month," and regard him as a "one-man rebellion."

Depending on how you stand on Morris, that is either the good news or the bad news.

Morris and Clinton have teamed up before. During his first gubernatorial term (1980) Clinton came to be known in Arkansas as a somewhat arrogant liberal. The voters bounced him out in 1982.

Clinton then went from frog back to prince, through a process Clinton strategists call "The Permanent Campaign." This involves imbibing deep drafts of public opinion polls and focus groups, and using the results "to shape the substance and rhetoric of policy debates," as recounted in First in His Class, a fine biography of Clinton by David Maraniss. In a stunning passage, Maraniss describes ex-Gov. Clinton and pollster Morris (not yet a Republican) working over the survey responses and saying them aloud until "Clinton would shout, 'You know, I feel it! I feel it! I'm out there and that's just what I feel! That's absolutely right!'" Clinton won the Arkansas governorship in 1984, and hasn't lost an election since.

On balance, if I had to pick a dog in this fight, I'd go with Morris. I'd rather have government influenced by revival meetings conducted by a pollster with moderate inclinations, than by the army of young, cocky, inexperienced, liberal White House aides whom even the Clintons characterize as "too hidebound Democrat."

Alas, in the U.S. government, quantity usually trumps quality. Bet on the hidebounds.

Former Pampanos bring Andalusian horses for rodeo entertainment

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

When Pampa natives Dennis and Carolyn Mortimer moved to their country place north of Kansas City, they decided they would like to get some horses but it took several years of research before they found what they wanted.

During his travels, Dennis would check out different types of horses and breeders around the country. He and his wife, Carolyn, finally decided on Andalusians. That was almost a decade ago.

"We just fell in love with this breed," Carolyn Mortimer said. "We wanted a mare, but nine years ago there weren't very many Andalusians around and people didn't want to sell their mares."

Dennis located a man in Durango, Colo., who had some of the horses native to the Iberian Peninsula of Europe and returned home with a stallion and a mare.

In Pampa for the Top O' Texas Rodeo this week, the Mortimers and their friend, trainer and neighbor Janet Aldrich of Excelsior Springs, Mo., brought three Andalusian horses to 49th annual Pampa rodeo. The Mortimers brought Pampero, a 13-year-old stallion, and Alipaz, now 10 years old. Aldrich brought Rambo, her half Andalusian and half thoroughbred.

Pampero is an Andalusian of Portuguese descent, Carolyn explained, while the black-

Pampa native Dennis Mortimer works with Pampero, his 13-year-old Andalusian stallion, at Betty Wilson's horse facility south of Pampa. Mortimer and his wife Carolyn, who raise the horses near Kansas City, Mo., brought two of their stallions, along with a neighbor and trainer who brought hers, for a special appearance at the Top O' Texas Rodeo this week.

maned Alipaz comes from a Spanish bloodline.

Aldrich became involved with the Andalusians after the Mortimers bought their horses and were looking for someone to help train them. Their neighbor, Aldrich, a graduate of the University of Missouri at Columbia, turned out to be an experienced horse trainer.

"She's a miracle worker with horses," Carolyn said. "She's trained them and us. We weren't horse people before we got these."

The light gray horses are generally born black, Carolyn said. The color lightens as the animal ages. "Alipaz is unique," she said, "because his mane and tail haven't turned."

Such markings are highly prized by the Spanish, she said, who use the spirited animals to work in the bull fighting ring.

"These horses are smart," she said. "You don't have to work with them long. They learn quickly."

The Spanish Andalusians tend to be more explosive than the Portuguese with a lot of hind end power, Carolyn said.

"They're not mean," she said. "Just full of energy."

The high knee action of the horses comes naturally, she said.

Andalusians weren't exported from Spain until 1966, Carolyn said. The Currier and Ives company had tried to buy some of the spirited animals but had been rebuffed until the mid-1960s when the Terry family in Spain, who produce wine and sherry, wanted one of the molds that Currier and Ives held. A swap was arranged and the first Andalusian horses since the conquistadors, a stallion and two mares, arrived in North America.

The animals were bought by television producer Greg Garrison several years later as the company went through financial troubles.

Pampero's grand sire, Carolyn said, was the stallion brought into the U.S. by Currier and Ives. Today, there are still only about 2,500 Andalusians in the country, she said.

"We've done several crosses," she said of their breeding program.

The Andalusian and Quarter Horse cross is known as the Azteca, which is the horse of Mexico. The crosses with Percheron draft horses in Europe, known as Spanish Normans, were thought to provide the basis for the chargers that medieval knights rode into battle.

Andalusians are slow maturing animals, she said. They aren't ridden until they are four years old and often live to be over 40.

"They have a long life," Carolyn said.

The Andalusian has been called the horse of kings, the only appropriate mount for royalty, said Dennis, a 1968 Pampa High School graduate.

Dennis is the son of Earlene Mortimer of Pampa. His wife is the daughter of Dayton and Etta Wallace of Pampa. The couple married in 1970 and now lives in Lawson, Mo., where they raise Andalusian horses.

"These horses were the horses of Coronado and the other Spanish explorers that are so much a part of the Texas Panhandle," he said. "They are the basis for the American mustang and the tie from the Spanish background to the American cowboy."

Andalusians are popular at breed shows, open dressage competitions, open driving events, open events of Western and various English disciplines, in parades and special high school exhibitions which frequently include airs above the ground, Dennis said. Some Andalusians have exceptional open jumping ability.

"The Andalusian is always great demand for exhibitions and parades due to his great presence and flashy style," Dennis said. "They are famous as the mounts from the Spanish Riding School. They learn with ease the classical movements necessary to make them the exotic beauties that leave crowds breathless while still retaining the athletic ability and courage to carry a bullfighter into a ring."

Nation briefs

Prostitute: Charlie Sheen Was Fleiss Sex Client

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors have begun to pry open Heidi Fleiss' black book.

A prostitute who allegedly worked for the Hollywood madam testified Wednesday that she was paid to have sex with some 20 clients, including actor Charlie Sheen.

Judy Geller, a business administration graduate of the University of Southern California, said she went out on some 50 jobs for Fleiss between 1991 and 1992.

Testifying under a grant of immunity in Fleiss' federal money laundering case, Geller said her customers included Sheen and his friends, former Denver Nuggets owner Sidney Shlenker, and Mexican real estate developer Manuel Santos.

The testimony marked the first time the names of Fleiss' clients have been so explicitly revealed. It also provided the most direct link yet between the Hollywood madam's call-girl ring and the entertainment industry.

FDA Moves Toward Stricter Regulation of Tobacco

NEW YORK (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has concluded for the first time that nicotine is a drug that must be regulated and is tossing the political hot potato to the Clinton administration for the next move.

The FDA is authorized to regulate drugs on its own, but instead has made initial suggestions for stricter regulation of tobacco products, The New York Times reported.

The proposed regulations include a ban on selling cigarettes in vending machines — a chief source of cigarettes for children — and stricter licensing to hold vendors responsible if they get caught selling tobacco to minors, the newspaper said.

Audit Points Out NAACP's Lavish Spending

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An audit released today found that some NAACP officers squandered money on limousines, personal trips, clothing and children's toys at a time when the civil rights organization was plunging into debt.

Myrlie Evers-Williams, chairwoman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People board, announced the findings after a 10-hour meeting with board members.

"As the nation's oldest civil rights organization ... we owe the public an honest and forthright accounting of our finances," she said.

The audit focuses primarily on three former NAACP officers.

Testimony backfires for Simpson defense

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson prosecutors had the glove fiasco. The defense now has Robert Heidstra.

The defense witness reluctantly acknowledged under cross-examination Wednesday that a car similar to Simpson's Ford Bronco, right down to the light color and tinted windows, sped away from Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium the night of the murders.

If Heidstra's timing is only a few minutes off — and he said he didn't look at his watch — Simpson still could have gotten home in time for a limousine ride to the airport, legal analysts said.

"He was one of the case's best prosecution witnesses," said Loyola University law professor Stan Goldman. "I think the defense was nuts to call him. ... I rank this as the second-biggest mistake of the trial behind the glove."

Last month, prosecutors had Simpson try on the bloodied leather gloves they allege he wore while murdering his ex-wife and her friend. Simpson apparently had trouble putting the gloves on before the jury.

Widow Fears Phone Romance May Fade Person to Person

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman in my late 60s. My husband and I were very friendly with "Frank" and "Lucy" (not their real names). In 1963, they moved to Hawaii, and I have not seen them since. In recent years, both Frank's wife and my husband have passed away.

Frank and I have been talking on the telephone since then. We have become very close, and the calls have become more and more frequent. He is an interesting, funny and loving man — and we have wonderful, warm conversations.

So what's my problem? He wants to come here to see me — and I am terrified!

I feel this almost-make-believe "phone romance" is not real, and that to meet in person might spoil it all! The years have not been kind to me, and I also have some medical problems of which he is not aware. On the phone, I can be 35 again, beautiful and sexy.

True, Frank is also 32 years older, but to me, that is not important. I just couldn't bear it if he were disappointed when we met. How can I refuse to meet without hurting him? Or am I just being foolish?

ON HOLD IN HOUSTON

DEAR ON HOLD: Do not refuse to meet him, but do begin to inject some reality into your conversation. You could find that there are some details that Frank hasn't mentioned to you either. The passing of decades takes its toll on all of us.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You asked what comforted readers when they were confronted with tragedy:

Several years ago, my husband was on jury duty. When I found out that he had had an affair with one of the women jurors, I was devastated.

We had three teen-aged children, and he had been the light of my life, and now he had betrayed me.

As I sat thinking about it, it was as though God was asking me, "Who do you think you are, putting limits on my love? My son died on the cross for your sins and also for the sin your husband committed. If I can forgive him, you can, too."

I replied, "Yes, Lord, I will forgive him." Then a sudden peace that I cannot explain settled over me.

This year we will celebrate our 37th wedding anniversary. I am signing my name, but if you publish this, please sign me ...

BLESSED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BLESSED: To forgive fully and unconditionally, as you did, merited you a religious experience, the sudden peace that settled over you.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a dispute I am having with a close friend. It concerns gift-giving.

My friend says if she receives a gift she cannot use or doesn't like, it's common courtesy to return it to the sender saying, "Thank you, but this is not right for me."

I disagree. On several occasions, she has returned gifts I've chosen for her and, as a result, I felt insulted and hurt, regretting the time I spent shopping for them.

She contends that I am far too sensitive — that she appreciates knowing when a gift is not right, and she is sure the majority feels the same way.

Abby, where do you stand?

HURT

DEAR HURT: I stand in your corner. Next time, give her a gift certificate or a check, and let her buy her own gift.

Your Birthday

Friday, July 14, 1995

A number of favorable shifts might be in store for you in the year ahead. It looks like you'll disengage from unproductive involvements and find new paths of promise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Subdue the urge today to gamble on things about which you know little. The odds might run against you at this time, so use your best judgment. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might have to bend a bit more than usual today to appease a partner in a business arrangement. If you're inflexible, expect a similar response.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you are slovenly in your tasks today, don't expect co-workers to cover up for you. Instead, they might even squeal on you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not buy something costly today, thinking that you'll be able to sell it when you grow tired of it. That market might not be there.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Distinguish today between being assertive and being abrasive. If you can't make this distinction, you may defeat your purpose.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Let bygones be bygones today. If you attempt to even up an old score, it could make a bad situation even worse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Upon occasion, you're too generous to the wrong people. This could be one of those days when you ignore the deserving and cater to the users. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Avoid doing things today that might cause companions to lose respect for you. Walk the straight and narrow and keep your charisma intact.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, if you feel someone has wronged you, try to forgive the offense. Harboring a grudge could cause it to grow disproportionately.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In an involvement with friends today, don't alter plans without consulting them first. Your move could complicate everyone's agenda, including your own.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Let an unresolved, volatile matter between you and your mate rest today. This issue has a short fuse on both ends and could explode at a moment's notice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do not delegate assignments today to a person who has performed poorly for you in the past. This individual might cause you even more serious problems this time.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The New York Yankees' Triple-A affiliate kept Darryl Strawberry under wraps following his arrival.

The Clippers said Strawberry will be in uniform tonight when Columbus plays Pawtucket.

Shaky Rangers tied for lead at halfway mark

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON (AP) — Lost in the All-Star Game hoopla was the fact that the Texas Rangers are tied for first place in the American League West at the mid-season break. And they did it despite shaky starting pitching, fair defense and injuries.

Texas tied the California Angels with a 39-30 record. It's only the fourth time in 24 seasons the Rangers have been in the lead at the halfway mark. They've never won a pennant in a full season. The Rangers led the AL West when the strike came last year but were 10 games under the .500 mark.

New manager Johnny Oates did an amazing job in the first-half of the season considering he was without the services of Juan Gonzalez, Will Clark or Dean Palmer for 69 games. Palmer may not be back until late September because of a torn biceps tendon.

"I know that heart-wise we can count on him for September but I don't know if he will be ready physically," Oates said.

Also, hurting the Rangers was the fact that closer Jeff Russell had to go on the disabled list because of a herniated disk in his back.

Russell expects to be activated soon after the second-half of the season begins with a road trip to Boston.

The Rangers have held together despite their injury problems which included a pulled hamstring by second baseman Jeff Frye which put him on the DL.

First baseman Will Clark has been battling an elbow injury but should be ready when play resumes on Thursday.

The Rangers finally became tough to play at home which is the hallmark of a solid team. The Rangers were 24-14 in The Ballpark at Arlington.

Oates, who replaced the fired Kevin Kennedy who ended up at Boston, showed that new general manager Doug Melvin made a good choice in picking the former Baltimore Orioles manager.

The Rangers showed great resilience. For example, they made six errors in a game last Sunday against New York but still beat the Yankees 5-4 in 12 innings.

Inconsistent starting pitching has hounded Oates.

He has three starters with winning records, Bob Tewksbury, 7-3, Kenny Rogers, 8-4, and Roger Pavlik, 5-4. They have been less than steady.

Kevin Gross, who was picked up because the Rangers thought he could give a solid 200-inning year, has been a disappointment with his 3-8 ledger.

Tewksbury has been battling chronic back stiffness although he hasn't missed any starts.

"We've done a good job of hanging on in the first half," Oates said. "Now if we can get everybody well and on the field we could do even better in the second half."

The return to form of Juan Gonzalez could be the boost the Rangers need to put them over the top. Since returning to the lineup June 1, Gonzalez has hit 12 homers in 34 games.

"It gives me a charge to think about Juan being around for every game the rest of the season," Oates said.

Injury-riddled Astros clinging to second in Central Division

HOUSTON (AP) — The starting pitching is shaky. The lineup is trying to settle down after an almost total overhaul. Injuries have been continuous. And the league's MVP from a year ago got off to a horrible start.

Still, Houston Astros Manager Terry Collins is tickled to be in second place in the National League Central Division, five games behind division-leading Cincinnati. And with expanded playoffs this fall, the Astros are just one game back of Philadelphia in a race for a wildcard spot.

"It's gone fine," he says of the first half of the season in which the Astros went 38-30. "It's been up and down like a lot of teams. We've had to fight through some slumps and injuries but it's nothing different than anybody else has had to go through."

"I think we've got a chance to stay in the hunt and that's all that's important."

Collins' efforts keeping the Astros in the hunt in his second season as a big league manager have not gone unnoticed. Team executives last week gave him a two-year contract extension.

Collins' starting lineup these days bears little resemblance to the team that was a game behind the division-leading Reds when the players went on strike in 1994.

The only regular position players to remain are second baseman Craig Biggio, first baseman Jeff Bagwell and outfielder James Mouton.

In the offseason, the Astros pulled off a blockbuster 12-player deal with San Diego that included the shipping of third baseman Ken Caminiti, outfielder Steve Finley and shortstop Andujar Cedeño.

Derek Bell was among those coming from the Padres and the outfielder has been terrific, consistently ranking among the league's offensive leaders. He's hitting .337, third in the NL, and tops the league with 56 runs batted in. His 93 hits are second and 17 stolen bases ranks fifth.

Rookie Orlando Miller, taking over for the erratic Cedeño, is hitting .279 and has played a steady shortstop.

Pampa girls' softball teams going to state tournament

PAMPA — Two Pampa United Girls Softball Association (USGA) All-Star Teams are preparing for the girls' fast-pitch state competition July 20-22 in Abilene.

Pampa citizens and businesses are urged to donate money for these two teams to help defray tournament expenses. A bake sale will be held this Saturday at 9 a.m. at Walmart. The sale will end as soon as all the baked goods are sold.

These two teams, comprised of varsity and junior varsity players, were selected from the Lady Harvester softball teams that played during the regular season.

Varsity players selected this year are: Jennifer Kidd, Jamie Humphrey, Christina Gage, Lindy Sells, Angie Downs, Allison Brantley, Danette Hoover, Jessica Whitney, Kelsey McCann, Lisa Jones, Christi Walkup and Regina Tice. Coaches are Pat Montoya and Mike Sells.

Whitney and Hoover are the only returning senior all-star veterans.

Whitney is the varsity team's star catcher who also plays the positions of shortstop, first base, outfield and pitcher. This will be Whitney's fourth year to participate on the all-star tournament team. She scored the winning run in the 1992 state tournament at San Angelo, which led to the team's championship victory. Whitney plans to attend Texas Tech this fall to major in business as well as furthering her softball career.

Hoover is the varsity's star pitcher, who also plays the positions of outfield, first base, second base, catcher and shortstop. This will be Hoover's third year to participate on Pampa's All-Star Tournament team. Recently, Hoover made Pampa High School history when she became the first PHS graduate to sign a letter-of-intent to play softball at the college level. She will be playing softball at Eastern Oklahoma State College where she plans to major in elementary education.

Junior varsity players selected this year are: Tera Daughtery, Heather Petty, Kimberly Clark, Cassi Scott, Rebecca McConnell, Jessica Gonzales, Jessica Harper, Tandi Morton, Lori Lindsey, Shannon Smith, Jamie Reed and Amber Dean. Coaches are Jimmie Clark and Marty Scott.

Christina Gage, Christi Walkup and Lindy Sells are returning all-star players that played on the junior varsity team last year and are on the varsity team this year. Christi Walkup was named to the All-Star Team at the 1994 state tournament.

Tera Daughtery, Rebecca McConnell and Amber Dean are also returning all-star players on the junior varsity team.

Pampa's USGA All-Star varsity team won the state championship in 1992, and was state runner-up in 1993 and 1994.

Meredith Horton, Misty Plunk and Shawna Austin were named to the state tournament all-star team in 1994.

The coaches, parents and players want to thank the Pampa community for their support for the past three years and they ask for continued support since the softball program is not funded by any organization.

Interested persons can make a money donation by giving it to any of the players or coaches listed in this article, and by participating in the bake sale on Saturday.

Pampa All-Stars outlast Randall to win District 13-year-old championship

DUMAS — The Pampa All-Stars outlasted Randall, 10-9, to capture the District 13-year-old Babe Ruth Tournament title Wednesday night.

Pampa was leading 10-7 going into the seventh inning when Randall started a rally that came up just one run short. Seven errors hurt Pampa, including four in the seventh that let in two Randall runs.

Pampa had five hits, with Kaleb Snelgrooves collecting a double for the team's only extra base hit. Tommy Lozano, Greg Lindsey, Cody Shepard and Gil Solano had one single each. Solano scored what turned out to be the winning run. After striking out, Solano was able to reach first on a passed ball. He eventually came around to score.

The winning pitcher was Kevin Francis, who gave up four hits in six innings while striking out six, walking one and hitting a batter. Tommy Lozano pitched the final inning and gave up a hit.

The Pampa All-Stars advance to the state tournament in Graham. Their first game is at 5:30 p.m. July 22 against a team yet to be determined.

OPTIMIST BASEBALL

Justin Chandler ended up as the winning pitcher after taking the mound in the top of the seventh to stop the Dumas run explosion. He gave up one run on three hits while striking out two and not walking a batter.

Justin Chandler got things started in the right direction for River Road when he led off with a triple in the bottom of the seventh. Chris Floyd followed with a single, scoring Chandler, Michael Wineberg walked and Chantz Howell singled to load the bases. The next two batters, Shane Ricci and Jason Gray, both doubled to plate four runs. Dumas changed pitchers, but the onslaught continued.

Ryan Chandler singled and another double, this one by Aaron Corez, scored two more runs to pull River Road within three, 14-11, with nobody out. Another pitching change for Dumas didn't help. Brandon Kinnard had a run-scoring double and Chandler, who came to bat for the second time in the inning, reached first on an error which scored another run.

With the score tied at 13-13, Dumas finally got the first out of the inning on a grounder by Chris Ford. However, Wineberg, the next batter, singled to bring in Chandler with the winning run.

River Road had the early lead in the contest, jumping out 1-0 in the first on an RBI single by Wineberg. River Road made it 3-0 after two innings on a two-run single by Floyd.

Dumas tallied its first two runs in the third on an RBI double by Jarrett Lesley and a fielder's choice grounder by Billy Pendley. Dumas exploded in the fifth inning to take a 13-3 lead on seven hits.

Morales office receives crime victims grants

AUSTIN - Texas Attorney General Dan Morales recently announced his office will receive more than $7.5 million in grant money for the Crime Victims' Compensation Fund.

The money was awarded to Morales' office by the U.S. Department of Justice, under its Crime Victims' Compensation Grant Program. The money was collected through federal fines, fees and forfeitures which are assessed in federal criminal convictions.

The Crime Victims' Compensation Fund, created by the Texas Legislature in 1979, is administered by the Office of the Attorney General. It provides reimbursement of specific expenses, not covered by insurance or other sources, to certain innocent victims of crime and their families. The money in the fund comes primarily from court costs assessed in state criminal convictions.

"This represents another round of good news for the victims of crime," Morales said. "Texas lawmakers recently passed legislation allowing my office to establish the nation's first research and assistance center devoted to the victims of crime."

The A.G.'s Crime Victims' Institute and Advisory Council will study, research and collect data on victims of crime. It will provide a body of research that attempts to understand and explain the economic, psychological and sociological effects of crime on victims, victim service providers, law enforcement and communities. Using that base of information, governmental policies can be crafted to meet the true needs of crime victims. Part of the Institute's funding will come from the federal grant.

In Fiscal 1994 the Crime Victims' Compensation Fund distributed $25 million to 9,634 victims, and the fund collected $38.5 million in fines from state criminals. Federal contributions, restitution from criminals, court settlements and private donations brought the total income to $42 million.

Future Farmers of America state convention draws thousands of young Texans, many girls

LUBBOCK (AP) - Forget the stereotype that depicts Future Farmers of America as boys in muddy boots and gimme caps. Judging by their state convention this week, today's FFA members are more likely to wear lip-stick and skirts.

Thousands of young Texans turned out for ceremonies Wednesday that opened like a rock concert with a message: Agriculture is cool, relevant - and for girls, too.

"The future of agriculture is in your hands," said Texas House Speaker Pete Laney, who followed a lights show and ZZ Top recording. "You cannot afford to sit on the sidelines and let others decide our future."

Laney, a cotton farmer, won a standing ovation for urging cooperation and hard work to maintain America's agricultural successes.

"Some people are content to sit around the coffee shop and complain about how bad things are," the Hale Center Democrat said. "If that's what they want to do, then things will never change. Things will never get better."

The 67th annual Texas State FFA Convention drew a crowd of about 6,500 students for four days of workshops, exhibits and agriculture related tours.

Participants made upbeat remarks about the future of an industry that provides about 20 percent of all jobs in Texas. The convention's atmosphere looked like a fresh boost for a state where the age of the average farmer is 56 and climbing.

School buses arrived at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center from cities across the state, bearing teenagers wearing navy corduroy jackets in the heat.

"It's more than the - quote, unquote - 'redneck,'" said 14-year-old Shayla Oliver of Channelview. "We're patriotic, down-home, good kids."

Archeology, paleontology basic workshops offered

CANYON - Three all-day Basic Methods Workshops are planned for July, August and September at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

The first workshop will cover recording archeological sites, the second workshop will deal with archeological laboratory methods, and the third workshop will cover paleontological laboratory and field methods. The workshops are co-sponsored by the PPHM and the Summerlee Foundation through a grant to the Panhandle Museum Resource Sharing Consortium.

The workshops are designed for individuals from the eighth grade through adult who are interested in archeology and paleontology, but have little or no training in these fields. The main objective of the workshops is to familiarize participants with current procedures for recording and processing archeological and paleontological sites and collections.

If these workshops are successful, additional workshops that cover other topics in archeology, paleontology, geology, or natural history may be offered.

Archeology Site Recording Workshop, scheduled for Saturday, July 29, will be led by Pat Mercado-Allinger of the Office of the State Archeologist. Topics to be discussed include the Texas Panhandle-Plains archeology; landowners' rights; completing archeological site forms; locating sites on topographic maps; and determining UTM coordinates. Deadline for reservations is July 17.

The Archeology Laboratory Workshop will be led by Gail Bailey of the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory at Austin. This workshop is scheduled for Aug. 26 and deadline for reservations is Aug. 14.

Topics will include artifact processing and labeling with proper materials, inventorying artifacts and other materials, and data entry. The pros and cons of various lot numbering systems also will be discussed. Ms. Bailey will bring samples of materials for people to examine and show slides of lab procedures.

The Paleontology Workshop will be co-led by Charles Finsley, earth sciences curator at the Dallas Museum of Natural History, and Dr. Gerald Schultz, paleontology professor at West Texas A&M University. Topics to be covered include Texas Panhandle-Plains paleontology, field methods, collection and analysis of specimens, and the care, molding and casting of specimens.

The workshop date is Sept. 16, with a reservation deadline of Sept. 4.

The full registration fee (non-refundable) is $10.50 for members of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society, Museum Auxiliary or students and $12.40 for non-members. The fee includes morning doughnuts and coffee, a sack lunch and soft drink (optional), and instructional handouts.

For those who prefer to provide their own lunch, the registration fee (non-refundable) is $8 for PPHS members or students and $9.50 for non-members. Each workshop is scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., with morning and afternoon breaks and a 45-minute lunch.

For additional information, please contact the coordinator, Ms. A.J. Taylor, at (806) 656-2259 or Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, WTAMU Box 967, Canyon, TX 79016.
